Hijacker returned, to face trial in U.S.

MCGUIRE AIR FORCE BASE, N.J. (AP) — An anti-communist Serb who hijacked an American Airlines jet with 135 persons aboard earlier this week was returned to the United States today on the same Boeing 707 that he forced to fly him to Ireland.

Nikola Kavaja was led off the plane in handcuffs shortly after his arrival here on a flight from Shannon, Ireland, where he arrived on Thursday and was ordered deported early today.

Kavaja was not allowed to talk to reporters as he was taken to be arraigned on an arrest warrant issued because he failed to appear for sentencing Thursday for the 1975 bombing of the home of Yugoslavia's consul in Chicago. His hijacking odyssey began Wednesday when he commandeered a jetliner on a flight from New York to Chicago, where he was to have been sentenced.

U.S. Magistrate Stephen M. Orlofsky ordered Kavaja returned to Chicago and officials said he would be flown to Illinois aboard a chartered airplane after the arraignment was completed.

Five Irish policemen guarded Kavaja and his American lawyer, Deyan Brashich, on today's flight to the United States. The jet was flown by the same volunteer crew that took it to Ireland on Thursday.

One of the Irish guards, Deputy Superintendent Pat Docey, said Kavaja was "very calm and relaxed. He might have dozed for a short time."

At his arraignment, Kavaja was asked if he understood his right to remain silent. Brashich, who translated for Kavaja, quoted his client as responding, "I know that and I will make no comments or any statements or answers to any questions."

When asked if he was tired, Kavaja said, "I have not slept for four days. What kind of country is this? America is not a communist country."

He asked that the hearing be rescheduled until Saturday morning, but Orlofsky rejected the request.

The Irish government announced early today that it was sending Kavaja and his lawyer back, even though Ireland has no extradition treaty with the United States. The pair apparently were deported as illegal immigrants.

The two men spent the night in jail at Shannon, site of Ireland's chief international airport, on the west coast.

Kavaja, 45, and five other Serbian exiles were scheduled to be sentenced in U.S. district court in Chicago this afternoon for the 1975 bombing of the home of the Yugoslav consul in Chicago. It was not known if Judge Hubert Will would delay the sentencing of the other five until Kavaja could join them.

The FBI said Kavaja, free on $350,000 bond, was on his way from New York to Chicago Wednesday for sentencing when he hijacked an American Airlines Boeing 727 with 127 passengers and eight crew members aboard. He claimed to be carrying dynamite and demanded the release from a Chicago jail of the Rev. Stojilko Kajevic, a Serbian Orthodox priest convicted with him of the 1975 bombing. The priest was the only one of the six who had been unable to make bond.

The plane landed in Chicago, Kavaja released all of the passengers and five of the crew members, and his lawyer came aboard. They were flown to New York, switched to a longer-range Boeing 707 and took off early Thursday for Ireland.

Carter giving fuel to truckers

By The Associated Press

The White House announced plans today to end the federal rule giving farmers priority in obtaining diesel fuel, apparently so it can be diverted to independent truckers.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said President Carter ordered an end to the rule. The action followed the worst day of violence yet in the strike by the nation's 100,000 independent truckers.

The president's action followed his promise Thursday to make more diesel available to the striking truckers, who have complained of fuel shortages.

Bullets tore into more than three dozen rigs in 18 states Thursday. Other trucks were pounded by rocks, run off the road, set afire or plagued by nails strewn on roads. In Idaho, drivers had to make their way around two trees set across a highway.

Rupert Welch, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations, said in Washington today that more than 40 percent of the hauling capacity of regulated carriers had been stopped by the strike and by fuel problems.

Welch said the 40 percent-plus shutdown figure — "a ballpark estimate" — was a couple of days old and that the percentage probably was higher today.

He said the shutdown had been across the board — both among the irregular route carriers, who haul goods from factories to distribution points, and those who have regular routes between trucking terminals.

Refrigerator trucks, which carry meats and frozen vegetables, have been among the hardest hit by the shutdown, and another major casualty are the moving lines, which depend almost entirely on contracts with independent owner-operators, he said.

In the incidents Thursday, two men were injured — one critically — when their tractor-trailer rig swerved off Interstate 64 east of Mount Vernon in southern Illinois after the right tire was shot out, state police said.

Officers said John Kelley, 26, of Florissant, Mo., was in critical condition at a hospital with a back injury, and Barry Awalt, 32, of St. Louis was admitted for observation.

The Tennessee Highway Patrol said driver Don Collins was shot in the arm early today after he got a call on his citizens band radio that one of his wheels was loose and he got out to check it.

Meanwhile, in Chelsea, Mass., about 80 rigs parked bumper-to-bumper today to shut down the New England Producer Center, and state police arrested more than a dozen persons, many of them protest leaders. The remaining drivers cleared away from the gate after the arrests.

The truckers' strike called to protest rising diesel prices and dwindling supplies, load regulations and the 55-mph speed limit, also tightened its grip on the nation's supply lines for fuel and food.

Roloff school still under siege

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The stalemated siege at Lester Roloff's Rebekah Home for Girls entered its third day today with a state task force awaiting word on its next move.

"We are not an army. We are a social service agency," said Marlin Johnston, associate commissioner of the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The approximate 100 girls from the Rebekah home spent the night in the church, sleeping with blankets and pillows on padded pews.

The Rev. Earl Little of Garland, one of Roloff's supporters, said the girls were moved into the church because they thought the state might try to come get them during the night.

The girls and boys have been kept in the church during the day, making it harder for the state to shut down the homes and place the children elsewhere.

A trickling of parents coming to take their children out of the home has continued during the standoff between the state and Roloff.

A state judge has told the DHR to clear out the Roloff homes. The fiery fundamentalist preacher says licensing his homes would be a violation of the separation of church and state. The courts have said the homes can't operate without the license.

"It's not a matter of whether," Johnston said Thursday about the closing of the facility. "It's just a matter of when and how."

Until Johnston figures out how to get past the legion of Bible-toting preachers and parents who have blockaded the church where the Rebekah girls have been spending their days, the 140-member state task force remains headquartered at Texas A&I University at Kingsville. While Johnston maintains the task force is not an army, he has started to talk about strategy and maneuvers.

He was told Thursday that the state cannot enter Roloff's People's Church to get the children. Johnston said state officials have told him that the church — though on the same grounds — is not considered a part of the homes.

"We will not go into the church," said DPS Lt. Herbert Hale, who is working with the DHR team.

Johnston was asked if the task force would wait until nightfall in an effort to catch the girls outside the church.

"My desire would be never to go in the middle of the night, but I wouldn't rule out anything," he said.

"I just don't know how you pull off a surprise action with everyone watching. I question whether it is feasible to go in at night," he added.

Johnston made a brief visit to the Roloff facility Wednesday — the day the state hoped to close the homes. He came out empty handed after a chat with Roloff.

He said the DHR had planned to return that day.

"We seriously considered going in, but we took a look at the number of people and the volume of the crowd and in my judgment it would have been dangerous."

New bank VP happy to be living in Pampa

Citizens Bank and Trust Co. recently designated Steve McCullough as its new vice president to fill a vacancy created last November when Jim Olsen left the bank.

McCullough, 29, graduated from West Texas State University in Canyon with a bachelor's degree in business administration degree and from the Southwestern School of Banking at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

After a stint as assistant vice president of West Texas State Bank, he moved to Sweetwater, where he served as vice president of the Texas Bank and Trust Co.

"The bank is an important part of this community, he said. "Without proper support from the community bank, a town cannot grow to its greatest capacity," he explained.

As for his future community activity, he said, "I hope to become actively involved in the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations."

In Sweetwater, he was active as board director of the county hospital, chairman of the school board's Citizens Committee of Directors, and chairman of the County Mental Health Retardation Board.

McCullough is married and has a 5-year-old daughter, Charity. His wife, Debi, is expecting their second child in two months.

The family enjoys social tennis and will play as soon as Debi can, he said.

Wilderness:

Shortages and higher prices

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President, Chamber of Commerce,
United States

Like Dr. Frankenstein's monster, yet another environmental program created with good intentions threatens to get out of control and cause a lot of harm.

The program is the identification and designation of certain public lands as "wilderness areas," which will thereafter remain closed to virtually all human activities. It is known as RARE II, for Roadless Area Review and Evaluation, phase II.

The Wilderness Act of 1964 was passed to direct federal land managing agencies to set aside certain lands as areas "where the earth and its community of life are untrammeled by man, where man himself is a visitor who does not remain." As of April 1, 1978, there were 175 areas classified as "wilderness," totaling more than 166 million acres. Another nine million acres are awaiting congressional designation as wilderness.

If this "wildernessification" stopped here, the economic impact would be limited. But in the last Congress, the House passed and the Senate was considering legislation adding 66 million acres of Alaska to the National Wilderness Preservation System. The Forest Service has identified 62 million acres for possible inclusion in the system and the Bureau of Land Management — which was not even covered by the original Wilderness Act — is studying its lands for suitable wilderness areas. An estimated 120 million acres of BLM land meet basic wilderness area requirements.

By way of background, it's important to know that the Federal Government owns about one-third of America's land, and that from this land comes much of our timber, natural gas, petroleum, and other minerals. The land is also used for recreational purposes, grazing and as a source of water for irrigation. If too much of this land is withdrawn from its traditional "multiple use" designation, then there will be shortages of many valuable commodities. And shortages mean higher prices.

Here's a rundown on what's at stake if the monster breaks out of the laboratory:

— There are 488 million acres of productive timberland in the country. The Forest Service manages 18 percent. The nation harvests 66.2 billion board feet of timber per year. In 1977, almost 10.5 billion board feet came from the National Forests. RARE II areas contain 26.5 million acres of commercial land with the ability to produce an annual programed harvest of 3.075 billion board feet (nearly 25 percent of the National Forest System total) and a long-term potential yield of 5.956 billion board feet of sawtimber and wood products. Under the worst case assumption (if all 62 million acres were designated as wilderness), there would be a loss in programed output of nearly three billion board feet annually.

— The National Forests and National Grasslands supply 103 million acres, or almost 41 percent of the country's publicly owned rangeland. The inventoried roadless areas contribute over 20 percent of the total grazing use of National Forest System lands. Grazing is allowed in wilderness areas. But fewer range-management improvements are permitted in roadless areas recommended for wilderness designation, resulting in a reduction of the intensity of the grazing that may continue. Worst case: A 30 percent decrease in grazing.

— Of the inventoried 2,686 roadless areas, 137 have proven or producing mines for critical minerals, and 81 have proven or producing energy fields of oil, natural gas, coal or uranium. There are also 461 roadless areas with a high potential for critical minerals and 398 acres with a high potential for oil, natural gas, coal or uranium.

— Recommendation of roadless areas for wilderness status virtually precludes the chance (short of a Presidential order) for intensive development of domestic water supplies, irrigation water sources, and hydroelectric energy sources.

— A wilderness area may be designated as a Class I area under the Clean Air Act. Such action could mean that large land areas around a wilderness area would be precluded from development to protect the wilderness area from air pollution.

A businessman copes with gasoline

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

In all the cracking, crunching and caterwauling coming from California currently over the shortage of gas, one businessman stands out who is deserving of recognition and applause. His name is John Roscoe. He is the president of a fast food chain called "Shortstop." When the gas crisis arrived back in 1973, Roscoe saw the handwriting on the wall. At that time, his fast food outlets, spread out over northern California, were not pumping gas.

Being of sound business judgment, Roscoe figured that the shortage at that time was but the prelude to a fullscale drama. So he put gas pumps out in front of most of his 138 outlets following the sound business rule that as shortages increase, prices will rise. This is true inevitably if demand can be viewed as a constant or is scheduled to increase. Should the law of supply and demand be consulted, steady or increased demand, faced with shortages in the supply column, will predictably lead to higher prices and higher profits.

To start with, few people went to Shortstop stores for gas. Most drove to the conventional service station. To encourage patronage for his newly installed pumps, Roscoe offered lower than normal prices for volume buyers. This brought him business in gasoline, and a new group of persons who also entered his stores to buy food.

Strange and wonderful are the mental meanderings of the regulators. So when the Department of Energy found that prices at the pump were rising in most areas, the DOE prepared a regulation to encourage retailers to keep their prices down. Each retailer was allowed a certain percentage of profit. But if a gas station owner elected to keep his price below the level he was legally entitled to charge, he could "bank" the difference. That meant, that later on he could boost his prices to make up the difference.

Roscoe started selling regular gasoline at 5.1 cents below the legal maximum. Thus he "banked" 5.1 cents on every gallon he sold to his volume buyers.

When long lines began to emerge recently in response to the cutbacks in delivery made by the major companies, Roscoe could (and did) legally boost his prices up to 99.9 cents per gallon. Thus he began the practice of rationing, not by license numbers but by price. As it worked out, he had gas to sell long after everyone else was running dry. Naturally, the DOE swooped in to crack his knuckles. Roscoe found that he had to lower his price of unleaded gas to 79.9 cents because he only started selling unleaded gas in 1976 and didn't have a great deal "banked" in the unleaded category.

As it worked out, the Shortstop emporiums thus provided both the lowest and the highest price gasoline available. Lowest if unleaded, higher if regular. Indeed, in some of his outlets in California, Roscoe is already charging $1.09.99 per gallon for regular and thus the first in the state to go above $1 per gallon. The DOE is furious and engaged in dental gnashings.

Despite these pricings, Roscoe also is having trouble getting a supply large enough to satisfy demand.

Roscoe insists that the prices he is charging are legal. The reason he has done what he has done, Roscoe says, is: First, because his expenses have risen dramatically, he is allowed by DOE rulings to make so much, above expenses. Second, he wanted to be the first in the state to gain the prestige of $1 per gallon of gasoline. Third, he wanted to make more money. Fourth, he wanted to be a "Good samaritan" and thus have gasoline available when everyone else ran out. Says Roscoe, "We're no longer in the volume gas business, we're in the emergency gas business."

Normally, one would expect to hear that a businessman engaged in retail selling and hit by the gasoline shortage would be singing the blues as his business sagged. Roscoe has actually done three things which cause him to chortle as his cash registers ring up increased sales.

First, he used good judgment in anticipating an opportunity which was fast approaching.

Secondly, he operated on the well-known principles of the laws of supply and demand. While many businessmen are running to the government for help, Roscoe goes into the market, not asking for help but merely seeking to supply what people want and are willing to pay for.

Thirdly, and possibly most important, Roscoe refuses to be intimidated by government agencies and their multitudinous and multifarious intrusions. He simply does what a businessman ought to do. He minds his own business to the benefit of his customers.

I find myself not only delighted but enchanted. I can't help wondering what would happen in the country if we could find a whole new breed of Roscoes coming along who give short shrift to government fulminators. Roscoe's basic philosophy appears to be: Never mind the regulators, full speed ahead. May this philosophy increase and multiply.

Since the end of World War II, the United States and the Soviet Union have been parties to a total of 15 separate arms control agreements of varying importance. There have been monitoring uncertainties about every single one of those pacts, but that has not prevented their adoption and ratification by the Senate.

The fact that verification has become such a burning issue this time around says more about this country's badly shaken confidence in its overall military posture vis a vis the Soviet Union than it does about the scope of the problem itself.

A bad SALT II treaty could not be "saved" by perfect verifiability. And a good one should not be torpedoed because of imperfect monitoring capability as long as the uncertainties are within tolerable bounds.

It takes more time and effort than simply saying "trust me," but President Carter is going to have to expalin clearly and candidly the limits to our monitoring ability and why they should not concern us. Then maybe he'll be convincing when he says SALT II is "adequately verifiable."

Takes more than 'trust me'

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - For better or worse, debate over the SALT II treaty continues to focus heavily on the verification issue - the ability of the United States to guard against Soviet cheating.

President Carter and his "SALT sellers" have long recognized that neither the Senate nor the American public will buy an arms limitation pact that depends for its success upon trust in Soviet willingness to comply.

But the administration initially made the mistake of assuming that doubts about possible Soviet cheating could be erased simply by the president's own repeated assurances that the United States would never sign a treaty that couldn't be verified through our own intelligence sources.

Carter was in effect saying, "You don't have to trust the Russians. You just have to trust me when I say we can catch them if they try to cheat."

As the White House has belatedly realized, that just isn't going to do the trick. Not in this post-Vietnam, post-Watergate era of cynicism towards all public officials, including the president.

Skeptics inside the Senate and out want to know exactly how our government intends to monitor compliance with the SALT II limitations, and what the uncertainties are given the loss of our intelligence stations in Iran.

Carter and his SALT experts are only now starting to address these questions candidly, and while their answers make pretty good sense, they have a lot of lost ground to make up.

The basic problem is that contrary to the initial impressions conveyed by SALT supporters, including Carter, the U.S. intelligence community has never claimed it could monitor with 100 percent certainty Soviet compliance with each and every aspect of the arms limitation treaty.

The Soviet Union is a closed society. It does not issue press releases each time it achieves a technical advance in warhead yields, or missile accuracy, or silo reloading capabilities. The United States has to keep track of such developments through its own intelligence sources, some of them fairly well publicized like our spy satellites, some - including old-fashioned human espionage agents - shrouded in secrecy.

The experts readily concede there may be monitoring uncertainties of varying degrees of severity with many aspects of the new SALT pact, but they insist we can detect any significant Soviet cheating - notwithstanding the loss of Iran - and do so in plenty of time to prevent the Russians from benefiting from their perfidy.

As nervous as it makes some SALT critics to talk of any doubt about Soviet observance of the treaty restrictions, the fact remains that not all potential cheating is equally worrisome. What counts is whether a violation has strategic consequences, and whether we can detect it in time to respond appropriately.

Since the end of World War II, the United States and the Soviet Union have been parties to a total of 15 separate arms control agreements of varying importance. There have been monitoring uncertainties about every single one of those pacts, but that has not prevented their adoption and ratification by the Senate.

The fact that verification has become such a burning issue this time around says more about this country's badly shaken confidence in its overall military posture vis a vis the Soviet Union than it does about the scope of the problem itself.

A bad SALT II treaty could not be "saved" by perfect verifiability. And a good one should not be torpedoed because of imperfect monitoring capability as long as the uncertainties are within tolerable bounds.

It takes more time and effort than simply saying "trust me," but President Carter is going to have to expalin clearly and candidly the limits to our monitoring ability and why they should not concern us. Then maybe he'll be convincing when he says SALT II is "adequately verifiable."

Panama canal debate II

By Don Graff

Old presidential campaign issues don't always fade away.

Sometimes they can hand around for years in Congress, reviving to snarl proceedings just as another presidential race warms up.

Take the Panama Canal - or as one side of the current debate would prefer it, don't let Panama take it.

Four administrations in the making, the revision of the treaty arrangements, according to which the United States has controlled the waterway since its construction at the beginning of the century, was one of the most vehemently argued political issues of recent years.

Proponents of revision - diminishing the U.S. role in Panama in favor of that of the Republic of Panama itself - appeared to have carried the day in the 1976 presidential nominations (Gerald Ford, for, over Ronald Reagan, vociferously against), the election (Jimmy Carter, for) and the U.S. Senate (approval by two-thirds-plus-one vote in April of 1978).

But not in the House of Representatives, or a potent segment thereof now being heard from.

There are actually two Panama Canal treaties. The first authorizes the United States to operate the canal until the year 2000 under conditions of gradually increasing Panamanian participation. The second vests the United States with permanent responsibility for the protection of the canal against threats to its neutrality.

The signed and ratified treaties take effect automatically this coming October. Still required, however, is legislation implementing key provisions establishing a new Panama Canal Commission as the U.S. entity operating the canal, funding the relocation of military facilities and civilian personnel and setting up a new toll system.

Enter the House, which was not involved in the initial debate on the treaties themselves since the Constitution gives to the Senate the powers of advise and consent to such Executive acts. Expenditure of the U.S. funds and other matters involved in the enabling legislation are its business, however. As shaped in the House, the enabling bill would substantially alter key treaty provisions, requiring that an American military commander head the new commission and revising formulas for Panama's share of revenues.

The objection on the latter point is that not only is Panama being given the canal, it is being paid to take it. A misreading, the administration counters. None of the money to be realized by Panama is to come out of U.S. tax dollars. Instead, the Panamanians are being cut in on an increasing share of canal tolls.

The costs to be born directly by the United States, set at $42 million a year, involve American military requirements and the relocation and retraining of American personnel as gradually replaced by Panamanians in the operation of the canal.

The House rewriting is so basic, pro-treaty quarters suggest, that it could invalidate the treaties, leaving a Panama so embittered that it might seek to shut or seize the canal. If it did not come to that extreme, it would almost certainly mean a return to the bad feeling and sporadic violence that marked the pre-negotiation years. The canal might remain American but it is difficult to see that it would be any easier to operate or defend in such a situation than under the terms of the treaties as negotiated. And the United States would pay a heavy penalty in face throughout Latin America.

The House and its members are in no way barred from taking a keen interest in foreign affairs or from expressing opinions. But the Constitution specifically invests the Executive branch and the Senate with responsibility for implementation of policy.

Wisely, it would appear from the way the canal issue is being revived.

Ham radio operator has world at his fingertips

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Like an estimated half million other Americans, Robert Wood is an amateur, or ham, radio operator, and his "Swan-350 tranceiver" — along with a homemade radio amplifier — help the 23-year-old electronics student lure foreign continents into his own backyard.

Though a poet might call the window to Wood's small bedroom in his family's home at 2220 N. Sumner St. a "porthole to the world," a routine contact with a fellow ham on a routine Thursday evening proves, to put it neatly, more routine.

Wood flicks on his radio, manipulating the dial, briefly eavesdropping on the static or the babble along various frequency bands, before stopping to flag down a ham in California:

"Calling K-6 WR9BY8, this is K-5 WBSCR6, can you hear me?"
"Yes, I'm picking you up."
"How's my signal out there — how's my signal out there at the moment?"

"A little weak."
Wood adjusts his amplifier.
"How's the signal now?"
"That's better."

Wood says the content of his contacts can take a number of forms — a completely casual exchange like the preceding, a coveted contact with a foreign country which gives the operators points toward a better amateur radio standing, a lengthy conversation with a friend, a "phone patch" connection between a person on a ship and someone on land, and, last but not least, emergency communication in the wake of disasters like the Wichita Falls tornado.

"It's the emergency use which really makes it worthwhile," says Wood, who describes his amateur radio preoccupation as "a sort of hobby most of the time."

"The National Weather Service said ham operators were the communication out of Wichita Falls... that's when they're really needed. The club (Pampa Amateur Radio Club) has talked about that before... we figure one of us is going to survive and get to his radio."

Wood, along with some 25 fellow members of the local club and 12,000 hams in United States and Canada, will test his preparation for emergency this weekend in a 24-hour vigil on a ranch site off the Lefors Highway just past the Canadian River Bridge.

During the annual test-competition, popularly known as Field Day, club members will use two gasoline driven generators, set up antennas and a camp site, and try to make as many radio contacts as they can in 24 hours.

"Everything will be set up just as if your town had been hit with a disaster," Wood says.

Radio operators will earn points for each contact made, and the rules developed by the American Radio Relay League, which sponsors the annual contest, will include credit for stations that conserve natural resources by use of solar, wind or water power in lieu of fuel burning generators.

Wood describes the exercise as a "test of self-sufficiency."

On an everyday basis, however, Wood says his interest is in contacting foreign countries. With luck, skill, and perseverance, he's made well over a hundred foreign contacts.

"It takes luck because you have to find an opening," he said, "and once you find an opening, someone has to be in that area. If you do make contact, you know that maybe 200 others hams from the states might be trying to get through, and the trick is lining operators up so they can each make contact."

Wood has contacts from Eastern Russia, most of Europe, and most recently from Egypt, where he spoke briefly with an United Nations representative from Canada. The language barrier, Wood points out, is not a problem since ham operators can communicate in Morse code, but he says he is surprised at how many foreign contacts are English speaking.

He says most of these contacts are quick exchanges of name, information about the strength of signals, and addresses so that cards can be exchanged to provide documentation of the contact.

"Many ham operators aren't so interested in compiling calls," Wood says. "They're more interested in just talking."
Wood says many networks (or "nets") of close friends will connect and banter for several hours. As for eavesdropping, he says, "It's common courtesy, if you tune in on a close knit group not to listen in. I don't bother them. A lot of nets are set up for everyday communication."

A junior at Brigham Young University, he has made the most practical use of his radi in connecting servicemen at sea with their homes in the states through "radio patches." Contacts from ship radios are relayed from the amateur radios to home phones by simple means of a collect call and a wired connection with the telephone.

Wood points out that there are laws restricting this kind of relay in various countries.

Although interested in compiling contacts with other countries, Wood occasionally uses his radio for chat.

"I can get hold of a friend of mine from Texas Tech, pick a quiet frequency and sit and chew the fat for an hour and just see how everything's doing."

Asked what prize contact still eludes the lure of his radio, Wood says, "I'd like most to make contact with mainland China. They've stopped reissuing licenses there, and no one has heard anything out of China in a long time."

Note: The Pampa Amateur Radio Club Field Day will run from 1 p.m. Saturday until 1 p.m. Sunday. It will be held on a ranch site off the Lefors Highway just past the Canadian River Bridge. An entrance to the left will be marked by a sign in the shape of the state of Texas. Wood says interested persons are invited to watch the hams in action.

ROBERT WOOD tries to find some conversation on his ham radio. He and several other radio operators will take part in their annual Field Day Saturday through Sunday.

Grisly confession read to jury in Henley's trial

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Jurors sat silently as Elmer Wayne Henley's horrifying confession to a mass murder so wide-reaching he remembers the names of only a few of the victims, was read in state district court here.

The gaunt defendant looked straight as lead prosecutor Carol Vance read the two-page statement into the record Thursday. State District Judge Noah Kennedy had ruled the August 9, 1973 confession admissible earlier in the week.

Henley, now 23, was convicted in 1974 of killing six youths as part of a homosexual murder-torture ring that left 26 dead. His conviction was overturned on appeal last December.

He has admitted killing his older companion, Dean Corll, but has never been prosecuted in that death.

In the gruesome, often detached statement Henley says Corll talked him into inducing young boys to visit Corll's home so the older man could sell them to a prostitution ring. Henley received $200 for the first boy, he said in the statement, and later discovered the boy had been raped and killed.

Henley, who was 17 at the time, took another eight to ten boys to Corll without pay, the statement said. Corll would sodomize the boys, "then he would kill them," the document said.

"I killed several of them, myself with Dean's guns and helped him choke some others. Then we would bury them in different places," the statement said.

In all Henley names ten boys by name in the statement, including the six victims named in the murder indictment against him.

"I don't remember dates on all these, because there has been too many of them. Some of them were hitchhikers and I can't remember their names," the statement said. Henley knew many of the victims from his Houston Heights neighborhood, the statement said.

Clements' ideas draw fire

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt says some of Texas Gov. Bill Clements' proposals on Mexican energy development sound like the "American imperial position."

However, Clements says he is waiting to hear that description from Babbitt himself.

The Texas governor will get a chance to exchange views with Babbitt today at a four-hour meeting of the Southwest Regional Border Commission.

New Mexico Gov. Bruce King and Tom Hayden, a representative of California Gov. Jerry Brown, will join the talks on mutual problems facing the four border states.

"The first thing you learn in Mexico is they're not in the business of joint ventures in energy,"

Babbitt told reporters Thursday after reviewing a Clements position paper on the topic.

The Texas Republican governor calls for a joint U.S.-Mexican corporation to provide financing for development of Mexico's burgeoning energy industry.

"That sort of strikes me as the American imperial position," the Arizona governor said of suggestions that the United States has the know-how, but Mexico has the raw energy sources.

Babbitt says he will offer his own position paper calling for use of traditional commercial loans to boost Mexico's economy. A stronger industrial base will help stem the stream of poor Mexican gaining illegal entry into the United States in search of jobs, he added.

A Fourth of July celebration featuring country music artist Moe Bandy is planned by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. The day's events begin with a parade at 10:50 a.m. Trophies and plaques will be awarded to winners in several divisions. Old timers will gather for a reunion at 11:30 a.m., and a barbecue is set to begin at noon. Turtle races, starting at 1 p.m., will be followed by an amateur rodeo at 2 p.m., featuring Bandy. Bandy will also perform at a 9 p.m. dance. A large fireworks display will begin at 9:30 p.m. Everyone is invited to participate in the Independence Day activities, says Hugh Wilson.

Local artists can register with state

Pampa artists may want to check into a new statewide registration drive for a publication of the Texas Commission on the Arts. The Texas Artists' Registry will enable persons and organizations seeking professional artists to locate someone to fit their needs. Allan Longacre, executive director for the commission, stressed that the registry should not be considered as an offer of employment for artists. "We want to know what artists are available and where to find them," explained Longacre. All registrations will be accepted and will include musicians, media artists, filmmakers, photographers, dancers, writers, actors, choreographers, directors and designers, in addition to other art forms. Individuals wishing to register should provide name, address (home and business), city, state, zip code and telephone number on a white 3 by 5-inch card. The individual's artistic discipline - skill should be included in the upper right-hand corner. Cards should be mailed to Texas Commission on the Arts, P.O. Box 13406, Capitol Station, Austin, 78711. More information may be obtained by calling (512) 475-6593.

Mending mature marriage
by Louise Pierce

At my bridal shower, more than forty years ago, the ladies gave me advice as well as gifts. Only one admonition stayed with me. It was, "Never be mad at the same time." And better advice was never offered to young couples or old ones either. Whichever one stirs up a fit of fury first is entitled to the right of way. The other one should back off and shut up until the blue air clears. The sudden silence may stay the sting of attack. And it will most certainly take the steam out of the retort that is aching for release. Maybe next time the other one can initiate the rage and get the silent treatment. I've made such a point of this procedure that Otis and I have never gone to bed angry with each other. When I'm away for a few days and leave lists of small - but - vitally - important things for him to do and he forgets them all, I could knock out his teeth and sometimes I threaten to. (The teeth are all still his, so it would be a difficult task.) But he always catches my hands and holds them without speaking for a little while. Then he says, "Now, now, honey, there's plenty of time to get everything done. We'll do those jobs together. Do you know how much I missed you?" You can't stay upset for long with a husband like that. It works the same when he gets mad at me, sometimes for just cause. There was the time my foot slipped on the foot feed and I rammed the car into a tree on the front lawn, bending the front bumper into a jagged V. We were going to a party that night and I prayed it would be dark when Otis got home so he wouldn't notice the catastrophe. But he did, of course. He exploded, "Who'd you hit this time? Can't you ever look where you're going?" I didn't say a word. But I cried a little, which never hurts a thing. He subsided and wiped away my tears, which were real. He even laughed a little because his wife was so little and helpless and stupid. He said everything was all right and he'd have the car repaired in the morning. But when we drove to the party, he parked two blocks down the street so our friends wouldn't see that battered bumper. The old adage that it takes two to make a quarrel is definitely true. DEAR LOUISE: My husband is spending his retirement working for everybody but me! We have three widows living close, and he runs all their errands, does their plumbing, shovels their walks when it snows, weeds their gardens, shops for their groceries in bad weather and does everything else they ask him to. One of them even called him over to take a sliver out of her well-manicured finger! And what does he do for me? Absolutely nothing! I remind him of this all the time and sometimes I get a little loud about it, but it doesn't change him. So the other day I was so fed up that I really screamed at him. We went on from there. And we haven't spoken to each other for three days. Can we ever be happy together again? B.W. DEAR B.W.: Of course you can - if one of you will take the first step toward reconciliation. If you think he won't, then you do it. I've always been a believer in unsaying the things I shouldn't have said.

Plant clinic Monday in Panhandle

For those gardeners who spend more time pulling out dead or sick plants than weeding, the Carson County Extension Service is offering some free advice and diagnoses at a plant clinic on Monday. The clinic, which will include discussion on low maintenance landscaping designed for the Panhandle area, disease and plant control, and energy conservation, will begin at 1:30 p.m. at the War Memorial Building in Panhandle. A team of specialists will be available from 3 to 4:30 p.m. to diagnose specific problems for the individual who brings a sample of the unhealthy plant. Extension specialists on the program are Everette Janne of Texas A&M University, Dr. Carl Patrick of Amarillo, and Dr. Robert Berry and Dr. Dale Pennington, both of Lubbock.

Neta Eads back from convention

Miss Neta Eads, a senior at Angelo State University, returned last week from Miami, Fla., where she attended the 1979 national convention of Delta Zeta sorority. Miss Eads, president of the Lambda Omicron chapter of Delta Zeta at ASU, was one of about 600 sorority members who attended the convention, which included workshops, awards presentations, executive council elections and fellowships. A 1975 graduate of Pampa High School, Miss Eads will complete work in December on a degree in finance. She is employed in a bank in San Angelo this summer.

Dr. Lamb says

Persimmons can aggravate gout

DEAR DR. LAMB - I've heard about gout all my life and what causes it, but I've never heard what the symptoms of gout are and what to look for. Does it cause sores or bleeding? I would like some information on how it affects people. DEAR READER - Gout is caused by an overproduction of uric acid. This forms a salt and crystals of uric acid salt can settle in your joints. The classic symptom is the hot, red, painful, swollen great toe. You can have an inflammatory reaction with swelling in other joints besides the big toe. Some people have high blood uric acid levels yet do not develop gout. This is particularly true in women although women also can develop painful, inflamed gouty joints the same as men. The long term slow deposit of uric acid salts in and around the joint areas can cause joint deformity and gouty arthritis. Other than the arthritic changes of either the acute inflammatory or the chronic deforming type, there are very few symptoms that you would identify specifically as gout. The rest of its side effects are caused by associated disease of other organs, particularly heart disease and kidney disease. To give you a better concept of gout, I am sending you The Health Letter number 23, Gout, Uric Acid. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. DEAR DR. LAMB - I enjoy the lovely big persimmons that we have and eat one a day. I was told by a friend that doctors say they cause stones and fiber balls. I'm 70 and do have pockets in the intestines. I have not noticed any problem. Is his dangerous? DEAR READER - As a matter of fact, it is. Persimmons are one of certain food or plant substances that can cause bezoars. You can also get bezoars from hair. What is a bezoar? Well, it's an insoluble aggregation of material that hasn't been completely digested. They've been known for centuries. In fact, the word comes from Arabic. In antiquity, these were observed in the stomachs of the stomachs of goats and gazelles and were thought to have great medical value. It was claimed that they would cure such ailments as old age, snake bites and even remove evil spirits. When they form in the stomach, they can cause ulceration, and as they pass into the intestine, they can cause obstruction. The literature on the entire subject is voluminous, but in reference to persimmons, there is a material in the unripened fruit or under the skin of the ripe fruit that coagulates with acid in the stomach. It is this coagulated mass that forms the bezoar. And apparently, drinking copious amounts of water immediately after it actually makes the situation worse.

Dear Abby
by Abigail van Buren

DEAR ABBY: At 82, father is becoming increasingly frail and forgetful. He has substantial means and has lived alone with a housekeeper since Mother died five years ago. I am his only child (a daughter) with a family of my own. I've invited him to live with me but he's reluctant to give up the home he's lived in for so many years. Now the problem: Some former friends who wronged Dad in business years ago have suddenly started to visit him regularly. They've introduced him to a young member of their family and he has become quite infatuated with her. The dollar signs in her eyes are obvious to me, but not to Dad. I don't want to deprive my father of any real happiness in his last years, but neither do I want him to fall prey to these opportunists I do not trust. What, if anything, should I do. CONCERNED IN CALIF. DEAR CONCERNED: How much your father should be protected "for his own good" and whether he's competent to make his own decisions are proper questions to discuss with his lawyer and physician. In the meantime, spend as much time with your father as possible but resist the temptation to bad-mouth his new friends. DEAR ABBY: Perhaps you will put this letter in your own words and tell my husband that he needs help. He won't listen to me. He is 60 pounds overweight and, to make matters worse, a diabetic. He has a wonderful family who loves him very much. Whenever one of us reminds him that he needs to lose weight, he says, "So if I die, you will be left well-off." Please, please, help us to help him. He is a dear and wonderful person. I want him around to see his grandchildren grow up, and he won't be around if he doesn't take better care of himself. HIS WIFE DEAR WIFE: An obese person knows he needs to lose weight, and being constantly reminded of it will only make him feel guilty - which will make him feel rotten, which will cause him to eat to feel better. If he chooses to dig his own grave with his fork, no one can stop him. But if he really wants to help himself, let him write to me and I'll tell him what to do. DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful diamond ring which was given to me by my mother-in-law when I became engaged. It was given to her by her mother-in-law, so I consider it a priceless heirloom. When the time comes, I will offer the ring to my son for his bride - and that poses a problem because I have twin sons! How should it be decided which twin gets the ring? Should I go to the first-born twin? Or should they draw straws for it? They are only 17 now, so I have time to make that decision, but I would appreciate your suggestions. MOTHER OF TWINS DEAR MOTHER: The son who becomes engaged first should inherit the ring. And if the twins should announce a double engagement, let them draw straws.

HERE IS THE PATH

In all ways of life, keep him swinging in the proper STRIKE ZONE

PLAY BALL... is a familiar cry in the spring and summer. This is a time that parents and coaches, alike, encourage the boy not to swing unless the ball is in the strike zone... for in the early years of playing the game, the tendency is to swing at every pitch. This holds true in all of life, so it is up to wiser and older heads to train and encourage him in the better things. Bringing up a child is a serious matter and all can use help. Let the church help you to teach him the right ways.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv. Serv.

Drive for women priests gathering force

Although the tactics have turned more diplomatic, the drive for admission of women to the Roman Catholic priesthood is gathering force, with a rising share of American Catholics favoring it.

While those doing so still are a minority, a new Gallup poll finds that they now amount to 40 percent, a figure that has risen steadily and swiftly from 36 percent in 1977 and 29 percent in 1974.

At the same time, nuns and other groups of church women have joined in new, widely inclusive coalitions to press for official re-examination of the issue.

As part of a "Second Argument Project," a petition bearing 13,000 signatures was presented to U.S. Catholic bishops at their spring meeting in Chicago, urging them to seek such reconsideration.

It asked them to seek "withdrawal of the second argument" set forth in the 1977 declaration by the Vatican's congregation of doctrine that women cannot be ordained because they lack "natural resemblance" to Christ.

"This argument demeans all women and priests by claiming that male physical sexuality is the fundamentally important element in the priestly representation of the church," the petition says.

Its signatures were gathered by a newly formed Women of the Church Coalition, made up of 13 women's and social justice groups, and presented to Bishop Michael F. McAuliffe of Jefferson City, Mo., head of a bishops' committee on women.

Another coalition of eight national sisters organizations, called Sisters Uniting, urged continued dialogue on the issue, saying they question the "theological reasoning" of the Vatican declaration.

Meanwhile, the new Gallup poll, commissioned by Preists for Equality and the Quixote Center in Mt. Ranier, Md., found that while support for women priests is growing among Catholics, "strong opposition" has declined from 47 per cent in 1974 to 36 percent in 1979.

On the other hand, a recent reader survey by U.S. Catholic, a magazine published by the Claretian Fathers in Chicago, found a majority already favored women's ordination — 57 percent.

The 1977 Vatican declaration has been challenged by numerous church scholars, including the noted German theologian Karl Rahner who says its "argumentation is inadequate."

It is "not a definitive ruling, but may be revised in principle," he says. It was issued despite a finding shortly beforehand by the Vatican's Pontifical Biblical Commission that there were no Scriptural obstacles to ordination of women.

Some Vatican experts say the basic case against such ordinations actually is not Scripture or theology, but practicality — that it would hamper unity efforts with Eastern Orthodoxy, which strongly opposes women priests, and that it would have a negative impact in Third World areas of male-dominated cultures.

A rewarding year is ahead of you, provided you eliminate some of the unproductive things that have held you back in the past. Be hopeful regarding new starts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Treat your responsibilities realistically today instead of leaving things to pure chance. Dedication, not illusion, is needed to solve problems.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Avoid the company of persons today who deal in intrigue. They may attempt to draw you into something that isn't your style.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Success could elude you today if you underestimate either the challenge or your opposition. Size things up in advance with a critical eye.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Others will resent it today if they feel you are unduly flattering them in order to gain your ends. Be diplomatic, but not deceitful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Normally you're quite astute in business matters, but today you could be a shade too glib for your own good. Be a comparison shopper, not an impulsive buyer.

SAGITTARIUS (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A failure to cooperate with associates today could lead to your undoing. Where teamwork is required, put your share of the load.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may find it difficult today to be as productive as you'd like, owing to outside distractions. Put blinders on if conditions get out of hand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a low profile socially today, because if you hotdog it too much, you will be giving more ammunition to one who is already a trifle jealous of you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The outcome of events is a bit uncertain today, so be wary of taking too much for granted. Avoid making rose-colored projections.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be wary of a tendency today to say things to others without thinking. Thoughtless remarks could wound one who respects you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If someone is managing a situation for you today that could cost you out of your pocket, peek over his or her shoulder to be sure everything is going along properly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For the sake of expediency today you might agree to do something that won't serve your best interests. Make no decisions without considering all alternatives.

Museums shocked by veto

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' veto of state funds for seven university-affiliated Texas museums is a "shocking" blow, a spokesman for Texas museums said Thursday.

"We are fully aware that the governor anticipates each affiliated university picking up the slack, but this just will not happen in some instances and certainly not the whole budget," said Calvin Smith, vice president of the Texas Association of Museums and director of museum services at Lamar University.

Chrysler denies report of offer

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen and Chrysler Corp. have denied a trade publication report that the German auto giant is considering making an offering of nearly $1 billion for Chrysler, the stumbling laggard of the Big Three U.S. manufacturers.

Automotive News, in a copyright report prepared for its Monday edition, said the supervisory board of Volkswagenwerk AG met Thursday in West Germany to consider presenting an offer for Chrysler stock at $15 per share to its directors next week.

"I haven't heard anything about that. I don't know what you're talking about," said Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca when reporters caught up with him at a banquet Thursday night in Detroit. He called the report "pure speculation...it's really nothing."

Based on 64 million shares outstanding at the end of March, VW would pay $960 million for Chrysler.

The reported offering price would be close to twice the last price of Chrysler stock in trading Thursday, $7.88, but only 38 percent of the value of net assets of the company as carried on its books, slightly over $40 per share as of March 31.

"It's an asinine price," Iacocca said, in reference to the purported $15 per share offer.

In Wolfsburg, West Germany, a spokesman for Volkswagenwerk AG said the report was "not correct," and denied the board met Thursday. He said the company's financial committee did meet, but "decisions made there are never discussed."

Chrysler produced 2.2 million vehicles last year, making it the sixth largest producer in the world, behind VW with 2.4 million. Combined, the two companies would rank third behind General Motors and Ford.

Somoza balks at U.S. call for his job

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza balked at a U.S. call for his resignation but said he was open to "a democratic way of solving" the civil war ravaging Nicaragua.

Meanwhile, there was more heavy fighting between Somoza's troops and the Sandinista guerrillas in Managua's slum districts, but the guerrillas were reported slipping out of the barrios to fight somewhere else.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance called for the end of the 423-year Somoza family dictatorship on Thursday at a meeting of the Organization of American States in Washington. Declaring there has been a "breakdown in trust" between the government and the people of Nicaragua, he proposed the "replacement of the present government with a transitional government of national recognition."

"I gave my answer to Vance a long time ago," said Somoza, who has vowed repeatedly to stay in office until his term expires in 1981. "The same thing was said to me by Bowdler (special U.S. Ambassador William) Bowdler, and I proposed a plebiscite."

Bowdler went to Nicaragua last year to try to work out a settlement after a two-week uprising in September in which an estimated 1,500 persons were killed. But the mediation by the United States and several Latin-American nations failed.

Holmes defends boxing title tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes, the unbeaten heavyweight champion, and Roberto Duran and Carlos Palomino, two sluggers whose ability is greater than their size, fight tonight in Madison Square Garden.

Mike Weaver will be there, too.

The 26-year-old Weaver, who doesn't like the nickname "Hercules" and is hurt by being referred to a "tuneup," will fight Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship in a bout network television wouldn't buy and which seemingly all boxing writers and the smart-money boys consider no contest.

"It don't bother me what the experts say," said Weaver about his $50,000 shot at glory. "What do they know about boxing?"

"One to seven," said Holmes when asked for a prediction. "I can't say which is closer because he might go in seven seconds."

"I got to fight somebody," said the 29-year-old unbeaten champion, who already is signed to defend against Earnie Shavers on Sept. 14 in a fight to be televised by ABC. "I've been working 11 years to get where I am."

Holmes is fighting for a percentage and it is in the pocketbook that many observers think he will take a beating. "As long as I keep fighting and winning, the money will come," said Holmes.

Another man who could take a beating in the pocketbook, and knows it, is promoter Don King, who rented the Garden for $150,000 for the show. The presence of Duran-Palomino obviously is an attempt to spur gate sales — tickets range from $30 to $150 — and sales at the 45-location closed-circuit television network.

There will be no closed-circuit TV in the New York metropolitan area, but New York area subscribers of Home Box Office, which reaches 2 million sets in the country, will be able to see the two fights. King sold them to HBO for $200,000.

To many observers at Thursday's weigh-in, Jimmy Young of Philadelphia was an out-of-shape No. 5 contender as he weighed 235 pounds for his 10-round bout against Wendell Bailey, 202, of Baltimore. Young, who once lost a title bid against Muhammad Ali and beat George Foreman, lost decisions to Ocasio in his last two fights and has a 22-8-3 record, with seven knockouts. Bailey is 13-1, with three knockouts.

Newton takes golf lead

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Jack Newton, with a record-setting 64, had the first-round lead in the $350,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament, but it was Tom Watson the other pros were watching.

"When Watson's in the field," observed Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller, "you just say, 'Oh, hell, I'm playing for second again.' What a great player he is."

And Watson, the game's outstanding performer over the last 2½ years, appeared to have it back in gear again after missing the cut last week in the U.S. Open.

"I'm not looking back at that," Watson said after putting his way to a 5-under-par 66 Thursday. "That's over. That's history. I'm looking ahead to the rest of this week, to trying to shoot a good score every round. I'm ready to play."

And even though he trailed Newton by two shots after the first 18 holes of this national championship, Watson, too, broke the old course record on the 7,650-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club layout.

Three others — Zoeller, slump-ridden Johnny Miller and two-time Canadian champion Lee Trevino — matched the old standard of 67. "The course is in perfect condition. The weather was perfect," said Trevino, who chipped in for birdie on the final hole to gain his share of third place.

"It was a day when we caught Glen Abbey under the best conditions," said Jack Nicklaus, who designed the layout that will become a permanent home for the Canadian Open.

Bradley seeks first win of year

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Defending champion Pat Bradley is looking for her first victory of 1979 in the $100,000 Lady Keystone Open at the Hershey Country Club.

Bradley went on to win two other tournaments in 1978 after winning the Lady Keystone, and recorded her finest year, winning more than $118,000 to finish second to Nancy Lopez on the money list.

For 1979, Bradley is off to her best start in six years on the tour. She has won $89,000 despite the fact she hasn't won a tournament to date. She has five second-place finishes this season.

"I've been playing well, it's a matter of breaks between first and second," Bradley said.

Bradley said she feels that her advantage in the Lady Keystone will be her length off the tee. Hershey's West Course plays to a par-72 and is 6,398 yards, somewhat long by LPGA standards.

The defending champion said there are five key holes for this tournament. The most significant of those five are two back-to-back par fives on the home nine.

Challenging Bradley for the $15,000 winner's check will be hometown favorite Loqezhe leading money again this year, has five victories and has not finished out of the top 10 in 10 tournaments.

NBA to use three-point rule on trial basis

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Is the 3-point goal a gimmick whose only purpose is to capture the fans' fancy or is it a sound refinement in the way the game of basketball is played?

The National Basketball Association hopes to find out next season, when it will give the controversial rule a one-year trial run.

The NBA's Board of Governors voted to adopt the 3-point goal on an experimental basis at the opening session of its annual summer meetings Thursday following a debate that Commissioner Larry O'Brien described as spirited.

"It was the NBA traditionalists debating those who have experienced the 3-point goal, particularly in the American Basketball Association," said O'Brien. "It finally passed by a very close vote, so close that one straw could have turned it the other way."

A two-thirds majority was needed for acceptance and one source pegged the vote at 15-7. The only reason it passed was because of the stipulation that this was a one-year experiment and that another two-thirds vote will be needed next year for it to be retained.

Under the rule, which is similar to that used by the ABA, 3 points will be awarded for any shot made from beyond a designated perimeter of the floor ranging from 22 feet to 23 feet, 9 inches.

Proponents of the rule claim it will give the trailing team a chance to catch up quicker, thus adding excitement to the game, and also that it will open up the middle and reduce contact around the basket. Those opposed contend that a basket is a basket and distance should not enter into the equation.

In another major move, the governors voted to go back to two-man refereeing teams after trying a three-referee system for one year. Although the NBA coaches and general managers and the league's Rules and Competitions Committee all voted in favor of keeping the extra official, the owners turned it down, primarily for financial reasons.

"The board felt it did not have enough evidence that there had been satisfactory improvement in the officiating to warrant the expense of the extra referee," said O'Brien, who estimated the cost at $600,000.

Norm Drucker, the league's supervisor of officials and a former referee, said the NBA employed 38 officials last year. This number will be reduced to 26 or 27 for next season.

In other actions: —A proposal to legalize zone defenses was allowed to die in committee.

—The NBA pledged its assistance to the U.S. Olympic Committee for 1980 and a report was heard from the expansion committee, which is currently holding hearings to determine which two cities will be added to the league for the 1980-81 season.

The governors also formally approved the sale of the Houston Rockets to George Maloof.

Yeager guides Dodgers to win

By The Associated Press
Tom Lasorda was having lunch, and it came to him while passing the pasta.
"I had a feeling about putting Steve Yeager back behind home plate," said the manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers.
So Lasorda made up the lineup card Thursday night, writing in the name of his troubled catcher. And the decision looked like solid gold after Yeager blasted a three-run homer to help the slump-ridden Dodgers beat the Atlanta Braves 6-4.

"You always feel better when you contribute," said Yeager, who went into the game batting a horrendous 151. "I know things have been bad for us so far, but it's just a matter of some of the guys on this team turning their seasons around." Yeager is one of the keys, of course. A longtime first-stringer who helped the Dodgers win two straight National League pennants, he has been generally ineffective so far this year and has missed a lot of action.

Before the game, Lasorda had a heart-to-heart talk with Yeager.

"I told him I didn't think he was putting all his ability to good use," said Lasorda.
Lasorda also got a good night out of Reggie Smith, another problem-plagued member of the Dodgers, currently struggling in fourth place in the NL West, six games under .500. Smith walloped a two-run homer and stole two bases.
"Reggie Smith just played hard," said Lasorda. "He knew he had to do the job. He reached back for that something extra tonight."

Dodger right-hander Don Sutton snapped a personal three-game losing streak with the help of the long-ball support from Yeager and Smith and four relief-pitchers in the ninth.
Yeager belted his homer in the fourth following a double by Ron Cey. Smith's seventh homer of the season came after reliever Adrian Devine had walked Bill Russell in the fifth inning.
Sutton, 7-7, had lost his previous three starts but built his career record against the Braves to 31-11.

"I was flat-out lucky tonight," said Sutton. "I gave up four runs and wound up on the trainer's table in the ninth inning, and still won the game. Baseball sure is a crazy game."
Yankees 3, Blue Jays 1
Luis Tiant and two relievers scattered eight hits, leading New York over Toronto. The veteran right-hander worked into the eighth inning before surrendering a two-out double by Rico Carty. Jim Kaat came out of the bullpen to retire John Mayberry, then Ron Davis pitched the ninth and earned his second save.
The Yankees picked up all the runs they needed with two in the third against Dave Lemaczky. Al Woods dropped Jerry Narron's leadoff liner to left for an error, opening the door for an eventual RBI grounder by Fred Stanley and Bobby Brown's run-scoring single.
Brewers 3, Twins 2
Paul Molitor's bunt single with two out in the seventh inning scored Robin Yount from third base with the go-ahead run, leading Milwaukee over Minnesota.
Mike Caldwell pitched a five-hitter for the Brewers, who have won five straight games and seven of their last eight.

"Bunting is one of my tools — it's in my repertoire and I've got to use it," said Molitor. "I just knew if I made a good bunt there, we'd be ahead, 3-2."
A's 10, Royals 7
Tony Armas collected three hits, including a home run and a double, to lead Oakland over Kansas City. Winner Steve McCatty was forced to leave the game in the eighth inning, when the Royals scored four runs — two on George Brett's eighth home run of the season.
Red Sox 3, Tigers 2
Fred Lynn drove in Jerry Remy with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, leading Boston over Detroit behind the seven-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley.
White Sox 9, Mariners 5
Lamar Johnson drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Mitt May hit a solo homer to pace Chicago over Seattle, snapping the Mariners' four-game winning streak.
Kangars 3, Angels 2
Jim Sundberg blooped a two-out single in the 11th inning to score Richie Zisk from third base and lead Texas past California.
Sparky Lyle, 4-6, pitched two shutout innings of relief for the victory.

CARL YASTRZEMSKI of the Boston Red Sox (right) hands Detroit manager Sparky Anderson his cap after Anderson threw it on the ground when umpires ruled a hit by Ron LeFlore was a ground-rule double instead of a home-run. The ball bounced off a fielder's glove and into the stands.

Lemon to coach All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Lemon will put on his New York Yankees uniform once more when he manages the American League in the All-Star Game against the National League at Seattle July 17.
"I feel very great" about being named AL manager, Lemon said. "I feel that it's an honor to be the manager of the All-Star Game. Always when I was playing I looked forward to playing in it. I was a coach twice and an honorary captain once."
Lemon was named manager of the Yankees at midseason in 1978, taking over for Billy Martin, leading the team to a World Series victory and was named AL Manager of the Year. He was replaced as manager last Monday by Martin.
"Bob wanted to be the All-Star manager and he certainly earned the honor," said AL President Lee MacPhail. "It seems to me that Bob is the perfect choice. He has been active in the league and has seen all the teams this year, and he knows all the league talent thoroughly."
"Together, we hope to select the best possible club to oppose Tommy Lasorda and the Nationals."
A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Lemon was a 20-game winner for the Cleveland Indians seven times, pitched in four All-Star games and two World Series as an Indian.
It will not be the first time that a manager has been called from the sidelines to handle an All-Star team. The last was Dick Williams, who piloted the 1974 American League team after resigning as Oakland manager following the 1973 World Series. But by then, he had been signed by the California Angels.
In the very first All-Star Game at Comiskey Park in Chicago, in 1933, John McGraw managed the National League team although he had been replaced as New York Giants manager by Bill Terry during the 1932 season.
