285 awarded PHS diplomas

By EUGENE LAYCOCK
Pampa News Staff

The final event honoring Pampa High School's seniors seemed to be as any other graduation ceremony when the processional music cued the students to enter Harvester Field House.

However, as Thursday night's ceremony proceeded, a definite change was to be noted.

Although commencement exercises are steeped in tradition, a new set of names and faces make every such ceremony a unique experience — especially for the 285 students who became alumni of Pampa High School in a matter of minutes after working on their diplomas for 12 years.

Honored by a full house, the graduates filled almost 300 seats in the center of the gymnasium. After the traditional march into the field house was completed and the invocation given, the class leaders addressed their soon-to-be-former schoolmates on the promises and problems of the future.

Two students, Sharon Carey and John Nooncaster, tied for the position of salutatorian and both offered words of advice to the seniors of 1979.

Carey said if a student found school a waste he would have to find a new base or be unsatisfied.

If a student was satisfied with school, he had a good chance of being satisfied in life, she added.

Nooncaster, meanwhile, said "Now is the time to accomplish something tomorrow."

"It is time for each one of our class to truly master his life," he said to bring his message to a conclusion.

Senior class president Mike Crippen related a story of an old man who gave strangers answers according to their own opinions.

The moral of the story is a man will find in life what he thinks will be there, he said.

Valedictorian Kris Douglas said the diploma itself was nothing but "a piece of paper with a few drops of ink."

However, she said it was heavy with expectations from parents, other people and God. She noted the responsibility inherent in these expectations at graduation and closed the speech with a poem.

Its last line, "Good men never cease to try," served as words of encouragement to her classmates.

Principal Paul Payne then handed each senior his diploma as Assistant Principal Andy Andrews called their names.

Pampa School District Superintendent Bob Phillips was on hand to personally congratulate each student.

After the school song and class yell, some of the seniors tossed their hats into the air to end the 1978-79 school year.

The ceremony was to be followed by the traditional senior all-night party.

Aid to indigents studied by county

Gray County commissioners reviewed four individual requests for indigent aid for hospital care this morning and Judge Carl Kennedy continued to discuss development of procedures for county welfare and the screening of indigent patients at Highland and McLean hospitals.

The county is required under contract with Hospital Corporation of America, which assumed management and purchased the current assets of the two county hospital in April, to reimburse the corporation for indigent care at standard Medicaid rates.

Kennedy said there has been an increase in the number of calls received directly by his office for welfare aid since the leasing of the hospitals. He said media reports of the court's consideration of reopening the county welfare office had increased the number of calls received by his office.

"We can open a Pandora's box," Kennedy said, "or we can take the position that we're not going to become a welfare county. Either you take the headline position that you are not going to help anyone who is not a pauper, or you say 'We can help you, if... which opens the gate (to more welfare).'"

Kennedy read state laws which say that counties are responsible for the care of paupers. A "pauper" is defined as someone completely without income and totally dependent on public support.

The law also states that counties are required to provide indigent care for public (county) hospitals, but not for private hospitals. Kennedy said that he did not believe the county's assumption of the indigent care under the contract with HCA was a violation of the law.

The county judge told commissioners that a procedure for screening indigent patient requests was being developed by Highland administrator Guy Hazlett. One tentative proposal is a restriction of indigent care to those whose net income falls below $287 a month.

Commissioners are still considering reinstating the welfare office, abolished a year ago, but say they are concerned about finding a suitable director for the office.

Kennedy said that hospital screening procedures would eventually cancel out much of the indigent hospital care load of a county welfare office, although that office would have to review the requests. He said the office still might be necessary to handle requests for non-medical aid.

In other business in regular session this morning, the court accepted a low bid of $5,799.70 from Harold Barrett Ford for purchase of a pickup truck, and clarified a $650 a month ceiling for county roadworkers as applying only to temporary employees.

The court also approved a resolution permitting the State Highway Department inspection rights for county bridges.

'Moonies' selling jewelry in Pampa

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Members of the Unification Church, often called "Moonies" after church leader the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, have been soliciting contributions in Pampa this week. The group is requesting donations of $3, $5, or $10 in exchange for costume jewelry.

The group of five men and two women are from a Unification Church in Southlake, Texas. Although a police dispatcher reported several calls of complaint concerning the solicitations Wednesday, Police Chief Richard Mills said the church has been cooperative with local authorities in the past.

"The Unification Church will notify us, and they will tell us who will be soliciting. They've been real good about that, and have worked with us in the past," he said.

Mills emphasized there were no laws against public or door-to-door solicitation.

Although a city ordinance requires a license for sale of wares by itinerant vendors, solicitations by church members are exempt since the collection is by law used for a charitable or philanthropic purpose.

The Unification Church group left their names with Pampa police early this week. City Secretary S.M. Chittenden said he may have received a letter from a church member notifying the city of the group's arrival, although he could not find a copy.

The notification and registration with the police is not required by law. But regarding temporary solicitors from outside the city, Mills said, "We like it if they let us know."

"In practice, they are required to register with the police department. But it's almost impossible anymore due to liberal Supreme Court decisions in this matter to control any soliciting. We try to control it as much as we can, but we don't have the ability to control it once he said."

Solicitors are no longer required by city ordinance to obtain a license. The city does have a solicitors review board, consisting of a single member, Bill Downs, President of the Retail Merchants Association.

Downs said he has reviewed eight to 10 applications a year in the five years he's operated the board. "People know no one has the authority to make them come in here," he said.

The review board was previously operated in connection with the Chamber of Commerce offices.

Downs said the Unification Church members had not registered with him.

Denton attorney Ed Stapleton, who handles cases for the church throughout the state, said Thursday church members "were exercising their constitutional rights to proselytize for their faith." He said there were about 100 Unification Church groups in the U.S.

Stapleton said Supreme Court decisions indicated that restrictions against soliciting were in violation of First Amendment guarantees.

Police chief hunt begins

The Pampa City Commission met in executive session at 11 a.m. today to discuss procedures for hiring another police chief to replace Richard Mills, who resigned Wednesday.

City Manager Mack Wofford said this morning he didn't expect any formal action to be taken by the commission following the closed session.

Harrison indicted

A 31st District grand jury returned five felony indictments early Thursday evening against an Amarillo man in connection with the armed robbery of a Pampa convenience store May 18.

Danny Deshop Harrison has been indicted for robbery, aggravated rape, aggravated sexual abuse and two counts of kidnapping. Deshop was arrested May 25 in Amarillo and charged with robbing an Allsup's store, abducting two juvenile females and raping one of the girls.

The grand jury also indicted Jackie Marshall for burglary of a habitation and David Helms for criminal mischief.

The jury resumed at 1:30 p.m. today to hear evidence against Donald Beistle, who has been charged with the May 19 shooting of Terry Brookshire in Pampa.

Jobless rate unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment remained unchanged in May at 5.8 percent of the labor force, showing that the slowdown in economic growth in recent months has not yet forced people out of work in large numbers.

But Labor Department figures today showed that employment in manufacturing industries did decline slightly for the second consecutive month. These job losses were offset, however, by gains in other areas.

The department said an additional 65,000 workers were employed in highway and street construction, "probably due to heightened road repair activity resulting from severe winter storms."

It said employment rolls also were bolstered by the return of 50,000 workers who had been jobless in April as a result of the trucking strike and lockout.

$125,000 to help flush out information on killer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Rewards totaling $125,000 will probably help flush out information on the assassination of U. S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., says the FBI official who heads the intense federal investigation.

The FBI put up $25,000 Thursday to go with $100,000 pledged by a group of local attorneys. "It has helped in the past. We believe it will be helpful in this case," said James Ingram, who heads the massive federal investigation into Wood's slaying. Meanwhile, about 1,000 mourners, closely watched by armed U.S. marshals, gathered Thursday for the funeral mass to hear Wood eulogized as a man who swore to uphold the law, even at the threat of death. Wood was later buried in his hometown of Rockport.

FBI officials continued to shroud their investigation in secrecy, refusing comment on the case. "I am not at this point able to furnish any information to you regarding the FBI's progress in this investigation, period," Ingram told reporters Thursday in his only public statement on the case.

Wood, 63, known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he assessed drug offenders, was gunned down by a sniper outside his townhouse as he prepared to leave for work Tuesday morning.

The shooting was the second time in seven months a Western District of Texas official involved in narcotics smuggling cases has been attacked. Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr escaped with minor injuries after being ambushed Nov. 21.

Potential fuel reserves sighted

It was only about six years ago when the "experts" in and out of government warned us that natural gas supplies and reserves were running out. We were told that alternate forms for this fuel must be made available soon to avoid a national calamity.

Today we hear that natural gas consumption has fallen by as much as 18 percent in some localities, mostly due to the higher prices causing people to be more conservative.

Also it has been revealed that an estimate made by the Potential Gas Committee shows that the premium fuel is being produced faster than it is consumed and that the potential for new gas has increased to a great degree.

Advanced technology, along with higher prices has spurred the production of gas in the United States faster than it is being consumed.

The Potential Gas Committee is a group of about 140 industry, academic and government experts on gas reserves and exploration. They attributed the increase potential to an extension of the water depths at which they feel exploration can be carried out. The limit was about 1,500 feet. They believe now that the drilling industry will be able to operate in water depths to about 3,000 feet.

We share the group's optimism for this Overthrust belt's ability to become a vast source of oil and gas. However, it is in this area where there is strong opposition to production from government and private environmental activists. Or should we say the anti-industrial progress minority? Although small in numbers they have been having an influence way out of proportion to their size. Their activities represent the worst in the Nader-Fonda-Brown syndrome.

The Potential Gas Committee estimates that present data reveals enough gas reserve to serve our needs for 50 years. The group classified the potential reserves in three descending orders of probability:

1. And estimated 199 trillion cubic feet (TCF) was described as likely to be discovered during the course of further drilling adjacent to known fields.
2. Possible reserves of 399 TCF likely to be found by drilling in areas that are already known to be gas productive.
3. Speculative reserves of 421 TCF to be found in frontier basins that are not yet gas productive or in formations which have not yet been proven productive.

In releasing these estimates, the committee stressed that nearly 60 percent of the projected gas potential occurs in hostile environment where it will be expensive to find, produce and transport. Another 26 percent of the gas, yet to be discovered, lies under the seas near U.S. shores, and the balance will be found in very deep land formations.

We suggest that time may very well bring about the same scenario for crude oil production. As it gets more expensive, more exploration will take place and people will be more conservative.

There are alternatives waiting in the wings for the proper economic entry. They will be brought to fruition as petroleum production finally winds down.

We have enjoyed a short era of extra cheap sources of energy. We can adjust to higher energy prices.

The gadfly influence of the Nader-Fonda-Brown syndrome will recede as these economic elitists feel the pinch of physical discomfort through lack of energy sources. The influence may not even last that long when the public generally finds where its problems reside.

Food stamp aid uncontrollable

In a country with the affluence of the United States, it should be a simple matter to see that no one goes hungry. Instead we have the food stamp program, one of the most pathetic performances of government bureaucracy.

Few federal programs have been the target of so much criticism or so resistant to reform. Two years ago Congress put a "cap" on future food stamp budgets to bring runaway costs under control. Eligibility standards were changed to eliminate or reduce benefits to several million persons whose need was questionable. The law was changed so that beneficiaries would no longer have to pay for the stamps, in order to assure that the very poor were not left out.

Now the returns are coming in. The Agriculture Department says the "cap" is too low and an extra $650 million is needed to avoid a reduction in benefits at a time when grocery prices are going up.

The explanation from the Agriculture Department is that inflation has driven up the cost of food faster than was anticipated. The department says it now takes ... 191 a month in stamps to cover a "thrifty food budget" for a family of four. Further, unemployment is running above projected levels. The number of people receiving stamps is one million higher than was expected under new eligibility rules.

A lot of people in Washington have guessed wrong about inflation and unemployment rates, but this does not mean Congress should abandon its commitment to a "cap" on the food stamp budget. To do so would be a confession that the program is exactly what Congress decided in 1977 it should not be - an open-ended spending program immune to efforts to control it.

The ready presumption that certain items in the federal budget are "uncontrollable" is among the reasons why Congress regularly retreats from the goal of a balanced budget. That's the point being made by Republicans on the House Agricultural Committee who are urging that food stamp spending be held within the budgeted amount.

One of them, Rep. E. Thomas Coleman of Kansas, has identified specific ways the program could get by without the additional $650 million. Savings of that amount would result, he says, if the error rate is passing out stamps were cut in half, if the government recovered benefits from those who received stamps after their income had risen above the poverty level and if there were an end to the overlapping of assistance programs which make double-dippers of many clients.

That's a big order for federal and state administrators responsible for the food stamp program, but that's what budget balancing requires.

Congressional liberals have been crying that balancing the federal budget will take food from the mouths of the hungry. They should check with Rep. Coleman for one example of how federal deficits pile up for no other reason than slipshod administration of federal programs.

By Oscar Cooley
When I was a child I used to tease my mother to read to me. It was so much easier than puzzling out the meaning of those hard words and phrases for myself. And she did, beginning when I was little, with Mother Goose, Goldilocks and the Three Bears, and as I learned more words moving on to "Robinson Crusoe," the children's page of the Youth's Companion, and finally to such books as "Last of the Mohicans" and "The Green Mountain Boys."

I was not aware of it at the time, but she was educating me. I was learning the English language by hearing her use it, and I was acquiring a taste for good writing. Also, I was learning what is right and what is wrong. Trust her to choose that kind of book!

Rare is the child who does not love to be read to. And the parent who wants to have the child grow up to like books, to read, to write, to profit by language communication can do nothing better to bring this about than to read aloud to him.

One learns to communicate, not so much by studying the rules of grammar, useful though these may be, as by listening and by reading - that is, by hearing and seeing how others communicate.

The tot learns to talk by hearing his parents and other grown-ups talk. If they mumble, if they mispronounce words and confuse tenses, he will do the same. If they curse and use slang, so will he. Then they will, perhaps, scold him, but he will come back with an indignant, "But you did!"

The parent who wants his child to grow up well spoken will take care to speak well in his hearing. My father, copying what he had heard in his childhood, sometimes said "ain't" for isn't, "hain't" for hasn't, and so I did, but Mother told me there were no such words as ain't or hain't, so I made a manful effort not to say them.

The parent who reads well written books to his child is doing more than keep him out of mischief. He is laying the foundation of the child's intellectual future.

And one can be assured the ability to communicate is an "economic good." Without it, in today's world one would be unproductive indeed. The ability to speak well is priceless to the salesman, politician, preacher, teacher and journalist. It has been the making of many a business executive. Many of our sorest troubles, political and social, are due to poor communication between people.

The grouping of words into phrases and clauses, the varying emphasis and the inflection - that is, the changes in pitch and tone of voice - are important. The beginner, concentrating on reading one word at a time, tends to read in a monotone, but a sophisticated reader inflects, as one does in speaking, and this he learns very largely from examples set by others.

As the child listens to mother read, much of the learning is unconscious. It is not the words and phrases that the child consciously listens to but the subject matter - not the glamour but the excitement of the game, the battle, the shipwreck. But without knowing it, he is imbibing the pattern of words and phrases used by the author, and later he phrases his own writing and speech accordingly.

This process is aided, of course, by at least two influences - that of the reader who pauses now and then to explain the meaning of a difficult word, and that of the teacher who teaches the simple rules, such as that subject and predicate must agree in number.

Every textbook in English grammar contains rules, but the English language is notorious for its anarchy. To learn the rules is not to learn how to use English, not only because there are many exceptions to the rules but because the language is highly idiomatic. It is replete with irregular expressions and colorful sayings.

An idiom is an off-beat way of saying something - (I just used one - off-beat). Instead of describing a boy as just like his dad, one might say, "That boy is a chip off the old block." Or if grandma wanted to make it stronger, she'd say, "John is the spittin' image of his father."

These irregular expressions - and there are thousands of them and new ones continually coming into use - are not learned from a rule book. They are learned mainly by hearing others speak - and these others are more likely to be sailors than savants. Nothing enhances the flavor of a speech so much as the speaker's judicious use of idiomatic expressions.

Language, we say, is "mere words," but consider the skill of those who wrote the treaty that both Begin and Sadat were willing to sign. The peace of nations hangs upon words. So does the success of corporations. And of the individual.

Abused hospitality

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Congress, which loves to talk about eliminating fraud and abuse in government programs, finally has a golden opportunity to practice what it preaches.

Legislation has been introduced in both the Senate and House to plug loopholes in current law that permit thousands of newly arrived legal immigrants to qualify for welfare assistance as early as 90 days after they enter the United States.

Although no one knows the full scope of this rip-off, a General Accounting Office report last year estimated that in five states alone abuse of a single program - Supplemental Security Income (SSI) - was running at more than $72 million annually. (The five states were California, Florida, New York, New Jersey and Illinois.)

The SSI program provides funds for the aged, blind and disabled. GAO did not try to quantify abuse of other welfare programs by newly arrived immigrants but said there is good reason to believe a similar problem exists with Medicaid and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Immigration laws are supposed to prevent admission to this country of anyone likely to become a "public charge" within five years of entry. But the five-state GAO study found 37,511 recipients of SSI who had come here less than five years ago. Almost two-thirds of them began collecting benefits within a year of their arrival, and 96 percent did so within three years of entry.

The problem is that each year thousands of aliens are admitted on the strength of affidavits from sponsors (usually family members or close friends already here) who promise to be responsible for their financial support but then renege on their commitments.

Because the courts have held the affidavits are mere "moral obligations" which are not legally binding on the sponsors who sign them, there is no penalty for renegeing. And, often at the urging of their supposed sponsors, the newly arrived aliens quickly sign up for SSI payments and other welfare benefits.

A few choice examples: - A 64-year-old alien in Sunnyvale, Calif., started drawing SSI benefits within four months of his arrival in the United States even though his daughter had promised to support him. She earns more than $25,000 a year and has assets worth more than $130,000.

- The 65-year-old alien mother of an Illinois resident who signed a support affidavit actually applied for SSI benefits before arriving in the United States and began drawing payments just two weeks after her entry.

- Three of the 10 relatives of a naturalized American citizen in Rochester, N.Y., began drawing SSI payments four months after their arrival because of a disabling disease contracted long before they came to this country.

Sens. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., along with Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, have introduced legislation that would effectively halt this entire immigrant welfare racket.

For starters, they would make the sponsors' affidavits of support legally enforceable contracts and permit either the newly arrived immigrant or the government to sue any sponsor who reneges on his commitment.

And equally important, their legislation would set a three-year residency requirement before an alien could become eligible for SSI payments. Exceptions would be made for refugees like the Vietnamese "boat people" and for aliens who become eligible for SSI payments as a result of blindness or disability arising after they enter the United States.

A similar Percy bill got lost in the shuffle near adjournment of the last Congress. There can be no such excuse for inaction this time around. Nor should there be any cause for substantive opposition to the measure. Welfare cheating is often a matter of interpretation, but there can be no real question in this case. What is going on is the most flagrant possible abuse of this country's hospitality and its tax money.

Choice: money or coupons

There's more bad news on the energy front: Even if Congress eventually approves a standby gasoline rationing program, the federal government lacks the capacity to print the necessary rationing coupons.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Printing and Engraving already is operating "seven days a week, three shifts a day" to meet the country's needs for paper currency and postage stamps, according to a bureau official.

Government experts estimate that a nationwide rationing program would require distribution of 4.8 billion coupons during a three-month emergency, with another 1.6 billion coupons necessary for each additional month.

Even after contracting with two private bank note producers to perform much of the printing job, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving estimates it would have to turn out 600 million coupons a month.

But "we have absolutely no excess capacity," says the bureau official, warning that it might be necessary to "curtail currency production." In other words, the public would get gasoline coupons but little new money.

Quite some security cost

Secret Service protection for candidates during next year's presidential campaign probably will cost well in excess of $20 million.

When Secret Service officials appeared recently before a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee to request funds for the 1980 fiscal year, they asked for $16 million to protect presidential candidates.

But the fiscal year ends on Sept. 30, 1980, almost five weeks before the election day in early November. And additional $2 million probably will be required to pay for protection during the last month of the campaign.

The official figures also don't include the cost of protecting the president or vice president, since those tasks are financed through separate, permanent secret Service accounts.

Assuming the two incumbents seek reelection, they'll undoubtedly be traveling frequently during the campaign, adding at least another $2 million to the costs of their routine protection.

Oklahoma, Arkansas interested in Texas proposal

Regional presidential primary being considered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has resurrected the presidential primary issue by saying he might include it in a special legislative session if other states join Texas in a regional primary.

"If things start bearing fruit, ... it's possible that I will consider it sufficiently important that we might call a special session to accomplish this," the governor told a weekly news conference Thursday.

Clements said a regional primary would give Southwestern states greater influence in national politics.

"It would realign the focus and perspective of what's happening in a state like New Hampshire," he said of the state with the earliest primary. "That thing is blown up out of all proportion to its importance."

A presidential primary bill died in the regular legislative session that adjourned Monday. However, the state Republican Party officials say they will hold a 1980 primary under their own rules regardless whether the Legislature passes a bill in special session.

The governor earlier announced he would call a special session sometime before 1981 on initiative and referendum.

Clements called Speaker Bill Clayton from the audience and invited him up to the microphones.

"It depends on a lot of legwork," Clayton said in assessing chances for holding a presidential primary on the same day as Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The speaker said he has talked with his counterparts in both states. Oklahoma officials especially are interested in holding their primary with other states in March, he added.

Rostow pushing for development of synthetic fuels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising oil prices should prompt the nation to start a high-gear effort to develop synthetic fuels, says W.W. Rostow, former presidential national security adviser.

Rostow, adviser to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson and now director of the University of Texas' Bureau of Economic History, reminded a House subcommittee Thursday that the U.S. produced its first synthetic rubber 287 days after the decision was made during World War II.

He said the all-out energy production necessary to counter shortages should include "a massive drive to exploit the potentialities of coal and shale synthetics."

Rostow testified with Texas Lt. Gov. William Hobby before a House Commerce Committee panel studying President Carter's plan to phase out domestic oil price controls.

There are indications that the costs of synthetic fuels are "coming close" to conventional sources, Rostow said.

"Given the likely rise in OPEC oil prices and the certainty the cost of synthetics will come down with experience of large scale commercial production, a viable commercial industry is likely to emerge from an initial phase of public-private collaboration," he said.

Rostow told the energy and power subcommittee that decontrol as part of an effective national energy program will help keep the lid on OPEC prices, thus causing less inflation.

He shared reading a position paper with William L. Fisher, director of the university's Bureau of Economic Geology.

"It is indeed our central conclusion that the economic and strategic implications of the energy crisis make this the most dangerous time the nation has faced since the 1930s," Rostow said.

He said the crisis is a result of stagnant domestic energy production, doubtful sources of imported oil and the "long lead times" for energy production and conservation measures.

As steps toward a solution, Rostow proposed oil decontrol, quicker gas decontrol, plowback of windfall profits to energy development, a switch of utilities to coal, settlement of energy-environmental conflicts and a rational nuclear energy policy.

Hobby, chairman of the state's energy advisory council, called the president's phased decontrol plan "a reasonable approach."

He warned, however, that Carter's concentration on oil company windfall profits resulting from decontrol should not overshadow the national security threat posed by reliance on imported oil.

Former Pampan ordained as Methodist deacon

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

While graduating Pampa seniors were getting their diplomas Thursday night, a former Pampa woman was receiving a different type of honor — and quite possibly establishing a "first" for this area.

Lou Anne Wise was ordained as a Methodist deacon Thursday at the Polk Street United Methodist Church in Amarillo. The ordainment is a milestone on the road to Lou Anne's career goal: the ministry.

Lou Anne is the 24-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Wise, who lived at 2401 Christine until about a year ago, when they moved to Daingerfield. Lou Anne was born and reared here, and was a member of the Pampa High Class of '73. She now lives in Dallas, where she attends the Perkins School of Theology, a seminary on the Southern Methodist University campus.

Lou Anne recently completed the second year of a four-year course at Perkins. She begins her third year June 12 with an internship as a staff chaplain at Presbyterian Hospital in Oklahoma City. In May she will move back to Dallas for a final year of classes, and then graduate in 1981 with a master's degree in theology. She hopes to become a hospital chaplain.

Lou Anne speaks of her religious future with a certainty that indicates years of contemplation, but it isn't so. She changed horses in mid-stream after graduating from Texas Tech University in 1977 with a degree in speech pathology and audiology.

"There was no great moment of revelation," she recalls. "I think I realized my junior year in college that I didn't want to be a speech pathologist. But it was too late to change majors, and I wasn't sure about the ministry.

"In a way it's not too big a change to go from speech therapy to the ministry. They're both fields of service. I was born and raised in an active church family, so that's nothing new."

The Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church is now meeting in Amarillo to conduct business and ordain new clergy, which explains why Lou Anne returned here to become a deacon. As a deacon, Lou Anne said, she can "marry and bury, serve communion and baptize with an elder present."

Elders are the next highest order in the Methodist Church. "Assuming everything goes alright," Lou Anne will probably become an elder in about three years, she said.

Lou Anne was one of three women ordained

Thursday night. Conceding that women ministers are still a rarity, she said "In a sense I'm kind of a pioneer, but not really in the Methodist Church."

"I think the United Methodist Church has really been a leader in ordaining women. Right now in the U.S. there are more than 800 female (Methodist) clergy members, and there are more and more all the time."

Asked if her intended profession will be an obstacle to marriage, she replied "No, not at all. In fact, it's probably encouraged. It's at least expected. Most of the male Methodist clergymen I know are married."

Could Lou Anne's plans eventually include a family?

"Oh, sure," she said. "We all just lead normal lives."

WT names scholarship winners

CANYON — West Texas State University's President's Honor scholarships had been awarded to 325 graduating high school seniors from 113 Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma towns and cities as of May 17.

Now in its second year, the scholarship program has already attracted over one-third more participants than last year's total count, and the number grows each week.

The final number of high school honor society members who accepted the $100 scholarships to attend West Texas State for the 1978-79 academic year was 213.

Not only has the WTSU President's Honor Scholars program gained in popularity among the tri-state area's scholastically talented high school seniors, students and faculty members on the WTSU campus have begun donating money to augment the scholarship fund.

WTSU faculty members, such as Dr. Robert Sawwell, acting head of the WTSU Geosciences Department, are also working to broaden on campus the program's base of support.

At first critical of the program, Sawwell said that he now feels that "For the money spent it is the most successful program in recruiting high school students to WT."

He has presented the information about the program to the University's Faculty Council, which consists of elected representatives from WTSU's entire faculty, as well as the individual faculty members.

"I felt that it was time that the faculty got involved in a program which statistics show to be successful not only in recruiting students but retaining them," he said.

In the program's first year, the students were invited to receptions with President Max Sherman, their families and WTSU faculty members, as well as treated to dinner and a drama production, he said.

Winter said that one of his goals for the program is to be able to give $100 each year for the student's four years in school.

Already he has expanded it to include out-of-state students.

"People are now realizing how important this program is not only to the students, but to the University as well," Winter noted.

President's Honor Scholars from Pampa include: Retha Bradsher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Bradsher of 1216 S. Faulkner; Sharon Carey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Hill of 116 N. Faulkner; Dana Kindle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.D. Kindle of 2528 Charles; and Mark Edward Lehnick, son of E.L. Lehnick of 2313 Comanche.

Also named scholarship recipients were Debbie Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lewis of 1828 Dwight; Linda Maglaughlin, daughter of Edward P. Maglaughlin of 2547 Duncan; Lisa Malone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Malone of 414 Sloan; Diane McNeely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed McNeely of 210 W. Harvester; Gary Meador, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shed of 2413 Mary Ellen; and Linda Stovall, daughter of Billy Neal Stovall of 1825 Christine.

President's Honor Scholars from Lefors are Keith Roberson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Roberson; and Brenda Rae Whittington, whose guardian is Jesse Baker.

Bank's interest rates increase

Robert R. Williams Jr., Manager of the Spearman-Pampa Federal Land Bank Association of Pampa, has announced the Federal Land Bank of Houston's billing rate on farm and ranch loans and rural residence loans increased from 8½ percent to 9 percent effective today.

In making this announcement, Mr. Williams stated that the increase in the billing rate became necessary because of the continued high cost of funds to finance the Bank's lending operation. No substantial decline is anticipated in the near future.

He further stated that in today's economic climate the 9 percent rate is very competitive.

Lockheed fined for payoff plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Lockheed Corp. pleaded guilty today to federal charges stemming from payoffs to former Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka and other Japanese officials and agreed to pay $647,000 in fines.

The Justice Department filed a 10-count criminal information in U.S. District Court here and okheed admitted guilt to four counts of wire fraud and four counts of making false statements to the government to conceal the payoffs.

The government said the payoffs were made from October 1972 to August 1974 and included $1.8 million to Tanaka.

Lockheed also pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor violations of customs law in connection with transporting $17,000 in Japanese currency from Los Angeles to Tokyo and $37,000 in U.S. currency from Atlanta, Ga., to Mexico in 1974.

Weather

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms rumbled across South Central Texas and Southwest Texas early today, bringing with them heavy rainfall that prompted the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood watch for a vast area.

The flash flood watch covered the area and along and west of a line from Cotulla to College Station and included the Hill Country and the San Antonio and Austin areas. The watch was to remain in effect through tonight.

Forecasts called for more showers and thunderstorms over most of the state today. The thunderstorm activity spread eastward across much of South Central and Southwest Texas during the pre-dawn hours.

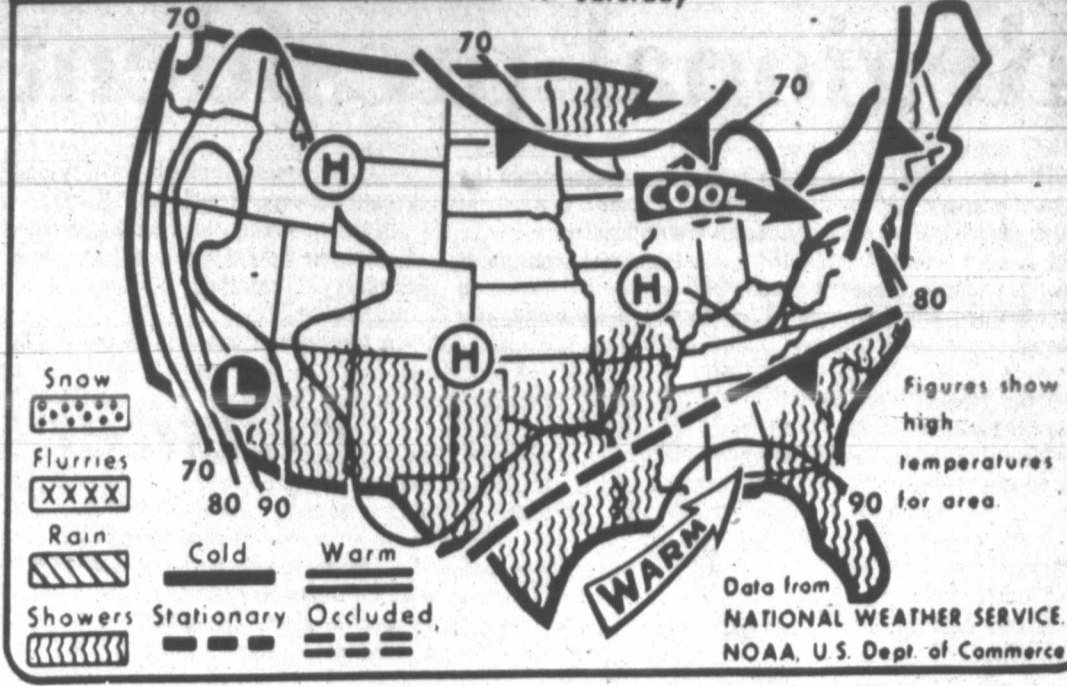

Heavy rain fell late Thursday and early today across much of Southwest and South Central Texas. The largest amount of rainfall recorded by early today was 2.20 inches at Junction, where that amount fell in about two hours.

About two inches of rain fell just north of Ozona late Thursday.

Rain, hail and strong gusty winds accompanied a thunderstorm as it moved through Stanton late Thursday. Across the state, heavy thunderstorms were also reported near Houston and Texas City late Thursday.

FORECAST

SHOWERS are forecast Saturday for much of the southern portion of the nation, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also expected for parts of Minnesota.

More than 200 persons are expected for this year's event. If you are among those who served at Pampa Army Air Field, start making your plans to attend now.

Additional announcements will be made in the future.

Parker, Taylor top 4-H Horse Show

Sabrina Parker and LaJona Taylor were named high point individuals at the Gray County 4-H Horse Show here May 26.

Parker topped the field of 25 junior contestants by placing second in showmanship, third in the grade gelding halter class and first and second, respectively, in pole bending and barrel racing. Billie Billingsley and Laura Horne were right belind Parker in the race for high point honors.

Taylor placed second in senior showmanship and grade gelding halter classes. She also placed first in senior barrel racing and pole bending.

Parker, Taylor and several other 4-H horsemen will represent Gray County at the District I 4-H Horse Show to be held in Amarillo June 27-28.

Celanese spent $91 million in Texas

The Celanese Chemical Co. Pampa plant spent more than $91 million in Texas during 1978, Plant Manager Gene Steel said today.

Included was more than $78.6 million for energy, raw materials, supplies and service. More than $57.5 million, or three-fourths of this amount, was spent within a 50-mile radius of Pampa.

The local plant's 1978 payroll amounted to more than $10.3 million, Steel said. The plant also paid more than $2 million in state, local and payroll taxes during 1978.

Judges not rushing for extra security measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges do not always see the need for security measures available to them, from surveillance to electronic doorkeeping devices.

U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was shot and killed as he left his San Anonio apartment Tuesday.

He had received special protection after an assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting drug cases in the district escaped a shooting attack last fall. Wood recently told officials he did not need the extra security any longer.

"We work in consonance with the federal judges," a spokesman for the U.S. Marshals Office, main custodian of their security, said Thursday. "If a federal judge says he doesn't want a certain type of security, then we have to respect his wishes."

Wood's slaying apparently has not touched off a rush for cover or an intensive new examination of security needs.

The marshals' spokesman said, "We are continuing to provide protection for the federal judiciary. That's one of our prime missions."

The office has requested additional funds and personnel for 1980, but the request stems from an increase in the judiciary. Congress added 152 judgeships last year.

Marshals are presently responsible for 811 trial judges and full-time magistrates. Extra security was provided for all other judges in the Western District of Texas after Wood's death.

"Each district's security situation is evaluated," the marshals' spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said. Whatever steps necessary to provide security in light of the San Antonio shooting would be taken, he added.

An FBI spokesman said the agency on occasion has helped to protect federal judges but the marshals office has the major share of the responsibility.

In addition to providing manpower to protect judges and their families if necessary, the office participates in deciding what physical security devices are necessary to protect federal courtrooms and judges' chambers.

The discussions may be with the General Services Administration, responsible for all federal buildings, or with the U.S. Postal Service, frequently a fellow tenant.

Barrett McGurn, the Supreme Court's public information officer, said security for courtrooms and judges' chambers has been upgraded in recent years as part of a general increase in federal building security.

"Over the past five or six years, various protective devices have been added to various of the federal courts around the country," he said.

"It's all part of a security program paralleling increased security which we've had at airports and other federal buildings over the past half dozen years," McGurn said.

Among the devices are an electric door release system for judges' chambers that includes a closed circuit television. The system is "designed to avoid having people burst in," he said.

Some judges are able to push distress buttons to summon help if needed. Bulletproof materials are sometimes added to the benches in the courtrooms. The window glass on other courtrooms, particularly those located on a ground floor, has protective glazing.

"Some judges just don't see the need for these various measures. Others on occasion accept them," McGurn said. "They are available to the judge should he need the help."

The decision on physical alterations rests primarily with the judges. McGurn said they have "a wide degree of specific authority over their own premises."

Joe Spaniol, deputy director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, said the security devices are not necessarily a result of technological advances or increased concern for security.

Bulletproof materials, for example, are part of the standard design for courtrooms.

"That kind of material has been added to benches for the last 50 years," he said. "That particular phase has been something that's always been installed or built into the general plans."

The administrative office handles the business of the courts and not their legal issues. Spaniol said the decisions about what types of security to install usually are made by the marshals office, the FBI and the General Services Administration.

Pampa officer gets certificate

Patrolman Mark Rigler of the Pampa Police Department recently received his "intermediate" certificate from the Texas Commission of Law Enforcement Standards and Education.

According to police, the certificate is awarded to only about fifty percent of all officers, and is based on training, education and experience.

A List of 'Don'ts'
For Recent Widows

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am getting so much advice I am dizzy, and here I am asking you for more advice yet, which only proves how mixed up I am.

My husband dropped dead of a massive heart attack three weeks ago. He was only 55 and never had any kind of heart trouble, so you can imagine how shocked I was when he died in the middle of a poker game.

Now I am getting advice from all sides. My sister tells me to sell my house and move into an apartment. My brother tells me to keep the house—it will be worth more next year. One friend tells me to take a trip. Another friend says, "Stay home. You can't run away from yourself."

I'm also getting business advice. Some say, "Sell the business and put your money into securities." Others say, "Hang on to the business and run it yourself."

Abby, how does a widow know who to listen to?
CONFUSED IN BUFFALO

DEAR CONFUSED: The best advice I can give you is to take no advice while you are in a state of confusion. You have suffered an enormous shock and need more time to think things through before making any decisions.

In the meantime, don't sell anything, don't buy anything, and don't sign anything. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am 57 and John is 62. We have been going together for nearly four years. I've been married and so has he, and neither of us wants to get married again, but we do enjoy each other's company. We do NOT live together, but I'm not saying we haven't spent some nights together.

We also have taken some wonderful trips together. What I am saying is that we are very close—like a married couple, only we don't live together.

What do I call him when I introduce him to people, or refer to him? It sounds so foolish to call him my boyfriend. He's not my fiance because we have no plans to marry. He's more than an escort, but I certainly wouldn't call him my lover.

Please advise.
OUT OF IDEAS IN BIG D

DEAR OUT: Introduce him as your friend. The nature of your relationship need not be explained.

DEAR ABBY: You made the statement that a child can not be darker than his darker parent.

That is correct, Abby, if only ONE parent has Negro genes. Skin color has no dominance but is a blending of genes.

It is possible, however, for a child to be darker than either of his parents if—and only if—both parents carry Negro genes.

Your answer needs to be clarified. I have known such occurrences to cause husbands to unjustly accuse their wives of adultery.

My authority is "Principles of Human Genetics" by Curt Stern, published by W.H. Freeman & Co., San Francisco, Calif. (1956), pages 325 to 332.

REPROVING YOUR POINT

CONFIDENTIAL TO "R.T. IN THE VALLEY": If you love something, set it free. If it comes back to you, it's yours. If it doesn't, it never was.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (25 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Dr. Lamb

lawrence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 62-year-old sister has told me repeatedly that a doctor diagnosed her as having abdominal epilepsy. Over many years she has had a great variety of ailments and has been to see many doctors, most of whom she eventually distrusts.

We are both registered nurses but abdominal epilepsy is something I have never heard of. Any information you can supply about this condition will be much appreciated. Is it known by any other name and does it have any relationship to grand mal or petit mal epilepsy and is Dilantin used in treating it? As far as I know there's never been any epilepsy in our family.

DEAR READER — Yes, there is such a thing as abdominal epilepsy. Its chief characteristic is attacks of abdominal pain. They're associated with abnormalities in the EEG (brain wave) and they do respond to the same medications used to treat epilepsy.

Some of these cases have associated disturbances of consciousness or awareness during the time the attacks of abdominal pain occur. Since you're a registered nurse, I presume you have access to the medical literature and there were reports of several cases of abdominal epilepsy in the November 24, 1978 issue of The Journal of The American Medical Association. I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 10-8, Epilepsy: You Can Have It Too.

Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As the JAMA report points out, the causes for abdominal epilepsy really aren't known and they may be numerous.

I can understand why your sister may have grown to distrust physicians if she has had recurrent attacks of abdominal pain that weren't diagnosed. Abdominal epilepsy is not something that walks into your office every day. The end result is that doctors may not think of it as a possible cause for recurrent attacks of abdominal pain that remain unexplained.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 27-year-old female vegetarian. I do eat dairy products and some fish. Our concern is our 26-month-old son. I nursed him for one year and since then we have been feeding him as I feed myself — the foods I feel most nutritious excluding meat products. He is a very healthy, rosy-cheeked young boy. I also give him a daily vitamin pill. Am I depriving him of any vitamins or minerals he might obtain in meat? My husband is an avid meat eater. Neither of us influence our son either way and he has eaten meat on occasion. Since meat is very high in protein, my husband feels our son must be lacking in protein. Please ease our minds for our son is our main concern.

DEAR READER — Meat is a good source of protein and other substances the body needs. You can get most of these same substances from an adequate amount of fish in the diet as I note you use for yourself. Your son does need a source of complete protein, meaning one that contains all of the 10 essential amino acids for children. Fish does contain complete protein and so does milk. If he gets an adequate amount of fish and milk in his diet, with his daily vitamin medication, he shouldn't have any nutritional deficiency.

DEAR POLLY — I wonder if anyone has solved the following annoying problem. My cakes, made either from scratch or a packaged mix, come to a pyramid on top while baking and this makes them very hard to stack and frost. — LILLIAN

DEAR LILLIAN — I have no sure cure for this problem and have had it happen many times. Do try to pour the batter in the pan so it is as even as possible. I hold the pan with batter about an inch or two above the counter and carefully drop it on the counter to even it up. When it does happen I turn the layers upside down so there is a flat surface on top for frosting. I am sure some of our good cooks will be sending some more professional suggestions for you. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is that cars do not come equipped with a horn facing out over the back bumper so we could remind tail-gaters when they get too close. — MARTHA

DEAR POLLY — I use hair spray to remove any ballpoint ink stains from a doll's "skin." When baking a chocolate layer cake try sprinkling a little cocoa after greasing the pans rather than using regular flour. It will not show on the baked layers as white flour often does.

Try using cooking oil for removing stickers from furniture. Soak a small cloth in the oil and rub lightly. — MRS. F.D.

Tennis, anyone? This 95-year-old is ready to go

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Clarence Garwood moved to Florida when he was 72. But he didn't rush out and buy a rocking chair. He bought a tennis racket instead.

And today, at age 95, he's beating the socks off senior citizens 20 years his junior.

A pro, of course, he's not. But then he didn't start taking up tennis until he was 50.

He says he has his off days like anyone else.

"I get so disgusted with myself sometimes when I'm not able to hit the ball at all. And sometimes I get to feeling like I'm so tired, I can't play."

"But even young people do that," he says. "And when I do play a good game, I feel very, very lucky that I'm able to."

Garwood makes the aches and pains and flab and wrinkles of old age look like a myth. And all it takes, he says, is "a little work."

He taught industrial arts in Philadelphia's Frankfort high school for 35 years. Then came the time to retire.

"Retire? What's that? I didn't want to quit working. So I went into private practice for seven more years as a draftsman. Then they told me I had to retire again," Garwood says.

So he moved to this Gulf Coast community where today he plays as much as 10 sets of tennis a day.

"You should see this man," said his wife, Peg. "After playing tennis all day, he'll stay up till sometimes 12 at night watching TV and puttering around."

Garwood says it's hard to slow down.

"Once you get to sitting in a rocking chair, you just may not get up again. I've always played basketball. That's really my game. And I've traveled a lot in my lifetime."

He was born in Bucks County, Pa., on a farm.

"That was so long ago they didn't keep social security records," he jokes. "When I went to get my birth certificate from the county seat they told me the records didn't go back that far."

"The only way I could prove my age was from my parents' insurance policy and, of course, the family Bible."

AT A CHICAGO PRESS CONFERENCE Thursday, Peter Roberts, a Chattanooga, Tenn., grocer and apartment manager, displays a socket wrench which he invented. The Federal Court last year ruled that Sears Roebuck and Co. obtained the wrench patent fraudulently and awarded Roberts $1 million. Thursday, a U.S. Circuit Court ordered Sears to return all profits made on the wrench, which up until several years ago amounted to $44 million. (AP Laser photo)

Inventor got 'just reward'

CHICAGO (AP) — David slew Goliath with a slingshot. Peter Roberts used a quick-release ratchet wrench to do in Sears, Roebuck and Co. and get back the rights to his invention and perhaps more than $60 million in profits the retailing giant made on it. "It shows how a small man can receive justice even against an enormous corporation if right is on his side," Roberts said Thursday. "Right is the strongest weapon a person can have."

A federal judge has ordered Sears to return to Roberts all the profits made from sales of the wrenches, plus the American and Canadian patents, and ordered the company to rescind a 1965 contract under which Roberts sold all rights to Sears for $10,000.

U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton said the patents and rights are to be returned to Roberts by June 15 and set a July 9 hearing to determine total profits made.

He said Sears had acquired Roberts' rights through fraud, breach of a confidential relationship and negligent misrepresentations.

Sears says it will appeal. Roberts' chief attorney, Louis G. Davidson, said that during trial a year ago, Sears records showed that 25 million wrenches had been sold at a profit of $44 million. Davidson said the firm has been ordered to make no more quick-release wrenches. It has about eight different lines of such tools, another of Roberts' lawyers said. Roberts, a 34-year-old delicatessen operator in Chattanooga, Tenn., sees what has happened as "a victory for the little guy."

He was 19, working as a clerk in a Sears store in Gardner, Mass., when he modified existing socket wrenches through an invention allowing easy, one-handed removal of socket heads. He retained a patent lawyer and approached Sears with his idea. Sears, Roberts' lawyer proved in court, feigned minor interest in the idea and arranged to purchase the patent for $10,000, to be paid over several years. In the meantime, Sears hired his attorney for other work and began mass-producing and promoting quick-release wrenches.

"I was real young and when you're young, you may tend to trust people too much," said Roberts, who has a high school education. Roberts, who in the meantime joined the Air Force, said he was paid the money over nine months, which made him wonder what Sears was up to. He saw his wrench given prominent display in a Sears catalogue while he was stationed in England, and was astounded because the company had led him to believe the wrench had only minor sales potential.

Davidson said Sears' profits and interest on such sales could exceed $60 million since May 1964, when the prototype was first submitted.

A federal court jury found a year ago that Sears had obtained Roberts' patent fraudulently and awarded him $1 million.

That ruling was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which refused to hear the case. Sears gave Roberts a check last October and contends it owes nothing more.

Commodity prices rise slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm commodity prices, after dropping in April, edged up again in May, the fifth increase in the last six months.

The Agriculture Department said Thursday the increase in May averaged 0.75 percent, following a 1 percent drop in April, the first decline since farm prices began a steady upward swing last December. The four-month bulge was a key factor in a sharp boost in retail food prices in the first quarter of this year.

Farm prices, on the average in May, were up 14 percent from a year ago.

In a related report, the department said farmers' net income this year could total around $32 billion, up 13.5 percent from $28.2 billion in 1978.

It also said retail food prices might go up slightly more than the department has predicted.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said higher prices for hay, wheat, corn, citrus, potatoes and broiler chickens contributed most to the increase in raw product prices from April to May.

Lower prices were reported for cattle, hogs, soybeans, eggs and tomatoes, which partly offset the gains for the other commodities.

Officials said it was the first decline in monthly cattle prices since last November.

Hog prices dropped 1.6 percent during the month and averaged 9 percent below a year ago.

Overall farm prices in May averaged 246 percent of the 1967 base used as a standard. The index was 244 percent in April.

The monthly price report said prices paid by farmers to meet expenses, meanwhile, rose 0.5 percent in May and averaged 13 percent more than a year ago.

The May parity ratio for farm commodities was 73 percent, the same as in April. It was 72 percent a year ago, the Crop Reporting Board said.

At 100 percent, the indicator would mean that theoretically farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14. For example, the May wheat price was $3.22 a bushel — 54 percent of the May parity for wheat of $5.95 a bushel.

The report also said:

- Cattle averaged $71.50 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally in May, compared to $72.40 in April and $50.50 in May 1978, a one-year increase of 41.6 percent. Those are average prices for all types of cattle sold as beef.
- Hogs averaged $43.60 per 100 pounds, compared to $44.30 in April and $47.90 a year ago.
- Wheat was $3.22 a bushel at the farm nationally in May, according to preliminary figures, compared to $3.01 in April and $2.82 a year ago.
- Corn was $2.34 a bushel, compared to $2.27 in April and $2.29 in May 1978.
- Soybeans were $6.95 a bushel, compared to $7.06 in April and $6.77 a year ago.
- Upland cotton was 54.6 cents a pound on a national average, compared to 53.4 in April and 53.7 cents in May 1978.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would dramatically change a 15-year-old law governing meat imports has cleared the House Ways and Means Committee.

But the measure, approved by the committee Thursday, includes a provision the Carter administration vigorously opposes.

A 1964 law now in effect calls for imports of fresh, frozen or chilled meat — mostly lower-grade beef used for hamburger — to be reduced when U.S. production declines, as is the case now.

The bill, approved by voice vote, reverses the formula so that more imports can enter the United States during periods when domestic production is reduced. Conversely, the imports would be tightened when U.S. output is increasing.

As approved by the committee, the measure also provides that a minimum of 1.2 billion pounds of meat can be imported each year, a level sought by the National Cattlemen's Association, which has lobbied steadily for the so-called counter-cyclical import formula.

The Carter administration has said the floor of 1.2 billion pounds is unacceptable and wants it set at 1.3 billion, a level officials say is necessary to fulfill trade agreements with Australia and New Zealand — the major providers of imported meat — and other supplying countries.

Carter did just that about a year ago, suspending quotas to permit the entry of 200 million pounds of additional beef, a total of 1.49 billion pounds in calendar 1978.

The formula was suspended again by Carter this year to allow a maximum of 1.57 billion pounds of imported meat.

Based on an equivalent of wholesale carcass weight, last year's imports amounted to about 8.6 percent of total U.S. beef output of 24.6 billion pounds.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has boosted sharply its estimates of how much farmers may sell this year.

Referred to as "cash receipts" by economists, those are now estimated at between $124 billion and $133 billion, compared to $110.2 billion in 1978.

The new estimate was announced Thursday. In previous reports, farmers' cash receipts were forecast in a range of $118 billion to $128 billion.

Nearly all of the predicted increase from the earlier estimate will come from higher values of livestock products, including cattle, hogs, poultry and dairy products, the report said.

Around the nation...

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When matched one-on-one against a series of likely Republicans, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy does much better than President Carter, according to the California Poll.

Matched against the same GOP contender, Kennedy consistently ran at least 15 points ahead of Carter, an independent survey released Thursday by pollster Mervin D. Field shows.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Rewards totaling $125,000 have been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. About 1,000 mourners, including many federal officials, attended a funeral Mass Thursday for the assassinated judge. His death was the second case in seven months involving a federal official handling smuggling cases in West Texas.

FBI agents have refused comment on the investigation into Tuesday's sniper slaying of Wood.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Jesus 79," the offspring of a vast, fervent gathering of Christians last year, has come on bigger than ever this time.

Instead of just one huge rally, more than a score of them is happening this Saturday in cities across the country.

"It's wild," says Dan Malachuk, co-chairman of one of the ecumenical celebrations of thousands at New York's Shea Stadium.

"Never before have there been simultaneous events of this scope involving evangelicals, Protestants and Roman Catholics. A unifying wind of the spirit is blowing. It's historic."

The grass-roots, cross-Christian effusions of faith comes on the eve of Pentecost, the birthday of the church, when thousands of many nations felt the outpouring of the spirit in ancient Jerusalem.

"And suddenly a sound came from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind," recounts Acts 2. "...And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit... And at the sound the multitude came together... And all were amazed."

The series of rallies this year stemmed from the massive "Jesus 78" gathering of 60,000 last spring in the Giants Stadium of the Meadowlands in New Jersey, where it also is holding forth again.

It in turn had stemmed from an ecumenical charismatic renewal conference in Kansas City in 1977, where several had foreseen such affairs proliferating around the world to stimulate unity, evangelism and rejuvenation in the churches.

Such gatherings re announced in 27 U.S. cities this Saturday, generated and organized spontaneously by local groups including both Catholics and Protestants, with similar affairs in about 20 places overseas such as Belfast, Dublin, Bombay and Algiers.

The U.S. cities listed include Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.; Spokane and Seattle, Wash.; Dallas and Houston, Tex.; San Francisco, Redding, San Diego and Riverside, Calif.; Chicago, Ill.; Dayton, Canton and Columbus, Ohio; Charlotte, N.C.; Denver, Colo.; East Rutherford, N. J.; Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Lake Charles, La.; Norfolk and Richmond, Va.; Omaha, Neb.; Phoenix, Ariz.; St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.

Singers to present musical in Pampa

The Shalom Singers and Jubalair Hand Bell Choir from First United Methodist Church, Slidell, Louisiana will be sharing a musical presentation called "Promised Land" on June 3 at First United Methodist Church and at 6:30 p.m.

"Promised Land" is a compilation of American folk and gospel hymns and songs, poems and scripture readings. The musical presentation looks at American history in the light of the Old Testament idea of a "Promised Land." To our forefathers it seemed that just as the ancient Israelites were led by God to a promised land, so too were they. Old Testament scripture reinforced the idea, as did the land itself with its wealth of resources and opportunity. Through such American poets as Walt Whitman, Henry W. Longfellow, Sidney Lanier, Bob Dylan and Carl Sandburg, the musical explores the hopes and dreams, the questions and doubts of the American dream of this "Promised Land." From the gospel song "I'm Bound for the Promised Land," and the hymn "In Christ There is no East or West" to the American folk tune "One Tin Soldier" and "This Land is Your Land" is the theme explored and expressed in song and bells. From the exciting Negro spirituals such as "Every Time I Feel the Spirit" and "Roll Jordan, Roll" to the melodic strains of Steven Foster's "Beautiful Dreamer" flows the heartbeat of American heritage as she seeks for the seeks to reflect the idea of a "Promised Land." The experience is an American one, with deep underlying roots in the Judeo-Christian tradition.

This will be the choir's fifth national tour, complete with bright banners and beautiful handmade costumes. You won't want to miss it!

NEW YORK (AP) — Both Christian and Jewish groups have voiced outraged protests at the publication in a student newspaper at the City University of New York of photographs of a woman dressed as a nun performing sex acts.

Chancellor Robert Kibbee has apologized for the "vulgar and offensive" photographs and accompanying article, saying they were the work of "crude and insensitive...sick exhibitionists" not typical of the student body.

He established review panels "to assure that there will be no recurrence of such disgraceful behavior." Meanwhile, students voted to cut off funds for financing the paper, The Observation Post, supported by student activity funds.

The photos and article were "an affront to all decent people," declared the American Jewish Committee and American Jewish Congress.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. (southern) and the Presbytery of Washita of the United Presbyterian Church became the 11th unified presbytery of the two denominations under a vote taken here. The newly united local unit becomes effective next Jan. 1.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox theologians reported reaching a "common understanding" of baptism at a World Council of Churches consultation in Louisville.

Baptist participants said the report represented a "breakthrough" because it states that believers baptism is the most common baptismal rite mentioned in the New Testament, where those old enough to decide on it themselves are baptized. This is the Baptist practice.

Most other denominations also baptize infants. Roman Catholic, Orthodox and Anglican representatives said the document marked a step forward in ecumenical relations because it also accepts the validity of infant baptism and rejects the practice of allowing baptism to be administered more than once.

HERE IS THE PATH

A SYMBOL OF SAFETY

When the ship is in danger, we can depend on the life-boats to take us over the seas to safety. It is comforting to glance at the life-boat when the seas are rough.

Our Armed Services are a symbol of safety when our country is in trouble, when war threatens to raise its ugly head. In the past, when war has come, our servicemen have not hesitated to give their lives to protect and defend us.

There is a special Day each year when we remember and honor our servicemen who have died in the defense of our blessed country. Let us not forget, as individuals, to honor these dead and give thanks to God for those who protect us even now. Remember them as you attend church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Shoppers found bargains at meat counter in April

Supermarket shoppers found that bargains at the meat counter were few and far between last month, but an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows that overall grocery bills rose only one-tenth of a percent.

The survey indicated that egg prices are continuing to decline; the cost of orange juice has started to drop; and there are a few sales on coffee.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The survey showed that prices this year are rising at a slower rate than last year. The marketbasket bill at the checklist store rose an average of 4.3 percent in the first five months of 1979, compared to an average of 5.3 percent in the first five months of 1978.

During May, the AP survey showed the marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased in five cities, rising an average of 4.5 percent. There were several substantial boosts, mainly because of sharp jumps in the price of one or more meat items.

The marketbasket bill decreased at the checklist store in eight cities last month, down an average of 2.6 percent.

On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store increased by a tenth of a percent last month. That compared with a May 1978 increase of half a percent and with an April 1979 rise of just over half a percent.

Meat accounted for a disproportionately large share of the increase. Meats represent 21 percent of the items checked by the AP, but they accounted for 33 percent of the price boosts last month. Frankfurters were the hardest hit, going up in seven cities.

The government has predicted that food prices will rise 8 1/2 percent to 10 percent this year, but the economists concede that uncertain factors like weather and the success of the administration's overall anti-inflation drive could upset their forecasts.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed both more increases and decreases during May than during April. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Apr.	May
Up	22.0	24.7
Down	22.0	25.8
Unchanged	51.1	47.3
Unavailable	4.9	2.2

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede oost

June 2, 1979

Be alert this coming year for ways to add to your resources through things others have already developed. You could be invited to participate in something profitable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful not to deal too harshly with those you love today. If you treat them as considerably as you do your acquaintances, you'll have no problem. Find out more of what lies ahead for you for the year following your birthday by sending for your new Astro-Graph Letter, Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Worrying about things that will probably never happen is a waste of mindpower. Look for positive possibilities today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're capable of overcoming just about any challenge that comes down the pike today. The one exception might be where money is involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Goals can be successfully achieved today, provided you don't walk on others in the process. If you step on toes, setbacks are likely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A fear of failure could keep you from putting forth the necessary effort today. This could be a shame. If you really try, you'll succeed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Where money is an issue today, don't involve yourself with deals that lack a clear-cut understanding. Get a signed agreement up front.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The wrong type of associates could hamper you more than help you to day with important goals. Be prepared to function independently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not expect more of co-workers today than you do of yourself. Should they see you're not producing, they're apt to lay down their tools, too.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Avoid financial speculation today on things about which you are not privy to all the facts. You could make a serious mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions are a bit unusual today, because either you or your mate will be looking to shift the blame to the other. Be a peacemaker rather than a provoker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can talk all you want today, but the only way anything will get done is with use of a lot of elbow grease. Forego the rhetoric for action.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your pleasurable whims could do your purse a disservice today unless they are held in check. Enjoy yourself without being a spendthrift.

At Kemper Open McGee breaks course record

JERRY MCGEE, from East Palestine, Ohio, reacts as he makes a birdie putt on the 18th green during Thursday's first round of the Kemper Open being played on the Quail Hollow Country Club in Charlotte. McGee is the first round leader after shooting an 11-under-par 61 which broke the course record of 64.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry McGee was trying very hard not to be too elated about his career-best score. "It's very, very unusual to put two rounds like that back to back," he said, looking ahead to today's second round of the $350,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament. "I really can't expect that. I hope I do it, but I don't expect it. "There's a lot of golf left. We're still just jockeying for position." McGee jockeyed his way to an 11-under-par 61 in Thursday's storm-delayed first round but — amazingly — held only a 1-stroke lead over Craig Stadler, who chipped in three times on the way to a 62.

While a 61 and a 62 in the same round is rare enough, even more remarkable was the gap to the next group — 5 shots back of Stadler and 6 behind McGee. It was composed of Joe Hager, Bobby Wadkins and Gary McCord, tied at 67, 5 shots under par on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course. McGee's effort, which included 11 birdies and no bogeys, matched the best score on the tour this year. Ben Crenshaw's 61 at Phoenix, however, was on a shorter course, was 10 under par and came when the players were allowed improved lies in the fairway. Only two other scores of 62 had been shot this season.

McGee said a pep talk from his wife Jill and a tip from Jack Grout, Jack Nicklaus' teacher, to stand closer to the ball were the key ingredients in his effort. McGee, winner of two titles in 13 years on the tour, missed only one green and almost made birdie there, his chip stopping two inches from the cup. He birdied his first five holes.

Washington players confident of victory

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Elvin Hayes says the Washington Bullets will make National Basketball Association history. The Seattle SuperSonics disagree. Hayes, as do many of his teammates, coaches and management, believes the Bullets will win three consecutive games from Seattle, beginning tonight, and become the first team to stage a successful comeback after being down 3-1 in the best-of-seven NBA championship. "I am positive we are going to come back," Hayes said after the Bullets returned here from Seattle. "There is no question in my mind. We are the world champions. They are going to have to beat us. We aren't going to give it away. We are going to win Friday night and then go back out there and win and force a seventh game. "We had to win one of three in Seattle so it doesn't matter which one. It's hard to beat us three times on a court. We've proven that." If the Bullets do win tonight's game, Game 6 will be played in Seattle Coliseum Sunday. Game

7, if necessary, would be played here next Wednesday night. The Bullets are confident they can win three straight because they accomplished the feat against the San Antonio Spurs to take the Eastern Conference Championship. Seattle's Dennis Johnson is quick to point out that the Sonics are not the Spurs. "We don't get all the publicity, but the Spurs are weak defensively," Johnson said. "We remember last year, and the difference now is we're not playing on emotion. We did do a lot last year. In last year's final, the Sonics led the Bullets in the final series 3-2 but came into Washington for Game 6 and got blown off the court 117-82. The Bullets went on to win the seventh game in Seattle.

Henry Rono pays for his success

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Henry Rono's success as a distance runner has never been matched. But he has paid dearly for it. "Everybody wants me to do this. The school wants me to do this. I can't do my own thing," the 25-year-old Kenyan said Thursday. "It doesn't mean I don't appreciate the honor... people tell me to sign autographs. I enjoy that but it takes time." The demands have flowed in the wake of the Washington State junior's unparalleled success — setting four records in the span of just 80 days last year. This year has been different.

His best 1979 time in the 3,000-meter steeplechase has been 8 minutes, 22.51 seconds. Last year, he set a world record of 8:06.4. In the 5,000 meters, his best this year is 13:32.8. Last year he set a world record of 13:08.4. And he hasn't run the 10,000 meters at all this year after posting a world mark of 27:22.47 in 1978.

On Thursday, he had the best qualifying time, 8:25.38, in the steeplechase in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships. But he doesn't expect to break his own meet record of 8:12.39 in Saturday's final.

Rono is one of nine returning champions, seven of whom advanced to today's events. Michael Musyoki of favored Texas-El Paso is in the 10,000-meter run which goes directly into the finals today and Bill Mullins of Southern California is hobbled by an injury and did not defend his 400-meter dash title.

Greg Foster of UCLA, the defending champ in the 110-meter hurdles, qualified easily for today's semifinals, setting up another confrontation with world record holder Renaldo Nehemiah of Maryland. Both won their heats.

Foster also won his 200-meter heat. LaMonte King of California-Irvine, the only athlete to qualify in three individual events, was second. He also advanced in the 100 meters and the long jump, in which his 26 feet, 11 1/4 inches leap is the best by a collegian this year.

Don Paige of Villanova won his two heats in the 1,500 and 800 meters and is considered the favorite in both. The finals are scheduled to begin 40 minutes apart Saturday afternoon. Villanova's outside shot at edging past Texas-El Paso and Oregon faded when Keith Brown failed to qualify in the 400 meters and Anthony Tufariello pulled out of the 800 with a heel injury.

Thursday's competition involved only qualifying events and trials. Six finals were set for today, including the hammer throw in which Scott Neilson of Washington is favored to win his fourth NCAA title. His qualifying of 235-7 was 20 feet farther than the next best qualifier and just off his meet record of 237-5 set last year.

Olympian Harvey Glange of Auburn qualified for another run at the 100-meter title, which he won in 1976 and 1977.

Pampa hires coaches

The Pampa Independent School District has announced the hiring of four coaches for the 1978-79 school year.

Rodney Bagley has been hired to coach the defensive linemen. He is an All-American from Louisiana Tech. He comes to Pampa after coaching for two years at Beckville.

Hired to be an assistant for the ninth grade is Charles Tendell. He also will be the cross country coach for the Harvesters next fall. Tendell coached with head mentor Danny Palmer at Waco Richfield.

Mike Lowe will handle the duties as coach of the defensive ends. Lowe coached last season under Bob McQueen at Temple. Throughout the season, Temple was ranked as the number one team in the state in Class AAAA. They bowed out of the playoffs in a loss to state finalist Plano. Rickey Palmer, brother of Danny, will coach all phases of the kicking game. In addition, he will coach both the offensive and defensive linemen. Palmer made the All-South team in 1973-74 while playing for Southern Mississippi. He also played two years of professional football. One year, Palmer played with the St. Louis Cardinals, while his final year was with the New Orleans Saints. Currently, Palmer lives in Vienna, Georgia. "I am pleased with this staff," said Palmer. "This is a young staff and a hard working one. They will work hard enough to give the kids a chance to win." These coaches, according to Palmer, will report for duty on July 24. Palmer also said that three other coaching positions will be filled soon.

Because of eye injury Goaltender decides to retire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bernie Parent once made a prophesy that has come back to haunt him. "A goaltender can play as long as his eyes are good," Parent told a reporter asking about the lifeline of a National Hockey League goaltender. Parent retired Thursday at the age of 34, because of an eye injury.

Last Feb. 17, in a game against the New York Rangers, teammate Jimmy Watson accidentally poked his stick through the eyehole of Parent's mask and damaged the goalie's right eye. "I'm only 34, and I wanted to play at least five more years," said a desolate Parent. "But they tell me I can't."

Dr. Edward Viner, the Philadelphia Flyers' team physician, said that a blow to the head or eye could cause serious damage to Parent's eye and recommended the player retire. Parent wore dark tinted glasses that hid his injured eye at a Thursday news conference.

Keith Allen, general manager of the Flyers, made the announcement in a room just yards from the ice where Parent became one of the NHL's all-time great goaltenders. If you let your mind wander you could here the echoes of the "Bernie, Bernie, Bernie," chant Flyers' fans screamed as Parent made unbelievable saves in 1973-74 and 1974-75, when Philadelphia won consecutive Stanley Cups.

"He gave us some of the greatest goaltending ever seen anywhere," Allen said. "We'd have never won the two Stanley Cups without him..." Flyers' owner Ed Snider looked at Parent's No. 1 jerseys (home and away) hanging on a wall in the back of the room and said they would be retired at a fitting ceremony next season. "No Flyer will ever wear No. 1 again," Snider said.

Parent tried to take the painful moment philosophically, but it didn't quite come off. He was morose despite his words. "Hockey has been good to me, Philadelphia fans great, and management super..." Parent said softly.

He said he had nothing to say about his future. Snider, however, assured that the Flyers would honor a contract renegotiated last year by Parent's agent. The owner said the new pact was more advantageous to Bernie.

Allen described the retirement as "a very sad end to a brilliant career. I hope he can regroup and lead a useful, happy life from here on in." Parent was asked what he remembered most about his 15-year NHL career. Ironically he didn't refer to the pair of Stanley Cup triumphs. "You have to remember that the Stanley Cup happens at the end of the season," Parent began. "I'll always remember just the feeling of winning a hockey game. You come off the ice and know you did your job. That's the greatest feeling."

Underwood brothers win

By The Associated Press
Did Pat and Tom Underwood pitch Thursday night?

Oh, brother, did they ever! Pat, a 22-year-old making his major league debut with the Detroit Tigers, silenced Toronto for 8-1/3 innings, then left the mound to a standing ovation from the Blue Jays' fans.

Meanwhile, Tom, his 25-year-old brother, was pitching almost as well for the Blue Jays... almost, but not quite. He, too, had a shutout going for seven innings. But when Jerry Morales pounded his first pitch in the eighth inning over the left-center field wall, Pat had his first victory in the big leagues, Tom had his seventh loss without a win and the Tigers had a 1-0 triumph, their sixth in a row.

"I felt like I was watching myself," Tom said.

Pat gave up a fifth-inning double by Rico Carty and an eighth-inning single by Dan Ainge. And when Alfredo Griffin doubled with one away in the ninth, Tigers Manager Les Moss trudged to the mound and, to the disapproval of the 12,423 fans, yanked his young starter, bringing in Dave Tobik and then John Hiller to get the final two outs.

Pat had four strikeouts and walked just one batter while Tom allowed six hits, walked two batters and struck out six.

Helen Underwood was flown up from her home in Kokomo, Ind., by the Blue Jays so she could watch her sons pitch.

Twins 13, A's 2
"It was just one of those games," said Oakland Manager Jim Marshall, who has seen a lot of these games, what with the A's wallowing around the bottom of the West Division while the Twins challenge for the lead.

Minnesota put the game away in the second inning, taking a 5-0 lead with three runs scoring on rookie John Castino's triple. But after Oakland scored twice in the third, the Twins added four runs in the fourth, two on Ron Jackson's single and two on Jose Morales' homer. Jackson added a two-run homer in the eighth.

Brewers 5, Yankees 4
Ron Davis, who had beaten Milwaukee twice in the last three games, couldn't stave off the Brewers this time as they pounded out one hit after another in a decisive three-run ninth to wipe out the last vestige of what had been a 4-0 New York lead.

The Brewers started their comeback against Luis Tiant in the seventh inning, when Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer. Before that inning was over, Ken Klay had replaced Tiant.

Mariners 12, Angels 10
Bruce Bochte hit RBI singles in the first and fifth innings, then slammed a three-run homer into the upper deck of the Kingdome in the sixth, to put Seattle ahead for good against the Angels.

California built a 6-1 lead but the Mariners wiped it out with five runs in the fifth inning, three on Dan Meyer's homer off Mark Clear. Bobby Grich's second homer of the game put the Angels on top 8-6, but Clear was rocked by Bochte's blast that made it 9-8.

The Mariners added three runs in the eighth and they needed them. Don Baylor hit a two-run homer for the Angels in the ninth.

Red Sox 3, Rangers 2
The Red Sox ended a jinx in Arlington Stadium that had reached back to September 1977 and halted the Rangers' four-game winning streak. Sparky Lyle, who had retired the first eight Boston batters he faced after taking over for Jon Matlack in the 10th, walked George Scott with two out in the 12th and pinch-runner Jim Dwyer stole second before Jerry Remy got his game-winning hit, a liner off Lyle's glove into center field.

Expos 1, Phillies 0
Scott Sanderson pitched a six-hit shutout to lead the Expos past the Phillies.

It marked the first time in the Expos' 11-year existence that they hurled three consecutive shutouts. Steve Rogers and Bill Lee turned the trick Tuesday and Wednesday by scores of 9-0 and 2-0, respectively.

It was the first time since 1974 the Phillies had been blanked three times running and the three-time National League East Division champs fell three games behind first-place Montreal. They have dropped four games in a row and 10 of their last 13.

Dodgers 12, Giants 10
Steve Garvey slugged a homer, double and single and drove in four runs. Dave Lopes collected three doubles and Derrel Thomas had four singles as the Dodgers handed the Giants their sixth consecutive setback. The Dodgers erupted for seven runs in the fourth inning for a 10-4 lead, then withstood a five-run San Francisco seventh.

Winner Don Sutton was charged with nine runs on 13 hits in 6-2/3 innings while loser Vida Blue was knocked out in the fourth after giving up nine runs on eight hits. The triumph enabled the Dodgers to pass the Giants and move into third place in the NL West by one-half game.

Astros 3, Reds 0
Houston charged into first place in the West for the first time since May 10 on the strength of Jose Cruz's three-run homer in the sixth inning off Fred Norman that put the Astros one game ahead of the Reds. Craig Reynolds led off the sixth with a single and Cesar Cedeno walked. The next pitch sailed over the right field fence for Cruz' fourth homer of the year. Rick Williams scattered seven hits for the victory.

Cardinals 9, Mets 6
Keith Hernandez hammered a three-run homer in the first inning and George Hendrick followed with a towering solo blast, chasing rookie Mike Scott after one-third of an inning. Ken Oberkfell chipped in with three hits, including an RBI single that capped the Cardinals' five-run first inning, and Lou Brock had two singles, boosting his batting average to .381. Winner Bob Sykes lasted until the eighth inning, when the Mets scored four times.

Pirates 4, Cubs 3
Chicago's ace reliever, Bruce Sutter, shut down a bases-loaded Pittsburgh threat in the ninth inning, but he couldn't do it in the 10th. He gave up singles to left by Ed Ott and Phil Garner and Manny Sanguillen's pinch-single off third baseman Steve Ontiveros' glove. Omar Moreno gave him a brief reprieve with a grounder to force Ott at the plate, but Tim Foli hit an 0-2 pitch into center for a game-winning single.

Padres 3, Braves 1
Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer, his 11th of the year, and Gene Richards drove in San Diego's other run with a single as the Padres posted their fifth straight victory. Winfield's sixth-inning homer gave him a league-leading 41 runs batted in and gave the Padres a 3-0 lead.

TEMPERS FLARE as Milwaukee Brewer catcher Charlie Moore argues with home plate umpire Alan Clark after the Yankees' Bucky Dent was called safe at home on a close play at the plate. Moore didn't win the argument, but the Brewers did win the game, 5-4. Only three umpires worked in the game due to a collision in Wednesday's game that sent umpire Lou Du Muro to the hospital.

Bradley leads LPGA tourney

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Bradley usually opens a Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by shooting a 78 or a 79 and then finds herself battling the remaining three rounds to finish with a respectable total.

But the unusual happened Thursday as the $100,000 tournament got underway at the par-72, 6,410-yard course at the Wykagyl Country Club. The 28-year-old Bradley, winner of this tournament in 1976 for her first pro triumph, shot a 66.

In the process, she built up a 1-stroke advantage over Nancy Lopez, the defending champion and currently the No. 1 money winner with $103,475, and tied an LPGA record with a 29 on the front nine. Trailing Lopez was Judy Rankin with a 69 while Beverly Klass, Peggy Conley, JoAnn Washam and JoAnn Prentice were bunched at 70.

Bradley had a similar score last year in Los Angeles, but it was Marlene Hagge who set the original standard in 1971 in Columbus, Ohio. Carol Mann first duplicated the feat in 1975 in Dublin, Ohio.

Can the six-year tour veteran, who had an eagle on the par-5 third hole and also ran a string of five straight birdies, stand such first round success?

"Everyone will know the answer tomorrow," Bradley said, smiling. "This is the first time that I've ever jumped off to such a good start."

"All along I felt that I should have been winning, but it has always been the opening round that is my downfall. I've been in the top 10 in 11 of 13 tournaments this year. Four times I finished second and three times I was third."

"Imagine what it might have been if I had shot even a par score? Instead I have posted a 77 or sometimes even a 79. One thing I have to say is that I am proud of the way that I have always hung in and bounced back for those close finishes."

Last year in this same tournament was a perfect example of the point Bradley was making.

"I opened with a 79 and I was in 70th place," said the Arlington, Mass., native. "The next day I had a par 72 and climbed to 39th. Then I followed with a 69 and moved into 13th place. My final round was a 66 and I wound up third."

Bradley credited a new driver given to her by John Wirbul of Nashua, N.H., who has been her pro since she was 11-years-old, with some of Thursday's success.

Jones donates Olympic medal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Johnny "Lam" Jones of the University of Texas has donated the Olympic gold medal he won at Montreal in 1976 to the Texas Special Olympics for the handicapped.

"I couldn't believe he was doing that," said Denis Poulos, director of the meet for 3,400 children now under way here. "I said, 'Johnny, are you sure you know what you're doing?'"

"He said that maybe we could sell it and make some money," Poulos told the Austin American-Statesman, "but that medal is too special to us now. It's a part of that man's life. It says something about the guy that he can do something like this."

"We'll put it to good use somehow, but there's no way we're going to sell that medal." "That's amazing isn't it?"

said Eunice Shriver Kennedy, president of Special Olympics, Inc. "When you think of how much time he spent to win that medal, you know how much it means to him. That's just the way the Special Olympics affects people."

Jones, an All-Southwest Conference receiver in football and track sprinter, ran on the United States' winning 400-meter relay team three years ago. He dropped out of school for the spring semester but plans to return in September for his senior year.

He has been helping distribute medals and ribbons at the Special Olympics.

"I wanted to find a way to help," said Jones. "People out here give their time and their love, but this thing needs funds, too."

Travelers tip Midland, 2-1

By The Associated Press
Joe DeSa drove in two runs with a home run and a single to lead the Arkansas Travelers to a 2-1 Texas League baseball victory over the Midland Cubs Thursday night.

In other Texas League games, El Paso edged Shreveport, 11-10.

San Antonio slipped past Tulsa, 3-2, and Amarillo swept a doubleheader from Jackson, 7-1 and 5-3.

DeSa singled home the first Arkansas run in the first inning and slammed a solo homer in the sixth. Midland's run came on a solo homer by Bryan Rosinski.

Tom Chamberlin, who gave up five hits in pitching the distance, improved his record to 7-2 with the victory. Mark Parker, 2-1, took the loss for Midland.

Steve Whitehead drove in the winning run with a two-out single as the El Paso Diablos edged the Shreveport Captains, 11-10.

A college that grew and grew and ...shrunk

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (AP) — Antioch College is flat broke but hopes to get by — with more than a little help from its friends. The small, private liberal arts college that grew to a behemoth as it led the trend toward campus expansion in the booming 1960s, found itself in immediate need of $2 million earlier this month. Antioch — noted as something of an educational vanguard — found a quick salvation by deferring salaries and other payments. "The facts are, people are not being paid," said the college's chief financial officer, Dudley Woodall. "The suppliers and vendors essentially are not being paid, or we are agreeing to terms with them. And, the federal government, which is a whole different category, is also standing pat," Woodall said. "Everybody is helping us out by not panicking, by continuing to work: teachers are teaching, union folk are maintaining necessary services, vendors and suppliers are understanding — they're not giving us anything, but they are agreeing to terms which are reasonable." Woodall added: "We consider the outpouring of support a mandate to continue." The college's board is meeting in Washington today and Saturday to work out further details of the financial recovery, and supporters are holding a march today in Ohio to help raise funds.

Woodall has said the next few months are the most crucial time for the school as it tries to get through the summer, when revenues are low. Woodall, vice president for finance, sat behind his desk recently and recounted the mistakes and unavoidable factors that led Antioch into its financial bind. "Antioch has had financial troubles as long as I have been here, which is 2 1/2 years, and from what I'm told it was for five or six years before that," he said. What happened, he said, is that Antioch got caught up in the euphoria of the late 1960s and early 1970s when students and funds abounded. The call then was for "expansion," and Antioch mushroomed from one campus to 30 branches in as many cities across the country. It bloated to about 7,000 enrollment. The main campus, tucked away in Yellow Springs, swelled from its usual 1,100-1,200 pupils to 1,700. "In order to do this, it required an investment of substantial working capital," Woodall said. "Antioch started out with an endowment of $4 million, which was obviously not enough." Suddenly the baby boom was past and students no longer were rattling the ivy-covered gates, trying to get in. Enrollment and income from tuition and fees — now about $5,000 a year — dropped dramatically. Antioch now instructs the equivalent of 5,000 pupils nationally, including some 900 at Yellow Springs. Then Antioch found itself battered by the inflation of the mid '70s. There were buildings to pay for and a payroll to meet — a payroll which makes up 80 percent of Antioch's $19 million annual budget. Antioch went on a crash diet. Twenty branches were closed, leaving only nine in Boston and Cambridge, Mass.; Keene, N.H.; New York; Washington; Philadelphia; Seattle; San Francisco; Los Angeles; and San Antonio, Texas, plus the international program headquartered at Yellow Springs. Programs were looked at on a cost-efficient basis. Some were dropped, others consolidated. "That job is not done. We still have a couple that need shaping up," Woodall said without naming them — "they know who they are." Faculty and staff were reduced through attrition, from the 1,000-plus in the halcyon days to about 800 at present, including some 350-450 faculty members. (Woodall would not divulge exact faculty salaries, but said the range is in the lower half of what is paid around the country, and that the average Antioch professor earns less than $20,000 a year.) To supplement its reduced teaching staff, the college hoisted its reputation up the flagpole and began drawing "quality faculty" from surrounding major universities on an adjunct or part-time basis. Finally, a $16 million fund-raising drive was started last February, and was accelerated when finances dried up in May. The result, Woodall maintains, has improved Antioch's product. "There are no free rides," Woodall said. "It's called performance, and it's called productivity. In that sense, Antioch is like any business throughout the country. Our productivity has to increase and the quality has to be improved." The stringent moves, Woodall said, brought a "pulling together" by faculty, staff and students. President William Birenbaum called it a "loan" from faculty and staff when the board announced May 17 that the pay of all employees — including Birenbaum's — was being deferred. That move was expected to provide $1 million in funds — which with the stepped-up fund-raising campaign — would cover the $2 million the college was short. But the changes at Antioch brought criticism, too.

Five named to Texas judgeships

HOUSTON (AP) — Four men and a woman became new U.S. District judges Thursday at the same time funeral services were being conducted some 200 miles away in San Antonio for federal Judge John H. Wood, the victim of an assassin's bullet in the back. During the investiture of the new judges, the murder of Wood was mentioned in prayer, in a minute of silent honor, and in the speech of Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Texas. Both Bentsen and Chief Judge Reynaldo G. Garza called it a day of gladness, but one tempered with sadness. Among those taking the oath was from Garza was Gabrielle K. McDonald, 37, a Houston lawyer and the first black ever named to a federal judgeship in Texas. Others were Norman W. Black, a U.S. Magistrate from Houston; George P. Poles to welcome pope who is headed home

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Throngs of Poles headed for Warsaw today to welcome Pope John Paul II, the first Polish ruler of the Roman Catholic Church who comes home Saturday for the first time since his election seven months ago. At least a million visitors are expected in the Polish capital, a city of 1.3 million. The government set up an elaborate system of roadblocks to bar non-essential traffic that with the vast crowds expected would cause chaos in Warsaw and the other major cities on the nine-day papal itinerary. The government appealed to travelers to use buses, trains and other forms of public transit. Special traffic controls for Warsaw extended as far away as Sochaczew, 32 miles from the capital. Parking lots were set up as much as eight miles from places the pope is to visit. Special detours were laid out for drivers, and police circulated instructions on how to get from place to place. They issued passes to motorists with pressing reasons to drive into blockaded areas. Officials also hoped limited alcohol sales would control the crowds. Liquor stores will be closed throughout the country Saturday for a regular monthly day off and on Sunday as they always are for the Sabbath. In addition, officials in Krakow ordered the liquor stores closed while the pope is visiting the city where he was archbishop when he was elected. St. Norbert's Church in Krakow urging parishioners to pledge total abstinence.

The pope will be welcomed at an airport arrival ceremony in Warsaw Saturday morning, then cheered by crowds lining the streets as his motorcade travels to the Warsaw Cathedral. He will meet with Communist Party chief Edward Gierek and celebrate Mass and speak in Victory Square. He goes to Poznan, in western Poland, on Sunday and then to Gniezno, Poland's first capital, for another Mass and meetings with young people and dignitaries. From Monday to Wednesday he will be in Czestochowa, site of Poland's most sacred shrine, the Jasna Gora Monastery. On Thursday, he visits his birthplace, Wadowice, and the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz for a memorial service, then returns to Krakow. Next Friday, June 8, he goes to Nowy Targ to celebrate Mass, then returns to Krakow in the afternoon. On Saturday he visits the Holy Cross Sanctuary in neighboring Mogila and again returns to Krakow. On Sunday, his last day in Poland, he celebrates Mass in Krakow and delivers an address and then departs for Rome in the afternoon. Halina Kwiatkowska, 57, a leading Krakow actress described by an Italian magazine as the pope's youthful love before he was ordained a priest, said Wednesday they were just "good friends" in high school and during the Nazi occupation when they were active in an underground theater group. She said they remained friends after his ordination in 1946, that he celebrated a Requiem Mass of 1970 for her father, his high-school Latin teacher, and that she last saw him in 1974 during Christmas festivities.

After demonstration abandoned Operations begin without fanfare

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — The new government of Africa's newest nation began operations without fanfare today after abandoning plans to ferry thousands of blacks into the capital to demonstrate support for Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa. There were no demonstrations as Muzorewa moved into his new office in the two-story, red-brick government headquarters. Fleets of trucks and cars had been mobilized to bring thousands into the city, and there was no immediate explanation of the cancellation of the plans for the demonstration. Instead, Salisbury bustled with typical rush hour traffic as Zimbabwe Rhodesia's first black prime minister began a round of meetings with his staff. Muzorewa, a 54-year-old Methodist bishop educated in America, ushered in the birth of the new nation at the stroke of midnight Thursday, declaring it "the victorious minute we have struggled for and waited for over 88 years of colonial domination and subjugation." His brief radio and television address, highlighted by a plea for national unity, made no direct mention of problems facing the nation at birth — international sanctions and isolation, an escalating guerrilla war and factional political rivalries. Muzorewa's speech and a proclamation in the government gazette were the only official acts marking the nation's transition from white-minority rule to a government headed by blacks, with a black majority in the Cabinet and Parliament, but with the whites retaining much power. There were generally low-key celebrations in Salisbury's black enclaves with scattered groups of up to 400 of Muzorewa's jubilant followers singing and dancing in the streets under a clear night sky.
