Once great success story

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Each month for the past four years, the 80-year-old man — once described by Forbes Magazine as "one of the great swindlers of our time" — has diligently reported to his federal probation officer.

But there was a time when C. Arnholt Smith, once named Mr. San Diego by his civic-minded colleagues, answered to no one.

At his zenith, in the early 1970s, he embodied the all-American success story: From high school dropout to a self-made millionaire who helped put Richard Nixon in the presidency.

Today, after a five-year battle that cost California millions in court costs, Smith faces sentencing on four counts of tax violations and a grand theft charge. It is the latest in a string of charges.

Born in Walla Walla, Wash., on March 13, 1899, Smith moved with his family to San Diego when he was 7 and quit school at 16. He was a grocery clerk and bank teller but by 1933, with the help of his brother John, had gained control of the U.S. National Bank, then a single building with $1.8 million in deposits.

With the help of influential friends and deals involving companies due to benefit from World War II, he was a millionaire by 1944.

In the early 1970s, his diverse billion-dollar empire included the U.S. National Bank, with 62 branches and assets of $746 million, and Westgate-California Corp., with $215 million in assets, including hotels, real estate, insurance holdings, a fishing fleet, a commuter airlines, a supermarket chain and a cab company.

His private holdings included the San Diego Padres baseball team. Then, in 1973, the bottom dropped out.

U.S. National Bank collapsed, undermined by huge unsecured and uncollectible loans that Smith made to companies he controlled. It was then the largest bank failure in U.S. history.

Once one of the richest and most powerful forces in California, Smith now reportedly lives on $400 a month from Social Security — and borrowed time — with his second wife, Helen. A daughter, Carol, lives nearby; his only son, Conrad Arnholt Jr., died in 1966.

Convicted on the most recent charges last month in San Diego Superior Court, Smith could serve a maximum sentence of 20 years. Friends of the white-haired financier say he has vowed he will not spend a day in jail.

Smith's current probation began in 1975, when he pleaded no contest to four charges of felony bank fraud. The charges stemmed from misapplication of $27.5 million in funds from his defunct bank.

Fighting back sobs and saying he did not "loot" his company, Smith asked the judge, who was appointed by his old friend President Nixon, to consider his age and health when sentencing him. His attorney begged the judge to consider "all the good things" Smith had done, citing his client's history of philanthropy in San Diego.

The sentence was $30,000 in fines and five years probation. Five years later, Judge Robert Conyers is confronted with the dilemma of whether to sentence Smith to jail. Even if he does so, Smith could remain free on bail for years because of a backlog of appellate court cases.

After celebrating his 80th birthday last March in court, he quipped to a reporter: "I expect to be here until I'm 85."

A longtime friend and major fund-raiser for Nixon, Smith had poured huge contributions into the former president's campaigns since 1950, when Nixon first ran for office.

When the Nixons spent election night of 1968 waiting out the returns, Smith was among a small group of insiders with them.

Scandal touched Smith three years before the collapse of his bank.

A federal organized crime strike force linked Smith to a laundered money scheme in 1970, alleging that the operation pumped illegal funds into Nixon's campaign coffers. But a U.S. attorney canceled a subpoena issued for one of Smith's top aides, ending a probe of possible violations of the Corrupt Practices Act.

In 1971, the Internal Revenue Service began auditing Smith's taxes but later abandoned the effort.

However, in a separate case in 1975, Smith was convicted and fined for aiding a corporation in making an illegal political contribution.

In the 1974 bank fraud case, federal prosecutors charged that Smith siphoned $70 million from his bank, including $2.5 million into the account of his San Diego Padres baseball team. The case ended without a trial in June 1975 when Smith pleaded no contest to four charges of felony bank fraud and was sentenced to probation.

Six months later, Smith was indicted by a San Diego County grand jury and charged with 64 criminal counts. After 2½ years of legal maneuvering — including 250 days of pretrial procedures — Smith was brought to trial last August on 10 of the 64 counts. The marathon event spanned eight months and included 2,700 documents of evidence and more than 100 days of testimony.

Six months ago, Smith, who has declined interviews, remarked to a reporter outside court:

"I'm going to write a book about a guy who had a lot of money, then went broke, and went back and tried to start all over again."

"Trouble is, they won't let me out of here to start."

THERE WAS A TIME when C. Arnholt Smith embodied the all-American success story, from high school drop-out to self-made millionaire who helped put Richard Nixon in the White House. But today, after a five-year battle that cost California millions in court cost, Smith faces sentencing on four counts of tax violations and a grand theft charge. (AP Laserphoto)

Five acres of junk

'A marvelous mess'

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Earl Jones comes by his talent genetically. "My father," he said, "could sell stump holes."

His father was a preacher who traveled from town to town persuading people to give him money to build churches. Earl doesn't have to persuade. People line up to fork over money to Earl. In exchange he gives them, for the most part, junk.

"Sometimes I stand in my room on a Saturday afternoon looking out the window shaking my head. You wouldn't believe what people will buy. Put it out there, somebody will buy it."

What Earl Jones sees from his window is five acres of marvelous mess.

In the Berkshire hills, countless antiques stores line the winding roads. Even more numerous are barns and sheds advertising "collectibles," stuff from old attics too useless to keep but too nostalgic to toss out.

Among the latter emporiums, Earl Jones' wins first prize. Only the strong of will can pass up such curious clutter.

Weather-vanes, pumps, horseshoes, old brass beds, new brass beds, whiskey barrels, wagon wheels, rusty tools, dishes, churns — name it, it is there, scattered in wonderful confusion among five labyrinthine buildings and all the spaces between.

Earl dumped a thriving real estate business to get into this chaos.

"That was in 1965," he said. "I was 55 and my late wife, Moxie, decided all the moving around we did trading in real estate was too hectic a life. I agreed. She thought it would be nice if we had a little antiques shop to keep us busy.

"I agreed with that, too. Look what happened. Now I have a dozen people working here and six big trucks rolling from Canada to Florida, buying, selling, trading."

One of the properties Earl owned was a turn-of-the-century prep school for boys, the Hallock School.

He and his wife moved into the dorm, a grand old building with big white columns built in 1890, an antique itself. They took the headmaster's suite as an apartment and opened their little shop in the parlor.

"I began buying antiques, and also 'antiques,' as I call them," Earl said. "Whichever, everything I bought we sold. All we had to do was let it sit around here long enough."

As their stock — collectibles — began to multiply like rabbits (which he sells, made of porcelain) they built shelves in other buildings, the classrooms, the chapel.

Those full, he built another building, and another. He added a 40-foot trailer, stocked it, added two more. What doesn't fit inside he just scatters around the lawn.

"I suppose it is impressive," he said, surveying his domain of disarray. "Especially when you realize that all we really wanted was a few shelves with dishes on them."

Fuel allocations working well despite huge drain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a huge drain caused by the crush of field work the last couple of weeks, fuel allocations to farmers are "generally working" well, says Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland. State fuel set-aside programs and efforts by the industry to supply agricultural areas have been of major importance, he said Wednesday.

If favorable weather had prevailed this spring, farmers would have been able to spread planting of corn and other crops over a longer period, enabling diesel and other fuel supplies to keep pace, Bergland told reporters.

But this spring was wet and cold in many key areas, which kept farmers from their fields longer than usual.

"When you compress all this into about 15 days (of planting), it really does put an added burden on the system," he said.

Bergland warned that the farm fuel crunch is "not just a springtime dilemma" because the shortages will continue to exist later this summer and in the fall, when corn and other spring-planted crops are ready for harvest, and when winter wheat farmers plant their 1980 crop.

By then refineries will have to begin rebuilding heating oil stocks, which will put a dent in diesel output, he said.

One problem, he said, has been that co-operative suppliers of farm fuel have had the policy of not depending on Middle East oil for their refineries and instead have relied on crude oil from the North Sea.

"When Iranian production went down, their suppliers, like British Petroleum, were forced to curtail their supplies of crude to the co-op refineries because British Petroleum was obliged to deliver to its European customers," Bergland said.

Thus, the lid on Iran's oil exports had a severe impact on independent and co-op refineries, he said.

In a related report, the Agriculture Department said corn planting nationally by May 27 was estimated to be 89 percent completed, compared to 75 percent a year ago. Despite the late planting last year, the 1978 corn harvest turned out to be a record 7.1 billion bushels.

Soybean planting was estimated at 47 percent completed, compared to 35 percent last year, and cotton planting at 76 percent, one percentage point behind a year ago.

Corn planting progress was shown for 17 states which last year accounted for 93 percent of last year's harvest. As of May 27, corn planting in those was reported as:

Colorado, 87 percent completed and 93 percent a year ago; Georgia, 100 and 100; Illinois, 91 and 58; Indiana, 90 and 45; Iowa, 99 and 83; Kansas, 80 and 80; Kentucky, 68 and 59; Michigan, 80 and 90; Minnesota, 76 and 89; Missouri, 84 and 28; Nebraska, 85 and 90; North Carolina, 100 and 95; Ohio, 95 and 60; Pennsylvania, 78 and 48; South Dakota, 66 and 68; Virginia, 89 and 82; and Wisconsin, 70 and 80.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even if he did spend three terms there, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says the lifestyle in Congress is "absolutely uncivilized."

"It's terrible. Early morning, late at night, seven days a week," Bergland said. "It's like the dairy business. I put them in the same league."

Bergland, a Minnesota farmer then, was re-elected to a fourth House term in 1976 but resigned when Jimmy Carter named him secretary of agriculture.

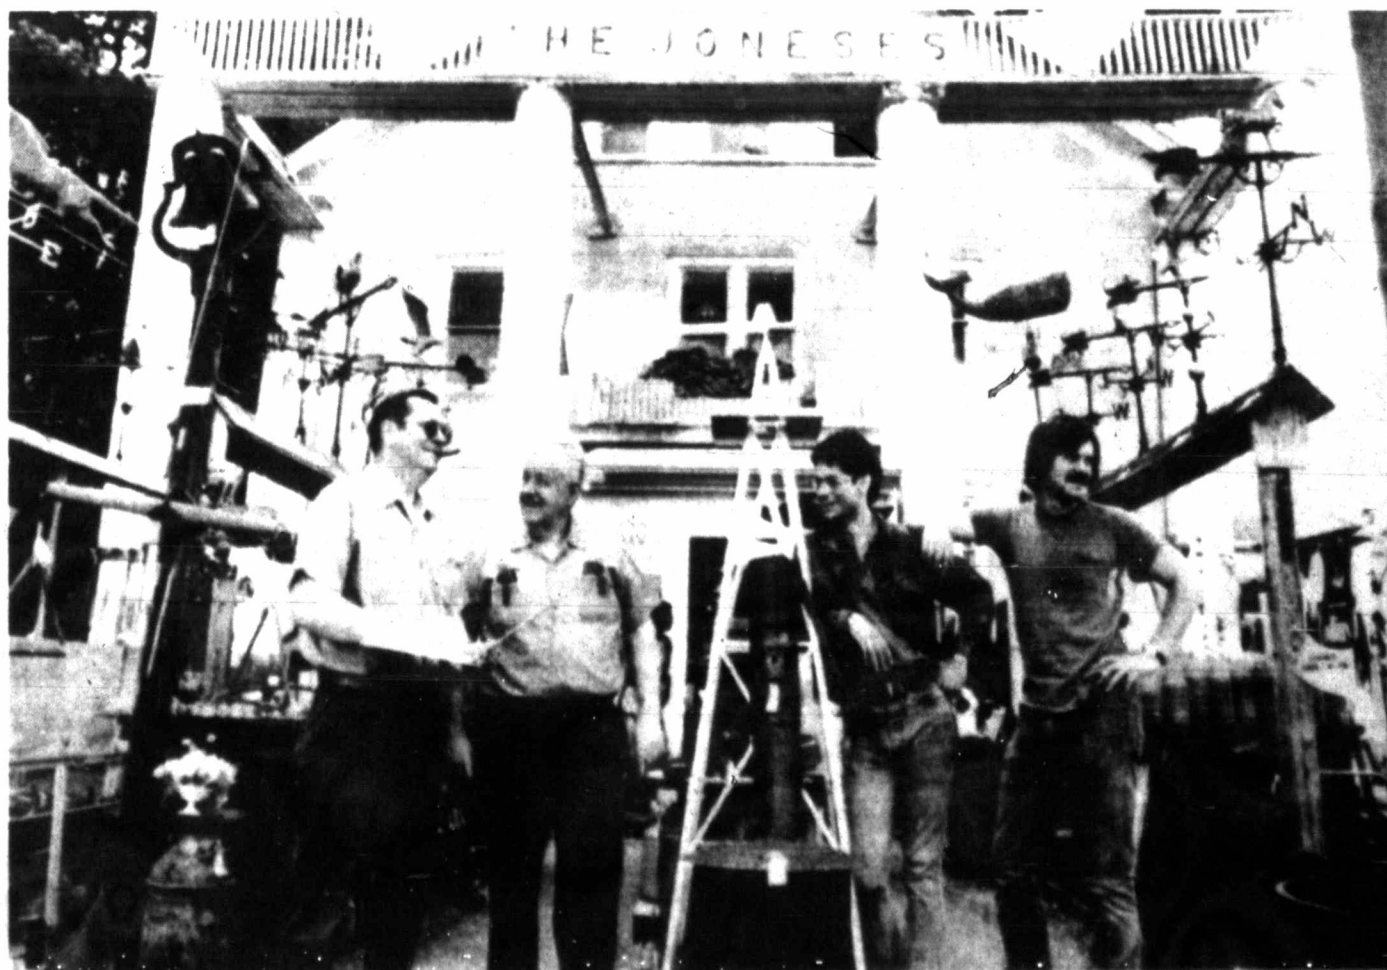

It was enjoyable in Congress while it lasted, he told reporters Wednesday. But it was a grind. He said if Carter had not appointed him to the Cabinet, he would have run for re-election once more and then quit after five terms.

Bergland, 50, was asked about rumors that he might resign and run for public office again. No such plans, he said.

"I wouldn't go back if I had the chance," Bergland said. Moreover, Bergland said he likes his present job, adding that "it's much easier for a lot of reasons" than being in Congress because "I can regulate my weekends, mostly."

Looking tanned and relaxed, Bergland said he spent the past weekend sailing on the Chesapeake Bay with his family.

"If I had been in Congress, I'd be home, going to parades and picnics," he said.

Mending mature marriage

By
louise pierce

Since I wrote a column on neatness, a while back, I've heard from readers who want me to define neatness as compared to attractiveness. There is, in fact, a great difference. A person who is over-fat or over-thin can be as neat as tomorrow but not be attractive because of size. The trick is to dress just right and weigh just enough. And, provided you are not suffering from some physical ailment that causes you to be outsized, you can control your figure and look attractive as well as neat and pleasantly trim.

A recent letter said, DEAR LOUISE: I wish you'd prod older couples to take a good, hard look at their physical appeal. I have a friend who is in anguish because her husband is divorcing her and she doesn't understand why. She seems to be all a man could want - intelligent, a good cook and housekeeper, a devoted wife and mother. But she obviously hasn't take a look in the mirror lately and analyzed what she saw. The slim, attractive woman her husband married is now drab-looking, overweight, a fat frump. Maybe her husband wasn't as direct as mine, who told me from the first, "If you get fat and ugly, I'm leaving!" If I gain a little, I lost it fast. Probably some husbands aren't blunt because they don't want to hurt their wives' feelings - but isn't an honest need better than hiding the repulsion? And, face it, guys, FAT MEN aren't sexy either. For both men and women, fat is aging, appearance-wise. People who are ashamed to look at themselves naked in a mirror, probably need exercises and diets. We all fight "the battle of the bulge". Concerned, DEAR CONCERNED: I'm with you. Too much poundage can hurt our health, detract from our appearance and alienate our friends. But most of all, it can turn husbands off. And that's the worst thing that can happen to a middle-aged wife. At our age, who knows if we could ever attract second mates?

Otis and I watch our weight carefully, for many reasons. We want to look good to each other and to the people around us, of course. But we also want to keep on wearing the clothes we bought last year, just in case we can't afford to buy new ones this year, besides, some of the old things look good enough to pass for new. So we eat a balanced diet, counting calories, eating less at home if we've overdone it at somebody's dinner party and weighing ourselves every morning. If there's a one-pound gain that burgesons into two and then five pounds in a week, we cut down.

Last summer Otis bought a beautifully three-piece sport suit (shirt, trousers, sweater, plus hat to match) in bright yellow, to wear to a company meeting in a vacation spot. It fit him exactly, without an inch to spare. He wore the suit twice before he put it away for the winter. When spring approached, we started planning another trip and he tried on the yellow duds. He could not get those pants around his middle! He weighed only four pounds more than he had in the summer but that was enough to rule out his favorite britches. We couldn't afford new clothes every time we went out of town, so he had to lose that weight gain. When he finally donned the yellows and showed me that they fit exactly right again, we were both delighted. The point of this true story is that his weight made him unattractive to himself because he was too fat to wear that young-and-handsome outfit. And I was less (only slightly less) attracted to him because I liked him in that suit too. And it had got downright annoying to both of us for him to get on the scales every morning and groan, "Not a pound off yet! ... Or yet! ... Or yet!"

Dear Abby

This Guy's Closet Is Fit for a Queen

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the wife who found a pair of panties in her husband's pickup truck: They could have been HIS! I'm a transvestite who had a similar experience when my ex-girlfriend went snooping through my closet and found my entire feminine wardrobe.

At first she thought I had a woman living with me, but when I showed her my wigs, padded bras and make-up she was convinced that they were mine. Abby, she didn't know what a transvestite was. She thought any man who enjoyed dressing in women's clothes was a "queer." Eventually we broke up.

There are many more transvestites than most people realize. We are not homosexuals, child molesters or perverts. We are friends, neighbors, relatives, responsible members of the community. We aren't interested in recruiting others to transvestism. We want only acceptance and understanding from those we love, and the freedom to indulge in our favorite pastime in the privacy of our homes without fear of embarrassment.

ALBUQUERQUE T.V.

DEAR T.V.: It may come as a shock to many to learn that most men who enjoy dressing in women's attire privately are not at all effeminate unless "dressed." And their sexual behavior is strictly masculine!

DEAR ABBY: You said yawning is brought about by boredom. Not true! Sometimes it's brought on by too much excitement and too little oxygen. This was pointed out in an article in Reader's Digest some years ago.

It seems that a college professor was upset because he noticed some students were yawning during his lectures. He asked a colleague to sit in on one of his lectures and tell him if he thought it was boring. To his horror, his colleague joined the yawners!

The professor was crushed as the students left the room, then his colleague pounded him on the back shouting, "No wonder they yawned... it was so exciting they forgot to breathe!" They were yawning from lack of oxygen, not lack of interest.

So now, Dear Abby, you know.

RIO GRANDE VALLEY

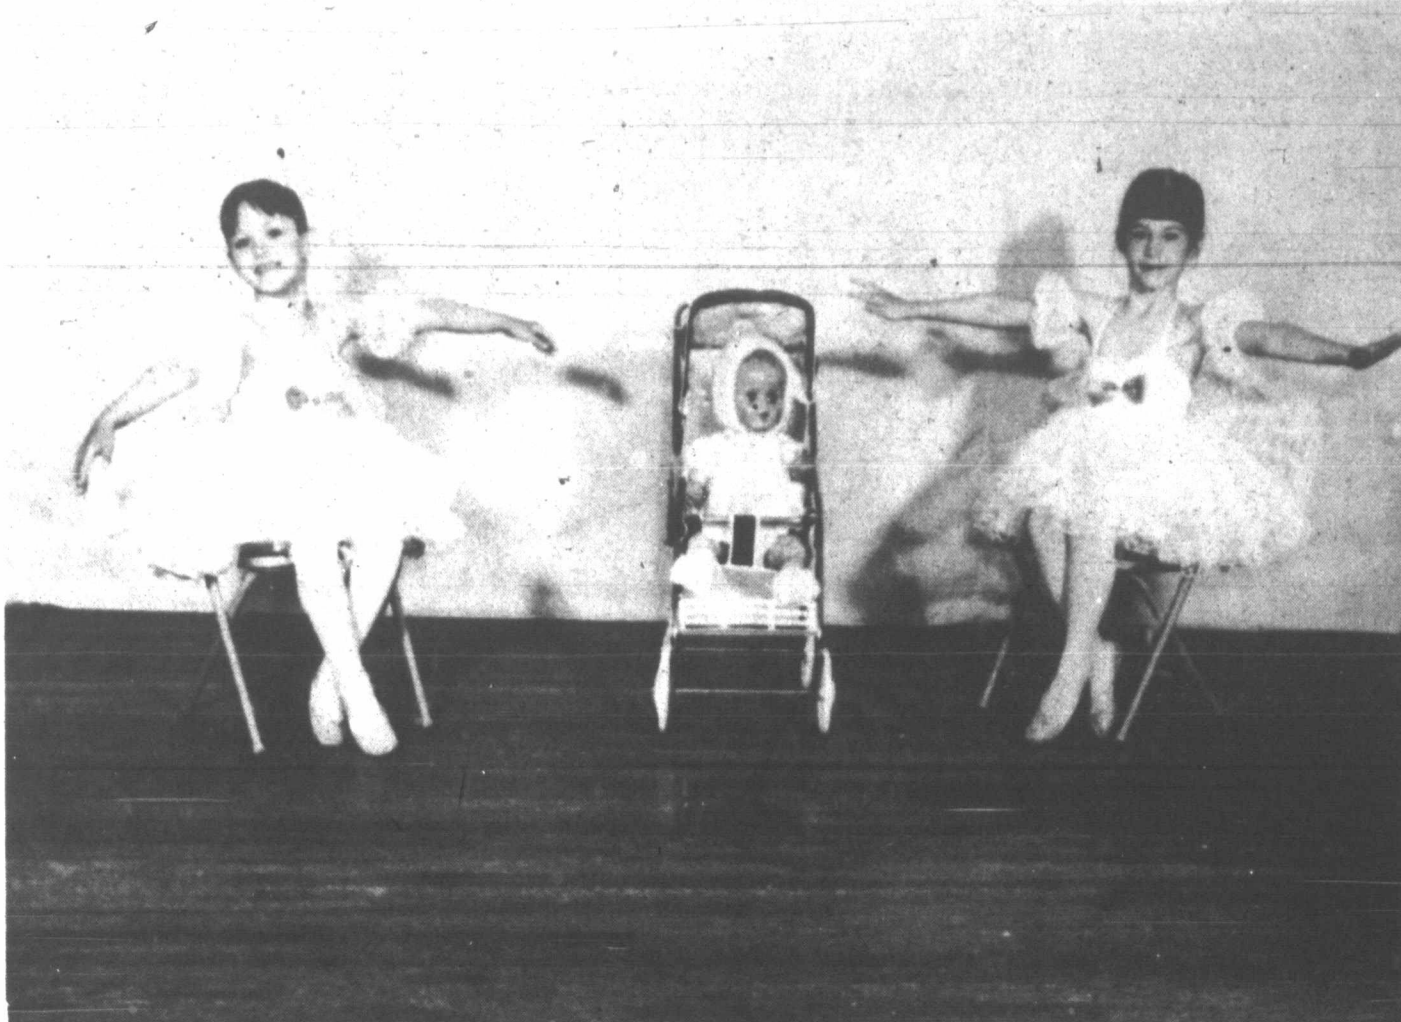

DEAR RIO: Your theory may hold up scientifically, but to me yawning will always signal boredom. Perhaps one day I'll become fascinated with the dynamics of yawning that I'll yawn wide enough to get my foot out of my mouth.

DEAR ABBY: Bravo on your answer to the person who wanted to scream whenever some "nanny" congratulated the girl on her engagement or marriage. You said, "It's proper to congratulate the man and wish the girl luck, but in many instances it's the girl who deserves the congratulations and the man who needs the luck."

The following happened to me as I was leaving a restaurant. A newly wed couple I knew were entering, so I smiled and said sincerely to the couple, "Congratulations!" The bride tartly replied, "You congratulate HIM, not ME!"

I smiled again and said, "Good luck to both of you!" (And boy, will they ever need it!)

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

THIS SEASON team up on the court in this two-piece hand-crocheted tennis set.

STITCHIN' TIME

Judy Love

This season millions of Americans plan to greet summer with a tennis racket in hand. Comfort and fashion on the courts have become important ingredients in today's active lifestyle. A sure way to score a fashion-winning match is to be as clever with the crocheted hook as with the racket and create your own tennis classic.

Handy needleworks can easily make this two-piece tennis suit that is perfected for both on and off the courts. The knit cardigan top and short-short set is a double winner that flatters the body. Wear it as a V-neck button vest with a color-coordinated shirt or pair it with your favorite jeans. Team up the shorts with a bright T-shirt and you're ready for walking, jogging or bicycling.

Crochet this body-hugging set in J & P Coats Knit Cro-Sheen.

Use No. 1 white and trim it in No. 25 crystal blue. You will also need 1 1/2 to 2 yards of round elastic, depending on your size, seven buttons and a No. 1 steel crochet hook - one that will obtain the proper gauge. To order instructions for the tennis vest and shorts, send 50 cents to Stitchin' Time, P.O. Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, New York, 10019. Ask for leaflet S527 and don't forget to include your name, address and zip code.

Dear Judy Love:

Someone told me there are different variations of the treble crochet. Can you tell me what they are and how to do them? - R.L.M., Little Rock, Ark.

Dear R.L.M.: There are several variations of the treble crochet. The double treble is worked in the same manner as a treble except that yarn is wrapped three times over the hook instead of twice.

Also, two loops are taken off four times instead of three times. Another variation, the triple treble crochet, is also worked as the treble crochet. With the triple treble the yarn is wrapped four times over hook instead of twice and two loops are taken off five times instead of three times.

Dr. Lamb

lawrence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Please send me your information on spastic or irritable colon. I'm 52 years old and have had all kinds of X rays taken for the past 10 years. The results have always been the same. Can't find anything. I wish the doctor could examine me when the pain is there. I'm sure all people feel the same way. At the present time I'm taking Librax and find it most helpful. Also I had my 10th child at age 43 and would like to know if Mother Nature is still out to get me.

DEAR READER - I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable Or Spastic Colon And Constipation, that you requested. Spasms of the colon are muscle spasms, analagous in many respects to a cramp in the calf of your leg. The wall of your colon is a layer of muscle. The intermittent contraction and relaxation of this muscular tube moves the food residue along.

The spasms or contractions that many people experience, of course, are not constant. It just seems to be the nature of things that the spasms don't occur when the patient is in the doctor's office. In that respect the human body is much like our automobiles and electrical appliances that have intermittent disorders.

Librax is very good medicine. It's a combination of Librium which is a tranquilizer and an antispasmodic. The latter blocks the nerves that stimulate the muscles in your colon to overcontraction or spasm.

Gradually increase the bulk in your diet, particularly bran. You can get that from whole wheat cereals or if that doesn't appeal to you, you can mix ordinary crude bran in some other food of your choice such as apple sauce.

Many people with colon problems do a lot better if they eliminate coffee and all decaffeinated coffee products entirely. They should also eliminate tea and other drinks that contain caffeine. You might try it and see if that helps. Then there are people who are intolerant to milk but people who have this difficulty usually have constant problems as long as they're using milk or milk products.

Training your bowel as suggested in The Health Letter I'm sending you also helps. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Many people don't realize that when they switch their diet to include more bulk, the gas problem may be considerably worse for about three weeks. That's why I often recommend gradually easing into increasing the bulk in the diet. If you understand this in advance and can live through that three-week period, usually your colon functions better after that and the problem eases off.

Many women your age want to know if they can throw caution to the wind without expecting an addition to the family. The one almost positive rule I can give you is that if you're past 57, you can forget about it. As a more liberal rule, if you've gone through the menopause and not had a period for two years, the chances of your getting pregnant are almost nil. If your doctor examines you and determines on the basis of the examination that you've passed the childbearing phase, then you might be able to decrease the two-year period.

DEAR POLLY - I have tried every polish I know of on my laminated plastic kitchen table and counter tops but nothing will restore the shiny surface. Do you or the readers know of any way I could polish these surfaces? - G.M.Z.

DEAR G.M.Z. - Sounds as if you have been using abrasives for cleaning. One of the leading manufacturers of such products suggests a spray wax that dusts and waxes in one operation and leaves a high shine. It may take a few treatments. Balled linseed oil (bought at the paint or drug store) is often recommended for protecting counter or bar tops and it should leave some luster. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Are you tired of fighting with bacon? While it is in its plastic wrap roll up one side, unroll and then roll up the other side. Unroll and flatten out and this will guarantee the strips of bacon will not stick and will come apart with ease. - CAROLYN

DEAR POLLY - When I get paid twice a month the money is automatically deposited into my checking account. I frequently write out my checks the week of deposit, put them in sealed envelopes, and mark the MAILING TIME in the stamp area. I am all set for when I know the money is in the bank. Just add stamps and drop in the mail. Maybe nothing is left in the checking account but the bills are paid. - MRS. S.S.

DEAR POLLY - A plastic coffee can lid, trimmed around the edges, can be a great cooking tool for camping or for around the kitchen. It can be used as a bowl scraper, a small cutting surface or a scoop. - CHARLENE

DEAR CHARLENE - I agree with you. I find mine is indispensable but I cut the circle in half and find it easy to hold the flat side and then the rounded side makes the best bowl scraper ever and gets out that last little bit of cake batter or whatever. - POLLY

Astounding numbers of us routinely undergo X-ray examinations each year. Would you believe more than 130 million in this country alone?

The obvious explanations remain as always: X-rays are of extreme values in detecting conditions which must be corrected; X-rays are routine in testing teeth, lungs, any other organs that suggest trouble has developed, limbs, etc.

But recently another explanation has been extensive use of so-called defensive X-rays, which physicians often order to protect themselves against the possibility of malpractice suits.

There is no effort on the part of the physicians themselves or their organizations to deny this—particularly in the face of soaring awards to patients suing their doctors for malpractice in any number of ways.

To their credit, it should be stressed that physicians should not get all the blame for the abuse of X-rays. Their patients frequently request—even demand—the X-ray.

In fact, Deborah Van Brunt of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Radiological Health points out that many patients feel that their physician "must be on the ball" when he gives X-rays or other similar tests involving high-technology therapy.

While there is no way to check the incidence of these diagnostic examinations, estimates on the use of defensive X-rays now run from six to as high as 40 percent of those taken in one year!

And while there is no way to tote up the amounts that many of these unnecessary X-rays add to health costs, this much is clear:

The X-ray exams swell the risks of overexposure to radiation fallout.

The unavoidable expenses of the treatments are adding substantially to the costs of health care each of us, as individuals, are assuming and certainly are contributing to the upsurge in these costs year after year.

The burden on the hospitals also is a factor, for the X-rays involve costly equipment, personnel, space, etc.

As of today, hospitals are open to ever more bitter criticism in this area, too. They are not immune to charges of excessive use of X-ray—not by any means.

And even the generally praised mass screenings for tuberculosis by mobile X-ray units are coming under fire. The units do uncover possible dangerous conditions, perhaps in sufficiently early stages to permit treatment and complete recovery of the individual. But how much unnecessary exposure is there to radiation?

Other problems are emerging from charges that X-ray examinations too often are not performed by radiologists who are trained to read the resulting films. (All my recent X-rays have been performed by trained nurses who then turn over the films to the radiologist for reading and interpretation. Hasn't that been your experience, too?)

But those who are re-examining the entire X-ray-radiation problem are concerned about improper use of the X-rays by the lesser trained personnel, and also are making this point clear.

Low-level radiation is responsible for up to 5 percent of all cancers, according to studies. The recent National Academy of Sciences review, for instance, notes that thyroid, lung and solid tumors of the breast can be associated with X-ray dosages.

But the NAS study does conclude that the overall risk of cancer and genetic mutations from low exposure to radiation is still slight.

Radiation, of course, is everywhere in our environment. Approximately 50 percent of the radiation we receive we can't control: diverse exposure as a result of flying in a plane for long distances; natural background radiation; even working in buildings of certain types of stone.

Then the problem really erupts when we add the broadened spectrum of radiation exposure as a result of a myriad of treatments for disease and methods of detecting disease.

X-rays (high energy electromagnetic impulses which comprise part of a spectrum that includes radio, light and heat waves) were discovered by Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen in 1895. The unit to express amounts of radiation was named "roentgen" in his honor.

Large doses, in the range of thousands of roentgens (5,000R, for instance) may be required in radiation treatment of cancer. Diagnostic X-ray exams require much smaller amounts of radiation. Exposure from a chest X-ray is only 20-1,000 of one roentgen.

Q. I've had gout for years and take ColBenemid (Colchicine and Probenecid) to keep my uric acid levels down. Last year I found out I have high blood pressure. The doctor gave me Hydrodiuril (Hydrochlorothiazide). It did lower my blood pressure, but after taking it for a few months, I started to have pains in my elbows.

I am convinced that Hydrodiuril is making my gout worse. Is there some new blood pressure drug available that does not increase uric acid levels in the blood?

A. Boy, are you in luck! There is a new drug—so brand-new in fact that doctors are only starting to write prescriptions for it this week.

Until now, many medications used to reduce blood pressure have had the unpleasant habit of raising uric acid levels in the blood.

For most folks this is not a problem, but for those susceptible to gout, increased uric acid aggravates the painful joint symptoms.

But Smith Kline and French has just announced a pharmaceutical breakthrough. Their product, Selacryn (Ticrynafen), is supposed to be as effective as Hydrodiuril for treating high blood pressure. The big difference is that instead of increasing uric acid, Selacryn lowers it.

For gout sufferers with hypertension, this drug could be a significant step forward for controlling their blood pressure without making the gout worse.

There is no way that we can enthusiastically endorse this product because it is too early for our evaluation. Nevertheless, we feel that you should definitely discuss its potential with your physician since this drug is exactly what you are asking about.

For people with chronic medical problems like gout and hypertension, it is always a good idea to periodically check in with a doctor. While true breakthroughs are rare, there is slow and steady progress being made and new developments can make treatment safer and more effective.

Good luck with the gout, and if your doctor recommends Selacryn please write and tell us how it works out.

Q. I was bit by the running bug a few months ago. Unless I get in a mile before breakfast my whole day seems lost and unproductive. Last month I decided to treat myself to an expensive pair of athletic shoes since my old sneakers were falling apart.

Within a few weeks I noticed a patchy red rash on my sole. At first I thought it must be a case of athlete's foot and tried a number of drug store remedies. But nothing has worked and the rash just keeps getting worse. Help! I'll be damned if I will give up running.

A. This sounds like a case for your dermatologist. Since the reaction occurred soon after you splurged on the snazzy new running shoes there is a distinct possibility that your rash is caused by one of the many agents used to manufacture the innersole. All sorts of toxic chemicals may be used to make running shoes and allergic reactions have been caused by dyes, tanning agents, glues or rubber ingredients.

If you have been experiencing a contact allergy to one of the chemicals in your shoes you should have your dermatologist run a "patch test" in order to determine the specific offender. You may have to give up your neat new shoes and opt for another brand that will not produce such misery. There is no reason why you should give up running except to temporarily get your feet back into good shape.

Q. My husband seems to be very allergic to monosodium glutamate (MSG). Whenever he eats anything seasoned with it he usually develops symptoms within half an hour although it may take up to 12 hours for the reaction to occur. He experiences shortness of breath, headaches, rapid pulse, flushing and dizziness which lasts for about a day.

Is there anything on the market to counteract these symptoms and do other seasonings contain MSG without listing it on the label?

A. Ah yes, the old "Chinese Restaurant Syndrome" rears its head once again. This food is often highly seasoned with Monosodium Glutamate in order to enhance the flavor. People who are sensitive may experience the kind of side effects your husband has reported.

He is not actually allergic to this chemical. He is just more susceptible to the pharmacological effects of the drug than most folks. There is no antidote. He is just going to have to be careful about where he eats. If you do eat at a Chinese restaurant make sure his food is not seasoned with MSG. And always read the label of any food or seasoning in the grocery store. It must list all ingredients, including MSG.

Lawyer tells Texas Supreme Court

Suits should not be tried where victims live

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Defective product suits should be tried where the manufacturers are located, not where accidents occur or victims live, a lawyer has told the Texas Supreme Court.

Damon Ball of San Antonio said Wednesday a suit against Lubbock Manufacturing Co., maker of a tank-trailer that exploded near Eagle Pass, should be moved from Eagle Pass to Lubbock.

An opposing lawyer said Ball's idea, if adopted by the court, would send manufacturers flocking to Dallas because "plaintiffs don't win" product suits there.

The suit was filed for the widow and children of driver Jesus

Verduzco, a Mexican citizen who died when his butane rig went out of control and exploded.

Sixteen persons died and another 44 were burned in the April 1975 explosion.

Ball and his colleague, Thomas Crofts Jr. of San Antonio, asked the court to overturn lower court decisions placing the trial in Eagle Pass.

Ball and Crofts said the case should be tried—if at all—in Lubbock because that was the place where any design defects would have occurred.

Carter beginning to play down wage guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with growing evidence that the wage and price guidelines aren't working, the Carter administration has begun to play down their importance.

It has little choice, since the only other option may soon be to admit failure, and politicians and bureaucrats are loathe to admit they have failed at anything.

Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, scarcely mentioned the guidelines during a speech to the National Association of Homebuilders last week in which he gave a detailed explanation of the administration's efforts to control inflation.

He acknowledged that he had given the guidelines "short-shrift" in his remarks. But he said he didn't want to exaggerate their importance because they never were intended to play anything but a minor role in the anti-inflation effort.

Kahn had said previously that if the guidelines didn't show results by the beginning of summer, he would personally consider them to have failed.

The time for such a judgment is almost at hand. Summer is less than a month away, and inflation hasn't abated significantly yet.

Indeed, President Carter said last week he expects "serious, adverse" inflation figures for the next two to three months. Prices increased at an annual rate of nearly 14 percent during the first four months of the year.

Kahn admitted last week, after the government reported another 1.1 percent increase in consumer prices in April, that the government can't do much about the worse current causes of inflation, rising oil, housing and food prices.

Both Kahn and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal now say consumer prices will increase at least 8.5 percent this year, up from an original target of 7.4 percent, and could easily be higher. Prices increased 9.2 percent last year.

Rather than declare the guidelines a failure, Kahn told the home builders that anyone who thought the guidelines could by themselves restrain inflation was afflicted with "economic illiteracy."

Kahn stressed the importance of other steps being taken to restrain inflation, especially fiscal policies to slow government spending and monetary policies to tighten the money supply and raise interest rates. Blumenthal has adopted a similar stance.

The administration will be reluctant to drop the guidelines entirely anytime soon.

In fairness, the guidelines never were supposed to be the end-all solution to controlling inflation, but the administration had hoped they would contain the upward spiral of prices for a time until fiscal and monetary policies had a chance to work.

The guidelines ask business to hold price increases one-half of one percentage point below the average increases during the 1976-77 period.

Economy's growth on sharp downswing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government index designed to forecast economic trends declined by a record 3.3 percent in April, providing new evidence that a sharp slowdown in the economy is under way.

However, the department said the figures may have been distorted by several events that occurred during the week they were gathered. These were the Easter and Passover observances and the trucking strike and lockout.

The previous record decline in the composite index of leading indicators was a 3 percent drop in September 1974, during the depths of the 1974-1975 recession.

The decline in the April index was the fourth in the last six months, the Commerce Department said in today's report. However, it revised the March index upward to show an 0.3 percent increase instead of the 0.5 percent decline reported earlier.

Many private economists say the current slowdown in the economy is actually the beginning of a recession that will occur in the second half of this year. However, Carter administration economists say a recession still can be avoided, although they admit there is a risk that one will occur.

The economy has continued to grow for an unusually long time, four years, since the last recession. Economic slowdowns generally occur closer together than this.

In its report, the Commerce Department said eight of the 10 individual economic statistics used in the index were negative in April, led by a sharp decline in the average work week, down 1.7 hours to 39.1 hours.

Also negative in April were the job layoff rate, sales performance, cash and other liquid assets, sensitive prices, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, factory orders and building permits.

The only two positive statistics were stock prices and the money supply.

In the past, the index has been interpreted as forecasting a possible recession when it declines for three consecutive months. When the March report was first released last month, it was the third month of decline.

However, the upward revision in March reported today means there has not yet been three consecutive months of decline in recent months. The index was down in November, January and February, but up in December and March.

The index is subject to frequent revisions, which makes economists distrustful with respect to quick interpretation of the figures.

The index declined for 12 consecutive months during the 1974-1975 recession. It declined for three consecutive months during the spring and summer of 1977, but a recession did not occur at that time.

The index in April stood at 138.7 of the 1967 average of 100.

On Wednesday, the government said in another economic report that a surge in imports of oil and autos pushed the nation's trade deficit to a three-month high of $2.15 billion in April, but administration officials still predicted a decline in the total deficit for the year.

"I regard it as an aberration from an overall improving trend," said William Cox, a top Commerce Department economist. He said the trucking strike was probably partly responsible for a sharp 3.9 percent decline in exports during the month.

In other economic news, federal banking regulators took action Wednesday that will permit banks and savings and loan associations to pay a quarter of a percentage point more on passbook savings accounts and even higher interest on new, four-year accounts beginning July 1.

Police chief quits

Richard J. Mills, Pampa's chief of police since 1975, is leaving at the end of June to become police chief of Sherman, a town about 61 miles north of Dallas.

Mills turned in his resignation Wednesday. The main reason behind his decision to accept the new job was money, he said this morning.

"I'm going down there for the most basic of human reasons — greed," Mills said. "They're going to pay me a heck of a lot more than I'm getting here."

"There was no secret about it," City Manager Mack Wofford said of Mills' resignation. "He was very open and professional about it and we knew he was seeking this position."

Sherman, with a population of approximately 33,000, has a police department twice the size of Pampa's, Mills said. The Sherman department's budget is roughly $950,000, he said, while the Pampa police operate under a $500,000 budget.

In the past the police chief has criticized the facilities and amount of funds provided for the police department by the city commission. Mills has said the Pampa police force is too small for the city's size and crime rate.

Last week Mills wrote a letter to Wofford suggesting the commission consider discontinuing certain police services, such as vacation house checks, funeral escorts and investigation of non-injury accidents, to cut the department's workload. Wofford said he plans to pass the letter on to the commissioners, but no decision will be made on Mills' recommendations until a new police chief is hired.

Mills came to Pampa April 7, 1975 from Lake Worth, a suburb of Fort Worth, where he was chief of police for three years. Before that he was an officer for seven years in Grand Prairie, a suburb of Dallas.

Wofford, who will appoint the new chief with the commission's consent, said the city will take applications for the job from within and outside the police department.

"I'm sure there will be some people in the department who will want to apply," he said. "We would not preclude anyone from within the department who would want to submit an application."

"If a selection has not been made by the time he goes, someone from within the department will be placed in temporary charge."

Attorneys offer reward for capture of assassin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A group of local attorneys has pledged a $100,000 reward hoping to spur the arrest of an assassin who has evaded an intense federal investigation since a federal judge was gunned down at his home Tuesday morning.

The leader of that massive manhunt, meanwhile, has indicated it could be a lengthy one.

"I can't see anything right away," James O. Ingram, an FBI deputy assistant director and the agency's foremost criminal investigator, said Wednesday. "When you are talking about an assassination of this nature, it could be a long type of inquiry, I think I'll be here awhile."

U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., 63, known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he assessed drug offenders, was slain by a sniper Tuesday morning outside his North Side townhouse. He died from a single rifle shot to the spine.

Two other federal judges, shadowed by armed federal marshals, were among 300 mourners who attended the rosary for Wood on Wednesday night. The funeral mass was scheduled this morning.

It was the second time in seven months a Western District of Texas official involved in narcotics smuggling cases has been attacked. Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr escaped serious injury here Nov. 21 when his car was riddled by automatic rifle fire.

The possible connection has led U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, himself guarded by federal marshals in the wake of the Wood slaying, to accelerate his ongoing federal grand jury investigation in El Paso into alleged interstate narcotics smuggling.

"We are putting every ounce of effort into this. I have never seen a group more motivated in my 20 years in law enforcement," Boyd said in El Paso.

Boyd refused to comment on specifics in the Wood case, but said, "we're talking about drugs. They (alleged smugglers) have been threatened and they are upset and Judge Wood has been in the forefront of the battle."

What's inside

Weather

The forecast calls for continued chance of heavy showers or thunderstorms through Friday, with continued cool temperatures. The high today and Friday is expected in the mid 60s, with the low today in the low 50s. Winds will be out of the east today at 10 to 15 mph and gusty around thunderstorms. The high Wednesday was 66 and the overnight low was 51.

Train derails at McKinney

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Railroad spikes and angle irons apparently placed on a track by juveniles forced nine cars on a southbound Southern Pacific freight train to derail here Wednesday.

Sgt. Joe Barton of the McKinney police said there were no injuries and that none of the derailed cars carried hazardous cargo.

Three youths in their mid teens were arrested by McKinney police Wednesday, Barton said.

The engineer saw the debris on the track when he rounded a bend, but did have time to stop, said Barton.

Crews began work Wednesday night to repair several hundred yards of track dislodged in the derailment.

Gas supplies down

HOUSTON (AP) — Service stations will have less gasoline and higher prices this weekend than they did during the extended Memorial Day holiday because their May allocation from suppliers is running out.

The Texas Division of the American Automobile Association reported Wednesday that increasing numbers of stations, especially those in urban areas, no longer have one or more grades of gasoline.

The AAA said that in the past week, prices have increased from 1 to 2.3 cents a gallon, as well.

According to the association's weekly Fuel Gauge survey of 462 service stations throughout the state, 10 percent of the stations have exhausted their May allocations of premium gasoline, 6 percent regular, and five percent unleaded. Last week, those percentages were 6, 3 and 3.

Statewide, 70 percent of the stations said they planned to be closed Sunday, compared with 64 percent last weekend. In the big cities, 89 percent are closing their doors Sunday.

The AAA said the weekend crunch should be worst in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and Austin, where 80 percent of the stations are closing nights and Sunday, with 50 percent shutting down after 6 p.m. Saturday.

Carter worth $800,000

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter, in apparent effort to keep Charles H. Kirbo as his business manager, has filed a financial disclosure statement showing that he, the president, has a net worth of about $800,000, the New York Times reported today.

The Times indicated in a report from Washington that it had obtained a copy of the disclosure statement from the Office of Government Ethics. The statement lists the president's income, assets and liabilities for the period since Jan. 1, 1978, including previously unreported transactions involving the Carter warehouse in Plains, Ga.

Finances at the warehouse are the subject of a Justice Department investigation, apparently to determine whether bank loans to the warehouse were illegally diverted to Carter's 1976 presidential campaign. Carter owns 62 percent of the warehouse.

In the statement, for which Carter was given a 15-day extension past the original May 15 deadline, the president lists property and assets totalling about $1.5 million — not including his home in Plains, Ga. — and liabilities totalling about $700,000 for a net worth of about $800,000, according to the Times.

Under a new government ethics law which took effect earlier this month, a government official must either disclose details about his income and financial holdings or assign management of those holdings to a qualified blind trust. The person assigned must be completely independent of the person whose business is being managed.

If Carter had chosen a blind trust, he would have taken the risk that Kirbo, a longtime friend and confidante, would be ruled an invalid trustee.

Instead, he chose to report his financial affairs, making the issue of Kirbo's credentials and relationship to him irrelevant.

Technically, Carter's interest in the family peanut business is still in a blind trust managed by Kirbo. This means Carter is not supposed to have knowledge of the business operations, on the theory this would remove the possibility he could take actions as president that would benefit him personally.

However, Carter chose to file details of the warehouse's financial operations, including his personal liability for more than $250,000 loaned to the warehouse by the National Bank of Georgia, formerly managed by Carter's friend, Bert Lance.

Filing the financial report technically allows Carter to keep Kirbo, an Atlanta attorney who is among his closest advisers, as his business manager.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Scapegouting the oil industry

The term "overkill" may conjure only the image of the results of an atomic war. There is another overkill which has been going on for some time, and it has been highly successful. The oil industry has become the scapegoat for most all of our energy problems, including gasoline shortages. Even inflation and the drop in the value of the dollar has been included in charges which now reflect in the public attitude.

Too many people will not take the time to sort out all the ramifications of the complexities involved. They appear to want a single visible target to blame for all the present economic problems which now beset them.

Government officials, including legislators seeking re-election, have found an easy patsy. So far they have been able to focus the blame on the oil industry with little fear that their assertions might boomerang and the real culprits be revealed.

Killing a mythical dragon or two is one thing, but with the president entering the arena and bringing the overkill to ridiculous proportions, the boomerang effect may have started.

A group of 14 men representing the independent oil and gas industry placed an advertisement in a Denver newspaper to voice their justifiable resentment. They drew attention to the fact that the independents were a vital part of an industry made up of "millions of people from all avenues of commerce, including investors who receive yearly compensation from shares owned in oil companies and hundreds of thousands of farmers, ranchers and other individuals who receive a monthly royalty payment from oil or gas production.

In fact, the largest single monthly oil and gas royalty payment recipient in America is the United States Government.

Addressing the president, these men said, "In your address to the nation on April 5th announcing your plan to decontrol prices on crude oil, you promised the end of excessive government controls. You acknowledged that increased oil prices will insure more exploration, more refineries, more national petroleum production and less dependency on OPEC.

That was all very good news. However, the balance of your address was a direct insult to the energy consuming public and to the oil industry in this country.

You acknowledged the ineptitude of government control of the oil industry. To quote you: "the federal bureaucracy and red tape have become so complicated, it's almost unbelievable." We believe it, Mr. President.

Some of the language in your address we find insulting, purely political and unnecessary. You called us cheats. You alleged that as the result of decontrol the nation can expect the oil companies to reap "unearned" profits and "windfalls." You predicted price gouging of the public by oil companies.

You became prosecutor, judge and jury in your broad indictment of the oil industry. You then convicted us of terrible skulduggery even before your proposals are in effect. Indeed, you emphasized your verdict against the oil and gas industry with this quote: "First, as surely as the sun will rise, the oil companies can be expected to fight to keep the profits which they have not earned." We resolutely and in the strongest terms object to you imprinting your presidential seal on broad-brush allegations that the oil industry is made up of "cheats" who rake in "unearned" profits on projected "windfalls" that might come from a not yet implemented White House proposal.

The scapegoat has been loaded with too much blame and there is a reaction setting in. If one talks to the so-called man on the street who has no connection with the oil industry, he will find bitter resentment against the industry. But, if most anyone with a stake in oil is queried the attitude will be found to be a reaction against the government.

Workers, management, investors and royalty holders are voicing facts which refute allegations from governmental and other sources. We believe it is time for all industry to assist in getting all the facts before the people. In fact, all who believe in the private enterprise system had better start helping to reveal the truth. These have tended to talk to each other, rather than getting the facts out to the people.

The overkill may react to the oil industry's benefit. Why not help the reaction along? The economic life you save may be your own.

How cynicism turns to self-injury

A Vietnamese refugee, who saw his own country immobilized by a shortage of fuel and other vital supplies in a time of crisis, looked at the long lines of motorists pushing their cars, fighting among themselves and tying up traffic in California, and said: "You can get them all with one grenade."

It was a frightening scene to the former Vietnamese military man who still fears that the enemy who took advantage of his country's weakness and lack of organization and cooperation might also find this country's Achilles heel.

He was shocked that, after the months and months of talk about an impending gas shortage, there was no emergency plan in the works to handle the emergency that threatened, as one psychiatrist feared, to bring violence to the streets.

"If I were America's enemy right now, I would know how to cause internal panic and insurrection, since there doesn't seem to be a plan for handling such emergencies as gasoline shortages and power plant disasters. It is disturbing to us (Vietnamese refugees) because the fear of internal espionage and panic in the streets is still with us."

As if to reinforce the fears of the refugee,

David Melton of Santa Ana Heights phoned to say that he couldn't believe the applause he received everywhere recently when he wore a T-shirt he had printed with the words: "I JUST BOMBED AN OIL COMPANY. HAVE YOU DONE YOUR PART?"

Melton said he had it printed out of frustration but was shocked, himself, at the acclaim the sentiments received from young and old.

To the extent such mindlessness has caught on, government scapegouting of the oil industry has been successful. This is all the more painfully ironic because - since Vietnam, since Watergate, et al. - Americans are everywhere regarded as wiser than their government. In the last weeks, alas, they seem to have easily bought all the anti-oil demagoguery, the organs of which are entirely the politicians who won't accept the blame for thwarting oil production.

Skepticism was a needed antidote to the rising antidemocratic elitism of our government. It has turned to cynicism, and the trouble with cynicism, ironically, is that it makes people to terrorize themselves.

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

People we identify as intellectuals - serious writers, scholars, and academics - usually seem to adhere to the brand of liberalism represented in the editorial pages of the New York Times and Washington Post. But this group is far from monolithic in its perspective, as is evident from the dedicated following enjoyed by Commentary, a magazine of opposing outlook. Published by the American Jewish Committee, but containing much of general interest, it is a leading think magazine of the day. Commentary's writers are particularly adept at demolishing liberal-left claims to objective rational inquiry. The May issue contains four illustrative articles.

In "The Politics of Jonestown," Midge Decker discusses the faith many in the media possess about anyone or any cause regarded as socialist or leftist. She speculates on why the media (with a few exceptions) never investigated nor criticized the cult's open "totalitarian mini-society." It was, she decided, because "professions of leftist sentiment, especially under conditions that manage to suggest some connection to minority status, for a long time provided immunity from too careful a public scrutiny."

As proof, she offers Washington Post reporter Charles A. Krause's own testimony, following his narrow escape at the airstrip shooting. He reports in his book Guyana Massacre, "I was convinced that Jones was very sick, both physically and mentally. But the People's Temple hadn't struck me as a crazy fringe cult, like the Moonies or whoever they are who try to stick flowers in your lapel at every airport in America. It seemed to me that the People's Temple had a legitimate purpose, a noble purpose, and was more or less succeeding."

It was, of course, wrote Decker, "Jones's goal of creating a Marxist-style egalitarian society that had differentiated the People's Temple in Krause's mind from the Moonies and other crazies." Krause's ruminations were the summation of views that exonerate totalitarianism and violence on the Left because no matter how deplorable those activities are, they are after all being done in the cause of a higher social justice.

Joshua Rubenstein examines the World War II documentary entitled The Unknown War, whose twenty episodes appeared on TV over the past year. Most of the footage was shot by the Soviet military, the remainder consisted of captured German film. While Rubenstein denies neither the inherent interest of the material, nor its "often devastating visual effect," he complains that "unfortunately, this effect is achieved at the price of historical distortion and falsification." What is not shown provides the title for his critique: "World War II - Soviet Style."

One example concerns the five and half million Soviet troops taken prisoner. "The television series makes pious remarks about their plight while ignoring the fact that they were betrayed by their own government.... The consequence... was that only a million Soviet POW's survived the war. These were forcibly repatriated by the British and Americans. Most were shot outright by Stalin or shipped directly to Siberia; only a small fraction returned to their families. By ignoring their fate, The Unknown War betrays them once again, with silence."

Rubenstein wonders at the marked discrepancies between what is included in Harrison Salisbury's book version and the TV production, and asks why the National Educational Association recommends the program for high school viewing. One also wonders why the American media did not severely condemn this historical coverage.

Book reviewer Kenneth S. Lynn finds remarkable similarities between Shana

Alexander's relationship with both her own mother and daughter, and that which she ascribes to Patty Hearst and her mother in Alexander's book, Anyone's Daughter. According to Lynn, Alexander blames Patty's ordeal largely on her mother, Catherine Campbell Hearst. This villainess is created by Alexander, who Lynn feels is so "blinded by hatred" that she is "incapable of seeing any resemblances between herself and the woman she is attempting to destroy." Interestingly, Alexander learns during Patty's trial that her own daughter has run away. Judging from the review, Alexander's personal life hardly exhibits the compassion and understanding consistent with the I-adore-humanity position she often expounds on "Sixty Minutes."

Finally, we have the Spanish Revolution, written by Burnett Bolloten, and reviewed by Joseph Shattan. Bolloten's book was a forty-year task, begun when, as a very young British journalist, he was sent by the United Press to cover the Spanish Civil War. At that time, Bolloten was a "fiercely pro-Republican." However, as a result of "exhaustive inquires... (his) views underwent a considerable change." The book, a "monumental and compelling work of scholarship," Shattan regards as "disrespectful of venerable leftist orthodoxy."

To Bolloten, the liberal government was simply a facade maintained solely in order to garner Western support. The main promoters of revolution were the anarcho-syndicalists, Spain's classic revolutionaries, who gutted or put to secular use, hundreds of churches and convents and murdered thousands of the clergy and religious orders. But in the end, neither the anarcho-syndicalists nor the more numerous but divided Socialists were a match for the Communists, who under Stalin, "gained control of Republican Spain."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, May 31, the 151st day of 1979. There are 214 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1910, the Union of South Africa was founded.

On this date:
In 1740, Frederick William the First of Prussia died and was succeeded by Frederick II, who became known as Frederick the Great.

In 1793, the Reign of Terror began in the French Revolution.

In 1889, more than 2,000 lives were lost in a flood at Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

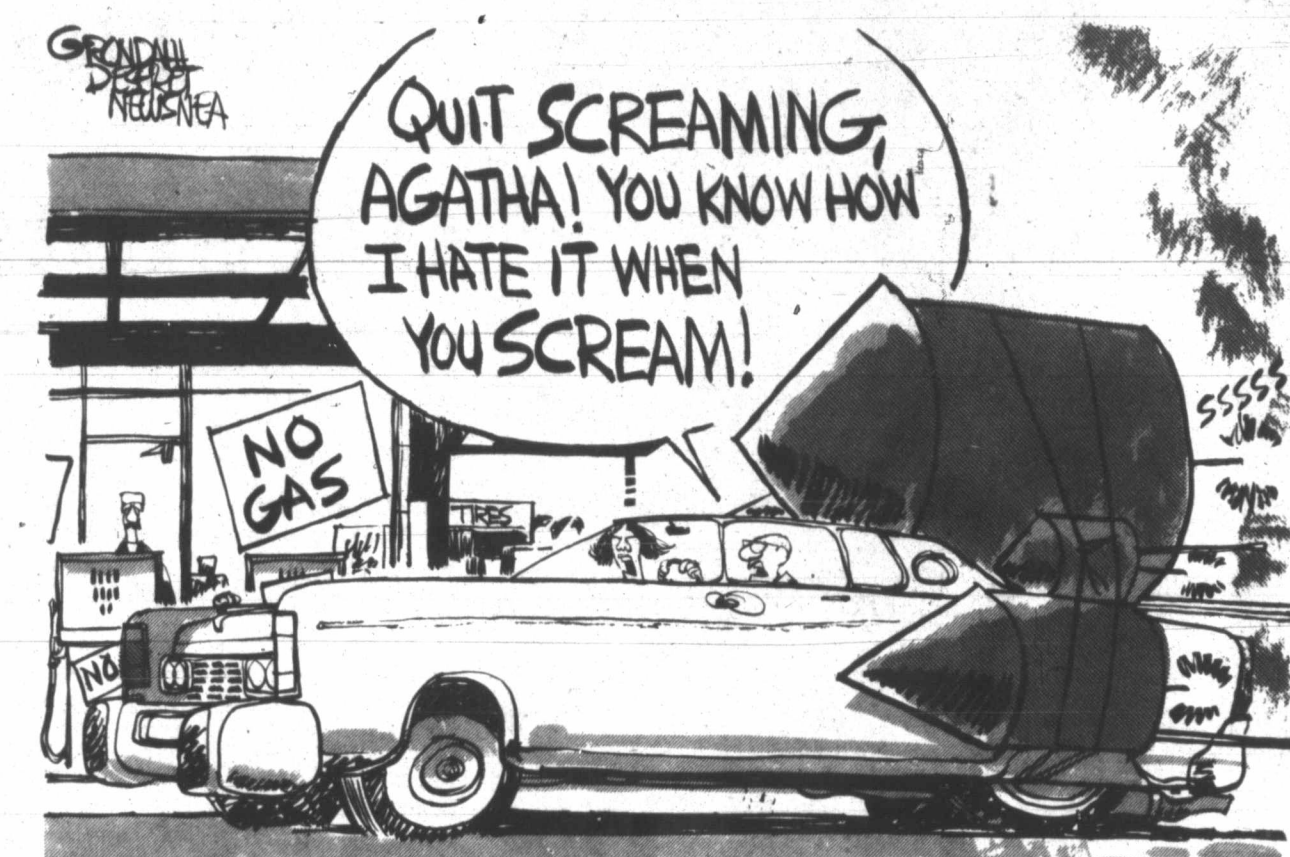

In 1916, British and German fleets fought in the Battle of Jutland off Denmark. It was the only major engagement between the two fleets in World War I.

In 1962, former Nazi Adolf Eichmann was executed in Israel after his capture in Argentina and trial on charges of war crimes.

In 1970, an earthquake in northern Peru killed nearly 67,000 people.

Ten years ago: Striking oil workers on the island of Curacao went on a rampage of burning and looting in the capital of Willemstad.

Five years ago: It was announced that President Richard Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev would meet in the Soviet Union in late June.

About women...without passion

by paul harvey

I am calling this essay: "About Women-Without Passion."

That is a sneaky device to solicit your undivided attention.

What it means is that we are going to try to talk about a sensitive subject-dispassionately.

We are going to try to discuss the Equal Rights Amendment-without rancor.

For the Equal Rights Amendment to be ratified requires the concurrence of three more states. They now have until June of 1982 to make up their minds.

So the subject is "on the back burner," so to speak.

With no state voting right now, there will not likely be a better time to consider the subject objectively.

Those opposed to ERA have predicted dire consequences: "It will merge toilets, it will legalize prostitution and homosexual marriages, it will destroy the family."

In 15 states where women are already guaranteed equal rights, none of these dire predictions has come to pass.

On the other side of the ledger, however, ERA would beget important institutional changes-in marriage, government, education and in the military.

There are only 23 words in the proposed amendment: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

Simple as it sounds, legal authorities are in agreement that it would end sex discrimination in employment, in public education and in the military.

Under ERA a married woman would be free to use her own surname rather than her husband's.

In divorce settlements, wives could expect an equitable division of property and husbands could expect equal consideration in child custody.

ERA would immediately cancel thousands of federal, state and local laws which treat women and men differently.

In Massachusetts only men are prohibited from making obscene phone calls.

In North Carolina only men are prohibited from peeping through windows.

In Mississippi women are limited to 10-hour working days; men are not.

The United States Civil Rights Commission has identified some 800 sections of the United States code which contain substantive sex bias or sex-based terminology.

Should ERA be ratified, there will remain for all a constitutional "right of privacy" enunciated by the Supreme Court in 1965. That means that laws dealing with unique physical characteristics would prevail-such as laws relating to abortion.

And unisex toilets.

To avert eventual disillusionment, this needs to be understood: The law can guarantee "equal legal rights."

It cannot guarantee "equality." Indeed, no two individuals of whatever sex are "equal."

As some men are suited to heavy work and to military combat and some are not-so it will be with women.

I guess what I'm saying is "Don't expect too much."

If I were a woman I think I would resent most the disproportionate pay scale for similar employment. For 15 years we have had a law specifically designed to correct that. It hasn't yet.

On becoming American

By Don Graff

Two unrelated events, one a major news story and the other not.

The first involves five people - Alexander Ginzburg, Georgi Vins, Valentin Moroz, Eduard Kuznetsov and Mark Dymshits, celebrities who gained their celebrity the hard way. They are Soviet Jews, dissidents who were allowed to leave the U.S.S.R. in exchange for two Soviet spies in U.S. custody, a post-Cold War deal that has made them, temporarily at least, headline names.

Their arrival in the United States drew the attention of millions right up to the president, whose guest Reverend Vins, a Baptist pastor, was at a Washington church service.

Their futures in freedom are varied. Kuznetsov and Dymshits have continued on to Israel. Moroz has been offered a teaching post at Harvard. And Ginzburg has accepted an offer to join and even more celebrated fellow exile - Alexander Solzhenitsyn - in the latter's well-fenced bit of Russia in Vermont.

Taking note of Ginzburg's decision and also his muted reaction to being in the United States, as expressed in a remark that it amounted to being exiled from his homeland "not having been asked." The Christian Science Monitor had an editorial suggestion. Would it not be better, before joining Solzhenitsyn in self-imposed isolation, to see something of America, to get to know at first hand the people and the characteristics of his new home?

"Neither the nation's democratic institutions nor the virtues and failings of its way of life can be learned from books or the press," the newspaper observed. "Nor can they be reasonably and fully assessed from an insulated Vermont retreat."

There is, of course, no question

Ginzburg's right to that retreat if such is his choice. The essence of his new home is that he and his celebrated companions in dissent in their old home are now free to get their own ways, as they themselves choose.

The second event involves 329 people. On a recent day when the doings of the dissidents were front-page items (Vins and Moroz lunched with Mayor Edward Koch at New York's city hall while outside the members of municipal unions demonstrated against the mayor's plan to close some city hospitals); The New York Times also reported a naturalization proceeding in Brooklyn federal court.

Two such take place there every week, giving the country some 30,000 new U.S. citizens every year and making the Brooklyn court the busiest naturalization center.

This particular group was almost as diverse as the population of America itself. There were 49 Jamaicans, the largest contingent from one country. In all, 55 countries were represented. The new Americans included former Cubans, Greeks, Chinese, Irish, Pakistanis and Syrians. And Russians.

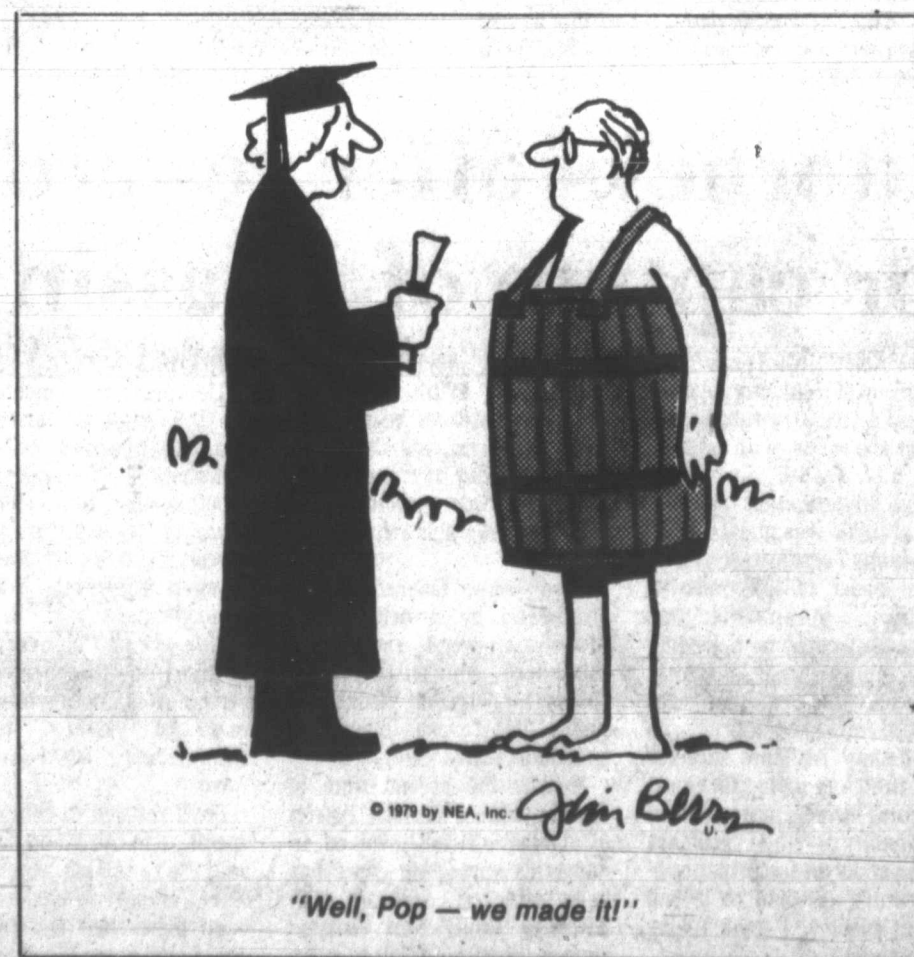

In a simple ceremony, hands held high, they pledged their new allegiance and heard presiding Judge Mark A. Costantino tell them that "America is you - nothing, nothing is too far fetched."

The judge could well have been echoing the Monitor's editorial message to Alexander Ginzburg, which concluded: "Millions upon millions of refugees form despotism have found a new home and fresh purpose in the United States. Perhaps he will, too."

But to repeat, these are two unrelated events.

Or are they?

Water Resources representative testifies

Toxic road oil wasn't tested

CORRIGAN, Texas (AP) — An official of the Texas Water Resources Department, under probing questions from Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, said Wednesday no tests were ever made to determine if road oil distributed by a chemical firm contained dangerous substances.

Clarence Moritz, regional engineer in charge of the agency's Orange office, told a congressional hearing a former chemist for Browning-Ferris Industries of Nederland, Texas, has complained that toxic chemicals were being mixed into the road oil as a means of cheap disposal.

Moritz said he sent a field investigator to check the complaint from Melvin Grizzard and the conclusion was reached "that the allegation was not substantiated."

Grizzard later told the Port Arthur News that he refused to go along with the disposal operation and was forced to resign under pressure.

Moritz said Browning-Ferris employees were questioned and company records examined.

"But," Eckhardt asked, "did you actually test the road oil to determine if it contained toxic chemicals?" Moritz said no tests were made.

"Then, your conclusion was made only on the company records," Eckhardt said.

The oil was spread over numerous roads in several East Texas subdivisions. Recent tests showed the oil contained heavy concentrations of nitrobenzene and traces of cyanide.

Browning-Ferris has been ordered to remove the oil from at least 16 locations in some five counties.

The Water Resources Department's report on the level and the danger of the contaminated oil was challenged by Dr. Max Costa, a Texas A&M University toxicologist. The scientist said the danger level set by the state agency was far above what his figures indicated.

So, three residents of the Reilley Village subdivision near the community of Corrigan, one of the affected areas, told of the illnesses they had suffered and of the death of several animals since the oil was laid.

The hearing was conducted by Eckhardt, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations.

Costa testified he would be hesitant to move his family to any subdivision where the contaminated road oil was used and warned residents to have their water wells tested.

He said a heavy rain could have washed the toxic chemicals into the soil and water wells and rivers and streams.

Dick Whittington, deputy director for the water resources department, said he would have "no concern for my health" by living in a subdivision where the questionable road oil had been used, but then moved.

Costa said short-term exposure to nitrobenzene would cause severe headaches, dizziness, skin irritations and other problems. Long-term exposure, he said, could result in damage to the liver, kidneys and spleen.

Robert Duff, a resident of Reilley's Village, said since the oil was spread on the road his 5-year-old daughter had suffered severe stomach pains; his wife had scars on her arms from some type of rash, and he had persistent and severe headaches.

Duff also said several of his dogs had died mysteriously.

Barbara Wilder said she, too, had skin irritations; her husband had "trouble breathing in the mornings" and the family had lost nine head of cattle since the oil was laid.

City Editor Charles R. Cook of the Port Arthur News, the paper that first published stories concerning the contaminated oil, said it was strange to him that reporters "with no records available were able to locate the chemically contaminated road oil when the water resources department, with complete records, could not?"

Eckhardt also questioned regional engineer Moritz about other complaints against Browning-Ferris. Moritz said he recalled two, one involving a massive fish kill and another from a rice farmer who lost his crop.

In both cases, Moritz said, there was no evidence of any wrongdoing by Browning-Ferris.

Eckhardt said a second hearing would be conducted in mid-June, probably in Houston, and "we will have additional witnesses, including those from Browning-Ferris."

The congressman added, "environmental dangers have become a nationwide problem and Congress must double and catch up to determine what corrective measures can be taken federal and state agencies to preclude a recurrence of the problems."

MOST PEOPLE remember their graduation day. For some this was a very special day, but the seniors of Irving (Texas) High School will have something extra to remember. Rain and lots of it. Enough to force the relocation of the main body of the graduating class, but not enough to force the top ten graduates to give up their place on stage. A brief retreat for the umbrellas and back they went for the remainder of the commencement exercise.

By Pro-Family Forum speaker

Children's 'rights' considered

For Peggy Brandon, the catchword in the surging awareness of children as citizens is "rights."

"I emphasize children's needs, not children's rights," she says, "because by definition with every right comes a responsibility, and why load children with responsibility they're not prepared to handle — as with sexuality?"

Mrs. Brandon, an Amarillo housewife, secretary and area coordinator for the Pro-Family Forum, a non-profit organization for promotion of traditional social values, spoke Wednesday morning at the First Baptist Church.

In a talk criticizing International Women's Year, International Year of the Child (IYC), the Equal Rights Amendment, and the secular philosophy of humanism, Mrs. Brandon told an audience of some thirty women there was "a call for rejecting" in the Texas Legislature's failure to approve a resolution for the IYC.

The resolution called for the creation of a commission to study the problems and advocate programs for the aid of children. IYC was approved by President Carter in May of last year, and grew out of a United Nations proclamation.

Mrs. Brandon said a resolution to create a commission to study the problems of children in Texas would have "in fact created a tax supported lobby for inappropriate legislation."

She cited as an example of inappropriate legislation a bill introduced by Representative Arnold Gonzales (D-Nueces) which would permit children 10 and older to consent to psychological or psychiatric treatment or counseling without parental permission.

(The bill, HB 281, was later amended to raise the consent age to 12. It was reported favorably from a House subcommittee on May 11, but was not considered by the legislature in regular session.)

Mrs. Brandon said she did not see the issue as one between parents' rights and children's rights but "the right of the state against the rights of the parents."

Responding to questions about child abuse and neglect, she said, "As a Christian, I've been concerned with these problems long before the bureaucracy. I'm concerned about child abuse and wife battering as well, but I don't think the solution lies with the government."

Mrs. Brandon linked much of the feminist movement, the movement for "children's liberation," and progressive school programs in sex education to the secular philosophy of humanism.

Humanism is a non-theistic belief system which rejects the idea of religion by divine revelation, and emphasizes man as an evolving part of nature.

Mrs. Brandon said that many people had "fallen under the influence of humanism without really being aware of it."

Commissioners to meet Friday

The Gray County Commissioners Court will discuss the sale of a lot jointly owned by Highland General Hospital and the county when it meets in regular session Friday at 9:30 a.m.

The 50-foot wide lot in the 400 block of North Cuyler Street was acquired by the county in 1972 through a debt situation, according to Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy.

Commissioners will also continue discussion on procedures and welfare and indigent care at the hospitals. Kennedy said he was scheduled to discuss procedures for the screening of indigent care applicants with hospital administrator Guy Hazlett Wednesday.

The county judge's office has been directly handling welfare and hospital care inquiries since the lease-sale of the county hospital to Hospital Corporation of America.

The court is also scheduled to award a bid for the purchase of a new pickup truck for Precinct 3.

McLean graduates 26 seniors

MCLEAN — Despite threatening skies a large crowd gathered at McLean High School Friday night to witness the graduation of 26 seniors.

Salutatorian Sherry Glass told fellow classmates that "We learned how to share our happiness and success... we grew up together and began to learn about some of the problems life was to throw at us."

In the traditional valedictory speech, Jeanette Hatfield said, "Loyalty is being true to oneself as well as to others. We must be brave enough to search for what is right and to stand up for that right once it has been found."

McLean High principal Ron Cummings presented scholarships to Miss Glass and Miss Hatfield for their scholastic achievement. A scholarship was presented to senior class president, Steve Ellison, for the highest ranking boy in the senior class.

The commencement address was delivered by Greg Sherwood, coach at Plainview High School. Diplomas were presented by school board president Tony Smitherman and school superintendent Carl Dwyer. The invocation was given by Randy Stewart, and the benediction by LaDonna Keeton.

A special song, written and composed by student Leslie Cunningham, was performed by the composer. Mrs. Jan Johnson was pianist for the ceremony.

McLean ex-students to meet

MCLEAN — The McLean Ex-Student Association will meet tonight at the home of Sam Haynes to finalize plans for the reunion scheduled for June 16 and 17.

Activities for the reunion, in conjunction with the town's 70th birthday celebration, include the McLean 66 Rodeo, a speech by U.S.

Representative Jack Hightower, a parade, arts and crafts show, a barbecue, an old fiddler's contest, recognition of the McLean Superstar Football team, and a dance for ex-students.

Haynes, association president, urged all ex-students to attend the meeting, so that final arrangements for the program can be made.

Penney's store to open June 6

Civic and business leaders will join J. C. Penney Company executives in brief ceremonies at Pampa Mall June 6, to mark the opening of that firm's new department store.

The new store, a 34,200 square foot unit, is Penney's 133rd outlet in Texas.

The store will have 39 departments on one level, offering a full range of fashion and merchandise, according to store manager Altie M. Orr.

Included in the 39 departments, said Orr, will be additions of decorative home accessories, picnic supplies, and updated misses' and junior fashions.

Other features of the new store include a Catalogue Order Center where customers can choose any of more than 100,000 catalogue items in person or by telephone; a layaway service; gift wrapping; and, credit departments.

Orr said that while the store continues to grow the "emphasis will remain on quality merchandise and customer service."

McLean rodeo scheduled June 15-16

MCLEAN — The 66th Annual McLean 66 Rodeo is set for June 15 and 16 in the Felton Webb Arena, north of McLean, with an 8 p.m. performance scheduled for both evenings.

A rodeo dance, held on the concrete slab at the arena and featuring music by Gary LaGrone and the Young Country, will follow each rodeo performance.

Books for the rodeo will be open June 11-13. Those interested in entering can contact rodeo secretary Carl Henley at 779-2679. A limit of 30 entries will be observed in bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, and bull riding.

Other events include calf roping, bulldogging, heading and heeling, girls barrel race, kids steer riding (12 and under), and a stick horse race (five and under). Saturday night will feature a businessman's wild cow milking contest.

A rodeo parade will begin at 10 a.m. June 16, in conjunction with the rodeo and homecoming celebrations.

A jack pot team roping has been scheduled for June 17, starting at 1:30 p.m.

Stock contractor for the rodeo is Haliday Rodeo Co. of Elida, N.M. The McLean Roping Club and McLean Lions Club are the rodeo sponsors.

Grand jury to hear evidence

The 31st District Grand Jury was scheduled to hear evidence against seven persons this morning on charges ranging from aggravated rape and kidnapping to a count of criminal mischief.

Although the 31st District includes five counties, all of the alleged offenses to be reviewed by the grand jury occurred in Gray County, according to District Attorney Harold Comer.

The grand jury will hear evidence in the case of Danny Deshon Harrison, 25, of Amarillo, who is charged with aggravated rape, aggravated kidnapping, and robbery in connection with a May 18 incident at a Pampa convenience store.

Evidence in the case of Dean Beistle, charged with aggravated assault in connection with the May 19 shooting injury of Pampa Terry BrooksHire, will also be heard by the grand jury.

The grand jury will also review a second case of alleged aggravated assault, two reported cases of theft by check, and a burglary charge.

Firearms course for women in works

A firearms training course for women will be conducted this summer by the Pampa Police Department in conjunction with Clarendon College - Pampa Center.

The course will consist of four hours of classroom training and four hours of the firing range. Participants will learn laws and safety measures and will be instructed how to handle firearms. Each woman will be required to provide her own gun and 50 rounds of ammunition.

Persons seeking additional information should contact Beverly Fox at the police department by calling 968-7407.

WTCC progress outlined at meeting

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce (WTCC)'s influence on the 66th state legislative session was outlined by a WTCC officer at a luncheon meeting Wednesday in Pampa.

The WTCC, described as a "voluntary federation of business, industry, agriculture, the professions and local chambers of commerce," consists of members from 132 West Texas counties. The purpose of Wednesday's meeting was to bring local members up to date on WTCC activities.

Ed Colthorp, WTCC executive vice president, told persons attending the meeting that the chamber has its biggest impact in the area of state and national legislation.

"I think we can honestly say that we have a close working relationship with our representatives in Washington and in Austin," Colthorp said. "They know that we are speaking for a cross-section of business, not a special interest group."

Referring to criticism that the 66th Legislature was anti-consumer, Colthorp said "Basically, this session was probably good for business."

Noting that the housing industry "is of great importance to West Texas," Colthorp said the WTCC "took a special interest" in legislation raising the ceiling on mortgage interest rates. The increase has been approved by the legislature and awaits Gov. Bill Clements' signature.

"We didn't get what we wanted, but we came out better, if the governor signs it, than when we started," Colthorp said.

The WTCC also supported legislation giving Texas citizens the right of initiative and referendum and strengthening protection of businesses against charges of deceptive trade practices and in products liability cases, Colthorp said. The chamber opposed state ratification of a constitutional amendment providing Washington D.C. with representation in the U.S. Congress, he added.

Boston owner intervenes

Celtics expected to sign Bird

By DICK BRAUDE
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Intervention by owner Harry Mangurian has come close to assuring the Boston Celtics will soon have basketball's most coveted Bird in hand.

After weeks of bickering between Celtics President Red Auerbach and lawyer Bob Woolf — agent for Indiana State star Larry Bird — the two sides are close to terms today on a multiyear pact worth more than $600,000 per season.

The breakthrough came Wednesday as Mangurian and the Celtics increased their original offer by some $100,000 per year.

Woolf is under increasing pressure to agree to the contract at the next bargaining session Friday and bring the college player of the year to Boston and make it final.

Mangurian, in Boston to investigate building a new arena for the Celtics in nearby Somerville, stepped into the previously stalled talks, getting Auerbach and Woolf together for negotiations.

"I'm really encouraged. We accomplished quite a bit. Our next meeting is Friday and it could be our last," the owner said after the two-hour session in Auerbach's office. "Red has handled the situation and he did today (Wednesday). Hopefully, it can culminate in the next few days."

Woolf asked for time to digest the Celtics' offer, giving rise to speculation that he may yet seek extra cash for his client. What Bird thinks was unknown because the big blond from French Lick, Ind. was said to be "out fishing" back home.

In a nutshell, the Celtics backed off their earlier take-it-or-leave-it stance. Auerbach had refused to budge from an initial offer of $500,000 per year.

Woolf first sought $1 million per season for six years, plus $200,000 in fringes, but later pared that demand to $700,000.

The agent still insists Bird will get somewhat more than the reported $600,000 per season being paid another National Basketball Association newcomer, Earvin "Magic" Johnson of Michigan State, who has agreed to terms with the Los Angeles Lakers. The Celtics say Johnson is getting less than half that amount in salary, however. David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets is said to be the league's highest paid player at $800,000 per year.

"The Celtics are now negotiating in good faith," said Woolf. "I'm being reasonable and they're being reasonable."

"Things are looking better," said Auerbach. He added that new Celtics Coach Bill Fitch, who was in the team's offices Wednesday, "is very high on Bird. That was a big factor."

The Celtics, meanwhile, face a deadline for signing Bird, drafted last year as a junior.

Don Cherry gets job

DENVER (AP) — First it was Red Miller. Then Chuck Fairbanks. Now, in the latest Colorado raid on Boston, the Colorado Rockies have plucked Don Cherry in a move the National Hockey League team called the most significant event in the history of the franchise.

Cherry, the controversial but highly successful former coach of the Boston Bruins, was named Wednesday as the new head coach of the Rockies.

At a press conference, Rockies General Manager Ray Miron said Cherry has signed a multi-year contract which makes him the highest paid coach in the NHL. Miron declined to give the exact terms of the contract, but the Boston Globe reported earlier that the pact was for five years at $150,000 per season.

Major League roundup

Rangers continue domination over Boston

By The Associated Press
The Texas Rangers always get their man... and their man always seems to be the Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers made it nine in a row over the red-faced Red Sox in Arlington Stadium Wednesday night when Bichie Zisk singled Al Oliver home from second base in the 10th, inning for a 3-2 triumph. The Red Sox haven't won in Texas since September of 1977.

"I guess everybody knows we have lost nine in a row in Texas," sighed Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "That's what happens when you don't get clutch hits and leave runners on base. We left six on base in the last five innings."

Unbeaten Texas reliever Jim Kern earned his seventh victory by allowing two hits in four innings.

Royals 2, Orioles 1

Amos Otis hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Rich Gale pitched out of several jams before giving way to Al Hrabosky in the ninth. George Brett singled with one out in the Kansas City first and with two out Otis hammered Mike Flanagan pitch for his third home run of the season and 14th of his career, making him Kansas City's all-time leader, surpassing John Mayberry's 143.

The game marked the return to the Kansas City line-up of outfielder Al Cowens, who suffered a broken jaw May 8 when he was hit by a pitch from Texas' Ed Farmer. Cowens doubled on his first at-bat and later added a single in four trips.

Yankees 5, Brewers 2
Juan Beniquez and Bucky Dent hit sacrifice flies and Mickey Rivers added an RBI double in New York's three-run 11th inning. Play was interrupted for 32 minutes when 6-foot-4, 217-pound Cliff Johnson collided with plate umpire Lou DiMuro after scoring the second run of the inning. DiMuro was taken by ambulance to a hospital for treatment of possible neck or back injuries.

Angels 3, Mariners 2
Brian Downing opened the ninth with a single, stole second, went to third on Merv Rettenmund's grounder and scored the winning run on Bert Campaneris' squeeze bunt single. Meanwhile, Nolan Ryan held the Mariners to three hits — including homers by Ruppert Jones and Leon Roberts — and struck out 12. Don Baylor homered for the Angels.

A's 5, Twins 4
Mitchell Page singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and the eventual winning run came home on a wild pitch by Minnesota relief ace Mike Marshall. The A's got strong relief efforts from John Henry Johnson and Bob Lacey, who put down a threat in the ninth after the Twins had runners at second and third with one out.

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 2
Milt Wilcox scattered five hits and Rusty Staub and Lance Parrish each cracked solo home runs as the Tigers won their fifth game in a row and reached the .500 level for the first time since April 26. The Tigers scored twice in the fourth inning to break a 2-2 tie when third baseman Roy Howell booted Alan Trammell's grounder, allowing Parrish to score from third, and Lou Whitaker's sacrifice fly brought home Aurelio Rodriguez. Parrish, who had four hits in five at-bats, hit his fifth home run of the season in the eighth inning.

Indians 6, White Sox 4
Ron Pruitt crashed a two-run homer to highlight a four-run uprising in the fifth inning. Rick Waits yielded five hits and three unearned runs in five innings and was credited with his fifth straight victory. He left after the fifth when he developed a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand. Pruitt's homer, his first of the season, followed a walk to Andre Thornton and gave the Indians a 5-3 lead.

Expos 2, Phillies 0
Bill Lee pitched a six-hitter in leading the Expos to victory. Lee, 5-2, got all his offensive support from Gary Carter's two-run homer in the second. Carter's ninth homer of the season came after Tony Perez had blooped a single off Nino Espinosa, one of only four hits against the Phillies right-hander in six innings.

Astros 6, Reds 3
Joe Niekro, 7-2, had allowed only one run in 26 innings before he lost his shutout in the eighth when Junior Kennedy hit into a bases-loaded double play, scoring Cesar Geronimo from third base. Niekro was later tagged for a two-run double by Geronimo in the ninth before Sambito came in to secure the victory for the Astros.

Dodgers 6, Giants 5
Dusty Baker doubled home Ted Martinez from first base to break a tie in the eighth inning, leading Los Angeles over San Francisco. Ron Cey slugged a three-run homer for the Dodgers in the first inning, but San Francisco came back with four runs in the top of the second.

Reggie Smith's third-inning sacrifice fly got the Dodgers even at 4-4, but Bill Madlock's fifth home run in the sixth gave San Francisco a 5-4 lead. Dave Lopes hit his 10th homer with two out in the seventh to once more tie the score, 5-5.

Padres 10, Braves 2
Dave Winfield drove in five runs — including a three-run homer which keyed a seven-run fifth inning — as San Diego routed Atlanta. Winfield's production gave him a league-leading total of 39.

Bob Shirley, 2-4, came on to pitch in the second and allowed just three hits while striking out seven en route to the victory. Starter Mickey Lolich was forced to leave the game with a sore shoulder after giving up a leadoff walk in the second inning.

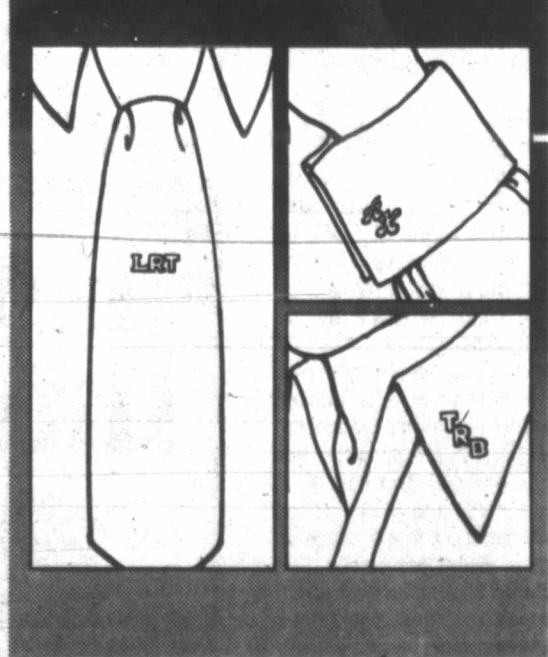

Pirates 9, Cubs 2
Jim Rooker tossed a two-hitter and Willie Stargell and Bill Robinson slammed homers to lead Pittsburgh over Chicago. The Pirates earned their fourth triumph in a row as Rooker raised his record to 2-0 after spending the first six weeks of the season on the disabled list with an ailing shoulder.

Cardinals 7, Mets 3
Garry Templeton tripled and scored on an error to snap a 2-2 tie and Lou Brock followed with a home run, powering St. Louis over New York. Templeton's triple and Brock's homer came off Mets right-hander Craig Swan, 4-4, starting the fifth. The blasts were part of a 15-hit Cardinal attack, which also featured Ted Simmons' three-run homer, his 10th of the year off New York reliever Jesse Orosco in the seventh.

Doug Moe to stay with Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Spurs Coach Doug Moe says he had decided to leave his job. And Spurs President Angelo Drossos says he intended to get another coach. Both announced Wednesday, however, that the controversial Moe would remain next season.

The announcement ended weeks of speculation that Moe, 40, would be leaving the National Basketball Association team he has coached to two consecutive Central Division titles.

"There was a time last season when Doug wanted out of his current contract to seek employment elsewhere," Drossos said Wednesday. "For that reason, I had every intention of obtaining another head coach for the Spurs for next season."

"However, in the past few days, Doug and I have come to a clear understanding that he now prefers to stay with the Spurs, so the board of directors and I have agreed to retain him as head coach for next season," continued Drossos.

"The reasons for the indecision regarding Doug's status were personal between he and myself," the team president said.

The Spurs ended a six-year, ABA and NBA playoff drought this season by eliminating Philadelphia to reach the Eastern Conference finals. They raced to a 3-1 lead over Washington in the finals, but lost the series in seven games.

The outspoken Moe was fined a record $3,000 last week by NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien for bitterly criticizing the referees in the sixth and seventh games of the Washington series.

Drossos, who has reportedly feuded with Moe this season, was critical of Moe's statements and refused that time to give the Spurs coach a vote of confidence.

Moe projects a casual, jeans-and-sneakers image and coaches a wide-open style of offense. That casual approach to the job, however, has reportedly irritated Spurs officials.

"We (Drossos and Moe) argue once and a while," Moe said. "Our disagreements have been between us and not with the team. Everything is terrific between us now."

Moe said he had decided in the second half of the season to seek another job. He was reportedly interested in Denver, where he had been an assistant for two years before coming to San Antonio. That job, however, went to Donnie Walsh.

"It was just a matter of talking contract. I wasn't thrilled with my contract," Moe said of his decision to leave the Spurs. He has a year remaining on a contract paying a reported $75,000 per year.

WILDLIFE BULLETINS AVAILABLE

LUBBOCK—Most species of wildlife have been studied in Texas and many of these technical reports are now available for a small printing fee to advanced students and landowners to assist them in their own wildlife projects.

The numbered technical management bulletins include: QUAIL MANAGEMENT HANDBOOK FOR WEST TEXAS ROLLING PLAINS, Bulletin 48, $1.25; TEXAS DEER HERD MANAGEMENT PROBLEMS AND PRINCIPLES, Bulletin 44, $1.45; WATERFOWL HABITAT MANAGEMENT IN TEXAS, Bulletin 47, $1.64; WATERFOWL IDENTIFICATION IN THE CENTRAL FLYWAY, Bulletin 51, $1.45.

There are several comprehensive numbered bulletins of general interest to the outdoorsman including: FRESHWATER CATFISH OF TEXAS, Bulletin 39, $3.99; FRESHWATER FISH OF TEXAS, Bulletin 5-A, $1.48; THE MAMMALS OF TEXAS, Bulletin 41, $2.63 and POISONOUS SNAKES OF TEXAS, Bulletin 31, $2.26.

Individuals ordering these booklets should send check, cashiers check or a money order. Prices include all necessary tax and postage. Send all orders to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Tx., 78744.

GASSCARE NOT SLOWING PARKS VISITORS

CANYON—The threat of gasoline shortages or service stations closing early on weekends has had little effect on the number of visitors at Palo Duro State Park in the Texas Panhandle.

"We have noticed very little difference in the number of both local and out-of-state visitors at Palo Duro," said Debra Richardson, park clerk.

"Reports of higher gasoline prices are common in the area, but the availability of fuel does not seem to be a problem now," Richardson continued.

One bright spot among the higher prices paid by travelers is the reservation system now in operation by the Texas parks. According to comments from the visitors as well as park employees, everyone likes the reservation program.

There are many park visitors who do not realize that those spaces not reserved are filled on a first-come, first-served basis each day. Reservations are not mandatory, but are convenient.

More information on parks' reservations or parks' facilities are available by calling the area state parks or dial 800-252-9327.

FLASH FLOODS ARE DANGEROUS

LUBBOCK—Everyone welcomes the nice spring rains and the effects the water has on the countryside. But a little too much rain in hilly or mountainous country and otherwise quiet streams become raging torrents.

Everyone visiting parks, lakes, streams or caprock country should watch for heavy rains upstream and be prepared to move themselves and their equipment to higher ground.

If you are caught in an area with high water, it is better to let the water recede before attempting to cross. Even vehicles have been swept off water crossings and many times, the passengers have not been able to escape.

The state's scenic areas and water resources offer a visitor a variety of opportunities for enjoyment, but it is still necessary to treat them with respect.

NAIA series continues

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After halting play because of rain and a soggy field, Southeastern Oklahoma and High Point were to resume action today in the NAIA college baseball World Series tournament.

The game was called late Wednesday with Southeastern leading the North Carolina school 8-7 after six innings. Play was scheduled to begin again today from the seventh inning at 11 a.m. CDT.

In other National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tournament action Wednesday, it was David Lipscomb College 12-2 over Wisconsin-La Crosse, and Point Park College, of Pittsburgh, beating Birmingham-Southern 5-3 in an elimination game.

With the loss, Birmingham joins Lewis-Clark State on the spectators' side of the field in the six-day, double elimination tournament. Wisconsin-La Crosse, now 23-13, will try to keep its season alive today when it goes up against Point Park.

Lipscomb, of Nashville, was led offensively against Wisconsin-La Crosse by Jeff Guy whose grand-slam home run highlighted a nine-run fifth inning for the victors.

The contest ended with seven innings under provisions of the tournament's 10-run rule. The victory moves the Bisons, now 36-11, into the winner's bracket finals tonight where they will play the winner of the rain-shortened game between High Point and Southeastern Oklahoma State.

David Lipscomb collected 12 hits off four Indian pitchers, including six in that nine-run fifth inning.

Wisconsin-La Crosse was led by Larry Papenfuss who had a pair of singles and who drove in a run, gathering six hits off two David Lipscomb pitchers.

In an earlier game Wednesday night, Point Park College got its 5-3 win over Birmingham-Southern after posting four runs in the third inning.

Point Park first baseman Ed Haberle led an 11-hit attack with three singles, including a key blow in the third that drove in two runs. Neil Bassi and Joe Fiori each added a pair of singles for Point Park.

John Van Atta was the winning pitcher, with ninth-inning help from reliever Paul Yourick.

Baseball sign-ups scheduled

Those youngsters between the ages of 16 and 18, who wish to play in the Babe Ruth Optimist League must sign up today and Friday.

The sign-ups will be at the Optimist building at 7 p.m. Everybody must sign up to play this year.

Kemper Open to have one-ball rule

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A one-ball rule was scheduled to go into effect today in the first round of the $350,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Most of the game's leading players endorse the rule, believing it will make no change in their game. But some predict in ill-concealed delight that it will bother others.

"It's going to raise hell with some guys," predicted Andy Bean, the defending champion in this tournament.

"Some of them have down-wind ball, cross-wind balls, up-wind balls."

The rule, set by the U.S. Golf Association and followed by the PGA tour, requires that a player use only one type ball during a round. If a player starts the round with a certain brand and type of ball, he must play that brand and type throughout the round.

Previously, players were allowed to use as many different brands and types as they desired. Many touring pros had a habit of using different balls under different situations. One particular brand was very popular for use when low shots into the wind, or great distance were required.

Most of the leading players, however, insist they have never used but one ball. Among them are Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson.

"It's a good rule," Nicklaus said last week. "It's like the 14-club rule. If you have a wind ball, it's like having a wind club."

Watson, at the same time, agreed.

"I like it," he said. "In fact, I think I'm partly responsible for it. That comes out of a talk I had with Sandy Tatum (president of the USGA) about the situation a year ago."

John McEnroe wants to be liked

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — "I don't want to be a villain — I want people to like me," John McEnroe said. "I'd rather have the crowd rooting for me than against me. But it's not that easy to change."

"I am what I am. I admit I am intense. I always have been competitive in everything I did. I make a lot of faces and don't smile much on the court."

"People don't like that. If I got so I tried to please people. I would start losing my matches. If I looked up in the crowd and saw somebody clapping, I would serve a double-fault."

He is the stormy petrel of tennis — this brash, 20-year-old left-handed kid from Douglaston, Queens, Peck's Bad Boy, scourge of the linesmen and target of the fans — and perhaps at this very moment the best tennis player in the world.

Arthur Ashe says he could dominate the game for the next 10 years. Harry Hopman, the man who coached Australia to 15 Davis Cup triumphs, raves over his natural talent and instincts. Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg realize their days are numbered.

McEnroe won the Grand Prix Masters in January, then recently defeated Connors and Borg in successive matches to win the prestigious WCT Finals in Dallas — his second victory of the year over each. He was playing in Japan when he suffered a groin injury that forced him to fly home before preparing for Wimbledon.

He will display his all-around skills in the World Invitational

Against Bullets Friday

Seattle seeks first NBA crown

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer
LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics are on Cloud Nine.

The Sonics, with a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven series with the defending champion Washington Bullets, can win their first National Basketball Association title Friday night.

"We have been fighting off adversity all year long," said guard Fred Brown. "But here we are, one game away from the world championship. We feel we could wrap it up Friday night."

The Sonics got a big boost Tuesday night when they won their third straight game over the Bullets, 114-112 in an overtime contest that featured 58 fouls and 72 free throw attempts.

No team has ever come back from a 3-1 deficit to win three in a row in an NBA final. But the Bullets, who made such a comeback in the Eastern championship against the San Antonio Spurs, think they can do it again in the final.

"This is about the toughest position we can be in," said Bullets guard Kevin Grevey. "You never want to get down this far to any team, especially a team as good as Seattle."

"From now on we have to play with reckless abandon. I know we're in a tough spot. But if we keep playing this way, we can win on Friday night, come back out here and take one and then we'll be in a good spot," said Grevey.

Game 7, if necessary, would be played next Wednesday here in the Capital Centre.

Despite their lead, the Sonics say they aren't going to take it easy Friday night because they remember what happened last year when, up 3-2, they relaxed in Washington and got blown off the court. The Bullets went on to win the championship.

"We found out last year that three wins doesn't mean anything," said Jack Sikma. "We're going to be ready to play."

Sonic Paul Silas said, "To stop us, the Bullets are going to have to win three, and we think that's going to be pretty tough for them to do."

John Johnson said, "We're very confident. We'd like to get this over as soon as possible."

Gus Williams, who led all scorers with 36 points Tuesday night, said the Sonics "can't let up in D.C. The Bullets are a good team and they know they can get back after being down 3-1. They proved that against San Antonio (in the Eastern championship series)."

As Fred Brown summarized it: "Only one more win. Ain't that beautiful?"

NCAA track and field unwinds today

By BERT ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — It is inevitable that outstanding long-distance runners at the University of Oregon are compared to the late Steve Prefontaine, and Rudy Chapa now is under the microscope.

However, Chapa and Oregon Coach Bill Dellinger would prefer that such comparisons not be made.

"I don't like being compared to Prefontaine," said Chapa, the defending champion in the 5,000-meter race at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, which began today at the University of Illinois.

"I don't like people saying that you're ahead of Prefontaine a little slower than Prefontaine," added the junior from Hammond, Ind. "I would like people to watch my progress as a runner."

Chapa's progress has been brilliant.

Last year, as a sophomore, he lost only one race at distances from 800 meters to 5,000 meters, that defeat coming in the Pac 10 Conference 5,000 in which he was entered at the last minute after he already won the 1,500.

His best event was the 5,000, in which he won the NCAA title in 13 minutes 35.3 seconds before a wildly partisan crowd at Eugene, Ore., and he was ranked second in the United States behind veteran Marty Liquori.

Qualifying and trials comprise today's long program, scheduled for 8½ hours. Six finals will be held Friday and the remaining 14 Saturday.

LPGA has top field

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — "Golf," Pat Bradley was saying as she walked off the course at Wykagyl Country Club Wednesday, "is a game of inches, and it can be very frustrating at times. However, I am not going to let it get to me."

The 28-year-old veteran of the Ladies Professional Golf Association had every reason to become frustrated as she headed into the $100,000 classic Thursday morning at the par-72, 6,410-yard yard.

Nancy Lopez, the defending champion returning after a week's vacation, will be going for her fifth tour victory this season. Also in the field will be last year's runnerup, JoAnne Carner, along with Amy Alcott, Laura Baugh, Sandra Post and Jane Blalock.

Bradley has been a runnerup four times this year and finished third on three other occasions. The Arlington, Mass., native has been in the top 10 in 11 of 13 tournaments and has earned $73,980, good for fourth place on the list of money winners.

"I've been consistent," explained Pat, "but I just have not gotten that win."

For auto repairs

Try your favorite junkman

How can you win the fight against the mounting costs of auto repairs when even Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams reports that you have only a "50-50 chance of getting a car fixed right and for the right price"?

How can you hold down your car maintenance expenses in this era of soaring transportation costs when even the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that if you're an average car owner taking your car to an auto repair shop, you may be fleeced for as much as $150 a year as a result of "inadequate, incompetent unnecessary or fraudulent" car repair work?

What can you do except gasp in horror at official investigations disclosing that a stunning 53 cents of every $1 we spend on car repairs is wasted—and the fraud is nationwide?

Answer: Shop the automobile junk yards for spare parts. Start copying the body shops and service garages which regularly patronize yards where wrecked, vandalized and otherwise abandoned cars are dismantled—in usually successful searches for replacements to install in your car at obscenely inflated prices.

You can—and you will—save big money by visiting auto graveyards and learning as much as you can about do-it-yourselfing.

Dismantling cars has become a vast and sophisticated business for the "auto-parts recyclers," as many of them like to be called their newly-achieved status.

The head of one suburban New York firm known as "The Onassis or auto-parts recyclers," as many of them like to be called with their newly status.

The head of one suburban New York firm known as "The Onassis of auto-parts recyclers," for instance, catalogs, cleans, tests and stores every recoverable part of a car. In seconds, thousands of parts are traceable with the aid of $60,000 IBM computer. Teletype voice circuits can connect this firm with 300 dealers in the metropolitan New York City area.

In some areas, employees even will install the parts they sell. Installation costs can run $15-$20 an hour.

To help you, an independent computer service called AutoInfo connects yards from Houston to Massachusetts where 18 firms can be summoned with nearly 1 million parts. This service can be a boom if you are owner of a foreign car or an older U.S. car for which parts are hard to find.

You could, industry experts say, save up to 50 percent on your repairs by shopping the auto junk yards—and that translates into one great meaning: you can beat the crooks in the auto repair field by using their own weapons and your own know-how.

But you must have guidelines to auto shopping. So: Wherever possible, use a licensed yard. Police departments stress that you should obtain a receipt for your purchase that assures you bought a legitimate item.

Get the advice of an experienced mechanic as to what is wrong or what part needs replacement. Don't be your own diagnostician! Eliminate the danger that you'll get the wrong part or an inadequate part and having your problem reappear again soon.

Don't buy a so-called road-tested electrical part. It can be cheaper but the fact that the yard found it to be functioning when it was removed as salvage does not necessarily mean it will perform satisfactorily for you.

If you can, get a "bench-tested" electrical part. Perhaps the yard will test it for you. Get a guarantee, if you can, covering a specific period of time.

On any purchase of an engine and transmission, don't fail to supply the size and model number of your car.

Don't buy an engine or transmission that has gone over 70,000-75,000 miles. Inquire if the yard has kept a record of the accumulated mileage on these items.

Bring in the old part for comparisons and verification that the part you are seeking will interchange with it. If you can find the part number, this will help insure that you also are getting the right item.

If you are not planning to replace the part yourself, and will need the services of a mechanic, get an estimate of the mechanic's costs for time and labor before you start your parts search.

Blood Pressure and Hearing Tests Set For Pampa Area

Free screening tests for high blood pressure and hearing loss will be given at the Leisure Lodge, 1504 W. Kentucky, Pampa, Friday, June 1, 9 to 5.

High blood pressure, the leading cause of stroke, heart, and kidney failure, can usually be controlled through medical supervision. It has no symptoms, however, and because of this, periodic testing is advisable. Both tests will be performed by trained personnel using modern electronic equipment.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a test to keep track of how their hearing is changing and to find out if they are one of the many a hearing aid can help.

The free tests will be given Friday from 9 to 5.
