President Of Federation Has Colorful Career

For the first time in its nearly fifty years of existence the General Federation is headed by a woman with a long and impressive record of professional and executive experience behind her. For the past 22 years she has been executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association, which became under her direction, one of the outstanding public health groups in the nation. For several years she has been instructor in Community Organizations in the University of Oregon Medical School's Department of Nursing Education.

Mrs. Dunbar's club service began in 1908 when she was appointed chairman of Public Health of the Oregon Federation. Her advance was rapid and in May, 1938 she was elected president of the General Federation.

While serving as chairman of the Department of Public Welfare, Mrs. Dunbar represented the General Federation at the White House conference on Child Health and Protection called by President Hoover. She was a member of the Public Health organization section of which Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming was chairman, and as a member of the speaker's bureau of the conference carried its message into many states. Mrs. Dunbar has spent the past three summers in Alaska where she was sent by the National Tuberculosis association to organize the fight against tuberculosis.

In recognition of her humanitarian accomplishment, the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters was conferred upon her by Oregon Linfield college in June, 1937—the first woman to be granted an honorary degree in the college's eighty years of existence. In his citation, Dr. Marshall N. Dana, associate editor of the Oregon Journal, characterized her as a "humanitarian, educator in public health, leader in women's organizations in America, dauntless warrior against tuberculosis; defender of children, exponent of home making, pioneer of public health nursing; a woman of ability and dedicated life; demonstrator of woman's capacity for citizenship, with will and courage making the world about her safer from the threat of disease and happier for all."

Earnestness and sincerity are dominant qualities in Mrs. Dunbar. She is ever near the pulse of the people; her trend is toward the practical, in religion, in education, in government, and in welfare. Though thoughtful and studious she has a buoyantly happy disposition and an astounding capacity for electing love, loyalty, and admiration from all who come in contact with her. Mrs. Dunbar is a truly inspirational speaker, never lacking thoughts or words. She is compelling and magnetic and holds the undivided attention of her audiences.

Adjusting Democracy for Human Welfare is the keynote chosen by Mrs. Dunbar for her administration and in her numerous addresses throughout the country before clubs, educational and welfare groups emphasis is being laid on individual responsibility in matters of welfare in a democracy.

She is a lover of music, poetry, and sculpture, all of which she has studied. She is a member of the Presbyterian church, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and numerous other organizations.

Mrs. Dunbar, is making her home in Washington, D. C. during her term of office, has two children, Kathryn (Mrs. William D. Winter Jr.), a son, Allen, a recent graduate of the University of Oregon, and one grandchild, "Billy" Winter. Mr. Dunbar died in 1928.

Junior Beaux Arts Club Organized For Study Of Fine Arts

Junior Beaux Arts club was organized February 17, 1931, under the sponsorship of Les Beaux Arts club, to give opportunity to young women between the ages of 17 and 35 for training in appreciation of three fine arts, painting, music, and poetry. The first president was Wylfa Lee Alexander.

The club has a membership of 20 active members and five associate. It joined the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs in 1933. Like its parent club, it makes a study of the history of art and of the works of prominent artists and authors. Active interest is taken in the development of art in the grades of the public school.

Exhibits in various lines have been staged and musical programs have been given, as well as readings of poems by known living writers. Each fall a bazaar is held by which money is raised for civic or charitable purposes. A camp-fire troop of children is sponsored by members of the club. Each year an exhibit of etchings or fine prints is held for the specific purpose of promoting art education in the public schools. The present acting president is Rosa Lee Grady.

Miss Mary Howren, a Clarendon teacher and former dean of girls in Clarendon college, who has been very active in the Senior Beaux Arts club, and has done much in the study and development of art appreciation, has also sponsored from the beginning, this Junior Beaux Arts.

Club Women Have Roles In History Of Development

Woman's Culture club of Memphis, came into existence May 16, 1898, and was federated in 1900, just nine years after the General Federation had its inception with the Scoville club of New York in 1891. Mrs. E. L. Houghton, a brilliant and far-seeing woman, now deceased, was the founder of the club.

While organized primarily for social and literary enjoyment with study, there soon came a broader vision and a clearer insight into the real problems of life. The club has always been vitally interested in the progress of Memphis and has taken an active part in its development.

It was through the activities of the Woman's Culture club that Memphis received $10,000 to erect the Carnegie library. The public library already established had the required number of books specified by Mr. Carnegie.

In 1912 the Carnegie library opened with a reception with the Culture club as hostess. The books were brought from the court house and presented to the library.

The social life of the club is not neglected. In years gone by the club has featured many outstanding social events. Within the last several years the "Lilac Tea" given in the beautiful colonial home of Mrs. J. A. Whaley, the members of the club, dressed in colonial costumes, has been the outstanding social affair of the Culture club. This year's work was started off with breakfast in the home of the president of the club, Mrs. Roy R. Pultz.

The club lost one of its good and faithful members, Mrs. Ira W. Neely, in the summer of 1938. Mrs. D. A. Grundy is the club's only charter member still active in the organization.

Past presidents of the Woman's Culture club, several of whom have served second and third terms, are as follows: Mrs. A. G. Moore, the late Mrs. E. L. Houghton, Mrs. Mattie Fore, Mrs. Gates, Mrs. J. E. Montgomery, Mrs. Nora Hedrick, Mrs. J. D. Bird, the late Mrs. Quigley, Mrs. Conly Ward, the late Mrs. S. A. Bryant, the late Mrs. W. P. Dial, Mrs. D. A. Neely, Mrs. A. A. Quinn, Mrs. W. C. Dick, Mrs. J. A. Whaley, Mrs. W. L. Wheat, Mrs. C. R. Webster, Mrs. Frank Finch, Mrs. G. W. Saxauer, Mrs. Howard Finch, Mrs. D. A. Grundy, Miss Imogene King, Mrs. J. H. Norman, Mrs. R. E. Clark, Mrs. A. W. Howard, Mrs. R. L. Madden, and Mrs. Roy R. Pultz, who is now in office.

The club year 1938-1939 finds the Woman's Culture club continuing its activities with splendid success under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Pultz and the following corps of officers: vice-president, Mrs. Dean J. Morgensen; second vice-president, Mrs. C. L. Hamrick; recording secretary, Mrs. T. B. Rogers; treasurer, Mrs. C. Z. Stidham; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. A. Whaley; press reporter, Mrs. R. E. Clark; and historian, Mrs. Claud Johnson.

Mrs. Dean J. Morgensen has been elected to the presidency of the club for the year 1939-1940. Others elected to office with her are: Mrs. C. Z. Stidham, Mrs. J. A. Whaley, Mrs. Donald May, Mrs. Claud Johnson, Mrs. J. H. Norman, Mrs. T. B. Rogers, Mrs. H. T. Gregory, and Mrs. Roy R. Pultz. In addition to the officers and officers-elect, present members of the Woman's Culture club are as follows: Mrs. Park Chamberlain, Mrs. A. W. Howard, Miss Vera Gilbreath, Mrs. R. L. Madden, Mrs. G. W. Saxauer, Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. W. L. Wheat, and Mrs. D. A. Grundy.

Associate members are Mrs. John Deaver, Mrs. W. C. Davis, and Miss Edna Bryan. Honorary members are Mrs. L. B. Madden and Mrs. Conly Ward.

Oldest Club Of Clarendon Has 40 Active Members

Pathfinder club, the oldest club in Clarendon, was organized in 1911 and federated in 1912. Of the 24 women who organized the club and formed its charter membership 23 years ago, five are still active in the club, an enviable record that may be unique in the district. There are now 40 active and five associate members.

Mrs. B. E. Jenkins, president of the Pathfinder club at the present time, is among the five charter members yet on the roll. She, with Mrs. Sella Gentry, Mrs. William Grady, Mrs. W. B. Sims, and Mrs. C. A. Burton, can look back upon a full quarter century completed and another begun in which their club has contributed significantly to the cultural and civic improvement of its town.

Largest tangible gifts which the club has offered the community are in the field of books and learning. From the time of its organization until 1922, the Pathfinder club had as its special project the founding and maintenance of an adequate library in the public school.

With the school library firmly established and an safe ground for the formation of a public library. In March, 1923, the public library was opened to the public with a book reception. With a nucleus of $60 donated by the club, $31 received at the reception, and 26 volumes, the library was begun, and was given a small room in the city hall.

Mrs. C. A. Burton gave freely many hours of her time and much energy during the several early years when the library was wholly a club project, known as the Pathfinder library.

The library grew beyond all expectation and in 1929 was given by the club to the City of Clarendon. It became known as the City library.

Slowly We're Getting Up Steam In Business

Given a bare breathing-space between European crises, American business seems in a fair way to get on its feet. Reports for the first quarter show definitely that money is being made, business volume is better than in 1938.

Here are a flock of first-quarter business reports noted more or less at random from the pages of financial journals and corporation reports:

Retail sales of new cars and trucks in the first 10 days of April are 46 per cent ahead of the same period of 1938. . . the first quarter is 58 per cent ahead . . . A big tractor company reports $100,000 more profit for the first quarter of 1939 than in 1938.

A nation-wide building-supply house made $125,000 in the first quarter against a loss of a quarter-million in 1938. . . the first four railroads to report indicate a big improvement in traffic in March as compared to January and February. . . the auto tire companies unanimously report more sales than last year, and one big one which took a whacking loss in 1938 is out of the red for the first quarter of 1939. . . the biggest electrical equipment firm reports orders 5 per cent over 1938, and made correspondingly more money. . . Air line travel is 25 per cent above that of 1938's first quarter.

In fact, the aggregate profits of the first 66 industrial companies reporting for the first quarter of 1939 show combined net income of $41,799,456 as compared with $29,944,931 in 1938, an advance of almost 40 per cent.

The motor industry led the way up out of the depression of 1933; today it leads again, and waits only for followers. American Telephone, for instance, has said it will spend $320,000,000 on new plant. The Class 1 railroads have this year put in service almost 1,000 more new freight cars than last year.

Gradually the thought is dawning in the United States: The European crisis is a chronic crisis. You might almost say that Europe is now governed by crises.

The whole world can't simply sit back and hold its breath just because Europe is having a crisis. Life has to go on, and business has to go on, crisis or no crisis.

American business is, we believe, gradually realizing this, and is preparing to dig in and scratch once again.

Nobody any longer expects a phenomenal boom this year. But every sign now points to a gradual up-grade that will mark substantial progress beyond the late but not much lamented 1938.

The Nation's Press

POWER OVER MONEY (New York Times)

The report of the Republican House committee on the money question is on the whole an excellent example of what an intelligent opposition should do. It is not merely partisan document, but, with minor exceptions, a series of sound and well-considered recommendations that clearly ought to be adopted.

The Republican report recommends: 1. That the power of the President to determine the gold content of the dollar, due to expire on June 30, should not be extended. In spite of the fact that a persuasive case may be made for continuing this power, its expiration seems desirable. As long as the President has this power there will be intermittent rumors and guesses regarding what use he will make of it. If we allow the President's discretionary power to lapse we will remove from the present economic situation a major source of continued uncertainty. Even if there is substance in the argument that the value of the dollar may again have to be changed, for whatever reason, it may still be pointed out that the power to change it should not rest with one man, but with Congress. If this is not properly a function that Congress should retain for itself, it would be difficult to think of one that is.

2. That a joint Congressional committee be named to study the whole monetary question and recommend revision. Such a study could surely do no harm.

3. That the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 should be repealed. This repeal is eminently desirable. The act forcing us to buy from foreign countries at artificial prices of our own making huge quantities of silver for which we have no need, is an expensive and fantastic piece of legislation. As the Republican report points out, if we wish merely to subsidize the domestic silver industry, we can do it directly without also subsidizing foreign producers and speculators.

4. That the section of the law which gives the President the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks should be repealed. There is no good reason whatever for continuing this power. If the President does not intend to make use of it, as is sometimes said, then there is no need for him to have it. If he does intend to make use of the power, then the case for taking it away from him is overwhelming.

5. The Republican report recommends the continuation of the Stabilization Fund. This is highly desirable. It suggests that certain limitations be put upon the power of the Secretary of the Treasury in administering the fund. The particular limitations it suggests, however—that he is prohibited from using it "in any manner that might involve us in international hostilities" or "in such a way as to make exchange available for carrying on armed

Sharing The Comforts Of Life

By R. C. Hoiles

A contributor says I seem to think that labor unions are the sole trouble of our economic system. Evidently, the contributor either has not been reading the column or he has little ability or desire to understand English. I have repeatedly said that discriminatory taxes, misuse of bank credit and artificial wages and prices, are fundamental principles that have interfered with free exchanges and, thus, caused unemployment.

I have repeatedly said that labor unions which help find the employes better pay, or help the employes learn to do jobs better, were meritorious institutions. It is the limiting by labor unions of the amount and kind of work that laborers dare do and the number that dare work at certain trades and the refusal to permit others to sell their services for other than an artificial price, that I have repeatedly criticized.

Any union that helps people find their right position or helps make it possible for all people to produce more for a given amount of energy is desirable, whether it be of labor or capital.

The contributor does not seem to understand the difference between a union of men or capital to add to the wealth of the world and those that are united for the purpose of establishing arbitrary prices and limiting production. He wants to be personal. He says that I am working to add wealth for myself. I do not deny it. But I challenge anyone to tell how I can add on an open market to my own assets without first adding to the wealth of the customers who buy the product produced by the union of capital I am a part of and also adding to the wealth of the workers who help produce it. All buy the product voluntarily, because they would rather have it than the money or anything else the money would buy. All the workers work voluntarily. They believe they are being benefited. This is exactly what happens in every free enterprise transaction conducted for profit. The customer and the workers are first benefited before there is any profit. The union of capital I am a part of, must do this even if it is subtracting from its own wealth.

Then, if my union of capital must first benefit both the customers and the workers, is there anything wrong with adding to my own assets? Is it not to public interest to have all parties to a transaction benefited by having wealth added to all three parties interested—the customer, the laborer, and the capitalist or entrepreneur? And if they are not all three benefited then how can the benefits be continued to the other two groups?

If there is, then, we do not believe in free enterprise but believe in the Russian form of government.

NOT POSTERITY, BUT WE WILL PAY

Harry Scherman, who wrote "The Promises Men Live By" discusses, in the April 22 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, the question, "Is Posterity Just Around the Corner?" He says, "There is only one alarming aspect about our national debt, in my opinion—the apathy and ignorance of the American people with regard to it."

He points out that our national debt is now $460 per person, while that of England is $1000 per person. The danger in the difference, he points out, is that England is paying enough taxes, even with this enormous interest on the debt load to practically balance her budget, while we are not paying enough to balance our budget. It follows that their current operating expenses are less per capita than in the United States; that the government of England is taking about the same fraction of the national income per capita we are taking and we are within about $5,000,000,000 a year of balancing our budget and retiring the debt. So, England's operating expenses must be a great deal less per capita than ours.

Scherman's answer to the oft-repeated statement, let posterity worry about the debt, is that 10 or 12 years from now is hardly posterity. He says, "Quite a few economists are of a mind that this short period may easily witness an economic tornado arising from the debt if its uninterrupted rise is not permanently reversed."

As the author says, it is the apathy and ignorance of the American public that is the great danger about having nine consecutive years of constantly increasing deficits. They seem to think that because we have not printed billions of green backs we are not endangering our money system. But the credit route is more dangerous because it makes us more apothetical. Every thinking person knows that this eventually means a collapse of the money system; that those who have credits will have their purchasing power taken from them; that more and more people eventually will be without a means of livelihood; that savings will decrease and initiative be curtailed.

If we are selfish enough not to think of posterity, nature probably will see that the penalty comes on to us for trying to pass on to posterity the moral obligation of paying for our own mistakes.

Behind The News Of The Day

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

WASHINGTON—There's a growing belief among the men who make world affairs a life study that President Roosevelt's peace message to Hitler and Mussolini will be remembered more for the things it left unsaid, than for the frank and positive statements it contained.

Nearly a year ago The AP Feature Service revealed for the first time a changing emphasis in American foreign policy. Without altering the fundamentals on such things as entanglements, the Roosevelt administration was slowly building up a new foreign relations picture.

The picture shifted slowly to include more of a show of backbone and also a new element of mystery. The change was not publicly and openly discussed then, nor is it now.

At that time it was disclosed in "What It Means" that the administration policy was based on the principle of keeping our powder dry, and letting nobody know when, or if, it would be used. The powder, of course, is our big Navy.

FLEET ANGLE ENTERS IN? But you don't find that new element in the President's peace message. You have to read into the peace appeal the order—issued the same day—for the main fleet to move back into the Pacific.

If there is any undercover evidence that the Japanese are up to their old trick of seizing upon trouble in the western world to increase their power in the Pacific, the fact remains that nothing was said about Japan in the fleet order. Therefore, that order presents to the world a minor mystery. The world can draw its own conclusions, but also it must get at the same time the picture of a stern Uncle Sam, speaking for peace, but keeping his six-shooter at the ready.

Couple that picture with the President's statement that the appeal from America was made in strength, not weakness, and you find that show of backbone appearing in our new foreign policy. No threats, no bluster; just backbone.

Why did the President consider it necessary to address the dictators? He outlined many reasons in his message to them, but he didn't tell them in so many words that he was carrying out principles he has already discussed with the American people.

HIS JANUARY STAND He told the nation in January that he considered a

NOW, HERE'S A REAL PROBLEM

Around Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON NEA Service Staff Correspondent HOLLYWOOD, May 3.—Watching LeRoy Prinz skipping about as he teaches some kids the steps in a vaudeville routine for "The Star Maker," you'd never guess that the short, stocky dance director is the toughest guy in Hollywood.

If he isn't there's nobody who has successfully disputed the title, although quite a few have tried. Just lately he broke some more bones in his right hand by unlimbering his Sunday punch.

Prinz has been fighting and dancing ever since he ran away from home in St. Joseph, Mo., at the age of 15. After going to sea for a while, he fought in the Foreign Legion, in the air above France, and briefly in Mexico and Nicaragua.

He beat up a Havana politician for molesting some entertainers and landed in a Cuban prison for his chivalry. For the same reason he walloped a Chicago gangster and later was so badly mauled by the gang that they left him for dead.

In Hollywood he has taught some painful lessons to various offensive characters. Once, at the door of the Trocadero, he routed three hired muscle-men and almost ruined one of them.

Prinz Duel No Movie Fake A few years ago Prinz fought the only formal duel ever staged here. That was with an attaché of the German consulate, and it grew out of some remarks which Prinz resented.

They fought with broadswords in a barn on the ranch of a famous director, and Prinz was slashed 15 times before he finally laid open the face of his opponent so that he couldn't continue.

The district attorney had heard about plans for the duel and had promised prosecution if it happened. So on the way home that night the dance director deliberately ran his car into a telephone pole and smashed the windshield with a rock.

When police came to his home he showed them the damaged car and blandly insisted that his wounds had been caused by flying glass. The German had been spirited out of town, and soon left the country, so he didn't testify.

Prinz's latest encounter seems to have been rather one-sided. He charges that a man attempted to molest his 11-year-old daughter and another girl. But before any formal charges were made, Prinz hauled the larger man out of a house, booted him into the back

The Family Doctor

Dr. Morris Fishbein In the wards of a large city hospital, some 26,000 people come every year with emotional and mental disturbances which make them noisy, excited and difficult to handle. Doctors call these people disturbed people.

When these people come into the hospital, it is frequently found that, as a result of their illness, or perhaps as part of their mental disturbance, they have failed to get sufficient water in the body. Sometimes they are suffering also with fever which tends to make more water necessary.

The signs of lack of fluid in the body are dryness of the lips, tongue and skin; a small amount of fluid passed from the kidneys, and even a lessened amount of saliva.

Associated with the lack of water there is loss of mineral salts. Most of the salt missing in such a case is ordinarily sodium chloride or common salt.

Recently investigators made a special study of patients who were disturbed in association with alcoholism.

In a typical case, a man with delirium tremens who was seeing all sorts of strange animals and hearing all sorts of peculiar voices had lost entire sense of time and place. He was given sedatives to quiet him and, at the same time, capsules containing common salt.

Previously, a great deal of fluid had been placed in his body in the form of regular injections of sugar solutions. After 24 hours of treatment, he became so quiet that he could be transferred to the ordinary ward for convalescent patients.

After some preliminary studies of this type, it was determined to make a regular practice of giving some salt to these people who had lost water from the body. The method was tried on many patients of nervous disturbance or insanity.

Sometimes the salt was given by mouth in capsule form; in other instances, it was injected into the veins in the form of a salt solution.

In general, it was found that the use of fluids and salt brought about a lowering of the death rate of the excited and disturbed patients with nervous and mental disease, and tended also to shorten the length of time of the excitement.

The method may sound exceedingly simple. Of course, it is not the kind of treatment that people will try on either themselves or any member of their family.

It is a form of treatment which must be administered by an expert after he thoroughly understands the nature of the patient who is to be treated.

democracy to be charged with the duty of protesting acts of aggression against sister nations. He added: "The mere fact that we decline to intervene with arms to prevent acts of aggression does not mean that we must act as if there were no aggression at all. Words may be futile, but war is not the only means of commanding a decent respect for the opinions of mankind. There are many methods short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words, of bringing home to AGGRESSOR GOVERNMENTS THE AGGREGATE SENTIMENT OF our own people."

Now we're getting to "the kernel of the thing." Note the President said "aggressor governments," not "aggressor nations." Could he now be appealing to the peace-loving elements of the German Reich and the Kingdom of Italy, even though he addressed the heads of those nations?

And does he consider his message to convey the "aggregate sentiment" of the American nation? He didn't say, but the experts seem to lean to the belief that Hitler believes the President was going over his head, in a manner of speaking, and appealing to the German people. Else why did the Fuehrer summon his personal sounding board—the Reichstag, to make his reply?

Old-Time Literaries In Texas Preceded Interscholastic League

(By The Associated Press)

When great-grandma climbed in to the wagon and went to hear Grand-Uncle Pike declaim: "Why dost thou faint, thou maiden fair?" at Harmony Hill school house, she helped build Texas as surely as great-grandpap helped found the political destinies of the erstwhile republic at San Jacinto. For those early Texans established a homely foundation for Lone Star culture through their "literaries."

Those literaries paid dividends, for their progeny supplied the civil leaders in the days when oratory was a corollary of statesmanship. They still bear fruit in the medium of the school state school interscholastic league contests, the largest "school literary" in the nation, which recently completed the semi-final rounds in 32 districts and eight regions. More than 5,000 while public schools representing approximately 75 per cent of the state's 1,078,028 school children competed for honors in public speaking, reading, writing, and kindred subjects.

This descendant of the frontier "literary," glorified and expanded to undreamed heights, will climax its twenty-ninth annual program when the finals are held at the University of Texas May 4, 5, and 6.

What is now known as the interscholastic league was organized in December, 1910, at the State Teachers' meeting at Abilene. It has been organized each year since by a bureau of extension division of the University of Texas.

The first year the league's activities were confined to debates among the high schools affiliated with the university. The next year, contests in declamation were added and membership was opened to all schools below college rank. Later, essay writing, athletics, music memory, typewriting, art, the 3-R's were added. The program was never static, the events depending upon their popularity with Texas educators and students.

Today, the list of events in the Austin finals, offers competition in one-act plays, journalism, track and field, rural pentathlon, tennis, ready writing (essay), debate, extemporaneous speech, declamation, typewriting, shorthand, and 3-R's.

All events are open to both boys and girls except track and field and the rural pentathlon. In most events, however, each sex competes with itself. Usually, schools are divided into classes according to enrollment so that their representatives will meet representatives of other schools approximately of the same size. To make further distinction, city and rural divisions are made when it has been found that country children will have different aspects on the subject-matter than will city children. And in events which ward or grammar school children compete, grade students appear in one group and high school students in another.

Early in the school year most schools planning to enter competition begin laying their campaigns for selecting representatives. Special teachers usually are assigned to coach individual events and in some schools, such as Abilene high, designated class periods are devoted each day to working on certain contests.

When the date for selecting definite entries for individual schools arrives, intra-school contests are held. Winners then appear in the state finals, usually held late in March. Those who win the county events are entitled to enter the district meets during the first two weeks in April.

By this time, survivors have been narrowed to competitors of 32 districts, who gather at eight points about the state for the regional contests. Winners of regional events enter the Austin finals. Those who win their events in the finals receive trophies for their schools, medals or certificates for themselves.

Spelling is included—but the "A to Zymurgy" teams complete their work in the city or country-wide contests along with several other events—most of which are limited to ward or grammar school children.

Spellers are given a long list of difficult words. If they write, per-act papers they receive special recognition from the university in the form of certificates; but they compete no further than their first contest.

Many counties hold contests for grade school students in choral singing, spelling, and plain writing, ready writing, story-telling, music, and picture memory, and number sense. The latter is nothing more than a test in solving arithmetic problems. Music and picture memory involve identification of music and art classics. Story-telling tests the ability of the youngster to read a previously unidentified story and then tell it to an audience. The other contests are self-explanatory.

Winners in these special "county events" receive certificates or similar awards from the state contest directors.

Those who follow high school sports know that the interscholastic league also governs Texas high school basketball and football. Since these take place earlier in the school year they are not considered portions of the annual spring program.

Today's league motto is "Golden ingenuity puerilis calor, industria," which is working English means "The spur to industry, the whetstone of talent."

Book A Day

This anecdote is from "Vienna," Henry Dwight Sedgwick's absorbing "biography of a bygone city" (Bobbs-Merrill; $3.75). Sedgwick devotes part of his book to some of the great musicians of the Austrian capital.

On Oct. 15, 1844, a Sunday, it was announced on the billboards and in the newspapers that on Tuesday, the 15th, Johann Strauss, the son, would make his first appearance with an orchestra at Schombrunn in Hietzing, opposite the Schonbrunn Park.

A great crowd attended, swarming out of the old inner city, still grided by its ancient walls, and across the park to the dim light of the oil lamps in the lamp posts; half of them partisans of old Strauss, who had been unwilling that his son should get a license to conduct an orchestra, and half of them partisans of the daring young man.

A slim youthful figure, with quick, nervous movements, and dark, flashing eyes, very black hair, that fell fantastically over his forehead, and a budding moustache on his upper lip, came forward and mounted the orchestra stand. There was breathless silence.

The overture presented nothing special, next came the conductor's own waltz, "Gustawwerber" (counting favor), and was encored four times. Then a polka, met with resounding applause, and was called for three times, followed by a quadrille, also stormily applauded.

The last piece was Johann's waltz, "Singgedichte," and the public went crazy; they clapped, they whooped, and called for it again and again—three, four, five, six times and would have had it played all night.

Johann II had succeeded to the throne of Johann I.

Then the young man rose once again on the conductor's stand and played the "Lorelei-Rhein-Klänge," composed by his father. At this mark of respect for the father, who had virtually disowned him and put every obstacle in his way, the partisans of the father joined the partisans of the son, and all plunged into a delirium of applause and approval. All Vienna recognized that it was a notable occasion.

STAMP NEWS

DESCRIPTION of the U. S. baseball commemorative has been officially announced by Postmaster General James A. Farley. The stamp will be placed on first-day sale June 12 at Cooperstown, N. Y., where baseball is said to have originated 100 years ago.

The stamp will be a 3-cent value, purple and identical in size with the current special delivery stamp, arranged horizontally. The central motif will depict a sandlot baseball game between two boys' teams, with the pitcher about to deliver the ball as he watches a runner on first base. To the left of the central design will be crossed bats, with a glove and ball enclosed within a wreath.

In the background will be shown a church with steeple, and a schoolhouse with an American flag flying from the playground flagpole.

Further details about first-day cover arrangements will be announced by the Post Office Department later.

Published by the American Air Mail Society, Albion, Pa., the 1940 edition of the "American Airmail Catalogue" is off the press. It contains 720 pages, 78 maps, more than 1,100 illustrations. It is the first volume of the kind to be issued since 1934, was compiled by some 50 experts in the field of philately.

Sections include U. S. air mail stamps, pioneer flights, U. S. territories and insular possessions, trans-oceanic record flights, foreign pioneer flights, U. S. souvenir, historical flights, U. S. collect air mail, to mention only a few.

The centenary of the postage stamp in 1940 will be marked by England with a series of four values. It has been announced. Designs have been invited from 20 prominent artists. Other nations are expected to issue commemorative stamps for the same reason, perhaps making 1940 the biggest stamp year in history.

Pampa Beats Lubbock 6-3 With Ex-Hubber Pitcher

LUBBOCK, May 3—Frank Grabel, young right hander recently released by Lubbock, turned in a three-hit pitching performance for the Pampa Oilers for eight innings, then stifled a ninth inning Hubber rally to provide a 6-3 West Texas-New Mexico League victory for the league newcomers here yesterday afternoon.

The Oilers were able to collect only six blows off Clovis Bridwell, holdover Hubber pitcher, at least three of them of the fluky variety, and needed the help of four Lubbock errors, all of them at third base, to win the game and split series.

Field scores and hitless for three innings, after Lubbock had tallied in the first and second, Pampa registered in the fourth on Gordon Nell's double and Taylor's error. Two came in for a Pampa lead in the fifth, Bob Bailey's triple and Grover Seitz' angle doing the damage.

Although McCarthy, one of the most astute of managers, must have realized almost from the first day of training that Gehrig wouldn't make the grade, he refused to admit it. It is doubtful Lou would be out of there now if he had left the decision to McCarthy. His voluntary retirement was a noble gesture on the big fellow's part.

The fans at Yankee stadium never deserted their long-time hero. While he was making only four hits in eight games since the season opened, they stayed with him. There was a big cheer for him every time he came to bat, and he said his fan mail had been greater than at any time in his career.

There is irony in the fact that Lou had to break his remarkable string while comparatively sound of wind and limb. Injuries never could keep him from the lineup. It took the year to get him.

Why do people make such a fuss about a fellow sticking to a good, steady job? he once asked. "I like to play baseball and the Yankees seem to want me in there, so why shouldn't I play every day?"

Though Babe Dahlgren made a brilliant start as Gehrig's successor yesterday, it is probable the "Iron Horse" will be back in the off and on as the season stretches out and the weather warms up.

Lou had set a record that baseball students doubt ever will be approached. With that off his mind he should play better ball.

Gehrig Should Play Better Now That Pressure Is Off

By GAYLE TALBOT.

NEW YORK, May 3 (AP)—Lou Gehrig, the pressure off at last, sits on the Yankee bench for the first time in nearly 14 years and watches another, younger man play first base for the three-time world champions.

It must have been a cruelly hard decision for the old "Iron Horse" to make, when he told Manager Joe McCarthy he was ready to call it a career after 2,130 consecutive games. But you can bet they both are happier today than they have been any time this spring.

There had been a painful ordeal for both men, fading player and sentimental, grateful manager, from the day the Yankees started training in St. Petersburg. Gehrig, one of the greatest stars the game has known, wanted to keep his record intact for one more season.

He tried with a fearful intensity to get the bounce back in his 35-year-old legs and to regain the batting eye that for 13 years drove in more than 100 runs each season and five times led the American league in that vital department.

But even in the Florida sun it was all too evident Lou finally had shot both barrels. And the manager, with the dugout, and his team didn't know what to say to him. They were pulling for him, but ball players never try to offer sympathy to a mate who is in a slump.

Although McCarthy, one of the most astute of managers, must have realized almost from the first day of training that Gehrig wouldn't make the grade, he refused to admit it. It is doubtful Lou would be out of there now if he had left the decision to McCarthy. His voluntary retirement was a noble gesture on the big fellow's part.

Galewood Will Try To Defeat Champ Hurdler

By OLEN W. CLEMENTS. HOUSTON, May 3 (AP)—Speedy Boyce Galewood of the University of Texas who has finished at the heels of fleet Freddie Wolcott if the Rice Institute Owls in several races, tomorrow will get another chance to try to beat the nation's No. 1 hurdler in a triangular track meet.

Their duel over the high and low hurdles and in the 100-yard dash could result in some new marks for the distances because both are in top running condition now that Galewood's injured leg is sound again.

Wolcott is hopeful of bettering Forrest Towns' world record of 13.7 seconds for the high hurdles.

In the 100-yard dash the two sprinters will have to reckon with Texas A. & M.'s Ed (Red) Cecil, flashy dash man who may outrun both of them.

The three-way meet between Texas, Rice, and Texas A. & M. will have no bearing on the Southwest conference meet at College Station May 12 and 13 but the winner of tomorrow's meet could easily duplicate the feat next week.

Rice, star half-miler, and Calvin Bell, star half-miler, and a crack mile relay team that won the heat in the Drake relays a week ago, will have to take practically all the races to win because the South Texans are notably weak in field events.

Rice probably will have to enter the 220-yard dash minus services of durable E. Y. Streakley, who has pulled a leg muscle and may be unable to compete.

Texas in Beaufry Bryan has one of the nation's top pole vaulters. He set a mark of 14 feet and two inches in the Kansas relays last week.

DETROIT, May 3 (AP)—With Lou Gehrig benched at his own request, the Yankees dabbed five Detroit pitchers for 17 hits, including four home runs, to rout the Tigers, 22 to 2, yesterday. Babe Dahlgren, who replaced Gehrig, first chopped in with a double and a homer while Red Ruffing set down Detroit with seven hits.

SERIAL STORY BORDER ADVENTURE

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Betty has no chance to slip away, but she gets a white sheet on the hillside and signals. The officers see them next morning the sheets are still up. "Sure is gone!"

CHAPTER XXIII

WHEN 10 o'clock and then 11 passed and the time slipped emphatically on toward noon, Betty Mary began to realize that she had acted foolishly when she had tied three sheets to scrubby trees hoping rescuers might see them. Surely, if help were coming it would have come long since, she reasoned.

So despair engulfed her, there in the Barro kitchen. She had done more manual labor in the past 18 hours than she had done in a whole year before. She had washed countless pieces of china and silverware after leaving the laundry. She had peeled and chopped onions, had crushed dried peppers that stung her nostrils and eyes, had stirred a great vat of greasy chili that became appetizing as fatigue assailed her. The fat cook, impersonal slave driver, saw to it that she worked; but as long as she kept industrious he let her strictly alone.

At 11:40 she stepped to a kitchen window for a breath of fresh air and saw a bewhiskered old Mexican man drive up in a creaky cart pulled by two burros. He stopped near the kitchen and began unloading firewood. One of Barro's armed guards cursed him for no reason whatever, but the humble old man just bowed his head, crossed himself and said nothing. Betty Mary felt sorry for him.

PRESENTLY a dispirited automobile chugged up to the kitchen door. Betty Mary was a chance to escape. Betty Mary went out to see it. In the car, a sort of covered trash, was a butchered beef, the great slabs of meat still warm from animal heat. The fat cook stepped to the door. "What is this?" he demanded of the driver, belligerently.

"La carne," a swarthy, little man whined. "Is the meat ordered from Porjes Gomez. Sonor Barro order Porjes to send meat, because he cannot pay his debt in money."

"Ami!" growled the cook. "Bring in. You, muchacha, help him."

This last command was addressed to Betty Mary, who was standing nearby.

Instantly she recoiled from touching a piece of raw beef weighing half as much as she. But she dared not refuse. The Mexican climbed up under the frayed canvas roof of the truck and turned with a hunk of rib meat to face Betty Mary. He saw at once that no one else was near.

"Ps-s-s-st!" he suddenly hissed a low warning, then whispered, "Don't be alarmed, Betty Mary! Are you all right?"

"OH!" Betty half screamed the exclamation. The man was Hope Kildare!

"Take this meat, woman!" he bawled at her then, in Spanish. "You hear what the cook say! What you think you are, the grand lady, ha-ha?"

He leaned toward her managing to squeeze her wrist as she took the meat from his hands. By sheer force of will then she controlled herself, swallowing hard, and staring at him. But then she took her burden and went inside.

When she came back for more of the beef a quick glance showed Hope that nobody from the house was observing them. Kitchen workers were inside several feet away, and guards loitered out of hearing. Betty and Hope got no more chance to talk for the moment, however, because the bewhiskered old wood hauler shuffled up just then.

"Is there any garbage or old trash and such I can take away, senorita y senor?" he asked of them, in Spanish.

Hope had been gripping Betty Mary's wrist again and felt her response now, a tightening of her own muscles.

"Get the devil out of here and haul your wood, old man!" Hope ordered aloud. Then he whispered to Betty, "It's Sherry! You know?"

"Oh! Oh Sherry! I could—just kiss you!" She was whispering excitedly, about to sob. "You—came! You, and Hope, are such—"

"Yeah, sure. But for Pete's sake—"

She forced herself to enter the set now, and spoke aloud in Spanish. "I will see if you can have the trash. Somebody must haul it away."

SHE asked the cook about it and he told her irritably to do what she pleased with it. A pile of empty packing boxes, papers, legs, cans and general kitchen rubbish had collected out back.

but he was too busy, with Luis Barro's greatly increased household with its alien guests, to pay any attention to trash now.

Brusquely, he waved her aside. There in broad daylight, the chance of her slipping into the truck unobserved was, of course, slight. Women servants were passing from laundry to the main house, from kitchen to store rooms. Barro's armed guards were naturally observant. Sheridan realized that they had to be extremely clever, and lucky as well.

He realized that he and Hope had already been lucky even to reach Betty Mary as easily as they had.

The big officer, well disguised behind his woodcutter outfit and his false beard, led Hope and Betty Mary in quick whispered consultation. They agreed at once; his plan at least offered a possibility.

He, the "butcher," therefore got ostentatiously into his truck, started the motor, allowed the machine to slip apparently out of control about 50 yards down the roadway, and crash into a post.

The post cracked. The resultant commotion caused all the guards to gather there for a few minutes, and attracted the eyes of all persons outside. Hope did a lot of Spanish cursing and grumbling, backed his truck off, got out to inspect it and the post, got back behind the steering wheel grumbling anew about his damaged axle and fender.

All told, this little disturbance back of the Barro house took perhaps a quarter of an hour. Fifteen or 20 people had come to look curiously on, some to grin at the butcher's discomfiture. Only the old woodcutter had not come; minding his own business he had thrown off his firewood, reloaded with garbage and trash, and was riding away behind his small-like burros. He pulled out of the road to go around the butcher's truck, removing his hat respectfully. But nobody noticed him.

When the truck started off again, everyone drifted back to their respective duties. Another quarter hour passed and the cook ordered his staff to serve the midday meal. For 30 minutes or more the women and men helpers were bustling with activity.

Some time after 1 o'clock the rush was over, and the kitchen staff itself was allowed to eat. Then it was that the cook relaxed, wiped his forehead and sat down before a heaping plate of food. He paused first a few seconds to eye his staff.

"Como!" he suddenly barked. "That gringo woman—where is she?"

Nobody answered. Nobody. (To Be Continued)

More Home Loans Made To Texans

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 3.—More home loans were made to Texas home-owners in March by the 120 insured savings and loan associations in the state than in any other single month since 1932. Figures taken from the monthly report of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock show that loans aggregating $2,265,000 were made to 11,117 borrowers by the Texas associations during the past month. March was the second consecutive month in which the volume of lending exceeded $2,000,000 in a 30-day period, establishing a new record for the state.

The compilation includes the home financing activities of the Security Federal Savings and Loan association by which the Pampa area is served.

The figures for March reflected a gain of $300,000 over those for the same month a year ago. Approximately half of the amount loaned was used to assist Texans in the construction of new homes, while $600,000 was applied by borrowers towards the purchase of existing dwellings.

One Way To Avoid Taking Parking Ticket To Judge

BROOKLINE, Mass., May 3.—"I received a tag for parking overtime," a woman's voice reported over the telephone to Patrolman Stephen Tomasi. "Am I supposed to bring it to the station in person?" "Yes, Ma'am, you must. Those tags cannot be mailed." "Well, said the lady, 'I'd like to bring it back—only I have scarlet fever.' "Mail it, Madam, mail it!"

County Clerk Will Check Gray Population For Census Bureau

Uncle Sam has started preparations for the counting of noses in Gray county.

County Clerk Charlie Thut Saturday received from C. E. Batschelet, geographer, United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, a letter and a package containing a map and a tabulated list of Gray county population by precincts for 1930, 1920, and 1910.

The letter, sent from Washington and dated April 20, asked the county clerk to check the map and make any corrections necessary to bring it up to date.

Mr. Thut was also requested to check the population list and add any new county divisions, giving year, month, and day of formation, and the same information on any new incorporated cities, towns, or villages.

The county clerk was asked to strike out names of any county divisions or municipalities that had been abolished.

Over a score of items are shown on the map received here. The map indicates, among other items, the location of aero beacon lights, airports, oil and gas wells, cattleguards, golf courses, garbage dumps, athletic fields, hospitals, churches, and schools.

These agencies cooperated in the preparation of the map: the Texas Highway department, United States Department of Agriculture-Bureau of Public Roads, and the Texas Highway Planning survey. Insets on the map show close-ups of Kingsmill, Coltexo, Bowers City, LePors, Laketon, Alannred, Texas Elf company settlement.

Table with 3 columns: Location, 1930, 1920, 1910. Rows include Gray county, Precinct 1, LePors town, Precinct 2, Pampa city, Precinct 3, Precinct 4, Precinct 5, McLean.
