Nuclear protesters march way into jail

By The Associated Press
Hundreds of anti-nuclear demonstrators marched, chanted and sang their way from nuclear power plant sites to jail during worldwide protests against atomic energy.

The protests were generally peaceful, but a woman was killed Sunday in Spain when a policeman fired his submachine gun into a crowd of anti-nuclear demonstrators who started throwing rocks. One hundred demonstrators — many chanting "Two, four, six, eight, we don't want to radiate" — were arrested in Limerick, Pa., after they scaled a snow fence around the construction site of a Philadelphia Electric nuclear power plant.

And consumer advocate Ralph Nader told a rally in Boston: "No country or civilized society can tolerate a form of energy so linked to potential disaster that an area thousands of square miles could be rendered uninhabitable to future generations."

More than 800 demonstrators representing loosely allied anti-nuclear and environmental groups were arrested Sunday, bringing the weekend total to more than 1,100. Most were charged with minor offenses ranging from trespassing to disturbing the peace.

Two thousand demonstrators hurled stones at police in Balboa, Spain, during a protest over the construction of a $1 billion American-supplied atomic power plant. Police responded with rubber bullets and smoke grenades, and the woman was killed when a civil guard opened fire, authorities said.

On Saturday, as a prelude to Sunday's International Anti-Nuclear Day, approximately 30,000 persons participated in protests in 12 states, Canada, the Netherlands and Japan.

The demonstrations were held three months after an accident released a radioactive cloud and shut down the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

More than 500 persons were arrested Sunday at a nuclear plant site near the Long Island community of Shoreham, N.Y., where 15,000 demonstrators took part in an anti-nuclear rally. Former Chicago Seven defendants Jerry Rubin and David Dellinger and Joyce Berland, a daughter of former U.S. Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, were among those arrested.

At least 119 persons were arrested at the North Anna power plant near Louisa, Va., 100 at the Marble Hill nuclear plant in southern Indiana, and 29 at the site of a plant near Moscow, Ohio.

Killer not a professional

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. bore few of the trademarks of a professional killing, several federal agents involved in the investigation have been quoted as saying.

Wood, 63, was killed Tuesday by a sniper who fired a single .243-caliber bullet into the judge's spine. He is believed to be the first federal judge ever assassinated while in office.

A .243-caliber bullet is usually fired from a high-powered deer rifle, although FBI officials have refused to speculate on the type of weapon used in the slaying. FBI lab technicians have said they cannot determine from how far away the shot came.

It was the second time in seven months a Western District of Texas official connected to massive West Texas narcotics smuggling cases has been ambushed. Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr escaped serious injury when his car was riddled by bullets Nov. 21 as he drove to work.

FBI officials have refused to comment on whether they believe the two assaults are connected. Wood was nicknamed "Maximum John" because of his stiff sentences in drug cases.

Kerr and U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd have said they feel Wood's assassination is connected to the massive drug smuggling investigations and have vowed to accelerate the crackdown.

Sources from the FBI, U.S. Marshals Service and the Justice Department told the San Antonio Express-News over the weekend that the assassination did not appear to have been a contract killing.

"We're not ruling out any possibilities, but it certainly doesn't appear to be the work of a professional killer," one investigator was quoted as saying.

"The small caliber of the murder weapon — which appears to be a type of gun not favored by hired killers — and the fact that there are far better guns for the purpose seems to make it doubtful it was a pro," he added.

Wood was killed in front of his townhome about 8:30 a.m. as he and neighbors were leaving for work.

The killing could have been the work of a relative or friend of someone Wood had sentenced to prison, one source speculated.

Indictments returned

The 31st District grand jury returned three indictments Friday, bringing to six the number of indictments returned in a two-day session.

John Stanley was indicted for theft by taking in connection with the theft of $432 in cash from a Pampa man in October 1978. Indictments were also returned against Sandra Murphree for theft by check of property in November 1978, and against Erlinda Curtis for an alleged theft by check of property incident in June 1978.

The grand jury postponed until June 14 any decision on the case of Donald Beistle, charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the May 19 shooting of Terry Brookshire, 22, of Pampa.

Brookshire was released from High Plains Baptist Hospital May 24 after undergoing surgery for abdominal wounds.

The grand jury will hear testimony from additional witnesses not present Friday, according to District Attorney Harold Comer.

Vorster resigns

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President John Vorster, accused of covering up a major government financial scandal, resigned today, Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha announced to Parliament.

The resignation of the 64-year-old Vorster came after the release of an investigative report on the scandal, which involves the alleged misuse of $60 million to $120 million in secret government funds earmarked for clandestine propaganda projects.

Pope opens fire on Communist bloc

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II came to Poland's holiest shrine today, upbraided the Communist government for denying the late Pope Paul VI permission to visit, and assailed what he called "the great moral threats" to human rights. It was the second time in two days he defied Eastern Europe's Communist leaders.

"He was the pope that did so much for the normalization of the life of the church in Poland, particularly with regard to the present arrangement of the territories to the west and to the north," John Paul II said of Paul VI, who sought twice to come to Poland but never received permission.

"He was the pope of our millennium. It was for the millennium (of the Polish church in 1966) that he wanted to be here as a pilgrim together with the sons and daughters of the Polish nation."

On the third day of his historic pilgrimage to his Communist homeland, the pontiff celebrated Mass at the Shrine of Mary at the hilltop Jasna Gora Monastery, the symbol of Polish Catholicism, and prayed.

"Mother of the church, grant that the church may enjoy freedom and peace in fulfilling her saving mission and that to this end she become mature with a new maturity of faith and inner unity."

"Help us to overcome opposition and difficulties. Help us to overcome the great moral threats against the fundamental spheres of life and love."

The pope said that justice and peace can only be protected through a respect "for the rights of peoples and of nations" and not be solved through "hatred, war and self-destruction."

The pontiff, clad in glistening white robes and skull cap, walked to a red-canopied platform looking out over a vast field filled with the faithful as a choir sang hymns.

So says poll

Gas crisis a hoax

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans say they would cut back on driving significantly if the gasoline shortage were real, but they remain overwhelmingly convinced the shortage is just a profit-making ploy by the oil companies, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

This is not to say people are treating current energy problems as minor. In fact, they now say energy concerns are just about as serious a national problem as the rising cost of living.

It's just that Americans are deeply suspicious of the major factors in the energy situation — the oil-producing countries, the oil companies and the government.

This suspicion and deep concern about how their lives could be changed by energy problems combine to give the public a split personality on energy.

On the one hand, three out of four Americans haven't had any difficulty getting gasoline in recent weeks. But that hasn't stopped millions of drivers from "topping off" their tanks in fear of possible shortages, the poll found.

The special AP-NBC News poll on energy matters interviewed 800 adults across the country by telephone May 29, after the Memorial Day weekend.

Nearly three out of four American drivers — 74 percent — said they would cut back their driving significantly if they were convinced the gasoline shortage were real. Twenty-three percent would not and 3 percent were not sure.

But the public doesn't think the gasoline shortage is real.

Sixty-five percent said the shortage is a hoax to get consumers to pay higher prices, while only 25 percent said it is real. Ten percent were not sure.

Despite this suspicion about the sources for the current gasoline situation, Americans say energy is one of the nation's top problems.

Asked what is the nation's top problem, 32 percent named the cost of living, leaving it in the top spot it has held for many months. Energy was picked by 29 percent. That's up from the 18 percent who chose energy in the AP-NBC News poll taken at the first of May.

Because of the margin of error inherent in a sample survey of 800 adults nationwide, there is no significant difference between the 32 percent naming inflation and the 29 percent naming energy as the No. 1 problem.

Crime was named by 10 percent and morality by 9 percent. The remainder were scattered among other issues or were not sure.

POPE JOHN PAUL II raises his arms to greet the huge crowd in front of the Jasna Gora monastery in Czestochowa, Poland, Monday. It is the third day of the Pope's visit to his homeland.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Unions sacrifice the individual

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The federal government's inherent inability to proceed with either discretion or delicacy when confronted with sensitive civil liberties matters is once again on display, in a highly publicized legal case.

The arrogant, heavy-handed behavior of both the Justice Department and the Energy Department could prove to be the undoing of federal efforts to ban the publication of a controversial magazine article on the hydrogen bomb.

There was surprising popular support for the government's position in March, when its attorneys went into federal court in Wisconsin to win a pair of judicial orders prohibiting the feisty Progressive magazine from printing the disputed story.

Although freedom of the press was a central issue in the court case, many of the nation's leading newspapers were publicly critical of the Progressive's position.

Indeed, the affidavit submitted to the court by the article's author, Howard Morland, suggests that he is in possession of a consuming curiosity, if not an unnatural fixation, about precisely how fusion is triggered in a hydrogen weapon - a process that hardly can be classified as a matter of compelling public interest.

But the Project for Open Government, a Washington-based public interest organization directed by attorney Theodore J. Jacobs, has just learned that the Justice Department has summoned the Federal Bureau of Investigation into the case.

While departmental attorneys are pursuing a civil case, FBI agents are conducting a criminal investigation, repeatedly interviewing everyone suspected of having received a copy of Morland's manuscript.

The FBI's criminal probe undoubtedly will have a "chilling effect" on those inclined to aid the Progressive and Morland in their defense yet unwilling to risk the antagonism, if not harassment, of federal law enforcement officers.

There is the high probability that material gathered by the FBI in its criminal investigation will wind up in the hands of the government lawyers conducting the still pending civil case - a clear abuse of FBI resources.

There's also the matter of the Energy Department's ex post facto classification of a report on the hydrogen bomb triggering mechanism, publicly available for almost four years on the shelves of the library at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico.

The 29-page document was declassified in July 1975. But when a researcher assisting in the preparation of a defense for the Progressive displayed an interest in the report in May of this year, it was suddenly seized and reclassified.

The government displayed its total insensitivity to the concept of a free press by proposing that a federal bureaucrat rewrite the magazine story to conform to the government's vague "national security" criteria.

When specificity was required, the government displayed its passion for secrecy by telling the court on March 9 that it objected to 2,190 words in the proposed article.

But on March 14 - only five days later - federal lawyers called for the excision of only 1,322 words. The prosecutors now are informally indicating that they're happy with the censorship of a mere 100 to 150 words.

The Progressive's editors still don't know which sections of the article are involved, however, because the Justice Department has classified the censored manuscript, its secret affidavits and legal briefs submitted to the court and even major portions of Morland's own affidavit.

Government officials have graciously agreed to grant security clearances to the Progressive's lawyers so they can prepare an appeal on the Wisconsin judge's decisions.

Proceeding true to form, the government is well on its way to dissipating the benefit of doubt given to it by those initially bothered by the troublesome aspects of publicly discussing the technical aspects of nuclear weaponry.

Texas oil outlook weighed by analysts

A look ahead to the U.S. oil geography of tomorrow - in fact, of 1990, only a decade away, has been presented in an article in the May-June issue of the Texas Business Review by James E. McKie, professor of economics at the University of Texas at Austin, and E. Victor Neimeyer of the Electric Power Research Institute.

Alternative futures for the oil industry reveals costs of transportation, reflecting the locations of markets, sources, and existing refineries, tend to pull additions to U.S. refining capacity away from the Texas Gulf Coast toward more eastern points on the Gulf and toward inland sites.

But, the authors wrote, economies arising in the Texas complex of refineries and petrochemical plants - with associated technical skills, support activities, and dependent industries - offset this advantage.

They added that a Texas seaport would also enhance the attraction of the Texas Gulf.

Yet all is not coming up roses in the future of the Texas Gulf Coast petroleum industry, for there is a wolf named taxes lurking in the marshes.

The authoritative writers in their dissertation traced the geographical oil pattern before 1970, gave details of the changes after 1970, the pattern in 1976, and scenarios for 1990.

They showed that after World War II the geographical flow of domestic crude oil and refined products in the United States took a form that changed little until the 1970's. Oil produced west of the Rockies was refined and consumed there. Imported crude oil made up the growing difference between domestic supply and demand in the area after 1960. Oil produced in the midcontinental area, including West Texas, flowed north to midwestern refineries; the remainder of the oil needed in that region was largely supplied by imported crude oil from Canada and by refined product shipments from other regions. Oil produced in the Gulf Coast region of Texas and Louisiana moved to Gulf ports, where it was either refined or transhipped to crude-oil carriers for movements to East Coast refineries. Although some refined products from the Gulf Coast were consumed within the region, most were shipped to other regions by pipeline, barge, and tanker, the principal destination being the East Coast. The growing deficit on the East Coast was met, the writers stated, by imports of crude oil (mostly from Venezuela until after 1970) and of refined products from the Caribbean and Europe.

Then came the 1970's with some major developments that have influenced the nation's oil geography: Crude oil production in the lower 48 states declined while demand grew; result, more reliance on imported oil, with the Midwest a major supplier; and crude ceased to move from the Gulf Coast to the East Coast in significant quantities. Suddenly, the Gulf Coast ports became import points rather than export points. The Canadian government began phasing out crude exports to the United States, diverting the supply to Eastern Canada, displacing imports into that area. Alaskan oil began to flow from Prudhoe Bay, eliminating oil imports into the American western region, even making some additional oil available east of the Rockies. The environmental protection movement limited the development of refining capacity on the East Coast, promoting flow of already refined products into that region from abroad and from the Gulf Coast.

The relatively independent markets of the West Coast are expected to become integrated with the rest of the country in the 1980's.

The scenarios for the 1990's include two superports on the Gulf Coast, more Alaskan production, additional refining capacity being allowed on the East Coast, a crude-oil pipeline linking California and Texas, another linking northern Washington State with the Midwest. New domestic refining capacity will be added inland because products from these locations do not compete directly with refined products that are shipped from the coastal refineries on the Gulf Coast through pipelines the East and Gulf Coast. In scenarios with limitations on importing refined products, incremental refining capacity is located on the East Coast and inland but not on the Gulf Coast, a result significant to Texas and Louisiana, the projection shows.

The dissertation points out the place in the future of the oil geography of Texas of a superport. It details other matters that would influence the shift, if any, including an eastward pull in the event Texas had no superport.

They wrote that new specific taxes on refinery and petrochemical plants in Texas would increase the vulnerability of the Texas Gulf complex to competitive sites in the new petroleum environment.

There we have it, in a rather general outline, the possibilities of a shift in the nation's oil shifting of the nation's oil geography. But Texas likely can cope with whatever changes come in petroleum's position in America if the industry is left to run its own business and not attacked by the wolves in the marshes, the one named taxes and the other named government regulation.

Gasoline by the liter might go down a little easier

So you don't care for the prospect of dollar-a-gallon gas, but would you buy it at 26.5-cents?

You may be if the oil industry acts on a suggestion by U.S. Metric Board. Pointing out that breaking the dollar barrier under any circumstances is going to require adjustment of existing pumps capable of registering prices up to 99-cent top, the board thinks this would be a dandy time to take an important additional step and convert to measurement by liter rather than gallon.

At 3.785 liters to a gallon, the 26.5-cent price would work out to - you guessed it - the equivalent of a dollar a gallon.

Drawing millions of motorists into the metric system would be the biggest step so far toward American conversion to metrics. The process is already farther advanced than the general public may be aware, with a number of key industries - from autos to soft drinks - rapidly introducing meters, grams and liters into production operations.

While direct savings, as exemplified by the gasoline price, may not be apparent to individuals, the long-term benefits to the economy should be substantial, according to the Metric Board. These would be most immediately apparent in world trade, where U.S. business with the rest of the largely-metric world could be expected to pick up.

The United States, according to one optimistic prediction, should be "substantially metric" by 1990.

Just in time, probably, for dollar-a-liter gasoline.

By OSCAR COOLEY
Most labor unionists do not profess to be socialists, yet it was union labor that established socialism in Great Britain. And it is labor unionism that is impelling the United States to follow in the British footsteps.

A few union leaders such as William Wimpinger, president of the Machinists, make no bones of their socialism. Wimpinger wants a government-owned oil company and government importation of oil.

He is ambitious to see "a total redistribution of the nation's wealth and income." Fortune magazine believes Wimpinger "will play a vanguard role in shaping labor targets for the 1980's."

And what does Wimpinger see as one of those targets? "The head of the AFL-CIO (which he would like to be) should be the second most powerful man in America," he says.

I have said and will repeat: The American people have been sold a bill of goods in the shape of organized labor.

Moved by sympathy for the working man during the great depression, Congress enacted laws conferring power upon labor unions - power to force employers to "bargain collectively," that is, to do business with unions rather than with workers; power to force majority rule upon workers; power to take money from workers who are not willing to pay it voluntarily; power to deny workers jobs; power to overrule public authorities, forcing the union will upon school boards and village and city councils.

Americans never have allowed themselves to be pushed around by anybody as they have by labor union leaders, all in the name of sympathy for the working man, the "underdog."

The working man deserves no special sympathy. He is not an underdog. He is just one American among many doing his best to make an honest living. He enjoys the same freedom all Americans enjoy, no more and no less. He merits the same respect, but no more.

The notion that in the benighted past American workingmen were treated unfairly, abused as a class, betrayed and exploited, is hogwash. Nowhere in the world has the workingman had such a fair deal as in America. And nowhere have workers made more of their opportunity than in America.

The theory that the traditional American worker who sold his services as an individual was overworked and underpaid, disadvantaged and victimized, is without foundation. It has been fuel for the fires of demagogues and agitators, word singers and sensation mongers, for decades, but there has been nothing to it.

The happiest worker is the worker who finds his own job, bargains individually with his employer, collects all his wages in cash and spends it as he sees fit. "Collective bargaining," fetish or union chiefs and legislators for 40 years is a mirage a smooth phrase by which the Meany's and the Wimpingers rob the worker of his individual freedom of contract.

Now the unionists are converging upon the teaching profession, the people who mold the minds of the young. They are promoting union elections in every school district, hoping to persuade a majority of those voting to cast a vote for collective bargaining, which in effect means a vote to force every teacher in the district to join and/or pay dues to the union. In every state they are seeking laws to promote this end.

Someyears ago, they captured the National Education Association, or professional society of teachers, and converted it into a labor union. Even after the conversion took place, many teachers continued paying dues to what they considered was merely an association to elevate the standards of their profession.

China's generation gap

By DON GRAFF
Has the younger generation ever been anything but a problem? Anywhere?

Its members reject the values of their parents and question institutions that are the pillars of society. They know little about the philosophic basis of that society and the principles that make it work. And worse, they don't want to know.

All they're interested in is an easy living. It's enough to make their elders despair of the future. In this case, make that Chinese elders, who are commencing to express concern publicly as to what they may have wrought in seeking to accelerate China's modernization. They may have opened the door too widely to the capitalist West.

In a recent testing of secondary school students in Peking, for one serious example, many were unable to explain satisfactorily the differences between capitalism and Marxism and the numerous advantages of the latter.

The test result, as reported in The New York Times, is not an isolated development but symptomatic of a widespread loss of enthusiasm for the class struggle and growing interest in a higher-class standard of living. The Chinese leadership's highly publicized recent contacts with the West apparently have made the folks back home vividly aware that there can be more to the good life than dialectic.

To get them back into acceptable socialist line, the Chinese press and radio have launched a propaganda campaign stressing the great improvements in People's Republic over the bad old days of pre-communist China. The problem is that the segment of the population at which the campaign is directed, those born since the Communist takeover, who happen to be the majority, has no recollection of the old days. Instead, they have rising expectations thanks to Peking's sudden recognition of the rest of the world and only the prevasive grayness of today's proletarian China to compare with the newly perceived delights of Western life.

It's a serious problem for the Chinese establishment. First wall posters and foreign tourists, and the next thing you know blue jeans and skateboards.

But perhaps Peking might try looking at it this way. Western societies, after all, have been worried about their younger generations for generations. That China should now be doing so, and so shortly after opening its door, can be taken as an indication of how rapidly it is succeeding in its goal of catching up with the West.

Italy Votes

For weeks, campaign workers have been putting up posters, hoping to attract voters in Italy's general election, which concludes today. In its long history, Italy has been ruled by emperors and popes, dictators and kings. The country became a republic in 1946, after dictator Benito Mussolini was overthrown. Since then, the large number of political parties in Italy has made it difficult for any one party to govern effectively. The agreement of five political parties to work together in Parliament fell apart two months ago and the most recent government had to call elections two years ahead of schedule. The government to be formed after today's vote will be Italy's 42nd since World War II.

Security tight at Henley trial

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — District Judge Noah Kennedy has ordered tight security for the second murder trial of Elmer Wayne Henley, 23, accused in a two-year homosexual torture and death spree in Houston.

The case, which gets under way today, was moved here after a new trial was ordered by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Henley was 18 when he was convicted of murder the first time and sentenced to six 99-year terms. He won a new trial when the appeals court ruled the judge in that trial should have allowed a defense motion for a change of venue hearing.

Prosecutors have said they do not anticipate much difference in their strategy from the first trial.

Kennedy said spectators will be allowed in and out of the courtroom only during recesses. The judge also said Nueces County Sheriff Solomon Ortiz has ordered metal detector inspections.

The murders of 27 youths came to light in August 1973 when Henley called police to tell them he had shot and killed Dean Arnold Corli, a 33-year-old Houston Light and Power employee.

Henley told police the shooting came after a night of terror during which a teen-age boy and girl were handcuffed to a "torture board" where they were to be sexually abused by Corli.

The Corli death was ruled self-defense after Henley disclosed his relationship with the older Corli. It began, Henley said, when he was 15 and was told that Corli would pay youths to attract boys to his Houston Heights home.

It ended when Henley shot Corli and led investigators to 27 bodies of youths allegedly tortured and killed by Corli.

Sheriff's deputies keeping watch

Dam on private lake could collapse

SMITHVILLE, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's deputies kept watch on an earthen dam containing rain-swollen Indian Lake early today after it sprung a leak and threatened to collapse.

The dam on the private, 10-acre lake began leaking Sunday morning, but officials said the situation posed no great danger to people downstream.

Bastrop County Sheriff I.R. Hoskins said even if the dam should give way, the water would run into the swollen Colorado River without causing serious damage "except maybe to some livestock."

Hoskins stationed a deputy on the dam overnight to report any sudden shifts. At last report the water in the lake was rising, the outflow pipe of the dam was clogged and the leak at the base was growing.

Recent heavy rains increased the flow into the lake and washed away large chunks of the dam along a 100-foot-long section. Hoskins said a waterflow estimated at 500 gallons a minute was gradually eroding the dam.

Property owners and residents downstream were warned of the situation, but deputies said no one was ordered to evacuate.

Noble Campbell, an engineer with the Texas Department of Water Resources at the scene, said when the leak was discovered Sunday morning, "it was a small hole with a flow of water about as big as your thumb."

"Now it's flowing at a fast clip at the toe of the dam, about two feet wide. The flow of water has eroded a good-sized cavity," he said late Sunday.

"If the leak is under the dam and started pushing through the conduit (drainpipe) under pressure, it would collapse."

About a dozen residences, mostly mobile homes, are downstream along Gravelly Creek, the waterway that drains the rural area around the lake, located about eight miles east of Smithville.

Divers scoured the lake bottom searching for the source of the leak without success as the lake level rose to about half a foot below the top of the spillway Sunday afternoon.

Hoskins said lake would eventually lose most of its water, but he said, "they (the lake owners) are going to have to drain it anyway to fix that pipe."

The lake, surrounded by several new homes, is fed by two creeks, the Gravelly and Pin Oak, which were flowing at least two feet above normal level.

Officials theorized the problem developed when a six-inch drainpipe became clogged with debris and could not be opened to discharge the rising lake water.

Campbell said, "We would still hope there's a possibility to save it (the dam). If it is a leaking conduit, the dam will probably be all right. Otherwise, the flow will continue to erode the dam and might wash it out."

Campbell said he was staying at the dam and keeping radio contact with the sheriff's office in Bastrop, 16 miles from Smithville.

"We do not think there will be anybody in danger. There are no villages or towns. The local sheriff has been here for many years and they say there's nobody in the stream channel. There is a low-water crossing they will watch."

Jack Haley hospitalized

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Jack Haley, best remembered as the Tin Man in "The Wizard of Oz," was listed in guarded condition at UCLA Medical Center's coronary care unit after collapsing at his home, the hospital said.

Family members said Sunday the 79-year-old performer was seriously ill and has suffered from circulatory problems for nearly six months.

Haley was treated by paramedics called to his Beverly Hills home Saturday afternoon and then was taken to the medical center, hospital spokeswoman Barbara Stone said.

Haley is a veteran of 50 movies, most of them musicals and comedies. He was active on the Broadway stage decades ago and spent his early years in vaudeville.

"Wake Up and Live" was his personal favorite of all the movies in which he appeared. But he was best known to millions for his 1939 role as the Tin Man who wanted a heart in the MGM film "The Wizard of Oz."

After his retirement from films, Haley became wealthy through real estate and has been active in raising money for down-and-out entertainers.

Nacogdoches recovering from weekend floods

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Most flood victims were back in their homes today, surveying damage from weekend rains that sent two streams spilling out of their banks and into homes and businesses.

Water was reported as deep as 15 feet in one part of town during the height of the flood Saturday. A day later, police said all floodwaters were gone.

"We've had sunshine all day long, and there is no water left," said dispatcher Deborah Adams. "Some roads are still torn up. But it's all over unless it starts raining again."

Storms unleashed four inches of rain early Saturday, and the runoff sent the Lanana and Banita creeks flowing into city streets, chasing many residents to higher ground. No one was injured as police and other law officers evacuated 300 to 400 persons by 1 p.m. Saturday.

"Most of them have gone back now," said Nancy Gentry of the Goddard Ministry, one of the buildings used as a shelter for flood victims. "A lot of victims found other places to stay or were able to get back to their homes. We only have two left here tonight."

The flood raced through narrow corridors of low-lying land along each creek, swept away cars, twisted houses off their foundations and stranded persons on top of cars and on the second floor of apartment buildings.

Horsemen dragged away dead cattle — the only victims of the rapid current — from under bridges damaged by tons of debris.

Most of the evacuees came from the apartment complexes near the Banita Creek. But all along the two streams authorities worked for five hours to evacuate stranded residents.

The sheriff's department asked for volunteers with boats to help in the evacuation.

"One man was swept off a bridge," said Fire Chief Charles Duffin.

LeBaron to go before judge

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Polygamist leader Ervil LeBaron was expected to be brought before a Texas magistrate to say whether he would waive extradition to Utah to face murder charges, Utah authorities said.

LeBaron, 54, has been held in Webb County Jail at Laredo, Texas, since Mexican authorities turned him over to the FBI at the border Friday. He was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Tom Goodwin, who set bail at $100,000.

He is wanted in Utah and California on murder and conspiracy charges. He is accused of masterminding the slaying of rival polygamist leader Rulon Alford in Murray, Utah, May 10, 1977.

LeBaron, held on a federal charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for murder, was questioned in his cell Sunday by FBI agents, a jail spokesman said.

Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney David Yocum and Utah officers sent to Laredo said it was thought likely LeBaron would be brought before Goodwin today to say whether he would waive his right to a removal hearing.

Murray, Utah, Detective Gary Pedersen, sent to Laredo to testify if a removal hearing is held, quoted LeBaron as saying he talked with Denver attorney Floyd Marks by telephone. Marks could not be reached Sunday night. Pedersen and Webb County jailers said no attorney visited LeBaron.

Pedersen said LeBaron did not indicate whether he'd been advised to waive extradition or what he planned to do.

Tobacco firms defy challenge from Califano

WASHINGTON (AP) - Tobacco company executives are thumbing their noses at a challenge from the federal government's No. 1 health official to spend $80 million to encourage children not to smoke. The major cigarette makers maintain their $800 million advertising and promotion budgets are not directed at children and do not influence youngsters' decisions to smoke. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. in an April 26 speech in San Francisco, challenged cigarette makers "to put some of their advertising dollars where their corporate rhetoric is." He suggested that the companies spend 10 percent of their ad budgets on a campaign to urge children not to smoke and to warn young women of the danger smoking poses to their unborn babies. Responding to that challenge, one tobacco executive, Lorillard President Curtis H. Judge, quoted a passage from the recent Surgeon General's Report on Smoking and Health that said "the influence of the mass media in the initiation of smoking is difficult to determine." "Mass media advertising makes an easy and tempting target, but its influence is uncertain," Judge wrote Califano. "Everyone, including Lorillard, agrees that children should not smoke. However, to our knowledge, nobody knows why children begin to smoke, including experts in the field," Judge said. Although the new government survey released April 26 showed the percentage of teen-age smokers had fallen since 1974 from 16 percent to 12 percent, Califano said there were 1.7 million girls and 1.6 million boys between ages 12 and 18 who were regular smokers. Raymond J. Mulligan, president of the Liggett Group, responded to Califano that it should be left to mothers and fathers to use "their own free will in discouraging their children from starting to smoke or continuing smoking."

Mulligan added that government intrusion would only encourage many young to do "the very opposite of that which the government advocates." Mulligan said the industry does not try to encourage anyone under 21 to smoke.

fire report

9:55 a.m. Sunday - Firemen were called to 844 Barrow St. in response to a residential fire. Cause of the blaze was listed as a leaking gas line. Heavy damage was reported to the bathroom, with heavy smoke damage to the remainder of the house. 4:55 p.m. Sunday - Call to 901 Faulkner St. in response to a dumpster trash fire. No damage was reported. 7:20 p.m. Sunday - Call to 2317 Duncan St. in response to a smoke alert. Smoke caused by a short in air conditioner. No fire; no damage.

Weather Texas weather

By The Associated Press Showers and thundershowers were forecast for southern and southwestern portions of Texas today. Showers and thundershowers began developing before dawn in South Texas around Del Rio, Laredo and Alice. Forecasts called for more such activity throughout South Texas and Southwest Texas. Skies were to be cloudy in the southern half and clear to partly cloudy across the northern half. Highs were to range from the 80s in the northern half of the state to near 90 in the southern half up to the middle 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Skies were mostly cloudy over the southern half of the state today and mostly clear over the northern half. Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 58 at Dalhart to 76 at both Brownsville and McAllen.

National weather

Flood warnings were in effect early today for portions of the Atlantic Coast states, including Virginia where two children were swept to their deaths Sunday by swirling floodwaters. Virginia State police said Heidi Schmidt, 12, and her brother, Matthew, 7, drowned when they were swept off a footbridge near the Rockbridge County resort complex at Natural Bridge.

TUESDAY'S FORECAST predicts areas of rain in parts of the Northwest and some Gulf Coast states, and areas of showers in parts of the Northeast, parts of Minnesota and the Dakotas and in parts of the South from Florida to Texas.

Indian women protest dowries

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Indian women leaders have started campaigning against the outlawed dowry system, a tradition still practiced here despite charges it results in the murder of hundreds of young girls annually by dissatisfied husbands and in-laws. "Women are not for burning," chanted 150 demonstrators last weekend outside the home of New Delhi family accused of fatally burning a young bride. The family refused to come out and talk to the protesters. Satpal Singh and Tarvinder Kaur were married last December. In the tradition of Indian families, the 24-year-old bride moved into the home of her husband's parents. She told the police just before she died two weeks ago she was watching television when her mother-in-law crept up behind her and doused her with kerosene and her sister-in-law set her ablaze. The screaming woman, her sari in flames, rushed out of the room and collapsed. Neighbors smothered the flames with a blanket and her in-laws took her to a hospital where she died.

Police said Tarvinder accused her in-laws of burning her because they didn't consider her dowry adequate. She said she had been subjected to weeks of "threats, abuse and torture." Singh's family denied the charges and said Tarvinder was not watching television but was cooking when her sari caught fire. Tarvinder's parents had given the bridegroom the equivalent of $2,500 in cash, a motor scooter, a television set, a refrigerator and gold jewelry. The police said the dead girl's family reported Singh's parents demanded more money. Police are still investigating and have not made any arrests.

"Hundreds of young girls are burned or beaten to death every year by their husbands and mothers-in-law over the issue of dowry," said Suman Krishan Kant, head of the Women's Grievances Society. In a recent interview, she claimed the number of women burned to death in the Indian capital has increased in the past three years. The 1975 figure of 350 had doubled by 1978. She acknowledged that some deaths were genuine accidents. But she claimed the most common explanation given by in-laws is the one the Singhs gave - the bride's sari, the traditional over-garment of flowing veil, caught fire while she was cooking. Although banned by law, the dowry system still is widely practiced with the bride's family giving cash and gifts to the groom and his family. The amount a bridegroom can get varies from area to area and depends on his qualifications, job and family status.

Dear Abby
by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter from UPSET IN BALTIMORE whose 28-year-old son was in love with a 62-year-old woman. Besides telling the mother to stay out of her son's love life, you should have informed her that this asinine prejudice against older women is an American cultural hangup.

Winston Churchill's mother is said to have been alluring to young men when she was in her 60s. In fact, she married a man younger than her son.

SENSIBLE IN GA.

DEAR SENSIBLE: The younger man-old woman combination has had some notable successes. Ask Gloria Swanson, Merle Oberon, Ruth Gordon, Mary Pickford, Sybil Burton, Lucille Ball, Cher's mother and Gloria Steinem.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl and I'm being forced against my will to go to summer camp again. I went last year and hated it.

My folks keep telling me how lucky I am that they can afford to send me, but I don't feel lucky. I feel like a girl whose parents want to get rid of her for two months.

My mother says if I don't go to camp I will have to sit on the porch all summer. What should I do?

HATES CAMP

DEAR HATES: Go, dear. But first get rid of that negative attitude. Most people have about as good a time as they make up their minds to have.

DEAR ABBY: My husband dresses up in a shirt and tie and vested suit for work every day. He really looks sharp. But the minute he comes home he changes into ragged jeans and a dirty T-shirt. Then he comes to the dinner table in those grubby clothes.

I once asked him if he couldn't be a little more presentable for dinner, and he said: "What for? Nobody's here." (We have two teen-age children.)

Yesterday I again said something about the way he looked at the dinner table, and one of the kids said, "Don't hassle him, Mom. He has a right to wear what he wants."

Who is right?

LEXINGTON LADY

DEAR LADY: Not you, Mom. Your husband has the right to be comfortable at home, but why must he wear ragged jeans and a dirty T-shirt? They make some sharp looking jeans and T-shirts. Surprise your man with some good-looking leisure clothes for Father's Day and you'll all be happier. (P.S. And when he's in a good mood, inform him that you and the children are "somebody.")

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FAITHFUL READER IN WOBURN, MASS.": From your letter I would suggest that you go into selling. (The difference between rape and romance is sometimes salesmanship.)

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

FIX-IT-FAST

Just a little learning about screws saves bucks pilot hole countersink counterbore

A screw is a better fastener than a nail because it holds tighter and you can take the work apart without damaging it simply by unscrewing the screw.

The most common mistakes people make in driving screws are the use of the wrong-sized screwdriver and failure to drill a pilot hole for the screw. Pilot holes are especially important for screws with large shanks because they make the screw easier to drive and prevent splitting of the wood.

You will need these tools and materials: Screw of proper size and screwdriver to match. This should take about two minutes.

1. Bring the two pieces of wood to be joined by screws into perfect alignment.
2. Locate point at which you want to drive screw. This should be far enough from edge of work (usually at least 1/4 inch) to prevent splitting of wood.
3. Tap nailset or large nail at this point to mark start of hole.
4. If using thin-shanked screw in soft wood, no pilot hole is necessary. Place screw in starter mark and hold it upright. Be sure screw is straight. Use screwdriver to turn screw clockwise into the wood. Turn until screwhead is flush with wood surface.
5. For larger-shanked screws and harder wood, use drill bit one-half the diameter of the screw shaft to drill a pilot hole. Then drive screw into pilot hole. Screw will turn easier if you lubricate it first by rubbing shank on bar of soap.
6. For neatest job, use a counterbore or countersink drill bit. The countersink is a drill bit which drills a pilot hole with a tapered top to receive the screw head. The counterbore drills a deeper hole for the head, so the finished work, the screwhead is below the surface of the wood. You finish job by filling hole over the screwhead with wood putty or a wood plug.

Dr. Lamb
lawrence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 35-year-old female. About seven months ago I went to a gastroenterologist because I was having trouble with my stomach and bowels. I had several tests which included an upper GI, gallbladder examination and gastroscopic examination, ultra sound, a barium enema and a sigmoidoscopy. All of these were normal so my doctor said I had a spastic colon. He put me on Librax three times a day.

This lasted about three months before I started feeling better. Now I have the problem again. I feel so sick, I thought maybe there was a special diet or foods I should not eat. My symptoms are frequent bowel movements which are loose, nausea, pain in the back and sometimes a hollow feeling in my stomach. I had a very sour taste in my mouth. Otherwise, I'm a very healthy person — very energetic and not used to feeling like this so I'm pretty disgusted. I don't know where to go from here and I thought maybe you could help give me some answers on spastic colon.

DEAR READER: Many people who write to me now talk about their medical examinations and refer to having an upper or lower GI.

For some of my readers who may not be familiar with that terminology, that means an X-ray examination of the upper gastrointestinal tract which includes the esophagus, stomach and duodenum. A lower GI refers to an X-ray examination with a barium enema of the lower gastrointestinal tract, which usually means the colon and perhaps the very end of the small bowel.

Since you've already had gallbladder studies and your stomach has been examined and all the other procedures, your doctor can be fairly confident that you don't have any anatomical illness or something that would show up in that manner. That's why he decided you had a spastic colon.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable Or Spastic Colon And Constipation. It will give you a great deal of information about diet and methods of training your colon so you will have less difficulties. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY: Small black ants are driving me crazy. They are in the bathroom, on the dining table and in the summer they get all over the kitchen. I have tried everything I know of and nothing gets rid of them. Can anyone help me? — MRS. B.C.M.

DEAR MRS. B.C.M.: I hope one of the following letters from readers will help you. Recently I had some of those little black ants and after I killed them with a commercial spray I put cucumber skins around and have not seen them again. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY: Ants do not like coffee grounds so save them after you have brewed your coffee and then pour them around the outside of the house until they are about 1 inch high and 2 inches wide. When dry they roll and the ants give up trying to climb them. They also hate the smell when the grounds are wet. — TERESA

DEAR POLLY: My day is ruined when I get up and find my sink full of ants. I do not like the smell of regular bug killers in my kitchen so I wet a paper towel and wipe out the ants and then use a kitchen cleanser with chlorinol to clean the sink. It works so well I now sprinkle this powder on the floor where they come in.

Regarding odors, I bought some pajamas that smelled to high heaven and I tried everything. Nothing worked until someone suggested washing them in diaper detergent and it worked. — GEE KAY

Irwin Allen: Hollywood's master of disaster

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There's one thing you have to say for Irwin Allen: he's not one to leave bad enough alone.

Hollywood's master of disaster has given us fire, flood, upside-down ships and swarms of bees. Now, in "The Day the World Ended," Allen is giving us a bargain basement deal — three for the price of one.

This one has a volcanic eruption, an earthquake and a tidal wave. It is all set, supposedly, on an idyllic tropical island where there is a fancy resort hotel. And the hotel's staff and guests are the people we follow as calamity follows calamity to rain trouble (plus lava) on their beautiful heads.

They had already shot much of this in Hawaii, but now they were back in the studio. And, on a huge soundstage, Allen's artists and builders had created a sight to behold.

High up was a slender, swaying bridge, crossing a jungle chasm. Trees, rocks, waterfalls. The one thing the camera won't see is the net that is stretched across the set, beneath the bridge, to catch anybody who happens to fall off.

It is night. Molten lava (really only more from Hollywood's brilliant special effects people) boils along at the bottom of the chasm.

"We've already lost a few people," Allen says. "Not literally lost, of course, but a few people have fallen through. The clapper boy, for one."

The bridge has many slats out, theoretically the victim of the disaster, and the actors, edging their way across, are very wary. "I'd better get up there," Allen says. "My wife's going to be going over on the next take."

Allen's wife, Sheila, is doing a small part in the film, and in this scene, William Holden is helping her across the bridge to what they laughingly call safety. (There is no such thing as true safety in an Allen film.)

The technicians were preparing for the take, which was to have tongues of flame leaping up the chasm walls. How do you make a tongue of flame? You paint tongue-shaped deposits of "glue" — flammable material — where you want the fire and then, when the director (James Goldstone) calls for action, you simply ignite it.

The men with their big pots were painting the "glue" on the trees and walls of the chasm. Other special effects people checked explosives designed to go off in specific areas. More men revved up smoke and wind machines.

As all this went on, Jacqueline Bisset quietly read a script at the edge of the chasm. She is looking for her next job; actors are always reading scripts for their next possible part while doing this one.

"The one I'm reading," Jackie said, "is quite a bit heavier than this one. One does what one has to do for one's emotions. This is fun, but I do want something heavier next, but it's not easy to find."

She said this film is fun, even though it involves a lot of physical work. But, she adds, "compared to 'The Deep,' anything is easier."

Jackie is one of Allen's usual assortment of big names. He has no trouble getting big names, because the actors know his films are almost always hits, they are fun to do, they pay well, they give them a fun part between heavier things.

So, in this, Allen has assembled Paul Newman, Jacqueline Bisset, William Holden, Edward Albert, Red Buttons, Barbara Carrera, James Franciscus, Ernest Borgnine and Burgess Meredith.

Meredith strolls over like the others, to watch the take. It's fun to see all the technicians work, and then watch the soundstage erupt in fire and smoke.

Joan Vass' melange of interests

NEW YORK (NEA) — Joan Vass doesn't understand the question. Any question because she doesn't understand why you don't already know the answer. For instance: "Why did you major in philosophy at Vassar and the University of Wisconsin?"

Her eyebrows go up but she continues filing her nails, sitting cross-legged on a couch in her penthouse loft on the lower East Side, a smudge of green eye make-up noticeable under one eye, her hair short and ragged, black and gray.

"I want-ed to learn to think," she says in a slow whine, trying to contain her impatience. Then she gears into a harangue.

"Philosophy and the arts have been the major interest in my life. I worked for the Museum of Modern Art for eight years, not always as a curator, and I've been an art columnist. I think it's my responsibility to be interested in my own time and in the future, besides which I love modern art."

Of course she hadn't ever thought about designing until five years ago. That's when she and some friends decided to help some elderly women they knew; very poor, not the type to go on welfare; good with crocheting needles.

So Ms. Vass — mother of four aged 24-to-34, married to a painter, passionate about architecture, plants, music, animals and people (because they make art) — designed some things for the ladies to crochet, to be sold solely for their profit.

They were mufflers, hats, bags, which friends bought for Christmas gifts and which she finally sold to Bendel's because, "I honestly do believe in altruism but after awhile I had to pay the rent." And that's how she went into business.

But don't be silly! She doesn't just design knitted and crocheted things anymore! Look around! Her seamstresses, knitters and crocheters do everything because she designs everything: dresses, sweaters, vests, trousers... And where do you think she gets her seamstresses, etc.?"

Actresses, divorcees, widows, women in graduate school — that's who answers the ads because this kind of work is wonderful for those women with those skills.

Old postage stamps can help kids

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The canceled postage stamps you have just tossed into a trash container will buy a cup of milk or a bowl of rice for a hungry youngster.

"If every dollar's worth of stamps represents 10 plates of food, just think what I could do with a million stamps a week," said Lilamani Perera, who has found a way to convert them into cash.

The stamps are sold through the Salvation Army here to dealers who, in turn, sell them to collectors.

"The money is then used to purchase food for the children of Bangladesh," Ms. Perera said. Since 1976, when she started the program, more than 30,000 meals have been served to the needy.

Her list of contributors spans the 50 states and takes in 26 foreign nations.

An 11-year-old boy, after saving stamps for five years, mailed them to Ms. Perera with this explanation: "Them stamps meant a lot to me but I know they're go to a good cause."

A Charlotte, N.C., woman has sent in more than 12 million canceled stamps since 1977, and another family donated the collection it had been putting together for 30 years.

"I've always felt that the Lord has guided me to lead this program," said Ms. Perera, a native of Colombo, the capital of Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon).

After completing a bachelor's degree in sociology from Berea College, she worked in Lexington's community-action program before enrolling at the University of Louisville's Institute of Community Development, where she received a master's degree.

Women who couldn't attend were asked to mail canceled stamps to the organization to help meet expenses.

TEXAS' RONNIE GARDENHIRE slides into second base safely during first inning action Sunday in the NCAA College World Series at Omaha. Defending for Mississippi State is

Meet UT next

Razorbacks rally past Arizona

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER AP Sports Writer OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Randal Carter remembers the disappointment he felt when, as a junior college baseball player, the University of Arizona ignored him. So when Carter saw a chance to get back at the Wildcats, he made the most of the opportunity. Entering the game in the sixth inning, Carter ignited two rallies with hits to help Arkansas come from behind to beat Arizona 10-3 in the second round of the College World Series Sunday night. The victory puts Arkansas, rated seventh nationally, into a Tuesday night game against Southwest Conference rival Texas, the nation's No. 1 team. The Razorbacks and Longhorns are the only unbeaten teams left in the series. "I went to junior college in Arizona and wanted to go to either Arizona or Arizona State," said Carter, a junior who plays right field and third base. "I wrote to both of them, but I never got an answer. I really wanted to beat them (Arizona). It was kind of a personal vendetta." With his team trailing 3-1, Carter started a five-run rally in the seventh inning with a single. He then led off the eighth with a double that launched a four-run uprising. "Carter is so good and his attitude is super," said Coach Norm DeBryni, whose team also had to come from behind to beat Pepperdine 5-4 in the first round. "We like to have him in there. Every chance we get to get him in the lineup, we do." Texas, which has beaten Arkansas four times in five games this year, set up the showdown with the Razorbacks by rallying from a 2-0 deficit to beat No. 4 Mississippi State 8-2 Sunday night. But before Texas (55-6) and Arkansas (48-13) square off, two elimination contests will be played tonight. Fifth-rated Arizona (43-24) meets No. 3 Fullerton State (56-14) and Mississippi State (48-11) and Pepperdine (51-17). The losers of those games are out of the series.

Fullerton, which came into the series with a .330 team batting average but has yet to break loose, eliminated Connecticut 8-3 Sunday. Following that game, Connecticut Coach Larry Panciera announced his resignation. Panciera, 57, compiled a 297-150-4 record in 18 seasons as head coach. He recommended that Assistant Coach Andy Baylock be named his successor. Arkansas, which came from behind in all four of its regional playoff games, repeated that pattern Sunday night. The Razorbacks struggled against Arizona's Ron Sismondo before finally breaking loose in the seventh. "We weren't worried because after we see a pitcher for four or so innings, we make adjustments," Carter said. "Their starter was throwing the curve, but not for strikes, and a fastball. So I let the curve go and jumped on the fastball." Texas got some timely hitting from the last three batters in the lineup to derail Mississippi State, which has the loudest and most enthusiastic cheering section in the series. Mark Chelette and Andre Robertson, the seventh and eighth men in the order, each collected three singles and scored twice and No. 9 hitter Kevin Shannon had a two-run double and a single. "I changed my hitting style today," said Robertson, who also made several fine fielding plays at second base. "I went to a short, quick stroke. My first two hits were off sliders, then I hit a fastball." Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said Arkansas may have an edge in the series because of greater pitching depth, noting his team is without 10-game winner Ricky Wright, who hurt his shoulder in an intrasquad contest. Gustafson also said the four Texas victories against Arkansas could work in the Razorbacks' favor. "I think that's a psychological edge for Arkansas," he said. "But I think we'll play as hard and as well as we did in the past and I'm sure Arkansas will, too."

Spectacular Bid seeks victory

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent NEW YORK (AP) — Spectacular Bid goes after the Triple Crown in the Belmont Stakes Saturday — a strong favorite to score a third consecutive sweep of the racing jewels — and more attention may be centered on the men than the horse. The reason: The bad blood that sizzles between the Bid's pimply 19-year-old jockey, Ron Franklin, and the volatile 37-year-old Angel Cordero, one of the sport's toughest saddlemiths. The kid who rides the Bid apparently hasn't forgotten the lesson that Cordero and the veteran Jorge Velasquez inflicted on him in the Florida Derby in the spring, provoking Franklin's boss, Buddy Delp, to give him a royal chewing out in front of everybody. Cordero is still seething from the charge of "unsportsmanlike conduct" that the kid leveled at him after the Preakness May 19 — an accusation which race analysts thought was an unjustified slap. Franklin, boxed in by Cordero and Velasquez in the Florida Derby, pulled clear and won by 4 1/2 lengths. Nevertheless, Trainer Delp called his young rider an "idiot" and considered shifting to another rider. The teen-ager, forced to the middle of the track by Cordero on Screen King, also survived the Preakness encounter and won by 5 1/2 lengths. Screen King finished third. Franklin again will be aboard Spectacular Bid in the 1 1/2 mile Belmont while Cordero's schedule hangs in abeyance. Even if not re-assigned to Screen King, chances are he will get another mount or at least tangle with his less experienced rival in one of the preliminary races. They have been feuding all season, these two. In Florida, the kid was so embarrassed by the job the two older jockeys did on him that he used a racial slur in referring to them in the jockey room. Cordero was livid when he was told that Franklin had gone on TV and accused him of unfair tactics. Jockey feuds are as old as thoroughbred racing itself but they can be as risky as playing Russian roulette with cannon balls. At best, it's a dangerous sport with a pack of half-ton thoroughbreds thundering around the track at 45 MPH. Old timers still talk about the time Sonny Workman, a former pro boxer who rode for C. V. Whitney, decked the legendary Earl Sande back in the 1930s; the bitter rivalry between Bill Hartack and Manuel Ycaza; the whip-lashing stretch duel between Herb Fisher and Don Meade in the 1933 Kentucky Derby and the fierce rivalry between Lafitt Pincay aboard Affirmed and Jorge Velasquez on Alydar in their faceoff in the Travers at Saratoga last year. But no free-for-all compared with the 1933 Derby finish. Fisher had Head Play-in in the lead turning into the stretch when Broker's Tip shot through on the inside. Fisher tried to force Broker's Tip, with Meade aboard, in tight. At the eighth pole, Meade grabbed Fisher's saddle cloth. Fisher slashed Meade across the head with his whip. The two tugged at each other all the way down the stretch. Broker's Tip won by a nose. The brawl continued in the jockey room. Onlookers called it a draw.

At Kemper Open

Jerry McGee grabs win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry McGee's 1-stroke triumph in the Kemper Open golf tournament was, he said, "the best I've ever handled adversity." "I am more elated than I've ever been before in my life. This is the high point of my career." The victory, secured with a 2-stroke swing against Jerry Pate on the 17th hole, gave him a new lease on his golfing life. The negative thoughts are gone, said the man who, early last week, told a friend he was looking for a job and was considering leaving the PGA tour. His season had been marked by nothing but trouble. He played well early in the year, then suffered rib injuries that sidelined him for nine weeks. When he returned, his game was suffering. "I wondered if I'd ever come back, ever be able to play again, ever be able to make the top 60 (money winners) again." On top of that, he's being sued by his former sponsors. "I had a lot of things on my mind," McGee said after turning back Pate by a single shot with a closing round of 68 and a 272 total, 16 shots under par on the Quail Hollow Golf Course. The touring pros were playing the course for the final time. The tournament moves to the Washington, D.C. area next year. "Now all the negative thoughts are gone. I can relax and play the rest of the season and have fun. And," grinned McGee, who won this one on his wife's birthday, "happy birthday, Jill."

McGee, 35, who collected $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000, opened the tournament with a spectacular 61, blew the lead on the second day and had to play catch-up golf most of the way on the final nine holes. "When you shoot 61, you're supposed to win," he said. "After shooting 61, if I'd lost the tournament, well, I don't know whether I could have come back from that or not."

But he won it. And, he said, patience was the key. Trailing Pate by one shot, McGee missed birdie putts of about six feet on the 13th and 14th holes and left a longer one hanging on the lip of the cup on 15. "I was stroking the ball well," he said. "I knew if I was patient, if I kept on stroking it good, some of them would go it."

SPORTS

Seattle enjoying first NBA title

By ALEX SACHARE AP Sports Writer LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — While the Seattle SuperSonics bask in the glory of the first National Basketball Association championship in their 12-year history, a changing of the guard appears imminent for the ex-champion Washington Bullets.

The Sonics lost the first game of their championship series but came back to win four in a row, wrapping up the title with a 97-93 decision at the Capital Centre Friday night. They did it with an aggressive defense that limited the Bullets to 42 points in the second half as Seattle erased a 53-41 deficit. Guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson took care of the offense, scoring 23 and 21 points, respectively, including their team's last six points.

Williams and Dennis Johnson, the series' Most Valuable Player. They combined for 51.2 points, more than half Seattle's total, scoring almost at will against their Washington counterparts. And on defense they applied the aggressive double-teaming pressure that pestered the Bullets into 41 percent shooting and kept them under 100 points in four of the five games.

Both of Washington's starting guards, Tom Henderson and Kevin Grevey, are now free agents. It is probable that at least one will not be with the team next year, and Henderson is the more likely candidate to receive his traveling papers. On defense Henderson was badly burned by Williams, and on offense he was unable to keep the Bullets' attack running smoothly. If he wishes to sign with another team as a free agent, the Bullets won't object too strenuously.

Grevey, the Bullets' shooting guard, has been plagued by injuries that have hampered his development. Washington has another big shooting guard waiting in the wings in Roger Phegley, which doesn't help Grevey's bargaining position. Since the Bullets draft in 22nd position, the college ranks may not yield anyone of immediate assistance. Meanwhile, Seattle's veteran forward Paul Silas says he'll be back for another year, so the seven players who led the Sonics to the title will return intact. And if center Tom LaGarde shows know ill effects from his early season knee injury, Seattle would be strengthened up front.

For third straight victory Darrell Waltrip wins Texas 400 COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip is on a hot streak. In the past 10 days, the 32-year-old stock car chauffeur from Franklin, Tenn., has collected three victories in as many starts, and banked close to $100,000. Waltrip's streak started with a 300-mile sportsman race at Charlotte, N.C., continued the next day with a victory in the World 600, and extended itself Sunday with a triumph in the Texas 400 here at Texas World Speedway. "We're about as hot as the weather right now," a sweat-soaked Waltrip said in the Winner's Circle, flanked by his pit crew. "We're gonna enjoy it as long as we can, because you can go from the top right to the bottom in a hurry."

The signs look favorable for Waltrip's streak to continue. Next Sunday, Waltrip races at Riverside International Raceway in California, where he began the 1979 Grand National racing season with a victory. He said he plans to drive the same Chevrolet the rode to victory here. "You run a good race car just like a thoroughbred horse: you just keep using it until you use it up," said Waltrip, who nicknames his race cars to give them a personality all their own. "This one's Wicked Wanda. Today she's Wonderful Wicked Wanda." Waltrip and Wanda finished slightly more than a lap — two miles — ahead of runnerup Bobby Allison, who kept the pressure on Waltrip in the season's Winston Cup point standings through 14 of 31 races. Waltrip picked up another 185 points Sunday and leads 2,251 points to 2,188.

Jorgensen may be released

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Doctors say Mike Jorgensen of the Texas Rangers, recovering from a head injury, may be released today from the intensive care unit and placed back in a private room at Arlington Memorial Hospital. Jorgensen was reported improving Sunday. "He is doing very well," said ICU nurse Mary Hide. Jorgensen was hit in the head by a pitched ball one week ago. He was hospitalized Friday after suffering headaches and dizziness. Miss Hide said his condition had improved since Saturday night when the 30-year-old veteran was placed in intensive care. His condition remained "fair and stable." "The doctor says he may go back to his room tomorrow (Monday). But that's not a promise," Miss Hide said. "He's conscious, eating regular meals." She described his mood as "terrific."

Jorgensen was struck by a fastball pitched by Andy Hassler of the Boston Red Sox. The ball cracked Jorgensen's helmet, but x-rays did not reveal any serious injury to the former Gold Glove winner at Montreal who was signed by Texas as a free agent in January 1978.

Tate's victory surprises some

M M B A T H O Bophuthatswana (AP) — "Hoorah" was the banner headline in South Africa's main paper for blacks after John Tate of the United States battered former South African policeman Kallie Knoetze into a staggering mess. White-reading papers — which almost without exception had predicted a big victory by Knoetze — were more subdued, putting stress on Knoetze's good sportsmanship after the fight. The different coverage underlined an aspect of the Mmabatho fight that was rarely mentioned directly, but that helped bring 50,000 fans to this dusty town — an American black was fighting a one-time Afrikaner policeman.

NAIA title game tonight

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A week after the NAIA World Series began, 1977 champion David Lipscomb College and High Point College are to fight it out tonight for the 1979 title.

NAIA baseball history will be made if Lipscomb wins — the Bisons would become the first team invited to the tournament to take honors.

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics invited Lipscomb, a Nashville school, this year after Grand Canyon College, Phoenix, Ariz., withdrew when its players used champagne in a post-game victory celebration. The college's officials said school rules prohibit alcohol on campus.

NAIA rules provide that only winners of area playoffs shall play in the national tournament. NAIA spokesman Charlie Eppler said this is the first time a team was invited.

Sunday night, High Point's Danny Wilbur singled across the winning run as the Panthers scored four runs in the top of the 13th inning, then held on to defeat Point Park College 10-6 to win a spot in tonight's championship match, scheduled to start at 7:30 CDT. Point Park, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was knocked out of the double-elimination tournament.

Wilbur's single and Jeff Kennedy's bases-loaded double keyed the big inning for High Point, of High Point, N.C. Kennedy had four hits and drove in three runs. Wilbur collected two hits and three RBIs and teammate Neil Van Asch hit a three-run homer in the third. High Point had 21 hits, one short of the NAIA World Series record of 22.

Point Park's Ed Haberle had three singles, a double and two RBIs. The losers had 13 hits in all.

High Point's Jayson Crump, coming on in relief in the ninth inning, collected his eighth victory in as many decisions. Point Park's Paul Yourick, 7-1, took the loss.

The game was suspended after three innings Saturday night because of rain at Herschel Greer Stadium and was to be resumed Sunday afternoon. But rain pushed resumption of play back until 8 p.m.

The game's suspension from Saturday night to Sunday also bumped the championship game back from Sunday night to tonight.

Lipscomb — which has already beaten High Point 6-3 in the tournament — got a bye into the final game because the Bisons, beaten Friday night, were the tourney's last undefeated team. High Point, until this year, hadn't won a game in two NAIA World Series appearances, Eppler said.

Defending NAIA champion Emporia State of Kansas was eliminated this year in playoff action leading up to the tournament.

Major League roundup

Grubb extends hit streak to 16

By The Associated Press

In mid-May, they were calling John Grubb "the quiet man," perhaps because his batting average had dipped below .200 and the Texas Rangers were a listless third in the American League's West Division.

Then Grubb started to hit, and the team's fortunes improved. Grubb has hit in his last 16 games and Texas has moved into first place by percentage points.

"I hope I'm not known as the quiet man any more," said Grubb Sunday night after he had homered, singled twice and scored three runs in helping the Rangers to a 4-2 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles. "The last three weeks, I've been trying to pump up a little. I've always given 100 percent, but some people said I didn't look aggressive enough."

He was aggressive Sunday night, raising his average to a much louder .311 and collecting one-third of the Texas hits off Jim Palmer, 6-3.

Doyle Alexander, 3-3, held Baltimore to a run and five hits in seven innings. Jim Kern pitched the last two innings, survived Pat Kelly's ninth-inning RBI single, and recorded his ninth save.

Tigers 2, A's 0

Mark Wagner hit a sacrifice fly and Lance Parrish smacked a seventh-inning home run to back the five-hit pitching of Dave Rozema and carry Detroit to its eighth victory in nine games.

Rozema, pitching the Tigers' first complete-game shutout of the season, beat Oakland for the first time in six career decisions.

Yankees 3, White Sox 2

Roy White's 11th-inning single scored Thurman Munson from second base, carrying the Yankees past the White Sox.

Chicago had taken a 2-0 lead on Milt May's two-run double in the second, but New York came within a run on White's seventh-inning sacrifice fly and tied it in the eighth on a double by Munson.

Red Sox 8, Twins 2

Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk and Butch Hobson drove in two runs each as Boston blasted Minnesota. The Twins got a run in the eighth, when Bombo Rivera tripled and scored on a grounder, and another in the ninth on Ron Jackson's homer.

Royals 6, Brewers 1

Marty Pattin pitched a five-hitter and beat Milwaukee for the 13th time in 16 career decisions as the Royals clipped the Brewers. Darrell Porter and Pete LaCock each drove in one run and scored twice to pace Kansas City's eighth victory in 10 games.

Indians 5, Angels 3

Duane Kuiper's two-run single in the ninth gave Cleveland its winning margin over California. The Angels scored twice in their half of the inning on a run-scoring double by Carney Lansford and a sacrifice fly by Dan Ford.

The Indians' Toby Harrah, used as a designated hitter for the first time in his career, went 2-for-3 and reached base eight times in 14 trips to the plate in the three-game series.

Mariners 10, Blue Jays 5

Dan Meyer's third-inning grand slam powered Seattle past

Toronto. Meyer's fifth home run and second grand slam this season gave the Mariners the lead for good.

Pirates 7, Padres 0

Bruce Kison just missed a no-hitter for Pittsburgh, but Barry Evans doubled for San Diego in the eighth inning.

A 7-0 victory notwithstanding, Kison sulked and smarted afterwards about the scorer's call on the play. In fact, when Dan Donovan of the Pittsburgh Press ruled a hit on Evans' grounder past third baseman Phil Garner, Kison glared at the pressbox and raised a threatening fist skyward.

Kison couldn't complain about his hitting support, though. The Pirates backed him with five home runs — including two by Bill Robinson.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 4

Garry Templeton smashed four hits, stole two bases and scored three runs to lead St. Louis over Los Angeles. The Cardinals scored three unearned runs in the sixth inning, aided by an error by Los Angeles shortstop Bill Russell. Dodger right-hander Burt Hooton was victimized by three errors and gave up four unearned runs. The Cardinals' Pete Vuckovich struck out 12 and scattered seven hits.

Cubs 2, Giants 1

Dave Kingman hit his 19th homer and fourth in three days and Mike Krukow gained his first victory since May 4 as Chicago defeated San Francisco. The homer was Kingman's third hit of the day and broke a 1-1 tie. Krukow was touched for four hits in seven innings and improved his record to 2-4. Bruce Sutter worked the last two innings, recording his 10th save.

Phillies 6-2, Reds 4-12

Bake McBride hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning and Bud Harrelson's RBI single keyed a two-run rally in the ninth as Philadelphia beat Cincinnati in the opener of their double-header.

The Reds won the nightcap as George Foster drove in two runs with a pair of homers. Foster, who has hit four homers in his last three games, hit No. 9 of the season in the third inning and No. 10 with two men on in the seventh.

Mets 9, Braves 4

John Stearns drove in three runs with three hits, leading New York over Atlanta. Winner Pat Zachry limited the Braves to five hits through six innings and Skip Lockwood finished up for the Mets, completing a six-hitter and recording his ninth save.

Stearns had RBI singles in the first, when the Mets scored four times, and in the sixth and eighth innings. Willie Montanez hit his third homer of the season in the third inning with Stearns aboard to provide the eventual winning run for New York.

Astros 9, Expos 4

Joe Niekro gained his seventh straight victory and eighth of the season with relief help from rookie Bert Roberge and Jeff Leonard capped a four-run third inning with a two-run double as Houston defeated Montreal.

Niekro scattered nine hits in 72-3 innings before needing help from Roberge, who gained his first major league save.

UTEP takes NCAA title

Villanova runner highlights meet

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — For some winners at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, the motivation was to reach a new height or a new speed. For others, the seniors, it was to win in their last trip to the meet. For others it was a wish to overcome a longtime foe or test the capability of one's body.

Don Paige was one of those who wanted to see how far his body could carry him. It took him just far enough.

The lanky Villanova junior was the star of the three-day meet that ended Saturday at the University of Illinois. With a break of only 40 minutes Saturday, he won the 1,500-meter and 800-meter runs, the first time that has been done in 21 years.

Back in 1958, when the races were the mile and 800-yard runs, Ron Delany, also of Villanova, accomplished the rare double.

Paige won the 1,500 in 3:39.20 and the 800 in 1:45.16. He came from behind both times.

The 20 points Paige earned helped Villanova finish second with 48 points. Texas-El Paso had 50 after Friday's events and finished with 62. The Miners were so far ahead that Coach Ted Banks decided to rest both Suleiman Nyambui, Friday's winner of the 10,000-meter run, and Michael Musyoki, in the 5,000-meter run Saturday.

A downcast Greg Foster of UCLA also nearly decided to skip his race, the 200-meter dash, Saturday after losing Friday to archrival Renaldo Nehemiah of Maryland in the 110-meter high hurdles. He won the 200-meter in 20.22.

On Friday, Nehemiah, top-ranked in the world, beat Foster, ranked second, for the ninth consecutive time outdoors.

Paul Pilla of Arkansas State won the pole vault over opponent Randy Hall of Texas A&M. Pilla had cleared 17-4 1/4 on his first try and Hall made it on his second. Pilla then missed three times at 17-9 1/4 and Hall missed twice. Pilla won on fewer misses.

James Walker of Auburn won the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 48.68, more than a second faster than Dennis Otono of Mississippi State, the runnerup at 49.76.

Some of Saturday's winners surprised even themselves.

Villanova senior Nate Cooper leaped 56-1 1/4 on his last attempt to win the triple jump. His previous best jump in competition was a wind-aided 54-9 in Friday's qualifying round.

High jumper Nat Page of Missouri also exceeded his best previous effort, a 7-2 3/4 leap the previous weekend. On Saturday, he won at 7-4 1/4.

Money is must for 'Hippie-capitalists'

By JURATE KAZICKAS Associated Press Writer NEW YORK (AP) — At the dawn of this decade, Stan Buchthal was living in a cheap Manhattan hotel, drawing $12,000 a year and pouring the rest of his earnings back into his budding blue jean and T-shirt business.

"I really didn't start out wanting to make a lot of money," he said then, at age 23 and well on his way to making his first million. Today, the economic buffeting and social mellowing of the '70s has changed Stan Buchthal. "I cannot live without money," he said recently as he sipped Perrier in his $150-a-day Manhattan hotel room, en route from a South American cruise to his 12-acre estate in the mountains of Malibu.

He was one of the handful of "hippie capitalists," young entrepreneurs who stood out in jarring contrast with the world of business they had entered. They were part of the Woodstock generation, long on hair and short on experience, more likely to relax with marijuana than a martini. Today they've blended into the mainstream. But in this decade's course, they have found their paths taking unexpected twists and turns.

Eight years ago, Howard Stein was caught up in the frantic, lucrative life of a rock promoter. Today, he owns one of New York's top discographies. Today, Robert Sonneman's lamp company is three times bigger than it was in 1971, but he is restless and looking for new challenges.

College Marketing Corp., which Jim McDonough helped found, folded in 1973. Now he's making good money working for the largest paper company in the world. Dennis Friedland and Chris Dewey of Cannon Group Films were once considered the hottest dynamo of the movie business. Although their dreams of becoming a major studio didn't materialize, the company has survived.

As varied as their lives were, these young businessmen had many similar experiences. In spite of setbacks, they all persevered, worked hard, and had an indomitable belief in themselves. All were affected by the recession of the early 1970s. McDonough's CMC went bankrupt. Sonneman was nearly wiped out. Cannon Films was $2 million in the hole.

"I never want to go through that again, but I'm glad I had it in my early 30s," says Dewey. "You have to have those ups and downs to become a seasoned businessman." The mistakes the young capitalists made were in some instances the result of violating the principles that had brought them success.

Sonneman's credo was: "Take small gains so you'll have small losses," but he expanded too fast "and it got me." The men at Cannon forgot their philosophy to "Earn more than you spend." Stein looks back on the years when he was staging 300 rock concerts a year and grossing $8 million and says, "That was truly another lifetime for me." Gone today are his sloganed T-shirts, the beard and stringy hair. At 36, he looks like a Helmut Berger model with his hair shiny and slicked back and crew neck sweater.
