GOV. BILL CLEMENTS (left) felt he had a good first round with the Texas Legislature, which closed its 66th session Monday night. But the governor, still in his first year in office, said he would call for a special session soon, which might mean more yawns from the likes of Rep. Buddy Temple of Diboll (bottom), who showed the strain of the late hours. See pages 3 and 4 for details on legislation that passed and failed in the session's final hours. (AP Laser photos)

From 'F' to 'B' Legislative grade raised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 66th Legislature ended its regular session Monday with a "B" report card from Gov. Bill Clements but low marks from the Texas Consumer Association. Lawmakers finished their major tasks hours before the constitutionally mandated midnight adjournment, avoiding the usual last-minute crush of activity. With little debate they passed and sent to Clements bills that: —Appropriate $20.2 billion to run state government over the next two years, a 29.8 percent increase over the current budget. —Boost state aid to school districts by $967 million, about a third of which will be spent on 51 percent cost-of-living raises for school teachers each of the next two years. —Carry out all provisions of the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment, including a school tax freeze for elderly Texans and repeal of property taxes on personal cars. Both the disabled and persons 65 and older will have $15,000 of the market value of their homes knocked off the school tax rolls. Other homeowners received a $5,000 homestead exemption automatically from the Tax Relief Amendment. Clements, whose feisty style irritated some legislators as the 140-day session wore on, received standing ovations during courtesy visits to each chamber. He said he would see lawmakers again in a special session on his initiative and referendum proposal, which they had cold-shouldered. But the special session won't be soon, he intimated to the House. "Those of you who have apartments with long term leases, just go ahead and give them up because we are not going to have a quick special session. And I will see you back in Austin before too long," Clements told the laughing, applauding representatives. He later told reporters he had raised the "F" grade he had stamped on the Legislature just over a week ago when much of his program was languishing. "I would be something less than honest if I said I was overjoyed with the session, overall. But looking over the record, I think I will have to raise my pre-commencement grade assignment from 'F' to 'B,'" Clements said at a post-midnight news conference over the levings of a buffet he had provided for staffers and reporters. The state's first Republican governor since 1874 said that overall, his program hadn't fared so badly in the overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature. Adjournment came shortly after Speaker Bill Clayton delivered a speech that praised the House but raised the nagging doubts some feel after a session marked by accusations that legislators served special interests more than the public interest. "This House did not shirk its duty. We faced the problems as our collective wisdom decreed," he said. "Are the taxpayers, the school children, the infirm, the needy better served because we were here? Have we guaranteed that this House will be remembered for the good it did Texas and not for what it did not do?" Clayton asked. "These are questions that the voting public of Texas will be called on to decide before another Legislature convenes." The consumer association had its own answer. Jim Boyle, its executive director, said the business lobby "feasted on the average consumer" and "homebuyers will be paying probably $20,000 to $30,000 more in interest because of the savings and loans' control over this Legislature." The Legislature was the first to deal with the Sunset process that phases out agencies that lawmakers fail to continue.

Tax relief amendment okayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislators followed through on the 1978 decision of Texas voters with the approval Monday night of a bill fully implementing the Tax Relief Amendment. The 116-29 House vote on the conference committee report said the measure to the governor. The Senate earlier approved the compromise, 29-2. Gov. Bill Clements has insisted since before his inauguration on "meaningful" implementation of the amendment. Monday's legislative action was the climax of a process that began last summer when former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, apparently inspired by California's Proposition 13, called a special session to cut property taxes. The constitutional amendment that resulted was overwhelmingly approved last November. While there was no House debate Monday night before the implementing bill passed, a number of representatives said privately they fear it will result merely in a shifting of tax burdens from rural to urban property and from homes to businesses. The bill provides school districts $220 million in direct dollar-for-dollar reimbursement for revenue they would lose to mandated tax relief. Another $200 million contained in a separate school finance bill supposedly would serve as reimbursement, although it would be distributed through normal state aid formulas. The reimbursement figure includes $20 million that was added to a conference committee's original recommendation Monday after Dallas and Houston school administrators complained they would lose money. "A school district will get no less than 45 percent of its certificated revenue losses," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene. Some senators complained that the $20 million should have been saved to give state employees longevity pay. Others wanted it applied to a teachers pay raise. "We're robbing state employees of longevity pay to reward some fat cat school districts that have cheated on their assessments for many years," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. He failed, 9-20, to send the bill back to conference committee.

Officials disagree over crash cause

CHICAGO (AP) — Two federal safety officials — one in Washington, the other at the crash scene in Chicago — disagree over whether American Airlines Flight 191 was "doomed" when an engine fell off. One expert says it was impossible to control the aircraft once the engine separated, while another says loss of the engine alone would not have crippled the plane fatally. Investigators said Monday that flight data recorded on the jumbo jet shows the crew was trying to correct the DC-10s problems before it crashed Friday near O'Hare International Airport, killing at least 273 persons. As a government-ordered inspection of engine mounting bolts on all DC-10s got underway, investigators turned up a second broken part from the engine assembly of the airliner. They said it was not clear what role, if any, it played in the nation's worst air disaster. The dispute over whether the big jet could have been maneuvered to safety without its engine surfaced Monday between Langhorne Bond, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, and Elwood Driver, vice president of the National Transportation Safety Board. Bond said in Washington that it would have been impossible for the pilot to land the crippled plane at O'Hare once the engine separated. He said the plane was "doomed" from the moment it left the runway. "There is no certification procedure for flying without a whole engine assembly," he said.

"There is no pilot training to deal with that eventuality; no aircraft has ever been in the air under those circumstances. There is no reason to think that once that engine came off the airframe, that it would fly." But Driver said investigators maintain a DC-10 will fly with two engines after the third has separated. "The proof of it is that it did go from ground zero to 600 feet, and it did not leap up there on rubber bands," Driver said. "I don't want to get into a fight with Langhorne Bond, but he's in Washington and we are here (in Chicago)." The discovery followed the finding on Sunday of a broken 3-inch bolt that officials believed to be responsible for the separation of the engine from the jet's left wing. It is not known if the broken bolt caused the flange to break or if the broken flange caused the bolt to snap, FAA officials said. Driver said that in the next phase of the investigation, all three of the plane's engines will be sent to Tulsa, Okla., for examination. The FAA ordered the inspection or replacement of engine mounting bolts on all 134 DC-10s owned by U.S. operators and said all jets not inspected by 3 a.m. today must be grounded. In other developments, Cook County Medical Examiner Dr. Robert Stein said there had been positive identification of 12 of the victims. He said their names would be released after relatives are notified.

DC-10s grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The eight domestic airlines flying DC-10s, told to inspect engine mounts on 134 of the jets or ground them, moved quickly to meet today's federally imposed deadline. Little disruption seemed to result for the nation's air travelers. The order came as the Federal Aviation Administration continued its search for the cause of Friday's crash of an American Airlines jumbo jet in Chicago. The crash, the nation's worst aviation disaster, killed at least 273 persons. The airlines faced a deadline of 3 a.m. EDT today to inspect the DC-10s before the government grounded them. Indications were that most of the carriers were able to comply with the order without serious delays or flight cancellations. FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond on Monday ordered the inspections on the wide-bodied tri-motors after investigators found that one of the small bolts attaching the engines to the plane's wings through connecting pylons broke just before Friday's crash. With the bolt broken, the left engine and pylon separated from the plane, rolled over the top of the wing and fell to the ground. The jet climbed a few hundred feet, then plummeted. The eight airlines, besides inspecting the bolts, were ordered to look for cracks in the fitting that attaches the pylon to the wing structure. FAA official Al Garvis said in Los Angeles. The order calls for mechanics to "visually inspect the inside forward flange of each wing engine pylon aft bulkhead." Elwood Driver, the vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board who is conducting the Chicago

Vespers tonight
"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" will resound from M.K. Brown Auditorium tonight as the Pampa High School choir and band combine their talents in honor of the graduating seniors at the Vespers Services, scheduled to begin at 7. This traditional music will be accompanied by a note of spiritual guidance from the featured speaker, Dr. Jim Pickens of the First United Methodist Church.

Suspect still in custody
An Amarillo man remained in the city jail this morning after being arrested Friday in connection with the recent armed robbery of a local convenience store and subsequent rape of a juvenile Pampa female. Danny Deshon Harrison, 25, of 1621 Fairfield in Amarillo is being held in lieu of $100,000 bond on charges of aggravated robbery, aggravated rape and two counts of kidnapping. Police Chief Richard Mills said Harrison probably would be transferred to the Gray County Jail this afternoon. Harrison, a former Pampa resident, was arrested late Friday afternoon in Amarillo and returned to Pampa Friday night. Police believe Harrison to be the man who robbed Allsup's Convenience Store at 500 E. Foster early on the morning of May 18. Following the robbery, the man abducted two 16-year-old girls from the store, drove them to the east side of town and raped one before the girls escaped. District Attorney Harold Comer said a grand jury will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday to hear the case against Harrison and determine whether to indict him for the crimes. Comer said he plans to obtain pubic hair, saliva and blood samples from Harrison to test as evidence in the case. "I don't know if he will do it voluntarily," the district attorney said. "I haven't talked with his lawyer about it yet." If necessary, Comer said, he will file a motion in court requiring Harrison to provide the physical samples.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Regulation, the cost is $470 for each citizen

If President Carter is looking for a domestic issue that should prove wildly popular with the electorate, he could do far worse than to raise the banner of regulatory reform as he did recently.

A study last year by the Chase Manhattan Bank put the cost of all government regulation at $103.1 billion during 1977, with the vast bulk of this sum attributable to the regulatory web spun by federal agencies.

What does a $100 billion price tag for regulation mean? In 1977, it equaled:

$470 for every man, woman and child in the United States, or $1,880 for each family of four.

Five percent of the nation's gross national product, the total value of all goods and services produced in the United States that year.

Twenty-five percent of the entire 1977 federal budget.

Nearly three-quarters of all private investment in plant and equipment during 1977.

At General Motors, more than 20,000 employees work full-time trying to keep the nation's largest corporation in compliance with government regulations.

In New York state, one-fourth of a hospital patient's bill reflects the cost of meeting regulations issued by no less than 164 government agencies.

The impact of regulation on small business frequently is even more devastating. U.S. News and World Report noted the case of a gasoline station owner who spent 610 hours each year - nearly one-fourth of his total working time - filling out forms required by federal, state and local government agencies.

Part of this effort, and its attendant cost is, of course, intended to provide cleaner air, less polluted waters, safer work places, purer drugs, uncontaminated food and other generally recognized benefits.

And yet, no one would seriously contend that the vast fortune expended on the administration of and compliance with government regulations is without gigantic doses of waste. Indeed, there is every reason to believe the regulatory thicket has become impossibly tangled and is in desperate need of pruning.

As the president noted: "It should not have taken 12 years and over 100,000 pages for the Food and Drug Administration to decide what percentage of peanuts there ought to be in peanut butter."

What the president proposes is to subject each regulation to a careful analysis of its costs versus its presumed benefits.

The president also plans to propose a package of additional regulatory reforms including periodic reviews of existing regulations, reduction in paper work requirements, and extensive revision of current regulatory procedure.

Pushing these changes through Congress will, of course, be more difficult than delivering a speech. But, as Carter must sense, the impetus in Congress for regulatory reform has been building for several years.

This is the year to begin to liberate the economy from the onerous burden of regulatory overkill.

A heavy relationship

Speaking of diets, there's a new one designed specially for certain inhabitants of New York City.

Called the East Side Diet, it was developed by the East Side Animal Hospital not for the human residents of that super-affluent slice of Manhattan but for their pets. As the hospital explains it, overweight people often show a correlation in medical problems with their overweight pets.

It only goes to prove what many a well-padded pet owner has probably already discovered. Dieting is for the dogs.

Licensing reporters

Some U.S. news people have shrugged off the threat of licensing on the theory it is something that might happen elsewhere but not here. The government of Panama, for instance, has just issued licenses to 298 reporters it has "approved."

Don't laugh! The Massachusetts State Legislature has just voted down a proposal to require investigative reporters to register with the state as private detectives and to pay an annual license fee. Obviously, if you don't register and fail to pay the fee you won't be able to work as a reporter.

The mentality of the Massachusetts legislators who thought that one up is the same as that of government officials in some third world nations who seek a way to control the press. The easiest way is to grant licenses to those reporters and editors whom the government approves and deny them to that part of the press which is critical of the government.

In Panama, 595 applications for licenses were filed. The government-appointed Technical Junta on Journalism approved 298. The rest of them will not be able to practice journalism until they conform to the government's rules and regulations.

It could have happened in Massachusetts.

Socialism in the U.S.

"Through taxation, the government owns 48 percent of every corporation in the United States. We talk about ourselves as a free-enterprise society. Yet in terms of the fundamental question of who owns the means of production, in the corporate sector we are 48 percent socialistic. When I was in Yugoslavia some years ago, I calculated that the Yugoslav government took 66 percent of the profits of every corporation. So the difference in the degree of socialism in the United States and in Yugoslavia was 18 percentage points." Dr. Milton Friedman.

Government regulations are inscrutable

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

Should people who object to cigarette smoking favor or oppose the government's ban on cigarette radio and TV advertising? The answer seems obvious, but it is not. Whenever government regulations affect the outcome, one has to be very cautious about assuming a result without carefully analyzing the facts.

In this case, strange as it may seem, permitting the cigarette companies to advertise over the broadcast media, something that is now prohibited by law, might well reduce smoking. If the companies were allowed to advertise, the Federal Communications Commission (which regulates the broadcast media), would apply its Fairness Doctrine to cigarettes, automatically permitting equal broadcast time for advertising opposing smoking. The evidence is persuasive that anticigarette messages on radio and TV are more effective than cigarette company advertising, leading to less smoking.

In 1970 Congress enacted legislation banning, as of 1971 all cigarette commercials from radio and TV. According to Political Science Prof. Gideon Doron, the expectations of the anti-cigarette groups were not met; cigarette consumption, which had been declining prior to 1971, began to climb. In an article in the current Regulation magazine, Doron writes that contrary to what many people believed, the prohibition on cigarette commercials was fully compatible with the self-interest of the tobacco industry. Most members of Congress apparently did not realize - or perhaps did not want to realize - that the cigarette industry favored the ban.

As I recall that period, anyone who fought the cigarette commercial ban risked being branded a pawn of the industry. In certain quarters it is always suspect to uphold any position supported by an industry. Thus, any congressman from a constituency outside the oil states who favors deregulation of oil prices, hazards being accused as a tool of the oil companies. We already have the example of Teddy Kennedy and other liberals implying that president Carter's oil deregulation policies are motivated by some desire to placate or befriend the oil interest. Carter has in turn attempted to create a similar impression about those who oppose his proposed windfall profits tax. The president would like us to believe that the objections come largely from the oil industry and its friends.

The story of the cigarette ban suggests the harm that this level of political discourse can bring about. Consider Professor Doron's analysis. He concludes first, that radio and TV advertising, although quite expensive, does not necessarily contribute to the expansion of the cigarette market, and second, that anticigarette advertising reduces the demand for cigarettes. Given this state of affairs, it is in the industry's interest to bring about the elimination of both.

If the tobacco companies agreed among themselves to stop advertising, such collusive practices might be in violation of the antitrust laws. According to Doron, the companies use commercials to compete with each other and not as a device to woo nonsmokers. Consequently, a company might be willing to forego this expense provided its competition did the same. Like other businesses who have sought favorable legislation, the cigarette industry realized that only government regulation could solve these problems.

Doron contends that it is at least arguable, if not virtually certain, that the cigarette industry has thrived because of the advertising prohibition. The companies had reason to expect that a ban on advertising is not harmful to sales. In Italy cigarette sales increased by 3.5 percent after an ad ban was imposed in 1972, and in Great Britain the average annual increase was 3 percent after the 1965 ban.

In 1968, a prominent New York stock broker's investment report stated that the cigarette industry had an incentive to discontinue the commercials voluntarily because such a policy would free large sums of money to support acquisitions and diversifications, leading to increase in that year's earnings per share of common stock of the major tobacco companies would have ranged from roughly 25 percent to over 60 percent.

Doron notes that the chairman of the Tobacco Institute executive committee offered to terminate voluntarily all cigarette advertising in the broadcast media by September 1970, when major contractual arrangements for air time would expire. The industry rejected a plan suggested by the National Association of Broadcasters to phase out cigarette commercials gradually over a four year period, beginning on Jan. 1, 1970. If a ban was considered harmful, the tobacco companies surely would have sought to postpone it in whole or in part.

Naturally members of the anticigarette bloc in the house hailed the passage of the ban as a major victory, but some congressmen saw through the facade and warned their colleagues about the consequences. Actually, says Doron, the bloc had been defeated: "If public interest was to be harmed by an increase in smoking the public interest was not served by this regulation.... The industry did not, in this instance, capture the regulators - but it did, and designedly, so capture the regulation."

Today in history

Unlawful conflict

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., is trying to get Congress to repeal provisions of the federal Voting Rights Act that require bilingual ballots to be made available in counties in 30 states.

It's not just the cost of compliance that bothers the Japanese-American semanticist, although election officials across the country have complained that such costs greatly outweigh any benefits involved.

Hayakawa says the requirement for bilingual ballots directly conflicts with U.S. naturalization laws, which require applicants for American citizenship to demonstrate knowledge of written and spoken English.

"I firmly believe that all U.S. citizens, regardless of their heritage, need to learn to use English well enough to vote in this English-speaking country," the senator said.

American troops to mideast

Is this why there is agitation in the Pentagon to start drafting again? Defense Secretary Brown says that it might call for U.S. military force if the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty breaks down.

Brown and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance talk of the "possibility" of American supplies and ships and planes; they do not mention American troops yet.

Meanwhile, however, Brown has gone ahead and ordered $10 billion worth of $10 million dollar tanks so apparently the Pentagon still intends to fight the next war with the weapons which lost the last two.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Israel's Defense Minister Moshe Dayan have insisted that they neither want nor need U.S. Troops. But that prospect is still being used by infantry-oriented American generals as leverage for more footsoldier mobilization.

Begin told our Congress: "Israel will never ask American boys to fight its wars."

Yet Press Secretary Jody Powell confirms that President Carter on at least one instance has considered stationing American troops on the West Bank.

Now our House Foreign Affairs Committee hears that there is a "memorandum of understanding" between the United States and Israel which promises that in a shootout we will supply weapons and that we will "show" our ships and planes in the area.

Nobody imagines that we could go that far without getting in the way of some bullets.

What troubles pragmatic military strategists is the evidence that we seem to learn nothing from our past wars.

Contrast the tedious one-man-at-a-time invasion of Europe with the way President Truman ended the Pacific war with two big bangs.

And it is inconceivable that we would revert to fighting future wars with bayonets.

Yet in Korea and in Vietnam we did - and we lost.

And here we go again!

Today we have big weapons - loaded for bear - and we can't wait to sign an agreement with the Soviets not to use them!

Little wonder the Soviets celebrate the SALT agreement. If we will agree to fight future wars with manpower, they have more of that than anybody.

In mid-March our secretary of state and our defense secretary were also promising to use U.S. armed forces if necessary to protect the oil fields of Saudi Arabia. Though now they say they are having second thoughts about that.

The footsoldier proponents protest that we must also be able to fight small wars, that we must not be locked into an all-or-nothing-at-all response.

Thus again the old men in Washington prepare to draft young men to fight pulled punches wars for which not one of those old men will ever volunteer.

Engineering racial equality

The intense analysis of American education occasioned by the anniversary of the Supreme Court decision invalidating a system that was racially separate and unequal has found plenty of fault with the schools today.

Understandably, progress during the last quarter of a century toward the goal of racial equality has been uneven at best. And at worst, post-decision developments in the schools of much of the urban North can only be termed retrogression.

But here and there are encouraging signs, such as in a recent study of minority enrollment in engineering schools. It is up, significantly so, in the past decade.

As late as 1972, only 2,200 students from minority groups - principally blacks, but also Hispanics and American Indians - registered as engineering freshmen. But by 1977, cutoff year in the study conducted by The Conference Board, nonprofit New York-based economic research organization, minority enrollment had jumped to 7,600, accounting for 8.5 percent of all freshmen. The 1972 minority percentage was 4.2 percent.

The gains are in considerable part due to the efforts of a coalition of schools, minority organizations, professional societies and corporations seeking to increase minority participation in what decades has long been one of the most economically and rewarding of professions and a largely white preserve. The focus is on interesting secondary schools students in engineering colleges during the coming summer. About the same number of already enrolled engineering students are receiving financial assistance from a fund of more than $11 million raised by business firms and private foundations.

The goal is to have a minority representation of 18 percent of all engineering freshmen by 1982.

Progress, yes, but still a long way to go.

Special session a Clements promise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements claimed a .760 batting average in his rookie encounter with the Texas Legislature but reminded lawmakers he will call them back to bat sometime before 1981.

"It will probably be at the worst possible time I can dream up," Clements said.

His special session agenda certainly will include initiative and referendum and possibly other matters.

"Of the 17 items which I ranked as priorities for my legislative team during the final two months of the session, a total of 13 passed," Clements told a news conference after the Legislature adjourned at midnight Monday.

"Only four — initiative and referendum, electronic surveillance, power for the governor to name commission chairmen and provision for proficiency testing of students — failed," the Republican said of his efforts in the overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature.

"Obviously, I did not meet with overwhelming success in my first encounter with the Legislature," he added, "but neither, contrary to some reports, was my program ever in shambles."

Clements claimed victory in passage of:

- Single, countywide tax appraisal offices.
- Abolition of the 10-cent state property tax.
- Budget execution powers for the governor, as head of a seven-member committee.
- Enabling legislation implementing the 1978

Tax Relief Amendment and returning $450 million to taxpayers.

In addition to his four priority items that faltered, Clements mourned failure of a ban on state income taxes and back-to-basics programs for public education.

He said he would accept the 5.1 percent salary increase for teachers along with incremental raises as teachers reach certain experience levels.

"I'm disappointed that it (school finance bill) contains step increases along with 5.1 percent, but I will accept that," he said.

The governor has until June 17 to veto bills. Measures left on his desk after that date automatically become law.

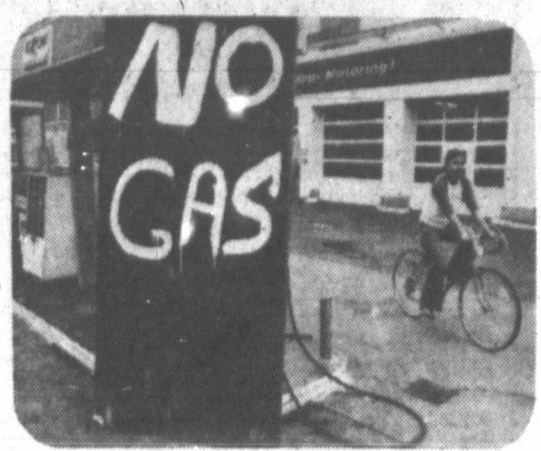

Clements declined to specify what parts of the general appropriation bill he might strike out. Governors may veto line items within the state budget bill.

"This is too festive an evening to get into that kind of sad news," he told the news conference in his public reception room. Cold cuts, fruit and hors d'oeuvres covered his desk, and microphones were placed in a fruit bowl.

He said he probably will need until June 17 to decide what to pencil out of the appropriation bill.

Before legislators adjourned, Clements told House members they could cancel their five-month leases. But he gave no other hints about when he would call the special session.

Heating Oil or Gas?

Americans may have to drive less this summer to make sure their homes can be heated properly next winter, according to the Department of Energy (DOE). Gasoline and home heating oil are petroleum products. But each involves a different combination of compounds made from hydrogen and carbon, the two elements that make up petroleum. These combinations are produced through a process called refining. Earlier this month, the DOE encouraged refiners to make more heating oil than usual this summer, because stockpiles of the fuel are much lower than in recent years. The priority on heating oil and extra petroleum required for unleaded gas indicate motorists may have less gasoline during the peak driving season.

WTSU — West Texas State University's Alumni Association has named James Kirby Sunderman the new executive director of the association.

Sunderman, 32, will join the organization as director on June 1. He is currently working as director of recreation for Estacado Estates in Amarillo and as ad salesman for the WTSU Athletic Department.

"We were looking for a WTSU graduate who was familiar with WT," said David Wilder, chairman of the association's search committee. "Kirby's personality lends itself to this nature. His infectious attitude toward WT and his ability to sell will be an asset to the Alumni Association. He has been involved with WTSU since graduation, working with the Athletic Department."

Sunderman said his immediate goals for the association would "include the establishing of a strong alumni membership with active community organizations throughout the state and nation."

and a reaffirmation that this association is capable of standing on its own feet apart from the University structure and yet will continue to work for the benefit of the University.

"To attain those goals, I would begin at home with a strong Panhandle network, but only with a futuristic goal of making the association a national group that is capable of financially supporting the University the way it should be supported," he said.

"I think that my enthusiasm for WTSU can and will be contagious," Sunderman said. "We feel his enthusiasm will add a lot to our organization," Wilder said.

Sunderman has also worked as a football and basketball official; part owner and operator of Sunderman's Texaco in Amarillo; as a car salesman and as summer manager of Thompson Park and North Heights Pools in Amarillo. He served in the US Army from 1966-69.

He is married to the former

Sherry Killingsworth, who teaches at Amarillo High School. The Sundermans have twin sons, Chad Lance and Shawn Kirby, and a daughter Roni Gail. They live at 1908 9th Ave., Canyon.

Art classes to be offered

Registration for special summer art classes for students kindergarten through 7th grade will be held Wednesday morning from 10 to 11:30 at Clarendon College.

The art classes are sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, and are taught by Suzanne Linquist and Marnie Walters of the Amarillo Art Center.

The classes will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays, July 9-August 1 in the art room of Clarendon College. Two classes will be offered for different age groups: Art Reach I, for students who have completed kindergarten through 3rd grades, is scheduled for 9:30 - 11:30 a.m., and Art Reach II, for those who have finished 4th - 7th grades, will be held from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m.

The sessions will include instruction in a variety of media including drawing, painting, ceramics, sculpture, printmaking and collage.

By the end of the term students will have finished several projects which they can take home with them.

Tuition for the four - week program is $25. Interested persons may contact Susan Dunigan at 669-9474, or Linda Holt at 665-5284 for more information.

Child Welfare Board meets tonight

A new proposal which calls for the collection of child support from all parents whose children have been taken into custody by the Department of Human Resources will be discussed tonight in a regular meeting of the Gray County Child Welfare Board.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 in the County Courthouse Annex.

General discussion will center on the child care unit, which is designed to collect any child support ordered by the court that may be due for care of children under DHR custody. DHR caseworker Joyce Shimeck said this morning. Shimeck said the new proposal is to extend collection of child support from parents whose children are under temporary custody.

223rd District Judge Don Cain, 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny, and Gray County Attorney David Martindale, will be present to address the proposal.

The board will also meet in closed session to discuss DHR case reports, monthly board billing for foster care, and miscellaneous bills.

Talk to trace Year of Child

Mrs. Peggy Brandon of Amarillo, a member of the Pro - Family Forum, a non - profit organization based in Fort Worth, will give a talk tracing the history of the International Year of the Child Wednesday morning at 10:30 in the Fellowship Hall of the First Baptist Church.

The organization is devoted to keeping abreast and informing others of legislation which has an effect on family life.

Governor wins battle over budget control

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements swung the Senate gavel Monday to signal legislative passage of a measure giving governors limited power over state spending.

Clements personally urged senators to accept the proposal and lobbied the Senate floor more than half an hour before the overwhelming 30-1 vote.

"Done," Clements proclaimed after Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's rare move to let the governor gavel the measure's passage.

"This is a management tool that the state has badly needed for years," Clements told reporters following the Senate vote.

The measure (HJR86) will appear on the Nov. 4, 1980, ballot.

It would create a seven-member committee that the governor would head. The panel would have authority to shift money among state agencies or reduce bureaucratic spending. It would function between the biennial legislative sessions.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, cast the lone vote against Clements' proposal. Brooks has opposed the measure as preempting the Legislature's budget authority.

House members passed the amendment, 100-35, without a vote to spare, Saturday with Speaker Bill Clayton voting "aye." Constitutional changes require a two-thirds vote of each chamber before going to voters.

Clements considered budget execution a key part of his legislative program, most of which has withered in the Legislature.

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris let Clements round up votes before bringing the measure to a vote.

"He helped a lot," Clements aide Hilary Doran said of the governor's vote-switching effort, which Clements himself had played down.

The governor had to settle for less than he originally wanted — absolute control over the spending of funds appropriated by legislators.

He also wanted authority to reduce items in the general appropriation bill. He now must veto all of an item or leave it alone.

Bilingual education bill killed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The failure of the 66th Legislature to extend bilingual education to the fourth and fifth grades will force a court test on the issue, angry members of the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus said Monday.

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, accused the House leadership of "acts of contempt and outright hostility" in blocking consideration of the measure.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, would have extended bilingual instruction to fourth and fifth grades. Local schools now must provide bilingual education through the third grade if there are at least 20 children within a grade level who need it.

The State Board of Education refused to extend the program last November. Approved by the Senate, the bill passed the House Education Committee, but never was placed on the House calendar.

Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, said federal court action would be initiated in an attempt to mandate the additional two-year program. Such a suit would be based on a California decision mandating bilingual education programs for Chinese.

Contending Texas could save money by instituting additional bilingual education, Garcia said. "The dropouts become the ones with the juvenile records who graduate to inmates at TDC (Texas Department of Corrections)."

Holiday traffic claims 32 lives

By The Associated Press
Lighter than normal holiday traffic — reflecting forecasts of tight gasoline supplies — still claimed 32 lives on Texas roads and highways during the Memorial Day weekend.

An Associated Press survey showed the grim annual highway carnage toll, which ran from Friday at 6 p.m. until midnight Monday, to be 14 less than the number of persons killed on Texas thoroughfares during last year's Memorial Day weekend.

The worst single accident killed four persons, including a deputy sheriff from New Mexico, in a head-on collision 20 miles north of Hondo Sunday night.

Authorities identified the four killed in that accident as Floyd J. Patterson, 67, a deputy sheriff from Clovis, N.M.; his wife, Alice, also 67, and two men from Pleasanton, Michael Gregg Wright, 30, and William Scott Winn, 18.

Weather

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Heavy rainfall drenched portions of North Central Texas early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood warning for Hill County. Forecasters said some flash flooding was reported at Hillsboro during the pre-dawn hours.

Hail fell at Cleburne and near Possum Kingdom Reservoir early today as the heavy thunderstorms moved southeastward across North Central Texas.

Forecasters called for more shower and thunderstorm activity today in northern sections of the state.

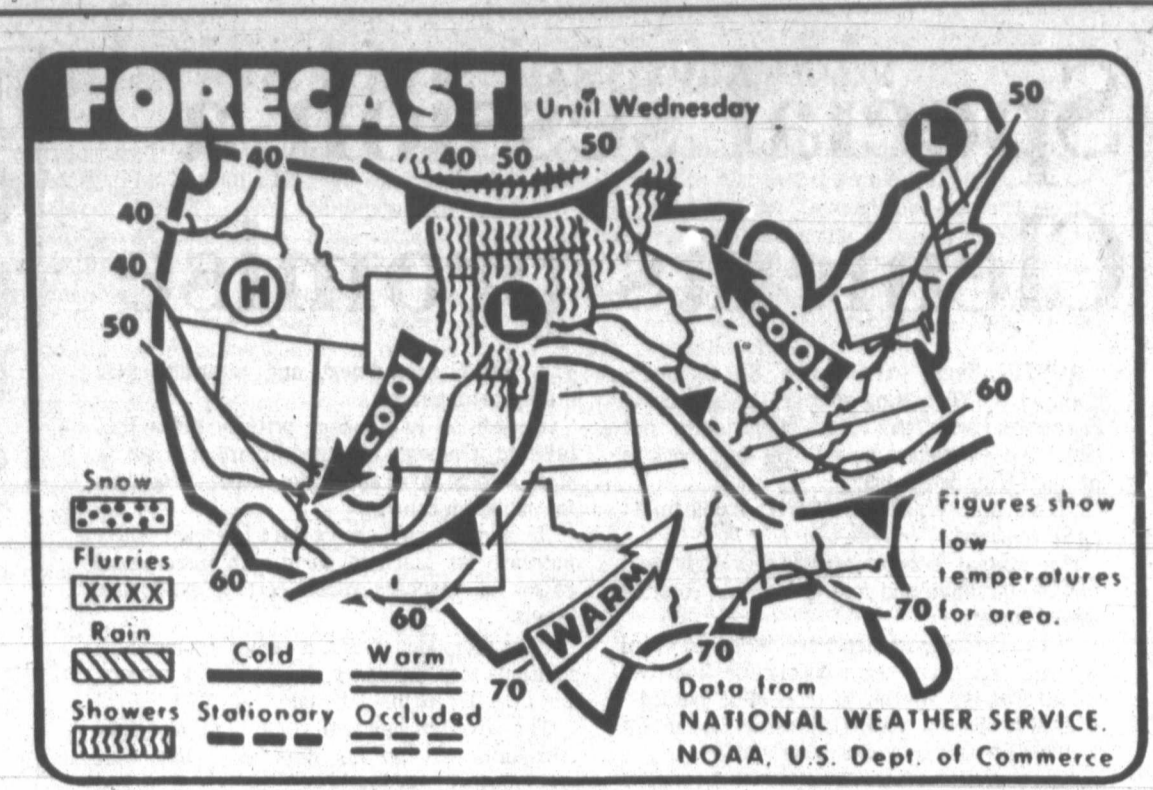

The remainder of the state was to have partly cloudy skies with highs ranging from the lower 80s in Northeast Texas to the 90s in South and Southwest Texas.

The National Weather Service said hail one-half inch in diameter fell at Cleburne and marble-size hail was reported near Possum KINGDOM Reservoir during the early morning hours.

Although most areas had only light amounts of rainfall as the showers and thunderstorms passed, College Station had 1.20 inches.

Thunderstorms also were reported early today in the Permian Basin.

Numerous severe thunderstorm warnings were issued during the night, mainly in North Central Texas.

THE NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE forecast for Tuesday until early Wednesday predicts showers for the northern plains from eastern Montana and Wyoming to Minnesota.

Year of the child resolution dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has rejected a resolution promoting 1979 as the International Year of the Child, a special year proclaimed by the United Nations and recognized by President Carter.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett could only muster 11 votes to bring up the resolution as 16 senators voted against it. This was far short of the two-thirds necessary to debate the House-approved resolution.

It died with less than two hours left in the 140-day regular session.

The resolution asked Gov. Bill Clements to appoint a commission of no more than 15 members to "carry out the goals and objectives of the special year."

It also asked the governor to set aside the third Thursday in September as Children's Day "for activities and observances symbolizing the importance of the well-being of children of this state and throughout the world."

Sens. Betty Andujar and Tom Creighton compared the Year of the Child to the "International Year of the Woman," which Mrs. Andujar said was a "total disaster."

"It's the same concept, isn't it?" asked Creighton, D-Mineral Wells. "No," said Doggett, D-Austin. "It would set up a commission to study children's needs."

"It'd try to tell you how to raise your children," shouted Creighton. "Well, mothers know how to raise kids, and they don't need state agencies — I'm for women."

Mrs. Andujar, R-Fort Worth, pointed to a phrase on "social progress," which she said troubled her. With such a broad guideline, "They could do anything they wanted to," she said.

Teachers' raises limited

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Legislature has approved a public school finance bill tailored to avoid a veto by Gov. Bill Clements by limiting cost-of-living raises for teachers to 5.1 percent a year.

Clements repeatedly has spoken out against giving teachers higher pay increases than other state employees.

The finance bill would raise state aid to public schools by $967 million over the next two years. The Senate approved a proposal worked out by a Senate-House conference committee, 29-2, and the House accepted the report, 85-52.

The raise provided by the bill fits within Clements' guidelines, but it angered teachers, who wanted more. Teachers packed the House gallery to cheer legislators who tried unsuccessfully to reopen the state budget bill to find more money for teacher salaries.

"We put everything into the salary schedule that was available to us," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, chairman of the Senate conferees.

Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, said the teacher pay hike was a "disappointment" because it was not higher, but he knew Clements had threatened to veto higher salaries — "that's the bottom line."

Mauzy said $334 million — or 37 percent — of the school money would go to teacher salaries.

In addition to the $967 million, another $21 million is in the appropriations bill for teacher retirement, said an aide to Mauzy, making a total of $988 million that is being spent on teachers.

"While I would personally have preferred an even larger commitment of support for our teachers, this could only have been achieved at the expense of narrowing the tremendous gap in educational spending between rich and poor districts," said Mauzy.

Besides providing teachers 5.1 percent raises, the bill also gives "step up" or experience raises to tens of thousands of "career" teachers who otherwise would not receive them.

Teachers in their 12th, 14th, 16th and 18th years in the classroom would get 2 percent experience raises in addition to their cost-of-living increases. Under the existing pay plan, a teacher's annual 4 percent experience raise stops with the 11th year. After that "step ups" come only in the 13th, 15th and 17th years.

Medical care measure fails

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The death of a Mexican-American infant "inspired" the introduction of an emergency care bill, its sponsor says. Monday, he accused a woman senator whose husband is a doctor of killing the bill.

Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos' bill would have made it easier for non-English speakers to get emergency medical care.

He said Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, a doctor's wife, "acted callously and totally without conscience" in blocking the measure. Mrs. Andujar said one solution might be for those who needed health care in Texas to learn to speak English.

Barrientos, D-Austin, put out a news release, relating a story of Rachel and Isidro Aguinas, whose 11-month-old child died in his mother's arms in December after the Spanish-speaking farm workers reportedly had been denied hospital care in Dimmitt and Tulla.

Barrientos said he was shocked to learn a hospital staff and officers were subject only to a $200 fine for denying emergency treatment to ill or injured people who cannot demonstrate they can pay for the treatment.

He said his bill would: —insure that persons seeking emergency aid would be diagnosed even if they could not show they could pay for the service.

—insure that if there were language differences between patient and staff, treatment would be provided before money was discussed.

—increase the criminal penalties for "those callous enough to deny treatment to someone because they could not demonstrate their ability to pay for treatment."

If the denial was deliberate and the patient died, said Barrientos, the responsible person could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison.

Mrs. Andujar blocked a Senate committee hearing on the bill by "tagging" it, which delayed a hearing until after the session ended at midnight.

Barrientos said he asked Mrs. Andujar why she had tagged the bill, and she told him she had not had time to review it. After their conversation, Barrientos said, she read the bill and called hospital lobbyist Dean Davis to the Senate.

Some of the happiest retirees aren't retired at all. They're launched into new careers that are more exciting than their first careers ever were. And I mean genuine careers that can and will be continued as long health and sanity permit - which doctors tell us can be as long as we hang around.

This time I'm not talking about time fillers that provide a pleasant pastime for an hour or so a day. They are fine if they're all you need. If you're handicapped, if your arthritis won't let you exert your strength more than a little or if you like to spend all your time visiting with the neighbors, then so be it. But many of us older people want the kind of continuing, absorbing work of a 9:00 to 5:00 job for one or more days a week, effort that brings in a salary or personal satisfaction and lets us imagine we never left the mainstream of the working world we entered in our teens or twenties. If we crave that kind of career, we'll be better mates to our spouses if we embark upon it.

I've seen men (more men than women, since women still have housework, as always, after retirement) who tire of the gold watch and the plaque and the comments of, "You've earned a rest, dear old boy!" After a few months of mowing the lawn once a week and football freaking on the turf or the tube, these men need more. Their health is as good as it was at fifty or even forty. So they seek the find regular jobs again. And they gain more than salaried work. They discover a new zest for life.

My dad was the fiercest preacher the Methodist Church ever retired. When the conference informed him that his sunset years would henceforth be rewarded with a small pension, he started doing substitute preaching for absent or ailing ministers. But that took little time or effort since he had boxes of readied sermons and, besides, the invitations didn't come often. He'd always loved to paint every wall in every parsonage he'd ever lived in, so he ran an ad as a painter of houses - and soon he had the jobs stacked up. He sang and whistled and visited with the people he worked for, happily throwing in a sermonette at the least encouragement. People loved his abstinence from drinking and smoking; even the paint he used didn't smell bad. He wielded a paint brush and a good word for the Lord as long as he lived.

I've had many letters from retirees who found similar pleasure in second careers, work that saved their marriages as well as their peace of mind. If any person, young or old, wants to be busy butis not, he just naturally gets irritable and difficult to live with. The unhappy one snaps at the mate, who almost always snaps back. The first spat can burgeon into quarrels that lead to separation. So if you need work, get it.

The most contented people in this group are usually those who choose work quite different from their former jobs. Like the farmer who retires to town and the city man who wants to milk cows and raise chickens after he's seventy, the change of scenery seems to be conducive to enjoyment. You embrace a new image of yourself, in your mind and the mind of your mate; you both have a fresh respect for your working ability, which makes you happy. You feel like a kid on his first job.

A recent letter said:
DEAR LOUISE: I always wanted to be a singer and I sang a lot at home. My wife used to tell me I ought to get paid for it. Well, when I retired, I sat around and grumbled at her all the time until she could hardly put up with me. I finally joined a barbershop quartet, and now we practice three nights a week and sing for pay several times a month. I never had so much fun. My wife goes with me, and we have a wonderful time."

MR. AND MRS. Lloyd arrive in London. Tennis aces Chris Evert and her new husband of six weeks, John Lloyd, arrive at London's Heathrow Airport after flying from Rome. They obviously intend to be in plenty of time for Wimbledon.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY - I would like to know how to clean my alabaster bust of Bach. It collects dust and regular dusting does not help. I was told not to wash it. Please help me. - FRAN

DEAR FRAN - Alabaster is native to Italy and the following information is from a shop in Italy that sells such products. Such items should be handled with care and not be exposed to direct sunlight or water. A small amount of petroleum jelly such as we all have in our medicine chests or a soft white wax may be applied briskly every so often.

Talcum powder, cornstarch or baking soda could be applied with a soft brush for cleaning. Alabaster is somewhat softer than marble. Many so-called alabaster items are made from a synthetic composition. When one knows for sure that they are made of the composition they may be carefully washed. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - My favorite Pointer is for hanging heavy rugs or tapestries on the wall. Attach to the wall one of those strips with tacks such as carpet is laid on. Gently push the fabric into the tacks and the article will hang even and with no strain at any point. - MARION

DEAR POLLY - With the high costs of all baby's basic supplies I have found a few ways to save money. The following is one of my favorites. Pull the core out of a roll of toilet tissue and then pull the last sheet up through the center. Place this roll in a large shortening can that has a plastic lid and pour baby oil over the roll.

Cut an X in the plastic lid and push the paper end through it. This gives one a few weeks supply of baby wash-ups for diapering and sticky hands and faces at a fraction of the cost of commercial products. The oil will settle so turn the roll over and replace the lid. The can can be covered with pretty adhesive-backed paper and can be carried along when one travels. The papers can also be used to remove makeup. - D.C.

Dear Abby
by Abigail van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just heard that a scientist in Budapest, Hungary, recently came up with a formula that will actually grow hair on bald heads! They claim that this miracle lotion, which is a combination of herbs and chemicals, not only restores hair, on bald heads, it also prevents people who have hair from losing it! This sounds too good to be true.

I'm told that the Budapest shopkeepers sold out their first shipment to some very cynical customers; when, a week later, the stuff started to show results, word got around and the shopkeepers had to call the police to keep the rioting customers from breaking down the doors.

Have you heard anything about this product?
INTERESTED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR INTERESTED: Yes, I've heard those hair-raising reports, but I'm skeptical. If this product from Hungary is not also from hunger, it will be marketed all over the world.

DEAR ABBY: PUZZLED IN MANHATTAN wrote: "I'm sure you've heard of Peeping Toms, but I'll bet you've never heard of a Peeping Tina. Tina is my wife. We have a view of a large apartment house from our bedroom window, and Tina loves to stand in the dark and watch men undress. Is something wrong with her?"

You replied, "Such curiosity is considered normal in adolescents, but your wife should have outgrown it by now." Abby, I've lived in high-rise apartments for years, as do many of my friends, and we all enjoy the game of "neighbor-watching." As a matter of fact, a pair of binoculars by the window is standard equipment for every apartment.

I am in my 30s and my friends are in their 50s and we aren't considered adolescents.
LOVES TO LOOK IN MANHATTAN

DEAR LOVES: Whatever happened to the right to privacy? Or do you go with the theory that people who undress with the shades up are closet exhibitionists? Granted there is a touch of the voyeur in all of us - but binoculars by the windows? Aw, c'mon!

DEAR ABBY: Why do fellows say, "I'll call you," and then you never hear from them again?
This has happened to me and a lot of my girlfriends so often it's not even funny.
HURT IN KOKOMO

DEAR HURT: Some fellows say, "I'll call you," because they think that's what most girls want to hear. And they're right. But it has about as much meaning as, "See you around," or, "Let's get together sometime."

The next time a fellow says, "I'll call you," if you want to shake him up, say, "Terrific. When?"

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument between my husband and me. He says that my sister's husband is HIS brother-in-law. I say that my sister's husband is MY brother-in-law, but he isn't my husband's brother-in-law. He is my husband's sister-in-law's husband. Who's right?
SAN CLEMENTE.

DEAR SAN: Webster defines "brother-in-law" as follows: 1) the brother of one's husband or wife; 2) the husband of one's sister; 3) the husband of the sister of one's wife or husband. So your husband is right.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Lamb
by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I enjoy your health column very much and have read your advice frequently about the use of bran for good digestive functions. A recent column of yours did confuse me. You mentioned that using milk to mix bran turned it into a situation that reminded me of slippery elm in my youth and that this would make the bran ineffective for the purposes intended.

That presents a problem as packaged bran in today's supermarkets would be most difficult to consume without wetting it down with milk or some liquid. Most of the cereals that contain bran also contain salt and sugar along with numerous other ingredients to confuse all but a Ph.D. in nutrition or chemistry. The media is carrying more and more information about the dangers of sugars and salt so here again we are confused. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER - I think you've misinterpreted one of my columns. I do not recommend eating dry bran. Dry bran can even lodge in the esophagus and cause problems. You must have read my comment that when bran is softened it's not roughage. For years many doctors felt that bran was roughage and would irritate the digestive system.

My point is that when it's moist or wet it's actually soft and is no longer rough or irritating. That is why one of the pioneers for the dietary change to include more bran likes to call wet bran softage as opposed to roughage. These comments are meant to indicate that the wet bran is very easy for your digestive system to handle and will not irritate it. This in no way decreases its function as a bulk expander to pro-note improved colon function.

It's true that many cereals contain excessive amounts of salt and sugar. You can get a lot of good whole wheat cereals, however, that contain no added sugar. There are a lesser number that do not contain salt. A good one that you can use for this purpose is shredded wheat. Of course, you can make your own hot oatmeal at home or you can purchase crude bran and add it to some substances such as fruit, thereby avoiding excess salt.

Bullets stay confident

SEATTLE (AP) — Kevin Grevey and Larry Wright, two of Washington's beleaguered guards, acknowledge the defending champion Bullets are having trouble, but all that will change if they can beat the Seattle SuperSonics tonight.

"I think we'll come back," said Grevey. "We're a team that makes great comebacks. We proved that when we were down 3-1 (against San Antonio).

"We can very well change this thing right around by getting a win here and now we're in the driver's seat. We just have to play much better than we have."

The Bullets won the opener of the National Basketball Association best-of-seven championship series, but lost the next two. Tonight's Game

4 is in the Seattle Coliseum. The Bullets' guards have taken the brunt of criticism for the teams' poor play, having hit on only eight of 35 shots in Sunday's 106-95 loss, the third game of the series in which Washington hasn't scored 100 points.

"We didn't play well as a team," said Wright, the substitute who is supposed to fire up the club. "We've got to figure out a way to hit our shots. We've got to take the game to Seattle, rather than let them take it to us. We're better when we're aggressive."

The Sonic guards outscored the Bullets' backcourt 64-19, but Wright said, "That comes from us not forcing the game to them. We walked the ball up the court and telegraphed every pass we threw."

Midway through Sunday's third quarter, when the Sonics had opened up a 17-point lead, Bullets' Coach Dick Motta brought in forward Greg Ballard and moved Bobby Dandridge to guard, a move he usually makes for defensive purposes. But this time, Motta said, it was to bolster the offense.

Grevey was angry about the criticism of the guards, arguing that the Washington offense is directed primarily to the big men.

"We're in this as a team," he said. "I'm sick and tired of everyone trying to separate the guards from the rest of the team. We're in this together."

UT advances to World Series

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — No one could blame the Brigham Young Cougars if they didn't feel at home in Ditch-Falk Field, the home diamond of the University of Texas baseball team.

With 5,500 partisan Texas fans and a rowdy group of UT supporters called the "Wild Bunch" shouting approval, country-western music blaring between innings and nachos, a Mexican delicacy, on sale at the concession stand, BYU must have felt they were in a foreign country.

The Mormon Tabernacle

Choir might have helped but Willie Nelson was the preferred singing artist Monday night as the Horns mauled the Cougars 6-2 in the finals of the NCAA Central Region Baseball Tournament and marched off to the College World Series for the 19th time.

Five-hit pitching by Kem Wright and Keith Creel and the bat work of Terry Salazar, Keith Walker and Jim Tjader propelled the Longhorns into the first round of the College World Series Saturday against Connecticut, the Northeast Regional champion.

"I knew they were a good hitting team, but I felt as long as I could keep the ball down they would hit it on the ground," said Wright, who held BYU to two hits until he yielded a two-run homer by Cliff Pastornicky in the sixth.

Creel took over in the seventh and after a shaky start, shutout the Cougars the rest of the game, including striking out two batters in the ninth inning.

"We've got to get good pitching all the way through,"

UT Coach Cliff Gustafson said of the upcoming national championship tournament. "That's the name of the game."

Texas played the pitching game well throughout the tournament. Jerry Don Gleaton hurled a five hitter in defeating Pan American in the tournament opener and Walker pitched six no-hit innings in a second round victory over Lamar.

While Wright and Creel did the mound work Monday night, the Longhorns pounded four BYU pitchers for 11 hits, although they left 11 runners stranded. Walker contributed to three UT runs with a single, sacrifice fly and a bases loaded walk. Salazar clubbed a pair of hits, including a triple in the first to score the first run, and Tjader pounded a solo home run to open the seventh.

"I wasn't quite ready for the season to end," BYU Coach Gary Pullins said. "There were many good things that happened to us this year — a 50-win season, winning the WAC (Western Athletic Conference) and placing high in the tournaments we entered."

Major League roundup

Twins enjoy playing against weaker teams

By The Associated Press

The Minnesota Twins have found a bunch of "cousins" among the American League's weak sisters.

And just to keep things all in the family, shortstop Roy Smalley, Manager Gene Mauch's nephew, is leading the way.

The Twins broke a five-game losing streak Monday by outslugging the Oakland A's 10-7. That boosted their record against the A's, Seattle Mariners and Toronto Blue Jays, the AL's three worst teams, to 14-0.

In addition, they are 5-2 with Detroit and 3-2 over Cleveland, giving them a 22-4 log against teams with sub-.500 records. The only winning teams the Twins have played so far are California, Texas and Kansas City. They are only 4-14 against those clubs.

"All wins count the same. They don't put asterisks by the wins over the second-division clubs," said Smalley, who hit a two-run first-inning homer — his 10th of the season — and singled home two more runs to cap a tie-breaking four-run seventh.

Yankees 2, Brewers 1

Mickey Rivers lined his third home run of the season with two out in the 10th inning to ruin a fine pitching performance by Milwaukee's Bill Travers. The blast gave rookie Ron Davis his first major league victory.

Royals 5, Orioles 4

George Brett, who had already hit for the cycle (single, double, triple, home run) in the first 15 innings, led off the 16th against Sammy Stewart with his second homer of the night and sixth of the year to power Kansas City over the Orioles.

Rangers 5, Red Sox 2

Fergie Jenkins and Sparky Lyle checked Boston on nine hits and Al Oliver lashed a two-run homer in the first inning as the Rangers posted their eighth consecutive triumph over the Red Sox dating back to last season. It was the third time in as many outings Jenkins had beaten his former team since he was traded back to Texas two years ago. Buddy Bell's double play grounder got the winning run home in the fifth inning and Bump Wills added a two-run single in the eighth.

White Sox 6, Indians 1

Alan Bannister drilled three singles, drove in one run and scored two and Ken Kraychuk held Cleveland hitless after allowing three hits in the first inning.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2

Champ Summers, acquired from Cincinnati over the weekend, cracked his first American League homer to ignite a three-run second-inning while Jack Morris scattered seven hits in recording his first complete game of the year.

Pirates 6, Mets 1

Bill Robinson hit a run-scoring single in the first inning, a two-run tie-breaking homer in the fourth inning and a double to trigger a three-run ninth as Pittsburgh, with Grant Jackson picking up his sixth save, ripped the Mets 6-1.

Braves 4, Giants 1

Atlanta beat San Francisco in a sloppily played game Sunday. Manager Bobby Cox thought his Braves could do better, so he chewed them out. And they did better. Then Cox played it low-key.

"I don't think clubhouse meetings win ball games. Good pitching does," he said. He got it from Mickey Mahler who allowed eight hits, struck out seven Giants and walked one in his first complete game of the season.

Cubs 4, Phillies 1

Bobby Murcer hit two home runs, a solo shot in the seventh inning and a two-run clout in the ninth. But it was Bill Buckner who had the game-winning hit, a two-out, eighth-inning triple that broke a 1-1 tie and gave the Cubs their victory over Philadelphia.

Reds 3, Dodgers 2

Cincinnati and Los Angeles battled through nine scoreless innings, then Dan Driessen homered for the Reds to open the top of the 10th — only to have Reggie Smith homer leading off the bottom of the inning.

In the 13th, Ken Griffey walked, Dave Concepcion singled and Driessen walked and Ray Knight broke the tie with a single off Charlie Hough.

It scored two runs — and the Reds needed both. In the bottom of the 13th Derrel Thomas doubled and Davey Lopes singled for the Dodgers' final run.

Padres 5, Astros 4

Dave Winfield drove in three runs and pitcher Randy Jones drove in two to lead San Diego past the Astros. Jones, recording his fifth victory, needed ninth-inning relief from Rollie Fingers, who picked up his sixth save.
