Storm strands holiday motorists, boaters

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow that socked portions of the nation at the close of the Thanksgiving holiday tapered off early today.

In many areas, the snow was not as heavy as expected. In New Jersey, for instance, most areas received only about a quarter-inch of snow before the storm passed. The National Weather Service said the reason was that the storm had moved through the state much faster than had been expected.

More than 460 persons died on the nation's highways and streets during the Thanksgiving holiday period, which stretched from Wednesday evening through Sunday. The National Safety Council had predicted between 460 and 560 fetalities

In Alpena, Mich., along Lake Huron, nearly 7 inches of snow was recorded and another 2 inches was expected today.

Motorists stranded in Caryville, Tenn., on Interstate 75 north of Knoxville, slept in motel lobbies, a church, an elementary school and on the floor of a coin-operated laundry.

Police Chief Wayne Gunter said, "We had about 4 inches of snow. Then it turned to solid ice." He said northbound cars were unable to climb Jellico Mountain.

"We had our grammar school completely full," Gunter said. He said Caryville's four motels were full, some 175 persons slept in the school, and another 150 to 200 persons found other makeshift lodging.

Heavy snow storms stalled traffic on Cleveland's lakefront shoreway Sunday, interfering with the operation of salt trucks.

In the mountains of Virginia and West Virginia, snow up to 16 inches deep blocked most mountain roads. But most primary roads remained open to cars with snow tires or chains.

Walks not good enough

By ALTON BLAKESLEE AP Science Editor

MIAMI (AP) — Really strenuous exercise is good medicine for your heart, but sports like golf and bowling aren't enough, a new study finds.

The study also indicates that a high amount of energy spent each week in physical activity, including walking, could provide some insurance against premature heart attacks.

Spending a high total amount of energy and calories is significant, especially in excercises that demand bursts of energy output, says Dr. Ralph S Paffenbarger Jr. of the University of California at Berkeley.

But the risk of heart attacks was lower for men engaging in "strenous sports," while "casual" sports seemed to have no influence, Paffenbarger said.

Among strenuous sports, he listed swimming and running, basketball, handball and squash. "Casual" sports included golf, bowling, baseball, softball and volleyball.

As for tennis, he said it depends on how it

"Batting the ball around on Sunday with young children generally isn't strenugus, but a stiff competitive game of singles is."

Paffenbarger made his comments in remarks prepared for delivery at a scientific session of the American Heart Association today.

He told of research involving some 17,000 male almuni of Harvard University, aged 35 to 74, studied periodically for six to 10 years. In all, they sufferred 572 heart attacks, 257 of them fatal.

The research focused on the energy the men spent, in terms of activity such as the number of blocks walked, stairs climbed, sports engaged in and estimation of total calories "burned" each week.

"Heart attack rates declined with increasing activity, whether measured as stairs climbed, blocks walked or strenuous sports. This trend held for all ages and for both non-fatal and fatal attacks."

The more calories the men spent in total activity in a week seems to relate to less risk of heart attack, he added.

He said the protective effect from being active seemed to hold regardless of whether the men had other risk factors, such as "cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, obesity, parental heart attacks and prior athleticism"

A two-car accident six miles east of Pampa on Highway 60 this morning resulted in minor injuries to the driver of one car and approximately $1,300 damage to the vehicles, Trooper John Simms of the Texas Highway Patrol said.

Hurt was Sandra Hull of Gage, Okla., who suffered a cut on her forehead which required several stitches to close. She was treated and released at Highland General Hospital.

According to Simms, the Hull vehicle and a 1963 Chevrolet driven by John Campbell, 1141 Juniper in Pampa, were westbound on Highway 60 at about 7:45 a.m. with the Hull car following Campbell, and both cars following a bus The bus stopped for a railroad crossing, the Campbell car slowed, and the Hull vehicle rear - ended the Campbell car.

Miss Hull was cited for following too closely. Damage to her car, a 1974 Vega, was estimated at $1,000, while damage to the Campbell vehicle was set at $300.

Highway toll reaches 461 dead

By The Associated Press
By the official end of the four-day Thanksgiving weekend early today, authorities reported that 461 persons had died on the nation's highways.

Snow over much of the Midwest and Northeast added to the hazards of the usual crush of traffic as motorists headed home Sunday, but its effect on the overall total was hard to measure. While it contributed to some accidents, the danger kept other travellers off the highways.

Snow fell over much of the upper Mississippi Valley, the upper Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley, while areas of freezing rain developed over the Tennessee Valley. Thunderstorms rumbled over Mississippi and Louisiana.

The death toll at midnight PST today tallied with the estimate of the National Safety Council, which had said before the holiday period began that 460 to 560 persons could be expected to die in traffic. The holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

An average of 530 highway deaths occur during a non-holiday period of equal length at this time of year, the council said.

Last year, 467 fatalities were recorded during the Thanksgiving weekend. The record for most traffic deaths on the holiday is 764 in 1968.

Coins and cancer

Two Denver, Colo., doctors inserted dimes in rats and proved (to their satisfaction at least) that the metal could cause cancer. It was all sort of a spoof but had the overtone of a general disgust doctors feel with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in its attack on so many common foods

After stating their findings, the doctors joked, 'The FDA and Consumer Product Safety Commission should convene an emergency meeting for the purpose of removing all coins from circulation.

In a letter to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the doctors wrote, "The decision - makers in the Food and Drug Administration have done it again: protected the rat, reduced the credibility of cancer scientists and kept their string of inane pronouncements on cancer danger intact.

"Their forthright attacks on cranberries, food dyes, cyclamates, estrogen, plastic bottles and now saccharin are indeed a remarkable display of bureaucratic footwork when tobacco is exported by the federal government as a foodstuff under several 'food programs.'

The doctors said that in response to this nonsense they had run the research with dimes on

If it Fitz

Legislative stupidity boggles the mind

Berry's World

Well, if smoking is so bad for you, how come the federal government subsidizes tobacco growing?"

By JIM FTTZGERALD It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of peace.

It is also impossible to exaggerate the stupidity of some people, especially some legislators

These non-exaggerated facts are tough on a smart-ass columnist who often uses exaggeration to make a point. That's me. For instance, the other day I told you about House Bill No. 5280, introduced in the Michigan Legislature by Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, a Detroit Democrat. The bill would require that public school students be taught "peace as opposed to war ... kindness and justice to, and humane treatment of, human beings."

Everyone knows that history teachers teach about the Battle of the Bulge and the glory in fighting for freedom. But the average curriculum doesn't include a course in peace mongering. Too bad. I am rooting for Rep. Vaughn's bill.

But I am more cynical than hopeful. To make this point, I exaggerated. At least, I thought I was exaggerating. I wrote:

"If Jackie Vaughn's bill ever makes it out of committee, it probably will be so thoroughly amended that its major thrust for peace will be a provision forbidding students to manufacture nuclear weapons

I didn't really mean that. I figured the superpatriots would attempt to attach the usual stars and stripes to Vaughn's bill.

Perhaps an amendment requiring that every peace class be taught within view of a life-size photo of Gen. George Patton. But I didn't really think the bill's opponents would insist that, to protect Michigan from Communist invasion, every course in peace must include a few kind words for war.

After all, it isn't as though there is a delicate balance to be maintained. Our school kids have been learning the glories of righteous battle ever since the stubborn red man balked at being white - topped. History books are indexed according to wars. Noncombatants are sniveling cowards or quaint Quakers in footnotes.

When it comes to education, there is a peace gap that Jackie Vaughn couldn't fill with a million laws. So I was exaggerating. No legislators would really be stupid enough to worry about the harmful effects of children being exposed to too much peace. Would they?

It turned out that my exaggeration was already history. It happened two years ago. A letter from Congressman David Bonior supplied the incredible details: 'It is not the first time that the concept of peace education has been brought to the Legislature," Bonior said. "In the spring of 1975, Reps. Vaughn and Mastin brought to the floor of the state House of Representatives a resolution urging the Department of Education to develop a peace program. During the debate on the resolution, your worst fears about how the fight in time of war." This makes as much sense as requiring that algebra students also be taught the danger of choking on abacus beads.

So much for the lunkheads in our Legislature. Bonior's story became even more disheartening when he left the Legislature to run for Congress.

When Bonior voted against the "war amendment," he explained his vote by using the famous quotation from Samuel Johnson: "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

"I believe that at the time it accurately described the pious posturing of the war amendment sponsors and supporters," Bonior said. "Much to my dismay, I found my opponent in my congressional race. His hand-outs became big hits at American Legion and VFW posts.

"It is most unfortunate that peace means so little and that war has been so giorified. Despite these attacks, I would again cast my vote in the same manner because I believe that our children must be taught that there is an alternative to the horrors of war," Bonior said.

Amen, amen, amen. And that's no exaggeration.

Automatic TV switch

By Ed Orloff Copyright Crown Syndicate, Inc. 1977

A weekly report on new developments in the marketplace that are expected to affect your life

TELEVISION: We've always believed in the divine right of the viewer to turn the TV set on and off. However, a West German manufacturer has come up with a way to turn that task over to a microcomputer. When the viewer buys this television console, he also gets a 30-key remote control unit that can store the dates and hours of up to 20 shows up to a year in advance, turn the set on and off and switch to the desired channels on the appropriate days. What the tiny computer does is control the set's digital tuner, turning it to any one of 19 available channels at pre-determined hours. The device will even shut the set off at the end of the broadcast day, which is fine for people with a tendency to fall asleep while watching.

MEAT: Which citizen has not complained that meat just doesn't taste like it used to, or that it just isn't tender any more? Well, we've got chemicals to deal with the flavor problem, but tenderness is another matter, and that brings us to experiments being conducted by food engineers. They're tenderizing meat carcasses with electrical shock (100 volts, 5 amps) and claiming that tenderness ratings are up as high as 55 per cent. The idea comes from New Zealand, it's said, where it's done to lamb carcasses.

LIGHT: A few years back, scientists at Massachusetts Institute of Technology were working on ways to convert solar energy to heat and to improve the insulation ability of glass. One serendipitous result is going to be a light bulb that may use up to 60 per cent less electricity. The trick is a very thin chemical sandwich composed of silver between two layers of titanium oxide. It reflects infrared radiation back onto the filament, thereby cutting the power needed to keep the filament at its most efficient operating temperature. These new bulbs, when they hit the market in the near future, will retail for up to $4, but they should last about 2,500 hours. Ordinary light bulbs today last only 750-1,000 hours. PLASTIC: Who says plastics have to be breakable? A major

bicycle maker has come up with a one-piece molded nylon wheel (reinforced with glass) for rough terrain, no less. It weighs only 2.5 pounds. CHEMISTRY: Bet it makes your day to learn that food chemists have now developed and bottled the flavor of fresh honeydew melon for use in candies, gelatins, and soft drink

COMPUTERS: You can't help but marvel at the possibilities, especially for scientists. Consider this true scenario. A British scientist, visiting Toronto, sat down at a computer terminal there. He was given a link to France's scientific computer network (via trans-Atlantic cable), which linked him with his own office near London through the European Informatics Network (which eventually will inter-connect most of Europe's research institutions). This enabled him to get in touch with his colleagues and fool around with a few scientific texts stored in his home base computer. It also would have been possible for him to go (via Norway and a satellite connection) to any one of a hundred university computers in the U.S. and (via Vienna) to a Soviet computer in Moscow. And if you think you'll never have a computer terminal in your own home, you're not TRAVEL: Last time we went to England, we carried a plastic raincoat that folded and fit into a jacket pocket. We're reminded of same by the news that a firm in California now is offering a 10-foot boat that fits into a surfboard-shaped package only 4 inches thick. Weight: 49 lbs. The manufacturer claims this rigid craft can be unfolded and ready to go in two minutes. It's made of polypropylene, the same plastic used in the new auto bumpers and artificial turf.

Energy, Social Security vie for congress' attention

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional difficulty in approving a national energy program is threatening to delay final consideration of a Social Security bill until next year.

Such a delay could mean there will be no increases in Social Security taxes, beyond those already enacted, until 1979. That position is favored by the Senate, while the House prefers raising taxes further on middle-and upper-income workers starting Jan. 1.

President Carter and the Democratic leadership of Congress list energy as the top-priority issue for the remainder of the year, although they are urging final action on Social Security as well.

Action on both may not be possible because the Senate and House members most responsible for Social Security legislation are the same ones who are negotiating a compromise on the tax portions of the energy program. And it appears likely that energy will keep the lawmakers busy until close to Christmas.

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A report by the Agriculture Department says fishing curbs involving the 200-mile territorial waters of the United States and many other countries may force Japan to seek additional American farm commodities.

Since Japan relies heavily on fish products for food, some experts believe it "will be able to make up any loss" from reduced fishing in coastal waters of other countries and more invtensive fishing in its own waters and the open sea, the report said.

But the report, which was published in this week's issue "Foreign Agriculture," said it is more likely that Japan, in the near future at least, will turn to the United States for more agricultural products.

The article said these products may include more beef, poultry, variety meats, soybeans and feed grains. Additional fish imports from other foreign sources also may be More than 50 countries have

DEAR ABBY: After 32 years of marriage, my husband and I separated. He was hard-working, non-drinking and faithful. I forced the separation because he was terribly hard on our three children (they're now all college graduates and married). Also, he refused to socialize with anyone. I felt trapped and stifled, and couldn't take his selfish, insulated way of life. He moved out of our lovely home and into a small apartment.

About a month ago I bumped into him at the shopping center. He invited me to see his apartment, so I went. Before I knew it I found myself in a very amorous situation and I stayed overnight. He served me breakfast in bed and confessed that the separation made him truly appreciate me. He said he could never love anyone the way he loved me and if I took him back he would try his best to be more sociable and make me happy. The next weekend we drove out of town secretly like two young lovers. I didn't want anyone (especially my family) to know. Since then, he's been wining and dining me, and I have been loving it. It's better than our courtship ever was!

People keep telling me how marvelous I look since I got rid of "that pill." They don't know I'm in love all over again. If I take him back, my friends and family will think I've lost my mind. I'm still ashamed to let them know I'm seeing him. What would you do?

WALKING ON AIR

DEAR WALKING: I'd take him back and give him a chance to prove his sincerity. And the last thing I'd worry about is what my friends and family think.

DEAR ABBY: I just had a confrontation with a woman in a laundromat over her smoking. I am asthmatic, and cigarette smoke not only offends me, it makes me sick. When I asked her to please put her cigarette out, she told me -and everyone else in the place -in no uncertain terms that she will smoke wherever she wants to. Furthermore, she said there were no "No Smoking" signs in evidence, so I had better get used to it because everybody smokes.

Unfortunately I will now have to go into debt to buy a washer-dryer. I'm sick of bringing home a cough and clothes that stink of cigarette smoke from the laundromat. WINCHESTER, VA.

DEAR WIN: I am no defender of smokers, but it's a rare smoker who will not quickly douse his cigarette if someone complains. More and more public places post "No Smoking" signs, which I think is a step in the right

DEAR ABBY: I am a 64-year-old woman and my problem is my husband. He is 68, and no matter where we go, he ogles the women, young or old. His head looks like it's on a swivel. He's been impotent for the last 15 years, so I can't understand why he's looking. He doesn't just look-he leers. One of these days somebody is going to take a poke at him.

When I tell him that his looking is obvious and ask him to please cut it out, he says I am jealous. I'm not really, because I know darned well that all he can do is look. What I want to know is this: Is he wrong for looking? Or am I wrong for complaining?

LOOKER'S FRAU

DEAR FRAU: Looking in the manner that you describe is rude, so I don't blame you for complaining. However, I seriously doubt that your complaining will put an end to his looking.

Ask Dr. Lamb Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB - I have tried to find cereals that have no preservatives, food coloring, or artificial flavoring. I began eating the Quaker Natural Cereals, but discovered that they used the term vegetable oil as one of their ingredients. I wrote to the company asking them if this was coconut oil, and indeed it was. They state that "no cholesterol is present in Natural Cereal." Does this mean that it is all right for me to continue with these cereals even though they do contain coconut oil?

DEAR READER — I am not fond of the gimmick used by many food companies to state a food has "no cholesterol" when they are using saturated fat in the recipe. It is true that coconut oil and all vegetable products contain no cholesterol, but saturated fat may be even more dangerous. Many scientists think that a high saturated fat intake is a major factor in stimulating your own body to form fatty-cholesterol particles that tend to lodge in the arteries and cause heart and vascular disease

And, I find it equally distasteful to see a food label of 'vegetable oil' which misleads many buyers. All too often, the buyer thinks he is getting a vegetable fat low in saturated fat, when in fact it is coconut oil. To fight back, I recommend to my readers that if the product says "vegetable oil," and doesn't specify what kind or tell you how much saturated fat it contains, just boycott it. That will help to bring the food industry around.

As the letter you sent me really admits, the food industry likes to use coconut oil not because it is good for you, but because it improves the shelf life of the product they are selling. I might add that sometimes it is cheap-

In defense of Quaker's product, I'll have to agree that the amount of fat it contains is relatively small. A little bit of saturated fat is in almost all foods that contain any fat at all, even in safflower oil. According to the Quaker figures in the letter you sent me, a half cup serving contains 4.2 grams of saturated fat. That translates into about 38 calories, and if you were eating 2,500 calories a day, 15 per cent of your daily saturated fat allowance. The Inter-Society Commission for Heart Disease Resources recommends that we limit our saturated fat (not total) fat) intake to 10 percent of our total calories. About three-and-a-half cups of the Natural Cereal would use your entire daily allowance of saturated fat.

Like many other foods that you can't eat in abundance, you can eat some. So if the rest of your menu is based on lean meats, fish, and poultry, abundant amounts of vegetables without added saturated fat, and other cereals and fruits without added saturated fat, and low-fat dairy products, you can still meet the overall dietary recommendation of limiting your total saturated fat intake to no more than 10 percent of your total calo-

To give you a better idea of the proper dietary recom-mendations about fats, saturated fats, and cholesterol, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-ad-dressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY.

Of course, many of these problems can be obviated if all foods were labeled prop-erly. I wish they would also carry the recommended daily intakes along with them as a public service.

They're casual, not boot boots

NEW YORK -(NEA)-They're boots, but they're not boot boots because they're not even shoe shoes.

Shoe shoes, says Werner J. Kaplan, president of GSP Footwear, come in lots of sizes and widths. And they're sold in shoe departments

What GSP is offering (part of a line of 21 styles from $8 to $12) is sold in upstairs hosiery departments in department stores around the

And what they are is indoor-outdoor casual boots. Not boot boots.

'We used to make nothing but slipper scuffs," says Kaplan, "but after surveying the market a number of years ago, we felt the American woman should have a better choice of footwear in the hosiery department than terry scuffs which are limited in use.

So GSP began making inexpensive indoor-outdoor casual shoes from fabrics like Qiana which no one, Kaplan says, ever used before in shoes (ballet type slippers in this case) and double knit Kodel (a slip-on that resembles an espadrille).

Then, what with the energy crisis and all, and the nation's craving for things fleecey and pile-lined, the

"They come in five sizes," he says, "from five to nine, and one width and they are and always will be an impulse item.

Which means that the dallier in the better hosiery department who spots GSP's chukka or low boot in beige. dark brown or brown imitation suede and acrylic pile lining — or the high boot in the same fake suede and pile lining — is apt to say, "Say, how cute! And only $10 or finside and out, the desert boot is designed for cozy feet. Made by GSP in polyester suede, the boot boots sport a wing - collar effect and are lined in sherpa - like fabric (about $10). The full - length boot, made from the same fabric, can be rolled down to show the lining, or unfolded to full length (about $13).

What makes these boots that aren't boot boots more than indoor loungees, Kaplan says, is their polyvinylchloride sole which "will outwear the shoe." But you'll want to get rid of them next year even if they aren't worn out because Kaplan intends to see you do. "The style outdates them, not the material. This year it's furlined things, next year it may be terry lining or brocade. It's up to us to come up with new ideas and concepts, and we will." But until then, he says you're free to wear these in the kitchen, the squash court, to a group encounter session, even out in the snow.

By ALEX SACHARE

AP Sports Writer Ted Marchibroda and the Baltimore Colts are the latest to learn what is becoming gospel around the National Football League: the Denver Broncos are for real.

The Broncos jumped to a 14-0 halftime lead over Baltimore in Sunday's battle of division leaders, saw the Colts close to within 14-13, then turned them back with two fourth-quarter touchdowns in posting a 27-13 victo-

"You have to give Denver credit," said Marchibroda, impressed by the offense led by surprising Craig Morton and the rugged Orange Crush defense. "This was probably the biggest game they've been in, and they played almost errorless football.

Denver is a newcomer to the ranks of the NFL's elite, but four more familiar names -Dallas, Pittsburgh, Minnesota and Los Angeles - strengthened their playoff chances with victories Sunday.

The Dallas Cowboys, 9-2, took a commanding two-game lead over St. Louis in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division by edging arch-rival Washington 14-7 on a fourthquarter touchdown by rookie Tony Dorsett. The Redskins now are three games back at 6-5, but have a slim chance at the NFC wild-card playoff berth.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, 7-4, took over sole possession of first place in the AFC Central, beating the New York Jets 23-20 as Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes and the Steelers picked off five Jets aerials. The other three teams in the division, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Houston, are tied for second place at 6-5 in the league's closest divisional race.

The Minnesota Vikings got back on the winning track with a 13-6 triumph over Green Bay as Chuck Foreman ran through the snow for 101 yards. That put the Vikings, 7-4, one game Central.

And the Los Angeles Rams stayed two games ahead of Atlanta in the NFC West, blanking the Cleveland Browns 9-0 in another game played in snow. It was only the fifth time the Browns have been blanked in 367 regular-season games.

Elsewhere in the NFL Sunday, the Cincinnati Bengals beat the New York Giants 30-13, the Houston Oilers defeated the Kansas City Chiefs 34-20, Tampa Bay Buccaneers 17-0, the New England Patriots topped the Philadelphia Eagles 14-6, the San Diego Chargers trimmed the Seattle Seahawks 30-28 and the San Francisco Gers edged the New Orleans Saints 20-17.

This is merely an exaggerated example of the limitations of the U.S. Consumer Price Index the single most important monthly report issued in the U.S., which measures changes in the prices of goods and services Americans buy: food, clothing, fuel, repairs, rent, drugs, etc. But the CPI now reflects the buying habits of only urban wage - earners and clerical workers - a minor 30-35 per cent of our population.

Starting in January, though, this vitally significant economic barometer - which triggers adjustments in your wages, your pensions, welfare payments and even some alimony settlements - will be fundamentally overhauled. The details:

(1) The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles the index, will more than double the number of Americans whose buying habits are studied. The new CPI will include doctors. lawyers, teachers, other professionals, the self-employed as well as salaried workers, the retired and unemployed in addition to wage - earners and clerical workers. All urban consumers - close to 80 per cent of our civilian population - will be covered.

(2) The way the BLS compiles the marketbasket of goods and services used to calculate changes in consumer prices will be improved. Instead of recording the price of a precisely specified item (say a 19-inch, black - and - white portable TV with specified features), a data collector will report price changes of a set he or she selects on the basis of the type we are actually buying. The market will dictate the How, for instance, does an composition of the marketbasket — and the basket will include far more items than the present 400. (3) Among the additions. reports my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer, will be hearing aids, contact lenses, microwave ovens, pocket calculators - items we weren't even buying when the index was last changed 13 years ago.

(4) The number of stores, garages and other outlets from which the BLS collects data will be raised and the number of urban areas enlarged from 56 to 85. The relative importance given to major spending categories will be updated to reflect today's spending

The CPI is far, far more than just another indicator of inflationary trends in our

In real life, it plays a crucial role in the distribution of billions of dollars in private and public funds. When the CPI increases, so do the checks of about 31.2 million Social Security recipients, 8.5 million workers covered by contracts with cost of - living escalator clauses, 2.4 million federal Civil Service and military retirees. Guided too by changes in the CPI are allowances for participants in the food stamp, school lunch, other welfare programs. Just a 1 per cent change in the index triggers at least a 12 billion jump in income under escalator provisions. An error of only 0.1 per cent can cause a misallocation of $100 million -

Because the economic welfare of so many Americans is so affected by the CPI and no one is sure how the new index will behave, the BLS will phase in its revisions. It will continue to publish the old index for six months, while issuing the two new ones - the all · urban CPI and an updated version of the traditional index.

But even these "new" indices will be several years out of date when released in January, for they are based on data collected way back in 1972-73.

To correct this, the BLS wants smaller and more timely updates and an ongoing Consumer Expenditure Survey upsurge in fuel prices affect our patterns? Or a tax rebate? The CPI plays such a dominant role in influencing economic policy decisions and in the leapfrogging of wages and prices that the importance of its accuracy is indisputable. Congress, however, has still to appropriate funds for improvements and future

Updating your cost index Beware, mail order firms high on complaint list

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

'Tis the season when holiday catalogues appear to tempt consumers with visions of mail order merchandise which addup to a multibillion dollar industry.

Although December is not the biggest month for the mail order business - January sales are actually the largest - it does bring an increased number of offerings in mailboxes and as supplements to Sunday newspapers.

Consumers planning to shop mail should take precautions, however, to avoid disappointments. Mail order firms consistently rank high on complaint lists. The federal Office
