Sharing The Comforts Of Life

By R. C. Hoiles

FORCE, THE SIGN OF WEAKNESS
It seems that the desire to use force invariably is associated with weakness.

And it is natural that the inefficient person who does not attract others, because of his inability to render service, should be the one who desires to use some form of force to promote his own importance, or recognition.

As outstanding illustrations of this principle, look at Jesus Christ, as compared with Stalin and Hitler. Jesus was a man who did not advocate coercion or force, but was willing to use his time and energy to enlighten people rather than to coerce them.

And this same rule applies in this country. Those people who are advocating more and more government control and less and less of the rights of an individual to free enterprise, are the ones who have little ability to do things themselves.

Truly government regulation, or physical force, is a sign of weakness.

RECOGNIZING IMPORTANT EVILS

I attended church the other day to listen to a sermon on not worrying about dictators.

As an illustration of the crimes we are permitting in this State, he mentioned an attempt to legalize dog racing and touched on the question of enforcing prohibition.

He never said a word about the real crimes that are rapidly leading us into the same condition that is happening in Germany.

It is this infringement on the Christian rights of an individual that is rapidly leading us to the very evils the speaker recognized under the dictators.

THE NATION'S PRESS

FOLLOW ME OR ELSE
(Daily Oklahoman)

There is a resurgence of the spirit of the past summer purge in Mr. Roosevelt's demand that democrats manifest an unvarying loyalty or withdraw to some other party.

Admittedly the president is not calling for loyalty to the platform on which he was first elected.

He is not demanding loyalty to the pledge to cut government expenditures 25 percent.

The president's plea is not for loyalty to his party's historic position on the issue of states rights.

It is not loyalty to party nominations that the president calls for.

Behind The News Of The Day

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—This job of being President of the United States involves an immense amount of eye-strain aside from the task of reading thousands of words daily.

He spoke in the "Hall of the Americas," a costly room built with Carnegie money in which the ambassadors of the Americas meet at times.

To one side is a rack supporting the 22 flags of the American nations in one end of the room for this occasion was a double decker stage crowded with news film cameras.

Around Hollywood

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The not-so-Ancient Order of Halt Callers today will hear an address from Mansfield, Ohio, where D. W. takes the platform to take the movies over the coals.

Lots of things about the movies get my goat. For instance, those gosh-awful trailers.

Then there's too much bad English on the screen. I've heard a person who was supposed to be educated say "It's me!" instead of "It's I" when knocking on a door.

"And how silly it is when the hero, or someone else, gets seriously injured then a short time later kicks his weight in wildcats—without even 'favoring' his injury.

"I'm tired of seeing the casts in furs to their eyes, and snow and ice all around, but never a bit of vapor coming from their noses or mouths.

"I'm tired of seeing old ladies or housewives of another century with perfectly manicured nails.

"I've known quite a few people and have never heard anyone yell 'Operator! Operator!' into the 'phone. They always wait until asked, then give the number.

"I wish the telephone would keep on ringing until someone answers it. It rings a time or two, then waits until the screen person answers."

"(Nice, considerable telephones we have in the movies!)"

"D. W. isn't through yet. She goes on: 'We know many of the players are getting up in years, but I think we rather like to be fooled just a little. No, I think we like reality, but want it as pretty as possible.'"

"With the truly wonderful jobs of make-up done sometimes, I think Hollywood should hang its head in

People You Know

By Archer Fullingim

About 7,000 people left the Borger Mother's Day celebration last night singing the praises of Reno Stinson, the principal speaker.

The many Pampanians in the audience were certainly proud of Reno. His speech was fine, and the poem he read was particularly impressive.

Every body agrees that Mother's Day program was one of the finest things ever put on in this country.

All her life this woman had an aversion to telling her age, and only a few knew how old she was.

One of the chief attractions at the polo game yesterday was the beautiful Palomino stallion which was ridden by one of three officials.

The golden bronze horse with a pure white mane and tail, is owned by Mr. Ehnis of Borger, who brought the magnificent animal to Pampa in a trailer.

The horse is unusually well-trained, and the 'back eyes' it produces, which see someone get socked on the jaw or chin then turn up with lamp-black smeared all around his wide-open eye!"

After all this, it's heartless of me to add another charge against Hollywood's account—but I wonder if others are sick and tired of those ghastly reunions in the fadeouts.

MacDonald and Eddy died in "May-time" but their ghosts walked thru the blossoming orchards. Astaire in "The Castles" crashes to death, but Ginger Rogers sees his "ghost" dancing to the fadeout.

Even so a piece as "Wuthering Heights" used this hackneyed stunt to "unite" the shades of Oberon and Oliver. Enough!

TELLS HOW CZECH NATION DIED

The circumstantial story of the death of a nation, by one who stood there and saw it die, is told in "We Shall Live Again."

What a nightmare! Here was a people in servitude for 300 years; then history beckoned to them with their courage and they won back their independence.

Despite wrongs and blunders which they had never concealed, they had achieved under a system of freedom a pleasurable standard of living such as few people in Europe enjoyed.

Then Power Politics loosened up on these people one attack after another. Then came Runciman, Benches, Godseberg, with their best friends pushing them deeper and deeper into a policy of self-annihilation.

(This is the second of three articles in which Dr. Fishbein discusses advances reported at the American Medical Association convention.)

Vitamins held the stage at the recent meeting of the American Medical Association.

A new test was described for determining whether the person who was jaundiced needs vitamin K.

In this country people seldom go on to that stage but do have minor symptoms affecting the nervous system which are definitely related to a deficiency of vitamin B1.

Vitamin K which has now been shown to be associated especially with hemorrhage when there is jaundice was considered by investigators from the University of Iowa and from the University of Minnesota.

It has been found that jaundiced patients who have bleeding after operations on the gall bladder invariably have an insufficient amount of substances in their blood necessary to bring about coagulation.

The giving of vitamin K will prevent this condition. Most of the patients in a large surgical clinic are now given vitamin K in bile salts before operations on the gall bladder and a good many secondary reactions are prevented.

STAMP NEWS

MAKING a last-minute surprise authorization, Postmaster General James A. Farley has announced issuance of a 30-cent airmail stamp to be used with the inauguration of trans-Atlantic airmail service "in the near future."

Earlier, it was believed no such stamp would be issued at this time because adequate airmail values were already available for the first flights.

The special airmail stamp will conform in size and general design with the current six-cent airmail value of 1934 except for the denomination designation of 30 cents and the added inscription "Trans-Atlantic."

Further details as to color, date and place of first-day sale will be announced shortly by the Post Office Department.

For the benefit of stamp collectors desiring first-flight covers on the initial westbound flight when trans-Atlantic service is inaugurated, Pan American Airways company, 135 East 43rd street, New York City, will accept consignments of covers with remittances in money order or cash.

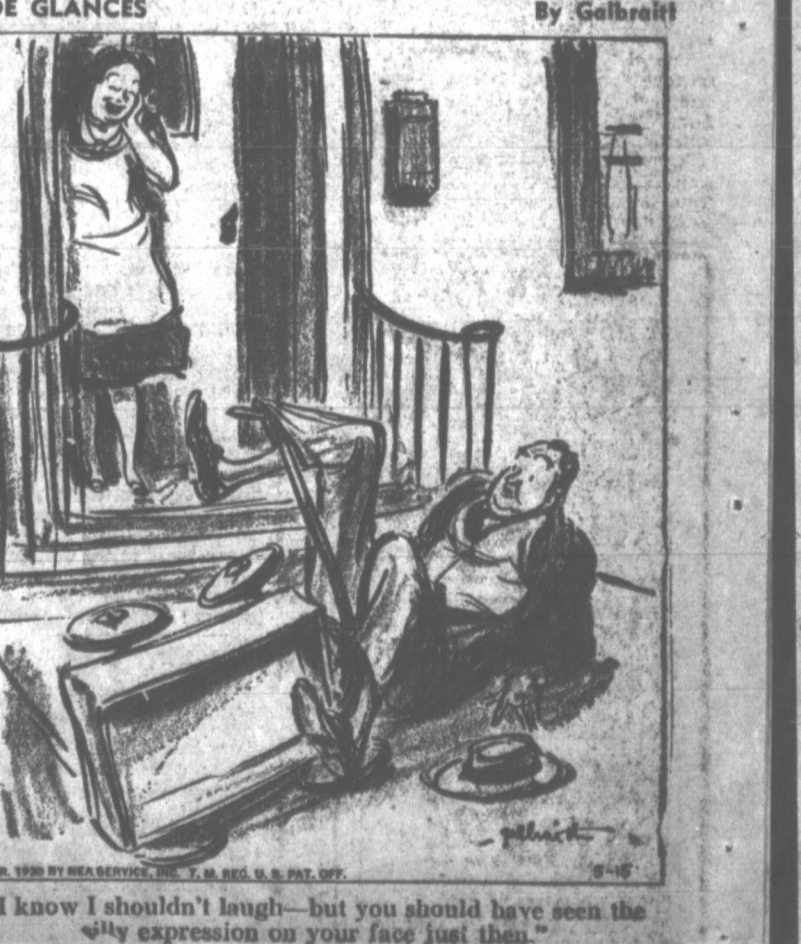

All such covers should be forwarded in time to reach New York by May 16.

Postmaster General James A. Farley has announced that changes for these covers handled by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

American will run as follows: Azores to Lisbon, 25 cents; Azores to Marseille, 30 cents; Azores to New York, 47 cents; Lisbon to Marseille, 30 cents; Lisbon to Azores, 25 cents; Lisbon to New York, 47 cents; Marseille to Lisbon, 30 cents; Marseille to New York, 47 cents.

Each cover should be plainly marked to indicate service desired. Cachets will be applied to all covers dispatched from the Azores, Lisbon and Marseille.

Covers to be dispatched from New York should be sent to the postmaster there at the 30-cent per half ounce U. S. rate.

7,000 Attend Mother's Day Celebration

Pampans joined persons from other cities over the plains in a union vesper Mothers' Day service, held at 7 o'clock Sunday night in a canyon five miles north of Borger.

A group of mothers, and children, gave the program, "The Seven Cycles of Motherhood," on a platform equipped with spotlights and a public address system.

Although 2,500 cars transported persons to the service, still there was a constant stream of cars from the bridge to the canyon, not a single accident had been reported up to 11 o'clock Sunday night.

It is planned to make the Mothers' Day service an annual event. The service was given by the pastors, churches, and civic groups of Borger and Phillips.

Assisting in the service were Rev. J. A. Thomas of Borger, Rev. J. N. Hunt of Borger, Rev. H. J. West of Phillips, Dr. C. C. Grimes of Amarillo, Mayor L. M. Davis of Borger, and Fritz Ostrom of Phillips.

Special tributes of flowers provided by Borger florists were presented to the following: Mrs. Lena Brammer, Tulsa, Okla., 66 years old, the oldest mother at the service.

Investigators and attorneys already are gathering evidence in a number of cities. Dies said statements had been obtained from Earl Browder, leader of the communist party, and Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American Bund.

Emphasizing his was expressing his own views and not those of his committee, which still must pass on matters of procedure and policy, the chairman said Kuhn and Browder probably would be brought before the committee in open session for questioning.

Although the resolution which continued the inquiry directed the committee to seek aid of government departments, Dies said only the Veteran's administration had cooperated. It has offered the services of one investigator.

Both legislators were said to have advised the President previously that business tax revision was certain to be undertaken at this session. Advocates of revision declare two factors are working to their advantage.

Indian Girl In Peru, Five Years Old, Gives Birth To 5-Pound Boy

LIMA, Peru, May 15 (AP)—An Indian girl said by physicians to be five years old has given birth to a six-pound baby at the Lima maternity hospital.

The baby, a boy, was delivered in a 35-minute Caesarean operation yesterday morning. The infant was said to be well-formed and today both the child and mother were reported by the hospital to be in excellent condition.

The Caesarean was performed by Dr. Gerardo Lozada and Dr. Alejandro Bustillo and among 60 spectators was a commission of physicians preparing a report on the amazing case of precocious motherhood.

The child mother, Lina Medina, was born Sept. 23, 1934, according to her parents, and that is the date on her birth certificate.

But Dr. Hippolito Larrabure, chief surgeon and director of the Lima maternity hospital, said her birth certificate apparently was in error because Lina still has her milk teeth and the molars are just emerging.

Dr. Larrabure believed this calculation was more reliable than the birth certificate which would make her four years, seven months and three weeks old.

The girl is one of the children of an Indian farming family living near Pisco, a cotton port south of Lima.

A few weeks ago her mother brought her into the hospital at Pisco for examination, believing the child had an abdominal tumor. Dr. Lozada, one of the attending physicians at yesterday's operation, found her to be pregnant.

Dr. Larrabure said it had been impossible to learn who had consulted the little girl.

SERIAL STORY

DATE WITH DANGER

BY HELEN WORDEN

Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday's lead prepared to go on the French story. Mary French, says she saw the police...

CHAPTER IV

MARY'S adventure began when she stepped out of the telephone booth earlier that evening. The Duke was talking with Nick Hart...

Mary slipped a $5 bill into the maid's hand. "I want to wait for Miss French."

"No, Miss Franklin." She lowered her voice. "But I'd just to be down on that couch last evening."

"Who took her home?" "Mr. Martin himself."

As Mary hurried down the stairs, the Duke tapped Nick on the arm. "Follow her."

After the babble of the Dove, the silence of the street was soothing to Mary.

The club doorman leaned sleepily against an iron railing. Opposite was a black roadster which Mary recognized as the Duke's own car.

Third avenue, a policeman stood by an empty shop window, swinging his night stick.

In the soft, half-light of a rain-veiled city the prosaic scene was touched with mystery.

"The New York Gazette, and don't slow up because I'm a woman."

She glanced out the rear window. Through the rain she could barely distinguish the shadowy lines of the black roadster.

A door banged shut. There was the sound of feet on the stairs.

Turning, Mary saw Nick Hart. Mary took a step toward the phone. He lunged at her.

"Before you make that call, give me these pictures," he spoke ominously, reaching, as he pushed Mary back into the chair.

She struggled. He caught her throat with his right hand. "Don't you know any better than to fight me?"

Gasping, she sank down as his fingers closed about her neck. He was strong and powerful.

At 40th and Madison avenue, Mary stepped breathlessly into another cab. "Forty-five E. 70th street," she said to the driver.

THE house in front of which he eventually stopped was an exact copy of a French chateau at Fontainebleau.

again. There was the sound of shuffling feet on hardwood stairs and then a fumbling at the door.

"Let me in," said Mary. "It is important."

Clutching her flannel dressing gown about her as the cool wind struck her face, the maid grudgingly opened the door.

"Mais oui, it's a curious hour for you to be sounding the doorbell," she whispered in broken English.

"Hello, hello," a man's voice shouted. "Are you all right, Mary?"

Until the radio car stopped in front of Number 45 an unearthly stillness cloaked house and street.

Immediately after a violent ringing of doorbells brought the French maid from the rear and sent her rushing to the door.

"Non, Monsieur Dieu!" she cried at sight of a plain-clothesman and two policemen.

"Where is Miss Franklin?" demanded one of the men.

"Ow should I know?" angrily retorted the girl. "I don't even know Miss Franklin."

"Sorry, Miss, we'll have to search the house." He stepped into the hall.

"One of you boys watch the front door. The other take the service entrance."

Before he reached the top step Mary was in the hall.

"I'm frightened," she spoke nervously. "I'm Mary Franklin of the Gazette."

"The detective held out his hand. 'Jim Chase of Headquarters. The Commissioner sent us. Mr. Ladd called him. Where's Nick Hart?'"

Mary shivered. "He left about ten minutes ago."

"Cause you any trouble?" "No. He wanted to choke me, but thought better and took the photographs instead."

"What photographs?" "Nice ones of Janice French and Martin."

"H'm. By the way, Mr. Ladd asked the Commissioner to bring you to headquarters. He said he didn't want to lose a good society editor."

"Have they found Janice French?" "No." He walked slowly behind her down the stairs.

"Looks to me like a picture game now," remarked Mary. "But I'd say it was Janice and not her photographs who is being framed."

"Tell that to the Commissioner," said Chase. (To Be Continued)

Texas Pecan Industry Due To One Limb

(By The Associated Press)

The pre-eminence of Texas in pecan culture rests upon a twig Edmond E. Risien of San Saba more than a half century ago while seeking a specimen of the nut embodying the qualities he believed it should possess. Now at 86, he has realized the hope Alfred Lord Tennyson, British poet, expressed in a letter after receiving a pecan seedling from Risien that he should "live long and happily and see your pecan trees flourish."

More important to him, perhaps, is the realization that offspring of the twig are growing in England, France, Madagascar, Palestine, Australia, South America, Mexico, and all states of the Union climatically suited for growth of western varieties.

Biographically, Mr. Risien was born in England, a cabinetmaker by profession, a resident of San Saba by accident and a horticulturist by instinct. He settled on American soil at Galveston in the summer of 1872 with the intention of proceeding to California "in a few months." Instead, he lingered in Limestone county.

Perhaps destiny brought him to the San Saba country in 1874—certainly it ended his intention of going to California. He liked the natural beauties of the country and when he visited the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia in 1876, he took along a small exhibit of Texas pecans.

A few months later the man who was to satisfy Queen Victoria's taste for fine nuts returned to the bottom lands of the San Saba to lay the foundation of his fame.

His instinct for horticulture, however, did not go into action at once. Instead, he took up his trade of cabinet maker, joined three associates in promoting the water system of San Saba, and got married.

In the '70s, wagons loaded with buffalo meat and pecans, were on the streets of San Saba daily in the autumn and Risien became curious about the different types among the pecans. He examined them all—for flavor, color, time of maturity, texture and the possibility for easy shelling. Finally he offered a prize of $5 for the best specimens found in the country. The winner brought in nuts so large Risien asked to visit the tree.

When the man took him to the peninsula created by the junction of the San Saba, and Colorado rivers he was horrified to find but one small twig on a limb of the tree.

"Why did you cut the tree that way?" Risien asked.

"Well, the prize winner explained, 'I left one limb so I'd have something to stand on to cut off the others to get the pecans.'"

Risien determined to have the remnant of that tree and eventually bought 320 acres of land on which it stood.

The mutilated tree slowly put out new growth and Risien named it the "San Saba"—later to be known as the "Mother Tree" because on it he carried out the major part of his breeding work. Upon 40 acres of the original tract stand 1,000 large bearing trees stemming from the "Mother" tree, but no two are alike.

The fruiting buds of the "Mother" were artificially pollinated from the "Father" tree, 12 miles away.

When one of the new varieties generated from the crossing of the "parents" did not reach the required standard it was put aside. It is estimated by Mr. Risien he made hundreds of breeding experiments that did not meet the degree of quality he had set. Contending that trees which did not produce sufficiently had one of the many defects of the pecan kingdom, Risien rode hundreds of miles on horseback searching for the tree that indicated suitable healthfulness for crossing with the "Mother" tree.

Always he looked for trees in well-watered places because abundant water is necessary to proper development of the nuts. When found,

Selection Of Austin As Capital Caused Rancor In Early Days

(By The Associated Press)

Austin, founded one hundred years ago this summer, has been the capital of Texas since except for two and a half years.

Selection of Austin, then known as Waterloo, caused hard feelings in early-day politics and probably would not have been chosen but for the vision of Mirabeau Bonaparte Lamar, second president of the republic.

President Lamar had dreams of a vast empire that would extend to the Pacific ocean. A year earlier, Texas had tendered its offer for annexation to the United States, coupling with the offer a list of resources and properties that would someday make Texas an enormous factor in national prosperity. But the offer was not accepted and public opinion in Texas demanded that the United States be shown Texas "could stand on its own feet."

To do this meant that the frontiers would have to be expanded. The capital was in Houston at the time of Lamar's election, and must remain there until 1840 as the temporary seat of government. Houston wanted it to remain, but every ambitious city in early Texas was anxious for it to be moved. Lamar wanted it moved.

The representatives of East Texas fought those from the west, but an order issued by Lamar on April 15, 1839, settled the question. A committee was sent to the Colorado river site to make surveys and explorations. This committee members were Albert C. Horton of Matagorda, Isaac W. Burton of San Augustine and Louis P. Coke of the pecan catkins (male blossoms) were placed in saddlebags and carefully carried home where the pollen was applied to the female blossoms. Thus began Risien's patient process of building up paper shell pecans through cross pollination. A decade of waiting was required for seedlings to mature. When they bore nuts of desirable variety, budwood was grafted to old native stock. This has become popular as a means of obtaining quick production.

Throughout his active years Risien has busied himself improving the western varieties of pecans, and from his untiring work came the John Garner, introduced two years ago; the San Saba Improved; the Texas Schley; Texas Prolific No. 60, because of 60 per cent nut meat; Squirrel Delight, and other types familiar to consumers of Texas' most famous nut.

Mr. Risien established his nursery at San Saba in 1888, and in it was grown the seedling he sent to Lord Tennyson. Queen Victoria enjoyed pecans from his orchard as did John May, President McKinley's secretary of state. The elder Studabaker, wagon and automobile maker, ordered a barrel of eating pecans from him yearly, and C. W. Post, breakfast food magnate, was so impressed with Risien's exhibit, arranged in a grade-like cluster, at the Columbian exposition at Chicago, he visited the San Saba horticulturist to inspect his methods of culture. The name of his best known cereal.

The eldest son of former Kink Alfonso of Spain, who died several months ago, had ordered eating pecans from Risien for several years.

Although his concern in improving pecan types has not slackened, Mr. Risien's hobby for several years has been breeding a type of weeping liveoak found in Texas, Louisiana, and old Mexico. His laboratory is an old oak standing just outside San Saba's limits and from which the commissioners' court granted him the right to propagate during his lifetime. He calls it his "Mother" liveoak, and the "Father" tree, from which is taken the pollen necessary for cross breeding, stands 15 miles southeast of San Saba.

Freight Rate Complaints To Get Airing

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP)—Southern and western complaints against freight rates are due for an airing soon in the Senate.

Compromise legislation looking to an adjustment of the rail rate structure on manufactured articles won approval this week by the Senate committee on Interstate Commerce. It became a part of the Wheeler-Truman transportation bill, scheduled for Senate consideration in about two weeks.

The modified freight rate measure would order an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission into existing charges with a view to eliminating "unlawful discriminations." In another section, it would prohibit criss cross restocking unduly prejudicial to any section shipper, or specific commodity.

Earlier this session, Southern and Western legislators had demanded a flat equalization of territorial rate structures. These bills developed heated opposition.

Leaders of the movement declared the compromise plan would "retard" the Interstate Commerce Commission. They said it offered an effective answer to all criticisms of the earlier proposals.

The freight rate issue is an old one to southern and southeastern legislators. Relief from "discriminatory" rates has been a favorite campaign plank for years in at least a dozen states.

Encouraged by the administration, southern members of Congress renewed the rate campaign when this session began four months ago.

Five Senators introduced bills to wipe out sectional differentials. In the House 130 southern and western members formed a bloc to demand relief.

Representative Ramspeck (D-Ga.) became chairman of the House committee on Interstate Commerce. He appealed to the House Interstate and foreign commerce committee to write the rate adjustment measure into the general transportation bill. Hearings conducted simultaneously on both sides on Capitol Hill developed stiff opposition to all the rate bills, and leaders of the Senate House campaigns agreed to draft a compromise.

House Bloc Divided

Even the House bloc was divided. The Interstate Commerce committee was being bound by its rigid rate-making formula.

Sponsored by Senator Hill (D-Ala.), one of its authors, the new plan was quietly approved by the Senate committee.

Despite their anxiety over freight rates, many southern Congressmen were unwilling to vote for the Wheeler-Truman measure because its effect would be to place water carriers under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

This, some said, might more than offset any advantages to be obtained from the Hill-Ramspeck measure. They declared water transportation was one means the south and west retained to compete with the north.

Others declared, however, the adjustment plans only chance was to ride through as part of an administration-favored bill dealing with general transportation.

Whatever the difficulties to be encountered hereafter, the compromise freight position would leave the north unable to compete with the south and southwest.

The IOC also is considering the South's rate complaint. Commissioner Lee recently upheld a petition in which the southeastern governors' conference asked equality with the north on a list of manufactured articles. The case is awaiting final decision.

On Capitol Hill and before the IOC, northerners complained that industry already was moving southward. They have pledged that the loss of that territory's favorable freight position would leave the north unable to compete with the south and southwest.

The IOC also is considering the South's rate complaint. Commissioner Lee recently upheld a petition in which the southeastern governors' conference asked equality with the north on a list of manufactured articles. The case is awaiting final decision.

When General Wolf invaded San Antonio, General Houston decided the archives of the state were in danger and ordered their secret removal to Houston. A sensational colonial civil battle ensued but the seat of government remained away from Austin for two and one-half years during the trouble with Mexico.

Enemies of the visionary Lamar were wont to term this location of the capital one of his most serious follies. Indians and Mexicans were a constant threat, but the idealistic empire builder had to keep the capitol abreast of his plan to expand the frontiers north and west. In his time the population centered somewhere northwest of Houston. Now the capital is declared by ardent westerners to be "too far east."

The population center of the state, however, supports Lamar's vision of the state's growth and gives favor to his selection of the site.

British Fear Gang-Up On King, Queen At Party

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP)—It's perfectly obvious the British ambassador and his lady are wondering whether 1,300 Americans can stick to British rules on June 8 when they entertain at a garden tea for the English King and Queen.

That's because there is a cut-and-dried pattern for the affair.

The guests will be given 45 minutes to arrive and pick spots in the garden stand; from 4 to 4:45 p. m. At five the band will strike up "God Save the King," and their majesties flanked by Ambassador and Lady Lindsay will appear on the embassy portico overlooking the garden full of guests.

There's the catch. The guests are expected to move back and leave a large open quadrangle of lawn. Furthermore they're supposed to leave it open and not gang up behind the king.

Because right here the king and the ambassador will saunter in one direction, and the queen and Lady Lindsay in another, stopping to chat with chosen ones in the crowd.

But can the Lindsays pass out the word to move back and stay back? They cannot. It wouldn't be good form. So they're hoping the word gets around.

If there is a June cloud-burst, their majesties will double-quick to the house, and the guests to "circus tents" on an adjacent lot.

There will be two other affairs at which smaller groups will meet the monarchs: dinner at the White House, and dinner at the embassy.

Young Demos Oppose Any Endorsement

HOUSTON, May 15 (AP)—Jimmy Brinkley, president of the Harris County Young Democrats, said tonight Houston's delegation to the state convention in Dallas May 19 would oppose the organization endorsing any man for U. S. president of the United States until the National Democratic convention is held.

"If the National convention selects Vice President John Nance Garner, Jesse Jones or anybody else, we will be for him, but it is premature for the organization to go on record for a candidate at this time."

Brinkley said the organization's constitution specifically prohibited such action.

Just Spell Name Of This Town Backwards

ENOLA, S. C., May 15 (AP)—One guess—how did this town get its name? Not from the Indians. Not from a famous personage. Not from the old world. It was this way: In 1908 a railroad was built to this community. The railroad men didn't like the village's name, which was spelled A-l-o-n-e. So they turned it around and spelled it backwards.

Money Power Caused War, Says Veteran

Cause of the War Between the States was two great monopolies contending for the financial control of America, the slave aristocracy of the South against the money power of the East, according to the opinion of John Wesley Turnbough of Edmond, Okla.

Mr. Turnbough, said to be the oldest living Confederate veteran, whom officials of the Top O' Texas Fiesta have been endeavoring to get to come to Pampa and be in the Fiesta parades. The veteran, age 95, writes that "if it is possible I will be in the great parade in Pampa in June."

Fiesta dates are June 13 and 14.

In his letter, addressed to "the people of Texas and the City of Pampa," Mr. Turnbough says:

"I am a Civil War veteran. I joined the Confederate army on July 4, 1861, at Falcon, Columbia county, Ark. Served to the close of the war under Captain Wm. R. Selvage. My colonel was John Griffith. I served in the central army east of the Mississippi, and served under several different generals."

Heid Prisoner

"I was under Gen. McCall at Island No. 10 when our army was surrendered to Gen. Pope. Then I was held a prisoner for five months at Camp Douglas, Ill. After an exchange of prisoners I served under Gen. Gardner at Fort Hudson on the Mississippi river near Baton Rouge."

"Then I served under Stephen D. Lee and A. P. Blackson against Gen. Sherman and was surrendered in June, 1865."

Money power of the East, backed by the aid of German arms, caused the South's defeat, Mr. Turnbough believes.

"And the South and her people lost their power, and property and now we are at the door of another war, more cruel, more heartless than any war Satan ever made since he was cast out of heaven and upon the earth."

"I will be 95 years old the sixth day of this coming June and I am no politician, nor religionist. I am a free American citizen, think and hold my own ideas, convictions and beliefs from Bible search and study, and I grant that right to all people, and I am sincerely a lover of peace and good will to all people."
