The jury doubted Priscilla

Trial of a rich man

Associated Press Writers
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Millionaires are as rare in Texas as cattle and oil wells, but Thomas Cullen Davis is in a special class. His wealth is almost beyond accountancy. $150 million? $200 million? $300 million? Nobody knows.

In 1975, Kendavis Industries reported income after taxes of $57 million from its 80-plus companies. Cullen, as his friends call him, owns one half of the conglomerate named after his daddy. And that might make Cullen Davis the richest man to be accused of murder since Henry VIII.

There has been a lot written about Davis since that August night last year when blood mingled with the painting and sculpture in the Fort Worth mansion Davis designed, built and furnished for $6 million.

One of those stories has Davis stopping his airportbound taxi in New York to browse through an art gallery, picking up pieces the way a housewife plucks Wheaties boxes from the grocery shelf. That night the dealer shipped $102,000 worth of art to decorate the mansion.

In 1968, on the day his father died, Cullen Davis married Priscilla Wilborn, twice divorced with one daughter and a son from her second.

The Davises separated in 1974; that is, Cullen moved out of the house and later was kept out by court order. Priscilla, a tiny blonde of eye-popping proportions, took a lover — a former Texas Christian University basketball player named Stanford Farr. The 6-foot-10-inch Farr shared her money, her mansion and her bed. He called her "investment."

On the night of Aug. 2, 1976, Priscilla's daughter Andrea — 12 years old and just returned from vacation Bible School in Houston — was shot to death with a single .38-caliber bullet, centered perfectly below her breastbone.

Only the killer was a witness. Mrs. Davis and Farr were out on the town. On their return, Farr was shot to death. Priscilla was hit in the chest and lived to testify that the gunman was her husband, Cullen.

Minutes later there arrived Beverly Bass, a young friend of Priscilla's, and date Gus Gavrel, known as "Bubba." Gavrel was shot, the bullet lodging in his spine. It cost him use of his right leg. He said Cullen Davis, the millionaire industrialist, did it.

So did Beverly. Who were these people?

Let's begin with Andrea, the first victim, almost forgotten in the trial of Cullen Davis.

Andrea was Priscilla's daughter but she also was Jack Wilborn's and lived with her father, an auto dealer. She chose to spend that night at the mansion.

Andrea was 5-feet-7-inches tall, rather pretty. She loved arts and crafts and she loved animals so much that she took her cat and parakeet to Houston while she went to Bible School. On the last day of her short life, Andrea went shopping with Beverly Bass, a friend of her half-sister Dee, browsing through pet shops.

Andrea's pleasures, by all accounts, were simple. Her mother and stepfather were on the other side of innocence. It was made clear at the trial of Davis that Priscilla lived in the other world of drugs, there was mention of heroin, cocaine, LSD, marijuana, and a painkiller called Percodan. Those who peeped her life were described as brigands and scoundrels and scuzzies.

It was no secret that Priscilla, not much taller than five feet, had silicone implants.

"I dress for the men in my life," Priscilla would say, and nowhere did she do it more blatantly than at the Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament where Fort Worth society goes to be seen. Priscilla always wore the shortest of shorts and a halter top designed to reveal. And around her neck, a golden necklace that spelled out in diamonds what a lot of Texans were saying about her: "Rich Bitch."

Fort Worth's upper crust showed its disdain and she returned it.

"I didn't try to break into the social group," Priscilla said, "by marrying Cullen. I started at the top."

By marrying Cullen, she also got that big house with its 19,000 square feet and indoor swimming pool set in the middle of 181 acres. She also got trips to Europe, a fox bedspread, a Lyndon Johnson-style three screen television set and a $400,000 Renoir painting that she hung in the bathroom. There even was a chess set, one side of solid white gold, the other of yellow gold worth $90,000, and a very expensive security system to guard it all.

Not bad for a girl from Houston's grimy southeast side who said she learned what it meant to be blonde, bosomy and beautiful.

Priscilla, who is now 36, said her husband once called Andrea stupid and kicked at her. And there was testimony that he banished Andrea from the house in a rage, after a disciplinary episode involving school math problems.

Davis was notorious for his temper. There was the time he reached into a parking lot attendant's booth and scattered car keys in the mud because he was irritated at the slowness of the service.

Another time, he dashed a kitten to the floor, killing it.

And he broke a $400 pearl stick pin that Priscilla gave him in happier days.

Mrs. Davis tells of the time when he beat her with a crutch she was using after she broke her leg in a skiing accident.

There is a calmer side to Davis, too. He and Priscilla were staying at the Green Oaks Inn in Fort Worth while she still was married to Jack Wilborn. One night Wilborn came with private detectives, kicked the door in, and found the couple in bed. Witnesses said Davis was totally cool, telling Wilborn that he was a business man who dealt with problems every day and this was just one more problem to be dealt with.

Davis, it is said, had a penchant for pornography and people in Fort Worth still chuckle about the time he brought a van to the Colonial and held private showings of "Deep Throat" for his friends.

After he and Priscilla separated, he started keeping company with Karen Master, a stunning champagne-blonde divorcee with two children.

Karen met him through a friend and at first knew little about him. "He never bragged," she said. "I never heard him brag about his company or how many companies there were or what they were worth." She learned his identity from her mother who once worked for Cullen's father, nicknamed "Stinky" Davis.

By September 1975, Karen said, "We'd pretty well decided we wouldn't want to date anybody else. It was kind of a mutual understanding. He never got down on bended knee and said, 'Will you marry me?' But we talked about things for us in the future."

Back in July 1974, before Cullen moved out of the house, Priscilla took a van load of people including her teen-age daughter Dee and two other young girls to a picnic in College Station, Texas. There was testimony about drugs and sex on the trip. One of the passengers was W.T. Rufner, an electrician by trade and a drugdropping rogue by habit.

When Cullen left the house, at 4200 Mockingbird Lane, Rufner moved in. Priscilla denied it. But a parade of witnesses at the Davis trial said drugs and booze flowed freely, that there were nude swimming parties and group sex.

The Rufner episode ended on a night when, in a fit of anger, he slashed Priscilla's tires and later was floored in a drunken brawl at the mansion. His place in her bedroom later was taken by Stan Farr, a friendly bearded giant of a man.

All the while, Davis was pressing for divorce from Priscilla. She had signed an agreement before their marriage that she would not dip into the family fortune if they ever split. Davis was paying her $3,500 a month temporary support while a divorce settlement was battled through court.

On Monday, Aug. 2, word reached Davis that the support money had been increased to $5,000 by a judge. Eight hours later, Andrea Wilborn died violently and alone in the basement at 4200 Mockingbird Lane.

Her mother and Farr arrived shortly after midnight, Priscilla recalled. "We started to automatically turn the security locks off and I noticed they were already off." Farr had already gone upstairs when Priscilla spotted the bloody handprint on the door leading to the basement.

Her night of terror had started. In her own words:

"I started yelling for Stan. About that time, Cullen stepped around the corner and said, 'Hi.' My first picture of him was Cullen standing there with this shoulder-length black wig on. He was dressed all in black. He had a plastic bag wrapped around his hand. Then he shot me."

Falling to the floor, Mrs. Davis said she screamed to Farr, "Stan, go back. It's Cullen. He's got a gun." She said the gunman shot through the door once and that Farr cried out.

The bullet had struck Farr in the lower abdomen. But he lunged at the gunman, grabbing him by the wrists. In the struggle, the gunman broke away and shot Farr a second time, then twice more as his body lay on the floor.

"Stan looked at me and laid down his head and died," Priscilla said. "Cullen stood there a moment and I remember wondering if he was going to shoot me again."

But was Davis the man in black? That was up to the jury to decide.

Whoever it was dragged the body into the kitchen. Bleeding from her wound, Priscilla fled outside.

"All of a sudden, Cullen was after me and I turned around and fell down and started crying and saying, 'Cullen, I love you. I never loved anyone else. Why are you doing this?'" Mrs. Davis said under oath.

Earlier that evening, Farr and Priscilla had run into 19-year-old Beverly Bass and Bubba Gavrel. Beverly said her waterbed had sprung a leak and could she spend the night in the mansion.

They arrived just in time, Gavrel testified, to see Priscilla being dragged back toward the mansion. Perhaps it was the sound of their car, but the intruder momentarily released Priscilla, entered the mansion and came back out to confront the arriving couple.

Priscilla, hiding in bushes, said she heard voices and took the opportunity to flee across the estate grounds. As Gavrel and Miss Bass entered, they encountered the man in black at a gate.

Students vote against treaty, for right to die

U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower took the role of Speaker of the House at the model congress Saturday to preside over debate from students such as Ann Beck.

(Pampa News photos by Ron Ennis)

Seventy-two Pampa high school students conducted themselves in about the same manner as the models they chose during Saturday's Model Congress III. A major difference may have been that at the Model Congress conducted at the high school, all the senators and representatives were on hand for the voting.

In general, the students were in favor of a bill providing for the right to die, but only under certain circumstances; in favor of the private ownership of handguns; against the maintenance of quotas based on race or sex as a policy for admission to both state-supported and private institutions; against capital punishment (and in favor of life imprisonment as the maximum penalty); against a minimum wage for young people at the rate of $1 below the established minimum wage; against abortion, except when the pregnancy was dangerous health or the result of rape or incest; undecided about the dissemination of orographic materials involving juveniles; undecided about ratification of the Panama Canal treaty; and against the decriminalization of marijuana.

Congressman Jack Hightower, U.S. Representative from the 13th Congressional District, and District 316 Judge Guy Hazlett served as speaker of the house and president pro-tem of the senate, respectively.

Vance takes off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance takes off Sunday on a three-nation trip to South America to discuss three dominant foreign policy themes of the Carter administration — human rights, nuclear non-proliferation and oil prices.

The four-day trip, which will take Vance to Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela, is in keeping with the administration's emphasis on "personal diplomacy" with hemispheric nations. A steady stream of top officials have toured the region since Carter took office 10 months ago.

Barbara Jordan pleads for unity

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Rep. Barbara Jordan told the National Women's Conference on Saturday that the battle for women's rights needs more "foot soldiers, not kamikaze pilots."

If the federally funded conference ends without a resolution of differences between factions, Ms. Jordan predicted, "we will have wasted much more than money." She is the first black woman ever to keynote the nominating convention of a major U.S. political party.

"In all women's movements, rancor must be replaced by interdependence and mutual respect," Ms. Jordan said, declaring: "This is the time for foot soldiers, not kamikaze pilots."

The congresswoman's call for unity followed similar pleas by first lady Rosalynn Carter and former first lady Betty Ford, as the conference formally got under way here. Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson, the widow of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, joined Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Ford in calling for equal rights for women.

Ms. Jordan addressed some 13,000 women in the Albert Thomas Convention Center, while other groups of women, contending their views weren't being represented, held protest rallies five miles away.

She cautioned conference delegates that if the session ends without healing having occurred, "we will have wasted, lost, negated an opportunity to do something for ourselves and for generations that are not here. Not making a difference is a cost we cannot afford."

Dr. Gloria Scott, president of the National Girl Scouts, opened the conference by calling it "the most significant and far-reaching event in this century.... We are in passage and our fates are bound together."

Mrs. Carter, who has carried President Carter's human rights campaign to South America, said the goal of U.S. women is "equal participation."

There have been and will be "a lot of disagreements and conflicts," she said. "But I agree with my daughter-in-law Judy that we must guard against obscuring valid issues with defensiveness and anger."

Mrs. Ford said women "... must keep focused on our goals — in business, education, employment, politics or in the home." ... she said women can have different interests, "... but we shouldn't be dismayed by the clash of opinions and ideas."

Mrs. Johnson said, "I once thought the women's movement belonged more to my daughters than to me, but I have come to know that it belongs to women of all ages."

But it was Ms. Jordan who brought down the house with descriptions of the plight of women. Her fiery brand of Southern straight-talk had inspired delegates to the Democratic National Convention last year.

"Human rights apply equally to Soviet dissidents, Chilean peasants and American women," she said, adding that "women are humans."

"When our rights are limited... when our rights are violated, we need a domestic human rights program. This conference could be the beginning of such an effort," said Ms. Jordan, a Texas Democrat.

She said delegates should not be brainwashed by those who predict chaos. "Tell them they lie," Ms. Jordan said.

Of the 13,000 women in attendance, some 2,000 are delegates to the conference. They and their alternates are debating a 28-item political platform for women's rights.

Former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., told the delegates that women are speaking for themselves these days.

"And I believe, the whole nation will have to listen to what we say," said Ms. Abzug, who chairs the federal commission sponsoring the conference.

"After this weekend, the whole nation will know that the women's movement is not any one organization or set of ideas or particular lifestyle," she said. "It is millions of women deciding individually and together that we are determined to move history forward."

Liz Carpenter, a former press secretary to Mrs. Johnson who is a member of the women's commission, spoke to the diversity of the women represented at the conference.

"Who are 'we the people' gathered here in Houston? We are the female people left out in Philadelphia," she said. "And the irony — the real irony — is that there would have been no America without us. So we are here to stake our claim on its past and its future."

She said women have seen their own dreams shattered and shortened, however, by "insecure men and women fearful of a world of equality."

"Are we so dangerous? So alien to this land we have founded? Are we so threatening? So 'forward' and 'brash' and 'pushy' to ask for fairness?" she asked.

The women roared back with a resounding "No."

Assassination probe reaches new areas

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The years have never softened the lingering suspicion among many Americans that somehow there was a conspiracy involved in the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr.

So, when the House of Representatives launched its own investigation into the political murders of the 1960s it ordered its Committee on Assassinations to conduct "a full and complete" study.

Whether the panel has been successful in finding new evidence about the murders is undetermined so far, but the investigation has reached into apparently new and startling areas.

For instance, in its investigation of President Kennedy's murder, the House Committee on Assassinations says it plans to subpoena dozens of mobsters, mercenaries and anti-Castro Cubans.

The committee already has questioned the first of them, soldier of fortune Loran Hall, who several times claimed he was offered $50,000 to kill Kennedy. Hall also was involved in confusing and contradictory reports about Lee Harvey Oswald's supposed association with anti-Castro Cubans.

The Warren Commission, which conducted the initial and until now only major government inquiry into the murder, decided it was Oswald, acting alone, who killed Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The committee also is investigating whether the FBI's admitted activities against King are linked in any manner to the assassination of the civil rights leader, a congressional source disclosed last week.

King was shot to death by a sniper in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968, and James Earl Ray was convicted of the slaying.

The congressional source said the possibility that FBI harassment of King might have had something to do with his death led the House committee to move immediately to subpoena the files of William C. Sullivan, an FBI official killed in a hunting accident in New Hampshire two weeks ago.

Sullivan had been the No. 3 man in the FBI and he ran Cointelpro, the agency program aimed at discrediting King and others considered by the FBI to be political radicals.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee has been holding secret hearings on the Warren Commission's investigation, looking particularly into the question of whether the FBI, CIA and other agencies cooperated fully with the commission at the time of its investigation.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee, says the hearings have not yet produced the answer to that question.

He said witnesses at the hearings included present and former FBI and CIA employees and former Warren Commission staff members.

Those developments are among the few to become public since last June when the assassinations committee imposed a near total news blackout on its $2.5 million inquiry.

The committee imposed the blackout at least partly to try to restore its credibility following efforts to build interest in its work by publicizing the investigation's most sensational possibilities.

When it was formed, the committee was told to "conduct a full and complete" investigation of both the Kennedy and King murders and as investigators understand that, it means they are to try to resolve the lingering question of whether the assassinations were conspiracies and whether federal investigators held back or distorted information on either of them.

As for their investigation so far, committee members and staff employees refuse to give any indication whether present evidence suggests the murder of either man was the result of a conspiracy.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the assassinations panel, had to reveal his plan to parade underworld figures through his committee room in order to get House approval to grant some witnesses immunity so they would talk.

Stokes told the House he needed to be able to assure immunity from prosecution particularly for mobsters and soldiers of fortune. Those were the people, he said, whose testimony was essential for investigating "allegations of conspiracy."

He said the committee might need to grant immunity to 150 witnesses in the Kennedy assassination alone but sources say the committee probably will not have time to call that many.

The major conspiracy theories the committee was investigating before the news blackout was imposed are these:

—Anti-Castro Cubans conspired to assassinate President Kennedy because he refused to commit U.S. military airplanes for the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion, and because the Cubans felt he stood in the way of any new effort to wrest Cuba from Fidel Castro.

—Organized crime conspired to assassinate Kennedy because he and his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, were campaigning against criminal organizations and had jailed then-Teamsters President James R. Hoffa.

The Warren Commission, in deciding Oswald acted alone, discounted some of the same information on which those theories are based.

Loran Hall had led the Warren Commission away from testimony that placed Oswald with two anti-Castro Cubans two months before the Kennedy assassination. Hall said he was with the Cubans and that the persons which other witnesses described as Oswald only looked like Oswald.

But later Hall changed his mind and said he was not there at all, leaving open the possibility that Oswald was in fact seen meeting with the anti-Castro Cubans before the murder.

Hall also has said in at least four interviews, in which details varied, that Texas businessmen offered him $50,000 to kill Kennedy.

The committee's investigation of the King assassination appears to be focused now on physical evidence to establish if James Earl Ray killed King and if there were any conspirators.

Ray pleaded guilty to the murder and was sentenced to 99 years in prison. But he has claimed ever since that he was set up to take the blame and did not kill King.

The committee apparently conducted its own ballistics tests to try to determine if Ray's rifle killed King, even though the FBI had said the bullet was too badly damaged to prove that.

Jack Kershaw, who was Ray's lawyer, said the committee has new information. But he said he does not think it has answered the questions of Ray's involvement and whether there was a conspiracy.

Some critics say conspiracy theories can never be put to rest and a few say they certainly can't be put to rest by the House committee.

The committee's credibility suffered at the beginning because of a series of internal controversies. The panel's image also was damaged when a transcript, accidentally made public, showed members were deliberately publicizing sensational elements of the investigation in an effort to keep the House from scrapping the committee.

The near total news blackout was clearly imposed last June partly in an effort to halt almost daily public embarrassments. The blackout accomplished that abruptly.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, who was the initial chairman of the committee, and flamboyant Richard A. Sprague, chief counsel, resigned after an embarrassing public battle.

Stokes replaced Gonzalez as chairman and G. Robert Blakey, an organized crime expert, replaced Sprague.

Blakey held only one news conference, saying the purpose of that one was to ask the press "to leave us alone and let us do our work." But the committee has to go back to the House for more money before the end of next March.

For those who have watched the committee's actions and breathlessly await its conclusions, that should mean some fresh tidbits will be made public as the panel tries to show that this year's work has been successful enough to deserve another.

Egyptian flags burned by Libyans in protest

By The Associated Press
Libyan envoys burned Egyptian flags Saturday and Palestinian radicals called for an all-out attack on Israel in a wave of Arab fury as President Anwar Sadat arrived on his solitary journey to Jerusalem.

At flag-burning ceremonies in Washington and in capitals around the world, Libyan ambassadors declared that Libyan-Egyptian relations had come to an end the moment Sadat stepped onto Israeli soil.

"This flag is now flying in Tel Aviv and has become a symbol of surrender and treachery," Libyan Charge d'Affaires Hassan Sadiq declared as he burned the joint flag of Egypt, Libya and Syria in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Sadiq said Libya would adopt a new flag and would ask the Arab League to expel Egypt and transfer its headquarters from Cairo.

Only Morocco and Sudan voiced support for Sadat. Conservative regimes in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area were largely silent, but Saudi Arabia — the major financial backer of Sadat's impoverished country — criticized the voyage as "inconsistent" with the overall Arab stand.

Syria declared an official day of mourning. At mid-day, all traffic in Damascus stopped for five minutes of silence. Flags were lowered to half-staff and bells tolled as they do for the dead, while prayers droned from minarets of mosques.

The official Iraqi news agency reported massive anti-Egyptian demonstrations in Baghdad and other Iraqi cities. It also said Egyptian students in Iraqi universities occupied the Baghdad offices of the Egyptian airline.

Palestinian refugees burned portraits of Sadat in their camps in Lebanon, and a mass Palestinian demonstration in Beirut heard speeches branding Sadat a traitor and a spy.

just cannot function," said Maissa Nassar, a Lebanese housewife. Palestinians in Lebanon also gathered to listen to the news over Arab radio stations. In a cafe near the Sabra refugee camp shouts of "traitor" erupted from one listening group.

Just as Sadat's plane was landing at Tel Aviv, the Voice of Palestine program on Damascus Radio broadcast an order by a Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group for its men to launch an all-out attack on Israeli targets Sunday and to prevent the Egyptian president from praying in the al-Aqsa mosque.

"Go to Jerusalem tomorrow and burn Al-Aqsa with your bodies," the radical Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine said in the broadcast.

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Anwar Sadat came to Israel Saturday night on a "sacred" and history-making mission that risked his own political future and Arab unity in a bid to find a lasting peace for the Middle East.

Stepping down from his Boeing 707 jetliner "Egyptian One" at Ben-Gurion Airport, the Egyptian president became the first Arab leader to visit Israel in the 29-year history of the Jewish state.

He arrived to an army bugle fanfare at 8:05 p.m. (1:05 p.m. EST), six minutes after touching down on a cool, dark Mediterranean night for his 36-hour visit.

The 59-year-old Egyptian was greeted and shook hands with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Ephraim Katzir and stood at attention alongside them for the playing of the Egyptian and Israeli anthems. A 21-gun salute was fired.

"A new era has begun in the Mideast," declared an Israeli television newscaster describing the emotional arrival scene. Some Israelis in the airport crowd wept.

Sadat came to this nation, with which he is still formally at war, despite almost total Arab outrage at his solitary diplomacy. A deeply religious man, Sadat had described his effort to break the "vicious cycle" of Mideast wars and animosity as a "sacred duty."

But he insisted he was not coming to make a separate peace with Israel.

Libya, one of the most virulently anti-Israeli Arab states, announced immediately it was breaking relations with neighboring Egypt. Diplomats at Libyan embassies in various world capitals, including Washington, burned the red, white and black flag shared by Libya, Egypt and Syria.

Palestinian and other Arab protesters staged often violent demonstrations Saturday at Egyptian embassies in numerous capitals.

Syria's Damascus Radio called it "the blackest day in Arab history" and broadcast a call by the radical Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine for guerrillas to launch an all-out attack on Israeli targets.

"Go to Jerusalem tomorrow and burn Al-Aqsa with your bodies," the Front said in a statement. That is the mosque where Sadat is scheduled to worship early Sunday.

The airport arrival ceremony on the floodlit tarmac was brief and included no public statements.

Moving down a line of dignitaries including the whole Israeli cabinet, diplomatic corps, Arab notables from the occupied West Bank and others, Sadat reserved his warmest smile for former Prime Minister Golda Meir — a woman Sadat used to scorn as "the old lady."

"Madame, I have waited a long time to meet you," he said.

The 79-year-old Mrs. Meir, smiling and shaking his hand firmly, replied: "Mr. President, I've waited a long time to meet you."

He leaned down and kissed her on the cheek.

Among those meeting the Egyptian leader were some of his country's most implacable enemies from the past — patch-eyed Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, Israeli military hero of the 1967 Mideast war; former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, his counterpart in the 1973 war; and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, the general who turned the tide of the 1973 conflict against Egypt.

Sadat drove the 30 miles to Jerusalem and arrived to applause and chants of "Sadat! Sadat!" from Egyptian and Israeli journalists.

Huge crowds lined the entrance to Jerusalem waving flags, clapping and shouting. An Israeli waved a large placard reading "Peace" and an old man in a prayer shawl chanted prayers.

Sadat also was welcomed by Samuel Lewis, U.S. ambassador to Israel, who was instrumental in arranging the historic visit.

On Sunday, the Egyptian president is scheduled to start his day with worship at the Al Aqsa mosque and then visit the church of the Holy Sepulcher and Yad Vashem, the monument to Jewish victims of Nazism.

The highlight of his visit will be the address to the Knesset at 4 p.m. (9 a.m. EST). He is expected to make the basic Arab calls for Israeli withdrawal from all lands seized in the 1967 war and a homeland for the Palestinians. Begin will follow him to the Knesset rostrum.

Sadat is also scheduled to make a formal call on Katzir and he may hold private talks with Begin.

The Egyptian president at first appeared stern-faced and uneasy as he walked down the airplane ramp. But he relaxed visibly when Begin met him at the foot of the ramp and the two men talked and laughed together.

Security for the visit was the tightest in Israeli history.

Police sealed off all roads to Jerusalem two hours before Sadat's arrival. And access to Jerusalem from the Israeli-occupied, Arab-populated West Bank of the Jordan River was closed even earlier to prevent possible infiltration of anti-Sadat militants.

The Al-Aqsa mosque was the most serious security problem. In 1951, King Abdullah of Jordan was assassinated there by a Palestinian extremist because, like Sadat, he dared to accept Israel's existence.

City commission to fill library board vacancies

The Pampa City Commission will consider the appointment of two new members of the board of Lovett Memorial Library when it meets in regular session at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

The library board has recommended that Mary Beth Fatheree and Kenneth W. Fields, a Pampa attorney associated with Waters and Holt, be appointed to the two existing vacancies.

The commission will also consider on first reading an ordinance raising the number of members on the Planning and Zoning Commission from five to seven. The ordinance will be considered as the result of a September request from the Planning and Zoning board to facilitate reaching a quorum at the group's meetings.

Bids will be considered for a new booster truck for North Sub Station. The booster truck now in use is 21 years old, according to city officials, and the last booster truck purchased by Pampa was from Fire Appliance of Wichita Falls for $26,000.

The commission will also consider bids for 12 dump boxes used in garbage collection. Normal cost is approximately $300 each.

Man in black

"What's going on? Where is everybody," Gavrel recalled asking. "Come on. They're inside," was the answer.

They did not recognize the man in the darkness, but followed him up to the sidewalk. When he stepped into a lighted area, Beverly said she told Bubba, "That's Cullen." At that point, the gunman wheeled and fired the single shot that crippled young Gavrel.

Beverly ran, flagged down a passing motorist and got help.

Police arrived to a grisly scene: Gavrel in a breakfast area where he had laboriously crawled, Farr dead in a pool of a blood. And Andrea, the gentle child who loved pets, face up, eyes partially open, in the basement.

At 4:15 a.m., police went to the home of Karen Master and arrested Thomas Cullen Davis, one of American's richest men, for the slayings at 4200 Mockingbird Lane.

There is equal justice under the law, but it is a truism that money can buy more equal justice. Cullen Davis could afford the best. To defend himself, he reportedly spent $1.6 million on lawyers and $400,000 on investigators.

He assembled a legal team headed by Richard Haynes, nicknamed "Racehorse," a criminal lawyer whose fame and reputation have been immortalized in the bestseller "Blood and Money."

A news magazine once called Racehorse one of the six best criminal lawyers in the country. Asked before the Davis trial if he considered himself the best in Texas, Haynes replied: "It is my belief that I am. But I wonder why you restrict it to Texas."

she hopes several hundred parents will attend the session. It is open to the public.

Other items on the agenda are appointment of local textbook committee, contract with Don Lane, delinquent tax attorney and awarding of bids for piano, video cassette recorder and television receiver.

Trustees also plan a vote on revised policies, computerized tax roll and usual items of minutes, bills and invoices and personnel action in executive session.

Mrs. Kathleen Greene, one of the group's spokesperson, said

Protesting parents to speak at board meet

At the request of a group of parents, the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees changed the regular time and meeting place of its Monday meeting to 7 p.m. at Pampa Junior High School cafeteria.

The group reserved a slot on the 10-item agenda to "present the petition concerning closing of the middle school and placement of the sixth grade children in junior high."

Houston mayoral race draws yawns

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston residents settle Tuesday a million dollar mayoral campaign that had most voters yawning before turning into a name-calling runoff.

Frank Briscoe, 51, a former district attorney, and Jim McConn, 49, a builder and former city councilman, want to succeed Mayor Fred Hofheinz, who did not seek a third two-year term.

Briscoe led McConn, 54,472 to 37,621, as the two survived a 12-person Nov. 8 general election which drew only 23.7 percent of the registered voters, including only 18.4 percent of the normally powerful black vote.

Through last Tuesday, McConn had reported $646,022 in campaign expenditures, Briscoe $533,586.

Hofheinz and two black organizations ignited the runoff fireworks last Monday with blasts at Briscoe.

Hofheinz blamed Briscoe, his runoff opponent two years ago, for planting rumors about him which led to a grand jury investigation earlier this year.

The jury ended its investigation by saying no evidence could be found to support allegations a high elected official was arrested in a drug or vice raid and released after a high police official intervened. Hofheinz said he is considering filing a slander suit against Briscoe.

Top officials of the two black groups, the Harris County Council of Organizations and the Black Organization for Leadership Development, accused Briscoe of being a racist. Briscoe denied the allegations

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Dreary skies and drizzles dulled much of Texas Saturday as forecasters warned of a Pacific cold front that was expected to touch off thunderstorms across the state Sunday.

Fog cut visibility Saturday morning along the Upper Coast amid the drizzle. Only in West Texas were skies fair with little humidity.

Forecasts called for the new front to zip across the state from the west Sunday, setting off thunderstorms in its wake.

A clearing trend was expected to begin late Sunday night.

Houston mayoral race draws yawns

and charged that McConn had orchestrated the accusations. McConn responded by calling Briscoe a "sick man."

Residents quickly lost interest in such issues as fiscal responsibility and mass transportation.

The powerful Council of Organizations endorsed McConn for the runoff after a near deadlock between McConn and Noble Ginther, millionaire businessman who ran third Nov. 8, caused the group to sidestep a general election endorsement.

Observers believed the black turnout could be a major factor Tuesday. Compared to the 18.4 percent turnout two weeks ago, 45.6 percent of the registered blacks cast ballots two years ago and 97.5 percent of that vote went to Hofheinz.

While blasting Briscoe, Hofheinz stopped short of endorsing McConn but said it was obvious for whom he leans to vote.

Hofheinz remained silent during the first campaign but said his criticism of Briscoe was prompted by his presence in New Orleans when about 75 percent of the eligible voters turned out for a Nov. 12 mayoral runoff.

He said something needed to be done to excite the people about the Houston runoff.

"It would be a great tragedy to have only a few people express opinions about who the next Houston mayor ought to be," said Hofheinz, a son of former Mayor Roy Hofheinz, the man who conceived the idea for building the Astrodome.

50 fatalities in Portuguese airliner crash

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) — A Portuguese jetliner carrying 156 passengers crashed and exploded while landing at this Atlantic island Saturday. Initial reports over government television said at least 50 persons were killed.

Witnesses at Santa Cruz Airport said the crash ripped the three-engined Boeing-727 apart on the runway and hurled a section of the craft into the ocean.

Stormy seas around this Portuguese island hampered rescue efforts by police, firemen and navy personnel.

According to reports here and in Lisbon, about 50 persons survived. A spokesman at the district hospital in Funchal said "many severely wounded" persons were admitted to the hospital.

Flight controllers said rain and 12-mph winds had cut visibility to 2 1/2 miles when the jet of Portugal's national airline TAP tried to land at 10 p.m. (5 p.m. EST).

TAP officials in Lisbon said the plane carried 156 passengers and an undetermined number of crew members.

They reported all 110 passengers who boarded the flight in Lisbon were believed to be Portuguese, but they did not know the nationalities of the others. They said the flight, No. 425, originated in Brussels, Belgium.

Scouts set school night for Tuesday

A "School Night for Scouting" will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sam Houston School Gym.

This meeting is for boys aged 11 to 18 who are interested in joining the Scout troop of their choice.

Highlights of the coming year's scouting program include district camporee, skiing at Red River, N.M., two trips to Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base near Cimmaron, N.M., two trips to Scouting's Sommers Canoe Base in Northern Minnesota and council camporee.

Summer camp program in July and August will include a week of aquatics camp and a week of conservation camp.

Parents are asked attend the school night with their sons. Their permission and signature is needed for a boy to join.

The program is sponsored by the Adobe Walls Council.

'Golden Fleece' award reversed

Proxmire's ire sires faculty fire

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayer-financed studies on why men and women fall in love, are rude on tennis courts or want to escape from jail are the steady fare of a new Washington institution — Sen. William Proxmire's "Golden Fleece of the Month."

The Golden Fleece award is Proxmire's way of pointing out what he sees as abuses in federal spending. Those who agree with his efforts praise him for that.

But he also has been subjected to suggestions that he give himself a Golden Fleece for the time and money he spends ferreting out colorful and amusing but relatively trivial examples of government misspending.

The Wisconsin Democrat was formally censured by the faculty of the University of Wisconsin after he awarded the Fleece to the National Science Foundation for funding a study of romantic love. The faculty voted when Proxmire discovered the university had a similar research project and said it was an example of silly science.

Over the past 33 months, 26 federal agencies, departments, military branches, commissions and boards have felt the sting of Proxmire's well-honed sarcasm in receiving the citation for "the biggest or most ironic or most ridiculous waste of the taxpayers' money."

For instance, the National Endowment of the Arts got the Fleece for granting an artist public money to throw rolls of crepe paper from a flying airplane to create "cracks in the sky."

He cited the Air Force for keeping some of its pilots so busy flying generals and civilian VIPs on non-essential or low-priority trips that they didn't have time for required combat readiness training.

The Department of Agriculture was named for publishing a $46,000 study on how long it takes to cook breakfast in time measurement units of 36 of second.

And the Federal Aviation Administration got its Fleece for spending $57,900 to study the body measurements of one airline's stewardess trainees while at the same time noting the results were useless for safety purposes because each airline has its own employment standards.

The Fleecees have ranged widely across the government, not missing either the White House or Congress itself.

Proxmire cited the White House under former President Gerald R. Ford for allegedly expanding its "empire" of personnel and perquisites while preaching austerity to the rest of the government. Congress was named for "living high off the hog" with pay increases and amenities "while much of the rest of the country is suffering economic disaster."

Critics claim that Proxmire attacks on research into why monkeys or humans clench their jaws or whether drunk fish are more aggressive than sober fish take advantage of a funny title and ignore the underlying real or potential value.

Moreover, they say the Proxmire attacks have cast a chill on a research community already upset about decreasing federal support.

The National Science Foundation, the object of four Fleecees to date, is said to have renamed many of its ongoing research projects in the hope of heading off further Proxmire attacks.

But the Proxmire staff says a Fleece never is awarded on the basis of a funny name alone, but because of an informed judgment that the research is "ridiculous, useless, mindless or silly."

An average of 40 hours is spent researching and preparing each Fleece, but some awards require "much more" time from Proxmire's office staff, according to Howard Shuman, the senator's administrative assistant.

Several suggestions for future Fleecees reach the Proxmire office each week for evaluation, but many don't check out or are the products of office feuds, or self-promotion efforts.

Three or four proposals are presented to Proxmire each month. Once a proposal is selected, a press release is written, a process Shuman said can consume several drafts because of efforts to be accurate.

Proxmire comes by many candidates for the monthly award through tips as well as in his capacity as chairman of an appropriations subcommittee. He contends that during the time he has had jurisdiction over the National Science Foundation's budget, funds for basic research have increased.

And he notes that along with criticism he has formally commended the foundation for success in guiding serious research.

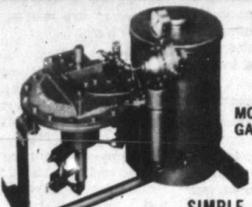

But he objects to expensive studies by one agency that duplicate studies already done by another. He says he would like to change the system, which he says sends a large percentage of government research funds to "establishment" universities on the East and West coasts.

He objects also to "mindless" funneling of federal funds to states and cities with no federal voice in how it is spent.

"I find that the Fleece of the Month is the most effective single way I have of drawing attention to these practices in the hopes that pressure from public opinion or the unpleasantness of exposure will bring a change in priorities," Proxmire says.

"People are able to comprehend specific, sometimes relatively small things in a way that they cannot focus on a $100 billion defense budget that they cannot see, touch, feel smell or hear," Schuman says.

These nozzles atomize chemical at the point of injection. They are designed specifically to extend the usefulness of Western chemical pumps. Models DFF, MA, and MT pumps have metering actions which rapidly inject a measured quantity of methanol, then pause before injecting another. It is this rapid injection that allows the atomizing nozzles to function. Atomization is not effective when a small quantity of chemical is dribbled in continuously. For maximum effectiveness of atomizing nozzles, always use Western chemical pumps.

Model ANX is designed to lubricate through a 1" full opening valve.

Model AN is designed for a fixed installation.

Candy's spouse seeks share

HOUSTON (AP) — The 1st Court of Civil Appeals has ruled that the last husband of the late millionaire Candace Mossler can challenge her will and seek a share of the estimated $27 million estate.

The three-judge Houston appeals court overturned Thursday a lower court ruling that excluded Barnett Garrison, left an invalid from an accident at the Mossler home during the couple's marriage, can participate in the contest of Mrs. Mossler's will.

Garrison, 38, and Mrs. Mossler were married in 1971 and the couple was divorced Dec. 1, 1975, but Garrison's lawyers contended that the divorce was not final at the time of Mrs. Mossler's death in October 1976 and that Garrison had standing to contest the will.

Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory ruled earlier this year that the couple's divorce was final and that Garrison had no standing as a surviving spouse.

A will dated Sept. 2, 1968 divided the estate equally among six children but a 1975 supplement allegedly signed by Mrs. Mossler disinherited three of the children.

Two of the children challenged the supplement and a jury in Gregory's court decided Sept. 23 the document was invalid. The panel decided that Mrs. Mossler had intended that the estate be divided among all six children.

The jury verdict later was set aside by Gregory and a new trial was ordered on grounds the jury deliberated with information not admitted as evidence.

Since the heat pump pulls much of its heat right out of thin air, it actually saves energy as it works. In fact, the heat pump delivers as much as two units of heat for every one heat unit of electricity it uses. That's an efficiency story that no other system can equal. And the heat pump does it all in your own home without flame or water. Just electricity — pure and simple.

Coal miners reflect on the good ol' days

EDITOR'S NOTE — When they worked the mines, they worked with picks and mules. When they joined the union, they feared for their jobs. They're coal miners from the '30s, retired now on pension. Plenty of time to reflect on what used to be — and project what might be if there's a strike next month.

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
MOUNT HOPE, W. Va. (AP) — Charley Massey and a friend were reminiscing about the not-so-good ol' days when they mined coal with mules and dynamite.

The men, both retired miners, were sitting on Massey's front porch in nearby Price Hill, a small southern West Virginia community once owned by a coal company.

"I started working around the tippie when I was nine," said Massey, 65. "It was that or starve after my daddy died. Later, when I was 14, I went inside the mine. My job was lighting squibs and shooting powder."

"That was back about 1930 wasn't it?" asked his friend, William "Bill" Coleman. "They went to using blasting caps after that. And I'll swear, I believe they were even more dangerous than the squibs."

"I don't know," Massey replied, rubbing the stubble on his chin and reflecting on those long-ago times. "A lot of men were hurt by squibs. They'd think the thing had gone out and they'd go back to take a look, only to have the fool thing explode in their face."

"That's true," conceded Coleman. "You still see a lot of old miners whose faces are pitted with coal dust. I've even seen them with those blue spots in their eyeballs."

His comment brought a long yawn from the yellow tomcat, lazing nearby in the afternoon sun. The fray-eared old fellow got up and ambled away, as if bored with conversation he'd heard many times before.

Massey laughed as he watched the cat's retreat.

"He's about as old as I am, I reckon. We've had him about 15 years. Let's see, we moved into this house back in 1945. It used to be a boss's house, but the company pulled out in 1938 and I bought it from a realtor."

He paused a moment, watching the mist rise from the hills across the narrow valley. When he resumed talking, he was back on blasting.

"I had a face full of coal dust for awhile. Had myself sandpapered in 1950. The doctor said it was the first time it had ever been done around here. Look, you can't see even a speck now."

"Now mules," he added suddenly. "That's something else."

"They were still using them where I went to work, back in the early '30s," said Coleman, a 62-year-old lay preacher who chain smokes and wears a Tom Dewey moustache. "They'd have carbide lamps on their heads, just like the men; and some of them were smarter than the men. They'd get educated and could do their job better than most men. But they'd get mean every once in a while and try to squeeze you up against the rib."

"Personally, I never worked with mules," said Massey. "But I worked under almost all conditions back in 1929 and '30."

He got down on his knees and showed how he used to shovel "low coal," in a shaft no more than 30 inches high.

Coleman nodded. "And I could tell you about crawling back under the mountain with my dinner bucket in my mouth. Sometimes I'd crawl 1,000 feet to get to the face. That's where the money was when you were loading coal. I've loaded for 35 cents a ton and I've cut coal with a pick, too."

The topic shifted again, this time to the United Mine Workers.

"I joined in the fall of 1931," said Massey. "I signed up out in the bushes. You couldn't do it in the open in those days or you'd lose your job. A deputy sheriff would come around and if there was a bunch of us at the company store, he'd tell us to break it up and go home; he'd say the company didn't want us congregating."

"That's the way it was," agreed Coleman. "Those deputies would carry long sticks and they'd rap you on the shins and tell you to go home. Why, they didn't even allow you to visit each other."

Massey and Coleman are among the some 80,000 retired UMW miners who fall under the 1950 pension plan. Another 5,000 miners get their pensions under a 1974 fund.

"I retired in 1969, after slate fell on me," said Coleman. "My pension is $225 a month, but the fellows in the '74 fund get about twice that much. I don't think it's fair to have separate funds. Us oldtimers built the union and now the young ones are reap the seeds we sowed while we have to do without."

Massey, who retired in 1970, refused to discuss the situation.

"I don't talk politics, religion or union business," he said. "But I'll tell you that I'm not worried about losing my pension, which some people say will happen because of all these strikes. I trust in the Lord to take care of me."

"Besides, I'm 100 percent disabled. I've got black lung so bad my lungs keep deflating and they have to drill holes in my chest to pump them back up."

Skulduggery charges filed on witch suppliers

NEW YORK (AP) — Five persons have been charged with stealing skulls from mausoleums in two cemeteries for sale to members of a witchcraft "coven."

Queens District Attorney John Santucci announced the arrests Thursday night after the second skull robbery in less than a month was discovered earlier in the day. As in the previous incident on Oct. 23, the stolen skull was that of a woman.

Shortly before Santucci's announcement, police in the Bronx reported another grim discovery.

Police called to a supposedly vacant apartment by maintenance workers found an altar decorated with a human skull and other bones, a goat skull, horns, feathers and dried blood.

The latest crypt robbery occurred between 5 a.m. and 7 a.m. Thursday at Calvary Cemetery. Workmen discovered the bronze door of a mausoleum had been forced open, a casket dragged outside, and pieces of the shroud strewn about. The skull was missing from the casket.

Shortly before midnight Santucci announced the arrests of Robert Blankenship, 18, of Sunnyside; Ricky Lee Dalla, 18, of Glen Oaks; June Ann Gallagher, 18, said to be Blankenship's girlfriend, and Edward Glowaski, 19, both of Woodside, and an unidentified 14-year-old boy.

The district attorney said the youths broke into the two mausoleums, stole the skulls, and took them to the Gallagher girl, who delivered them to Glowaski.

Give thanks: turkey day gas supply 'ample'

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Automobile Association says gasoline supplies across the state for the Thanksgiving weekend will be ample.

However, the association said Thursday about one-third of the state's service stations will be closed on the holiday itself.

The AAA said a survey shows 31 per cent of the state's stations will be closed on Thanksgiving Day and 26 per cent will be closed the following Sunday.

$19 million in damages sought from 'Hustler'

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Houston wholesale news distributor has filed a $19 million damage suit against officials of Hustler Magazine, alleging he was slandered and ordered beaten in connection with alleged debt.

Named as defendants in the federal court suit filed Thursday by R. Gary St. Marie were Larry C. Flynt, his brother, Jimmy Flynt, and Flynt Distributing Co. Inc. of Columbus, Ohio.

Dolph in state campaign waters again

Editor's Note: Gov. Dolph Briscoe has launched a reelection bid that would give him 10 years as chief executive, longer than any other Texan. Here is a look at a private man who wants to stay in the public eye. An earlier story dealt with one of Briscoe's opponents, Atty. Gen. John Hill.

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Often times, in public, Gov. Dolph Briscoe grimaces as if he were in pain. It is the reaction of a private man to public life.

But here he is at 54, a rancher and banker worth maybe $50 million, driving around Texas, his wife Janey at his side, hustling votes, buoyed by applause and stung by harsh jokes.

Neighbors say his daddy, Dolph Sr., a Uvalde merchant and rancher, always wanted his son to be governor.

Briscoe's tireless 18-hour campaign days indicated, however, that more than a father's dream prompted him.

Fourth among 10 candidates in the 1968 Democratic primary, Briscoe, despite eight years in the state House of Representatives, was described as Texas' first successful political amateur in 30 years when he beat the pros in 1972.

AP news analysis

He got into office without a majority vote after the Sharpstown bank scandal wiped away some of the competition. Surprisingly, he proclaimed that politics is not a game for the rich.

Two years later he managed to stay afloat although the Republicans tried to tie George McGovern — an unpopular presidential candidate — around his neck.

With a guarantee of six years in office, the man who said in 1972 he didn't think he wanted to spend the rest of his life in office, now asks for another four years.

No Texan has ever been governor for 10 years; Allan Shivers holds the record at 7½ years.

What makes Dolph run? "I've enjoyed the job," he has said. "It's a lot of fun."

Observers doubt that, however, when they hear his nervous laugh or notice his grip tightening on the podium.

He is in the most public of Texas political offices, yet he has reclusive tendencies, retreating to his Uvalde ranch for days at a time. At receptions, if Janey should stray, he will guide her back by touching her elbow, apparently feeling more comfortable with her in on the conversation.

Janey's constant presence has led to a spate of remarks about "Gov. and Mr. Briscoe."

"I do no work at all that's political," Janey once told a reporter. "I want to be governor about like I want to be the first ape on the moon."

Their relationship, however, is another of the seeming Briscoe paradoxes.

Supporters, for example, cite Briscoe's personal integrity as the quality that most appeals to voters, yet he steadfastly refuses to give the public a picture of his wealth. He puts in his financial report only what is required by law of public officials.

"I think some things are a private matter and should remain a private matter," he says. He has abruptly cut off news conferences when the questions turn to his finances.

Briscoe is shy, yet he loosens up while campaigning and, according to Rep. Mickey Leland, once did the "head wiggle (dance)" in a black section of Houston.

He apparently will do any hat that is offered him for a photograph, although most are unflattering.

Liberals assail him, but he passed party loyalty tests by supporting Adlai Stevenson in 1952 and McGovern 20 years later.

Although he is a lifelong Democrat, Republicans have cheered his legislative goals, with one exclaiming during the 1977 Legislature, "We've got a Republican in Democrat's clothing."

He has conservative tastes in clothes and wears boots, but Janey and the Briscoe girls favor gowns by Oscar de la Renta.

Friends say he is decisive, but others smirk at the time he turned to Janey on election day 1972 and reportedly asked,

"Honey, do you think I ought to get some potato salad?"

"Why, of course," an eavesdropper said she replied, "we need potato salad (with barbecue)."

Mexican-Americans have accused him of being insensitive to their needs and he kept the Mexican consul waiting four months for an appointment, yet he has not been hesitant to appoint Mexican-Americans to state jobs. Janey's personal secretary is Maria Gonzales.

Although brief ceremonial functions seem to suit him, his 1975 inaugural day was the most austere Texas inaugural since the Korean War.

Briscoe held his tongue for months on something as important as a proposed new state constitution, yet supports controversial appointees with what one reporter termed "determined ferocity."

He looks robust but had a kidney ailment in late 1974 that kills 55 percent of its victims.

It was while he was recovering from the ailment that Briscoe got out of bed to deny renewed rumors that he had undergone psychiatric care.

When the rumors first surfaced in the 1972 election, Briscoe had said he found them "interesting, even amusing," but privately he was said to be furious.

Texas' prosperity — particularly oil and gas revenue — has enabled Briscoe to make good for three legislative sessions on his appealing pledge of no new state taxes.

"The necessity of fiscal responsibility in all levels of government is second only to world peace in our survival," he told independent oil and gas men last year.

Briscoe has had mixed success with his legislative priorities through the years — mass transit, curbing governmental spending, anti-crime bills, the repeal of the utility tax, increased highway spending and setting aside $1 billion for emergencies.

Another credo was voiced in a 1975 speech. "I personally believe," he said, "that it is time to recognize that the people of this country are better off with less government — not more government."

"It's clear the people wanted a governor who would leave them alone," jabs Ray Hutchison, a possible Republican candidate for governor, "and in that respect he would have to get high marks."

Briscoe's main strength, insists Mark White, a former Briscoe appointee as secretary of state, is "his ability not to say anything, to be quiet when he doesn't have to speak."

His silence has led to friction between the governor and the press, who chide the governor's aides about Briscoe not holding more news conferences.

It was two months after he assumed office in 1973 that he granted his first interview to a Capitol reporter, and in 1975 he held only two news conferences during a 128-day period.

"I'll hold a press conference when I think there's a need for one," he once said.

The Associated Press waited two months for a response to a request for an interview with Briscoe — to match one the AP had with Hill — but never got an answer.

Hill and others have said repeatedly that Briscoe lacks leadership, and he was asked if this bothered him.

"Not at all," he said. Next year, on election day, Dolph Briscoe should find out how many friends he has.

Planners capitulate; owners save abodes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A nine-month battle with urban planners has convinced 16 residents of Dunsmuir Avenue that City Hall does listen. They won their fight to save their homes from the bulldozer.

To the planners, the land looked like a good spot for a park, but to the homeowners it represented their lives.

"I never felt my vote or word counted," said resident Gloria Willridge after the city's decision to use a different parcel of land was announced Wednesday. "I'm just an average person. But now I believe my word will count any place."

"Everybody just stuck together, and it just shows you can do these things if you put enough pressure on them," said 70-year-old Helen Sharps, who has lived in her house for seven years.

City Councilman David Cunningham, who wanted a park in his district, said the new site — vacant land about a mile from the original plan — would cost about one-tenth as much as the original site.

The city has been trying to locate parks within a few miles of all residents, and the Pico-Hauser area, a middle-class West Side neighborhood of mostly one-story homes 50 years old, was "park poor."

But being a residential neighborhood, it had few vacant areas for slides, fountains and park benches. So the Recreation and Parks Department decided to raze 16 homes on a 1.9-acre block.

But the 16 homeowners along Dunsmuir Avenue who would have been affected learned of the city's plan by letter last February.

The City Council voted 9-1 for the park last summer, and residents were told the city would condemn the land unless they sold.

"We don't object to parks," Mrs. Willridge, 38, said. "We just object to taking our homes."

Seadock financed

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of Seadock says four or five companies are looking at the project as an investment.

Hugh L. Scott, president of the six-company consortium, said Thursday he is becoming more optimistic about arrangements for financing the proposed $700 million offshore crude oil terminal near Freeport.

He said one of the companies looking at the project is a large oil-related company.

Elderly folks get state attention, help

EDITOR'S NOTE - Government agencies are stepping in where families no longer tread: caring for the aged. Each state provides some form of help, but Massachusetts is the first to create a cabinet-level post. Thus the secretary for the Department of Elder Affairs has the governor's ear on matters of making old age easier.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) - One of the top men in the state bureaucracy likes to browse the benches in Boston Common, sit in seedy cafeterias and ride buses at odd hours of the evening.

This is how James H. Callahan meets the people he is paid to serve. As Massachusetts' top administrator for old folks, he seeks out their sometimes depressing world to remind himself of what it's like.

Callahan is in charge of the Department of Elder Affairs.

The affairs of elders, it turns out, are much like the affairs of youngsters, with one exception: the helplessness that comes with arthritic joints, brittle bones, tired reflexes and other accoutrements of old age. And these can turn what is routine for the young into hardships for the old.

So for people fortunate enough to survive past their prime, this young state agency provides necessary services such as cooking, driving and housework.

These are Callahan's concerns, because his job is legally defined as making old people independent. And more than anything, this means keeping them out of nursing homes.

All of this happens at the highest rung of Massachusetts government because as secretary of elder affairs, Callahan is one of the ten members of the governor's cabinet. It is a symbol of the state's recognition of the organized power and social needs of the old.

Massachusetts created the department in 1973. It was the first state to put the department at the cabinet level, but six others have since done the same: Illinois, California, Connecticut, Maryland, Hawaii and Alabama. Every state and territory has some kind of agency for old folks. Across the United States, looking out for the elderly has become one of the fastest growing branches of state government.

Callahan is beefy, soft-spoken and 41-years-old. "I tell people that if you want to find out what old people are facing, ride the buses, particularly on off hours, because that's about the only transportation some of them have," he says.

"When you hear they're going to change the bus schedules because they don't have heavy ridership, you know that means nothing to most people. But it means almost everything to a few people."

Callahan's constituents are the men in mismatched suits who pass winter afternoons in $1.25 movie houses. They are the fail women who are afraid to cook because they might be forgetful around the gas flames.

Caring for the aged once fell to younger relatives. But family obligations have changed, and in areas where children or grandchildren once took charge, the state has moved in.

The Department of Elder Affairs is spending $32 million this year to help make life easier for old folks. Two-thirds of this budget is turned over to 27 home care corporations. These local, non-profit agencies provide most of the day-to-day services.

Workers go into the old people's homes and do their shopping, run errands, help with the cooking. They clean houses, fix broken windows and shovel snow. The corporations also provide vans to shuttle the elderly to doctors' appointments, community centers and meal halls.

Another program provides low-cost meals for old people at churches, schools and other central places. Currently, the program provides 10,000 meals a day at 191 locations. For those too feeble to go out, the program delivers dinners to their homes.

The department also provides jobs for about 500 elderly. For a 37½-hour week of work in a hospital, nursing home or social agency, they make $50.

The agency helps set up senior citizen centers, provides lawyers for nursing home residents and has ombudsmen who help work out the problems of people in nursing homes.

"Our primary function is to marshal all of the local, state and federal resources for the benefit of the independence and dignity of older persons," Callahan says.

That phrase runs through Callahan's conversation because it is the law. The legislation that created the department orders it to come up with "innovative programs to insure the dignity and independence of elderly persons."

The department tries to do this in its own office. Of its 65 employees, 30 percent are over age 55.

Their concerns cover a sizable portion of the state. Sixteen percent of Massachusetts' 5.9 million residents are over age 60. On the whole, they are poor. More than half have a family income of less than $5,000 a year.

However, spending money on the old may not even be the department's biggest challenge.

"The most important thing this office does is get out in front on some of the elderly issues," Callahan says.

That means being an advocate for the elderly. Callahan says he and staff members testify at hearings on issues that affect old people, among them welfare reform, national health care, food stamps and mandatory retirement laws.

It also means working behind the scenes for the old folks in the state agencies that handle transportation, welfare and housing.

Most of the state agencies for the elderly grew out of a 1965 federal law, the Older Americans Act. To get the money provided by the law, states had to set up departments to administer it.

The idea of a high-level department in Massachusetts was born when the state government was reorganized in a cabinet form. Organized groups of old people lobbied mightily for their own secretary in the new cabinet.

"We really packed the State House for several hearings to impress on legislators that we were in back of the proposal," says Meina Cass, 81, of Boston. "We wanted to have a separate department. We felt that the seniors were entitled to special treatment and special privileges as a group."

Callahan is the third person to head the department. He says he learned a lot about keeping people independent when he was director of a state hospital for the handicapped.

Most of Massachusetts' old people don't use the department's services. One survey shows that about 80 percent get along very well on their own.

That figure was arrived at by Laurence G. Branch, director of the Center for Survey Research, a joint venture of Harvard, MIT and the University of Massachusetts. He has been studying the needs of the state's old people for three years.

Seven percent of those over 65 could use the kind of helping hand services provided by the department, he says, and four percent are doing that.

Branch said the state could keep another six percent out of the nursing homes by providing more extensive services. These are people too weak to take care of themselves but too strong and alert to be happy in a nursing home.

Missing this group is the department's main failure, he says. They need help in their homes with such chores as dressing and grooming.

"Here's a person we define as frail," he said. "They don't need to go into an institution yet. Let's authorize the amount of money equal to what it would cost to institutionalize him and set up the services he needs."

Frank Manning, 75, director of the state Association of Older Americans, agrees that the department could do more to keep people out of nursing homes.

He would like the state to build a kind of half-way housing for old people - places that provide more care than traditional apartments but more freedom than nursing homes.

Killer breaks on stand

DALLAS (AP) - A man who maintained innocence for three years in the death of a two-year-old boy broke down on the witness stand during his murder trial Friday and confessed to the crime.

Harold Runk said he held Heath Lambert under scalding hot water, then refused to take the child to a doctor.

Runk said he was changing his plea to guilty. "Because I want to get the lies off my back."

The victim was the son of Mrs. Nancy Runk, who married the defendant after the baby's death.

She said she watched her child die over a 10-day period in 1974, but did not take him to ### eat Wheaties?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Television commercials in which Bruce Jenner claims he "downed a lot of Wheaties" en route to his Olympic decathlon championship constitute false advertising, the district attorney's office says in a suit against the cereal's maker.

The district attorney's consumer fraud crime unit filed suit in Superior Court here Thursday against General Mills Inc., the firm that produces the cereal billed as "the breakfast of champions."

Like chameleons, some snakes have a limited ability to change their coloration during the day.

a doctor even though she "knew he was going to die."

Autopsy reports said the child died from an infection resulting from untreated burns over 33 percent of his body.

The child was Mrs. Runk's son by a previous marriage.

Runk said he held the child under running hot water in a bathtub while the baby screamed. "I knew if I took him to a doctor, I'd go to the penitentiary," he said.

"So I dried him off and hoped he'd get well. I didn't want him to die."

Runk said he could not recall what prompted him to scald the baby.

Both Runk and his wife had been convicted of seriously injuring the child and were sentenced to 20 years in prison. But the convictions were overturned because the original indictment never established the mother was responsible for the care of her child.

Key Club President Speaks

Joe Adcock, president of the Pampa Key Club, presided over Friday's meeting of the Pampa Kiwanis Club as part of International Key Club Week, Nov. 13-19. The Kiwanis Club sponsors the local Key Club. The Key Club's other activities during the week included co-sponsorship of Model Congress III at Pampa High School and the annual bonfire prior to the Amarillo High - Pampa football game. The club's current project is the sale of "Secure - A - Key" applications. "Secure - A - Key" is a lost key return service. Proceeds from the project are expected to help finance the club's attendance at the 1978 district convention. (Pampa News photo)

Women's school phases out men

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lone Mountain College, a one-time women's school which had joined a national trend toward coeducation, will start phasing men out again next fall. "It all involves a major change psychologically to provide a situation where women can have the chance to be competitive without worrying what young men think of them," said Joan Barr, vice president for corporate planning and development at the college. The 100 or so male undergraduates currently enrolled will be allowed to finish their studies at the 350-student campus perched on a hill in the heart of the city. Miss Barr told a news conference Friday. But no new male undergraduates will be admitted to the regular four-year degree program, and the school will eventually be renamed the Lone Mountain College for Women. Men will still be welcome in master's degree and creative and performing arts programs, she said.

Miss Barr said the college will seek to "address the new roles women are going to be playing, and are indeed playing, in the business and corporate world." It will not be "designed for career preparation per se, but will encourage women to become well-rounded in the sciences, liberal arts, mathematics and the various areas considered men's domain." The school, which was formerly affiliated with the Roman Catholic Society of the Sacred Heart, now considers itself non-denominational. "But we continue the Catholic heritage," Miss Barr said.

Five Pampans plead guilty, get probation

Five Pampa men pleaded guilty to various charges before District 223 Judge Don Cain Friday, and all were fined and placed on probation. They were James E. Grange, who was fined $500 and placed on five years' probation for a theft which occurred June 22, 1976; Frank Ainer Thornton, who paid a $500 fine and was placed on five years' probation on a driving while intoxicated charge which occurred on Aug. 19, 1975; Bobby Joe Dorsey, who was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for five years for the unlawful delivery of marijuana for remuneration on Aug. 31 of this year; Herdis Lee Jackson, who also received a $1,000 fine and was placed on five years' probation for a similar offense; and Robert J. Bradshaw, for the unlawful carrying of weapons into premises licensed to sell alcoholic beverages. Bradshaw was fined $350 and placed on three years' probation for the offense, which occurred at the Busy Bee Cafe, 410 Maple, on Sept. 26, 1976.

Navy plans to cut fleet

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has proposed cutting its program for building new warships by one-third so that more money can be spent on overhauling the current fleet.

Pentagon sources say the Navy wants to shift from $5 billion to $7 billion in future spending to improve the readiness of existing vessels, many of which have fallen into disrepair.

If carried out, the decision will mean a reduction from 160 to 101 in the number of new warships and support vessels funded for construction over the next five years. For some time the Navy has sought to eliminate a backlog in vital ship overhauls and aircraft maintenance.

A major cutback in new ship construction, however, would force abandonment of the Pentagon's goal of increasing the present fleet of around 460 up to 600 vessels by the mid 1980s.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown is expected to reach a final decision in early December. At that time he will be completing the overall military budget for the coming 1979 fiscal year and a five-year defense program through 1983.

The ultimate decision will rest with President Carter, who is scheduled to submit his budget to Congress early next year.

The problem involves choosing how best to spend available dollars. And the Carter administration has shown from the outset that it places urgent priority on upgrading the readiness of the vessels already in service.

While the Carter administration trimmed then-President Gerald R. Ford's fiscal 1978 defense budget by about $2.8 billion, it added about $200 million to pay for delayed maintenance on ships, planes, and other equipment of all the armed services.

Sources said there is no major controversy over the new direction of the shipbuilding program. They noted that Adm. James Holloway, chief of naval operations, has strongly urged measures to correct the ravages caused by late overhauls, spare parts shortages and the backlog of war plane maintenance.

Navy officials have blamed the situation on unanticipated inflation which ate away funds previously approved for maintenance and upkeep of major equipment.

The Navy is proposing a budget that will include nearly $7 billion for 19 new ships, including nine frigates, a new class of guided missile cruiser, two nuclear powered attack submarines, a Trident missile firing submarine and six support vessels, such as tenders.

The proposed five-year program totaling 101 ships would include 74 war vessels. The plan also calls for modernization of 26 ships to extend their operating lives.

The reduction of nearly 60 ships in the previous program will bear heavily on ocean escorts and other surface warships, but there will be no eliminations of submarines. The proposal would continue to provide for construction of a new type of 60,000-ton aircraft carrier, able to handle both conventional planes launched by catapult and advanced aircraft designed to land and take off vertically.

Guns taken from home of Reynolds

Pampa Police reported that more than $1300 worth of firearms were taken in a burglary at the home of Wiley Reynolds, Jr. 2336 Duncan St.

No exact time for the burglary was established by police, and it wasn't reported until Friday. Taken were a .357 Magnum pistol, a 20-gauge shotgun, a 243 Remington rifle with scope, and a 30-30 Winchester. Value of the weapons was placed at $1,305.90.

Companies add security to protect executives

NEW YORK (AP) — American business is beefing up efforts to protect its executives from domestic terrorist attacks, but should beware that there is "no such thing" as a foolproof security system, says the head of a political research firm.

"If a terrorist group targets an American company, there is not much the company can do to keep from being hit," said Benjamin Weiner, a former State Department diplomat and now president of Probe International Inc. of Stamford, Conn.

"There is no perfect security system, and if anybody goes around selling one, they are not being honest," Weiner said. "You hear talk about defensive driving courses. What these fall to point out is that these people have one home and one place of business, and although there may be a dozen ways to go from home to work, you're going to end up at the same house and the same business."

The key, he said, is to reduce visibility.

Weiner, whose firm does political research for companies both in the United States and abroad, said that, according to the CIA, attacks against American businessmen both in this country and abroad are expected to increase.

He said attendance at Probe seminars in this country on corporate terrorism has increased dramatically in recent years. "Ten years ago," he said, "most companies wouldn't pay any attention to political issues. Now we are constantly approached."

Weiner also said he's found the "quality of security people is being upgraded. Retired FBI agents are being hired. Companies are becoming more sensible... taking more precautions than they took a few years ago. That's why my company has succeeded."

Most companies are reluctant to reveal terrorist activities against them, such as threats or kidnapping incidents or bombings, for fear the publicity could trigger further acts, Weiner said. "They also don't like to talk about security measures, some of which are 'elaborate.'"

Edward Foley, chief of the criminal investigation division of the FBI in New York, said a government report concluded that "domestic terrorism is going to increase."

"Indications are that the dissident groups will make themselves more known by doing violence, bombings and what have you," Foley said. "The Weathermen put out a hit list about seven years ago — corporations and people who they considered prime targets. That got us into it. These lists are very real."

The FBI, Foley said, has prepared films for presentation to corporate security personnel.

"We are trying to make people less vulnerable, more secure in their homes and businesses," Foley said.

More than 1,180 persons either were killed or wounded in "terrorist actions" worldwide last year, Weiner said. He said he had no breakdown on the number in the United States.

Good for two

Rusty Ward, center, returns to earth after going up for an easy bucket between Plainview's Ricky Jackson (44) and Morrall Crear (51) in the Harvesters' 71-52 win Friday night.

Pampa rallies past Plainview

By TOM KENSER
Pampa News
Sports Editor

The Harvesters offense sputtered fitfully through the first quarter Friday night against a rangy Plainview team, but caught fire before the half and kept right on burning for a 71-52 win in the season's prep roundball opener.

Fortunately the Plainview attack was having the same early difficulty as Pampa, and at the end of one the Harvesters held a slim 9-8 lead.

But when the Bulldogs' Larry Williams quieted the crowd with a pair of free throws to give Plainview an advantage, Rusty Ward decided to take the wheel of the Pampa machine.

Ward swished a 20-foot jumper off a fast break and went on to score 13 points in the second quarter, igniting the Hustling Harvesters to a 71-52 victory over visiting Plainview.

Despite missing half of the first and fourth quarters, the 6-5 senior canned a game-high 23 points.

Actually, Pampa started off as if ready to blow the Bulldogs out of Harvester Field House. Senior wing Tim Reddell took Ricky Bunton's opening tip and initiated the 1977-78 season in style by banking a short jumper.

The Harvesters increased the lead to 7-2, but Plainview fought back with some classy shooting to trail 9-8 after one period. The lead exchanged hands twice in the first minutes of the second quarter, but Ward was fouled while making an acrobatic tip, and his three-point play gave Pampa an 18-15 advantage it never relinquished.

Pampa struggled offensively in the third period, scoring just 12 points. However, the defense continually harassed the Bulldogs into costly turnovers and Plainview managed only nine points in the eight minutes.

Ward picked up his fourth personal with 1:16 remaining in the third quarter, so the Harvesters looked to another leading man, Bunton, to get his travelling show in gear.

Bunton ended the frustration of a poor shooting night and early foul trouble with 11 fourth-quarter points, including a crowd-raising slam dunk. The 6-5 jumping jack finished with 17 points.

"The kids showed they're in good condition by pulling away in the fourth quarter, even though we had the same people out there most of the time," said Pampa coach Gary Abercrombie. "I think their press hurt them more than it did us. They (Plainview) got tired and we got some easy baskets in the end."

Abercrombie said he was pleased with the floor leadership of point-guard Steve Duke and wings Reddell and Doug Skaggs, but was disappointed in the team rebounding.

"We got timid after some early fouls and just weren't aggressive on the boards. I'd bet that most of Plainview's baskets came on second and third shots."

"But we played basically good defense from end to end. Our defense won it for us, because we sure didn't have a good shooting night."

Plainview coach Richard O'Hara was not surprised at the outcome. "We made too many turnovers (21) to win against a good team like Pampa. When our football players (Jamie McAllister and Larry Williams, who combined for five points) get ready, we'll be alright."

The Harvesters travel to Dumas Tuesday night to face the Demons.

PLAINVIEW (83) — Greg Jacobs 8-10; Ray Martin 4-4; Ricky Jackson 4-1-3; Morrall Crear 2-2-1; Larry Williams 2-2-2; Jamie McAllister 1-1-1; Keith Jordan 1-1-1. Totals 83-52.

PAMPA (71) — Ricky Bunton 7-3-17; Steve Duke 1-1-1; Johnny Hays 1-0-2; Tim Reddell 4-0-12; Doug Skaggs 1-0-2; Steve Duke 1-0-2; Rusty Ward 11-1-25. Totals 71-52.

Wheeler advances to quarterfinals

AMARILLO — Behind a powerful running attack and stingy defense, the No. 1 ranked Wheeler Mustangs defeated District 2-B champ Ropes, 24-6, here Friday night to advance into the Class B quarterfinals.

The Mustangs will face Jayton, a 19-14 winner over Fort Davis in another bi-district battle. Ropes, ranked fourth in the state AP poll, returns home with a 10-1 record.

Wheeler jumped out to a 17-0 halftime lead on touchdown runs by Duane Childress and Marvin Grimes, and a 27-yard field goal by Rusty Schoepf.

Grimes, who came into the game with 1068 yards, gained 182 more against the touted Tiger defense. The junior speedster totalled 145 of his yards in the first half, including a touchdown jaunt of 66 yards.

Actually the score could have been more lopsided had Wheeler not lost five fumbles. But Ropes was unable to capitalize on any of the turnovers.

The Tigers finally scored with 2:02 remaining in the game when Steven Sims plunged from the two. Sims led Ropes rushers with 74 yards on 21 carries for the evening.

Earlier in the final stanza, Dell Ford scored from the two for the final Mustang points.

Monterey, Perryton, Childress win

By The Associated Press

David Dumas booted a 37-yard field goal with two seconds left in the first half Friday night as the Conroe Tigers stunned high-powered, No. 2-ranked Temple 3-0 to lead a parade of upsets in the first round of Texas schoolboy playoffs.

The unbeaten Wildcats, who had already trimmed Conroe 10-0 earlier this season and were averaging more than 30 points per game, could manage only 153 yards against the unranked Tigers in the Class 4A bi-district clash.

Conroe will advance to meet ninth-ranked Plano, a 17-7 bi-district victor over Lufkin.

In Class 2A, unranked teams whipped through four unbeaten top ten teams, including No. 3 Idalou, which lost 13-8 to Littlefield, and No. 4 Jacksboro, stunned by Breckenridge 24-12.

Fifth-ranked Newton fell 14-7 to Anahuac, while defending Class 2A champion Rockdale surprised No. 9 Brady 21-7.

Meanwhile, Spearman, the second-ranked Class 2A team in the final Associated Press poll, fell victim to No. 10-ranked Childress 19-3.

The Class 4A bi-district matchups featured two games between top ten teams. Fifth-ranked Stafford Dulles was upended by La Porte, 16-14, while No. 7 San Antonio Highlands fell victim to San Antonio Lee, 20-14. La Porte and Lee were tied for 10th.

Gregory Portland, the unbeaten, top-ranked Class 3A team, easily thumped Raymondville 69-0 to advance to a quarter-final showdown with No. 7 Dickinson, a 55-0 winner over Uvalde.

Second-ranked Brownwood crushed San Angelo Lakeview 56-20 to move on to another crucial Class 3A quarter-final matchup against No. 3-ranked Perryton, which trimmed No. 5-ranked Andrews 24-6 on Friday night.

Port Neches-Groves, the unbeaten, top-ranked 4A team, played Houston Forest Brook in a Saturday bi-district game.

Seagraves, the unbeaten No. 1 team in Class A, edged past No. 4 Marfa 21-15 and will go against Haskell in the regional playoffs. No. 7 Petersburg dropped fifth-ranked Vega 21-6, while third-ranked Groveton smashed No. 10 Franklin 45-14.

Unranked Blooming Grove whipped Grapeland 22-9 in the major upset in Class A.

The Italy Gladiators, the unbeaten second-ranked Class B team, were tied 6-6 with unranked Era, which will advance on penetrations. No. 1-ranked Wheeler got past No. 4 Ropesville, 24-6.

Evadale, ranked 10th, fell to unranked Wortham, 21-15, while No. 8 Lone Oak shaded No. 7 Union Hill, 21-14.

A&M destroys TCU, 52-23

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Curtis Dickey darted 80 and 13 yards for touchdowns and massive George Woodard bowled over for two others Saturday to spark a relentless Texas A&M ground attack and lead the 14th-ranked Aggies to a record-setting 52-23 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Christian.

Dickey, who galloped for a career-high 175 yards on 20 carries, knifed 13 yards on a fourth down play early in the second quarter to give the Aggies a 17-0 lead.

Less than two minutes later, the fleet sophomore took a delayed handoff and raced 80 yards down the sidelines as Texas A&M, now 7-2 for the season and 5-1 in the SWC, took a 24-3 lead.

The 275-pound Woodard, overshadowed in the first half by Dickey and freshman quarterback Mike Mosley, carried several TCU defenders six yards in the third quarter for his 31st career touchdown to set a new school record.

Woodard, who ended the game with 163 yard on 20 carries, then rumbled 28 yards in the fourth period for his second touchdown.

The awesome Aggie offense, engineered by Mosley who was subbing for injured David Walker, racked up nearly 600 yards on the ground to set another school mark.

TCU's star receiver Mike Renfro hauled in a 12-yard touchdown pass from Steve Bayuk just before halftime to break Jerry LeVias' SWC career reception mark of 155 and tie the SWC record of nine touchdown receptions in a season.

The crafty Renfro then snared a 21-yard pass from Bayuk, but coughed up the ball at the goal line where Carlton Kile grabbed it for the second Horned Frog touchdown. Bayuk later connected with Michel Milton for a 17-yard touchdown pass in a brief third-quarter rally.

Renfro ended the game with a career high nine receptions for 130 yards.

With Walker on the sidelines recovering from bruised ribs for next week's crucial SWC battle with top-ranked Texas, Mosley, a highly-prized recruit from Conroe directed the Aggies to four touchdowns and a field goal in their first five possessions. He had runs of 11 and 18 yards in a first quarter 86-yard drive which he capped with a three-yard touchdown run, and scampered 27 yards on another first period drive to help set up Tony Franklin's 43-yard field goal.

Gregory Portland, the unbeaten, top-ranked Class 3A team, easily thumped Raymondville 69-0 to advance to a quarter-final showdown with No. 7 Dickinson, a 55-0 winner over Uvalde.

Second-ranked Brownwood crushed San Angelo Lakeview 56-20 to move on to another crucial Class 3A quarter-final matchup against No. 3-ranked Perryton, which trimmed No. 5-ranked Andrews 24-6 on Friday night.

Tax strategy No. 3

Sylvia Porter

Protect Your Dependency Deductions

(Third of seven columns)

Are you among the millions of Americans helping to support an elderly parent, say your mother? If so, right now, before '77 ends, is the time to protect whatever dependency and medical expense deductions you want to claim for this year. Just this past July's 5.9 per cent hike in Social Security benefits, for instance, while good news for your mother's pocketbook, could wipe out your deduction.

The basic facts: you are entitled to a $750 dependency deduction for your mother if (1) her gross income subject to tax is less than $750, and (2) you provide more than half her total support. You also can deduct the medical bills you pay for her if you provide more than half her support. Social Security benefits do not count toward the gross income test, but they can affect the support test.

As an illustration, say your mother received $3,000 in Social Security benefits in 1976 and had no other income. You paid all her medical and dental bills not covered by Medicare, a total of $2,950. To hit more than one-half support, you gave an extra $100.

You then took the $750 dependency deduction plus a $2,950 medical deduction — a total of $3,700 deductions for '76.

Now it's '77. Assume you contribute the same $2,950 for medical expenses plus $100 extra (just to keep it simple). But the July Social Security benefit boost lifts the total of what your mother spends on herself in '77 to over $3,088. Your $3,050 doesn't pass the more-than-half support test in '77.

Your loss out on both deductions — a whopping $3,700 forfeited because you didn't spend a penny more.

Right now, figure out the cost of your mother's total support in 1977.

Update all your figures and if need be, step up your contributions between now and Dec. 31 to protect your deductions!

Here's another often overlooked tax saving strategy. Say your mother has investments yielding more than $750 in taxable income for '77. You can't claim a dependency deduction because she doesn't pass the gross income test. But you don't necessarily lose the medical deduction as well. If you provide more than half her support, you can still take a deduction for medical bills you pay. As an illustration for this, say your mother has received $1,200 in dividends and interest in '77 and is not your dependent. But since you pay more than half her support, you get a deduction for any medical expenses you pay for her.

The tax strategy, warns Prentice-Hall, is to make sure you pay all your mother's medical bills. She can pay other expenses.

Now say your mother has less than $750 income, qualifies as a dependent under the gross income test — and you and your two brothers share equally in her support. The twist is that none of you is contributing more than half her support. Is the deduction knocked out? Not at all.

If you contribute more than 10 per cent to the support of an individual supported by you and others, you can claim the person as an exemption provided (1) the individual otherwise qualifies as a dependent; (2) no one taxpayer contributes more than half her support; and (3) the other contributors designate you to claim the exemption and sign waivers. You are entitled to the exemption even though you personally did not contribute more than half the support.

These are decisions and tax strategy moves to be made now, assuming you didn't reach agreements earlier in '77 — but it's much more sensible to decide at the beginning of the year which family member will claim the exemption. Do this at the start of '78.

Then have the family member designated to claim the exemption for '78 pay the medical expenses.

For instance, say you and your two brothers each contribute $1,500 to your mother's support and she has $1,500 in medical expenses. If '78 is your year to claim the dependency deduction, you pay the medical expenses. Have your brothers pay her other expenses.

You can take the $750 dependency deduction and a $1,500 medical expense deduction. But if your brothers pay any medical bills, part of the medical deduction is lost. No one in the family can claim it, an utterly unnecessary forfeiting of tax funds to the Treasury.

Monday: Unexpected new family deductions.

Insulation regs sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission on Thursday proposed a regulation designed to help consumers know better what they are getting when they buy home insulation materials.

The rule is intended to ensure that purchasers of home insulation are given information necessary to determine the amount needed and to compare the various types of materials, the FTC said.

The proposed rule would require all package labels and many advertisements for home insulation to disclose its "R value." This is a measure of insulation's comparative ability to reduce energy use by resisting the flow of heat through the exterior surfaces of a house.

Generally, the higher the R value, the more effective the insulation.

However, the FTC and the Consumer Product Safety Commission cautioned that there are generally accepted maximum R values for the most commonly used insulating materials, and any claim of R value above the maximum design standard should be highly suspect.

The two agencies listed the maximum R value per inch of thickness of insulation as 3.1 for mineral wool batts and blankets, 3.1-3.7 for cellulose loose fill, 4.1

for urea formaldehyde, 6.2 for polyurethane and expanded polystyrene, 2.7 for perlite and 2 for aluminum foil.

Under the proposed FTC rule, it would be unlawful to publish an R value that is false or not based on an approved standard test.

The proposal also would require the labels and many advertisements to include an explanation of R value and disclose the coverage area in square feet.

Dairy Queen to liquidate

DALLAS (AP) — Dairy Queen Stores Inc. of Dallas, operator of 285 restaurants in Texas and Oklahoma, said Friday it has adopted a plan in principle to sell all its restaurant facilities and liquidate the company as it presently stands.

The firm is one of 228 Dairy Queen franchises in Texas. It operates some, but not all Dairy Queen stores in Dallas and Houston, as well as other markets.

The plan to sell the 285 stores to supervisory personnel and some individual store managers is subject to approval by stockholders.

Georgia dam was leaking

10 years ago

TOCCOA, Ga. (AP) — The Kelly Barnes Dam, which burst earlier this month, unleashing a ton of water and sweeping away 38 lives, began leaking 10 years ago, a lawyer for three survivors says.

Ed Middlebrooks made his comments to a board appointed by Gov. George Busbee. The panel began hearings Thursday night and is to report to Busbee next month on events leading up to the dam burst. Busbee, in turn, is to report to President Carter.

Middlebrooks, attorney for three children whose mother was killed when the dam broke Nov. 6, flooding Toccoa Falls College, told the panel that maintenance workers at the college told him "an eight-foot-wide swath" of water had been leaking from the dam at least since 1967.

TO THOSE WHO CARED:

Again this year, the United Way Campaign in Pampa has exceeded its goal. This year, the campaign generated in excess of $173,000.00, well above the goal of $149,000.00. This response is demonstrative of the character and integrity of the people who make up the heart of this community.

We, the recipient agencies, are grateful for your support and caring. For a campaign to be this successful, people, time, effort, and leadership are required—and the Pampa Community again proved the quality of these resources with which we are blessed.

A gracious "WE APPRECIATE YOU" is certainly in order for those of you who took from your personal time and families and volunteered many hours of work in the campaign; to the merchants of Pampa who so generously allotted time and space in your news media advertising to help keep the campaign in the forefront of the community; to those of you in the news media who generously assisted in getting the message to the community; and to those of you who dug deep in your pockets to care.

Without you, we would not be able to do our work. It takes all of us pulling together to make our community an even better place to live.

Thank you—thank you for caring.

*Ginseng a song of herb teas,
a potfull of leaves and stuff.
Just the thing to drink down when you're feeling rough.*

By PATTI HOAG
Pampa News Staff

Have a headache? Instead of popping aspirin, why not try a soothing cup of hot tea. Make it peppermint, rosemary or sage.

Hay fever problems? Alfalfa tea can relieve head congestion.

A cold coming on? Rose hips tea, packed with Vitamin C, may nip it in the bud.

Although herbs have been used for healing since biblical times, they have recently taken a big jump from cat toys filled with catnip into the tea cup.

The technique for making herb tea is simple. Steep the dried leaves or flowers in boiling water for at least five minutes.

If steeping fails to bring out the flavor, the herbs can be boiled for a few minutes.

Rose hips, sage or lemon tea can be taken for colds. Peppermint or lovage is recommended for nervous exhaustion. Fennel or caraway is supposed to cure indigestion.

For pleasant drinking, try jasmine flowers, lime flowers, camomile flowers, leaves of sage, mint or bergamot.

Katrina Bigham of the Health Aids Store, 306 W. Foster, has noticed an increase in the number of people who are buying herb teas.

One of the most popular is rose hips tea which is full of vitamin C.

"Some people buy it to drink every day," she said. The Specialty Health Food Store, 1008 Alcock, sells a lot of blended teas, such as different fruit flavors.

Another popular tea is peppermint, which Mrs. Bigham recommends for those who are trying herbal tea for the first time. Peppermint is a general stimulant.

A strong cup of peppermint tea is supposed to act more powerfully on the system than any liquor stimulant, "bringing the body back to its natural warmth after faintness, dizziness or coldness."

One brand of tea, called Sleepytime, is recommended for bedtime. The tea is supposed to be relaxing and contains no caffeine to keep the tea sipper awake.

Comfrey is an herb recently introduced to the Americas from Europe where it has been grown for thousands of years. It is a perennial herb, growing two to four feet high, producing crops of up to 120 tons per acre. It is being recognized as a valuable food for both human and animal consumption.

"I use it when I wake up in the morning and have sinus congestion in my throat," Katrina remarked.

If you are used to the black tea varieties, such as the grocery store bags of tea, don't think all teas have that biting strong taste. There are many herbal teas to suit any tastebud. There is lemon mist, sarsaparilla, spearmint, papaya, alfalfa, ginseng, camomile, and many others.

Tea is not just for adults anymore. Children need a hot drink free from artificial flavorings, sugar and caffeine. Pelican Punch is a tea made especially for children. It contains crystal malt, peppermint, carob, blackberry leaves, coconut, licorice, vanilla and almond.

Mrs. Bigham believes the reason that herb teas are becoming more popular is that "people are becoming more educated about herbs."

Herbal teas contain no caffeine as coffee and black tea do, and the cost is usually more reasonable.

But in some cases, it's not. Bill Thompson of Specialty Health Foods has a popular tea that sells for $14 for 2.2

ounces. Red ginseng tea, which comes from China and Korea, is "delicious with a little honey," Thompson said.

The Chinese believe that ginseng heals "everything you can dream up." Thompson doesn't know if that is the case, but according to "Back to Eden," ginseng is good for preventing all illnesses, promotes appetite, useful in digestive disturbances, colds, chest troubles, coughs, stomach troubles and constipation.

Ginseng is so expensive because it takes six years to harvest the root, and must grow in total shade.

American ginseng can be found in the Blue Ridge mountain area and in 1973, 12 ounces sold for $300.

Nature is the best way to health and healing through herbs and teas, according to Jethro Kloss, author of "Back to Eden."

"For medicine we used the herbs of the fields and gardens, teas made from the inside barks of certain trees and shrubs, and the health-giving cooling juices of wild and tame fruits that grew all around us in abundance," he writes.

"Our herbs we gathered and dried in the summertime, and saved, to have on hand in case of sickness, either for ourselves or for our neighbors. Well do I remember how I gathered herbs, barks and blossoms for the doctors. I recalled many times, when my parents were called to a neighbor's home after someone there had been given up to die, they, with their herbs, fruit juices and vegetable broths, helped the sick one back to health again."

Not all herbs need to be taken internally to do the body good. An example of this is found in "Nature's Big, Beautiful, Bountiful, Feel-Good Book," which relates the story of nne de Lenclos, who died in 1620 at the age of 85 in France.

When she died, "her body retained its youthful curves, her skin remained moist and smooth for all of her 85 years. Her beauty secrets were many and varied but the one she felt to be most important was her daily herb bath."

To make an herb bath, gather one handful each of dried or fresh lavender flowers, rosemary, mint, crushed comfrey root and thyme.

Pour a quart of boiling water over all these herbs, cover and let steep for 20 minutes.

Pour the entire contents into your bathtub and soak for at least 20 minutes.

Community profile: David Fatheree

His Pampa roots go deep

By STEVE WILLIAMS
Pampa News Staff

"I like everything about Pampa," says David Fatheree. "It's been good to me and my family, and in a lot of ways I feel like I owe the town and the people here a debt for the support they've given us over the years."

Fatheree's Pampa roots go deep. His grandfather, T.D. Hobart, came to the Panhandle in 1882 as general manager for the White Deer Land Co. Hobart Street is named after him.

His mother was born on the Hobart Ranch about 15 miles outside Canadian in 1899, before Pampa was anything but buffalo grass, and his two brothers, Warren and Hobart live here. He and Warren are partners in the Fatheree Insurance Agency, Warren is a rancher and all three share the same offices.

His father, Clyde, owned and operated the Fatheree Drug Store here for years.

It's a family tradition to actively participate in community affairs, and David follows that tradition. He's just finishing up a stint as a campaign chairman for the United Way drive, has served as president of the Pampa Country Club, is a member of the First Presbyterian Church (where his wife Mary Beth, teaches Sunday school), and is active in Republican Party politics in the Panhandle. Conservative political views are also a family tradition, his brother Warren having run for a state senate seat in 1962 (he was beaten by Grainger McIlhany, now Gray County District 31 judge.)

His most impelling preoccupation is athletics, all kinds and varieties. Golf and OU football stand highest on the list, and he shares both with Mary Beth and David Mann Fatheree, his 11-year-old son. "David and I play golf together, and he's learning the game," Fatheree says, and his eyes light up as he tells about his son's hole-in-one at the Pampa Country Club a couple of summers ago. "Heck, I was more excited than he was," Fatheree recalls.

As for OU football, Fatheree regularly attends home games, has recruited on occasion for the Sooners, and maintains an active relationship with the OU coaching staff. His plans for this weekend included driving to Norman with Mary Beth and David for Saturday's game against Colorado.

Fatheree is also proud of his participation on the annual Top of Hexas Amateur Invitational Golf Tournament at the Country Club, for which he was tournament chairman several years back.

He's also active in Pampa High's Harvester Booster Club, attending many of the school's athletic events.

Fatheree was born here 41 years ago last Halloween and except for four years at Oklahoma University (bachelors in business administration), six months active duty in Virginia with the Army and a couple of years in San Antonio with a finance company, he's been in Pampa all his life... and intends to keep it that way.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You have always supported the tipping system, so let's hear what you have to say about the enclosed editorial from the Eugene, (Ore.) Register Guard: "Tipping should be done away with. Period."

"As it's practiced today, tipping is meaningless. Instead of being gratuities tendered in recognition for special service, tips have become built-in costs for those who give them and just another part of regular income for those who get them."

"The Internal Revenue Service recognizes this and requires waitresses, cabbies, hairdressers and all other steady tip receivers to report them as such. But it would be better all around if base prices for personal services were simply increased to provide adequate salaries or commissions for service personnel."

"Consider, for example, how ludicrous it is for a number of Miami hotels to be losing the business of thousands of winter vacationers because of a union-management squabble over mandatory tips for room maids. The maids probably do need tip income, and deserve it as much as bellhops, cocktail waitresses or others who come in contact with tip givers more often."

"But why shouldn't the hotel quit arguing about billing guests specifically for the maids' tips and other employee gratuities, boost their room and board charges a bit and pay all of their employees adequate salaries? For the guests this would be simpler and no more costly in the long run. And for most employees it would be fairer."

"The way things are, some maitres d' get rich while the kitchen help get leftovers. Obligatory or not, tips seldom reflect anything but irrationally distributed extra consumer costs. The laborer either is worthy of his hire or he isn't. And he shouldn't have to demean himself pleading for alms."

ROSEBURG READER

DEAR READER: It makes a lot of sense to me.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago a bachelor signed SINGLE SIMON wrote to say that he resented being invited to a dinner party where the hostess matched him up with an unattached lady. He said he always felt like a fifth wheel, and the dateless woman shared his embarrassment.

In your reply you said, "I'd like to see the dateless woman who'd feel embarrassed to find her dinner companion a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor."

Well, Abby, you're hearing from one, and there are a lot more of us.

When I am invited somewhere, either I come alone or I bring my own date. I don't need a match-making "yenta" fixing me up with an escort. Gigolos get paid for doing that sort of thing.

INDEPENDENT IN WINONA, MN.

DEAR IND.: You're entitled to speak for yourself, but most single women I hear from are delighted to have their hostess provide an escort.

DEAR ABBY: I have a darling little 88-year-old mother who lives with my husband and me. She is in good health, looks after herself and can still read without eyeglasses.

The problem is that lately Mother has been reading our mail. Several times lately I've found letters that I have discarded on her bureau! Obviously she has fished these letters out of the wastebasket or the garbage pail. (Bills, too!)

She doesn't know I am aware of this. She is not senile. Just nosy. She has always respected our privacy in the past (at least I thought she did), so I can't understand this sudden change.

My husband says to let it go. I think I should let her know we are aware of—and resent—her nosiness. We'll leave it to you.

NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO TOWN: I vote with your husband. Simply shred that which you consider personal, and avoid a confrontation.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am 66 years old and am coming to you for help. I have systemic lupus erythematosus. I had it bad from 1964 to 1969, then it went into a remission until now. I am once again on cortisone.

I would like to know what this does to the body.

DEAR READER—Your story represents an important characteristic of the disease. It tends to occur as attacks. Between such attacks, the person may appear perfectly normal. These remissions may last for years in many cases.

At the present state of knowledge about the disease, it is better to say we really don't know what causes it. Most doctors classify it as an autoimmune disease. That means the body starts reacting to its own chemicals or cells—something like becoming allergic to yourself.

The disease may affect many of the body systems, including the lungs, the heart, the kidneys, muscles, joints and skin. It affects the connective tissue of the body that binds cells and organs together. The basic fiber material in connective tissue is collagen and that is why it is usually called a collagen disease.

The symptoms may be quite vague. The patient may have indigestion, weakness, pain in the chest, in the joints or other symptoms. I hasten to point out that weakness and fatigue, which may be a prominent feature of the illness, often occur for many other reasons. Less than 10 percent of patients who have recurring fatigue have a significant medical disease, and only a tiny fraction of these have lupus.

The effects of the disease vary. It may be a very mild case, or severe. When I first started seeing this disease, we saw only the severe cases referred to a busy university medical center, and they were very sick people. When I was a resident in medicine, we had 10 cases on my service at one time, and they were all severely ill. We had such an influx because we were beginning the use of hormones for treatment, and that was a new era for the disease.

Things have changed a great deal since then, and now 90 percent of the people with lupus live at least 10 years, and many much longer. It is diagnosed much more readily now by new tests, and it is found in people from age two to 90, in both sexes, but it occurs most often in young women.

There are two forms of the disease: discoid lupus and systemic lupus erythematosus (S.L.E.). The discoid type is a skin lesion, and it usually stops at that. S.L.E. can involve almost any part of the body.

An organization, The American Lupus Society (4126 Pacific Coast Highway, Torrance, CA 90505), has been formed to stimulate research to help get more answers about lupus. There must be a half million people with the disease in the U.S. alone, and there is a great need for better public understanding about it. Perhaps most important is for people to realize that many, as in your case, may lead long periods of normal life, and while the disease is often limiting, in many cases it may not be severely limiting. Rest, avoiding sunshine, and staying with the program your doctor outlines, are all important in helping provide the best opportunity for a good outcome.

For a better understanding of what makes you tired, send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 9-6, Fatigue: Feeling Tired and Weary. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78202.

Married 65 years

Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Lutz, 1307 N. Russell, celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary Wednesday with a buffet dinner for 100 guests at Coronado Inn. Lutz said he plans to have another dinner in five years. He married the former Clovia Harrell in Bartlesville, Okla., on Nov. 16, 1912. Special guest was Mrs. Lutz's sister, Val Gene Phelps, and her husband of Kansas City.

Miss Cyndi Koetting of Borger and Kyrle Ferrell of Woodward, Okla. were married Nov. 12 in the First Baptist Church of Pampa with the Rev. Claude Cone officiating.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Koetting of Borger. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Ferrell of Pampa.

Ferrell-Koetting vows

Special music was presented by Debra Norton of Canyon, vocalist and Steve Parton of Borger, organist.

The bride's maid of honor was Sherri Koetting of Canyon. Danita Morrow of Amarillo, Debra Black of Pampa and Lea Ann Koetting of Borger were the bride's attendants.

David Ferrell was best man. Groomsmen were Jerry Ferrell, Tony Ferrell and Joe Curtis.

For her wedding, the bride chose a floor length gown of ivory sheer organza and Venice lace over bridal taffeta. The formal gown was designed with mandarin lace neckline and bishop sleeves with lace cuffs. Intermezze length lace edged the veil of illusion and was attached to a lace covered headpiece.

The reception was held in the parlour of the church.

Cheryl Smith, Michelle Stockett and Deborah Ferrell assisted.

The bride graduated from Pampa High School and attended West Texas State.

Her husband, also a graduate of Pampa High School, is presently employed by Interiors of Woodward.

After a honeymoon in New Mexico, the couple will make their home in Woodward, Okla.

When you are preparing your own barbecue sauce, you can usually substitute honey for the sugar called for.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

I call 'em women in white socks living in a pantyhose world.

You know them as housewives. There's a lot of them around considering the fact they have no union, no leadership, no lobbyist, and no PR.

A few weeks ago in New York Ladies Home Journal and Kentucky Fried Chicken co-sponsored a seminar to consider this woman who is almost an enigma.

To be a housewife these days you have several options: defend it ... apologize for it ... deny it, say you are only temporarily at home until something opens up.

Why?

If you're a closet housewife, it's time to come out and be counted. There's a certainly nothing wrong with women opting to develop a career, return to school or admit that carrying everyone else's nose tissue in your purse doesn't do it for you. Just knowing that the options are there is enough for some of us.

But when did a woman selling orange slices in the dime store become more impressive than a woman who did a darned good job raising three kids for 20 years?

Maybe the time is now to say, "I don't make meat loaf for my husband for dinner when I hate meat loaf because he demands expects - needs it. I do it because I want to."

Maybe it's the time to say, "I like the freedom of staying home and having control of my day and creating my own challenges. At least for now."

Maybe it's time for some of us to join forces with Susan Revit, Bayville, N.Y., who wrote:

"I always wanted a white shag rug, I thought it would look nice.

Then I had my first child. That made me think twice.

I always wanted some Lenox pieces to put on the table and admire.

And then we had our first child and I opted for a dryer.

I always wanted glass table tops and crystal like a bell.

And then I had our first child and thought plastic would do as well.

I always wanted so many things I always wished for.

But when I saw my first child, I wanted children so much more."

During the celebration of the Chinese lunar new year, it is customary to prepare and eat "yuan hsiao," round dumplings that symbolize the moon and family reunions, both of great importance in Chinese tradition.

The city of Taipei on the island of Taiwan contains 76 Taoist and 69 Buddhist temples, according to the Taiwan Tourism Bureau.

By ELAINE HOUSTON
County Extension Agent
Save Those Green Tomatoes
With the freeze we had recently many of us have a supply of green tomatoes. Green tomatoes add variety to meals and are nutritious. Vitamin C content is about the same as for fresh tomatoes and about half as much as Vitamin A. Sterilize jars and caps when canning food in water both canner if they are processed less than 15 minutes. To sterilize, place in warm water and bring to a boil. Boil for 15 to 20 minutes.

Try these recipes for preserving green tomatoes and for using them fresh.

Green Tomato Relish
6 quarts (about 36-40 medium sized) chopped green tomatoes
1/4 cup salt
1/4 quarts chopped onion
3 cups chopped green pepper
1 1/2 cups chopped red sweet pepper
3 cups sugar
1 1/2 quarts vinegar
2 tablespoons whole mixed pickle spices

Mix tomatoes and salt thoroughly. Let stand overnight; drain. Combine with chopped onions, green and red peppers, sugar and vinegar. Put spices loosely in a thin, white cloth; tie top tightly and add to tomato mixture. Bring mixture to boil; boil gently with spices for 1 1/2 hours or until thickened, stirring frequently. Remove spice bag. Pour relish into hot, sterilized jars and seal with sterilized caps. Place in boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Remove and cool on rack. Store in a cool, dry, dark place. Makes about 6 pints.

Green Tomato Mincement
Fruit Cake
Two-thirds cup fat
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
1 cup sugar
One-third cup marmalade or jelly

3 eggs
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 cups green tomato mincement
1 cup chopped nut meats
2 1/2 cups flour

Blend together the fat, vanilla and orange rind. Gradually add sugar and marmalade, creaming well after each addition. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Sift together the flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Add alternately with the mincement to the creamed mixture, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Add nut meats. Pour into a greased 7 1/2-inch tube pan or a loaf pan. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) 1 1/2 hours. Cool 1/2 hour before removing from the pan. If desired, use 2 cups mincement and 1 cup raisins in place of the 3 cup mincement.

Green Tomato Marmalade
3 quarts (18-20 medium sized) slice green tomatoes
6 cups sugar
1 teaspoon salt
6 lemons
1 cup water
Combine tomatoes, sugar and salt. Peel lemons. Slice peel very thin; boil in the 1 cup water 5 minutes and drain. Slice lemon pulp and remove seeds. Add with rind to tomato mixture. Heat slowly to boiling; then cook rapidly, stirring constantly, for about 45 to 60 minutes or until thickened. Pour into hot, sterilized jars. Seal. Place in boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Remove and cool on rack. Store in a cool, dry, dark place. Makes about 6 pints.

Curry of Meat With Green Tomatoes
1 onion, sliced
3 tablespoons meat drippings or other fat
1 quart sliced green tomatoes
3 cups chopped, cooked meat
1 or 2 teaspoons curry powder
Salt

Cook the onions in the fat. Add green tomatoes, cover and cook until tender. Add meat and heat thoroughly. If the mixture is too thick, thin it slightly with meat broth, gravy or water. Season to taste with curry powder and salt. Serve with flaky boiled rice or noodles. Makes 6 servings.

Mailing Food
If you plan to mail food this holiday season keep these pointers in mind. Some foods are better travelers than others. Foods that are moist and firm can take the bumps well.

Baked goods should be wrapped individually with plastic film. Cushion the box with crumpled newspaper or unsalted popcorn. Then wrap for mailing — and don't forget the zip code.

Top district Kiwanian visits Panhandle area

Charles B. Gillespie Jr. of Midland, governor of the Texas-Oklahoma district of Kiwanis International, will make an official visit to the Panhandle Monday. According to Glen Courtney, president of the Kiwanis Club of Pampa, a banquet in his honor will be given at 7:30 p.m. in the YWCA, 11th and Jackson, in Amarillo.

A reception honoring Mrs. Gillespie will be given at 6:30 p.m. The official visit is to Divisions 6 and 33 of Texas-Oklahoma district and is composed of 24 clubs in Amarillo, Pampa, Hereford, Childress, Friona, Tulia, Clarendon, Canyon, Shamrock, Littlefield, Muleshoe, Wheeler, Vega and Wellington. Gillespie represents over 17,500 Kiwanians in Texas and Oklahoma who are members of some 470 clubs. Kiwanis International is a civic club whose primary emphasis is on young people, although during the past few years the organization has included programs concerning our older citizens.

LOW SCORE ON NUTRITIONAL SAVVY
NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Two recent national surveys — one by a government agency, and another by a drug manufacturer — show that Americans are ill-informed about food and nutrition, including vitamins. The FDA Consumer Nutrition Survey (of 1975) shows that 51 percent of Americans are "not well-informed" about food and nutrition.

50th wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Youel Knutson of Skellytown will be honored at a reception at the Pioneer Gas Flame Room from 2 to 4 p.m. on Nov. 26, on their Golden wedding anniversary. Their children, Gerald of Oklahoma City, Tommy of Amarillo, Mary Campbell of Ozark, Mo., Velma Jean Bondurant of Colorado Springs and Betty Jo Gorton of Nixa, Mo., will be hosts for the reception. They invite all friends of the Knutsons to attend. No gifts please. The photo on the left was taken after their marriage.

Youth music at first

"Praise the Lord" is the title of services at the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray St., during which the church's youth group will trace the heritage of music in religion. Assisting will be Doris Good on organ, Jonna Hogan on piano, Melissa Mackey on guitar, Sandra Rogers on flute and Martha Turner on tambourine. Service directors are Mary Beth Fatheree and Sally Green. A Thanksgiving dinner will be served by the men of the church in Fellowship Hall following the services, and the Rev. and Mrs. Turner will hold an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

Kreps worried about aggressiveness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's first woman secretary of commerce, Juanita M. Kreps, admits to moments of uncertainty.

She hesitates, for example, to be "really forceful" in expressing herself when men are present for fear of being thought too aggressive or shrill.

And she wasn't sure whether she could remove a portrait of Herbert Hoover from her office wall, even though she didn't like it.

It's still hanging there after nearly 10 months. But such doubts have been minor stumbling blocks to the Kentucky-born Mrs. Kreps, fast becoming one of the key members of the Carter Cabinet. Lately, she has been out in front of Carter's other economic advisers in arguing that a tax cut may be needed next year to put more money in consumers' pockets to help the economy.

Otherwise, she says, the administration may not meet its goals of reduced unemployment and increased output. She is playing a key role in the administration's attempts to improve its standing with the nation's business leaders, especially following the resignation of Bert Lance as budget director.

It was Mrs. Kreps, among all Carter's economic advisers, who explained administration economic policy to a recent meeting of the Business Council, a prestigious all-male organization of the nation's top corporate executives.

She has proved much more active than her predecessors in influencing and shaping administration policy, especially on economic matters.

There have been suggestions that Mrs. Kreps and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal are rivals for influence in the administration and that the White House has been particularly pleased with Mrs. Kreps, while supposedly displeased with Blumenthal.

Mrs. Kreps tends to dismiss such speculation as unfounded, but she is less than pleased at not being included in weekly breakfast meetings of the steering committee of the administration's Economic Policy Group, headed by Blumenthal. "I think it's nice when the boys have breakfast together," she quipped.

As for getting along in the world of business and government where men predominate, Mrs. Kreps, 56, said she sometimes tends to adjust her style to what men consider acceptable.

This isn't the first time Mrs. Kreps has occupied positions formerly held almost exclusively by men. Before Carter appointed her to his Cabinet, she was vice president and a professor of economics at Duke University.

She has served on the boards of directors of the New York Stock Exchange, R. J. Reynolds Industries, J. C. Penney, Eastman Kodak and Western Electric, among others.

Mrs. Kreps is married to Clinton H. Kreps Jr., a banking professor at the University of North Carolina, whom she sees on weekends. They have three grown children.

A&F folds its tent

NEW YORK (AP) — Abercrombie & Fitch, which for 85 years sold the exotic and the unusual to those who could afford such items, has put up the going-out-of-business sign.

Thousands of shoppers lined up outside the Madison Avenue store Thursday for the first sale day of the firm that was unable to save itself during 15 months of reorganization under federal bankruptcy statutes.

And inside one could hear such comments as: Clerk: "Madam, your Master Charge is no good, your BankAmericard is no good, your American Express card is no good. You've used all of your credit on each one. You'll need cash."

Store Announcer: "In addition to the 25 percent discount, some articles are at 50 percent off."

Clerk: "We don't have size 13 in purple sneakers, sir. We've never had size 13 in purple sneakers, and if we weren't going out of business, we still wouldn't have size 13 in purple sneakers."

Customer: "Do you have ear muffs for puppies that get cold ears?"

Customer: "I want a rifle that my husband can use but won't hit anything with. I'm against hunting."

Clerk: "Why don't you buy him blanks — or just keep him home?"

Club news

Varietas Study Club
Varietas Study Club met recently in the home of Mrs. J.R. Spearman. Mrs. Rue Hestand, president, presided. The program was presented by Mrs. J.E. Gurn on the topic, "What's New in Music." Mrs. Gurn discussed the various categories of today's music and applied each to present-day life. Following the program, each member of the club responded to roll call on the topic, "My Favorite Musician."

Civic Culture Club
A program on crime prevention was presented during the club's recent meeting in the home of Mrs. W.F. Taylor, north of Pampa. The speaker was Mrs. C.V. Forsman.

"There is no place to hide in city, suburb or town," she said. "Violent crime is everywhere, and we are all potential victims."

The speaker added that with a murder, robbery, assault or rape in the United States every 31 seconds, "the shocking thing is we have almost lost our capacity to be shocked by this."

She quoted 22 prominent Americans with many answers. Among them were Gerald R. Ford, Edward M. Kennedy, John Wayne, Norman Carlson and Edmund G. Brown.

Mrs. Teresa Reed, president, directed the business session during which the four women who attended the district workshop in Perryton presented reports.

Alpha Iota Conclave
The November meeting of Alpha Iota Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota was a dinner meeting on Monday in the Pampa Club of the Coronado Inn. Co-hostesses were Nancy Coffee, Peggy Dennis and Mary Lynn Case. Following the meal, a short business meeting was held.

Plans for this year's Christmas project were discussed and it was decided to purchase new suits for two Pampa boys at Boys Ranch. Each Alpha Iota member is to bring $2 for this project to the Dec. 12 meeting, along with a $2 gift for the gift exchange among Alpha Iota members.

Co-hostesses for the December meeting will be Andrea Wyatt, Joy Hawkins and Pat Farmer.

City Council PTA
Mrs. Horace Wilson was guest speaker at the November meeting of Pampa City Council PTA. Mrs. Wilson is affiliated with the Don Harrington Discovery Center in Amarillo. Liith Brainard was elected as PAFLE chairman. Any suggestions concerning programs should be sent to her. Mrs. James Cameron, president, presented a Certificate of Appreciation to Mrs. C.L. Farmer for her work on the council yearbook. An in-depth discussion was held on the pros and cons of the new division of grades in schools. The next meeting will be Dec. 6.

Travis PTA
The William B. Travis PTA met in general session Nov. 10 with president Mrs. Mack Courtney presiding.

The flag ceremony was conducted by Den I Pack 498 with Rob Webb, leader. Committee reports were given by Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. Dan Hopkins and Mrs. Wesley Crozier.

Mrs. Helen Barnett received two steak dinners courtesy of Tom's Country Inn.

Mrs. Peurifoy's first grade won the party for having the largest percentage of parents join PTA.

The room count was awarded to Mrs. Wathena Watt, music teacher.

The program was "A Favorite Song Festival" presented by the first, second, and third grades under the direction of Mrs. Watt.

The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Dec. 8 with the Travis Choir.

Twentieth Century Study Club

A program on patents and inventions given by Mrs. Sherry Carlson and Mrs. Judy Forister highlighted a recent meeting of the Twentieth Century Study Club. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Mildred Laycock.

The club also heard a book review on "The Thorn Birds" by Mrs. Dot Stowers, and the "Fifty Years Ago" report was given by Mrs. Angela Sanford.

The Oct. 25 meeting of the club featured a program on "Texas Fuels - Lignite, Wind and Nuclear Fission," presented by Mrs. Dolores Gardner. Mrs. Mildred Laycock and Mrs. Mildred Harbough. The book review of "The Hollow Hills" was given by Mrs. June McGeahy, and the meeting was in the home of Mrs. Dorothy Neslage.

The Nov. 8 meeting was devoted to the year's budget, with a $500 scholarship being approved and a donation of $150 given to Opportunity Plan. A history of Texas courthouses was given by Mrs. W.H. Campbell, and "Fifty Years Ago" was given by Mrs. Mildred Harbough. The meeting was at the home of Mrs. W.A. Appling.

Critic at large

Liza's star bright in 'Act'

By Norman Nadel
NEW YORK — (NEA) — So what matter if "The Act" is the latest re-working of that battle-scarred but indestructible old theatrical apparatus, the show about show business? Nobody ever has done it better. Or at greater length.

No, that's not quite fair. Liza Minelli, Barry Nelson and a diamond-faceted on-stage and backstage company winged through it, for the most glittering opening-night Broadway audience in years, in two-and-a-half hours, which is not unreasonable for a large-scale musical.

But when it did slow down — and that was whenever they were obliged to pay passing attention to the ancient, creaking plot — it seemed forever, especially during the painfully attenuated, drippingly sentimental prelude to what eventually becomes a smash finale.

In fact, nobody out front would complain if, in one of the many hundreds of performances that appear to be inevitable for this dazzling entertainment package, the plot dropped out altogether. Miss Minelli portrays Michelle Craig, 32, a former movie musical star who is opening her first "live" appearance at Las Vegas. But not really her first, as it turns out, because in the first of many inevitable flashbacks she remembers breaking in at 16 at Bobo's in Omaha.

Later she'd fallen in love

with and married her movie producer (Nelson) and had some terrible troubles but along the way she appears to have "found herself."

So this is a musical about therapy. Putting that to one side, "The Act" delivers the most electrifying dance numbers, the crispest timing and the most stunningly talented musical theater star to have exhilarated an audience in years.

Miss Minelli, at the same age as the woman she is portraying, almost never leaves the stage, making the present-to-past-to-present transformations by the placement of her voice, the set or slump of her elegant backbone, and the finesse or awkwardness of her movements. While this in itself is a technical tour-de-force, it is accomplished so unflinchingly only because she, simultaneously, transforms her attitude, her personality, her utterly intuitive self.

A performer who can accomplish this, and at the same time know precisely where she stands in relation to a platform that is about to rotate, her leading man's position, the chorus' line's leaping entry, and a muted trombone riff which cues her next musical utterance — that performer is a star.

Today the word has been spread around like free samples of soap, yet the company of true stars is as exclusive as that of Nobel Prize winners. Liza — it bears repeating — is a star.

As the husband 20 years older than she, Nelson presents a totally different force on stage, which is precisely what is required. Like Miss Minelli, he is a master of timing; neither ever uses the smallest gesture (or the largest gesture), lift of eyebrow, employment of voice or any other tool of their profession unless it is explicitly what is required.

Even in episodes of the story that could be disastrous in less talents, they keep it tidy, and they keep it moving. Noble.

The chorus line of seven outshines the recollection of almost every musical show you've ever seen, excepting perhaps the long-running "A Chorus Line" down the street and "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," launched just 16 years ago by producers Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin, who also are jointly responsible for "The Act," in company with the Shubert Organization.

They and Miss Minelli perform the ultimate rouser, "City Lights," which for impact is almost unsurpassed among dance-musical numbers. Yet as effective, and lyrically graceful as well, is "Turning," in which the dancers use pivoting poles set into the stage to create an endless variety of circular and elliptical forms. The dancers are Wayne Cilento, Gayle Crofoot, Carol Estey, Michael Leeds, Roger Minami, Laurie Dawn Skinner and Albert Stephenson, all of which names should be bright on the marquee.

Obviously, even such performing talent doesn't invent such excitement on their own. Ron Lewis, who has choreographed some of those mirror-polished dance numbers in Las Vegas, is the man immediately responsible here.

But no less evident in the dancing and the whole show's architecture of movement is Director Gower Champion, whose name doesn't appear on the program. Listed in his stead is Martin Scorsese, a successful young film director ("Mean Streets," "Taxi Driver," "New York, New York") and a friend of Miss Minelli, who was eased out several weeks ago when the show reportedly was in awful shape.

Much else to occupy the ear — John Kander's music, Fred Ebb's lyrics, the orchestrations and arrange-

Caron plays older woman

LONDON (AP) — Three years ago Leslie Caron discovered she was 42 and had nothing to do. "I was at a turning point in my life," she said. "I could either turn to writing or drinking. I chose the pen."

Miss Caron remembered that decision while in London for the world premiere of her latest film, "Valentino," a biographical extravaganza based on the life of the 1920s silent screen lover Rudolph Valentino.

In the movie that casts ballet star Rudolf Nureyev in the title role, Miss Caron portrays Alla Nazimova, a flamboyant Russian-born Hollywood film star who chose Valentino as her leading man in the 1921 production of "Camille."

"Nazimova is a very exciting, larger-than-life lady and naturally I'm playing her like that," said the French actress.

But the role also calls for a mature "older" woman. The beautiful coquette of "Gigi," the simple village beauty of "Fanny," and the innocent in 'genue' of "An American in Paris" now fills that requirement with mature grace and her own special style.

At 45, her green eyes sparkle in a nest of wrinkles. In a fashion season which has brought a French haute couture revival of the "cute little girl" look Gigi made famous 20 years ago, she wears simple classics suitable for the mother of two children who are now at Cambridge University.

But the flair of the actress is there, evident in the famous wide mouth outlined in flamboyant pink matching the soft folds of a sweater cut low to show off a tanned neck free of lines.

Marathon runner jogs equivalent of equator

EDITOR'S NOTE — James Fixx has run the equivalent of once around the equator — about 10 miles a day for the past 10 years. To that experience he adds research, interviews and his own love of this growing trend. The sum is a new book, "The Complete Book of Running."

KAY BARTLETT

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time, far back in American history, people ran for buses, away from mean dogs and after their hats on gusty days. Otherwise, they walked.

Now an estimated 20 million Americans run to lose weight, quit smoking, live longer, enhance their sexual performance, lower their cholesterol level, think clearer, slow their heart rate, breathe deeper, win marathons and help overcome alcoholism.

Some just run for the pure joy of running, experiencing a "runner's high."

James F. Fixx, a marathoner and free lance writer, has come out with a 125,000-word literary marathon, "The Complete Book of Running," that deals with everything from what kind of shoes you should wear to the psychological benefits of running.

Fixx started running 10 years ago when he was 35, suffering from a tennis injury and smoking two packs of cigarettes a day. He weighed 220 pounds then. Today, he weighs 159. He looks far younger than 45, and doctors say that medically he is.

Why would one write such a lengthy book — complete with appendices and bibliography — about running?

"Two years ago, I realized I had a lot of information about running, things you don't find out until you've been running a long time. For instance, in a heavy wind, if you tuck in behind somebody and run in the slipstream you'll save about six percent of your energy," says Fixx. "You don't realize that until you've been running a long time."

To that he adds: "I just wanted to tell people about running in the best way it could be done. Not just the how to, but the ambiance of running."

Fixx runs 10 miles a day, usually near his home in Riverside, Conn. He also runs in the annual Boston and New York marathons.

"I'm not a superb runner, I'm a writer who also runs." But he's good enough to finish in the middle of the pack in the Boston race, where you have to qualify to get in. And in the New York chase through all five boroughs, where anybody can run, he finishes among the leaders.

"For that one day, you are a sports hero," Fixx says with enthusiasm, an enthusiasm that shines through his book, filled with quotes from runners, both Olympians and Central Park shufflers.

He gets antsy when he travels and can't run as much, but whether he is in Vienna, London or Boston, Fixx will run on grass, pavement, beach or track in rain, sleet, wind or snow.

There is a lot of practical advice in the book on such things as how to treat your own injuries, how to enjoy starting to run — "Go only as hard as the rate at which you can carry on a conversation" — how to deal with hecklers, what to wear, how to find the time and how to admit that if running becomes worse than a trip to the dentist, it may not be for you.

Fixx, who quit smoking just before he started running, says the first time he felt the real pleasure of running was after he had been at it for three weeks.

"As soon as I started running, I felt I was floating. I think I feel as I did as a teenager. If somebody said let's climb a tree, I'd do it. I'm ready for anything."

Fixx writes and talks about the loneliness of running as well as a runner's high, that special feeling of just running for the pure joy of it, knowing you are experiencing something that everyone could but few will.

"That comes when you run so effortlessly you feel like an animal running through the woods or a big Irish setter at play.

"I don't like to oversell this euphoria. You don't get something for nothing. You get what you put into it."

Fixx has met people from all walks of life during his running, and he concludes that runners are inclined to be more self-sufficient than most people.

"I can go out and run for two hours by myself and I can be happy. I don't need anybody around. Runners are very internally motivated."

Fixx's book is somewhat evangelical, but he denies he intended to convert the world to running.

His wife, Alice, ran during their courtship, working herself up to a seven-mile run. Soon after their marriage she caught a cold and asked if she should run then. He said no. With that, she hung up her shoes.

"I don't know what you can infer from that," he says. Alice is more direct. "I ran until I caught him."

Although he doesn't look happy, James F. Fixx strides ahead on a recent blustery day near his Connecticut home where he runs just for the fun of it. "I'm not a superb runner," he says. "I'm a writer who also runs. I can go out and run for two hours by myself and I can be happy."

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
I attended the Texas Wheat Producers Association and Board meeting in Amarillo last week. After hearing Bruce Weber, Production Adjustment Division, ASCS, USDA, Washington, D.C., I believe that there will be several changes made in the regulations affecting wheat in the new government farm program.

Also two of the speakers painted a little brighter picture for improved wheat exports in the next several months. These export prospects have apparently been the main factor in the upward movement of what prices. We will have more current up-date on wheat price prospects in our crop marketing short course November 29 and 30.

Crop Marketing Short Course

There will be a Crop Marketing Short Course in the Courthouse Annex meeting room, Pampa, at 7 p.m. Nov. 29 and 30. Mark these dates and plan to attend.

Dr. Roland Smith, Extension Grain Marketing Specialist, will present the program on Nov. 29 and share part of the program on Nov. 30. Dr. Smith will discuss the use of hedging and futures in crop marketing, give the results of the Aggie Futures Market Game that was started with the Livestock Marketing Short Course earlier this month. Also he will discuss the government crop loan program and give his predictions on the market outlook for wheat and feed grains.

Dr. Ray Sammons, Area Extension Economist, will present part of the program on Nov. 30. He will discuss economics and cost of crop production for next year along with comparisons for profit possibilities between various crops.

Swine Notes

Effective Jan. 1, all swine imported into Texas must originate from states in which pseudorabies is a reportable and quarantinable disease.

Sulfonamid residues in swine at time of slaughter is still an on-going problem. Reports show that there were two violations from 16 samples taken from Texas Slaughter hogs through August 24.

Economists continue to paint a bleak picture for swine prices in the coming year. Recently five economists predicted

January - March markets to range from $33 to $37, the April - June markets to range from $27 to $36, the July - September markets to range from $27 to $35 and the October to December markets below $30.

Mulch Strawberries

Strawberry growers in the Panhandle must apply a mulch soon if they want to protect the crowns from low temperature injury. The blossoms which will develop into berries next spring are started in the crown this fall. If crowns are exposed to temperatures of 10 degrees F. or below, the tiny buds may be killed. Since we have temperatures below 10 degrees F., a mulch of wheat straw 2 to 3 inches deep over the entire bed including the crowns and row middles is recommended. This is best done as soon as night temperatures go down to 20 degrees F. or below for several days. Next spring pull the straw away from over the plants when warm days return and new growth starts.

Aging of Beef Carcasses

Tenderness is the most important textural characteristic of meat and has the greatest influence on consumer acceptance of meat.

Research conducted by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station has some interesting results.

U.S. choice beef carcasses were aged 5, 8, 11, 21, or 28 days in a one degree C. cooler. Sensory panel ratings revealed that flavor, tenderness and overall palatability of loin steaks were maximal after 11 days of aging and that aging for more than 11 days did not result in further improvements in any of the sensory characteristics. This research suggests that U.S. choice beef carcasses should be aged (stored in a one degree C. cooler) for 11 days to maximize tenderness and to optimize flavor and overall acceptance of the majority of the muscles in steaks and/or roasts from the chuck, rib, loin and round.

In 1972, Hurricane Agnes rampaged through 18 states and the District of Columbia and caused nearly $100 million in insured property damage, reports the Insurance Information Institute.

The word "toboggan" originated among the Indian tribes of North America who transferred their food and belongings from camp to camp on small sleds.

USDA diet nuts to cattlemen

BY DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has come up with some sample menus which are bound to raise the hackles of livestock and poultry producers since they go heavy on fruit and nuts and easy on steaks and eggs.

For example, a man 20 to 54 years old might start the day with 2 cups of cereal and 2 tablespoons of sugar, 1 cup of skim milk, margarine, no butter, 3 slices of toast, one-half cup of juice and coffee or tea.

Lunch might consist of macaroni salad, vegetable, 3 slices of bread, margarine and one-half cup of milk.

At dinner he could have 5 ounces of lean meat, poultry or fish; one-half cup of potato; half a cup of vegetable or salad; 3 slices of bread; margarine; cake, and coffee or tea.

The menus are not recommendations by the department. They were, however, designed by its Agricultural Research Service as ways of eating to meet dietary goals set forth last February by the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs headed by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

Livestock groups, particularly the National Cattlemen's Association, and other agriculture-related organizations have criticized the McGovern committee's contention that Americans eat too much meat, eggs, sugar and other items which it says contribute to obesity and other health problems.

The model menus were included in a report to the annual Food and Agricultural Outlook Conference, which concluded Thursday. It was presented by Betty B. Peterkin, a home economist in the agency.

Under one of the options,

Mrs. Peterkin said that if people were to meet the dietary goals specified by McGovern's committee report they would have to consume:

—25 percent less meat, poultry and fish, with none of the drippings or separable fat from meat being consumed;

—24 percent fewer eggs;

—59 percent "less visible" sugar, syrup, jams, jellies and candies;

—About the same amount of visible fats and oils; however, soft margarine and oil replaced butter, lard and vegetable shortening which are higher in saturated fatty acids;

—10 percent more milk, all in the form of skim milk;

—21 percent more dry legumes and nuts;

—25 percent more vegetables and fruit; and

—69 percent more grain products, on an equivalent grain basis.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An additional sale of grain to the Soviet Union disclosed Thursday boosted the total of corn and wheat sold to Russia this week to more than 1.35 million metric tons.

The Agriculture Department said late Thursday that the latest sales involved 250,000 tons of corn. The current round of grain purchases by the Soviets began last Monday and so far include about 1.25 million tons of corn and 100,000 tons of wheat.

Counting earlier purchases, the Soviet Union has now bought more than 3.6 million tons of grain, about 2.6 million of corn and 1.1 million of wheat for delivery through next Sept. 30.

TV Dialogue

FOILED — The force was not with us last column and a printing error caused an answer to be dropped in reference to Darth Vader's history. Better late than never, here is the answer. According to creator George Lucas, Vader lost a fight to Obi-Wan Kenobi (many years before the battle in the film) and tumbled into a volcano. His suit and mask serve both to cover up his horrible disfigurements, and also as a sort of iron lung, thus all the heavy breathing. Bodybuilder and actor David Prowse was inside the suit, even though James Earl Jones provided the menacing voice.

PUNCH LINE — I am in search of the name of a comedian who died "maybe" two years ago "maybe" of an overdose of pills. He reminds me so much of Woody Allen, his frazzled appearance, his slight build, a loner, high-strung type personality. He has appeared on Hollywood Squares and made several appearances on the Carson show. His age I even liken to Woody Allen's. I have been struggling with this question since June. All of my usually reliable sources have failed me. I can't give up. Help! Marlys Olson, Cavalier, N.D.

Talk about desperation. That's a helluva way to worry a summer away. What if I told you the person is Woody Allen. Just kidding (sorry, Woody). Actually I know of no comedian who died during the past few years. I have a feeling you might be thinking of Sandy Baron, who didn't die, but disappeared for several months a couple of years ago. It turned out he was just high-strung enough to want to drop out of sight till he got it together again. He's back now and has been on TV a few times since. That's the best I and my usually reliable sources can come up with.

HIS WAY — I saw "Elvis in Concert" on TV. When he sang "My Way," he sort of gave some clues that he was going to die. He said, "So now the end is near..." And, "I face the final curtain as it's closing." Nobody guessed what he meant. What do you think about this? Also did Elvis and Ginger ever set up an exact wedding date? Kathi Price, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The lines you mentioned are actual lyrics to "My Way," and so while they may seem foreboding they could not have been taken as "clues" that Elvis was dying. At the time of his death he had no date set for a wedding.

BLONDES — I have been trying without success to find out what happened to my two favorite blondes missing from the TV screen lately. (1) The oldest of the Semonski sisters on The Lawrence Welk Show. (2) Patti Roberts, daughter-in-law of Oral Roberts whose lovely voice added so much to the program. Kathy Smith, Gulfport, Miss.

Everyone misses the blonde Semonski sister. Her name is Diane and she simply decided to strike out on her own away from the Welk Show. As for Patti Roberts, she will be returning to the fold in the future for more singing duty.

CORN — Where can I write to the cast members of Hee-Haw? It's my favorite show on television. Ralph Simpson, High Point, N.C.

The counterfitted show is handled by the cified agency of ICPR, 8th floor, 9255 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, CA. 90069. Write there.

BAA, BAA — I know Baa Baa Black Sheep began filming again for a mid-season slot. Has it been scheduled yet. Also, where do they film it and do they allow visitors on location? Andy Frommer, Palo Alto, Calif.

At the moment the Sheep are on hiatus, but they have put a number of new shows in the can. So far they haven't been called into action, since NBC hasn't done any heavy cancelling yet. The series films in the Indian Dunes area of Southern California, but unfortunately they do not allow visitors.

Catholics may take communion with hands

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The country's 49 million Roman Catholics have the choice, starting this Sunday, of receiving the bread of Holy Communion in their hands instead of on the tongue as has long been the practice.

Advance indications were for a smooth transition, with scattered dissent simmering down, even though distribution of communion on the tongue had been the only approved method for 1,100 years.

The new way is actually even older, however, and was the pattern for the first nine centuries of the church's history. "This is something that a lot of people didn't realize before, that the change is really a return to an older tradition," says the Rev. Dominic Turtora, pastor of St. Francis Church in Metuchen, N.J., where the new way already has been introduced.

Some of the church's 168 dioceses, estimated at fewer than 20, started the new option ahead of the Nov. 20 deadline set for the overall shift throughout the U.S. church and its 18,500 parishes.

Even then, it depends on "the individual action of the people," says the Rev. John Rotelle, director of the U.S. Catholic Conference's liturgical office in Washington, D.C. "It's totally optional. "Those who prefer may continue receiving communion in the same way. For them, there will be no change at all — except seeing others receive in a different way."

Noting that programs of instruction on the new option have been carried out in each diocese in advance of the general change, he said: "We had expected some negative response, but surprisingly, I've heard of none so far."

Protestants traditionally have received the communion bread in the hands.

U.S. Catholic bishops voted to approve the change last spring, after twice before rejecting it, in 1971 and 1973. Their decision, later confirmed by the pope, came after about 53 other countries already had made the shift.

It is in line with the church's new emphasis on the maturity and dignity of the Catholic laity. At the time communion-on-the-tongue was initiated in the 10th century, the attitude was that only the priests' anointed hands were sufficiently holy to touch the communion elements.

Texans against canal

DALLAS (AP) — Conservative and veterans groups have asked the two Texas senators to carry to Washington the opposition of the organizations to the ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

The groups presented proclamations against the ratification to Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., during visits to their offices Thursday as part of "Keep Our Canal Day."

The observance was part of a 50-day nationwide campaign against the treaties coordinated by the Conservative Caucus, a national lobbying organization.

Neither senator was in his office to meet with the group, but Tower issued a statement saying he supported the organization.

Tower said he had received more than 4,000 letters from citizens on both sides of the issue, but the majority was in opposition to ratification.

"I must conclude from this correspondence that it represents the consensus of the people of Texas," he said.

The senator also referred to a survey by the National Republican Senatorial Committee that reported 99 percent of those questioned opposed the treaties.

He added that recent verbal concessions by Panamanian strongman General Omar Torrijos regarding human rights issues were "very conciliatory," but do not change the fact that "surrender of the military and operation control of the Canal is not in the best long-range interests of the United States."

"Furthermore, the terms of the treaty which give Panama veto Power over any future sea level canal location are totally unacceptable," Tower said.

Tower said government officials will visit Texas to solicit support for the treaties, "but I believe the people of Texas have already spoken. I agree with that mandate."

In Austin, a group held a meeting on the steps of the Capitol, then proceeded to Bentsen's office to deliver a proclamation.

Bentsen was not in Austin, but a spokesman for his office said the senator has not made up his mind on the issue.

Glenn F. Clamp of San Antonio, district director of the Conservative Caucus, said: "We hope he will come out against it along with Sen. Tower and others."

HHH's son runs for congress

By GERRY NELSON
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When your father is Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, you have to take big steps to follow him into politics.

So far, Hubert H. "Skip" Humphrey III has succeeded. He's been elected to the Minnesota Senate twice and announced this week that he'll bid for Congress in the suburban 3rd District next year.

Young Humphrey, a 35-year-old lawyer, seems only now to be emerging from the giant shadow cast by his father.

He is the oldest of three Humphrey sons but the only one to enter politics. His brother Robert owns an electronics store in Huron, S.D.; Douglas is a partner in a kitchen cabinet firm in Bloomington, Minn.; and sister Nancy is married to a Minneapolis businessman.

Skip Humphrey has a stocky build, gray wavy hair, wears glasses, speaks in a gravelly voice and doesn't look at all like the "happy warrior" Humphrey who has become a national figure.

"I'm me," he said after his first election in 1972. "Some people are going to be sadly mistaken if they thought they were voting for me because they thought I was going to be like my old man."

Young Humphrey kept a low profile early in his legislative career, seldom taking part in Senate debates.

He blossomed out this year, heading an important subcommittee which dealt with state agency funding and managing a major bill that allocated $28.5 million to fight Dutch elm disease.

Senate colleagues called him hard-working but not flashy. "Outgoing and talkative but not as folksy as his father," says one source.

Humphrey's congressional bid next year will come 30 years after the elder Hubert H. Humphrey was first elected to the U.S. Senate.

The senior Humphrey, now suffering from cancer, has been given an unending round of tributes and honors in recent months. His son, Skip, stood in for him at a recent Washington, D.C., event which raised funds for a Hubert H. Humphrey School of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

The second-generation effort by Skip Humphrey has at least one roadblock so far — his opponent will be by another second-generation political name.

Humphrey will be opposed for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party endorsement by Michael Freeman, 29, son of former Minnesota Gov. Orville Freeman. The elder Freeman also served as secretary of agriculture in the Kennedy administration.
