'Paltry' salaries cited Seven troopers quit

KAUFMAN, Texas (AP) — Angry over what they consider paltry salaries, seven Department of Public Safety troopers have quit, leaving one man to cover all of Kaufman County.

The resulting chaos caused by multiple highway accidents across the county is getting to be a pain — both for motorists, Dallas-based troopers and the lone man stationed in Kaufman County.

"It's a traveler's nightmare," said Bill Crossland, one of the seven troopers who have sought employment elsewhere.

One official said several drivers have been forced to wait 1½ hours for a trooper from Dallas to drive up just to untangle traffic and make out reports. Speed limits, some officials said, had not been checked since the pay dispute began.

And judges are worried about the outcome of traffic tickets issued by the former officers — tickets that will be meaningless without the backup testimony of the officer.

When operating at full staff there are four troopers stationed in Kaufman, two in Forney and one in Terrell. The Terrell officer, David Bullard, is the only one of the seven still on duty.

"There's very little we can do when we have a problem," said John McMullen, one of the ex-deputies.

"We're hoping that if the county doesn't have enough troopers, maybe they'll raise a stink." A stink, deputies hope, will ease their financial burdens since the legislature voted not to grant a pay raise this year.

McMullen quit Monday, just three years shy of retirement, to take a job that will earn him $300 per month more than what he earned as a trooper. He and Bullard worked the Fourth of July weekend alone. That day, McMullen said, he decided to throw in the towel.

"When it gets to where you cannot feed your family anymore, you have to take some action," he said. "Before I quit, I could qualify for food stamps because I have four children."

Crossland, a 9-year veteran when he quit last month, said the former troopers don't feel their action is irresponsible.

"We have warned the state and warned the state to help us and they didn't," he said. "What's happening in their own fault."

Highway patrolmen make $14,628 currently, with the state paying all their Social Security taxes. Uniforms are provided along with a cleaning allowance. A trooper also receives a meal allowance when he is on the highway.

Troopers' salaries are augmented with longevity pay that boosts their monthly salary by $4 for every year of service.

The state budget bill for 1980-81 raises trooper pay by 8.5 percent, to $15,888 on Sept. 1 and increases longevity pay to $5 a month for each year served with the DPS.

Other state employees receive only a 5.1 percent raise.

Col. Wilson Speir, DPS director, recommended a 13.6 percent increase, which would have given most troopers a base salary of $16,617, plus longevity, Social Security and allowances.

Legislators also passed a bill this year increasing auto inspection fees, with the proceeds dedicated to a fund allowing troopers to retire earlier and with higher benefits.

On container system

Conversion step delayed

Faced with a possible financial dilemma, the Pampa City Commission delayed action this morning on steps to convert the city's garbage collection system from individual cans to larger containers.

Following the first reading of an ordinance financing the conversion, the commission was to award a contract to Emco of Plainview for the purchase of trucks and containers. But City Attorney Don Lane advised commissioners to postpone awarding the contract until the ordinance is adopted.

That way, Lane said, the city wouldn't be under obligation to Emco for $940,100, the purchase price, if by some chance the ordinance was not adopted. The commission then scheduled a special meeting for 1 p.m. Friday to adopt the ordinance, award the contract and approve hiring a financial consultant to advise the city on financing the conversion.

The ordinance authorizes the city to issue certificates of obligation totalling $956,000 to pay for the containers. The certificates, similar to revenue bonds but at a lower interest rate, should be paid off in seven years at $161,168,000 a year, according to City Manager Mack Wofford. The $956,000 will pay not only for equipment but for attorney fees, printing costs and issuance costs, Wofford said.

Only two bids were submitted for the container equipment, a complete bid from Emco and a partial bid from Pak - Mor of San Antonio. Noting his disappointment that only one complete bid had been submitted, Wofford said nevertheless the Emco equipment meets the city's specifications and is competitively priced. With proper maintenance, he said, the containers "should last 15 years or more."

In response to questioning by Commissioner Coyle Ford, sales representative Bobby McBeth of Emco assured the commission that repair parts and additional containers would be always available. McBeth said Emco can provide overnight service to Pampa.

In other action, the commission set Aug. 18 as the date for a public hearing on seven proposed zoning changes. The property being rezoned was recently annexed and lies in separate plots scattered around the north end of the city.

Aug. 14 was also set as the date to receive bids for construction of a water line to the Country Gardens Estate Addition, an industrial subdivision located at the intersection of Price Road and Kentucky Avenue. Although only a six-inch line is required, the city wants to construct a twelve-inch line, which would cost an additional $36,000. The city will have to pay the extra cost, and Wofford conceded the money is not in the current budget.

"It would take some study by the city to determine where that money would come from and whether it should be spent at this time," Wofford said.

License plates hot item

DALLAS (AP) — If the energy crunch and long gas lines in 100-plus degree heat aren't enough for motorists, some thieves are adding insult to injury.

They're ripping off license plates. Dallas police report a "definite, significant increase" in the number of license plates stolen since Gov. Bill Clements' odd-even gas rationing plan went into effect here June 29.

The forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies through Wednesday and continued hot afternoons with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight.

Grand jury in session

A new Gray County grand jury was sworn in this morning in 223rd District Court by Judge Don Cain. The ten man, two woman jury met immediately to begin reviewing cases.

The grand jury panel of 20 persons was selected Friday by jury commissioners. Twelve potential jurors reported to the Gray County Courthouse this morning. All were approved for the six-month term which runs through December.

The grand jury will be reviewing "at least 10 cases," according to District Attorney Harold Comer's office, and is expected to be in session through Wednesday.

Kid cowpokes fill Rodeo Office

By JOHN PRICE
PAMPA NEWS STAFF

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce office, nestled in the northeast corner of the Hughes Building, is usually a scene of quiet, calm efficiency — until rodeo week rolls around.

The efficiency was still evident Monday morning, as a steady stream of children and their parents signed up for the first night of the Kid Pony Show, but the quiet and the calm were nowhere to be found.

The office appeared to be a beehive of activity. When Jan French, rodeo secretary, found a moment to stop and talk, she confirmed that she had been keeping busy since registration opened at 9 a.m.

Monday night's show featured children 7 and under competing in events such as calf riding and flag and barrel racing. The races were old hat for Missy Shackelford, 6, who entered her first show at the age of three.

"She's a real pro," commented Missy's mother, as she registered Missy for the barrel, potato and flag races. Missy and a friend, 5-year-old Nancy Gail Miller, just smiled and giggled.

Next in line was Pam Bryan, 6. Obviously a talented young rider, Pam won second place in last year's barrel racing.

"Do you have a good horse?" Pam was questioned. She nodded her head affirmatively. A little prodding revealed the horse's name to be "Bay."

Pam, as silent as she was self-confident, signified with another nod that, yes, she planned to win that race again. Her 15-year-old sister Debra, who will compete in Wednesday's show, asked, "Do we have to ride against the boys?"

"Only if you're bull riding," replied Jan French.

By noon Monday the chamber office had registered 129 youngsters for the three Kid Pony Shows, well on the way to matching the 209 entries from 1978.

"We're running just about par with last year," said Lois Steward of the chamber staff. "Entries are up in some age groups and down in others."

Steve Hoke, 10, arrived just before registration closed for the day. The freckle-faced lad paid his entry fee for tonight's barrel race.

Steve said he would be riding a horse named "Snip," which he described as "pretty tall." He expressed confidence in ol' Snip, saying "I rode him yesterday and he done pretty well."

This year's show will be Steve's third. Although he entered both the potato and barrel races in the last two shows, he decided to concentrate his effort on the barrel race this time.

"Last year he (Snip) acted up on me," Steve explained. "He went around the last barrel in the potato race, and he went around that barrel about four times."

The junior cowpoke thoughtfully hesitated to predict victory.

"Might," was Steve's only response, when asked if he would win. He grinned widely. "I've got a lot of kids competing against me."

The Kid Pony Show will open its second performance at 7 tonight at the Rodeo Grounds. Tonight's action will feature age groups III and IV, which consist of cowboys and cowgirls 8 to 11 years old.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing...

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Inflation defined in simple terms

The headline, big and black, read: "No End Seen To Raging Inflation." Other newspapers across the land carried similar headlines...

It is to be expected by now that one would hear such predictions from the hard-pressed private sector which is struggling for survival...

The government officials know, if they are not morons, what inflation is and what causes it, and as one they could stop it cold and reverse it.

Trouble is, they don't want to do that. Their viewpoint is illogical, to say nothing of being immoral.

The root of the evil we call inflation is the government's deficit spending and its making available an abundance of cheap (worthless, based-on-nothing) dollars.

A return to a balanced budget, ending wasteful, deficit spending, actually cutting taxes and ending the printing of cheap money would stop inflation in its track and send it into reverse.

All other things in the above "must" list would come easier than one imagines as soon as the government junked its money-printing presses and cut off the supply of cheap dollars.

When the federal government has a deficit it simply finances its debts by borrowing some money from the banks and printing the rest. Sometimes it just prints all it needs at that time...

The liberals (they should know better) and many government officials thrive on the theory that inflating the money supply stimulates the economy by making more money available for the people to spend...

As the government continues to operate on mammoth deficits and to print more worthless dollars, the people's savings are eroded, as is the capital of business. Soon the savings—and the capital—are gone...

In time credit shrinks, and people spend less. Unemployment rises, as it is beginning to, even under the false "stimulation" of government spending and jobs.

The nation needs real dollars, not the ersatz ones with which the government is now violating the American trust. Our problem, simply stated now, is inflated dollars. The government has inflated them...

That, in simple terms, is inflation, its cause and its cure.

Good (mostly bad) news about the $

If you can forget about the price of gas for a few minutes, here's a case where a rising price is good news.

The increasing value of the dollar in foreign exchange markets—its price in terms of other currencies—has enabled the United States to settle its debts to foreign central banks.

The Treasury and Federal Reserve have taken advantage of the stronger dollar of the last several months to repay more than $6 billion in key currencies borrowed late last year.

It is the first time in some 10 years that the United States has been completely free of debt under the swap arrangements with which major economic powers exchange funds to support their currencies.

The dollar's strength ultimately will be determined by the U.S. balance of payments—more precisely, by our success or failure in trimming the massive payments deficits of recent years.

And since imported oil is the major contributor to the deficit and the major exporters continue to leapfrog each other with their price increases...

Helms looked into the matter and found out that the mice had been put in charge of the cheese factory.

So, now the two senators have introduced another bill, this one to limit to exactly 22 the number of federal officials who can be assigned the exclusive use of an automobile owned and operated by the taxpayers.

And wouldn't that be nice!

Of mice and limos

Once in awhile, people in office will get tired of constituents badgering them and say it's no wonder you can't get good people to run for office—they have to take so much guff.

And they do. There is no doubt about it. A lot of times, however, they bring it on themselves. Sometimes, it seems, it is necessary for a sharp eye to be kept on everyone doing business in the public domain.

The bill became law and the number of limos on D.C. streets dropped dramatically.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

It took me long enough but I finally figured it out.

I've been reading everything I could lay my hands on about the gasoline shortage. I've been listening to radio and staring at TV. And I've been keeping an ear cocked to catch the latest innuendoes, rumors and reports.

For months the public at large has believed that the gasoline shortage was contrived—the product of a conspiracy to drive up prices. President Carter has denied it absolutely and that almost makes it a certainty.

Then, suddenly I saw it. It had been staring at me all the time.

Just as the public has suspected, there is a conspiracy. The conspiratorial procedure was born in the minds of some of the oil company executives. I have no idea which of them was responsible so I can't point the finger.

Exec. No. 1. "What's our profit figure going to be this year, —?"

Exec. No. 2. "Outstanding. We're in the black about 28 percent above last year."

Exec. No. 3. "That's not altogether a blessing. The media are going to jump on us with obscene language."

Exec. No. 1. "I agree with you, —. Besides, if you figure the inflation rate and adjust accordingly, it will be closer to 25 percent. Add the increased costs entailed in the ongoing rate of inflation and we're in the black only about 18 percent."

Exec. No. 2. "Absolutely right. But there's something else, too. Our profits aren't obtained in this country. European nations haven't tried to control the price of gasoline. So, over there it varies from $1.75 to $2.40 per gallon. That's where we're making our dollars. We're producing oil in the U.S. and selling it abroad."

Exec. No. 3. "Why do we do that? Isn't our first loyalty to America?"

Exec. No. 1. "Sure it is. We're just obeying the law. The government wants to maintain its treaty relationships so we have to deliver the oil to those with favored nation status."

Exec. No. 2. "Hold on. Isn't America a favored nation status with itself?"

Exec. No. 3. "NO! Never has been! The government has concealed from the public since the first regulations of oil, what the true cost of producing gasoline is."

Exec. No. 1. "Why don't we take it to court and defend the right of the American gasoline buyer?"

Exec. No. 2. "Where's your memory, —? We tried that. We were greeted with threats of antitrust action and we suffered IRS investigations. Do you have any idea how much that litigation drove up the cost of oil all the way around?"

Exec. No. 3. "— is right. It doesn't pay to litigate against the government. For every action we win, we lose a dozen. And costs skyrocket."

Exec. No. 1. "That is true. But it's worse than that. The EPA has shut down dozens of our productive wells. Sure, they're dirty. But you should have seen Titusville when this business got started. And then the DOE comes in with a bigger budget for its regulatory actions than all of us combined are able to spend in developing and finding new oil deposits. The public seems to think these regulations and intrusions don't cost money. When will they learn that there's no free lunch?"

Exec. No. 2. "Well, we've tried to get gas deregulated. If those regulatory agencies were eliminated and their costs erased, that would be a boon to everyone. Some measure of efficiency might return to oil production and distribution."

Exec. No. 3. "That's the conspiracy, guys. Don't you get it? Let the government make the decisions. That will screw everything up so badly, that in the final analysis, the bureau will fight each other; the regulatory agencies will be at each other's throats and maybe we can get back to business." The three men look at each other. Smiles slowly appear on their faces.

Exec. No. 2. "Nobody could accuse us of breaking the law."

Exec. No. 3. "Why, we'd become a model industry, doing just what the government tells us."

Exec. No. 1. "Exactly."

Exec. No. 2. "It might work." The three chiefs nod and smile and shake hands. You understand, the foregoing is a conversation that was not overheard. It is simply one that had to take place somewhere between some V.I.P.s in the oil industry. The mess we have in oil and gas is the same kind of mess we got in the post office and the railroads when the government got complete control. That's got to be how it all occurred.

The fourth world

No American of conscience can drive or walk across any Rio Grande bridge into Mexico without some degree of emotional turmoil.

However similar other signs may grow on both sides of the river, the one thing that grabs your eyes and your heart on the Mexican side is the sight of shabby children with their hands out.

Six-, five-, four-year-old young beggars. Inevitably, Americans react with a combination of compassion for the urchins and resentment, anger and frustration at the apparent hopelessness of the situation.

Multiply those by millions in many nations and they comprise a Fourth World of misery, disease and despair.

Inevitably, they overflow national borders.

AP sent Peter Arnett on a survey of the refugee situation. He guesstimated that 10 million men, women and children have no country. Uprooted, by gunfire, revolution, shifting ideologies, changing maps, nationalism, racism and assorted other factors they seek greener pastures—often to find themselves unwanted.

They flee in anything that will float across the South China Sea—to nowhere.

They swim the Danube by night into Austria.

They walk 20 torturous days from Ethiopia to end up in a filthy camp in Djibouti where intestinal disease is rampant and cholera and typhoid are threats.

Former Vietnamese interpreter, Nguyen Phong Lam, 33, went overboard from his surf-swamped fishing boat and crawled onto the yellow sands of the Malaysian coast—only to be beaten up and pushed back into the sea by angry inhabitants who resented his presence.

They flee Afghanistan to Pakistan, South West Africa to Zaire, Rhodesia to Zambia and—in our own hemisphere—Nicaragua to Guatemala.

The flight of war victims from Africa and Indochina and the exodus from Yugoslavia this year will continue to add desperation to the situation.

There will be increasing pressure on the United States to absorb more of the displaced.

In the experience of the United Nations, the best possible solution to the problem is for the refugees to return home.

That is happening in Bangladesh, where 200,000 Moslems who fled Burma are going back.

But scores of thousands fleeing Indochina do not want to go back; they want to go to the United States.

Already, by any numerical standard, the United States has done more than its share. It now hosts some 734,000 of the world's refugees; no other country even comes close.

Britain, 150,000. France, 140,000. Australia, 304,000. Canada, 42,000. The United States, 734,000.

Whereas the entire United Nations this year is spending only $150 million on emergency relief for these refugees, the United States alone is spending $570 million. We have done more than we can afford.

Piteous as the world's orphans are, our own grandchildren are already $800 billion in debt.

Baez and Vietnam

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

As a high priestess of the antiwar movement in the 1960s, Joan Baez helped Hanoi win its propaganda war in the United States. She contributed significantly to the destruction of freedom in Southeast Asia.

In recent months, Miss Baez has been having second thoughts about the Communist regime which controls all of Vietnam. In an "Open Letter To The Socialist Republic of Vietnam," published as a full-page advertisement in major newspapers, she complained of the "brutal disregard of the human rights" of its citizens. She professed to be shocked at the imprisonment and torture of the Vietnamese people.

If Miss Baez has awakened to Communist reality—at least a little bit, it is a good thing.

However, one wonders where she has been for 15 years. The record of Communist cruelty has been built over two generations. Indeed Miss Baez has yet to condemn the Communist record in the Soviet Union, the People's Republic of China, and the satellite countries. She has yet to hail Alexander Solzhenitsyn for his courageous indictment of the Soviet concentration camp world. Doesn't Miss Baez know, as one writer said in Modern Age, that the Soviet regime is so barbarous that words cannot capture its full horror.

The people in power in Hanoi, Moscow and Peking have come to power on a road paved with millions of corpses. During the Vietnam War, for example, the Communist regime in Hanoi habitually resorted to torture in order to bend the South Vietnamese to their will. Today, thousands of Vietnamese are "boat people," seeking asylum anywhere but their homeland. They would not have to risk death at sea but for the apologists for communism, including Joan Baez.

It's instructive to note that even Joan Baez's small concession to reality has been rejected by prominent foes of America's effort to preserve South Vietnam's freedom. Jane Fonda, who is now in the midst of a propaganda war against nuclear power in the United States, declined to answer Miss Baez' appeal to condemn Hanoi's current brutalities. William Kunstler, the radical attorney who defended innumerable Vietnicks, said: "I do not believe in public attacks on socialist countries." That comment makes Mr. Kunstler's ideological position. Let's hope Mr. Kunstler never again is described as a civil libertarian.

The Baez protest is a reminder of the horrendous responsibility of the American Left. By its systematic agitation-propaganda campaign against the United States effort in South Vietnam, the New Left caused millions of Indo-Chinese to suffer torture, terror, concentration camp imprisonment, and death.

By serving Ho Chi Minh as his cohorts, the Baez, Kunstlers and Fondas brought disaster to entire peoples.

Exec. No. 2 (in horror) "NO! You can't mean it. We'd be in the worst oil spill and slick you ever heard of."

Exec. No. 1 "Not so fast. My conspiracy is a simple one. Instead of questioning what the government does, why don't we simply obey them without question? Everything each bureau, agency and regulatory body tells us to do, let's just do it."

Exec. No. 3 "what do you want to do? Wreck the industry?"

Exec. No. 2 "The regulatory agencies come out with conflicting requirements. They are confiscatory and contradictory. We always have to get clarification."

Missing witness delays Davis trial three weeks

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A missing witness, whose testimony is considered central by defense strategists, has forced a postponement until July 30 in the murder-for-hire trial of millionaire Cullen Davis.

State District Judge Gordon Gray ordered the three-week postponement Monday after defense attorneys said they could not locate Pat Burselon.

Investigators for the Fort Worth industrialist have tracked Burselon to Los Angeles, but have been unable to serve him a subpoena, Dallas lawyer Mike Gibson said.

The defense maintains that the Fort Worth karate instructor conspired with Mrs. Davis and FBI informant David McCrory to frame Davis.

The wealthy oil heir, 45, is accused of plotting the contract killing last August of the judge presiding over the Davis divorce case. The judge was not harmed.

Defense attorneys also contended Monday that a bailiff in charge of prospective jurors was dismissing several prospects from jury duty without proper authority.

Although jury selection had been scheduled to begin Monday, Gray used the occasion to dispose of a number of routine pretrial motions.

The judge granted one state motion to restrict defense lawyers from questioning witnesses about alleged sexual misconduct.

Gray ruled the relevance of such testimony must be determined in a bench conference before presentation in open court.

In an attempt last January to try Davis on the murder solicitation charges, a Houston jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of conviction and a mistrial was declared.

The murder conspiracy case against Davis is based on two tape-recorded conversations last summer between the defendant and his one-time employee and pool-shooting crony, McCrory.

The two met on the parking lot of a Fort Worth restaurant and discussed the murders of divorce judge Joe Eidson, Mrs. Davis, and several witnesses who testified against Davis in a 1977 murder trial in Amarillo.

Three witnesses identified the dark-haired defendant as the "man in black" who invaded his $6 million mansion in 1976 and gunned down four persons, killing two — including Mrs. Davis' 12-year-old daughter, Andrea Wilborn.

Connally: Summit an image maker

HARTFORD (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's domestic summit at Camp David is an exercise in image making rather than problem solving, former Texas Gov. John Connally said during his first campaign visit to Connecticut.

Connally, one of those in the crowded field for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, said Monday night that the summit has amounted to "a bunch of politicians, p.r. men and image makers. I haven't seen anybody who knows anything about energy."

Connally, who for many years was a leading Democrat, drew cheers from the 350

Republicans gathered at the Hartford club — at $25 a person — when he said the GOP must field a candidate in 1980 who can win.

"Can you imagine what another four years of President Carter will do to this country? How about eight years of Teddy Kennedy?" Connally said.

"I think the American people are tired of amateur night in Washington."

Connally contrasted what he sees as Carter's floundering leadership with his own long record of public service as governor of Texas, secretary of the Navy, secretary of the treasury, his role in reorganizing the federal government and his long experience as a successful Texas lawyer and businessman.

"We're going to have to have a president who knows the private sector and the public sector and how those two systems mesh. We're going to have to make up our minds in 1980 to change the country or this country as we know it, in my opinion, is going to be gone."

To solve the immediate energy problems of the country, Connally said, the government should open up more public land to oil exploration, allow for more use of coal and speed nuclear power development.

Coal should be used more heavily even if it means easing environmental restrictions somewhat, he said, and nuclear power plants could be built much faster if it weren't for the opposition of "a small minority."

But Connally conceded Americans "are never going to have cheap energy in terms of the prices we grew up with."

Turning to foreign policy, Connally attacked the Carter administration as not having taken a strong leadership role in world affairs.

Bentsen convinced of energy shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, fresh from a Camp David energy session with President Carter and congressional leaders, is calling the energy shortage the most serious problem the nation has faced in many years.

"More than a problem, it's a crisis we're facing," the Texas Democrat said Monday. "I think it's time that we take a leaf out of Jack Kennedy's book when he ran for the presidency."

It's time to get the United States moving again, Bentsen said.

The senator was invited to both of the day's congressional huddles with Carter, one concentrating on energy and the other on the economy and inflation.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, the only other Texas congressman at Camp David, attended the morning energy session.

Wright predicted the president will have a positive program developed by the end of his mountain retreat. "And it won't be 40 days and 40 nights," the Fort Worth Democrat added, before Carter leaves the mountain.

Workshop offered in economics

CANYON — Economics in the Elementary Classroom is a special workshop which will be offered during the second summer session from July 13-31 at West Texas State University.

The workshop is designed for public school educators and administrators at any grade level. It is devoted to developing an understanding of the free enterprise system and basic economic concepts and their application in the classroom.

In addition, the workshop will provide help and inspiration to teachers who are charged with promoting economic literacy. Dr. Allen Early, director of the Center for Economic Education at WTSU, will conduct the workshop. The class will meet Monday through Friday from 12:45 to 4:00 p.m.

Also conducting the workshop is Ms. Barbara Schick. She is the director of the Center for Economic Education and an instructor in the College of Business and Economics and Division of Continuing Education at the University of Nevada Council in Las Vegas. She is also executive director of the Nevada Council of Economic Education. Registration for this and other WTSU second summer term courses will be July 12 in the WTSU Activities Center.

For more information contact Dr. Allen Early, Center for Economic Education, School of Business, WTSU, (806) 656-2189.

Original Recipe

IT'S STILL A SECRET

It took the Colonel many years to perfect his secret recipe for Kentucky Fried Chicken. And it's still a secret!

But there are some clues. The Colonel uses only fresh, Grade A Chicken. He seasons it with his special blend of eleven herbs and spices and then pressure fries it to seal in all the flavor.

The result, "finger lickin' good" Kentucky Fried Chicken Original Recipe. That's no secret.

It's nice to feel so good about a meal.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press Golf-ball sized hail pounded much of West Texas and the Panhandle during a heavy thunderstorm that dumped between one-quarter and three-quarters of an inch of rain over much of that area. The storms spawned several small tornadoes that did little harm, although the National Weather Service reported damage to a grain elevator and a trailer home 13 miles southwest of Vernon. No one was injured. Driven by winds clocked at more than 75 m.p.h., hail damaged several windows in the Plainview area of the Panhandle. Heavy rains also fell in that area and wind damage was reported in the Clairmont and Paducah areas. Scattered thunderstorms also pelted East Texas and Longview reported nearly a quarter-inch of rain at midnight. Midland received nearly three-quarters inch.

National weather

Wind-driven rain caused some $1 million damage in Cocoa Beach, Fla., tornadoes were spotted in West Texas, and wet weather plagued or threatened much of the rest of the nation. A powerful storm packing high winds and rain ripped into a six-mile stretch of Cocoa Beach Monday, forcing the evacuation of some guests from beachfront hotels and causing about $1 million in damage, officials said. The storm blew rain into the lobbies of several hotels on Florida's eastern coast, blew out windows and overturned cars, the officials said.

WARM TO MILD WEATHER is expected in the forecast period lasting until early Wednesday for most of the country. Showers are forecast in the Southeast. (AP Laserphoto)

Skylab's crash countdown continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skylab's "countdown to crash" ticked relentlessly on today, and a space agency official said there is a good chance all the debris from the faltering hulk will plunk harmlessly into the south Atlantic or Indian oceans on Wednesday. "Right now, it looks like it's going to come down in the south Atlantic Ocean or in the Indian Ocean," said Richard G. Smith, head of the space agency's Skylab task force. The North American Air Defense Command said today in its 6:55 a.m. EDT forecast that the 77.5-ton station will fall out of orbit in a 12 1/2-hour period, between 5:54 a.m. and 6:24 p.m. EDT Wednesday. The midpoint of that period was set at 12:09 p.m. But Smith cautioned that predictions at this point are imprecise, and if the station "flies a little longer, pieces could hit Australia. Or if it flies even longer, or backs up, parts of it could fall in the United States." The midpoint prediction has remained fairly steady — within a range of 12 minutes — for three straight forecasts, making it likely that Skylab will re-enter at mid-day EDT Wednesday. If the Skylab entry does begin at 12:09 p.m., the spacecraft would begin to break up over the South Atlantic and scatter hundreds of molten debris over that body of water, off the coast of South Africa, and in the Indian Ocean. The debris, with chunks weighing from 1 pound to 2 1/2 tons, is expected to scatter over an area 4,000 miles long and 100 miles wide. NASA continued to emphasize that the chances are slim any pieces of Skylab will cause injury or damage. But the agency advised that people who hear news reports Skylab is coming their way head for the lower floors of a house or building. Smith cautioned that the predictions, made by the North American Air Defense Command, are not precise because of different natural forces working on Skylab. Even NORAD's final prediction, coming two hours before expected re-entry, will be only 20 percent accurate, he said. That means the station could come down anywhere over a 15,000-mile path. If present predictions hold, Smith said, NASA probably will make no attempt to delay Skylab's re-entry a few orbits by sending commands to fire the craft's thrusters and decrease the drag. That is an option officials plan to use only if it appears the station is headed for re-entry on an orbital path over heavily populated areas.

Mending mature marriage

by louise pierce

"Forgive and forget" is an old admonition that everybody professes to believe but few practice. Oh, we all say the words and perhaps even intend to carry them out. But how often do we hoard old anger in our hearts, so hard and long that the heat of it steams out of our eyes and our mouths, negating all the forgiveness we promised?

Forgiveness is not easy, I know. If the spouse commits an act that we resent enough to demand explanation and apology, we usually assure him or her that everything is all right now and there will be no mention of it again. We cannot refrain, however, from bringing it up again, adding a recall of similar offenses in past years. As my sister and I used to say about our folks when they scolded us, "They get so historical about it."

I have several feelings about such situations. I have passed them on in lectures and letters. I'll cite a few here.

DEAR LOUISE: My problem is my husband's first wife. Not a day goes by that he does not look mournfully at her picture. He won't take it off the dresser in our room, even though I put my first marriage behind me, happy as it was, and I have never once referred to it. He's always telling me how she did things and how perfect she was as a wife. She's been dead for ten years but it's as if she were still alive and looking over my shoulder. I've told and told him that I can't go on living with him when he's living with her memory. Can you help me try to forgive him for not letting me take her place?

N.R.
DEAR N.R.: I hope I can alleviate your suffering a little. This happens often in second marriages that follow especially happy ones. Memories of beloved mates are like recollections of deceased parents and children. I'm not sure we should separate ourselves entirely from the happy times in the past. Yet we should not cling to them to the extent that we ignore present circumstances and presently loved companions. Why don't you put your first husband's picture on the dresser too, along with those of your parents and others of your families who have passed on? It might make him see that memories are pleasant but that the faces on the dresser are memories and no more, that you are his present wife and life. And don't tell him any more about your resentment of his grief over his first wife; that only makes the grief worse. Emphasize how fortunate you both are that you found a second happiness together and tell him often how wonderful he is. Forgive his memories. If you stop harping on your predecessor, he may start talking less about her and thinking more about you. Love and kindness can work wonders for forgiveness and forgetfulness.

DEAR LOUISE: Fifteen years ago my wife was unfaithful to me while I was on an overseas trip. I promised to forgive her and I've tried to. But every time either of us is gone from the other, I catch myself imagining that she is straying again and I almost lose my mind. I still love her but I don't know whether I can ever really forgive what she did. We've been married thirty-three years. Is my attitude typical?

D.F.
DEAR D.F.: I'm sorry to say that it is. But many wronged mates are able to overcome their lack of forgiving and forgetting by forcing their minds and hearts to accept reality and make the best of what they have. Hasn't there ever been anything you did to offend, even wrong, your wife? Surely you are not without blame in any way. Granted that marital fidelity is the leading cause of divorce, even in these times of open marriage and the public acceptance of what somebody called "bedlock without wedlock." If a mate promises to live above his spouse's past mistakes, he is duty bound to do so. And he can if he determines that he will. If he can't, meaning if you can't, then he should consider the alternative to making so much of what happened fifteen years ago that he breaks up his marriage. What would you do if you left your wife? Could you find another mate you could love as much as you love your present wife? Wouldn't your life be more lonely and unfulfilled than it is now? Sometimes it is even helpful to write down the things you like about a wife as compared to the things you don't like. You may conclude that she has much more good than bad in her. If you reach this verdict and decide that your happiness lies in the preservation of your marriage, then determine to put the past out of your thoughts. Force yourself to trust your wife. Many wronged mates have done this. They realized, after years of suffering over emotional misdeeds of the past, that they did not want to change present conditions for an aloneness that might be far worse and certainly would not be without the possibility of new worries and wrongs. Since others have accomplished the monumental task of forgiving and forgetting, you can too.

Overcome sizzling summer days

"It's not the heat, it's the humidity," say the experts. Whenever you find that either the blazing sun or the dense moisture make you feel as though you're in a steam bath with your clothes on, you might want to plunge into an icy stream.

Since icy streams are rarely available when you most need them, Dorcie Lamphier, director of new products of Merle Norman Cosmetics, suggests 10 ways to cool down and freshen up when the mercury is climbing.

"A light flowery or green fragrance can make you feel cooler," says Lamphier. "Spray a bit of cologne on an artificial flower and pin it to your hair. This will also help keep straggly hair off your face. Another way to give the illusion of being in a field of wildflowers while you're actually on a stuffy commuter bus or train is to dab some scent on a cotton ball and tuck it in your handbag."

Oily complexions tend to become oilier still in hot weather, so it may be necessary to switch to a concentrated astringent. "Keep astringent and skin fresheners in the refrigerator at home and keep an extra bottle at the office with cotton balls for a quick blotting. If you press (not rub) moistened cotton on nose, forehead and chin, you can remove oil without disturbing makeup."

Powder helps minimize the shine on your nose. A translucent powder in a compact can be applied in the morning to set makeup and whenever you freshen up with astringent. Powder blusher rather than a cream blusher is another useful product in warm weather. To simulate a touch of sunburn when you haven't been at the beach, brush powder across cheekbones and over bridge of nose in a butterfly pattern.

Evaluate your summer makeup routine and simplify it as much as possible. Sheer makeup foundation and eye pencils may become your basics in July and August.

Eye pencils have less oil in their formulations than cream-based eye shadows, can be smudged and blended to give just a hint of color. Avoid carrying a lot of cream-based lipsticks and other cream-based beauty products in hot weather since they can change their consistency. A lip pencil and compact of clear lip gloss can be combined to define, color and give a bit of shine to your lips.

Take a 10-minute cooling-down break when you find yourself getting overheated and frazzled. Slip off your shoes, sip some cool water or lemonade, contemplate the coldest things you can imagine. Images of bathing in a waterfall or sitting on an iceberg can make you forget, at least for a little while, that the sidewalks are sizzling.

Americans economizing more

If you're like most Americans, you are really beginning to "think economy." There's a new and increasing awareness among all that we won't be able to enjoy forever the fruits of the world's highest standard of living, unless we do.

Fortunately, economizing has become not only popular but a proud achievement. Husbands and wives are doing their own home repair and improvement work, cutting outside-help costs and practicing economy in the purchase of quality, lifetime tools with famous names like Crescent, Nicholson and Wiss.

Home sewing is on the rise too. With gasoline both short and expensive, Americans are driving less by planning their car use — car pooling to school and work, making one "downtown" trip accomplish the results of two, using public transportation more. We've adjusted our home heating and cooling levels, insulated attics and are using home-appliances sparingly, with forethought, to economize and conserve.

There is hope. Inflation and shortages can be controlled if we're wise and economize!

Dear Abby

Grudges should be forgotten

DEAR ABBY: I am a young man who will be married soon. A problem has come up. I have an aunt and uncle (I'll call Aunt Sue and Uncle Joe) who were my favorite relatives while I was growing up and they always treated me as if I were their own son. They are my god parents.

Well, some time ago, something happened between my parents and Aunt Sue and Uncle Joe. They haven't spoken since. I still don't know what was behind the quarrel.

I would like to send Aunt Sue and Uncle Joe an invitation to my wedding.

My parents may be hurt if I do, but I feel that if my parents want to hold a grudge, it is THEIR grudge, not mine. I am not sure my aunt and uncle would appreciate it if they were invited, but I think they'll appreciate being asked. What do you think?

C. IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR C.: Your attitude shows great understanding and maturity. Children should not be expected to "inherit" and perpetuate the grudges of their parents. (P.S. If you decide to invite them, advise your parents in advance.)

DEAR ABBY: When I am looking at merchandise in a store and a salesperson inquires in an almost - menacing, authoritative manner, "May I help you?" I always say, "No, thanks. I'm just looking." Then I invariably move on.

Perhaps if I had been left alone to look a little longer, I'd have decided to buy something. But when help is offered while I am trying to make a decision, I am forced to make an instant decision which is almost always negative.

Please tell salespeople that, if they want to make a sale, they should let the customer look around until he makes up his mind to buy.

Paella salad combines seafood, rice

A cool idea for the cost-conscious food shopper with gourmet tastes is aromatic Paella Salad, made with nutritious, satisfying rice.

It takes its cue from Spanish "paella", combining low-calorie rice with healthful seafood, chicken and green peas, seasoned in the traditional manner and best presented cold and garnished with red, fresh tomatoes.

PAELLA SALAD

- 1 package (6 ounces) frozen cooked, peeled, and deveined shrimp
- 3 cups cool cooked saffron rice
- 1 can (8 ounces) minced clams, drained
- 1 and one-half cups diced cooked chicken
- 1 and one-half cups each sliced celery and cooked green peas
- one-half cup diced green pepper
- one-third cup sliced green onions with tops

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons dry white wine
- 3 tablespoons capers, optional
- one-half teaspoon salt
- one-fourth teaspoon each garlic powder and pepper

2 medium fresh tomatoes, cut in wedges
Cook rice according to package directions in chicken broth with a pinch of saffron, turmeric, or paprika. Thaw and slice shrimp in half lengthwise.

Combine shrimp with rice, clams, chicken, celery, green peas, green pepper, and onions. Blend mayonnaise with remaining ingredients except tomatoes. Pour over shrimp mixture and toss lightly. Chill. Use tomatoes for garnish or toss with salad before chilling. Makes 8 and one-half cups, or 6 to 8 servings.

Dr. Lamb

Bloodstream absorbs B-12

DEAR DR. LAMB - I had a portion of my stomach removed because of a bleeding ulcer. Due to my operation I have been told to take B-12 pills and to get B-12 injections to prevent or correct a type of anemia that develops when people have had this stomach operation. My question is, are the B-12 pills alone sufficient?

DEAR READER - You're talking about pernicious anemia which results from a vitamin deficiency. The anemia is only part of the picture. You can also have changes in the spinal cord causing permanent paralysis if your body doesn't get enough B-12.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-5, Vitamin B-12, Folic Acid, Pernicious Anemia, to give you more information on this subject. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me. P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, B-12 is absorbed into your bloodstream through the small intestine. First, though, it has to be acted on by a substance from your stomach called the intrinsic factor. Without this substance the B-12 cannot be absorbed. After surgical removal of a major portion of your stomach, it may not produce enough intrinsic factor. That same thing can happen to the stomach without surgery causing pernicious anemia.

Obviously, if you swallow vitamin B-12 you still won't replace the intrinsic factor provided by your stomach. The way doctors get around this problem is by injecting the vitamin B-12.

Once it's injected, it can be picked up directly by your bloodstream and you don't have to depend on intrinsic factor or your digestive system to provide it to your circulation.

So the answer to your question is that you do need B-12 injections, not just pills.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have noticed that you suggest using corn oil to lower one's cholesterol level. I'd like to know if taking the same amount of safflower oil has the same effect. I'm not quarreling with your opinion, but since I use safflower oil, I'd like to know if it's doing more harm than good. I am taking two tablespoons daily.

DEAR READER - Apparently you have misunderstood my remarks. I do not recommend taking either corn oil, safflower oil or any other oil to lower one's cholesterol. I do recommend that you use one of the polyunsaturated oils for cooking and salads rather than unsaturated fats.

That doesn't mean I think you should add a lot of fat to your diet. Quite the contrary. The prevailing opinion among heart specialists is that you should limit your total intake of fat of all types, saturated, monounsaturated and polyunsaturated.

You do need some polyunsaturated oils in your diet and safflower oil is a good source for this. It's relatively low in saturated fat and high in polyunsaturated fat. Corn oil has a little bit more saturated fat than safflower oil.

The fat in fish contains some of the most unsaturated fats in our food.

Women's credit explained in free booklet

Creditors rely on two important criteria before granting anyone credit: your ability to repay and your willingness to repay.

Your ability is based on your income, which can come from sources such as salary, alimony or others. Your credit history predicts your willingness to repay — how well you've repaid credit in the past.

Many women, however, do not have a credit history because the family credit record is under the husband's name. However, a woman requests it, creditors must consider the credit history of any credit account in the name of her spouse or former spouse that can accurately reflect her credit-worthiness.

Increasingly, women are getting the credit they deserve. The General Motors Acceptance Corp. (GMAC), consumer financing arm of the General Motors Corp., has known for a long time that women are good credit risks. Since its beginning 60 years ago, GMAC has helped women finance vehicles. Women, they find, "do a fine job of managing their credit."

A free booklet, "Women Can Get the Credit They Deserve," explains the Equal Credit Opportunity Act and how to establish personal credit. It's available from GMAC, Dept. NA, 767 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

You can freshen fiberglass curtains after washing them if you add one-half cup of powdered milk to the last rinse water.

Gas shortage hurt? Oil execs in same boat

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — While you're waiting in line at the gas pumps, it might help to know that some oil companies are practically in the same boat.

Dorchester Petroleum, headquartered in Dallas, is one of them. It's not classified as a "major" oil company, but it does operate a 43-year-old refinery at Mount Pleasant in East Texas and expects to do $250 million in business this year.

Its executives face an oil crunch of their own. Optimistic predictions are not bandied about the boardroom.

Like many others trying to adjust to the almost overnight advent of gas station lines, you probably have resigned yourself to dollar-a-gallon fuel in the near future.

According to Dorchester, you'd better set your sights higher.

"I can see two-and-three-dollar-a-gallon gasoline happening, with no guarantee that it'll stop there," said Harold Connolly, Dorchester's vice president for refining.

Connolly and his staff face a day-to-day struggle on the world oil market.

The refinery at Mount Pleasant has a rated capacity to process 26,500 barrels of crude oil daily, but it's averaging around 21,500 these days.

Two-thirds of that amount comes from oil fields in the surrounding area. The composition of that local crude determines the products that emerge from the refinery.

The crude dictates that Dorchester produce an abnormally large amount of asphalt. That fact affects total operations, especially when poor weather causes construction to slow down. When that happens, the asphalt market falters. Dorchester lacks storage space for processed asphalt, so total operations slow down at the refinery. Which in turn means that less gasoline and diesel fuel are produced, since all products come from the same crude.

With a limited amount of local oil available, Dorchester, like many other petroleum companies, must turn to other markets.

"People think there is enough oil in this country, but there's not," Connolly said in a recent interview.

Purchasing additional oil means interpreting complex government rules and guidelines.

The best price that Dorchester can get for gasoline is about $25 a barrel.

Domestic oil can be bought in three categories. "Old" crude can be bought for around $5.60 a barrel, and is generally oil that was discovered before 1973. Another set of rules dictates that "new" oil of the post-1973 variety costs around $12 a barrel. And "stripper" oil, which comes from small wells that sometimes only offer a few barrels a day, could cost $18 a barrel or more.

But a maze of regulations throws price proportions out the window, forcing Dorchester's computer to wade through the guidelines before the company knows whether it can afford to purchase a given amount of crude.

But there are other sources.

They are the wells in foreign countries, far from the influences of the United States government.

"We are controlled by the amount of foreign oil available," Rooker said. "There are so many prices for (foreign) oil in the market."

How many prices are there?

So many that Dorchester has one man whose job is to keep in touch with other countries in a never-ending hunt for crude.

Again facing a mass of regulations, Dorchester must again turn to its computers when oil is located at a given price. The computer figures out whether Dorchester can afford to buy and process the oil because it would take too many men too many hours to figure it out.

The daily scramble for foreign oil is a harrying affair, with prices changing day-to-day or hour-to-hour. "We ourselves are not certain where we are," Connolly said.

Rooker and Connolly feel that prices will continue to rise all along the chain of production.

Each railed about government constraints, and Connolly offered an example dating back to the days when Alaskan oil was available for purchase by his company.

He said that when all the rules were taken into account, at one point Dorchester could buy Alaskan crude for less money than the crude from the fields in the area of the company's refinery. This difference occurred even through the Alaskan oil came by way of the Panama Canal and a pipeline trip from the Gulf of Mexico.

Rooker and Connolly obviously favor deregulation. They also know what they would like to do if the controls ever disappear, with a guarantee that they would not return.

Each wants to commit up to $40 million to update the 43-year-old refinery. "It's running on baling wire and Band-Aids," Connolly said, half in jest.

At present, both men fear that any changes made could be rendered ineffective by present or future rules.

Connolly hauled out another example of government red tape.

He said Dorchester has been trying for the past 14 months to get government permits to install a new boiler at the refinery and said it was a relatively small item at around $1 million. He said the new boiler would be more energy efficient and would cut down on pollution.

Connolly also estimated that it would take five to seven years to obtain government permits that would allow construction of a new refinery from scratch.

Bike gang asks for equal rights

DALLAS (AP) — Twenty years ago, the Scorpions might have handled their predicament differently.

But now, most of the motorcycle gang members are in their 30s, and they hope to iron out their differences with Dallas bar owners through peaceful methods.

Zig-Zag, Rowdy, Scum and their comrades say they are denied admittance to some bars because "they don't like our type."

While the bikers still proudly display their colors, tattoos and machines, they want to be able to relax with a brew without jeopardizing their steady jobs and house payments.

"We're big enough and bad enough that we could hurt a lot of people," Scorpions president Zig-Zag said, "but we're not that kind of people. When we were younger, it was different. Now, we're more serious."

Animal agrees. "When I was 17, fighting was fun. But now I want to stay out of jail and not get into any hassles."

A Dallas Times Herald reporter accompanied the bikers to one bar to test their claim that many bar managers throw them out or call the police when they arrive.

Sure enough, a minute or two after their arrival, the Scorpions came back outside. Within five minutes, two Dallas police patrol cars arrived, and officers began checking the bikes' license plates. The bar manager declined comment on the matter.

Football North of the Border

The Philadelphia Eagles, Dallas Cowboys, and Washington Redskins must wait till September for the National Football League's regular season to begin. But what about the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Edmonton Eskimos and British Columbia Lions? Those and six other teams will compete for this year's title in the Canadian Football League, whose regular season starts today. CFL rules are somewhat different from those in the NFL. Canadian teams line up with 12 players, instead of 11. Ball carriers who gain more than 10 yards beyond the line of scrimmage must run the rest of the way without blockers. Canadian rules also allow single points for certain kinds of kicks.

DO YOU KNOW — What trophy is awarded to the championship team in the CFL?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The United States won the most medals at the 1975 Pan American Games.

SALT II debate will invade NBC prime time

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The news. Fred Silverman told NBC affiliates last May, will be given a higher standing at the network. And a matter as important as SALT II would be the subject of prime-time discussions on NBC.

Skeptical mutterings all around.

Wasn't this the fellow who gave us "Laverne and Shirley," "Supertrain," and "Fonzie"? The fellow who turned network prime-time into a protracted recess?

Sure. He'll give SALT II plenty of attention. He'll let (McLean) Stevenson crack a joke about it on "Hello, Larry" (another entertainment meant to be viewed from a playground sandbox).

But tonight Fred Silverman makes good. NBC has put together what promises to be a lively and informative debate on the arms limit treaty, to be broadcast live from the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington.

"He said he would do it, and here it is," said NBC News executive Gordon Manning, who planned the debate.

Likely, few will watch, and NBC knows that. Still, it is an admirable concession to the notion that television should sometimes be more than a talking, giggling sedative.

"SALT II is the most important question of the decade," suggests Manning, a journalist who's partial to quaint ideas such as public responsibility, "passions run high on both sides. And this is an idea whose time has come. The (Senate) Foreign Relations Committee opens SALT II hearings (this week), and its first two witnesses are (Secretary of State) Cyrus Vance and (Defense Secretary) Harold Brown.

"So, here we have, on the first day that the Senate considers the treaty, NBC doing a live debate that brings the various nuances of the treaty to the public. I'm encouraged by it."

The first hour of the program will be the actual debate of the SALT issues by two three-man teams. Captain of the "opposed" team is Republican Senator

Jake Garn of Utah, who will be joined by Paul Nitze (former SALT negotiator) and Elmo Zumwalt, former chief of naval operations.

Captain of the "for" side is Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, who will be aided by William J. Perry, a weapons expert in the Pentagon, and Adm. Nowell Gayler (Ret.), former chief of the National Security Agency.

In the last 30 minutes, experts from the floor will pose questions to the two sides.

Viewers tuned to a decade-old movie ("Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon" on CBS), or a repeat of "Three's Company" (ABC) will be missing out. I think. A news special doesn't have to be dull.

"We're trying to produce this as dramatically as we can without putting it in a 'Gong Show' format," said Manning.

Whether it's watched or not, the SALT debate is on, and in prime time. That's victory enough.

News quiz

Editor's Note: How much do you remember about the news of the week? If you score fewer than five correct answers, you're spending too much time on the crossword. If you get eight or more right, you rate an "A."

The question most asked while our air conditioner was broken was "What did people do before, there was any air conditioning?" After recent developments on the energy scene, we may have the chance to find out.

We received some of the new Susan B. Anthony one-dollar coins the other day. The size is only slightly bigger than a quarter. I wonder if the value is indicated by the size.

To see how far a dollar will really go, shop Phetteplace Shoes Dollar Sale. Buy first pair at regular price, get second pair for only one dollar.

Astro-Graph

by bernice b. de osol

July 11, 1979

This coming year an opportune situation may develop where you'll be called on to manage something for another, and you'll be able to do yourself a lot of good in the process. Be alert for sound joint ventures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Normally you're quite astute in matters relating to dollars and cents, but today this could be your major weakness. Be doubly cautious. How you can get along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your new Astro-Graph Letter that begins with your birthdate. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Situations may develop in a unique manner today and you may find yourself being pressured to make some concessions against your best interests. Be firm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take care of your duties and responsibilities as they arise today. Sweeping things under the rug will cause you problems later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you conduct yourself admirably socially, but today, unless you're very careful, your tact could desert you and cause you some embarrassment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be content with who you are and what you have today. Envy others because you feel they may have more is only a waste of mental energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your memory may not be up to par today, so if important facts or data are passed on to you, jot the information down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Accept no financial advice today from persons who lack the expertise to guide you wisely. Poor counsel could cost you a pretty penny.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be your own person today, instead of letting others make major decisions for you. They may be looking out for their interests rather than yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is not an especially good day to request favors, even from person you've helped in the past. Paddle your own canoe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Approach what you do optimistically today, but by the same token don't build your hopes on unrealistic premises. Delusions lead to disappointments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 10) Beware of a tendency today to treat important challenges too lightly. Miscalculations could be your downfall.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It could be a bit difficult to keep secrets today because of your gregarious personality. Try not to blurt out something that's best kept to yourself.

Foot Notes

By RANDY LIGHTFOOT
Pampa News Sports Editor

Over the years, I've noticed that many non-members of booster clubs seem to think the only thing which goes on at booster meetings is the parents of the athletes get together and talk about how their respective sons or daughters are getting along in their different fields of athletic endeavor.

After attending the special meeting of the Harvester Booster Club held last night, I am very pleased to report that is not the case here in Pampa.

Currently, the backers of PHS athletics are working in conjunction with the school board toward the purchase of an activity bus. The bus will be a renovated Continental Trailways vehicle with new upholstery on the seats and it is in the process of being repainted in Pampa's school colors.

The booster club, along with several of the varsity coaches, are in the midst of beginning a fund drive to raise money for their share of the expense for the bus. Work on this drive began just three weeks ago and over 10 percent of the money they hope to raise has already been secured.

The Harvester bus is expected to cost $49,000. While this may seem to be a prodigious sum of money, it will probably turn into quite a bargain long before it has gone to that great bus heaven in the sky.

For instance, to use a chartered bus which comes out of Amarillo, it cost the school system (and ultimately the taxpayers) $112 just to get the vehicle to Pampa. Last year, for example, it cost $350 for the football team to travel to Amarillo one time and when the baseball team went to Lubbock on a smaller bus, it cost $580.

Also, it costs twice as much per mile to take a gasoline powered engine on a trip as compared to the diesel fuel engine the new bus will contain.

You will notice that the vehicle is being referred to as an "activity" bus and not an "athletic" bus. As Athletic Director Ed Lehnick put it, "The bus will be available for all school activities, but the athletic teams will have priority since the booster club is going to be paying for so much of it."

How then, is the booster club going to pay for it? That brings me back to the fund drive. There are several members of the fund drive committee who are calling on various businesses in town to solicit donations. Twelve people have promised to personally raise $1,000 through donations. That would still leave the treasury a bit low of the mark, so more help will no doubt be needed. Lynn McDougall is the tireless chairperson of the committee and she or Lehnick can provide any further information anyone might want about the drive or the bus.

I will very seldom use this column to espouse a fund-raising drive, but when the taxpayers can buy nearly $50,000 worth of equipment for half the price due to the help of something like the Harvester Booster Club, I think it is worthy of mention.

The club will have another meeting next Monday for an update on the drive's progress. It would be worth the time and effort to attend if you can.

More controversy swirls at Pan Am

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The United States once again failed to complete a day at the VIII Pan American Games without controversy.

It took nearly three hours of appeals and deliberations to settle a controversy arising from James Robinson's scintillating victory over the legendary Cuban half-miler Alberto Jantorena, the highlight of Monday's activities in these hemispheric Olympics.

Robinson bumped into Jamaican Owen Hamilton, who was running second, en route to a tenth-of-a-second victory over Jantorena in the 800 meters. Hamilton filed a protest after dropping off and finishing fourth in the event. The referee and a Jury of Appeals finally upheld Robinson's victory.

Robinson did not deny he bumped the Jamaican. "There was an opening to get through, but at the time I made my move, Hamilton drifted over into the inside of lane 1 and we bumped," Robinson admitted. "I knew I had to stay with Jantorena to beat him. My finish at the end did it."

"He's fast at the end, and I'm fast at the end. I figured I had a pretty good chance of beating him — I heard he's been having a little back problem. To me, it's a very satisfying win because I consider him the best half-miler in the world."

Behind Robinson, American basketball Coach Bobby Knight was in the news again. Knight said "I'm getting crucified by my silence" over his skirmish with a policeman Sunday, so the coach called a news conference for today to explain his side of that controversy.

Knight has been accused of laying hands on the policeman, who has not been identified. Asked Monday night whether he had a court appearance scheduled, Knight replied, "Honest to God, I don't know."

The accusations have been flatly denied by the U.S. Olympic Committee. Knight's squad, who are headed for a probable gold medal showdown with Puerto Rico on Friday, meanwhile, clubbed Argentina into submission, 99-73. The U.S. women's team likewise humbled Mexico, 92-58, in moving to within three games of a gold medal.

The United States reaped a big gold medal harvest Monday in the final day of weightlifting. Mark Cameron of North Bergen, N. J., who boasted that he would outlift the super heavyweights, failed — by just 23 pounds — but did collect all three gold medals in the regular heavyweight category.

Thomas Stock, Belleville, Ill., finished up with 847 pounds to win the jerk, snatch and total in the super heavyweight division.

America's Greco-Roman wrestlers closed out their competition by winning a medal in every category, including four golds. The winners were Bruce Thompson, Rosemont, Minn., in 52 kilograms; Dan Chandler, Anoka, Minn., 82 kilograms; John Mathews, Flint, Mich., 74 kilograms; and Brad Rheingaus, Appleton, Minn., 100 kilograms.

The 12th gold medal of the day for the U.S. athletes went to Essie Kelly, Prairie View, Texas, in the women's 800.

The U.S. softball squads also kept on track toward gold medals. The amazing Kathy Arendsen, Zeeland, Mich., stretched her string of scoreless innings to 29 with a one-hit victory over Belize, 1-0. She lost her no-hitter with one out to go in the game. In her last outing, she pitched a perfect game, preceded by a 15-inning two-hit shutout. Though the competition is only two-thirds over, the field was depleted with the withdrawal of the Dominican Republic in a squabble over having to play two games in one day.

The U.S. women were to play twice today, in games starting only four hours apart. The U.S. men, with their fireballer Ty Stofflet, who pitched a no-hitter Sunday, play only once today. They took a tough 1-0 decision over Venezuela Monday.

In other action involving U.S. athletes Monday, Americans took a 1-0 victory over Trinidad-Tobago in field hockey, while in boxing, Lemuel Steeples, St. Louis, advanced to the semifinals of the junior welterweight division with a decision over Benedito Ferreira of Brazil, and Edward Green, Fort Bragg, N.C., had to withdraw from his bout with Mike McCallum of Jamaica because of a cut.

Entering today's competition, the ninth of 14, the United States had an overwhelming lead with 85 gold medals and 192 medals overall. Cuba was next with 49 golds and 103 overall. Canada had 20 gold and 104.

Cowboys' Christensen ready to help anywhere

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Todd Christensen is trying to make up for time lost when a bad break — of his foot — put him out of operation in the last game of the exhibition season. And while his 6-3, 229-pound body still might line up at tight end for the Dallas Cowboys someday, his heart will be a few steps behind at the fullback position. Christensen, who came to Dallas from Brigham Young as a No. 2 pick in the 1978 draft, had what Coach Tom Landry called a "knack" for finding daylight. He delighted other coaches by playing in practice as if he were in the Super Bowl.

The year to pass. "I felt a little like the guy who courts the girl all week and then sits and watches someone else take her out on a date on the weekend."

Christensen is back now, but Landry has starter Robert Newhouse. Scott Laidlaw and a sometimes-impressive Larry Brinson penciled into the fullback slot.

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — One day of double practices in pads was enough to convince six free agent rookies they should head for the showers at the Dallas Cowboy training camp here.

Three other players probably will be out of practice for a while from injuries sustained on the field Monday.

Leaving camp were Kevin Hill, a wide receiver from Texas-El Paso; Marschell Brumfield, a running back from Youngstown State; Frank Fox, a running back from Tennessee; Stan Mitchell, a running back from Eastern Kentucky; John Schramm, an offensive lineman from Arizona; and Fred Snell, a linebacker from Houston.

Among those injured today was defensive back Tim Lavender, the Cowboys' sixth-round draft choice from Southern California. Lavender suffered a bruised shoulder, and trainers began treatment immediately.

Persistence pays off for young cowgirl

Cydney Morris of Lefors was the living embodiment of the maxim "Persistence pays off" at Monday night's opening performance of the Top 'O Texas Kid Pony Show.

Miss Morris, competing in the Group II classification, had narrow misses in her first two events of the night. Her flag refused to stay in the bucket during the flag race, robbing her of a potentially good time in that event.

Then, in the potato race, another good performance by the young lady from Lefors was wiped out when her potato (or golf ball, to be specific), bounced off the rim of the bucket and resulted in a "no time" performance.

But Miss Morris, who had proved through her two rides that she could handle a horse, went through the Group II barrel race pattern in a blistering 17.6 seconds to capture first place in the event.

Her persistence was just one of many examples of the determination shown by Monday night's contestants at the Rodeo Grounds, none of whom were over seven years old.

Despite horses that wouldn't cooperate and a few hard spills from hard running horses and bucking calves, none of the young competitors ever dreamed of quitting.

Wade Maul of Pampa, for instance, coaxed his stubborn horse Ajax to a fifth-place finish in the Group II potato race — after the belligerent steed had stalled long enough to force Maul into a better than three-minute performance in the flag race.

Others, including Shelly Stubblefield in Group I potato racing, suffered falls that could have made the hardest of cowboys call it quits for the night. But youthful persistence — and a lot of heart — got all the contestants back on their horses before the night was over.

Winners in the night's opening event — aptly titled the gold rush — were Wade Maul of Pampa, Brock Thompson of Miami and William Gill of Miami. They plucked ribbons from the tails of three rambunctious calves in an arena-wide chase and received $5 apiece for their efforts.

Calves, however, had the best of it in the calf riding competition. Bucking ferociously, they managed to unseat all 10 contestants in the event without a score being recorded, although Miami's Brock Thompson came very close to staying with his animal.

In Group II flag racing, Kelly Whitson of Pampa zipped to a 13.4-second clocking as the event's first competitor, and that stood up for first place.

Missy Shackelford, another

Pampian, turned in a time of 18.0 seconds to capture second, while Pampa cowgirl Menda Thomas had a 21.4 performance for third.

Shannon Kay Harper of Pampa ran the potato race in 17.4 seconds to take first in her age group, while William Gill of Miami clocked in at 21.5 for second. Amarillo's Shane Jones had a 23.9 performance, good for third place.

In Group II spud running, Pampa's Matt Brock had a 15.2-second time to capture the honors. Missy Shackelford claimed her second place finish of the night in 19.1 seconds, while Canadian's Matt Martin was third in 23.8.

Barrel racers in Group I were led by Mark Eakin of Spearman, who finished in 19.5 seconds. He was followed by Marty McFall of Bowers City (24.1) and William Gill of Miami (24.8).

Lindsey McCasland of Wheeler turned in a 19.1 performance in Group II barrel racing to finish behind Miss Morris, while Monty Harris of Amarillo was third in 19.8.

Groups III and IV, comprised of cowboys and cowgirls 8 to 11 years of age, will hold the second performance of the Kid Pony Show at 7 p.m. tonight at the Rodeo Grounds.

Lasorda chooses NL moundsmen

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Rogers and Steve Carlton, who both flurried with no-hitters last week, were among those named Tuesday by Manager Tom Lasorda to an eight-man National League pitching staff for next week's All-Star Game.

Rogers, of the NL East Division-leading Montreal Expos, hurled 7 1-3 innings of no-hit ball Saturday in Montreal against Lasorda's Los Angeles Dodgers before finishing with a four-hit victory. He also leads the league's starting pitchers in shutouts (five) and earned run average (.29) through Sunday.

Carlton, 10-8, allowed only one hit — a leadoff double in the seventh-inning by Elliot Maddox — and retired the first 18 batters in his 1-0 victory over the New York Mets at Philadelphia last Wednesday. The left-hander has two no-hitters this season and 103 strikeouts.

The two will join pitchers Joe Niekro,

Joaquin Andujar and reliever Joe Sambito of the NL West Division-leading Houston Astros when the All-Stars meet next Tuesday for the golden anniversary All-Star Game in Seattle's Kingdome.

Also picked for the NL mound staff Tuesday were Gaylord Perry of the San Diego Padres, Mike LaCoss of the Cincinnati Reds and reliever Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs.

Niekro, Andujar and Sambito all have played vital roles for the surprising Astros, who are off to the best start by far in the club's 18-year history.

Niekro, 13-3, won eight consecutive starts from May 13 through June 13, earning him NL Pitcher of the Month honors for May, while Andujar, who received the same award for April, has picked up three of his 10 victories in relief.

Sambito, the league's hottest pitcher out of the bullpen recently, has 10 saves and four wins. The left-hander currently is on a hot streak of 35 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings covering his last 23 appearances, and his ERA has dropped to 1.06.

Perry, the 1978 Cy Young Award winner who will turn 41 on Sept. 15, owns a 9-6 record with eight complete games and a 2.48 ERA. He recorded his 100th strikeout of the season Sunday in beating the Mets.

LaCoss, who blazed out of the gate with eight straight victories, has an 8-3 mark and a 2.41 ERA. Sutter, the winning pitcher in last year's All-Star game in San Diego, leads the league with 19 saves and had a 1.17 ERA going into Monday night's game at Atlanta.

It will mark the first All-Star appearance for LaCoss, Niekro, Sambito and Andujar, who was selected to the 1977 team, but missed the game due to an injury. It will be the fifth appearance for Perry, who has represented both the National and American leagues twice.

Skylab hurries Montreal's 'Spaceman'

By the Associated Press
It was no coincidence that Montreal left-hander Bill Lee used just 92 pitches in beating the Los Angeles Dodgers. It was no coincidence the game took just an hour and 55 minutes to complete.

"With Skylab falling," Lee observed, "you pitch quicker."

Of course. With the newest piece of space debris headed earthward, who better to listen to than baseball's "Spaceman"?

"The less time you spend on the field," he explained, "the less chance you have to get hit."

Lee, 9-5, may have meant that two ways: less chance of getting hit by Skylab, and less chance of getting hit by the Dodgers.

Lee gave up just seven hits — six of them singles — Monday night, and had a two-run single of his own in the Expos' 3-0 victory. In the process, Lee got 20 outs on grounders, and one more on a strikeout, leaving only six balls to re-enter the atmosphere at Olympic Stadium.

"Today was about as good as I can do getting groundball outs," he said. "Occasionally, you have to throw flyball outs to keep them honest. Otherwise they'll start ricocheting balls off your shins."

There was none of that by the Dodgers Monday night. In fact, there wasn't any hitting by the Expos, either, until the fifth inning.

Los Angeles right-hander Don Sutton, 7-10, retired the first 13 Montreal batters before walking Gary Carter and giving up a single to Ellis Valentine. Larry Parrish, back after a three-day layoff because of a bruised foot, doubled to right for a run.

Phillies 4, Giants 2
Mike Schmidt's sixth home run in the last four games, a two-run shot, powered Philadelphia past San Francisco and helped Dickie Noles record his first major league triumph.

Noles, 1-1, was promoted from the American Association last week when the Phillies lost three pitchers to injuries within 24 hours. He survived nine walks and a fifth-inning home run by Vida Blue, 7-7, who has won only one of his last 11 starts.

Cubs 7, Braves 4
Steve Ontiveros capped a four-run first inning with a two-run homer, then doubled to deliver another in Chicago's two-run fifth in carrying the Cubs past the Braves.

Jerry Martin and Larry Biittner had driven in first-inning runs before Ontiveros unloaded on Phil Niekro, 11-11. The homer was the third of the season by Ontiveros and the 25th of the year off Niekro.

Bruce Sutter preserved the victory for Dick Tidrow, 5-2, and recorded his 19th save of the season.

Cardinals 6, Reds 3
Ken Oberkfell drove in two runs, including the game-winning run in the Cardinals' seventh inning sending St. Louis past Cincinnati.

Joe Morgan struck out twice, but extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a single in the Reds' three-run ninth.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
The problem, George Brett seems to think, is that when Kansas City gets the pitching, it doesn't get the hitting — and the Royals haven't been getting much pitching lately.

"We just can't keep the ball in the ballpark lately," Manager Whitey Herzog said after the Cleveland Indians launched four pitches over the fence to rout Kansas City 8-2 and saddle Herzog's Royals with their ninth loss in the last 10 games. Kansas City pitchers have given up 44 homers in the last 24 games.

In the rest of the American League, California beat Boston 6-0 and took a one-half game West Division lead over Texas, which lost 5-4 to Chicago. Baltimore widened its East Division margin to three games over Boston by downing Oakland 7-3. Minnesota defeated Detroit 5-3 and Toronto beat Milwaukee 7-1.

Charges may be filed against basketball coach

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — American basketball coach Bobby Knight's courtside shoving match with a San Juan policeman may end up in a court of law after all. A U.S. Olympic Committee attorney indicated today.

Patrick Sullivan, legal counsel for the USOC, said at a morning press conference that charges were to be filed against Knight sometime during the afternoon and that Knight intended to file countercharges against the policeman.

According to Sullivan, Knight intended to charge policeman Jose de Silva with assault and battery, violation of Knight's civil rights, humiliation before his team and being incarcerated without charges. At the same time, Sullivan said de Silva, acting as an individual and not as a member of the police department, plans to file assault and battery charges against Knight.

Sullivan's press conference followed two days of USOC denials that any charges would be brought in the Sunday incident. Knight and the police officer reportedly got into a shoving match after a dispute over use of a basketball court for practice. Knight, of Indiana University, is coaching the U.S. basketball team in the Pan Am Games here. Knight was taken to a police station and released after the incident.

Dear Gabby

How To Put Enjoyment In Your Employment Dear Gabby: I don't wish to brag, but I really feel I have too much ability for the work I am doing. There must be more challenging jobs somewhere. What am I to do? - Bored Stiff

Dear Stiff: The answer is so obvious I am surprised you haven't thought of it yourself. Surely you are aware that there are many job opportunities advertised every day in the 'Help Wanted' columns of your Classified section. If the job you want isn't there, try running a 'Situation Wanted' ad. Classified is the great clearinghouse for jobs and job seekers.
