REGULATION OF PROFIT MOTIVE ESSENTIAL

When Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, warned the nation the other day that our society is going to disintegrate unless we find some way of subordinating the profit motive, he touched on the key problem of this difficult and perplexing era.

It is a peculiar situation that we are in, these days. We live in and by a social set-up which depends for its functioning on the motive power supplied by the lure of profits.

Part of this regulation can be applied by law. A good part of it, however, must come from a changed mental attitude on the part of all of us.

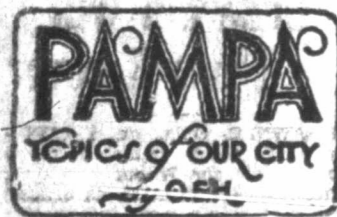

That's a notion to which we have given a great deal of lip service in the past. Unfortunately, we have shied there. We quickly lose sight of our ideal when the weight of dollars in the other pan of the scales gets too heavy.

And yet this idea that the service one renders is more important than the money he makes is no Utopian concept. We needn't despair of making it a working rule of every-day conduct.

There is—to take one example—the medical profession. A doctor could increase his income, if he cared to, very easily, by performing a few anti-social acts.

But doctors have learned that this idea of service to society can be a real, living thing—an ideal which a man with a living to make can follow, to the benefit of himself and those about him.

There's no valid reason why all the rest of us can't learn the same lesson. And there isn't any other way of making our present kind of society work satisfactorily.

NAZIS' PENAL CODE CALLED MOST DRASTIC

MILITARY COURTS TO BE RE-INSTALLED JANUARY 1

BY WALTER BROCKMANN. Associated Press Foreign Staff. BERLIN, Jan. 1.—It is too late for convicts in German penitentiaries to resolve to make good this new year.

On January 1, 1934, a new penal code goes into effect. It is described by some as perhaps the most drastic of modern times. Many of those now behind the bars face extended sentences as a result.

Since the advent to power of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, 50 persons have been executed under special laws passed and still existing laws interpreted partly to apply to political and criminal slayings.

Awaiting execution in his cell at Leipzig, Marius Van Der Lubbe, young Dutch bricklayer, is the first man ever sentenced to death for arson in Germany.

ing some 20 kinds of justice, ranging all the way from matrimonial to maritime.

Compulsory sterilization laws go into effect January 1, too, along with a new civil code. That also is the date for the reinstatement of military courts.

That criminals and malefactors of every kind are being punished is not a cause for rejoicing. Serious offenders who are considered to constitute a public menace will not be released from prison. They will be compelled to perform forced labor as long as they are so considered.

There is a clause for sterilization of dangerous sex criminals. Under the general sterilization law, probably the greatest roundup of such human beings in medical history is occurring as a prelude to putting it into effect.

One of the most striking features of the sterilization law is that anyone sentenced to an institution for the rest of his life at his own expense.

Commenting on this, the Frankfurter Zeitung said, "The rich can evade sterilization by restricting their liberty, but for the poor there is no way out."

In cases of necessity" the law provides that police may be called to quell a rebellious patient on the operating table.

Only when sterilization may entail peril to life may exemptions be made. Operations will not be permitted on youths under 14, nor in cases in which "for advanced age or other reasons, the person concerned is not capable of reproduction."

Beginning January 1, military courts will begin to function as in imperial times for the reichswehr and navy. Death by shooting has been retained as capital punishment for desertion. Members of Hitler's party who storm troops are subject to military jurisdiction.

STREET BREAK OUT. PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1 (AP)—Violence broke out today in the taxicab and milk wagon drivers' strikes. Three drivers for one milk company were beaten. One of the victims, Richard Atkins, 21, was found unconscious in his wagon and taken to a hospital suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries.

Dance Orchestra Jailed in Thefts

FARNSON, Kan., Jan. 1 (P)—Ten members of a dance orchestra known as "Oklahoma Racketeers of Muskogee," from Stillwater, were held in jail here today in connection with alleged thefts from lockers at a Salina, Kan., country club Saturday night.

Deputy Sheriff Tom Hogan said that the Salina county sheriff had asked him to hold members of the orchestra pending his arrival here with warrants charging them with theft. Hogan said he found golf equipment and other articles appearing in the description of those reported at Salina in the luggage of orchestra members.

The musicians were arrested last night but were permitted to play at a New Year's dance here before going to jail.

Most of the orchestra members said they were students at Oklahoma A. & M. college. They gave their names as Vic Sears, conductor; Jack Bolls, Al Coleman, Earl Barber, Jack Love, Walter Guidel, Gleason Morrison, Garland Hampton, Joe Harris, and E. E. LeFlore.

Ernest C. Cooper is a patient at Pampa hospital, where he is receiving medical attention.

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson reaches the lake in the Canadian wilderness where his amphibian should be, and finds his partner, Smash Desplines, away. Curt wants to use it to capture Igor Karakhan, desperate and wealthy criminal; still more he wants to protect Sonya Volkov, who is making her way to Karakhan with the intention of killing him. Curt's hands are tied, as hourly "Teeste LeNoir" and his Indian allies take Sonya nearer Karakhan.

THE MEETING
Sonya made herself stop thinking of anything beyond tomorrow morning. She would need all her strength and poise for her meeting with Karakhan. It would be fatal to brood about the future and let it unnerve her. The future must take care of itself.

All that day her thoughts had been running on her father and now, on the trip up the dark river, they came back to him, and she tried to feel that he was with her in spirit, watching over her safety again as he had done during that white Siberian winter.

As she looked above the tree tops and saw the Sacred W hanging in the northeast sky, she remembered the long-ago evening in distant Iktusk when he had first pointed it out to her and Carl, and recalled winter nights in the Lena woods when the three of them had lain huddled together, without fire or shelter, listening for enemies and watching the constellation swing around the pole star.

Now he and Carl were gone, and under the far-northern Canadian sky she was watching those constellations alone. Dear, he and Carl, her menfolk who had been all the world to her—she dared not let herself think of them as dead, for it was only recently that she had pulled herself out of the black bottomless tragedy of their deaths and found heart to go on living.

Karakhan was reading a batch of month-old newspapers that midnight when the three runners came into his cabin with LeNoir's report. He was coming north as a guard of escape of Raiston and his partner, he made up his mind to get away in his plane as soon as he had light enough for flying. The reassurance which LeNoir relayed—that those two had fled south and the main band was coming north as a guard—reassured him not at all.

Sharpened by twenty years of keeping ahead of the law, his intuition told him it was time to go. That fellow Raiston had a charmed life.

He wavered over what to do about Sonya. On Helen Mathieson, or any of the others, he would not have wasted a thought; but Sonya Volkov stood out by herself, one of the rare personalities of his life-time.

In the last few days he had been thinking of her till she had become madness in his blood; and all the clamorous impulses within him rebelled at the thought of leaving her there.

She would go along with him willingly; her passionate letter left no doubt that she would follow him to the world's end. On the swift flight to Mexico she would be an impediment, true enough—an extra person would cut down the gas load, and inquisitive officials along the coast might ask questions, since he would be flying with a girl. But the risk was slight, his burden would be a precious burden, and when he got to Mexico he would have her there with him!

After throwing his personal effects into a duffle bag, he went down to the hangar, turned the Speedair so that it headed lakeward; and untied all the mooring ropes except one slip-hitch around a pontoon brace. Once he started to make his get-away, it would be distinctly wise to go in a hurry.

He wanted to be skimming out upon the lake, beyond canoe and rifle reach, before his intention burst upon LeNoir and Siam-Kiale. They were going to turn ugly when they realized he was escaping and letting them hold the sack.

The Speedair was so vital to him that he ordered a pair of Kioshoes, two of his bodyguard whom he could trust, to stay there at the hangar and guard the ship. It was just possible that LeNoir might suspect him of wanting to escape and might try to cripple the plane.

slightly to the rocking of the water. Karakhan reached his hand, clasped it, helped her step up on the logs. "Sonya!" He greeted her in their native tongue. "You have really come! I haven't quite believed it until now!"

Sonya's clear eyes looked at him steadily. She did not respond to the pressure of his hand. "Yes, I've come," she said, in an even voice. "I'm glad to meet you again."

Karakhan was disappointed—and puzzled. Her greeting had none of the passion of her letter. But perhaps it was only her natural shyness before LeNoir and the Indians. "You're tired," he said, with a show of solicitude. He could not take his eyes from her—the golden softness of her hair, the loveliness of her face and throat. "Come up with me to the cabin. I've a breakfast of sorts ready for you."

He lowered his voice, though none of his listeners knew a sentence of Russian; "Then we're leaving here. Immediately, I'll explain, dearest, when we're alone—and a thousand versts from this place."

As they walked up the footpath to the cabin, he grew more and more disappointed and mystified by Sonya's attitude. This meeting with her was not as he had expected. She seemed even colder and more distant than in Victoria, when he had so dismally failed of a conquest.

"What's wrong, Sonya?" he demanded. "You don't appear at all glad." He was impatient with her coldness and utter lack of response. "A Sonya freed herself, without saying a word. She stepped over to the rough block table and behind it, so that it stood between her and Karakhan. With a glance about the room and a glance at the Indians outside, she confronted him.

"It's been a long trail from Victoria here," she said, dropping the last pretense of friendliness. "And it was a long hunt before that, to get my first trace of where you'd gone. When I look back, it seems as though I've had one continuous miracle of luck in finding you. But that's the past. I'm here."

"Karakhan stared wide-eyed at her, with all his ardor forsaking him. He saw, at last, that her coldness was no girlish make-believe but a dead earnestness. The expression in her eyes made him suddenly afraid.

"Your conquests with women have always been so easy," she went on, "that you can't imagine any woman not falling in love with you, and so when you get a letter from one called you 'Beloved' when she meant 'You white beast,' you swallowed the hook and sent your man to bring her to you."

"You were proof against traps and poison and the professional police hounds, but you weren't proof against that lure! You've had your way with a great number of women and you came to regard them as harmless things. But where men—the all men ever sent after you—failed to bring you to account, it was a woman who trailed you, and reached here, and here now!"

Karakhan backed up a step and his jaw dropped. If anything of his delusion about her remained, the loathing packed into that epithet, "You white beast," toppled it and shattered it to bits.

"Had she found out? Impossible! He had worked too carefully and anonymously. But was anything impossible to one who had trailed him as consummately as she had done?"

Her next words left him in no doubt. "There in Victoria, when you started negotiating with father and Carl about that lumber importation, I told them that you were a dangerous man, as dangerous as a cobra. They didn't take my warning, because I had no evidence except my intangible judgment of you. With those worthless safe-conduct papers that you forged they went away to Vladivostok—to close that big lumber deal for their company, they thought. And the police got them when they landed, as you intended. And there—in the Loupanka—in that execution chamber under the hill—father and Carl—"

'HAPPY DAYS HERE AGAIN'

New Yorkers Have Different Kind of New Year—Fresh, Gay, Unsophisticated.

By The Associated Press.
"Happy days are here again!" That was the keynote of the nation's New Year celebration as it welcomed the year 1934—born of a hopeful promise of better things to come.

From all parts of the country came a joyous acclaim of another year, which, for the first time in fourteen years, made its entrance to the accompaniment of legal liquor in countless glasses. For the first time since 1920 Americans in more than a score of states were able to greet the New Year with a cup of champagne or some other sparkling beverage.

And through all the noisy greetings to a New Year ran a note of hopefulness that the year 1934 would reflect a continuation of the improvement toward prosperity noted in the waning days of 1933.

New York's celebration, reflecting those in many parts of the nation, was the gayest since prohibition became effective. Times Square was a wild cacophony of noise and cheers as the clock struck 12. It was a new kind of New Year's eve for the younger generation; a return to something the older generation thought had vanished forever.

Many of the larger hotels were forced to turn away prospective patrons long before the hour of midnight sounded. Restaurants were crowded. So were the theaters. It seemed that everybody turned out to welcome the New Year.

The nation's capital observed a comparatively quiet New Year's eve celebration with the observance planned today less active than in previous years. President Roosevelt departed from the usual custom and held no White House reception, electing to spend the day quietly with his family, although Vice President and Mrs. Garner were luncheon guests.

ANYTHING TO DISTRACT ATTENTION OF THE PUBLIC

The Archbishop of Canterbury—By The Associated Press—The year 1933 is going. Let it go. In the life of nations it has been a year of disappointments.

Dr. T. V. Soong, chairman of the Chinese national government economic council—"China had little to be thankful for during the year just closed. The Chinese people hope that they may get a new deal during 1934."

Chancellor Engelbert Dollfus of Austria—"The cabinet 'beat back a wave of Hitlerism from Germany' in the year just passed, 'finding in this fight not only the Pope's blessing, but the powerful support of Italy.'"

Italo Balbo, former air marshal of Italy—"I send to the American press my fervent greetings, good wishes and a warm augury for extraordinary happenings even to find antidivine animals to distract the attention of the public from continuous disasters, cyclones and financial crises of which it is mortally tired."

Ernest Hanstaengl, chief of the foreign press of the Nazi party in Germany—"I feel optimistic for 1934 for America."

W. O. COOLEY ENDS HIS WORK AS CENTRAL BAPTIST MINISTER

ALL CHURCHES HEAR SERMONS FOR NEW YEAR

NO SUCCESSOR NAMED TO PASTOR WHO RESIGNS

ENDING a pastorate of 28 months, the Rev. W. O. Cooley, Central Baptist minister, preached his farewell sermon at the evening service yesterday. He announced his resignation a short time ago, effective the first of the year.

Plans for the future have not been announced by Rev. Cooley, who has been in ill health for some weeks. Members of the church have expressed regret at his resignation. Plans for filling his place have not yet been made.

New Year Services
Other churches of Pampa heard New Year messages yesterday. An unusual watch night service was conducted at the Methodist church, with a sermon by the Rev. Gaston Foote, pastor, beginning at 11:45. At the Presbyterian church, the morning sermon by the Rev. A. A. Hyde, minister, was a review of the past year and a look into the future. The year-end message, "The Harvest is Ended," was brought at the Christian church last evening by the minister, John S. Miller. Announcements were made that the annual church meeting will be conducted on the evening of January 9, when church officers will be elected and final reports of the past year made.

The New Year sermon at First Baptist church was also preached in the evening by the pastor, the Rev. C. E. Lancaster. His subject was "Visions."

Sunday school attendance was reported as follows: First Baptist, 569; Methodist, 524; Christian, 321; Central Baptist, 221; Presbyterian, 90. First Baptist church also reported four additions to the church yesterday, and the Christian church one, and the Methodist two.

New Year's Party Enjoyed Saturday By Young People

A group of friends gathered in the home of Miss Leona Lewis Saturday evening for a last party of the old year. Games and contests were enjoyed through the evening. Refreshments were served to Misses Roberta Montgomery, Lorita Hogan, Lois Johnson, Edna Turcotte, Juanita Montgomery, Winnie Bond, Mildred Cole, Lois Johnson, Lois Daugherty, Minnie Olive Montgomery, Mary Fern Lewis, Rosemary Hamilton, Eudine Menton, and Mrs. J. M. Daugherty. Messrs. John Lewis, Jarret Bond, Louis Cole, Duane Turcotte, Pete Bond, Ed Barnes, Pete Cole, Jack Benton, Vincent Coler, Leon Daugherty, Harold Lewis, Buddy Bob Montgomery, Morris Fuqua, Frank Daugherty, Cecil Lewis.

B. T. S. CONFERENCE
The monthly training school conference of First Baptist church will be conducted at the church this evening from 7 to 8 o'clock. Members of the various training school divisions are expected to be present. The meeting is scheduled to close promptly at 8 so members will be free for other engagements during the evening.

IT'S A HUNGER STRIKE
CHICAGO—A hunger strike is on in Chicago and unless something is done about it soon a life may be lost. The striker is Pat, a bull dog. Since his playmate, Skipper, a mongrel, disappeared more than a week ago Miss Ruth Graybill, owner of both dogs, said Pat had refused to eat or take any interest in life.

GRID TITLE OF SOUTHWEST AT STAKE TODAY

ARKANSAS HOPING TO LUCK OUT ON GENTS FROM CENTENARY

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP)—The unofficial gridiron championship of the entire southwest was at stake today in a "Dixie Classic" bringing together the undefeated Centenary Gentlemen and the powerful University of Arkansas Razorbacks, top ranking team of the southwest conference. Neither team appeared to have an edge, so far as pre-game comparisons were able to reveal, and there every indication that the score would be low and close. None of the five southwest conference teams which tackled Centenary in the regular playing season was able to score a point, much less win. Arkansas also boasts ample strength on the defense and offense. The Razorbacks piled up a total of 206 points in the season just ended while their opponents were good for but 54. Some 20,000 fans were expected to turn out, weather remaining favorable, to watch these evenly matched teams, with their arrays of individual stars, fight for supremacy. Centenary has an all-American player at right end in Paul Geisler, veteran 198-pounder, while in the backfield Shorty Oslin and Manning Smith have been consistently outstanding. Due to injuries, Smith ranked with the best quarterbacks of the country, may not see much action, but Oslin and the rest of the team are in top form. Lou Glumac, an excellent passer, starts in Smith's place. In the Arkansas lineup are a number of high-powered players, including Tom Murphy, all-southwest conference quarterback; LaForge, a dangerous open field runner; and Paul Rucker, one of the toughest ends in the game ever tried to circle. Besides its significance in pitting the two leading teams of the southwest against each other, the game will do its bit toward charity, as one third of the gate receipts will be turned over to the Texas Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children.

Chivalry Sends Grappler To Bed—A Hospital Bed

AMARILLO, Jan. 1 (AP)—Joe Bauer's chivalry led to a hospital where he is in a critical condition from knife wounds. Bauer, a professional wrestler, went to the aid of a woman at hotel about 4 a. m. according to police, who said the woman's attackers turned on him. Louis Patton and Hank Benton were charged with "assault with intent to murder." The bonds were set at $1,000.

FREE COINAGE OF SILVER TO BE BIG ISSUE

ROOSEVELT ATTITUDE MIGHT BE KNOWN TONIGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1 (AP)—Congressional leaders were agreed today that the pledge of almost a third of the senate to stand for free coinage of silver has thrust bimetallic forward as the major issue before the session beginning Wednesday.

President Roosevelt will meet tonight at the White House with eight or more Democratic chieftains from the senate and house, and from this conference new majority plans for the session may emerge. Observers feel the talk almost certainly will turn at one point to the silver question, and the administration's thus far guarded attitude made clear.

A growth of inflation sentiment behind the silver drive, congressional leaders say, has made the money question so predominant a note as to overshadow even such important and perplexing issues as taxes, appropriations and over President Roosevelt's recovery program.

Even in the face of this powerful silver bloc development, however, Democratic leaders are confident that the session beginning this week will follow the leadership of President Roosevelt.

Administration spokesmen forecast a smooth session, with quick action on the chief executive's recommendations, and adjournment by May. Other leaders however, predict more troubled waters in the future.

Speaker Rainey, in an article written for the Associated Press, says there will be no dramatic incidents during the session. There will be, he adds, no attempt to interfere with the recovery program, although it "may be necessary to grease the wheels a little at the approaching session." Republican leaders for the most part are keeping silent concerning the approaching session. A few, however, have trained their heaviest guns at the president's monetary policy.

Both Witt And Allred Evading Stand On Liquor

AUSTIN, Jan. 1 (AP)—Lieutenant Governor Edgar E. Witt of Waco, told the electorate he was for submitting repeal of state prohibition but Jimmie Allred, attorney general, evaded the question.

They profess to believe that what Allred and Witt need to do if they would hold down the field of candidates, is to say something straight out on prohibition.

Witt has the edge because he announced he would be for submitting repeal to a vote of Texans. It is well known that Allred has been a prohibitionist and a teetotaler. Edgar Witt too has been a prohibitionist.

Last summer when repeal of the amendment was up for an expression by the voters, Witt came out for repeal and whirling gave a sidelight on how he finally made up his mind. He had favored it all along but did not want to act hastily. His father always had been a prohibitionist but one night he heard his father express himself as dissatisfied with the way prohibition was going in this country. Edgar Witt then made up his mind what would be his public attitude about repeal. He decided the best thing would be to repeal it, enact strict regulatory laws and try to inaugurate a season of temperance in the nation. He so declared himself.

MISS ISABEL BAER AND MARVIN ELDER OF BORGER ARE MARRIED IN CEREMONY AT BRIDE'S HOME

Wedding Attended by Members Of Family

Miss Isabel Baer and Marvin Elder were married Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Baer. The wedding was attended by a number of relatives. The Rev. Gaston Foote, Methodist pastor, read the impressive ceremony before an improvised altar of palms and fern in the living room. The bride wore an attractive frock of tea rose crepe, and her traveling suit was of navy wool crepe with matching accessories. A wedding dinner was served after the ceremony to Mr. and Mrs. Elder, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Baer, The Rev. and Mrs. Foote, Messrs. and Mrs. Harold Baer, Carl Baer, Roy Kretzmeier, Steve Oates, S. W. Kretzmeier and daughter Mary; Messrs. Albert and Franklin Baer.

To Live in Borger
Mr. and Mrs. Elder left immediately afterward for Amarillo, where they will spend a few days. Mrs. Elder, a student this year in W. T. Texas State Teachers college, Canyon, will return there to complete this semester before joining Mr. Elder in Borger, where they will make their home.

She is a member of a pioneer Gray county family, and a graduate of Pampa high school with the class of '32. Last year she attended Fleming business college.

Mr. Elder, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Elder of Manhattan, Kans., is a graduate of the mechanical engineering school of Kansas A. & M. He is connected with the Phillips company, and has recently been transferred to Borger after about two years here.

TRAGEDY
JOHNSTOWN, Pa.—A New Year's greeting card wishing him "health and prosperity" was found by Rev. Father George Donovan in the basement of the Frugality Catholic church beside the body of his 20-year-old foster nephew, Arthur Bennett. The young man had hanged himself, Coroner Cyrus W. Davis told. He was the adopted son of the priest's aunt and housekeeper and had been in failing health.

P-TA COUNCIL WILL DISCUSS RECORD BOOKS

HORACE MANN UNIT TO BE IN CHARGE OF PROGRAM

PUBLICITY and record book chairmen of each unit in the Pampa Council of Parents and Teachers are invited to attend the council meeting Thursday afternoon at 3, in high school cafeteria. Mrs. Claude Lard, president, announces.

Requirements of publicity record books will be discussed, and questions answered to prepare workers for the task of assembling and arranging publicity material. Record books of past years will be on display. Mrs. Lard hopes that the Gray county council yearbook, which was sent to the national Parent-Teacher convention in Washington, will be returned in time to be shown with this display.

Horace Mann Parent-Teacher association will be in charge of the council program. Mrs. J. M. Turner, president, will be leader and Miss Josephine Thomas, principal, will be the speaker. Her subject will be Aim and Achievements of the Horace Mann P.-T. A.

Pupils of the school will also entertain. Preceding the council session, an executive board meeting will be held at 2:45.

GALVESTON DOWNS OPENS RACE MEET
GALVESTON, Jan. 1 (AP)—A 26-day horse racing meet opens today at "Galveston Downs," the latest addition to the string of Texas tracks. Located on the Houston highway, the new plant was erected in quick order so it would be ready for use New Year's day. Several thousand persons greeted the track when the gates were thrown open for inspection. The track will bring the first horse racing of any importance to the island city. During the meet opening today, six races will be run daily, excepting Sundays.

Mrs. G. T. Cole underwent a minor operation at Pampa hospital recently.
