205 killed so far Khomeini restricts revolutionary courts

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini put a new restriction on his Islamic revolutionary courts, decreeing execution only for persons who killed people or ordered them killed.

Pars, the official news agency, announced the execution of the 205th man to die before Khomeini's firing squads. And the ayatollah heading Tehran's revolutionary court appealed to supporters abroad to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, his wife, mother-in-law and sister, and several of his close advisers, including the former ambassador to the United States, Ardeshtir Zahedi.

Khomeini, Iran's Shiite Moslem patriarch and the leader of the revolution that ousted the shah, said in a communiqué Sunday death sentences would be limited to those "proven to have killed people" and to "any person who has issued orders for the killing of people or who has committed torture resulting in death."

"No court has the right to issue death sentences, and no person should be executed except under the above two conditions. Violation of this order is an offense and liable to punishment," the communiqué said.

There was speculation that the order was in response to fears of the Iranian Jewish community and foreign criticism resulting from the execution last Wednesday of millionaire Jewish businessman Habib Elghanian. He was convicted of sending Israel funds that the court said were used to finance the killing of Palestinians. It was the second restriction placed by Khomeini on the revolutionary courts, which are answerable only to him and his secret revolutionary council. Last month he decreed that soldiers and policemen who committed minor offenses during the shah's time were not liable to prosecution.

The latest victim of the firing squads was Parviz Torabi Marashi, the former governor of the city of Behbahan, in southwest Iran, the Pars agency reported. It said he was executed early today for killing, torture and destruction of property.

Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkhali, the chief of the Tehran revolutionary court, issued a list of most-wanted members of the royal regime and told a news conference: "Anyone who wants to assassinate these people in Iran or outside would be carrying out the orders of the court. They cannot be arrested by any foreign government as a terrorist because they will be carrying out the orders of Iran's Islamic revolutionary court."

However, Khalkhali indicated those he listed had not been formally tried in absentia by the revolutionary courts.

"The people of Iran have already condemned them," he said. "Their guilt is proven already."

So far, the revolutionary courts have only passed sentences of death and imprisonment. No hands or feet have been cut off, and there have been no banishments.

Vance tells senators to ratify treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate runs the "grave risk" of killing the new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union if it tries to amend it, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance says.

And he warns that if the Senate fails to ratify the pact, it could cause "some unraveling in the NATO alliance."

Vance, who last week wrapped up lengthy negotiations with the Soviets on a new arms pact, argued the administration's case for treaty ratification Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." He was joined by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Vance said he could "think of no real substantive change in terms of an amendment that wouldn't jeopardize the existence of the treaty."

However, Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate's minority leader and a candidate for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, said Sunday he thought it was "very unlikely" the Senate would approve the treaty as is. Two-thirds of the Senate must ratify any treaty for it to go into effect.

Opponents of the pact argue the United States would not be able to determine whether the Soviets were cheating on terms of the treaty because of the recent loss of intelligence stations in Iran.

President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev are scheduled to sign the treaty at a summit meeting next month in Vienna, Austria.

Baker, who says he has not made a final decision on whether to support the pact, suggested the Senate might ask Carter to take the treaty back to the Soviets to renegotiate parts of it. The Tennessee lawmaker made his remarks on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Another senator expected to be influential in the upcoming Senate debate, Sam Nunn, predicted the administration would have an "uphill fight" in winning approval but said ratification was possible.

The Georgia Democrat, in an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said there was "validity to the argument of the administration, when they say that significant amendments could, in effect, be tantamount to defeating the treaty."

The Soviet press has run commentaries the last few days expressing the Kremlin's concern about Senate ratification.

In Sunday's editions, Pravda charged that American military-industrial circles opposed to the treaty are conducting a "hysterical" campaign in a last-ditch bid to scuttle it.

The Communist Party newspaper said, "Politicians in the United States who raise obstacles to the agreement assume grave responsibility to their own people" and the rest of the world.

Motorcyclists injured

Two Pampans driving motorcycles were injured in separate accidents Sunday.

A 1975 Honda driven by Michael E. Bresee, 22, of Pampa was involved in a collision at the intersection of Reid Street and Malone Avenue with a 1975 Ford driven by Ladislao Chavez, 61, of Quitaque.

Bresee's hip and left arm were injured in the accident. He was transported by Metropolitan Ambulance to Highland General Hospital, where he was treated and released. Chavez was cited for failure to yield right-of-way at a controlled intersection.

Don B. Fellers, 40, of 1119 Kiowa received injuries to his right arm when the 1976 Honda he was operating was involved in a one-vehicle accident in the 100 block of West Foster. He was treated and released at Highland Hospital.

Fellers was cited for failure to control speed.

Shooting ruled accidental

A Pampa woman was listed in satisfactory condition in an Amarillo hospital this morning after she was shot here Sunday night. Police have determined the shooting to be accidental.

Vivian Fletcher of Pampa received a gunshot wound in her right buttock while sitting in the front seat of her car in the 500 block of Harlem St. A companion, James A. Smith of Pampa, was reportedly removing a 30-30 caliber rifle from the back seat to put it in the trunk when the rifle discharged.

A bullet went through the front seat and struck Fletcher in the upper right buttocks area, fragmenting and exiting from the lower right buttock. She was transported to Highland General Hospital for emergency treatment, and was transferred to the intensive care unit of High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo. A nurse said Fletcher would probably be moved out of intensive care today.

Smith told police he thought the rifle was not loaded. No charges have been filed in connection with the incident.

Snake man may remain in pit for two more weeks

HARTBESPOORT, South Africa (AP) — A 25-year-old carpenter got into the Guinness Book of World Records after 36 days in a snake pit, but he says he may stay two weeks more to protect his record.

Peter Snyman grinned — very carefully — when Jack Seale, the curator of the Hartbeespoort Snake Park, told him he had broken the world snake-sitting record on Sunday.

"It'll become more difficult to stay," he said from the stiff position he has had to maintain since April 7 to avoid a bite from the 24 vipers slithering around him. "Now that I've broken the record, the inclination to get out of the cage is greater."

He originally planned a 40-day stay, but he might hold out for 50, he said.

"I've had a black mamba slither over my face in the dark, attempt to crawl into an ear or a nostril and explore inside my shirt. A bite could kill in three seconds," Snyman said. "But I think the challenge has been worth it. My name will be entered in the Guinness Book of Records."

He has had to lead an almost motionless existence since he moved in with the black mambas, boomslangs, puff-adders and Egyptian cobras at 11 a.m. April 7. He gets out of the cage for only 30 minutes a day.

"There have been times I did not think I could stand it another second," he admitted, his eyes tired and foggy through black-rimmed glasses as he sat on his narrow cot in the 10-by-10-foot cage.

The slightly-built Snyman can take no exercise because snakes are attracted to movement and a sudden gesture could make them strike.

Snyman said he surpassed the record of South African Trevor Kruger because he gained "confidence in my ability to control myself and confidence in my knowledge of snakes."

Kruger was killed in an automobile accident in 1975 shortly after setting his record.

Dole announces candidacy in hometown's city hall

RUSSELL, Kan. (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, shedding his gut-fighting image of the 1976 campaign, today announced his candidacy for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination and declared: "I will neither attack my opponents in the Republican Party nor the incumbent president."

Dole made the announcement at a city hall news conference in Russell, his hometown.

The Kansas senator, whose hard-hitting style drew criticism as the GOP vice presidential candidate in 1976, said in this campaign, "I will be speaking with our friends in the Democratic Party as well as Republicans and independents, believing that neither party has a corner on wisdom."

"We seek not a Democratic approach or a Republican approach to the nation's future, but we seek the correct approach and it will combine the best thinking and best efforts of all."

He called for a reduction of the role of government but added that "I do not intend to campaign against those who serve in government. ... Those who serve in government reflect the nation: human, with human strengths and human failings."

This western Kansas community of 6,000 declared today "Bob Dole Day." Most businesses delayed opening an hour for Dole's announcement and schools were closed for the morning.

Dole kept campaigning after the votes were counted in November 1976, and it was clear the Ford-Dole ticket had lost the presidential election to the Democratic slate of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.

Dole has been to all sections of the country, addressing groups large and small. In 1978, he campaigned for any Republican who hinted he'd like Dole's help.

Despite all the travel, he still doesn't rank among front-runners for nomination in any of the polls.

As the vice presidential candidate in 1976, he earned a reputation as a gut-fighting campaigner. As he explains it now, that was his role in the campaign and he doesn't regret it.

Dole describes himself as a political conservative, but quickly adds that he has been a strong supporter of civil rights legislation and the food stamp program, as well as aid to the handicapped.

He says the Republican Party must change its image "that we're sort of an anti-people party and don't care about the poor, the handicapped or whatever."

Like most aspirants for the Republican nomination, Dole concedes Ronald Reagan is the front-runner.

"I think we all must think there's going to be some erosion in the Reagan camp or we wouldn't be doing this," he says when asked if he thinks the former California governor is losing ground.

Reagan hasn't announced his candidacy yet, but a committee is hard at work on his behalf.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee is running hard and telling anyone who asks that he wants to be president.

The French experiment

The postwar drift to state control of industry received a jolt when France decided that free enterprise was its only way out of the morass of inflation. Regulation and control had led the nation's industry into the habit of having government "bail them out whenever they got into trouble," a French official said.

Andre Baeyens, director of information service for the French embassy in New York, is presently on a lecture tour across the United States. He told a gathering of businessmen that the French government is trying to wring inflation from the French economy by bringing free enterprise thinking back into industry.

Baeyens said that requiring corporations to earn an operating profit to stay in business may not seem novel to American businessmen, but it is a revolutionary change in the French economy. He said the capitalistic shift was signaled in August of 1977 when the French government abolished controls over the price of bread. The baguette, a long thin loaf, has been under state control since 1791.

Architect of the dramatic turn to free market principles in France is Raymond Barre, an obscure economist chosen in 1976 to become prime minister and find a cure for a mounting trade deficit, weak currency and an accelerating inflation rate.

Barre has since dismantled nearly all controls over industrial prices in France, controls which had been in effect since 1945. "He is under attack from all sides for forcing an economic slowdown that produced a positive balance of payments last year and strengthened the franc, but which has also created bankruptcies," Baeyens said.

In its postwar rebuilding, the French government nationalized many industries to become "overequipped and overmanned," the speaker said. "Firms relied too much on government to balance their budgets. Barre wants them to rely on the consumer to balance their budgets rather than the taxpayer."

The quick turning from control over business by government was termed brutal by Baeyens. "Large manufacturing firms went bankrupt and thousands lost their jobs. But the stabilization program has already resulted in a more attractive business environment. Investment incentives have been established to foster interest in new enterprises. Social tension is inevitable due to the difficulty of needed reforms in the French economy," Baeyens said.

"It is a question of the government gritting its teeth so that in the long run our industry will be more efficient and the unemployment problems can be solved in a more meaningful way," the French official said.

If ever a mirror of the futility of the present course of the United States were held to view, it is provided by Andre Baeyens. He did not mention the trend in our nation toward regulated economy, nor did he try to point out our failures. He simply presented the new French trend as a positive factor in encouraging trade with us.

A stark realization of the folly of our accelerating dependence on government was brought into view as he outlined the necessary steps his nation has made to solve its great economic problems.

Our nation could still make the transition with far less pain and turmoil if we were to reverse our field and move back to letting private enterprise solve the problems which regulations and control have created. We wrote the book on just how great a nation can become when its people are free to utilize all their talents and innovative efforts toward bringing them a better life.

As other nations borrow our book to release their people from the quagmire of bureaucratic control, we toy with all the fallacies which only lead to economic stagnation.

The no-work ethic

By Anthony Harrigan

INVERNESS, Scotland — The Scottish Trades Union Congress, meeting in this ancient city in the Highlands of Scotland, has offered the working people of the country a prescription for poverty.

The communist leader of the Scottish miners, Mick McGahey, called for a truly socialist Britain.

What this means was spelled out in the manifesto approved unanimously by the delegates. It calls for a 35-hour work week, more holidays, a lower retirement age, extension of public ownership, more money to public job-creating bodies, higher taxation of private enterprise, and increased imports from socialist and Third World countries.

This, of course, is the dead-end, share-the-wealth philosophy of socialism. The unions here totally reject the free market solutions of higher productivity, better incentives for work, and wider application of technology — approaches which have produced a high standard of living in America, Europe and Japan.

The Scottish trades unions — one million strong in a country of five million people — are firmly committed to the failed Marxist notions of the 19th century. In a separate action, the Congress opposed a new micro-chip industry unless it leads to new public employment and a shortened work week. In other words, the unions reject progress in electronic industries unless the planning contains a self-defeating feature.

These union attitudes receive approval at a theoretical level. The January issue of The News Quarterly, published in Scotland, contains an article by Lord Ritchie-Calder entitled "The Case For Non-Work." He writes: "What we need is a non-work ethic." Like the union chiefs, he fears that technological advances will result in massive unemployment.

Lord Ritchie-Calder proposes planned non-work, saying: "We could have a 7 1/2 hour a day; a four-day work week; 39 working weeks a year; 10 blank holidays; three-day weekends and 13 weeks vacation a year."

Surely, this is the ultimate in non-work planning. It's economic madness, to be sure. Ritchie-Calder ignores the question of who would pay for non-work leisure time, who would generate the income for food, energy, transportation and other necessities. He also ignores the fact that working societies — from America to Hong Kong — are creating new jobs and new wealth through the work ethic and the introduction of new technology.

Lord Ritchie-Calder's article and the statements by union leaders reveal the Alice in Wonderland thinking of socialists in this country. Then imagine that a decent standard of living can be maintained by doing less. Those who believe this nonsense are depriving the rising generation of a chance for a good life.

When prices dropped and money supply mounted

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

It may be hard to believe in light of current double-digit inflation, but there were many times in our history when prices actually declined. Perhaps the most dramatic illustration is provided by the period between 1869 and 1896. Prices were much lower at the end than at the beginning of that 28-year interval. Arno Press has published two dissertations, prepared by candidates for Ph.D.s, describing economic conditions in those years. One is by George Edward Dickey and covers the entire period. The other, by Roger Elwood Shields, is confined to 1873-1896.

Both agree that the primary cause of the price decline in those years was a rapidly growing output that was sufficient to offset an increasing money supply. Falling prices for consumers resulted also in falling costs for producers, permitting their profits to continue in spite of a price decline. Since profits were maintained, attractive investment opportunities remained for entrepreneurs and production grew.

Dickey reports that by 1896 wholesale prices were 46 percent of their 1869 level. Andre Baeyens, director of information service for the French embassy in New York, is presently on a lecture tour across the United States. He told a gathering of businessmen that the French government is trying to wring inflation from the French economy by bringing free enterprise thinking back into industry.

deflation. According to the wholesale index, these prices fell about 50 percent, or an annual average rate of 2.7 percent over this 24 year period. The other three indexes show declines of 18, 27, and 33 percent respectively.

In light of the fall in prices, some historians have concluded that these years were characterized by economic stagnation. Both authors reject this view and present evidence that, overall, the period was one of sustained rapid growth. Shields asserts that some of the most rapid growth on record occurred during that time.

Although deflation was the predominant tendency, the period included cyclical movements of expansion and contraction in the economy. Real gross national product (corrected for inflation and deflation) increased at an average annual rate of 4.8 percent during the last 24 years, which notes Shields, was greater than the 4.7 percent average annual figure for the period of rapid growth that occurred between 1960 and 1965. Capital formation was also at historically high levels. The years of most rapid growth, according to Shields, were actually those of the most serious decline in prices.

During the period in question, the American economy underwent great structural changes, which transformed it from a predominantly agrarian one into a first class industrial giant. In 1870, about 42 percent of the gross national product originated in agriculture, while by 1900, only some 24 percent was accounted for in this sector. The period was one of great transformation in industry and commerce.

Entrepreneurs were actively engaged in finding new and improving on existing methods of production, discovering new sources of supplies, and expanding land and water transportation. There were few political barriers impeding production, creativity and competition. Economist Frank Taussig wrote in 1896 that the great output was the key to declining prices: "The immediate cause of the falling prices has been the pushing on the market for sale of larger and larger quantities of commodities produced with profit at lower and lower costs: a state of things fortunate for the community, and surely not depressing for the businessman."

To ascertain the influence of the quantity of money on prices during that period, Dickey compared the rate of change of the money supply from year to year with the yearly change of the price level. He found an important relationship between the two, but not a perfect correlation. The three years with the greatest fall in prices (1878, 1885, and 1894) followed a year with a decline in the money supply. Dickey concludes that this evidence refutes those who claim that the money supply is not an important determinative of the price level. However, the evidence of the period also shows that money supply is not the sole influence on the level of prices. Another important determinant is the amount of goods and services in existence — the more, the lower the price level. Dickey examined available price and output data for 17 basic commodities for each of the years of his study. Most of these commodities were important inputs into other processes.

In 74.2 percent of the instances in which the price of a commodity moved downward, falling price was accompanied by an increase in output. In only 25.8 percent of the deflationary movements did both price and output fall at the same time. This 3-to-1 relationship existed even though some recession periods are included when demand for goods is usually low and leads to reduced prices regardless of the amount of the supply.

The overall decline in the price levels could not have occurred if the production of these or other commodities had been limited. The lesson for those seeking to control inflation in our times should be clear: increase production and supply. Every effort should be made to eliminate laws, rules and regulations which interfere with production and do not serve strong and compelling needs of society.

Salt - passing at lunch

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - At least once a month since the latter part of 1978, a half dozen to two dozen perpetually harried U.S. senators have been getting together for lunch to chew over the details of the emerging SALT II treaty.

The menu varies and so does the guest speaker, who is usually a top - echelon Carter administration official. But the purpose remains the same: to prepare the senatorial participants for an active role in the bitter ratification fight that is looming over the strategic arms limitation pact.

That may not sound like a big deal, but it is a major tactical breakthrough in the Senate where the only members usually possessed of enough expertise to argue intelligently about anything as technically complicated as SALT II are those who serve on the Armed Services Committee, a panel not known for its sympathy to arms control.

A prime mover behind the monthly luncheon group is Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who is emerging as one of the Carter administration's most crucial allies in the treaty battle.

Well over a year ago, Hart became convinced the administration was not moving fast enough to lay the educational groundwork for a new arms limitation agreement. The senator not only began speaking out on the subject himself, he also badgered Secretary of State Cyrus Vance,

Vice President Walter Mondale and ultimately Carter as well to do more to explain the SALT process to the Senate and the public.

To fill part of the vacuum, Hart - along with Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa - organized the Senate lunch group and began drafting speakers for the administration for their cram course.

Once the debate actually gets under way, those three senators plus Foreign Relations Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, will be serving as the key advocates of the new SALT agreement.

Hart, at 41, is nearing the end of his first Senate term. He is probably best known as George McGovern's 1972 campaign manager, but the identification is deceptive. Hart is no knee - jerk liberal, on national security issues or anything else.

Unlike most liberals, who tend to gravitate towards "people - oriented" committees like Human Resources, the Colorado Democrat serves on both Armed Services and the Senate Intelligence Committee. He plays an active and increasingly effective role on both, winning high marks for diligence and brains even from colleagues who disagree with him.

It was Hart who was largely responsible for conceiving the theoretical framework for selling SALT II which the Carter administration ultimately adopted - a contribution which outshines even his considerable organizational aid.

The Hart (and now Carter) theory, which is known as the "national security" approach to SALT, goes something like this:

Competition with the Soviets is inevitable and permanent, but for our own security we want to see it bounded in the area which is most dangerous - strategic nuclear weaponry. In order to maintain a strong defense force, we need to know the size and scope of the threat we face. The best way to do that is through limits on the Soviet strategic buildup, which can be achieved only through SALT. And capping the strategic arms race will permit us to compete more effectively in other areas of military strength, including conventional forces and tactical nuclear weaponry.

This rationale is a far cry from the moralistic arguments of yesteryear in favor of nuclear disarmament and "trust" in Soviet good intentions. But as the experience of the last decade indicates, it is far more realistic.

SALT I was distinctly oversold by Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, who wrapped it all up with detente and some hazy promise of a bright new day in Soviet-American relations. Thanks in large measure to Gary Hart, the Carter administration will not make the same mistake with SALT II.

Big brother is a big worry

For growing numbers of Americans, 1984 is already here. They think that Big Brother — both the government and private business — knows too much about their personal lives. In a Louis Harris poll released last week, nearly two of every three people questioned said they were concerned about potential invasions of their privacy — a 17 per cent increase over last year. "It's no longer an abstract, Orwellian image printed by some left-wing lunatic who doesn't trust his country," says Harvard Law School Prof. Arthur R. Miller, a leading expert on privacy. "It's a legitimate issue that affects our day-to-day relationships, labor-school. Prof. Arthur R. Miller, a leading expert on privacy. "It's a legitimate issue that affects our day-to-day relationships, labor-management, doctor-patient, school-student, customer-department store."

Nearly three - fourths of Americans think that organizations that collect data on people ask too many personal questions. Considered the worst offenders: finance companies (cited by 45 per cent of the 1,513 people sampled), credit bureaus (44 per cent) and insurance companies (38 per cent). The government agencies regarded as most threatening were the Internal Revenue Service (38 per cent), the CIA (34 per cent), the FBI (33 per cent), welfare agencies (32 per cent) and the census bureau. An overwhelming 91 per cent believed it was "very important" that an individual's permission be obtained before information is released to others. "Just about everyone concedes that you have to give out information about yourself in order to participate in society," says Robert Ellis Smith, publisher of Privacy Journal, a monthly newsletter. "The question is, once you give out that information, what control do you have over it?"

Search for oil rig victims called off

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The Coast Guard has given up its search for seven men lost at sea when the offshore oil drilling rig they were working on collapsed and sank in the Gulf of Mexico.

The body of an eighth man on the missing list was recovered from the submerged rig by divers Sunday afternoon just before the search was called off. He was not immediately identified.

Officials involved in the three-day rescue and recovery operation said there was little hope that any of the missing men will ever be found alive, but Coast Guard Lt. Gabe Kinney said the case is not yet closed.

"We've had instances where people have drifted for weeks, but they are few and far between. We don't close a case until we have it completely resolved, so we will continue to carry this as 'pending,'" he said.

The men have been missing since a support leg collapsed, toppling the 1,300-ton Ranger I platform into the water about 12 miles south of Galveston late Thursday. It is now resting in 60 feet of water, with the top 29 feet below the surface.

Thirty-four men were aboard the rig when it went down. Twenty-six were rescued, including four seriously injured.

The eight missing men were identified as Eddie Fredericks, John Perkins, Lee Cruidy, Dennis Smith, Walter Fobmogie, Ed Hanks, Barton Sealy and Cruz Palmarez. The Coast Guard did not list hometowns or ages.

Divers explored the sunken rig on the chance some of the missing men may have found air pockets, but gave up the search Sunday night after finding no sign of life. The compartments where life-sustaining air could have been trapped were all filled with water, divers said.

"Chances are pretty slim anyone is in there," said Jess Stark, 43, of Houston, supervisor of 21 civilian divers who participated in the search.

He said choppy seas and high winds on the surface and treacherous currents underwater menaced his divers in and around the rig as they worked and may have swept away the victims.

"The people missing are probably scattered to the sea," he said.

Stark said any further dives in the area will be to determine how salvage operations will be undertaken. He said the rig at present is a navigational hazard and will have to be moved or destroyed.

The rig is owned by Atlantic Pacific Corp. of Houston and leased to the Mitchell Energy Development Corp. Officials of the two companies would not speculate on what caused the rig to collapse.

Kinney, who had to break news of the search's cancellation to fiancées, relatives and friends of the missing men as well as reporters, had no idea where the riggers were.

"I don't know where they (the missing men) are," he said. "They could be in the rig. They could be under the rig. They could be drifting with the Gulf currents, which are notorious. They could be anywhere."

"Anywhere is as narrow as I can make it."

Good moisture to help production on area's grasslands

With the unusually good moisture conditions in the Texas Panhandle, local farmers and ranchers are looking for excellent prospective grassland production during the coming year.

But we must manage our grasslands and grassland plants to get this good production. To manage these grasslands plants for best production, we need to know all we can about them. We should have some idea of the needs of these plants, how they grow, how they feed themselves, how and when they reproduce, how they compete with each other, and how they respond to the kind, time, and amount of grazing use we might give them. In short we need to know HOW GRASS GROWS.

Many people believe plants get their food from the soil, but this is not true. If we were to analyze a sample of soil we would find no plant food. Instead we would find "raw materials" such as nitrogen and phosphorus. When water is available and temperatures are favorable, the plant absorbs these minerals and water through its roots. It then moves them up into its leaves where, with energy furnished by the sun, these raw materials are combined with air and manufactured into food. This process is called photosynthesis. Actually about 95 percent of the total plant comes from carbon and other elements that the plant takes from the air. The green part of the plant, then, is the "food factory" and the only place where food is actually manufactured.

After the food is manufactured a part of it goes back into the roots. This feeds the roots to increase their size and repair damages. Much of the food is also used to grow new roots because perennial grass plants replace about half their roots each year.

Part of the manufactured food is used for growing more leaves to increase the size of food factory. Part is used to produce stems and seed so the plant can reproduce itself. In addition a part of the food manufactured in the leaves is returned to the plant roots in the form of stored plant food. This stored food is very important to the plant. This is used to keep the plant alive during the winter or during other nongrowing periods. This food is also used by the plant to start growth in the spring. In cooler climates leaves dry up in the fall of the year and the plant is dormant for several weeks or months.

Then when moisture and temperature conditions are right for growth, the plant has no food factory as yet, so it draws on the food reserves it stored up the year before to send up its first green leaves. Some plants also go dormant during hot or dry weather, and they too must have stored food to enable them to begin growth again. If the first few leaves are clipped or grazed off, the plant must tap into its root reserves again to replace these leaves. If the leaves are repeatedly clipped, the plant soon runs out of reserves and simply starves to death.

It is apparent that the plant must be able to feed itself to stay alive. Fortunately strong healthy plants are able to produce more food than they need. It is this surplus growth that we can harvest with livestock and wildlife.

Bike-A-Thon held Saturday

WHITE DEER — Riders from all over Carson County made a 20-mile trek from White Deer to Skellytown and back Saturday in the annual Carson County Bike-A-Thon for cancer.

Each rider secured a list of sponsors who pledged a certain amount of money for each mile made by the rider. Awards for the winners in various categories were given.

Attracting industry explained

PERRYTON — Learning the techniques, doing the necessary homework and then organizing for industrial development are the keys to locating new industry and payrolls.

But first, a city needs to look within its own backyard, said Jerry Heare, director of the community development division of the Texas Industrial Commission.

Heare spoke to a small group of civic and community leaders Tuesday on industrial development. He outlined three steps in determining what a city has to offer new business and then outlined a step approach in organizing for industry.

A central point of his speech, however, was that many industrial prospects are already here and operating within Perryton and the Ochiltree County area. There are businesses in town that could expand their operations, he said.

There are, for the most part, proven businesses that could give further service to their fields. Overlooking this phase of industrial development could cost a city valuable potential for expansion, he noted.

Heare arrived in Perryton Monday morning and toured the Perryton area with Leo Meyers to get an overall view and consider the area's potentials. He reported his general attitudes and impressions at Tuesday's luncheon, which was hosted by the Perryton Industrial Foundation and Chamber of Commerce.

He said 80 percent of the companies that consider moving to Texas express an interest in leasing land and a building first. Knowing how to finance such projects, in turn, is also important.

THE GRAY COUNTY chapter of the March of Dimes recently presented Highland General Hospital with a $500 check to go toward the purchase of an apnea monitor, which is used to check the respiration of newborn babies. Above, chapter Treasurer Alberta Jeffries presents William D. Owen Jr., director of respiratory therapy at the hospital, with the check.

100 children slain in Africa

PARIS (AP) — About 100 school children between the ages of 8 and 16 were killed by soldiers in the Central African Empire after protesting rules requiring them to buy and wear uniforms. Amnesty International reported today.

The Paris office of the human rights organization said students in the Central African Empire have been demonstrating against the rules about uniforms since the first of the year. The students have thrown stones at many official cars.

Amnesty said on April 18, soldiers of the Imperial Guard swept through homes in four areas of the capital of Bangui, rounded up the children and took them to the prison at Ngaranga.

The students were put in small cells sealed so tightly that about 20 of the children suffocated, Amnesty said. Some of the children were stoned by the guards to punish them for throwing stones at the imperial car. Some were stabbed with bayonets and others were beaten to death with clubs spiked with nails.

FOCUS

Dissident

Alexander Ginzburg, one of five Soviet prisoners recently released to the United States, has spent more than 10 years in jail for disagreeing openly with his country's government. Newspaper stories often refer to Soviet citizens who speak out against their government as "dissidents." A dissident is defined simply as a person who disagrees. Ginzburg was imprisoned for disagreeing with the Soviet government's policies on human rights. He and other dissidents called attention to the conditions in Soviet prisons, where prisoners often must eat rotten food, live in filthy quarters, and receive very little medical care. Ginzburg has promised to serve as a dissident even though he is now in the United States.

DO YOU KNOW — What exiled Soviet writer recently offered Ginzburg a place to live?

police report

Dora Nash Hunnicutt of Pampa was arrested in connection with the theft of six record albums from Alco Discount Store in the Coronado Center. She was taken to the city jail, where police reportedly found her to be carrying marijuana. Hunnicutt was charged with theft over $20 and under $200, and possession of a controlled substance. Bond for each charge was set at $500 by Justice of the Peace Nat Lundsford.

Georgia Ann Berry of 723 N. Banks reported the theft of her green 1970 Oldsmobile Cutlass from her residence Saturday night. The car was recovered Sunday morning.

Barney Eastman Day of 1133 Duncan reported the burglary of his residence. Stolen were a stereo, turntable and speakers, all valued by police at $225. Police have a suspect in the case.

The police department responded to 51 calls in a 40-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Jackie Ray Marshall, 18, of 534 N. Davis was arrested Saturday in connection with the burglary of a Zimmers Street residence. Watches, a gun, tools and miscellaneous items were reported stolen from the house. Police reported most of the items recovered.

A movie camera and 50-8-track tapes were reported stolen from the Furniture Exchange Store in the 300 block of East Tyng Street. Burglars apparently gained entrance to the building by breaking and climbing through a window. Police investigated after discovering the front door to the store open shortly after 1 a.m. Saturday morning.

Terry Wayne Hoskins, 22, was arrested for driving while intoxicated, possession of a controlled substance and speeding on South Reid Street after police received a complaint. Hoskins was being held in Gray County Jail Saturday under $1000 bond.

Gary Gerald Swiney reported the theft of a radiator from the Pampa Auto Center at 126 S. Houston St.

fire report

9:40 p.m. Sunday — Firemen were called to the 500 block of North Gray Street in response to a fire caused by an overturned smudge pot owned by the city. Damage to road signs was reported.

Corrections

We regret the confusion over an article appearing in Sunday's edition of the News which said there was no hospital in Wheeler. The article should have read what became of the old Wheeler hospital. We realize that Wheeler has a fine 20-bed hospital and supports three doctors. We regret this mistake.

Also in Sunday's News, the name of Benny Kirksey of the Citizens Bank & Trust Company was spelled incorrectly in a story dealing with fraudulent phone calls made by a man identifying himself as a bank employee. We regret the error.

Dear Abby

by abigail van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and retired, but he's making a career of making my life miserable. He used to be quite the man about town. I spent many lonely evenings wondering where he was and when he'd come home.

Now, I can't get him out of the house. I actually have to look for things for him to do: "Go to the grocery store! Go to the drugstore! Go to the hardware store!"

I can hardly stand the sight of him! My stomach turns over when I hear his key in the door.

After he reads the morning paper, he follows me around supervising the cooking and housekeeping.

If a lady friend of mine comes over for a cup of tea, he horns in and monopolizes the conversation.

Dear God, I am so sick of him, death would be a welcome release!

AGING IN INDIANA

DEAR AGING: Yours or his? The quality of a marriage is only as good as the materials used by the builders. The "cinder of life" is caring, sharing, patience, forgiveness and understanding. One can't expect to spend his twilight years in a cathedral when he's accumulated only enough "lumber" for a shack.

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to the home of a married couple for dinner so I brought my hostess a bottle of expensive French wine.

She thanked me for it, then promptly put it away. Instead of serving my lovely wine with dinner, she served a domestic wine. I thought that was tacky. I was also very disappointed because, enjoying fine wines as I do, I had looked forward to having some of the wine I had brought.

According to the rules of etiquette shouldn't my hostess have served my wine?

STATEN ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: No. And don't assume that because a wine is expensive and French, it is superior to a less costly domestic wine. It ain't necessarily so, say impartial wine connoisseurs.

DEAR ABBY: I recently learned that our 22-year-old son in college is the father of a child who was given away for adoption last year. Our son did not confide in us. I found this out quite by accident.

My husband and I have always looked forward to our first grandchild and I am sick with grief to think that somewhere in this world I have a grandchild whom I will never know. I haven't been able to bring myself to tell my husband. My question: Do I have the right to keep this from him? It's HIS grandchild, too.

GRIEVING GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: No good can come from telling your husband. Your grandchild is now somebody else's child and grandchild as well. Be kind and silent. And don't dwell on it. Regret is the cancer of life.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SOLLY IN THE WINDY CITY: You've got a "gelt" complex. Don't assume that every woman who shows an interest in you is after your money—unless, of course, that's all you have to offer.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

A RARE TELEVISION INTERVIEW with James Cagney: The legendary actor, center, sits with television host Mike Douglas, right, and co-host actor Carroll O'Connor at Cagney's Los Angeles home recently. "It's a dream come true," declares Douglas in speaking of the soon to be televised interview. It is only the second time in 19 years that Cagney has been interviewed on television.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University senior Peter Altschul marches to the beat of his own drum.

He goes where the beat takes him — whether it's on the football field during half-time, on a stage with the university band or accompanying Princeton's glee club.

It's not an easy task. Peter Altschul has been blind since birth.

"One of the myths people have about blind people is that they're good at music because they have good ears," he says. "But I don't think being blind has helped me. Music is a talent that has to be worked on and developed."

And, adds Altschul, "Music is where my talent lies."

The percussionist marches with Princeton's band in between the halves of football games. One of the band's managers, who is responsible for equipment, guides him by the elbow to keep him in formation.

"On the whole, it's very easy," he says. "It's a very loosely knit organization. We form things like blobs, very simple things, on the field."

Altschul also plays the organ, piano, tympani and the snare drum, but he considers himself more than just another percussionist.

After he completes graduate school — which he plans to attend after his Princeton graduation — he says he would like to teach music, compose or, perhaps, do arrangements for a rock'n'roll band.

The Pleasantville, N.Y., native says he expects to encounter some prejudice in the professional world, as he says he has encountered some bias in academia.

"I've always been told that for a blind person to get what he wants he has to be better than 90 percent of all sighted people," he says. "I think I have a reasonably good shot at doing these things."

He adds, "There are some good blind musicians."

Students of Lois Fagan in recital

Piano students of Lois Fagan will appear in recital at 2:30 p.m. May 20 in Tarpley Recital Hall, 119 N. Cuyler.

The program will feature ensemble numbers using six pianos and organ and will be performed by adults and students from kindergarten, grade school, junior high and high school.

A special feature will be vocal selections by Ruby Davis, accompanied by Lois Fagan.

Mrs. Fagan said that ensemble playing aids rhythm, precision, fluent reading and musical pleasure. She added that "it offers tremendous value in developing, coordination, cooperation and listening."

A reception will follow the recital. The public is invited to attend.

DEAR POLLY: Please help me. My gorgeous new satin comforter is driving me out of my mind. It keeps sliding off the bed. I do not know what to use that will not damage my comforter. I hope someone has a solution for me. — Lucille

DEAR LUCILLE: You do have a bothersome problem. The best suggestion I have is to use a piece of elastic about an inch wide and long enough to go all around your mattress. Sew-ends together and slip around the mattress (about 6 or 8 inches above the lower edge).

Put comforter on in the position you would like it and then with strong thread tack through the comforter and top of the elastic every 6 inches or so. When you put the comforter on the bed at night slip the elastic around the mattress. Any sort of pinning will doubtless end with a tear or so in the comforter. — POLLY

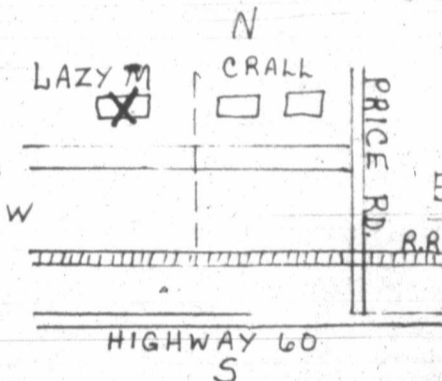

DEAR POLLY: The reader who has so many new dish cloths can make an easy-care tablecloth of any size, depending on how many she has. Just sew them together as you would a quilt of squares. When one wants a more finished look for the back use a lightweight knit fabric and then sew around the "blocks" just like quilting a quilt. This could also be done to make an easy care child's quilt for nap time or car trips. — JOAN

by laurence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband and I have decided to lose a few pounds together. The idea is fine with me but my problem is I don't really know what our calorie intake should be to lose and maintain a certain weight.

I usually go on a 1000-calorie diet when I want to lose some fat but I know the calorie requirements are different for men. My husband is 39 years old and he is 5 feet 8 and wants to maintain 155 pounds. Right now he is five or six pounds over that.

I'm 38 years old, 5 feet 2, of medium frame and weigh 125. I would like to maintain 115 pounds. We are both active and play tennis together and plan to start jogging again. I would appreciate any information you can give us.

DEAR READER: The most important advice I can give you is not to try to lose the weight all at once. Since you are both active, it would be a simple matter to lose the small amount of weight you want to get rid of through increased exercise. It doesn't have to be strenuous exercise either.

If you'll just stay on the same diet and be very careful not to increase your calorie intake, all you would need to do is walk a mile-and-a-half a day. That would be approximately 90 calories a day for your husband. If he did this every day, within a year's time he would have eliminated the number of calories in approximately 10 pounds of body fat.

Since you weigh a little less and it requires fewer calories for you to walk a mile, you won't do as well but the results will still be very impressive.

Now that's the healthy way to lose a small amount of excess fat. It's so much better for your body than those wild fad diets that people use for a crash weight loss. Most of those really tend to wreck people's health. The only good thing about them is that most people don't stay on them.

Now if you want to sensibly speed up your weight loss a little bit, it wouldn't hurt for you to drop off one or two items in your diet that you know contain some calories that you could do without. This might be sugar in your coffee, if you drink coffee, or some other sweet drink that you could do without. It could be a simple dessert or even a slice of bread. I like for people to get whole grain cereals, which means whole wheat bread. But if you are eating white bread in particular, I don't consider leaving off a slice of that a day any great loss to your nutritional intake.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, that you can use as a guide to have a well-balanced low-calorie diet. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

This is not the kind of diet that I think you should stay on for a long period of time. In fact you can add to this diet the foods that you might need to make yourself feel a little more satisfied with the food you're eating. It's all right in your case because you don't really need to lose many pounds and if you'll just add the little exercise that I suggested each day, your problem will solve itself.

BILL WALTON talks to the press after announcing that he will play basketball with the San Diego Clippers next season. Walton signed a seven year contract that will make him the highest paid player in the NBA. (AP Laserphoto)

Walton signs with San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By luring Bill Walton to his hometown, the San Diego Clippers found the dominant center they coveted. Now the question looms: Will the price be Free — high-scoring guard Lloyd Free?

"I don't think we'd be so happy to give up Free," said Irv Levin, Clippers' president, after announcing he had signed Walton to the highest salary ever paid in the National Basketball Association.

Under NBA provisions, San Diego must compensate Portland for the loss of the 6-foot-11 Walton, a three-time All-America at UCLA who turned the Trail Blazers into champions in three years.

"Bill Walton is the most valuable player in the NBA, and we expect to be compensated accordingly," said Harry Glickman, Blazers' executive vice president and general manager.

Free was the NBA's No. 2 scorer this past season, averaging 28.8 points per game for the first-year franchise.

A major stumbling block in the compensation discussions will be the broken foot Walton suffered at Portland in playoffs a year ago. The fractured arch sidelined Walton the entire past season and, to some, remains a matter of concern considering Walton's history of injuries.

"Because of the foot injury, it could be hard to decide what is fair," said Clippers' Coach Gene Shue.

That's not the only hitch for the Clippers. They have yet to work out compensation with the Denver Nuggets for the late-season signing of guard Brian Taylor, who left Denver over a contract dispute.

In bi-district playoffs PHS hosts Monterey Tuesday

By JERRY GUNTER
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa's Harvesters will enter the first round of the bi-district playoffs Tuesday as they host the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen at Opus Park.

The Harvesters advanced to the post-season playoffs by virtue of their 5-4 win over the Amarillo High Sandies Friday. Meanwhile, Lubbock Monterey tied for the first-half title in District 4-AAAA and then won the second-half crown outright to gain the playoff spot.

Pampa will carry a 19-5 mark into Tuesday's confrontation, while Monterey stands at 24-7.

This will be the first time ever for the Harvesters to be in the playoffs as they have never won a district title. But the Harvesters, who were picked as low as third in several polls, showed their strength as they won the District 3-AAAA crown.

Tuesday's 4 p.m. clash will be the first game of a three-game series. The second game will be Friday at Lubbock's Lowrey Field beginning at 2 p.m. The third game (if needed) will start immediately thereafter.

Pampa coach Steve Scott talked about the Plainsmen saying, "They have four pitchers that suppose to be pretty good. They all have good control. Also, Monterey has one exceptional hitter. He is the third baseman.

"The whole team has good hitters. They just play good fundamental baseball. They just don't make many mistakes and they are very comparable to Amarillo High."

For the last three years, Monterey's opponent has been Amarillo High in the bi-district round. And two of those three years, the Plainsmen have come out on top, including last year. As a matter of fact, Monterey advanced to the state tournament a year ago.

But Amarillo High was denied that fourth straight trip Friday as the Harvesters banged out 11 hits against the Sandies enroute to a come-from-behind 5-4 victory. It was the second win over the Sandies in three tries this year.

Scott said that he was not worried about his Harvesters having a letdown for Tuesday's game as he noted, "No, I don't anticipate it. We probably won't be as high as we were for Amarillo High, but I think that will help us. The incentive is still there and I don't think that we will have any loss in concentration and we won't be light."

Probable starters for Pampa in Tuesday's contest will be Steve McDougall in right field, Richard Wuest in center and Greg Koch in left.

The first baseman will be either Miekay Bynum, Keanan Henderson or Jeff Copeland. Mark Jennings will handle the chores at second with Joe Jeffers being the shortstop. At third base is Greg Quares. Rick Dougherty will be behind the plate with Steve Stout on the mound. Stout will bring a record of 8-1 into the first game of the bi-district playoffs.

Scott said that he was glad that the playoffs involve a best of three game series as he pointed out, "With it being this way, I think definitely the better team will win. You can't tell much from just one game. Just look at Palo Duro and what they did. They came over here and played real well and we only beat them 1-0. To get a true picture, it is best to have a three game series."

When asked if he would have preferred the final two games to be at home, Scott replied, "At first I thought that I would have preferred to play the last one at home, but after I think about it, I am glad to have the first one here. The second one is an advantage to you (at home) only if you win the first one. But anytime that you lose the first one, you are at a disadvantage."

SPORTS

Post wins LPGA tourney

ATLANTA (AP) — "It was an amazing round under the circumstances," said Sandra Post. "I thought a 69 would be good enough, and it was."

The Canadian golfer fashioned that 4-under-par total on a rain-soaked course Sunday to capture the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Atlanta event and hurdle into first place on the money list for this season.

"I used to be the worst rain player because I couldn't stand changing gloves, towels, using the umbrella," she said. "It took me five or six years to get the patience."

It paid off.

Post won $15,000 for her 2-shot triumph over Pat Bradley, giving her earnings of $91,758 this year to move ahead of two players who bypassed this event, Nancy Lopez and JoAnne Carner.

The 69 gave her a 54-hole total of 210, 9-under-par on the hilly

6,353-yard Brookfield West Country Club course. She finished in a steady drizzle that had followed a heavy shower that forced a suspension of play for 47 minutes.

Pam Higgins, leader the first two days, collapsed on the back side after holding a 1-shot edge over Post at the turn.

Bullets, Seattle are still alive

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Kevin Grevey and Tommy Henderson say they believe the defending champion Washington Bullets will apply the pressure needed against San Antonio to force the National Basketball Association Eastern Conference finals to seven games.

"I think we're going to play them awfully even," said Grevey, who scored 23 points as the Bullets defeated San Antonio 107-103 Sunday to send the best-of-seven series to Game 6 with the Spurs up 3-2. "We're not going to blow them out. They have too much offense to do that. But there will be a lot of pressure on them."

Game 6 will be played Wednesday night in San Antonio. If Game 7 is necessary, it will be played here at the Capital Centre Friday night.

Only two teams in the history of the NBA playoffs have come back from a 3-1 deficit to win three straight and a series — the Boston Celtics in 1968 and the Los Angeles Lakers in 1970.

The NBA championship series will begin Sunday between the winners in the East and the Phoenix-Seattle series in the West.

Although Elvin Hayes scored 24 points and 22 rebounds to lead the Bullets statistically, Washington Coach Dick Motta said it was the play of the guards, Grevey and Henderson, that keyed the victory. He said the guards were able to drive the middle while containing the Spurs' guards, George Gervin and James Silas.

It also hurt the Spurs that Gervin, the NBA's top scorer for the past two years, got only 28 points, going nearly 28 minutes at one point without a field goal. He got 17 of his points in the fourth period.

"They weren't falling but I wasn't about to stop shooting...that's my game," said Gervin. "This balgame is behind us. We just have to be ready to play Wednesday."

Over in the Western Conference, Seattle's 6-foot-11 center Jack Sigafoos, who had hit only 25 percent of his shots in the four previous games against the Suns, broke loose for 21 points Sunday, hitting seven of 11 attempts from the field and going seven for eight at the free throw line.

At the same time, Seattle came up with 54 percent shooting from the field, walloping the Suns, 43-27, and picking up a 106-105 victory before a sell-out crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

The victory knotted the best-of-seven, National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series at 3-3 and sends the two teams back to Seattle's Kingdome for the finale Thursday night. The victor will meet the winner of the San Antonio-Washington Eastern Conference title series for the NBA crown.

"We were going right at them," said Brown, who had 15 points. "We wanted to take the game right to them, and that's what we did."

Sikma said he did everything he could to break out of the slump, but nothing worked. "So, I had nothing to lose, so why not play hard?"

Tom Watson captures Nelson Classic

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson pocketed the $54,000 check that went with his third tour victory of 1979 and squirmed uncomfortably when asked if runnerup Bill Rogers was right in calling him the greatest player in the game.

"When I'm striking the ball well, I feel I can win any tournament I play," said the 29-year-old Watson, who shot even par Sunday to turn back a challenge of Rogers, Larry Nelson and Jerry Pate to win the Byron Nelson Golf Classic at 275, five under par.

Rogers, a 27-year-old former University of Houston All-American golfer, hit the pin with "the best 3-iron I ever hit" on the 18th hole and tapped in a birdie putt to tie Watson and send the tournament into sudden death.

Then Rogers chipped his third shot against the pin on No. 15, on the first hole of the playoff. Watson had an uphill lie in a bunker, 90 feet from the pin on the 568-yard, par-5 hole, but he birdied the hole from almost the same position in regulation play a while earlier.

After Rogers' shot, Watson shook his head, grinned at his rival, then grabbed a sand wedge and stepped into the trap. "It was either do or die. You either had to do it or you don't. There were no in-between thoughts," Watson confessed later.

He blasted straight at the hole and watched as his ball died only 10 inches from the pin. He knocked in his putt, Rogers missed his four-foot birdie try, and the victory was Watson's. To Rogers went the $32,400 check for second place.

Nelson, despite two late birdies, finished third at 276, four under par and 1 shot off the pace. Pate, who was tied for the lead until he bogeyed No. 14, bogeyed the last hole and finished 2-over-par for the day and 278 for the tourney, all alone in fourth place.

Jerry McGee, Mike Brannan, Calvin Pette and Morris Hatalsky were at 279.

A few years ago, said Watson, "I had the reputation as a choker," but he two-putted from 70 feet on the 18th hole to preserve his playoff spot, after Rogers' late birdie. Then Watson came through when it counted from the bunker in sudden death.

Playing in the threesome behind Rogers, Watson birdied the 15th to recapture the lead at 5-under. Then Watson started playing cautiously, because "I felt all I had to do was make pars to win the tournament."

Major League roundup

Paul Blair starts his comeback

By The Associated Press

Paul Blair was waiting for them to start kicking dirt into his grave at the age of 35. Cut by the New York Yankees in April and resigned to a career as a high school or college baseball coach, he had given up on a major league career that had spanned 15 years.

However, Cincinnati picked him up last week, and Sunday Blair got his first National League hit, a two-run homer that snapped a 1-1 tie and started the Reds to a 7-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Philis 12, Giants 2

Mike Schmidt cracked his 200th career homer, a leadoff shot in the second inning, and scored four runs to power Philadelphia's attack. The homer was Schmidt's 10th this season, tying him with Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the league lead.

Dodgers 8, Expos 2

Joe Ferguson and Dave Lopes both homered for the second day in a row to help power the Dodgers to their seventh consecutive victory.

Astros 3, Cubs 0

Joe Niekro limited Chicago to five hits for his second shutout of the season, walking one and striking out one.

Alan Ashby, Jeff Leonard and Jose Cruz drove in Houston's runs off Mike Krukow, 1-2.

Cards 7, Braves 3

Ken Oberkfell hit a two-run homer, his first of the season, and George Hendrick drove in three runs with a double to beat Atlanta.

Padres 5, Mets 4

Gene Richards' bases-loaded single in the bottom of the 10th propelled San Diego over New York.

Indians 3, Twins 2

Wayne Garland allowed seven hits as he led the Indians to the victory. It was his first victory since April 25, 1978.

Garland, 1-4, allowed two runs in 61.3 innings before being replaced in the seventh by Sid Monge, who in turn needed ninth-inning relief help from Victor Cruz. Cruz gained his second save of the season.

Yankees 12, Angels 10

Graig Nettles drove in five runs with a homer and single and made three great fielding plays at third base, helping New York beat California.

Red Sox 8, A's 2

George Scott and Butch Hobson hit home runs and Chuck Rainey pitched a three-hitter, one of them a two-run homer to Dwayne Murphy, as Boston beat Oakland.

Royals 14, White Sox 5

John Wathan's two-run homer capped a five-run fourth inning, and Willie Wilson's first major league homer — a two-run, inside-the-park shot — powered Kansas City over Chicago.

Tigers 6, Brewers 2

Jason Thompson, Rusty Staub and Steve Kemp blasted home runs to lead Detroit over Milwaukee. Thompson staked winner Jack Morris to a 2-0 lead in the second inning with his third homer of the season, following Kemp's leadoff single against Moose Haas, 2-2.

Blue Jays 3-5, Rangers 1-7

Mark Lemongello gained his first victory of the season as he pitched Toronto past Texas with an eight-hitter in the opener of their double-header. The Rangers won the second game by scoring seven runs in the eighth inning, capped by Mike Jorgensen's three-run homer.

HEALTHFUL HINTS

Most often asked Questions On Nutrition BY: KATRINA BIGHAM

Q. Can a woman's health before she becomes pregnant affect the health of her future child and her own health during pregnancy? In other words, should a woman start preparing herself by learning and using good nutritional practices long before she plans to start her family?

A. Yes—yes, indeed! Leading nutritionists relate that women who have followed good nutritional practices before they conceived were in excellent health during their pregnancies and had beautiful, superior babies. Most never experience a day of nausea and rarely have to worry about threatened miscarriage or giving birth to premature, stillborn, or malformed children. The time to prepare yourself for having beautiful, healthy children is definitely well before conception!

With overhaul of pay system

Saving $4.6 billion on federal payroll

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to press Congress for an overhaul of the federal pay system that could save taxpayers an estimated $4.6 billion per year.

Savings would come at the expense of some 4 million civilian and military employees, whose future pay raises would be held down for perhaps several years.

Carter overrode doubts of some of his senior White House advisers, who fear the measure may provoke too much opposition from federal workers, their labor unions and other interest groups who feel threatened by the plan.

He gave final approval to the "pay reform" plan earlier this month, and it is scheduled to go to Congress by early June.

Its basic direction is to hold down federal pay raises until levels are more in line with official calculations of the going rate for similar work in private industry and state and local governments.

The plan's target is a federal pay system that administration officials say:

- In some places pays janitors more than nurses, and pays truck drivers more than engineers.
- Pays federal blue collar workers 8 percent more than their privately-employed counterparts.
- Does not include the federal government's generous pensions and other fringe benefits when computing federal pay levels supposedly comparable with those in private industry.

—Pays secretaries, clerks, and other white-collar workers more than their private sector counterparts in places such as San Antonio, but less in high-wage areas such as New York.

No individual federal worker would take a pay cut, and federal white-collar workers in high-wage areas like New York City and Alaska could end up with bigger raises than before.

But most federal workers would see their pay raises held down, possibly for several years.

The plan would directly affect future pay raises for 1.4 million federal white-collar workers and 462,000 blue-collar workers.

Indirectly, it also would hold down future pay raises for the more than two million uniformed military personnel and State Department foreign service officers, whose yearly raises are linked to raises for the so-called "general schedule" of federal white-collar pay.

Pay for the 523,000 Postal Service employees is set by collective bargaining, so Carter's pay plan would not affect them beyond setting an example.

Advocates say Carter's plan would correct quirks which federal managers have complained about for years, and bring major savings to taxpayers.

Alan Campbell, the president's personnel director, estimates a $4 billion annual savings just from counting federal fringe benefits in the formula for setting pay for white-collar and blue-collar workers.

Administration officials are now working on a more accurate forecast of savings in this area, which they say is almost certain to be higher than $4 billion.

Beyond that, an estimated $600 million-a-year savings would be realized by phasing out the top three pay levels in the five-step pay scale for blue-collar workers.

By law their top scale is 12 percent higher than locally prevailing wages for similar work. The average blue-collar worker is at about step four on the pay scale and ordinarily gets 8.1 percent more than the local going rate.

At present federal blue-collar workers are getting only 5.2 percent more than local rates because Carter is holding down federal pay as part of his anti-inflation program, but the holddown is supposed to be temporary.

Carter's pay plan would set the top step permanently at the going rate for similar work in the local area.

Despite faults with administration

Kennedy still supporting Carter for 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — Well, the grasshopper still is supporting the ant.

Not that they don't have their differences, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says he is firmly for President Carter in 1980 — and hopes there will be no other candidates for the Democratic nomination.

"I intend to support the ant in 1980, and I hope the other grasshoppers will, too," Kennedy said, smiling as he extended the White House fable.

Jody Powell started it by borrowing Aesop's tale of the thrifty, hard-working ant to contrast Carter with the critics of his energy policies. Powell did not assign the roles, but it wasn't hard to figure out who was who.

According to Powell, the ant was "sort of a drudge and worked hard. A lot of people said that the ant didn't make speeches with a lot of rhetoric in them. . . ." He said grasshoppers spend their time fiddling, chirping "and making irresponsible statements about what the ant was trying to do."

Powell's version of the fable ends with a hungry grasshopper asking the ant for a bite to eat. "The ant said 'Kiss off,' and the grasshopper died," said the White House press secretary.

Aesop's moral was a bit more formal: "The poet who sings for his breakfast shall whistle for his dinner."

Kennedy, of course, is not your average grasshopper, and he cannot be kissed off — not with the support he commands in the Democratic Party. The polls rank him the man most Democrats would prefer for president next year.

There are self-starting Kennedy-for-president movements in at least a half-dozen states, Kennedy says he tries to discourage them.

"I tell them just what I'm saying now: that I expect the president to run and that he'll be renominated, and that I'm not a candidate."

That leaves an obvious question unanswered. What if Carter doesn't run, or drops out later? That's unlikely, but then so was Lyndon B. Johnson's announcement that he wasn't available for renomination in 1968.

"I really can't speculate," Kennedy said the other day. "I've indicated the current realities and the current situation."

Project may never finish

CUSTER, S.D. (AP) — Age finally has an edge on Korczak Ziolkowski, the driven sculptor of Crazy Horse Mountain. He says he intends to finish the project, but at 70 — overweight and tired — he is building his own tomb.

Three decades ago, Ziolkowski began blasting a gigantic statue of the famed Sioux Indian leader from the granite mountain five miles north of Custer.

The head and outstretched arm of the 563-foot memorial are roughly silhouetted against the sky. Ziolkowski said he has blasted 6.2 million tons of rock off the mountain — but about 2 million tons remain.

And at the base of the mountain, he has blasted a crypt out of the granite and positioned a sarcophagus behind a swinging, one-ton metal door.

Ziolkowski says it would take six men working year-round five more years to complete the project, which would depict Crazy Horse astride a horse, pointing across the mountains that were sacred to his people. But he intends to remain part of it, even in death.

"Mother (his wife) would be jealous if someone else finished it," he said. "But I told her that the important thing is that it get done."

That's also important to nearby residents, who have been chafing at the slowness of progress.

"When you go past that thing as often as most of us do, it's hard to see any progress," said Custer County Commissioner Bill Sager. "It's discouraging and people in this small town can be quick to call it a ripoff."

"There are some people who think he's a mountebank but who are too diplomatic to say so," agreed Martha Schilling, executive secretary of the Custer Chamber of Commerce.

"They think it'll never get done — that he's just sitting there raking in the dollars," she added. "But the money's not his. It goes to the (Crazy Horse Memorial) foundation."

Prospects brighten for grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent big orders of corn by the Soviet Union, purchases of rice by South Korea and a brisk wheat trade on a broad front have brightened prospects for American grain producers.

As a result, says the Agriculture Department, farm prices of grain — on the average — are edging up from prospects a few months ago.

But the 1979 crops are a long way from being harvested and, particularly in the case of corn — the most important of all — have not yet been planted in their entirety.

Looking at the available information now, however, department economists say the booming export trade is expected to continue well into the 1979-80 marketing years. Those begin June 1 for wheat, Aug. 1 for rice and Oct. 1 for corn.

Wheat exports this year are expected to total 1.2 billion bushels, up from around 1.12 billion in 1977-78. Looking at next year, experts say exports could range between 1.05 billion and 1.3 billion bushels, depending on the supply situation.

Rice exports are estimated at 81 million hundredweight this season, up from 72.8 million in 1977-78, and could range between 83 million and 91 million next marketing year.

Corn, the largest and most valuable U.S. grain crop in every dimension, is the key to much of the farm economy, including the prices of many of the other grains, the fortunes of livestock producers and, ultimately, how much Americans have to pay for a large portion of their food.

Last year's corn harvest was a record of 7.1 billion bushels, up from 6.43 billion in 1977. Counting leftover stocks, the total corn supply this marketing year was almost 8.19 billion bushels.

But domestic use, livened by increased livestock feeding, now is expected to require about 4.1 billion bushels of the supply. Counting the exports and other uses, total "disappearance" of corn this marketing year is projected at about 6.73 billion bushels, leaving about 1.46 billion on hand when the new marketing year begins on Oct. 1.

If another bumper corn crop is harvested, say around 7.0 billion bushels, department experts think that exports will continue at this year's pace in 1979-80, that livestock feeding will expand further and that total disappearance may be around 7.05 billion bushels — slightly more than the harvest.

But if the tardy plantings this spring, summer drought and other problems take hold, the harvest might be only about 5.8 billion bushels this fall.

In that case, prices would go up much faster and livestock feeding decline sharply. One quirk, according to the analysis, is that exports might rise more sharply as some foreign countries stockpile corn as hedges against still further price increases.

The total use of corn in the smaller-crop scenario could be about 6.73 billion bushels — approximately the disappearance estimated for the current year, with larger exports offsetting the drop in livestock feeding.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Milk production by the nation's dairy cows totaled about 10.6 billion pounds in April, says the Agriculture Department.

That was slightly below production in April of last year. Cumulatively, through the first four months, milk output was about 40.6 billion pounds, slightly more than in January-April of 1978.

The number of milk cows in dairy herds averaged 10.7 million head last month, down 1 percent from 10.8 million in April 1978, the department said in a monthly report.

Production per cow averaged 987 pounds of milk in April, up seven pounds from a year earlier.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat production by the nation's federally inspected packing plants dropped to 661.5 million pounds last week, down 10 percent from 731.3 million pounds in the same week a year ago, says the Agriculture Department.

Beef led the decline, as it has for months, totaling 366.7 million pounds, down 19 percent from 455.5 million a year earlier. Declines also were reported for calf, veal, lamb and mutton.

Pork, as it has, increased last week to 283.5 million pounds, up 8 percent from a year ago, the department said.

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard will convene a court martial Tuesday on negligence charges against the commander of the cutter, Cuyahoga, which lost 11 crewmen in a collision with a freighter last October in Chesapeake Bay.

Chief Warrant Officer Donald K. Robinson, 47, a 24-year service veteran now assigned to a desk job, already has been blamed for the accident by Coast Guard Commandant, Adm. John B. Hayes, and the National Transportation Safety Board. If convicted, he faces dishonorable discharge and up to six years hard labor.
