Governors given more gas authority

WASHINGTON (AP) President Carter, faced with federal rules that contribute to long gasoline lines in urban areas, is granting governors new authority to shift up to 5 percent of their state's gasoline supplies from the country to the city.

That would be in addition to the 5 percent "set aside" they already control.

Carter made the new offer Monday after being told federal allocation rules "put the gasoline where the cars are not."

The common reaction of several governors queried was that they would have to wait until they see specifics of the plan before commenting on how it might work in their states.

Carter planned to work today on details of a "bold and forceful program" to cut the nation's thirst for imported oil.

He will explain the general outline of the program in a broadcast speech to the nation Thursday at 9 p.m. EDT—his third energy speech since taking office.

The program is expected to include a revived standby gasoline rationing plan, federal incentives for producing synthetic fuels, mandatory thermostat controls for non-residential buildings and a fleshed-out version of an "energy security fund" he proposed in his last energy speech.

There also could be some replays of earlier proposals, such as the ill-fated tax on industrial users of oil to encourage them to shift to coal, which was part of a package Carter sent to Congress in 1977. Referring to that package Monday, White House press secretary Jody Powell said: "If those proposals had been accepted, we would be in much better shape than we are now."

This time Carter is taking special pains to clear his proposals in advance with key members of Congress and their staffs. Powell said two task forces are being set up to include administration and White House officials and representatives of Congress. One deals with energy and the other to the closely related topic of inflation.

Carter said Monday he is convinced Congress, which so far has rejected all administration proposals aimed specifically at curbing oil use, is now ready to act because of current fuel shortages, the threat of a home heating oil "crisis" next winter and the shock of this year's 60 percent price increase by oil exporting countries.

"I want a bold and forceful program that will be highly acceptable and that we can move without delay," Carter told a group of energy advisers at the start of a White House meeting Monday.

Just before that meeting began, Energy

Secretary James Schlesinger told Carter, in a murmured exchange picked up by tape recorder microphones, that federal gasoline allocation rules are hurting urban areas by continuing to ship gasoline to the country despite reductions in long distance driving.

"It's a uniform formula," Schlesinger said. "The effect is to..."

"Put the gasoline where the automobiles are?" Carter asked.

"No... what it does is to put the gasoline where the cars are not. Puts it in the rural areas where people are no longer going on weekends," Schlesinger said.

Shortly afterward, Carter approved a change that gives governors power to authorize refiners to shift up to 5 percent of a state's gasoline allocation from areas of relative plenty to those with less gas. In most cases, that would be rural to urban. But in the rare instance where the shortage might be reversed, the flow would be the other way. The new power is in addition to the 5 percent "set aside" pool of gasoline already granted the governors for priority users, such as farmers.

The new ruling also would allow refiners to shift some gasoline supplies from one state to another.

FIREMEN found a different kind of problem when they answered a call on a vehicle fire Monday afternoon. The fire itself was no problem, but a dog who found his way into a water hole — and decided to take a nap — was an obstacle they couldn't overcome. The firefighters decided to "let sleeping dogs lie," and Fido stayed where he was.

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE Reagan Brown, at Perry Lefors Field this morning, inspects a Martin 404 being used to spray for grasshoppers. (Staff photo)

Ag commissioner sees spray efforts

Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan V. Brown, in Pampa today to observe the local war against grasshoppers, said he hopes spraying of area grasslands can be completed within a week.

Under a program combining local, state and federal resources, 1.5 million acres in 13 Panhandle counties are being sprayed to combat a severe grasshopper infestation. (See related story on page three.) Despite several setbacks, about 500,000 acres have been sprayed in the last two weeks.

Brown is touring the infested areas "to see how things are going," he said. Noting that the Texas Department of Agriculture has spent almost $500,000 on fighting the grasshoppers, Brown said "We're putting about all the available funds we have into the program up here."

Spraying operations have been hampered by fuel shortages and gusty winds. Brown said "We've just been scrapping to get fuel," he said.

By 8:30 this morning the planes had used 12,000 gallons of fuel, Brown said. Spraying was halted while officials waited for another 8,000 gallons to be delivered at noon today.

"We've been having a little trouble with the wind," he said. "They've been having to work two to three hours in the morning and then cut back. We need some cloudy, windless mornings."

"It's taking a little longer than we expected. It looks like it will be another week before we finish."

Malathion, the chemical used in the program, is "about as environmentally safe as possible," the commissioner said.

"We've been getting real good control in the areas already sprayed," he added.

What's inside

Flasher arrested

An area man was arrested Monday afternoon after he allegedly exposed himself to a group of Pampa children.

Victor G. Rodriguez, 29, of a Star Route address is being held in county jail in lieu of $1,500 bond set this morning by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford.

At 2:10 p.m. Monday, police received a complaint from employees of the Community Day Care Center, who reported a case of indecent exposure at Central Park. Two officers drove to the park and found three males, one of whom was Rodriguez.

The officers were told that Rodriguez had lowered his pants and exposed his genitals to a 10-year-old girl, an 8-year-old girl and a 6-year-old boy. He also reportedly attempted to grab another 6-year-old boy.

Rodriguez was arrested and placed in the city jail after being charged with indecency with a child. He was transferred to county jail this morning.

Offices closed

Most city and county offices will be closed Wednesday in observance of Independence Day.

The police and fire departments will function as usual, as will the Gray County Sheriff's Office Department of Public Safety troopers will also be on duty throughout the day.

Rodeo entries due

Local person wishing to enter an event in the Top O' Texas Rodeo must do so before 5 p.m. Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Amateur cowboys and cowgirls may enter the professional rodeo, provided they live in Gray County and pay their entry fee before the deadline. Late entries will not be accepted.

Fire warning given

With a record area wheat crop this year, Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan cautioned area holiday celebrators to exercise caution when using fireworks.

"If folks would just stop and think while they are enjoying themselves," Jordan said, "we can get through the holiday without serious incident. We have a very good wheat crop in the county this year, but the harvest is a little late."

Jordan said several area farmers had contacted him concerning the possible danger to their crops from holiday celebrators. Both city and county fire runs have increased in recent days, and many of the fires being caused by careless use of fireworks.

"We need to make a co-ordinated effort to assure that some fellow doesn't lose a thousand acres or so of wheat through someone's carelessness," Jordan said.

Mangold: Controversy not cause of resignation

DPS upset with resigned JP

OTTO MANGOLD

Strained relations between the Precinct 2, Place 2, Justice of the Peace office and Department of Public Safety troopers preceded the resignation Monday of JP Otto Mangold. But the resigned judge said Monday night "my trouble with the highway patrol" had nothing to do with his decision to step down.

Mangold said he resigned for reasons of "health, personal reasons, and because of the 1980 redistricting of county precincts which will make it unnecessary to have two justices of the peace in Precinct 2."

The judge said he had been offered a job with a local private concern beginning in January. "If I'd waited until the redistricting to resign, the job might not have been available," Mangold said.

The expected redistricting of the county's four precincts in 1980 would eliminate the necessity of two JPs in Precinct 2.

According to the judge's docket book, no traffic tickets were filed in Mangold's office by DPS troopers after June 18. Mangold's resignation, effective June 30, was accepted by commissioners Monday.

Mangold said he submitted his resignation to Judge Carl Kennedy sometime between June 18 and June 21. He said the cutoff of traffic tickets "had nothing to do" with his resignation, but admitted there was a conflict with DPS officers. "There was some controversy as to my way of doing things," he said. "During my time in office there were several times I didn't fine the offender as much as the highway patrol thought they should be fined."

Mangold said an incident involving a man charged with driving without a license was "the one that chopped the hatchet off."

According to Mangold, the man told troopers he had not had a driver's license for nearly 10 years. The JP said he fined the man $18.50, "the usual fine for first offense driving without a license."

Mangold said the highway patrol "was not very happy about my handling of that case" because he asked the offender, "How come you told the highway patrol this (length of time he hadn't had a license), when no one knew it but you?"

Mangold said DPS troopers never brought another ticket into his office after the incident. But the docket book shows no record of the case for June, according to Precinct 2, Place 1, JP Nat Lunsford.

DPS Sgt. Jim Powell said Monday tickets filed with Mangold's office were cut off after June 18 to avoid transfer of tickets when the judge resigned.

"I had heard confidentially that he was going to resign and so I didn't want to load up his docket with cases," Powell said.

Tax burden grows heavier as we go

We're seeing the light at the end of the tunnel now. The hour is near when we can put the shekels we earn in our pockets instead of paying them out for taxes; that is, for the remainder of the year only.

It seems only yesterday, but it was two or three years ago that concerned citizens knowledgeable of the growing onus of taxation in the United States, were pointing out that one had to work that year until a day in May just to pay taxes.

And now they point out that last year - in 1978 - you worked 153 days - until 7:12 a.m. on June 2 - just to pay taxes - before you started to keep the money you earned. Up until that time, every penny you earned and every hour you worked was only toward paying your taxes.

Now we did not make up those figures or those times. It came straight to us from Congressman Steven D. Symms of Idaho, a member of the Interior and Insular Affairs and Agriculture committees of the House of Representatives, and a staunch member of the National Tax Limitation Committee.

Even with inflation smothering us, most of us probably have been thinking that surely we ought to have a thin dime left, but, surely enough, we pick up the piggybank and it rattles not.

Taxes took it. If we worked last year until 7:12 a.m. on June 2 before we could start keeping the money we earned, then perhaps we really do see the light at the end of the tunnel and by the time you are reading this dissertation, it will be far enough into June of this year for you to have caught up with your tax paying and to have started keeping your earnings.

Congressman Symms reports that the percentage of your income which goes toward paying taxes is not decreasing - despite all the emphasis that has been placed on the influence of Proposition 13 - and the simple truth is that you pay more every year for taxes, whether you live in Othessa, Dallas, New York City or Nome.

He points out that in 1948 a sum of 24.2 cents of every dollar went for taxes. In 1957 it was 35.5 cents; in 1968 it was 39.2 cents, and in 1978, 42 cents.

Taxation, of course, is not the devil's handiwork but the devilish handiwork of politicians. They are largely free-spenders and squanderers. Lewis K. Uhler, president of the National Tax Limitation Committee (headquarters 2233 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20007), says that if "we don't stop the free-spending politicians from squandering our tax dollars and inflating our currency, we will have a financial crisis that will make the Depression look like child's play."

He adds most of us have come to realize, that if we don't stop the politicians now, inflation will continue its upward spiral, wiping out our hard earned savings, our dollar will continue to weaken - jeopardizing the fiscal integrity of the entire western world - and businesses will stagger, jobs will be lost - and everything that we have all worked for could collapse around us.

Some states have gun tax limitation action as the fever spreads across the nation, but tax limitation on the state level, while most worthy and necessary, is only a drop in the bucket compared to what is necessary on the federal level.

It is up to the people, who may now be taxed to the point where they are willing to forget about regional and local goodies placatively tossed to them by the politicians, to give those same politicians a clear mandate to make cuts - quickly - large cuts now in spending and in taxes. Many politicians still don't believe there is a tax revolt. Each individual taxpayer can play a part in making believers out of the politicians by adding his voice to the loud mandate rising over the land.

Briefly noted...

By DON GRAFF
While the industry has been responding coolly to Transportation Secretary Brock Adams' repeated urgings to "re-invent" the automobile, students at a technical college in the Netherlands may have beaten Detroit to it.

A recent news brief informs that their experimental model borrows a fuel-economy competition with a top speed of just over 9 miles an hour. That won't burn up any tracks, but at the equivalent of 2,070 miles to a gallon of gas it's guaranteed to leave the energy crisis in the dust. And with a little tinkering, the designers think they might be able to hit 18 flat out.

There is something other than speed, or lack of it, that could be a problem in selling much of the public on the vehicle. To minimize wind resistance, the driver of the cigar-shaped sub-compact has to be flat on his back.

But then, it's just possible that in a continuing fuel pinch even that considerable obstacle to widespread acceptance could be overcome - providing power steering, air conditioning and other options were right.

Where there was smoke . . .

Speaking of fuel, Cleveland recently observed the anniversary of an event that has done more than add some to jokes about the city.

It was back in 1969 that the Cuyahoga River, meandering through the city's industrial heart, caught fire. The event did nothing for Cleveland's already well-earned reputation. But it did spur the environmental movement. The burning river became a negative symbol locally and nationally.

The Cuyahoga today, while still not what you would want piped into your pool, is a different river. Cleanup efforts have changed its waters from thick black to a more fluid brown.

It's almost never too late, it appears. And a society that has been able in 10 years to make the sludge-like Cuyahoga again hospitable to birds and fish clearly has proved its capability of meeting formidable technological challenges once aroused. Bring on the energy crisis.

How about the $5 and $10?

Speaking of anniversaries, it is a century since the opening of the first 5- and 10-cent store, F. W. Woolworth's in Lancaster, Pa. A wire report on the occasion notes that none of the chain's outlets today sells anything for a nickel. There are, however, a number of items still obtainable for a dime.

Comforting, perhaps, but an artificial rose, a bubble pipe and a comb as examples of current rock-bottom pricing only make the good old days look even better.

A shipshapelier Navy

Concerned about the tonnage of personnel as well as ships, the Navy is going all out to shape up its crews.

A new weight-control program will assist personnel in shedding excess poundage. It's not so much a matter of getting into fighting trim, according to Navy spokesmen, as eliminating pot bellies that "detract from good military appearance."

Seamen and women are being advised to shape up and slim down or face disciplinary action. Short rations, possibly?

Businessmen vs free enterprise

By ALLAN C. BROWNFIELD
Washington-Much of the accepted "political wisdom" has long held that businessmen were advocates of free enterprise and small and limited government. This was, we were told, the "conservative" position. The "liberal" position, on the other hand, was one of advocating increasing government intervention in the economy, always, of course, "in the public interest."
Suddenly, in 1978, these old certainties no longer seem accurately to describe what is occurring within the body politic. Businessmen oppose only certain very specific governmental interventions in the economy - the ones they perceive as harmful to themselves. When government intervention, as through the Civil Aeronautics Board or the Interstate Commerce Commission, seems to benefit them, they are all for it. We then face the irony of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., calling for competition in air fares and routes while the airlines themselves vigorously oppose such free enterprise. Who, then, is the liberal - and who the conservative?
Businessman Sidney Lewis, addressing the annual meeting of Best Products, declared, "One of the greatest enemies of the free enterprise system in the U.S. is the business corporations of this country... The free enterprisers of America are committing free enterprise suicide... the simple truth is that too many businessmen are afraid to compete."

Lewis reminded Best's shareholders that the company's growth from $75,000 a year family business to a $525 million public corporation was a 21 year struggle to compete. The biggest barrier to competition was fair trade laws, which until recently, made disconcerting illegal.
"Although the fair trade laws have been outlawed, there are manufacturers still today who refuse to sell to us for fear we will discount their suggested selling prices, which have been set and maintained by collusion with retailers and distributors," he said.
Mr. Lewis continued, "It used to be that the proper competitive response to soft demand was to lower prices. Nowadays there is no need to cut the price. You can ask the government for a subsidy (like farmers); or an import quota (like steel, textiles, shoes and televisions); and if these avenues are closed to you then try an antitrust suit... at the very least you can persuade your state legislature that our particular occupation needs licensing."

Citing stockbrokers whose beliefs in free markets do not extend to competitive brokerage rates and airline presidents whose dedication to competition stops short of deregulating their own industry, Lewis added: "I could hardly believe my eyes upon reading a Metropolitan Richmond Chamber of Commerce pronouncement that it, too, was opposed to price competition in the airline industry. If the Chamber of Commerce thinks this is the way to defend the free market, the old American system really is on the way down the drain."
Today, America's business schools teach courses entitled "Doing Business In a Regulated Economy." More and more, business has accepted the idea that the economy will be regulated - its only concern being that it be regulated to benefit business.
Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, a member of the House-Senate conference committee on the Energy Act, recalls that when the administration first introduced its energy plan, business vigorously opposed it. Then, the White House invited the chief officers of major corporations to Washington for breakfast with the president and a little straight talk about the realities of business in a regulated environment. At this meeting, Rep. Brown reports, "They heard some not-so-subtle threats. The steel industry executives were told... that if they didn't back off opposition to the administration's flawed energy package, the administration might not set a high priority on the problems of the steel industry when tariff negotiations were next underway with the Japanese. The chief executive officers of textile companies and others similarly afflicted by foreign imports got the idea about the use of 'administrative judgment' in an area vital to their survival... An official of the Department of Energy told an official of a medium-sized oil company that DOE hoped his company officials would not interpret vigorous pursuit of regulatory discipline of the company by the department as harassment for the company's continued opposition to the gas bill."

In the end, business decided not to oppose the president's proposals. "In the game of stare down over the natural gas bill," Rep. Brown declared, "the leaders of American free enterprise had looked into the eyes of a weak president - and blinked."
Now, business is being asked by the president to accept his "voluntary" guidelines - with the veiled threat that if they do not, the power of the government will be used against them. Most businessmen will, of course, go along. Prof. Herbert Stein, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under Presidents Nixon and Ford, wrote a sample letter to the president which he hoped U.S. business leaders might use: "If the price standards were mandated by an Act of Congress, which would be subject to judicial review, we would conform to them, although we might complain. However, as you have emphasized, your program is voluntary, which seems to imply that we have the right to decide whether to participate or not to participate. We are aware, of course, that in declining to commit ourselves to compliance we are exposing ourselves to the risk of losing government contracts, being harassed... To use these sanctions against us as punishment for failure to comply with standards established by executive fiat... would, in our opinion, violate the constitutional bar against taking property without due process of law."
How many American businessmen will dare to speak up for free enterprise?

American grain as a weapon

"A bushel of wheat for a barrel of oil... Cheaper crude or no more food..."
Some of us have been seeking to focus attention on a grotesque inequity by shouting about it, singing about it and needing anybody who won't pay attention.
Our nation, in concert with other food-producing nations, could indeed control the world price for food grains together as selfishly as the oil nations have controlled oil prices - theoretically.
But when Congress does not jump to its feet applauding the suggestion what needs to be understood is that our government does not control the market even for our own grain. Seven families do.
To the graduates of the University of Minnesota, Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland said that the "bushel for a barrel formula" is not workable.
He said if we raised wheat prices to match oil prices that grain-consuming nations would shop elsewhere, eat rice instead.
So, he said, "Paul Harvey has a good idea which is not workable."
If my recommendation is simplistic, so is the secretary's premise.

In a recent volume called "Merchants of Grain," author Dan Morgan relates in a fascinating manner the origin and machinations of five companies owned by seven families which control the $50 billion international grain trade: Cargill and Continental, Bunge and Dreyfus and Andre.
The "bushel for a barrel" premise is not beyond reach, but proponents need to know what they are up against and the objections are not so simple as the secretary suggests.
This is a nest of wasps we're kicking.
Henry Kissinger tried to use U.S. food as a weapon against the Russians in 1975. He got his nose bloodied and he may have cost Gerald Ford the 1976 election.
Some protest that we cannot in good conscience allow our nation to play politics with hunger. Horsefeathers! Repeatedly our nation has played politics with food. We made Iran an agricultural dependency.
The oligopolies of a dozen foreign nations have strengthened their political power and enriched their leaders with the help of American grain.
While the U.N. thought it was enforcing a trade embargo on previously white-ruled Rhodesia, that country continued to receive millions of dollars worth of American corn.

The grain sale to Russia in 1972 was initiated and finalized before American farmers or consumers knew anything about it.
Playing politics with grain is not new. The merchants of grain operated through the global food crisis of 1974 and 1975.
But what makes the subject so super-sensitive now is that the Koreagate scandals threw rice in a lot of red faces in high places.
Author Morgan concedes that the grain giants have been useful, probably necessary. He suspects they should be scrutinized and perhaps regulated.
But I want this to show that you and I do know that the bushel for a barrel formula is nothing our country can accomplish without socializing another industry.
And with that as the alternative, perhaps these giants would like to volunteer some co-operation.

Business view point

By Jay VanAndel & Richard M. DeVos
The failure of President Carter and the Congress to reduce inflation has triggered that longing for another futile attempt to legislate and regulate the economy. But wage and price controls are no substitute for political courage. In the absence of a willingness by a majority in the Congress to reduce government spending significantly, a growing number of people in the country are telling the pollsters they favor controls. They have short memories.
It was just 7 years ago that President Nixon surprised most of us by announcing that he would solve his inflation problem by imposing wage and price controls. We went through four "Phases" with Mr. Nixon, and there is general agreement that inflation was not halted but increased, although the effect was postponed somewhat.
The Heritage Foundation's Robert Scheutinger reminds us in his timely new book, "Forty Centuries of Wage and Price Controls: How Not To Fight Inflation", Washington's army nearly starved at Valley Forge because of what John Adams called "that improvident Act for limiting prices (which) has done great injury and (which) in my sincere opinion, if not repealed will ruin the state and introduce civil war". It was repealed in June 1778.
The pages of history are replete with examples of the failures of wage and price controls. Scheutinger notes that in ancient Egypt, controls over the grain crop eventually caused a government take-over of all the land, and even German economic planner, Herman Goering, is said to have tried to impose controls and failed.

Amazingly, our own policymakers refuse to benefit from the experiences of history. They simply ignore the reality that reduced federal spending and a balanced budget will do more than anything to bring the economy under control.
The President no longer has the power to impose wage and price controls, so the ball is in the Congressional court. However, when jawboning fails, and government spending remains unchecked and inflation continues, do not be surprised if politicians take their cue from the White House and eagerly pass the legislation which will get them off the hook. Then, a new wage-price control package would provide a cosmetic "solution" to the problem of inflation and subsequently become part of the record of dismal failures of economic policy.
It is not a pleasant scenario, and there is no reason it should occur. If enough of our lawmakers are made aware of history and encouraged to vote according to conscience, rather than political intuition, perhaps this time they will say, "NO".

Berry's World

Jack Strickland -- the John Wayne of sprayers

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

It is 5:15 a.m. and a light warm wind — accompanied by short brilliant flashes of distant lightning — is blowing over the runways and hangers at Perry Lefors Airport.

Inside the airport lounge, two grease-stained men are sleeping fitfully across inset chairs next to an empty circular fireplace. Unknown to the sleepers, a specimen of the enemy, a half grown orthopterous insect commonly known as a grasshopper, springs through a jam in the door into the lighted lounge vestibule.

As if to heighten the suspense of an insect disaster movie, one of the men starts, then begins to breathe in heavy, explosive bursts. He is still wearing his cowboy boots, his wrist watch, and cigarettes and papers are intact in his shirt pocket.

Jack Strickland, the John Wayne of crop dusters, is oblivious to the single grasshopper, though he may have had to count a few imaginary ones to ease his six foot plus frame into a single hour of sleep. A pilot for Air Applicators, a company under government contract for the extermination of grasshoppers in the Panhandle, Strickland has spent most of the night repairing his World War II Lockheed PV-2 aircraft for battle with the insects over 23,000 acres of grassland in Roberts and Hutchinson counties.

The day before was "one of those days" for Strickland. After two and a half hours in the air, he landed his plane safely, parked and disembarked, and then stood on the runway and watched one of his plane's 1500-16 aircraft tires blow up.

For a moment it must have seemed like the grasshoppers were winning, since the need for a new tire was added to the need to overhaul the PV-2's brakes. For a new tire, Strickland called Amarillo, San Antonio, and Dallas, all unsuccessfully, before finding the requisite wheel in Denver.

Back in the lounge, Strickland tilts himself to a sitting position, reaches for a cigarette, and seems to wonder where he is. After a slug or two of coffee he heads out to the ramp to check out the plane.

In less than an hour the program coordinators from the USDA and Texas Department of Agriculture, and Air Applicator pilots, will gather around a nearby table to plot the day's spraying over section maps marked in red and yellow.

Strickland and his co-pilot will fly 110 mph at an altitude of about 50 feet, to assure that the insecticide hits the ground. At such an altitude, pilots rely on depth perception rather than an altimeter. Temperatures over 80 degrees and wind over 10 mph makes it nearly impossible to spray. So spraying is done in three hour stretches, usually from about 5:30 to 10 in the morning.

Strickland makes the three-hour run on an hour's sleep in a cockpit in which it's difficult to hear yourself think. Afterwards, he stops to talk about the trade.

"You get a feeling, it's hard to explain, a feeling you don't get anyplace else in the world. No, it's not a test of endurance especially, it's a challenge in that you're causing an aircraft to do what you want it to do.

Strickland, who along with other Air Applicator pilots and mechanics has just come from a "grasshopper job" in Utah and usually works five months from early spring to mid-summer, says the Panhandle infestation is hardly the worst he's seen.

"1972, Pendleton, Oregon," he says. "They were so thick on the runway, taxi way, the parking ramps that they caused the ground to be slick. You could put out your hand like this and couldn't help hit three or four of them. You wouldn't believe it, you'd have to see it."

JACK STRICKLAND climbs into the cockpit of his spraying plane, converted from a World War II fighter into its present capacity. Strickland said the grasshopper infestation in the Panhandle isn't the worst he's seen — that dubious honor belongs to a city in Oregon.

Dr. Bullington will practice ophthalmology

A native Texan has returned home for the dry climate and to practice ophthalmology, a branch of medical science concerned with the structure, function and diseases of the eye.

Born in Fort Worth, Dr. S.J. Bullington moved here recently from Bath, Maine, where he had been practicing eye medicine since 1966. His medical services had extended past his residential area into the Brunswick, Maine, area.

At the same time, he consulted for the Department of neurosurgery at Maine Medical Center in Portland, Maine.

"I got homesick for Texas," he said of his return to the Lone Star State, "and I like the air in the Texas Panhandle."

He received his doctor of medicine degree at Baylor University in 1951 after attending Texas A&M University at College Station.

His education continued in Boston from 1952 and 1956, where he received specialized training on diseases concerning the eye at Harvard Medical School, Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and Massachusetts General Hospital.

He moved to Philadelphia, Pa., in 1962 and was on the staff of the Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine until 1966. In the same period, he was a research associate of the Will's Eye Hospital.

The American Board of Ophthalmology certified Bullington as a practitioner, and he is licensed to practice medicine and surgery in Texas, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Maine.

He has set up his office at 800 N. Sumner, where he will do complete eye examinations. He also prescribes eye glasses.

Bullington, his wife and four children reside at 2554 Aspen. Another son is attending school in Seattle, Wash.

He said that he is glad to be home and already has received a friendly reception from the people of Pampa and the staff at Highland General.

Rabies test due for 8-year-old girl

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Doctors hope to know today if an 8-year-old Eagle Pass girl, in critical condition at Santa Rosa Medical Center, is infected with the deadly rabies virus.

The child, whose identity has not been released, was admitted last week with symptoms that might suggest rabies, said hospital spokesman Jack Finger.

She was bitten by a rabid dog May 31 in Eagle Pass. She began the 21-shot immunization series June 5 and completed it June 26.

Initial rabies tests were negative, but doctors in the Southwest Texas border city referred her to Santa Rosa when the symptoms persisted.

Winds gusted to 40 mph at the Lubbock airport and marble size hail fell at Levelland late Monday as thunderstorms rumbled across West Texas.

There were no immediate reports of serious damage.

Forecasts called for more widely scattered thunderstorms in West Texas today, but the rest of the state was to have clear to partly cloudy skies with temperatures mostly in the 90s.

Although several areas of West Texas had thunderstorm activity during the night, all the activity ceased long before dawn. Rainfall amounts were light.

Showers and occasional thunderstorms were reported early today from Alabama to Wisconsin and across the Plains from the Dakotas through the Texas panhandle.

Clements has energy answer: Have Mideast 'name its poison'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements suggests the United States should play financial tit-for-tat with the Mideast, pegging the price of U.S. exports to the cost of Arab crude oil.

"We should say, in effect, 'name your poison.' We can play that game as well as they can," Clements told reporters Monday.

Clements said President Carter's announcement that the United States would freeze oil imports at current levels until 1985 illustrates Carter "has a great facility for making bad decisions."

"Creating more energy is the only thing that will solve our problem," Clements said. "I think Mr. Carter has made a bad mistake."

"We're on the horns of a dilemma," Clements added. "We must import (petroleum products) to sustain economic growth. We're on very dangerous ground. We can't cut back on imports. If we do cut back on imports, we cut back on growth. This country can't stand a no-growth policy — that's nonsense."

A Carter adviser has predicted the United States will have "roughly a zero growth rate" this year, partly because of the recent hike in crude oil by OPEC nations.

Clements also said he was in Houston recently, and Texas' allocation of gas to motorists on an odd-even day basis has cut the length of lines of drivers waiting for gas.

Bruce Hardy of Dallas gave Clements two T-shirts, illustrated with a sketch of a tie and the words, "Texas Dress Shirt." "We designed this for you," Hardy said at the presentation in the governor's reception room.

"That's pretty cute," said Clements. Clements and his staff now work without ties in shirt-sleeves, and he was asked if he might don one of the T-shirts.

"I don't think I will, but I can see how some would," said Clements.

Clements said he visited with several hundred persons over the weekend, and "I found no one who didn't like" his "no tie, no coat" policy.

State being shorted on gasoline supplies?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A full share of gas might not be coming to Texas because all station owners may not know about the growth factor included in the Department of Energy's allocation formula, says State Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, D-Galveston.

"I think there's a serious question whether the station owner has known he could prove the growth to the supplier and demand the growth factor, and if the supplier refuses he can appeal to the DOE," Schwartz said Monday.

About 800 appeals from Texas station owners and distributors are pending, he said.

Schwartz, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, was in Washington to find out about possible witnesses for a committee hearing July 14 on the Texas gas and diesel fuel situation.

"The natural resources committee is the energy committee of the Senate," he said, adding it would continue to monitor the current shortage until the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Council swings into operation in September.

Schwartz said the allocation formula provides for adjustments if a growth greater than 10 percent can be shown above the 1978 base year.

"What I found out was a formula exists and the question becomes one of, 'Is it being applied by all the people who are entitled to it?'" he said.

The state senator said he also left his meeting with DOE staff members less worried that Gulf Coast residents would be up a gas-less creek if a hurricane strikes.

The Fans Elect

When former Senator Eugene McCarthy ran as an independent candidate for president in 1976, he received about 750,000 votes. When major league baseball fans elected the sport's all-star teams the following year, Minnesota Twins first baseman Rod Carew received more than four million votes. Since baseball fans again began selecting the teams in 1970, the annual all-star balloting has become the nation's largest non-government election in number of votes cast. Carew, now with the California Angels, and Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench have been elected all-stars every year in this decade. Together they have polled more than 37 million votes. This year's all-star balloting ends tomorrow.

DO YOU KNOW — In what city will this year's All-Star Game be played?

Baby stuck in the tub

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Janet Hansmann couldn't have thrown the baby out with the bath water if she wanted to. Her 15-month-old son Johnny got three fingers caught in the tub drain.

She called in firemen, but they couldn't help. So they called an ambulance, and took Johnny — and the bathtub — to the hospital.

The doctors couldn't help so they called in a plumber, who removed the drain plug from Johnny's fingers in the hospital maintenance department.

Marriage should satisfy both partners' changing needs

Getting something you want, especially if you have wanted it for a long time, is a great joy. It can give you exhilaration, satisfaction, heady happiness. But it is short-lived unless it is also a need. You want nice clothes, expensive food, trips to far places and a mansion to live in. But you need a full stomach, warmth when you're old and human companionship that makes you feel comfortable and loved and pleased to be alive.

When we reach the age of fifty or sixty or plus, the stage where you and I are now, the wants are less and the needs are greater. We don't crave the fabulously rich adornments that we once thought were so important to our happiness. We can be content without a new car every whipsnitch, a different formal for every party, membership in every club in town and a yearly paint job on everything we own. We are usually content with an apartment instead of a house. (If we can't afford a maid, and I can't, we can be glad there's that much less space to keep clean.) We wear our clothes longer than we used to. We are glad to pay bills for only the things we require and drop out of the organizations that are too costly for our budget.

Some years ago Stanley Rosner Ph.D. and Laura Hobe wrote "The Marriage Gap", in which they said, "Marriages end when one or both partners can't, or won't continue to satisfy each other's needs." That impressed me so much that I've tried to make it a part of the life I lead with Otis. We want a few things though many less than we used to. And our failure to receive our wants never makes us too sad. We know that wanting can cease and often does—but that needing never goes away until you give up your desire to live. And I hope that neither you nor we will ever do that.

Most older people nowadays have enough to eat, unless they live in impoverished ghettos or other such communities. And even there, welfare boards and social workers are supposed to seek out that need and supply the essentials. In bad weather heat is not always available and some elderly people become ill and even freeze to death; but, in general, at least part of that need is taken care of. Now we come to the human companionship need. It is the most important one of all for everybody alive; but it is absolutely essential to the serenely and enjoyably married. You might say, and I do say, that it is the satisfaction of our desire for mates who love us and fulfill our need to be appreciated and respected and admired, a need that keeps us older people going. Without that fulfillment, we would be human vegetables.

But this essay is concerned with the older couple and their special need to be loved and satisfied by each other. What do we need at our age? We need to be listened to and respected for what we say. We need to be interested in each other's work and plans. We need to change our needs as our mates, and world conditions, change. In other words, we need to be needed. We don't have as many tomorrows ahead of us as we had when we were twenty. Therefore we need the contentment of cooperation with the one we love, for as long as our years together continue. Letters brought this out in other ways.

DEAR LOUISE: I'm a retired professor, comfortably settled in our little college town and, to all appearances, a contented older man. But I am desperately lonely. My wife is almost never at home with me. She still goes to all the things she did before I retired, so many of them that she's too tired to visit with me when she comes home late at night. I read a lot and lecture a little, and she used to give me advice about my speeches and let me rehearse them for her. But I haven't done that for three years. I have the feeling that her friends are better friends to her than I am. Is this possible and is it a common practice among wives of retired men? R.T.

DEAR R.T.: Yes, this happens frequently. But it should not and will not if the one left alone works at mending the communication lines that have broken down. I used to have trouble getting Otis to listen to my planned lectures. I finally got his attention by making my talks more interesting, interspersed with more humor, better eye contact and other devices that persuaded him to listen and also improved my acceptance with audiences. As to your being your wife's friend, why don't you break into her rushed routine with small gifts for her such as flowers, invitations to eat out, to attend musicals, etc.? She may be spending her time with her women friends because she thinks you are content to be alone with your reflections. Tell her plainly that you need her companionship for the betterment of both of you and the constancy of your marriage.

Pampans host couples during Panhandle visit

Several area Farm Bureau couples, including Mr. and Mrs. Jack Osborne of Pampa, were hosts last week for two couples from South Africa spending a week in the Panhandle.

The Osbornes, along with Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Chaloupka of Dalhart, had dinner Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. H.M. Groblen and Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Ludik of Rouxville, South Africa.

Osborne represents District 1 of the Texas Farm Bureau on the board of directors, and Chaloupka is TFB president.

Groblen and Ludik are both ranchers in South Africa. Mrs. Osborne also hosted them on Thursday, when the group toured Iowa Beef Processors and attended the musical "TEXAS" in Palo Duro Canyon. Both couples expressed admiration for the production and amazement for the professionalism of the cast, says Mrs. Osborne.

Also on the week's agenda for the couple was a tour of the Coldwater Cattle Co. and a Randall County Angus farm, a visit to the Amarillo Livestock Auction, and a trip to Chaloupka's agricultural operation near Dalhart.

The two couples will tour Kansas, Washington, D.C. and Maryland before returning to South Africa.

Dr. Lamb

laurence e. lamb, m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I would like for you to tell me how to lose some weight. I'm a young man and I weigh 240 pounds. I've been running, not constantly, but I do a lot of exercise and I still can't lose weight.

DEAR READER - Unless you're very, very tall you do indeed have a major weight problem. I think when a person has a really excessive weight problem he simply has to be under medical supervision to eliminate it. There are too many things that can go wrong with excessively restrictive diets or if a person gets too compulsive about losing weight and eats the wrong foods. Finally, there's the motivation factor of having someone supervise your program regularly and keep you on it.

I don't know that it's absolutely necessary that you run every day but I would certainly like to see you develop a walking program every day. If you could just walk an hour a day it would help you a lot.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which you can use as a guide to a balanced diet for your program. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. If you can just restrict your calories enough and walk enough or do enough other exercise to lose a pound a week and then be patient, eventually you will lose your weight without losing your health.

It's not difficult for doctors to cause people to lose weight. The real problem is losing weight and keeping your health. You can wash a lot of water out of the body with pills or even by certain diet fads, but that doesn't eliminate fat and it can dehydrate the body and cause problems. It can wilt the body just like a lack of water can wilt a plant. The trick is to lose weight safely which usually means slowly.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I was told I have some calcification in the aortic knob. My doctor didn't explain this to me. What is this and is it serious and what can be done? Is it a heart condition? All I was told is that at my age it's not surprising. I am 62.

DEAR READER - We have one large artery that carries all the oxygenated blood from the left side of the heart to the rest of the body. This artery originates from the heart and is called the aorta. It's a very large artery. It goes upward from the heart toward your neck. It then makes a U - turn and goes down along your spine. Eventually, when it gets nearer the bottom of the abdominal cavity, it divides into two main branches to go to each of your legs.

THE PLACE WHERE THE AORTA MAKES A U - turn looks on an X - ray like a knob. That's why it's called the aortic knob. Your doctor is telling you that you have calcifications in the wall of your aorta in that area.

Such calcifications are related to the overall process of atherosclerosis - the deposit of fatty - cholesterol material. As long as the changes are just in the wall of a very large artery, they do not cause any significant problems. It's when such changes occur in the small arteries, like those to the heart muscle, that you get into difficulties.

Protect treasures with special policy

By GEORGE T. FRAZIER
If you have specialized possessions such as works of art, jewelry or stamp collections you might require special coverage known as "floaters." These items are normally excluded or offered only in limited coverage by the standard homeowners policy.

In the standard homeowners policy there is a $500 limit on furs, jewelry and watches for example... a figure that is easily exceeded today. Other property that should be covered with a floater, or scheduled personal property endorsements are collections of stamps or coins, fine art, antiques, musical instruments and camera equipment, in other words, items whose value may increase each year, or which may be subject to extra perils by virtue of their use primarily off the premises.

Among the benefits of this type of coverage is that the protection follows the item. If you take your camera gear on vacation and accidentally drop them in the lake, they are covered up to the value you declared and paid premiums for.

Floaters provide basically all-risk coverage, but there are some loss-causes not covered. If your dog chews up that Louis XIV chair, you cannot collect. If the damage is caused by normal wear and tear, you will not be reimbursed. Breakage of fragile articles is not covered unless it is caused by an event normally covered by your policy, such as fire, windstorm, vandalism, or theft.

By and large, the floater, whether as a special policy you have taken out on your valuables or as an endorsement to your homeowners policy, makes sense. However, since there are special conditions applicable, the scheduled personal property endorsement is coverage to discuss with your insurance agent to be sure that you have the correct coverage you need to protect the things that you treasure.

Dear Abby says

Don't press for affair details

My husband of six years has just ended his third affair. After the first two, he chose to stay with me, but after this last affair I'm not sure I want to stay with him.

He refuses to tell me whether these affairs included sex, although it seems impossible to imagine that they did not. I need to know!

The fact that he won't tell me bothers me more than whether he had sex with these women. Do I have the right to know?

ROSITA

DEAR ROSITA: If he said he had an "affair," don't press him for the particulars. It's not an "affair" unless it's the whole enchilada.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I married a good-natured, loving, honest, beautiful little woman from a foreign country. We have had to contend with a variety of cultural differences, but that never was a problem. However, two unresolved problems persist.

The first is the matter of orderliness - or rather the lack of it. She hasn't the faintest idea what "a place for everything and everything in its place" means. She just puts a thing down anywhere, and when she wants it again she can't find it.

The other problem concerns punctuality. She starts getting ready to go out about the time we're supposed to arrive. We have never been on time for a party. Actually, the two problems are related. One reason she's always late is that she can never find the hairbrush. Can you help me?

OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Have you tried to teach her? If not, put everything in its place and stress the importance of returning it there.

As for punctuality, urge her to start getting ready two hours in advance instead of an hour. And if this doesn't help, you've still got a good-natured, loving, beautiful, little woman who's hopelessly disorganized and chronically late.

DEAR ABBY: Do you want to do the hospital volunteers of the world a big favor? Please tell your readers that mail addressed to Buzz Jackson, Skip Jones or Hootsie Brown will probably not be delivered to patients in the hospital.

Nicknames are not recorded on hospital records. The patients are registered under their LEGAL names (first, middle and last). We have no idea who Liz, Red, Corky or Junior are.

Yesterday I looked for an "Al" Johnson and found none. I did find a Henry Alvin Johnson, however. I later learned that the patient

Traffic bothers Bay City people more than safety

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Most, like Chamber of Commerce Director Jim Sumpter and Police Chief Barney Mason, will look you square in the eye and tell you the massive South Texas Nuclear Project is good, damn good, for Bay City.

But there are a few, like 68-year-old Doug Havard, who will look you in the eye and tell you it isn't worth the problems it's already brought and the nuclear catastrophe they fear it could later bring.

There's no question, however, that the once-placid commercial center for Matagorda County's ranchers and rice farmers has been transformed into something of a nuclear boom town by the construction 18 miles away of what will be the nation's largest nuclear power plant.

Bay City's population has nearly doubled to an estimated 22,000-24,000 since 1970. Sales tax receipts, fed by the millions of dollars per year from the 4,500 workers on the $1.7 billion project, have tripled since the construction began in 1976.

Apartment complexes, mobile home parks, new brick houses — and the grocery stores, fast food franchises and shopping centers that go with them — have sprouted in coastal pastures where farmers raised rice, maize and cattle only a few years before.

But they haven't sprouted fast enough to avoid a housing shortage. Some new one-bedroom apartments are bringing $300 per month — plus utilities. Rents jump every time contractor Brown & Root grants a blanket raise, said Bay City Tribune Managing Editor Jay Jacobs.

Bay City has even added a glistening new Cinema IV, which has lately been showing the thriller "China Syndrome," a movie about an accident at a nuclear power plant. The movie didn't seem to faze anybody and, besides, the moviegoers of Bay City liked "Rocky II" better anyway, said Cinema IV Manager Freddy Nolen.

But there are a few who note the increased crime, unprecedented traffic problems and the strains on Bay City's schools and municipal services. And they also remind you of the nuclear accident last March at Three-Mile Island, Pennsylvania.

"The nuclear plant doesn't bother me a bit, not a bit," said Sumpter, 55, who knew about the planned plant when he moved his family to Bay City five years ago. "I personally can't see any more reason to worry about this than I would a refinery or an oil barge exploding or a hurricane blowing in."

"This plant and all the others will be safer because of what they learned in Pennsylvania," he added.

"I don't mind having the plant here at all. Most of the people I know are glad it's here," echoed Mason, who's seen the police force grow from four officers and a car 27 years ago to 24 officers and 11 cars today.

"It's brought us a few problems, mainly from the common laborers, the scum, the ex-cons who can't find any other job. But we've benefited more," he added. "It's damn good for the county and good for the city."

What about the extensive reports on the Three-Mile Island accident?

"It just bored the hell out of me," he said.

"I'm just flat scared of it. I was on Okinawa when they dropped that damn bomb on Japan," said Havard, who lives eight miles from the plant. "After they told me what that son-of-a-gun did, there has been a fear in me about that. Someone could get careless or something could go wrong and where in the hell would we be?"

"There's no question the economy's booming and we've got to have the electricity," said Matagorda County Tax Assessor-Collector James Humphreys. "But I sure wish that thing was up in San Antonio and they were going to be wiring the electricity down to us. That accident up East in Pennsylvania just scares me to death."

"Where are we going to put the waste? I don't want it here," he added. "Do you think they want it in San Antonio or Austin?"

Humphreys' tax rolls have fattened considerably and will increase by the time the plant begins operating in about two years. But Matagorda County, and the Palacios Independent School District, a 1,400-student district in the southern tip of the county, are suing two of the STNP partners — Austin and San Antonio — for non-payment of taxes.

The municipally-owned utilities in the two cities claim their 44 percent of the STNP should be tax exempt. Humphreys agrees the utilities should be exempt in Austin and San Antonio, but not in Matagorda County, where the citizens derive no benefits from the two city utilities.

If the county and school district win, it could mean about $2 million, plus even more substantial future tax revenues when the project is completed. Since Austin and San Antonio have not yet paid, Humphreys said, "At this point, the South Texas Project is not paying its own way, not for the extra roads and services we've had to provide."

George Holst, the superintendent of the already petroleum-rich Palacios schools, said the project "is a tremendous boost economically." The district has had to add some portable classrooms in its elementary schools, but already had ample room in relatively new buildings, Holst said.

Most of those lured by the plant to Matagorda County, however, are not going to Palacios, about 14 miles southwest of the project, but to Bay City, which gets nothing in direct tax money from the STNP.

It's Bay City's schools that are absorbing most of the new students and it's Bay City's government, benefiting only from the increased sales taxes, that must serve the influx of new residents.

And there's the increased crime, which, Mason said, has forced city police and the county sheriff to add officers.

"We had a helluva time here for awhile, especially with those unskilled laborers," said Sumpter. "It's leveled off some as the more established, skilled workers have moved in."

Sailor, missing money sought

SAN DIEGO (AP)—An AWOL sailor is being sought after an audit revealed the loss of $2 million worth of blank money orders from the destroyer tender Samuel Gompers, according to a Navy spokesman. Missing is First Class Petty Officer Elton L. Robertson, a 14-year Navy veteran who has been in charge of the full service post office for three years, the Navy said. Robertson, a native of Edinberg, Texas, was last seen June 11 when he was on annual leave, the spokesman said. The audit was conducted when Robertson failed to return on June 25 as scheduled. A preliminary investigation indicated that postal records on the ship may have been altered to cover the theft, the spokesman said. In addition to the 5,000 blank money orders worth an estimated $2 million, also missing was a money order imprinter, validation materials and more than $15,000 in other postal effects, the Navy said.

Patience pays large dividends this coming year. Don't be discouraged if things don't happen immediately. Give everything the proper time to mature, and success is guaranteed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Chances are that you'll have a wonderful time today, but you're not a keen manager of your resources. Take it easy or you could squander all your funds at one time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Being kind to everyone else but forgetting your family is neither fair or nice. Keep your domestic affairs in perspective and you won't spoil a fine day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep your mind on what you're doing today. You could be so wrapped up in having a good time that you absentmindedly precipitate minor mishaps.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's a financially promising day for you, but you tend to be foolish about what you do with your funds. Don't loan to persons you don't know well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's not worth being right if it takes beating another into the ground to prove your point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll have to take care today not to reveal something told to you in confidence to a skilled busybody who asks probing questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Think before you speak if you're around superficial people who bore you to tears. You're too nice a person and you'll regret hurting anyone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might have a difficult time making up your mind today. Zero-in on one activity and forget about what you think you are missing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Forget about trying to sneak in a little work if you have social plans. Your mind won't be on what you are doing and you'll goof it up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) On the whole, today should be quite enjoyable, as you'll spend your time with friends and kinfolk. However, to avoid trouble, keep your opinions and advice to yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't forget to consult with the family before you make any decisions about today's events. It's important that you think about them first.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could spend much effort today rationalizing and making excuses for things that really don't call for it.

King shrugs loss, looks at semifinals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King shrugged off the disappointment of losing to Tracy Austin to analyze the chances of the four Wimbledon semifinalists.

Billie Jean believes two-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd is the most psyched-up of the four.

Lloyd plays Evonne Goolagong Cawley in one of Wednesday's semifinals. Defending champion Martina Navratilova meets the 16-year-old Austin, a Rolling Hills, Calif., schoolgirl, in the other.

"I think Chris is the toughest mentally of those who have come through," said King, a six-time Wimbledon champion. "The semifinalists are of two distinct types. Chris and Tracy sustain their drive inwardly."

"Martina is physically the strongest — she is a brute — but emotionally she is up and down."

"Evonne really cares and her game suits these courts."

But Billie Jean, still hoping to win a record 20th Wimbledon title in the doubles, would not be drawn on making a forecast, on either the singles or her own chances in the mixed and women's doubles.

Austin took more than two hours to beat Billie Jean 6-4, 6-7, 6-2. "That was one of the best wins of my life," said Tracy, who trailed 0-2 in the final set. "I told myself to fight harder than ever."

Austin's semifinal opponent, Navratilova, took nine successive games against Australian Dianne Fromholtz to win 2-6, 6-3, 6-0 after losing the first set in just 20 minutes.

Lloyd outlasted Australian Wendy Turnbull 6-3, 6-4 after a 1½-hour baseline battle. "I have never lost to her and I found she couldn't hurt me," said Chris afterwards. "I think I am ready to play Evonne now. I haven't played her for 18 months, but I don't think her game has changed that much."

Lloyd, beaten by Navratilova in a dramatic final last year, feels she is better prepared mentally this time. "This year I am tournament tough — I wasn't last year. Having played Eastbourne (a recent Wimbledon "warmup" tournament) and won there, I believe I can do it here."

Cawley, who won the title in 1971, had a straightforward quarterfinal victory when she beat Britain's Virginia Wade — the 1977 champion — 6-4, 6-0 on the center court.

The Australian was very happy with her performance. "I felt fine. I was in good touch and feeling confident. When I am moving well that is when I am playing well."

Turnbull, well beaten by Lloyd, fancies Cawley's chances. "I think Evonne could be the danger," she said. "I know she would like to win. She has the kind of game to beat Chrissie and I think he could beat everybody."

Swim team takes medals, U. S. strong in Pan Am Games

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The deep and talented United States swimming team, led by teenage sensation Tracy Caulkins, turned a faltering start into a cascade of medals Monday, the first day of competition in the VII Pan American Games.

The swimmers and divers scored three one-two sweeps — the maximum sweep in these hemispheric olympics that limit a single country's entries to two in each event.

The U.S. won all seven swimming events contested Monday and set Pan Am games records in five of them. That does not include the three times the men's 200 meter freestyle record was broken (twice in qualifying heats, and the two times the 16-year old Caulkins broke the women's 200 meter individual medley record.

From swimming and diving events, the U.S. gained seven gold and 12 other medals and have a leading total of 10 gold and 18 overall.

Canada was second with two gold and 11 overall, followed by Argentina with two gold and five overall. Cuba has won four medals, none gold.

U.S. men's basketball coach Bobby Knight, often a center of controversy, provided a minor incident when he was ejected during the game after collecting his fourth technical foul in a lopsided 136-88 victory over the Virgin Islands.

The American women's basketball team, the current world champions, rolled to a routine, 124-69 victory over Puerto Rico.

The Americans, who have dominated all but the first of these games, again are expected to be the overwhelming winners of the 22-sport festival that has drawn some 5,000 athletes from 34 countries in North and South America.

But it took the swimmers to salvage the first day of competition. In the morning events — before the schedule takes its long, mid-day break to avoid the tropic heat of this island vacation-land — the United States led only 3-6 in gold and total medals over Canada and Argentina, each with 2-5 totals.

Ken Sutton of Muskegon, Mich., competing in the roller skating events that are new to the Pan Am Games, led a one-two American sweep in the men's 500-meter speed roller skating event. He was timed in 50.01 seconds. Curtis Cook, Spokane, Wash., took the silver medal in 51.82.

DENISE CHRISTENSEN (left) of Tucson, Ariz., and Janet Ely Thorburn of Dallas display their medals to approval of crowd after placing one-two in the 3-meter springboard diving competition Monday at the Pan American Games. Miss Christensen won the gold medal and Mrs. Thorburn took the silver. (AP Laserphoto)

Jackson honored - briefs

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees will receive a plaque tonight from the National ALS Foundation to commemorate the 40th anniversary of Lou Gehrig's famous Yankee Stadium farewell speech.

Jackson is honorary national chairman of the foundation, which seeks to combat amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a neuromuscular affliction commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Jack Regan, head football coach at Bentley College for three seasons, has resigned, the school said Monday.

Regan, 38, had a 12-10-2 record after taking over from Hal Kopp. He was recently named principal at Waltham (Mass.) High School, where he was football coach for eight years before becoming an assistant football coach at Bentley during 1972-75.

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Rockies have moved to bolster their goaltending by acquiring the rights to Hardy Astrom from the New York Rangers in exchange for left wing Bill Lochead.

Astrom, a 28-year-old Swede, was signed by the Rangers as a free agent in May 1977 after playing for the Swedish National Team that captured the silver medal in the 1977 World Championship. He split the 1977-78 season between the Rangers and their farm club, the New Haven Nighthawks of the American Hockey League. Lochead came to the Rockies via waivers from Detroit last February. In 27 games with Colorado, he scored four goals and had two assists.

FITCHBURG, Mass. (AP) — Joseph Lynch of Fitchburg died after a pack of cyclists peddling furiously for the finish line in a 50-mile road race Sunday slammed into him as he crossed the race course. He was 83.

Four cyclists, estimated to be traveling at speeds better than 45 mph, injured in the ensuing pileup were treated and released from the hospital, said authorities. The medical examiner, Dr. Charles W. Sauter, said Lynch died of a heart attack.

Challenging the stars, Rookies race on

By F.T. MacFeely
Associated Press Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's an unwritten rule in NASCAR racing: rookies don't challenge the established stars of the big-money Grand National circuit.

Nobody told Dale Earnhardt, Joe Millikan and Terry Labonte. At least one of them has been in the top 10 of every race this year and sometimes all three have made it.

"I guess we got here in the right year," Labonte said. "Some of the guys who've been up there a long time are getting old — or at least I think of them as old — and the time was right for younger drivers to move up."

Labonte, at 23, is the youngest of the three top rookie contenders. Earnhardt, son of a race driver, is 28. Millikan, a Richard Petty protege, is 29.

All three are looking for the Firecracker 400 Wednesday to give them a lift in the Rookie-of-the-Year competition, but it isn't out of reason to think one might win.

They all drive Oldsmobiles, the hot car of the year with its sloped nose, on the 31-degree-banked Daytona International Speedway.

Labonte starts from 10th place. He qualified at 190.457 mph. Earnhardt starts 21st off a 187.966, and Millikan 24th off 186.940.

Buddy Baker put his Olds on the pole at 193.196, and the other front-row starter, Neil Bonnett did 192.596 in a Mercury.

The biggest surprise is that three rookies got competitive rides in the same year. "Any other year, any one of us could have been rookie of the year with no trouble," Labonte said.

"The rides just came open at the same time," added Millikan. "I've been approached by a couple guys in the last two years but I turned them down because the cars weren't fast enough. I'm not about to ride around in 10th or 11th at best."

"Joe and I were lucky to be noticed when we drove in sportsman races. I heard the owners of this car were looking around and I started making inquiries. Then they came to me. I felt ready two years ago but couldn't get a good car."

In the current rookie standings, Earnhardt has 211 points, Millikan 208 and Labonte 179. But the final standing is based on the 15 best finishes among the 31 races of the year.

The Independence Day program begins tonight at midnight with the Paul Revere 250 for high-powered sports cars. Peter Gregg, the defending champion, put his turbocharged Porsche on the pole with a qualifying speed of 128.794 mph around a 3.84-mile course including the outer banked track and a flat infield road with six turns.

Original Recipe

IT'S STILL A SECRET

It took the Colonel many years to perfect his secret recipe for Kentucky Fried Chicken. And it's still a secret!

But there are some clues. The Colonel uses only fresh, Grade A Chicken. He seasons it with his special blend of eleven herbs and spices and then pressure fries it to seal in all the flavor.

The result, "finger lickin' good" Kentucky Fried Chicken Original Recipe. That's no secret.

It's nice to feel so good about a meal.
