SALT treaty signed

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev signed the SALT II treaty today, embracing and kissed each other on both cheeks and promised continuing efforts by their nations to limit the nuclear arms race.

Carter termed the treaty a victory for peace but warned that "the threat of a nuclear holocaust still hangs over us."

The Soviet president declared, "We are helping to defend the most sacred right of every man — the right to live."

The agreement is the most sweeping thus far limiting the nuclear arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union. It puts ceilings on the numbers of long-range missiles and bombers the two superpowers can deploy through 1985.

Carter and Brezhnev signed the treaty texts in Russian and English sitting at a gilded table in an elegant onetime ballroom of the old imperial Hofburg Palace. They then rose, embraced and kissed each other on both cheeks. The audience applauded enthusiastically.

Each then spoke to assembled dignitaries, Brezhnev first.

The entry into force of this treaty opens up the possibility to begin elaborating subsequent measures to not only limit but also reduce strategic arms," the Soviet leader said.

"We are making a major step forward along the road of an overall improvement of Soviet-American relations and, consequently, of the entire international climate."

Responding, Carter declared, "We cannot interrupt or endanger the arms limitation process — a phrase apparently directed at the treaty's foes in the U.S. Senate, which must ratify the pact."

He said the prospect of an unrestrained arms race "is a challenge to our courage and our creativity."

"If we cannot control our power to destroy, we can neither guide our fate nor preserve our future," he said.

Here today, as we set careful limits on our power, we draw boundaries around our fears of one another. As we begin to control our fears, we can better insure our future.

"Not one nation on this Earth, not one people, not one human being is harmed, threatened or deprived by this victory in the battle for peace. A victory is here for all."

The American leader also noted that SALT II would clear the way for "even more substantial limitations and reductions" in SALT III.

In a comment clearly pointed at SALT's American critics, he added, "We cannot interrupt or endanger this process."

In a dinner toast Sunday night, Brezhnev also issued a warning to the treaty's foes in the U.S. Senate, which must ratify the pact to put it into effect. He warned that if there was "any attempt to rock this elaborate structure which has been so hard to build, to substitute any of its elements... the entire structure might then collapse, entailing grave and even dangerous consequences for our relations and for the situation in the world as a whole."

Some senators demand changes in the provisions of the treaty. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Sunday he would ask Carter to renegotiate parts of it.

After two days of meetings devoted to expositions of each government's policies on major issues between them, American sources said points of conflict were frequent but the sessions produced no acrimony or table-pounding.

The 22-page treaty limits each country to the deployment of 2,250 launchers for intercontinental weapons, a reduction from the 2,400 allowed by the SALT I treaty.

Estes jurors to get an earful

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors are expected to once again don the special headsets that last week gave them an earful of the life convicted con man Billie Sol Estes as he led since his 1971 parole.

Federal prosecutors are relying heavily on 29 hours of secretly recorded tapes and the testimony of an undercover agent in their fraud cases against Estes and former associate Raymond K. Horton.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Rolfe has said he would give jurors the chance to hear more of the tapes today, hinting they contain more of the outrageous boasting heard Friday.

Estes' notorious reputation as a wheeler dealer bogged down jury selection for two days last week, but the government opened its case at a full run Friday with the introduction of the tapes, which bolster the testimony of the undercover agent.

Estes and Horton are charged with devising a scheme to bilk investors through mortgages on non-existent oil field steam cleaners and of conspiring to hide Estes' interest in several businesses. Estes also is charged with conspiring to conceal assets from the government.

Friday, Special Internal Revenue Service Agent Walt Perry testified that in the summer of 1977, he posed as a wealthy Chicago businessman looking for a slightly shady, yet profitable energy investment. What he was really wanted was to catch Estes wheeling and dealing, a violation of Estes' 1971 parole.

Using the name Walter Placko, Perry and seven other agents portraying his attorney, accountant, chauffeur and associates, Perry said Estes offered to set up several investments in return for 50 percent of the profits.

"After all the trouble that I've ever been in, my credibility is good as hell," Estes said in a recording dated July 20, 1977. "I am going to make something of the profit. And I am going to run and I'm not in a position that we can be sued or in a lawsuit for not fulfilling our obligations. 'Cause I'll be on my way back to jail and I cannot have any trouble, you understand."

The recordings were made, Perry said, with battery equipped body microphones that transmitted the conversations to a special recorder.

At one point in the tapes, Estes refers to Horton as "a complete crook."

Estes was convicted in 1962 of engineering a scheme that defrauded investors through mortgages on non-existent anhydrous ammonia fertilizer tanks. Under the unusual terms of his parole, he was prohibited from self-employment or engaging in promotional activities.

Horton's attorney, Billy Ravkin, refers to Estes as a teller of "can you top this?" lies. Ravkin says his client was just a wealthy, good-hearted Texas oil man victimized by Estes.

Over 75,000 to be expelled

Malaysia won't shoot refugees

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Prime Minister Hussein Onn today denied that Malaysia had any intention of shooting at arriving Vietnamese refugees as it had threatened to do last week.

In a major restatement of government policy, Hussein said stern measures his administration had in mind towards the Vietnamese boat people did not include shooting them.

The statement contained in a cable to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim contradicted the announcement of Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad Friday that apart from expelling all the 75,540 boat people, the government would arm itself with the legal power to shoot on sight new arrivals.

Home Minister Ghazali Shafie, who introduced and explained government policy at a news conference, said the cable, in response from an enquiry from Waldheim, is the clearest statement of government policy towards the refugees.

The cable said: "As for the people who are already located in our camps, we have granted them temporary stay only in the expectation that they will be resettled elsewhere and that there are definite pledges and programs that this would be so within a reasonable time frame."

Malaysia reportedly shipped about 500 Vietnamese refugees out to sea, while Thailand sent 2,500 more Cambodians back across the border in their war-ravaged homeland.

Eyewitnesses said Malaysian authorities herded the refugees, most of them women and children, onto a repaired boat stocked with food, water and fuel Sunday and towed it into the South China Sea from the port city of Kota Bharu, 250 miles northeast of Kuala Lumpur.

There was no official confirmation of the report and no word today on the fate of the boat. Other unconfirmed reports said as many as 2,500 refugees may have been towed out to sea.

The move appeared to be part of a standing government policy of giving refugees temporary asylum for the time it took them to repair their boats and not the beginning of the mass expulsion of all 76,000 refugees in the country announced Friday by Deputy Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad.

Official sources said 3,000 refugees have been expelled in that way since February. But they acknowledged that 500 was the largest ever cast out on a single day.

Truckers tie up I-30

DALLAS (AP) — A group of about 50 independent truckers drove three abreast along Interstate 30 between Dallas and Fort Worth today, tying up early morning traffic to protest prices of diesel fuel.

The group crawled along in first gear, forcing police along the way to shut down freeway entrance ramps to keep traffic flow down.

Pampa man killed in head-on collision

From staff and wire reports

FAIRVIEW, Okla. — A Pampa man and an Enid man were killed in a head-on collision about four miles southeast of this northwest Oklahoma town Sunday night, authorities said.

The deaths brought the 1979 Oklahoma traffic death toll to 397, compared with 378 for the same period in 1978.

Terry Danner, 24, of Pampa, Texas, was killed when the auto his wife was driving struck another vehicle head-on on U.S. 60, Oklahoma Highway Patrol Trooper David Irwin said.

The driver of the second auto, Reid A. Briggs, 23, of Enid was also killed in the 9 p.m. crash, Irwin said. Four other persons in the Danner auto and one in the Briggs car were listed in critical condition in an Enid hospital today.

His wife, Rhonda Danner and Mrs. Danner's sister, Robin Hill, were listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit at St. Mary's Hospital in Enid. The Danner's 2-year-old daughter was listed in serious condition after being transferred to St. Mary's from Fairview Hospital.

The fourth passenger in the Danner auto, Greg Sanford, was in fair condition at St. Mary's.

Number 1 job too big for any one person

The U.S. Constitution limits the number of terms that any one person might serve as president: two and no more, even though President Roosevelt was given special dispensation during World War II. He is the only three-termer, and he died in office.

The people in recent years, however, seem to be short-stopping the Constitution. They are limiting their presidents to one term. Or, if they do name them president twice in a row, they change their minds in midstream and exert enough pressure to get them out of the White House.

Look at the record in recent years:

— John Kennedy served less than one term. He was assassinated. At the time of his death, his popularity was in sure decline.

— Lyndon Johnson served out the remainder of Kennedy's term, was elected to a full term, but declined to run again because he felt that he had fallen from the grace of the American electorate.

— Richard Nixon was elected to two terms, the second by the greatest margin in recent memory. A year and a half or so into his second term, he was forced from office by an aroused public in the wake of Watergate disclosures.

— Gerald Ford filled out the remainder of Nixon's term, ran for the job of president and suffered defeat at the hands of Jimmy Carter.

— And now Jimmy Carter. Recently, for the first time, sources close to the White House have mentioned the possibility that Carter might not seek a second term.

It makes one wonder: doesn't it?

What's the trouble? Where is the root of the problem? Are the voters not selecting capable people for the nation's highest office? Or has the highest office simply grown too big for any man? No matter how big the feet that slip into the shoes, the shoes always end up being too big. A lot of people will tell you the job is impossible to handle.

Perhaps being president has become an impossible job. Maybe what we have up there in Washington is a run-away monster that nobody can drive. We select someone every four years and give him the reins to an uncontrollable machine. There it goes, downhill, ever accelerating, bouncing wildly from side to side, threatening to careen into the ditch and smash into a million pieces. And every four years, we toss someone onto the seat of that oddball object and expect him to transform it into a thing of beauty, a joy forever.

The poor guy we expect so much from didn't create the runaway, though he might have contributed microcosmically — and probably did — along the way. The majority of the politicians, apparently with their ears to the ground back home, have passed the laws that put this country where it is today. They thought that they heard the voice of the electorate say that it wanted more welfare, more federal aid to education, more urban renewal, more government in business, more federal snoops in industry, more instruction on how to make automobiles, how to drill for oil, how best to moan and groan and pay those taxes.

Maybe they did hear those voices. Politicians are smart enough to know that if they want to get re-elected they had better do something for the people back home. Ask your legislators in Raleigh. At this moment, they are dividing up the pot: this much for you and your folks, this much for me and mine.

Down through the years, the people of this country have supported its government. They have followed sometimes blindly even into war because they believed that their government was doing the right thing. People have difficulty believing that these days. They show it in giving less and less to the polls on election day. Now, instead of the people supporting the government, the government is in the business of supporting the people. And that situation can lead nowhere but to disaster.

Americans are not dumb. They know what the problems are. They know that one of the problems is getting the attention of people in Washington.

There for awhile, it seemed as if the message was getting through. Now, it seems somewhat doubtful.

Got a postal gripe

So the thank-you letter you wrote Aunt Minnie never reached her. You're sore at the post office, and you think millions of other Americans are grumbling about the decline of the Postal Service.

Thomas W. Chadwick hears that grumbling every day. It's his job.

Tom is an amiable, 55-year-old South Carolinian whose title at the U.S. Postal Service is consumer advocate. If you've got a beef, get in touch with him.

The Postal Service is one of the nation's biggest businesses. It's been a semi-independent entity since mid-1971 and last year handled 96.9 billion pieces of mail, about half of the whole world's mail. It grossed $14.1 billion and employed 655,000 people, down 55,000 from five years ago.

Chadwick says: "We have 43,000 retail stores" — that's what he calls post offices. "We have 155,000 delivery routes and 98 million addresses of customers to serve."

His office of Consumer Affairs was organized when the Postal Service was shaken loose from the clutches of politicians. It has 34 employees, which doesn't seem like many when compared with the volume of complaints.

But Chadwick thinks it's adequate. He says: "The handling of complaints is a vital aspect of our business. We use complaint data as a tool in management."

Chadwick's office is "trying to make it simple and easy for people to get to us. We have authority to disregard bureaucratic lines. We're a direct link between the mailer and the Postal Service."

Over all, the Postal Service gets 21 million complaints yearly, or a little less than one for every 4,000 pieces of mail. Most complaints are resolved locally.

There are 160 different categories of complaints, but the largest are delayed mail (20.5 percent of the total) and non-receipt (18.5 percent).

To cope with its complaints, the Postal Service in 1975 began distributing an easy-to-use Consumer Service Card, which is supposed to be available at every post office. That's where your letter to Aunt Minnie fits in.

You go to your post office and fill out the card: a sheet of carbon paper permits you to make a duplicate. One copy goes to your local postmaster, the other to Chadwick's office in Washington.

"Within the next couple of days," says Chadwick, "you ought to hear from your postmaster. If you haven't heard by the third day, call the postmaster."

The card's information is key-punched into a computer. When the postmaster resolves a complaint, he writes Chadwick's office and the complaint is deleted from the computer. But if the postmaster hasn't resolved the complaint after a short time, it pops up automatically in the consumer advocate's office and Chadwick tells the postmaster to get moving.

"If you haven't heard promptly, the thing to do is write Thomas W. Chadwick, The Consumer Advocate, Postal Service Headquarters, Washington D.C. 20260."

Chadwick receives about 40,000 direct complaints a year. Most are resolved.

His office serves as a kind of lightning rod for internal postal problems, too. Last year, for example, the introduction of 15-cent first-class mail turned up what Chadwick calls "a severe glue problem" in the 15-cent Oliver Wendell Holmes stamp. Letters were being returned because the stamps fell off.

Chadwick's office got complaints and found the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was putting glue on stamps while they were being printed. A change to pre-gummed paper solved the problem.

Chadwick says customers can ease their own problems. One way is to wrap packages more securely; another is to use ZIP codes. And he notes that 6 million copies of an easy-to-read pamphlet, Consumer's Guide to Postal Services and Products, have been printed and should be at every post office.

Professors join proletariat

By OSCAR COOLEY

In American colleges and universities, something is going on which might be called the proletarianization of the professors.

For example, a few months ago faculty members of a university of my acquaintance were disturbed when the president made certain economy moves. Foreseeing a decline in student enrollment, he moved to reduce the teaching force and to make other economies which it seemed would help the institutions to continue operating in the black.

The unhappy professors foresaw themselves treated as mere employees, to be hired or fired as the employer's profit and loss statement demanded. They had assumed academia above such earthy considerations.

Seizing advantage of the unrest, advocates of a teachers' union suggested that what the professors needed to combat the administration was a union. That sounded plausible, especially to those who look upon collective bargaining as the 11th Commandment and a labor union as a benevolent society. So an election was called and the union idea was approved by four votes.

Soon after the result of the vote was published, word began to circulate that this and that benefactor of the university had lost confidence in the institution's future and should not be counted on for future support. This damp blanket may have caused some of the union supporters to wonder if they had been hasty in their vote. But the die was cast, and already the NLRB machinery was being oiled to bring a union shop to the campus.

Interestingly, the professors' aplomb originally was upset by the prospect of being treated as employees — wage-earners, if you will, to be hired and paid if needed to carry on the work of the institution, and dismissed if not.

This, of course, is their role, and there is nothing demeaning or undignified about it. A university is not run for the professors, and few successful ones have ever been run by them. In academia, as elsewhere, the realities of life have to be recognized.

Now, it seems, the indignant professors have voted themselves into the employee role, adopting the very method of the workingman. This, they are told, will give them input in the university's decision-making, which apparently means a voice in running the university.

But professors are scholars, not administrators. Each has his special area of knowledge which he concentrates upon studying and expounding to his students. This is his chosen role. If he had preferred the role of management, he would not have burned the midnight oil to become a scholar and a professor.

One can imagine the newly unionized professors feeling a trifle uncomfortable. Perhaps some are asking themselves, Am I in the proper role? Is this where a professor belongs, in a union? Maybe we scholars do have something to lose but our chains.

It is now late to repent. The scholars became power-seekers when they voted to "bargain collectively" with the university. This will involve coming to an agreement on a standard contract, including a union wage scale, just as the butchers, bakers and candlestick makers do.

Further, a third party, the government, will have a finger in the pie, for collective bargaining is the law of the land and it takes government to administer that law. So the National Labor Relations Board will be there.

At a bargaining session attended by representatives of the union and of the university, the union will present its demands. These will contain many words but only one bottom line, the demand for a union salary scale.

The only real object of a labor union is to raise its members' wage rates. All else is small talk. The union's tool for achieving this object is monopoly. An early demand probably will be a "agency shop," that is, a contract which requires every faculty member to belong to the union, or at least an "agency shop," which requires everyone to pay the dues whether he belongs or not. This is to insure there will be no backsliders, no non-paying beneficiaries.

Finally, if the dickering falters, if the university representatives are slow to sign, a strike will be called. In short, war will be declared. The professional troops will be mobilized, and it will not be a volunteer army.

These are some of the typical steps in the proletarianization of professors throughout the land. Most of the teachers in the lower schools already have been ushered into the proletariat. Perhaps it is all a part of the nation's education.

IN WASHINGTON

A question of competence

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — After all the anguish of recent history, it is inexpressibly painful to see yet another American president consumed by a credibility gap. But that is what is happening to Jimmy Carter.

Nobody believes the president who campaigned on a promise that "I will never lie to you."

It is not that the public thinks Carter is deliberately deceiving it, as Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon did in the dark days of Vietnam and Watergate. Carter still gets high marks for personal honesty and integrity.

But people no longer believe what the president tells them about much of anything, and especially about the nation's nagging nemeses of inflation and energy, because they do not think that Carter himself has any real grasp of these problems. So they tune him out.

It is not Carter's character that is in question but his competence, not his veracity, but his vision. And that is a distinction that seems to have escaped the president and his closest aides, all of whom are baffled and somewhat bitter about the obvious lack of confidence in Carter that shows up in the polls and in the growing challenge to his presidency from within his own political party.

"The level of cynicism out there is just incredible!" moaned one of the White House Georgians last week. "No matter what we say, or how carefully we back it up, people simply don't believe us."

There is a very human tendency, within the president's inner circle, to look for scapegoats elsewhere — to point the finger at a cowardly Congress held captive by powerful special interests, at rapacious oil companies, at a selfish populace that stubbornly refuses to recognize the need for sacrifices in its standard of living.

And indeed, there are good grounds for criticizing all of the above. But attempts to spread the blame around will not get the president off the hook politically. If anything, it exacerbates Carter's troubles when he is perceived as being at the mercy of events rather than the master of them.

People will forgive a president for making the "wrong" choice in a difficult situation as long as he acts decisively and communicates an aura of confidence about his chosen course.

Carter, however, does neither. He acts to decontrol crude oil prices, then says he wouldn't veto a bill extending controls. He says all Americans must make sacrifices to fight inflation and curb energy consumption, then promises to shield the poor, the farmers and anyone else who screams loudly enough.

Cabinet officials contradict presidential statements and go undisciplined; Democrats in Congress denounce Carter's policies and go unpunished. The president says he will fight to the bitter end for what he believes is right, but he is using weapons loaded with blanks — and his critics know it.

As a consequence, Carter comes across as a president lacking not just the courage of his own convictions but indeed any strong convictions. Former White House speechwriter James Fallows, in his two-part series in the Atlantic Monthly, put his finger on the problem with remarkable precision when he labeled the Carter regime "the passionless presidency."

Carter's aides, while clearly stung by the Fallows articles and similar criticism, continue to insist that the president is "right" on the substance of his policies and is being maligned on matters of mere style.

What they fail to realize is that in any leadership position, "style" is at least as important as "substance." In the presidency, in fact, it may ultimately be more significant.

Take the money to run

Money is still the mother's milk of politics, in spite of reformers' continuing attempts to reduce special interest influence in campaigns.

Several presidential candidates, particularly in the sea of Republicans, face a tough decision because of a 1974 law designed to control campaign costs.

The law allows a presidential candidate to get up to half his primary campaign money from a fund built by the $1 checkoff on the federal income tax form. But he must meet several conditions, including raising at least $5,000 in small contributions in each of 20 states and accepting a lid on all primary spending of about $14 million in 1980.

The availability of these funds was an important factor in Carter's campaign and undoubtedly could sustain another relative unknown in 1980. Total federal support for primary candidates was nearly $25 million in 1976. In addition Carter and President Ford received $21.8 million each from the general election fund.

But the leading Republican candidates are spending their money so quickly already that several soon will face a critical decision: is it more important to be able to spend freely supporters' money, or should they accept money from the special public fund with the mandatory spending ceiling?

The answer depends on how much a candidate expects to raise from private sources and his concern about any possible adverse public reaction to a freespending campaigner.

For example, John B. Connally would prefer not to accept the public funds. Perhaps mindful of last year's Senate elections in which candidates spent as much as $7 million in a state, Connally has determined he could easily spend close to $30 million before next July's GOP convention.

But Connally and his advisers are worried about the adverse impact of a rich Texas and his oil cronies seemingly "buying" the nomination.

Connally's decision may be affected by Ronald Reagan's. With a computerized mailing list of almost 500,000 supporters, Reagan would have no trouble raising more than $14 million. But his advisers feel it would be very difficult to reject the matching funds and the spirit of the 1974 law.

Other candidates will have no conflict. Sens. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and Robert Dole of Kansas probably would take the federal money. As a Dole aide points out, he could spend $14 million in the campaign simply by raising $7 million himself; but if he rejects public financing, Dole would have to spend close to $20 million in fund-raising to have $14 million for campaign spending.

Primary proliferation and campaign costs ultimately may force the creation of a single national primary or, perhaps, regional contests.

Either step would make national campaigns more civilized; candidates could spend less time worrying about fund-raising and more time discussing their differences in style and philosophy.

Indigent care still under county study

Gray County commissioners continued to study individual requests for financial assistance for medical care Friday during a regularly scheduled meeting of the commissioners court. But Judge Carl Kennedy said "It may be time to take the hard line" to minimize requests for welfare aid directly from the county.

Requests for indigent care aid are now being handled directly by Kennedy's office, although the county judge has submitted welfare aid requests to commissioners for review in recent meetings of the court.

Commissioners say they do not intend to reopen the county welfare office closed in June 1978.

Kennedy is presently using hospital indigent care forms for "screening" requests for aid. According to County Auditor A.C. Malone, no funds have been earmarked for indigent care since Hospital Corporation of America assumed management and purchased current assets of the county's two hospitals April 1.

Kennedy said requests for medical aid in the last 2½ months could total as much as $30,000. Kennedy said he did not think the county could afford "$60, $80, or $100 thousand" a year for indigent care.

Under the contract with HCA, the county is obligated to reimburse the hospital for care to indigents at the standard Medicare rate. Kennedy said it was his understanding that the county would not be responsible for indigent care once HCA had completed a new hospital.

In other action, the court approved funds for a secretary for the Precinct 2, Place 2 Justice of the Peace Office. The position was formerly funded by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). Commissioners approved the position through the end of the year at a cost of about $736 a month.

Commissioners also approved a request by District Clerk Helen Sprinkle for a third deputy clerk.

Roloff gathers forces for showdown on licensing

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Lester Roloff, preparing for what may be the last battle in his six-year legal war with the state, has called for all church youth homes to turn in their state licenses.

"Let's all get in violation together," the fiery preacher said at a Sunday night prayer meeting in his People's Church.

An Austin state judge has given Roloff until Tuesday to seek state licenses required for the three South Texas youth homes. But the 64-year-old preacher, who has been jailed before for failure to have licenses, says he will not obey the judge.

"When they put a license on the church, they put a license on the pastor," he said.

About 2,000 supporters filled the circular church Sunday night. During the prayer session, Roloff said he has heard from churches from across the state that plan to turn in their licenses.

Roloff has long claimed that state licensing of a church-related facility is a violation of the separation of church and state doctrine.

He reiterated his claim that Tuesday will be remembered as a big day in American history. "Tuesday will write the story of another Alamo," he said from the pulpit.

"If Brother (Wylie Cameron

— an official at the home) and I could have the privilege of being another Travis and Bowie, it would be a real joy," the fundamentalist preacher said.

He told his followers that the resistance will be marked by song — not by violence.

"We'll put to rest any thoughts of violence. There'll be none," he said. "The heavier the burden, the more you ought to sing. It confuses the devil."

He said the court order that may close the homes is "murder for the hopes of these young people." He said there about 400 youths in his homes.

"If their plan should succeed, you put one thing down. We did not die a natural death, we were killed," he said. But the irrepressible Roloff maintained that his faith in the Lord will keep the homes open.

Roloff, who appeared on an hour-long television special Sunday, is expecting a massive crowd tonight for a rally. He said preachers from around the nation are expected here to voice their support.

Stray animals to be exterminated in effort to halt rabies

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Mexico (AP) — The mayor of this remote border town has ordered the mass extermination of all stray dogs and cats in an attempt to halt an outbreak of rabies.

Humberto Acosta told a news conference Sunday that beginning today Mexican health officials would shoot or poison stray animals. Acosta's action was prompted by the death of an unidentified 9-year-old girl at a local hospital last Saturday.

Officials here and in the neighboring South Texas community of Eagle Pass are waiting for the autopsy results.

However, Dr. Ruben Chavez said he is "99 percent sure" the child died of the dreaded disease because she was showing the "classic symptoms of rabies" before her death.

More than 50 known cases of rabies in animals have been found on both sides of the border.

Behind Gray County Democrats

Simpson driving force

Mary Simpson, who has been working for Democratic candidates for state and national office since the campaign of Harry Truman, was named the year's outstanding Democrat Thursday by the Top O' Texas Democratic Club.

Mrs. Simpson was cited as "the driving force behind the Democratic party in Gray County" by Top O' Texas President Tim Haigood.

Mrs. Simpson also received an additional Outstanding Democrat Award from state representative Foster Whaley. "I think Mrs. Simpson is most deserving of this award," Whaley said. "I have been proud to work with her in politics."

Mrs. Simpson has actively worked for presidential candidates Truman, Kennedy, Johnson, Humphrey, and Carter. She was co-chairman for the senatorial campaign of Ralph Yarborough co-chairman for the gubernatorial campaigns of Don Yarborough and attorney John Hill of Gray County.

In 1976, Mrs. Simpson was elected as a national delegate from the 31st Senatorial District for Jimmy Carter.

Mrs. Simpson's more than three decades of political involvement began when the father of a high school friend ran for county commissioner in her hometown in Southeastern Oklahoma.

"I began by just passing out cards for my friends father," Mrs. Simpson recalled in a brief interview Friday. "I also came from a politically minded family, not all of whom were Democrats."

After nearly thirty years in the grass roots, Mrs. Simpson can creditably claim a bit of political clairvoyance when she says she spotted Carter as presidential material at the 1972 convention.

"It was the way he conducted himself—he was head of the Georgia delegation," she said. "I just thought he was presidential material."

Three years into Carter's first term, Mrs. Simpson still thinks her man is presidential material, but she admits she is "somewhat disappointed" in Carter's apparent failure to make more inroads into the problems of inflation and energy.

"He's taking a stronger stand now," Mrs. Simpson said. "You have to do what I think he's doing now. But he should have done it earlier."

"But I do think he's an honest man," she adds. "I think they (1976 voters) were looking for an outsider. I do think he took over the problems the country was going through in its turmoil."

Of the President's family Mrs. Simpson says "I kind of like Billy," and she believes Rosalyn Carter is a "definite force" in her husband's administration. "Just like Lady Bird was a force in Lyndon's administration."

"If Carter gets the nomination I intend to support him," Mrs. Simpson said. "And I expect him to get the nomination."

But Mrs. Simpson admits her favorite candidate would be Teddy Kennedy, just as her favorite president was John Kennedy.

Speaking of Teddy, she said "I'd support Kennedy, for many reasons, but mostly because I have the feeling he's in there to serve the country. And apparently there are a lot of people who would support him because he's the front-runner."

Mrs. Simpson said she finds the political process interesting because it enables one to learn "what's really behind what a politician is saying."

Of the process as a whole she said, "You lose them and you win them. You're very much up when you lose, very much up when you win."

DEAR POLLY — The inlaid linoleum on my kitchen floor has stains made by the stove, refrigerator, table and chairs. Neither steel wool pads nor kitchen cleanser will remove these stains and metal marks. — MRS. J.K.

DEAR MRS. J.K. — A company making such flooring suggests the following. Make a solution of oxalic acid and water and apply with a non-woven nylon pad. Wear rubber gloves and handle the acid with extreme care. When stains are removed use the same pad with a floor cleaner, rinse and then apply your usual floor finish. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I did not have a darned egg or an old light bulb when I needed to mend the sleeve on my son's knit shirt so I used the top off of a spray can. It fit right into the sleeve so the job was a breeze. — ALICE

DEAR POLLY — I had a rubber dish drainer set and the drain board became very badly stained from water sediment. I could not scrape it off. I put it outside to be hauled away and kept looking for a new one but was appalled at the prices. So I brought the old one back inside, cleaned it the best I could and decided to generously sprinkle baking soda on it. I left the soda on for three or four days. When I washed the soda all off it looked great and only had some water sediment left, so I repeated the treatment and now it is good as new. — MRS. G.L.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please send me any information concerning prostate troubles and any treatments for this? I am 52 years old and have never had any major illnesses. A few months ago I developed severe back pains in the lower back and also I could not urinate as well as previously. I have some pain around my testicles but not bad.

I went to a chiropractor and he said I had prostatitis and that he would get my back problem straight. He hasn't yet after four visits. I was thinking that after my back stopped hurting, perhaps I could go to a doctor and get something for the prostate trouble. That is why I am writing to you for any advice you might be able to send me.

DEAR READER — If possible you might go see a specialist in urology and if that's not possible, you should at least go see a medical doctor. If you do have an inflammation of your prostate or other problems with your prostate, you'll need prescription items which a chiropractor can't give you.

You can have back pain from prostatitis and inflammation in the urinary tract. Under such circumstances, a back pain can't really be cured until the underlying medical problem has been relieved.

If your prostate is enlarged to the point that it is interfering with your ability to urinate, you may even need surgery and that would have to be done by a specialist in urology.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-6 on the prostate gland. It will give you a better idea of the total problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I don't like for people with back pain and symptoms of prostate trouble to wait around too long for a complete evaluation. If a person happens to have cancer of the prostate, it can spread to the back and cause back pain. Cancer of the prostate should be detected before it ever spreads. The way it is detected early is by at least an annual examination in men past 40 years of age.

Cancer of the prostate is the third most common cause of cancer deaths in men and we need a lot more public understanding of this problem and how it's detected early enough to do something about it. Put plainly, it requires a rectal examination so that the prostate gland can be felt. If the examiner feels a small lump that doesn't belong there, it's somewhat like an examiner finding a lump in the breast.

Brock Is Not Finished

"No question about it," Lou Brock heard a radio announcer report last year, "Brock is finished." At the time, the veteran St. Louis Cardinals outfielder was having the worst season of his 18-year baseball career. This year, it's a different story. Throughout the early season, Brock's name has regularly topped the list of the National League's leading hitters. He already holds baseball's career and single-season base stealing records, and needs just 100 hits this year to reach a career total of 3,000. Brock, who turns 40 today, has announced that he will retire at the end of the current season. Meanwhile, Lou Brock is not finished yet.

HALE IRWIN (right) is congratulated by Tom Weiskopf, of Phoenix, Ariz., Sunday afternoon. Irwin had just captured the title in the 79th U.S. Open at Toledo after shooting a four-over-par 75.

(AP Laserphoto)

Irwin captures U.S. Open title

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Hale Irwin, hacker, choker, U.S. Open golf champion for a second time.

The 34-year-old former Colorado football star proved a harsh self critic Sunday after struggling to 4-over-par 75 for a 72-hole total of 288. His analysis: "I've never worked so hard on a golf course. To go out and hack it and still emerge a winner makes me feel good."

"I didn't sleep well last night.

I'd say I started choking on the first tee. This was not your casual round of Sunday golf, an interclub tournament. It was our national championship.

"If you don't feel it, you're not human or you're on something funny. The second time it's tougher."

Irwin escaped a nightmarish finish — he was four over the last five holes, double-bogeying 17 and bogeying 18 — to join only 13 other golfers as two-time

Open titleholders.

"Fantastic," replied the 1974 winner of this major championship. "That's why I wanted two Opens. Hopefully, I can hang my star up and it will shine brighter."

Irwin struggled to a closing 75, good enough for his two-shot margin over two other former Open champions, Gary Player and Jerry Pate.

Player handled the immense pressure at Inverness Club the best Sunday, almost becoming the oldest player in history to win the Open. He had a 68.3 under par.

"I thought if I shot a 66 I'd win the tournament. But I'm happy to finish second. Hale Irwin is the story today," said the 43-year-old South African, second in a fourth international tournament this year.

Pate, who shot a closing 72, also is fashioning a bridesmaid's reputation. He's been second eight times in the last two years on tour and said, "I'm a little bit disappointed."

Irwin's payoff was $50,000. Player and Pate earned $22,250 apiece.

With a five-shot bulge and six holes to go, Irwin seemed like a shoo-in to the 21,000 tramping Inverness' push 6,982 yards and to the millions more watching via television.

Blalock wins LPGA

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The word around the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour is that Jane Blalock thrives on pressure. But this year her game seems to have blossomed on big victories.

Blalock, the only player on the LPGA tour to win a 1979 tournament by six strokes, turned the trick for the third time Sunday with a 1-under-par 72 and a four-day total of 12-under-par 280 in a $100,000 LPGA stop at Locust Hill Country Club.

The 4-year-old Sarah Coventry Tournament was played at Locust Hill for the first time.

"This is my best start by far," said the 33-year-old Blalock, whose $15,000 first prize boosted her 1979 winnings to $84,752 and elevated her one notch to fifth place in the LPGA money rankings. Blalock has won four tournaments this year and 26 in her 10-year career.

"I feel like my game is much more solid and I'm a lot looser than I ever have been before," she said.

Second-year pro Alice Ritzman posted her best finish by matching Blalock's 72 and pulling in at 6-under-par 286. The $9,800 for second place more than doubled her prize money this year.

Vicki Ferguson, another budding star, wound up third at 288 after posting 74 in the final round.

Jerilyn Britz, Dot German and Sandra Post tied for fourth with 289s. Pat Meyers claimed seventh with 290 and Sally Little eighth with 291.

Blalock started the day 11-under after earlier rounds of 69, 70 and 69 on the par-73, 6,206-yard layout. She played a secure game in taking dead aim on the championship.

"I had a good margin," she said. "When I have a big lead, I just try to make pars and take the birdies when they come. I think I play better when it's tighter."

Meyers, Little and Post appeared to be making a run at Blalock on the front nine, but the lightning-fast greens and yawning sand traps of the course took a toll of each.

Little dropped from 4-under to 7-under with birdies on three of the first four holes but blew up with bogey, double bogey and bogey on the fifth, sixth, and seventh holes.

Meyers started with an eagle-3 on the first hole and later supplanted Little at 7-under, but ended her chances with a double bogey-5 on the seventh hole. She had a bogey and another double bogey in the next five holes and plummeted from contention.

Post survived a double bogey at No. 13, a 403-yard par-4 which also added two extra strokes to Meyers' card, but bounced back with a cluster of birdies to shoot the best round of the day — a 4-under-par 69.

Blalock's prize money moved her past Donna Caponi Young, who won the LPGA Championship crown last week.

AAU track competitors aim toward Olympics

By KEN PETERS AP Sports Writer

WALNUT, Calif. (AP) — The Moscow Olympics may be slightly more than a year away, but there was little question what was in the thoughts of the hundreds of American athletes who competed in the National AAU Track and Field Championships over the weekend.

While the nation's best were shooting for victories in the annual AAU competition, most considered the meet — and meets upcoming between now and the 1980 Games in Russia — as part of a timetable.

"Moscow has of course been my goal all along," said Steve Scott, the United States' top hope in the 1,500 meters. "All my time and training are geared to beating Steve Overt (Great Britain) in the Olympics. When I train, I pretend I'm running against him — he's the best."

"I'd love to win the gold," said Evelyn Ashford, who scored a double in the AAU sprints for the second time. "I'd love to win any medal. My timetable is geared step by step for Moscow. I want to beat the East Germans, and I feel like I can do it."

Ashford, a 22-year-old who ran fifth in the Montreal Olympics 100 meters, shattered the American record in that event Saturday during the AAU meet with a time of 10.97 seconds. She came back Sunday to run a 22.07 in the 200, a wind-aided mark that would have rewritten the American standard.

Scott, three-time AAU 1,500 champion, whipped Don Paige in Sunday's final, clocking

3:36.40 to Paige's 3:37.33.

The outlook for America in the Moscow Olympics is generally bright, based on the three-day AAU meet at Mount San Antonio College. The United States apparently will be strong in the men's sprints, both men's hurdles, the 1500 and various field events.

And, according to signs from the AAU competition, the American women may be much improved over their showing in Montreal in 1976. In addition to Ashford, Deby LaPlante stamped herself as world caliber with an American record time of 12:86 in the 100-meter hurdles. Francie Larrieu scored an impressive AAU double, taking the 1,500 in 4:06.53, then coming back to edge defending champion Jan Merrill in the 3,000 with a time of 8:53.79.

"Since I was 13, I've been pointing toward the Olympics," said Larrieu, a two-time American Olympian. "I'm doing all I can to be ready next year."

In two of the AAU meet's featured men's events, world record-holding hurdlers Renaldo Nehemiah and Edwin Moses — both won their events easily, Nehemiah with a 13.19 in the 110 hurdles, and Moses with a 47.89 in the 400 hurdles.

Olympic discus champion Mac Wilkins, still perfecting his new form, threw an impressive 231 feet, 10 inches to win the discus. Dwayne Evans, the bronze medalist in Montreal in the 200, proved he's still to be reckoned with by winning that event in a time of 20.28.

And in the 100, Southern California sophomore James Sanford clocked an impressive 10.07 in an event that drew the best sprinters in the nation.

Martin may return as NY skipper

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees Manager Bob Lemon says his team "will be all right." But it looks like Lemon won't be managing the club if and when that happens.

Both New York morning newspapers have reported that Billy Martin will take over Tuesday as manager of the Yankees. Martin, reached in Iowa City, Iowa, admitted that he and owner George Steinbrenner are scheduled to meet following Martin's appearance in a pro-am golf tournament today. But he has denied that an agreement between him and Steinbrenner was made Sunday in Columbus, Ohio, as reported by The New York Times.

"That is absolutely not true," said the fiery Martin, who resigned last July after leading the Yankees to two pennants and a World Championship. "I'm just listening to you guys (the press) rattling on about it."

"I have not met with George at all" this weekend, Martin said earlier Sunday in Columbus. "We have not reached any agreement on anything. George isn't even here. I'm down here strictly for scouting purposes."

However, Doug Newton, Martin's agent, said his client and the Yankee owner were "supposed to be getting together today (Sunday) in Columbus." Steinbrenner was unavailable for comment.

The Associated Press reported earlier this month that Martin would take over as manager of the Yankees before the All-Star break in July. Originally, Martin was to return as manager beginning in 1980.

Rumors that Steinbrenner planned to reinstate Martin this week surfaced Sunday in a report published by the New York Daily News. Steinbrenner, who accompanied the team during part of its just-completed road trip, reportedly was spurred to action as the Yankees fell eight games out of first place.

Buddy Baker takes close-fought victory

By JERRY GARRETT AP Motorsport Writer

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — It was, in the estimation of all involved, a 400-mile version of the International Race of Champions series.

"I felt like I was on the highway coming home from work in the rush hour," said Buddy Baker after winning Sunday's close-fought 400-mile Grand National stock car race. "I thought I had the best car, but I was hauling around a pack of 'em all day behind me. I'm just glad they all finished that way too."

Unfortunately, the race finished under caution. Incidents at both ends of Michigan International Speedway on the 197th lap brought out the sixth caution of the event, just as Donnie Allison started a last ditch bid to erase Baker's 1.5-second lead.

Allison was disappointed, but surprisingly, only mildly. "I felt the car that won deserved to win, and I thought the car that was second deserved to be second. Baker had the better motor and I had the better chassis."

"I was catching him when the caution came out. Whether I could have passed him is another story," Baker noted. "Donnie went around me a couple of times for the lead earlier, but he could never keep it."

Baker broke away from an eight-way scrap for the lead after a caution period ended 12 laps from the finish. He pulled away with Cale Yarborough hanging on to his rear bumper for a few laps.

Yarborough edged out Neil Bonnett by a bumper's width for third. Bobby Allison was seventh in Sunday's race behind Richard Petty and Dale Earnhardt. Allison picked up 22 points on Waltrip in the season's NASCAR point standings, now 2,555 to 2,519 after 16 of 31 races.

Baker came as close as anyone to leading the wide-open affair, putting his Chevrolet in front 103 of the 200 circuits. He averaged 135.798 mph and collected $16,350.

Respectfully Yours...

Major League roundup

Sparky finally tastes victory

By The Associated Press

American League teams be warned. Sparky Anderson already is being accused of influencing umpires and now that he has a victory, he's ready to take charge. "This (victory) sure takes a lot of the pressure off," Anderson said after the Tigers defeated the California Angels 8-4. "But the people have been great to me. What angers me is the people have so much faith in me and I'm failing."

Anderson's Tigers used Jason Thompson's bases-loaded single to snap a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning enroute to victory. Anderson's first in four tries as an AL manager. "I'm now in the mood and I know my players and I am rested enough," Anderson said, "and I'm ready to go with a plan for my pitchers."

Alan Trammell knocked in three Detroit runs with his third homer of the year and a sacrifice fly. Dickie Thon batted in two runs for the Angels. Blue Jays 10, A's 9

Alfredo Griffin's two-run bases-loaded single boosted Toronto past Oakland. It was Griffin's fourth hit of the game. The Blue Jays overcame an 8-5 Oakland lead on a three-run, pinch-hit homer by Otu Velez in the seventh. But the A's took the lead again, 9-8, in the top of the ninth.

Tony Armas and Jeff Newman homered for Oakland while John Mayberry had a two-run blast for Toronto. Mariners 6, Indians 5

Bruce Bochte's two-run homer powered Seattle's three-run ninth-inning rally as the Mariners edged Cleveland. The Indians were led by Bobby Bonds' sixth career grand slam home run and a solo shot by Dave Rosello.

Francis Carter, owner and skipper of Spray IV, was placed first of 16 multihull entrants with a corrected time for the 635-mile course of 106 hours and 40 minutes.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 1
Chicago romped over Boston as Jorge Orta led the way with a bases-loaded triple and a double, and scored two runs. Orioles 8, Twins 5

Kiko Garcia drove in three runs with a double and a triple as Baltimore downed Minnesota to post its 10th victory in its last 12 games. Brewers 5, Royals 3

Gorman Thomas slammed two home runs, driving in three runs, and catcher Buck Martinez sent home a pair of runs to lead Milwaukee over Kansas City. Rangers 6, Yankees 3

Buddy Bell blasted two home runs and Oscar Gamble added a two-run shot as Texas trimmed the New York Yankees. Thurman Munson gave the Yankees a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning with his second homer of the season. But the Rangers went ahead 3-2 in their half of the frame as Bell hit a two-run homer and Jim Sundberg singled home a run.

Bell slapped a solo home run in the third inning and Gamble's two-run homer came in the seventh. Expos 19, Astros 3

Montreal scored two runs in the first inning and six more in the third and fourth on the way to the romp. Meanwhile, the Expos more than made up for a stretch which had seen them go without a home run for six consecutive games. Ellis Valentine snapped that streak Saturday, then the Sunday barrage which Tony Perez led with his sixth and seventh homers of the season.

Joe Niekro, 10-3, was the first of six Montreal hurlers. He gave up Montreal's first six hits and eight runs, departed after 2 2/3 innings, and saw his nine-game winning streak snapped. Giants 7, Cardinals 4

Pinch-hitter Bill Madlock snapped a 4-4 tie with a run-scoring single in the eighth inning and Willie McCovey added his third hit of the game, a two-run single, as San Francisco downed St. Louis. The single capped a torrid four-game batting spree for the 41-year-old McCovey, who was eight-for-16 with 10 RBI in the string that began Thursday night against the Cubs.

Cubs 8, Padres 5
Major league home run leader Dave Kingman hit his 23rd of the season, a two-run shot, and pitcher Mike Krukow added a two-run single in the six-run first inning that carried Chicago to its fifth consecutive victory. Pirates 5, Dodgers 1

Ed Whitson and Kent Tekulve combined for a two-hitter and Tim Lincecum drove in three runs to carry the Pirates past the Dodgers. Whitson pitched 7 1/3 innings, giving up both the hits to Bill Russell, who hit a home run in the fourth and a single in the sixth.

Foli had a two-run double in the fifth and an RBI single in the ninth. Phillies 9, Reds 3

Bob Boone's two-run double triggered a six-run Philadelphia eighth inning and carried the Phillies past Cincinnati. The Reds had tied 3-3 in the seventh on Ray Knight's second homer of the season.

Mets 1, Braves 1
Gary Matthews' fifth-inning homer lifted the Braves into a tie with the Mets before the game was suspended. The contest was delayed twice for a total of two hours, making it impossible to complete the game and allow the Mets to catch their flight. So play will be resumed in the top of the ninth inning on Friday, August 27.

New York had taken the lead in the fourth on John Stearns' run-scoring bunt single.

THE FIRST CONVERSATION parlor in rural Delaware. "First Choice" sits among fast food restaurants and gas stations. (AP Laserphoto)

So much for conversation

DOVER, Del. (AP) — On a stretch of U.S. 13 south of here, nestled between a motorcycle shop and a fast-food stand, sits a small gray house where women take off their clothes and talk to men.

At least, that's how this "conversation parlor" explains its business. Similar establishments have sprung up across the country as a way around laws limiting massage parlors and prostitution.

Delaware's law, which flatly prohibits a massage by a person of the opposite sex except by such persons as doctors, chiropractors or barbers, is one of the nation's toughest.

But Delaware is by no means unique. Consider what happened last April in Fairfax County, Va., when a new law was adopted requiring massage parlor operators to have a $2,100 annual license.

"The massage parlors closed," said Dennis Sobin, editor of The Adult Business Report, a Washington monthly newsletter. "But in their place, and curiously enough with the same owners and same personnel, they had relaxation centers, or counseling centers, or escort counseling."

Sobin said his clipping service shows there are 26 "nude modeling studios" in Houston, a "VIP Escort Service" in Greensboro, N.C., and a "Paradise Relaxation Center" in Richmond, Va.

In Washington, he said, he watched the "Adam and Eve Massage Parlor" change its name to "Adam and Eve Modeling Studio."

"It's the cheapest way," Sobin explained. "I'd do it if I were in business. Why fight City Hall?"

One young patron leaving the conversation parlor here — who asked not to be identified — left no doubt as to its business.

"It's just a whorehouse," he said. "I paid 40 bucks for a conversation with a nude woman, and the first thing she said was, 'For $30 I'll kiss you, and for $40 I'll make love with you.'"

He said the woman explained that the initial $40 goes to the "house," and she makes all her money on prostitution. The $30 "kiss," he said, was slang for oral sex.

"There was no conversation at all," he said.

Sgt. Richard Strycharz, head of the State Police vice squad, was asked about the conversation parlor and said, "All they did was change their name to something else."

However, authorities admitted to difficulties in moving against conversation parlors and similar establishments.

Deputy Delaware Attorney General Timothy Barron said there is nothing illegal about selling nude conversations. "It just falls under the protections guaranteed under the First Amendment of the Constitution pertaining to the freedoms of speech, and you cannot proscribe speech, whether or not it pertains in the nude."

And Strycharz added: "There's no law saying that a woman cannot talk to you either topless or completely nude. It can be described as an art form, which is protected by the First Amendment."

Before Delaware's law took effect, there were about eight massage parlors in the state, said Susan E. Wheeler of the Commission on Massage Establishments and Adult Book Stores. There are no massage parlors now.

All of those establishments were in the populous northern section of this small state. But last month "First Choice" became the first conversation parlor in the more rural southern area, opening just outside the state capital of Dover.

A reporter who telephoned First Choice was told by a woman who answered: "Dover has nothing. It's really boring here. Most people who come here are lonely... I think men need a place for relaxation."

Overseas

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Vice Premier Li Xiannian (Li Hsien-nien) said his government will send a vice foreign minister to Moscow to discuss improvement of Chinese-Soviet relations. Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Peking.

Kyodo said Li made the statement Sunday to a visiting delegation from the Japanese Socialist Party. It was the first announcement that China had agreed to the Soviet proposal June 5 to hold normalization talks in Moscow in July or August.

China and the Soviet Union have been exchanging proposals for talks since the Chinese announced on April 3 that they would not extend the Soviet-Chinese friendship treaty when it expires next April.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — More than $100,000 in cash plus food and medical supplies has arrived in Jamaica for the relief of 75,000 persons made homeless by heavy rains and floods last week that killed at least 41 persons, officials report.

The U.S. Coast Guard sent two helicopters. A British cigarette manufacturer sent a plane load of 5,000 blankets, and Guyana was sending a ship with 500 tons of rice.

It may take a week for an accurate assessment of the damages, a government spokesman said, but initial estimates of the losses are in excess of $15 million.

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet inventor has developed a new type of paper made from stone that is five times thinner and much stronger than ordinary paper. Tass reports.

The Soviet news agency said the paper is made by melting basalt, then drawing thin filaments from the molten rock. The filaments are impregnated with resins before being used to make the paper.

"The newly obtained paper is heat-resistant and cold-and moisture-proof," Tass said.

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The state oil monopoly Petroleos de Venezuela plans to spend $2.6 billion on a 10-year investment program to open up new sources of oil and maintain production at present levels, the company announced.

The amount is $7 billion more than an $18.6-billion investment package previously announced.

Pampa News Marathon

Run to support local charities

For all of the running enthusiasts who would like the chance to enter the Pampa News Marathon, but feel that they lack the necessary conditioning, here's a short course to get you back in great shape and at the same time help you for the Labor Day event.

When you choose a marathon that you want to run, start training about 12 weeks in advance. You should start out slowly and then build up gradually on the weeks past.

As you train, your running will build up to an average of an hour a day. Consider this a minimum for everyone. Almost anyone can finish a marathon on this amount. But if you wish to run for time, you need to obey the "mileage plan" rule. Average at least one third of the race time. If your time will be under three hours, the hour a day is still enough. If it's to be longer than that, add one training minute for each three minutes of racing.

If you appear tired the faster runners are let off with less work. They don't, in fact, run less distance, only less time because they cover the required ground faster. One-third of a marathon is about 6 1/2 miles. A three-hour marathoner may do that comfortably in an hour, while a 90-hour runner may take 70 minutes for each three minutes of racing.

Alternate between long and short runs, taking one of each per week with one "optional" day for rest or making up lost training. Short runs amount to about one-fourth of the week's total. Long runs are two-thirds and the longest runs are the longest.

Use the longest weekly run as a race rehearsal. Under surface, terrain, time-of-day and weather conditions similar to those expected in the marathon. Practice taking drinks regularly during these runs. Give your attention to all of this in week 11, when the longest run extends to 100 miles.

Training pace should be similar to your race pace, but easier, naturally, because you aren't running so far.

On training to do more than 30-45 minutes a day in the last 10th week. You can't do any more building at this point. It's a 100 to 120 to have yourself!

Proceeds donated to the Pampa United Fund

Preparations are now being made for the first annual Pampa News Marathon to be held in the city on Labor Day, Sept. 2.

The marathon has three different races including six, 12 and 20-mile jaunts. All proceeds from the event will be donated to the United Fund Drive.

Each of the three races will have the following divisions: 10-12, 12-20, 20-30, 30-40, 40 and over along with a women's division.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in all divisions.

The course for the event will be through the streets of Pampa and the surrounding area.

Entries will be accepted until Friday, Aug. 31. The entry fee is $5 per person.

The event will start promptly at 8 a.m. on Sept. 2.

For more information contact Greg Hardin at Jerry Gunter at the Pampa News by calling 685-2525.
