Predicts 'massive struggle'

Carter plugs profits tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is telling the American people "your voice must be heard" if the Senate is to pass his windfall profits tax. Without it, he says, "we cannot reach our energy goals."

At a nationally broadcast prime-time news conference Wednesday night, Carter predicted "a massive struggle to get the windfall profits tax bill" in the Senate. It already has passed the House.

It was Carter's first news conference in Washington since May 29 and he appeared forceful throughout. His upper lip twitched briefly, however, when he was asked if he had thought about taking himself out of the 1980 presidential race.

"I have considered all the options," he reported, "and my decision will be announced later on this year."

Carter had a snappier comeback when a reporter asked about a prediction by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., that the president's problems will force Carter out of the race and hand the Democratic nomination to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"Three or four years ago I was running for president against Sen. Jackson," Carter recalled. "At that time he predicted he would be the next president, starting in 1977. His judgment was not very good then. And now I am ready for the next question."

During the half-hour session in the White House East Room, Carter defended last week's Cabinet shake-up, declaring, "I have no apology to make for it."

Saying that some have thought he acted too rapidly, he said he felt a need to "create a new team to work with me" and "I had the choice of dragging it out or getting it over, in effect, in 48 hours."

As for criticism of his decision to name longtime political aide Hamilton Jordan to a White House chief of staff, Carter said Jordan will do a "superb job" in an assignment he indicated will have strict limits.

"He will not be chief of the Cabinet," Carter said pointedly. "I will be chief of the Cabinet. He will not be the chief of the Congress. The Congress is an independent body. Hamilton Jordan will be chief of the White House staff."

Carter's appeal for public support for the windfall profits tax came a few hours after a major setback in the House for part of his energy program.

The House abruptly halted debate on legislation giving him standby authority to ration gasoline after an unexpected adoption of an amendment sharply limiting his flexibility.

Carter said the House action "illustrates the timidity of the Congress in dealing with a sensitive political issue."

"I need your help," he said. "I need the help of the people of America."

In an opening statement, the president pointed to proposed amendments that could slash revenues from his oil excise tax by $55 billion in the next decade, denying him the money to launch a $142 billion energy program centering on a search for alternatives to petroleum.

"This is a democracy," he said. "Your voice can be heard. Your voice must be heard. Please speak to the Congress of the United States and especially to the United States Senate, which still has the responsibility to act."

Weather

Today's weather forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 per cent chance of rain tonight. Temperatures today and Friday should reach the 90s, while tonight's low should be in the mid 60s. Winds will be from the northeast and will shift to the east tonight.

Chase ends in arrest

A high-speed chase involving a stolen vehicle resulted in the arrest of a Borger man by Pampa police Wednesday night.

The chase began at about 10:30 p.m., when a police officer tried to stop a black GMC pick-up truck for speeding on Barnes Street. Rather than stop, the truck fled south with the officer in pursuit. Police learned the truck had been stolen from Fritch.

The chase ended abruptly when the truck went off Highway 273 near Bowers City and crashed. One of two persons in the truck, Jimmy Winegeart of 429 Weatherly in Borger, was taken into custody.

The other person, also a male, escaped on foot. Four officers, assisted by Gray County deputies and state troopers, searched the area for several hours for the man, who remains at large.

Store still moving here

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

Kevin Francis, owner of Kevin Francis Clothiers in Amarillo, announced last month he is expanding his business to Pampa.

Shortly afterward, on July 5, a Potter County grand jury indicted Francis for murder and two counts of solicitation to murder in connection with the 1977 slaying of his former partner, Frank Potts.

But Francis' impending murder trials have apparently not affected his plans to open a second clothing store here.

The new Kevin Francis Clothiers, located at 110 N. Cuyler, will open "probably the first of September," Francis said Wednesday. He was in Pampa to observe remodeling of the building, formerly Ashley's Outlet Store.

Francis, a Pampa native, is also "looking at a location in Borger," he said. He hopes to open a third store there in 1980.

Before then, however, Francis faces what will likely be three highly-publicized trials in three separate courts, expected to begin in August. The first of the solicitation to commit murder charges will be heard by Judge Ed Nobles of 10th District Court, and the second will be heard by Judge Jerry Shackelford of 320th District Court.

Judge Naomi Harney of 251st District Court is scheduled to hear the murder trial against Francis. She has scheduled a hearing on pre-trial motions for Aug. 20.

A second Amarillo man, George Hicks, also is charged with murder in the Potts case. Hicks is in Potter County jail in lieu of $110,000 bond. Francis is free on $20,000 bail.

Potts was killed Oct. 8, 1977, in Barney's Factory - Direct Clothing Store in downtown Amarillo, which he co-owned with Francis. Potts was found with his throat slashed and with multiple stab wounds to his body, the victim of what police believed might have been a robbery attempt. Francis told police he was on his lunch hour when the slaying occurred.

Francis and Potts had been partners for about a year. They reportedly met when Potts helped Francis close out Francis' first store, located in Pampa.

The store, Kevin Francis Inc., opened here in the spring of 1970 and closed in 1976, when Francis moved to Amarillo. Francis has maintained Kevin Francis Inc. in Amarillo, operating a warehouse there and a showroom in Dallas. The business imports suede coats from the Orient and sells them to stores throughout the Southwest, according to Francis.

Francis graduated from Pampa High School in 1968. His father, the late Buddy Francis, operated Buddy's Supermarkets. His mother, Mary, still lives here.

One of the solicitation indictments against Francis alleges he tried to induce John Payne of Pampa to help him kill Potts. Payne reportedly helped run the now-defunct Field's Mens' Wear at 111 W. Kingsmill until 1976.

Francis bought out Field's Mens' Wear and closed it in June to prepare for the opening of the new Kevin Francis Clothiers.

An air of mystery, including the fact that it took a grand jury almost two years to return indictments on it, surrounds the Potts case. The indictments against Francis followed a lengthy series of meetings by the grand jury, from which Amarillo District Attorney Tom Curtis and his staff were inexplicably barred.

Curtis has disqualified himself from prosecuting the case. Tuesday, Potter County Attorney pro tem George Harwood was named prosecutor for the trials. Harwood, 31, has prosecuted only two felony cases in his short career.

Francis' attorney, claiming the grand jury which brought the charges against Francis was illegally impeached, has filed motions to dismiss the case.

Meanwhile, carpenters are busily preparing the building at 110 N. Cuyler for the grand opening of the second Kevin Francis Clothiers. Asked what effect his legal troubles have had on his business plans, a calm Francis replied "I have no comment to make about that."

INDICTMENTS charging Amarillo clothing store owner Kevin Francis with murder and two counts of solicitation of murder apparently have not affected Francis' plans to open a second store in Pampa.

CUTE OR DANGEROUS? Mitzi McAndrew thinks her pet skunk Charlie is "fabulous." But Texas veterinarians are discouraging the animals as household pets, partly in response to the drastic increase in rabies cases in the state this year. Dan Lackey explores the world of Charlie and the veterinarians' position on skunks on pages 1 and 3 of today's News.

Vets discouraging pet skunks

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Local veterinarians have joined with state health officials and officers of the Texas Veterinary Medicine Association in discouraging the skunk as a pet.

The skepticism about skunks is part of a statewide reaction among veterinarians and health officials to a drastic rise in reported cases of rabies this year in Texas.

As of early this month, the state health department had recorded 567 animal rabies cases since Jan. 1, compared to 563 for all of 1978. Of rabies cases reported this year, 80 percent were found in skunks.

The alarming rise in rabies has resulted in three deaths so far this year of children bitten by rabid dogs in the Southwest Border area of Texas. In addition, a July 4 skunk-bite incident in Pampa near Red Deer Creek east of Commerce Street has brought the potential problem close to home.

According to local veterinarians, an 8-year-old child was bitten on the hand by a wild skunk he had apparently tried to apprehend. The animal later died in confinement. When its head decomposed en route for rabies tests at the state health laboratory in Austin, the child was forced to undergo several precautionary rabies shots.

"Children see these cute little creatures, they sometimes try to catch them, but they've got to be taught to leave wild animals alone," said Dr. Kenneth Royse.

But veterinarians are not stopping at warning against interference with the wild skunk. Keeping the animal as a pet is also being discouraged.

Royse says the "situation is dangerous enough that I've stopped deodorizing them." He said he stopped the practice for his own protection and to discourage skunks as pets. Royse said he had vaccinated about six of the animals so far this year.

Dr. M.W. Horne said he had not treated enough skunks to even keep an accurate account of the number. He said he did not "de-scent" the animals and does not encourage people to keep them as pets.

Dr. Ron Hendrick said that although he did not encourage skunks as pet, he still treated a few pet skunks for other than rabies vaccinations.

He said de-scenting is now a violation of AVMA ethics, and that rabies vaccinations for skunks cannot be guaranteed. Hendrick said "de-scenting can be inhumane. Sometimes people tire of them (skunks) and turn them loose without any protection."

State health officials report that attempts to vaccinate skunks for rabies can instead infect the animal with the disease.

Dr. John Galbreath, region one veterinarian for the state health department, was more outspoken in his criticism of the skunk as a pet.

"My personal opinion is that a skunk is the worst pet a person can have," he said. "The animal is cantankerous, with a very short temper. It will bite—and often latch on."

Galbreath said that 46 percent of the skunks tested in the state health lab were rabid. He also cited a study which concluded that skunks will bite 21 percent of their owners and 58 percent of the strangers they encounter.

House Bill 958, passed in this year's legislature, will make it illegal to sell skunks for pets although individuals may own them. A section of the act which would have made de-scenting illegal — and therefore impossible for skunks to be owned as pets — was deleted from the final bill.

City health officer Elmer D. Young was not available for comment, but his secretary Verlone Ward said that the health office had not received any recent calls about skunks.

Four wild skunks have been reported in the city in the last month, according to animal control warden Marc Nichols. Nichols said city policy is to destroy the animals.

Chief state veterinary health officer Dr. F.V. McCasland reiterated the opinion that skunks were "certainly were not suitable as pets." McCasland said that in addition to the inadequacy of rabies vaccines for the animals, skunks can carry the disease without showing symptoms for up to 18 months.

McCasland said, however, that skunks "born and raised in captivity were safer to begin with." He said the animal's domestication might be acceptable if they were bred in colonies.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

To build racial understanding first lets desegregate textbooks

By Tony Brown
Please answer the following American history questions:

1. Name three black heroes of the American Revolutionary War.
2. Name the Afro-American who invented the electric traffic signal.
3. Name the man who chopped down the cherry tree and could not tell a lie.

If you answered only the last question correctly, you're a typically educated American, with probably a better-than-average performance in school-taught American history.

The myth of George Washington and the cherry tree - concocted by Parson Weems - is taught as historical fact. The first two questions, like many others dealing with authentic American history, are ignored by textbooks - or, at best, taught as adjunct material. (Three of the most famous black heroes of the American Revolutionary War were Johnny Braenmen, Peter Slaem, and Saul Mathews. The electric traffic signal was invented by Garrett A. Morgan.)

One can say, to the distress and puzzlement of all, that many Americans who have gone through a dozen years of schooling do not know where the Constitutional Convention was held or have the slightest idea of the Bill of Rights. And that's true.

But not because they were not taught these facts, at some point. Needless to say, the selected facts are about white people and their contributions to the forward progress of mankind.

Generation after generation of black and white children leave high school with so little knowledge of black American history that meaningful racial acceptance is impossible. Liberal intentions and a convoluted social policy called integration have become substitutes for an honest, enlightening and liberated relationship between blacks and whites.

An incomplete American history has created "us" and "them," and ultimately a distortion of our national interest. However, it's an altogether human tendency to evaluate the opinions of others in the light of one's own priorities.

This tendency has, throughout civilization, determined the relationships between individuals, between groups and between nations. Each has presumed his own opinion to be correct, and has consequently used those opinions as a yard-stick with which to gauge the wisdom of others and to maintain group power and advantage.

An American history that has largely left Afro-Americans out is more accurately the American history of Europeans. From our American textbooks over the years, what sticks to the memory is not any particular series of facts, but an atmosphere, an impression of white people which draws the image of blacks as a historical nuisance.

These textbooks become the truth of things: American history.

A child will attempt to assimilate 32,000 textbook pages during his elementary and high school years. About 75 percent of his classwork and about 90 percent of his homework centers on the textbook. If the textbook contains nothing about black literature, then it is logical for him to assume that blacks have never written any.

In one 11th grade literature anthology, "The American Experience," black play-wrights, poets and writers were indeed omitted from every area. The volume's non-fiction selection explored two questions: "What does it mean to be an American?" and "What is America's destiny?" Out of 64 selections, only three essays were included by blacks - one by Frederick Douglass and two by James Baldwin.

One of the primary movements today is the desegregation of the schools. Particular interest is given to racial quotas to insure that black, brown, red and white students will share a common cultural experience.

But how can they until desegregation applies to the curriculum - particularly the textbooks? If a white child learns only the personalities and events shaped by whites and their European forebearers, how can he or she help but feel a sense of pride in his or her race?

All the white child has learned of blacks is that they're obsessed with protests, civil rights, and affirmative action. Very little is told of their role in shaping America's destiny. There is no basis for respect.

OPINION PAGE

Senate shouldn't bow to threats

We doubt that the United States Senate is prepared to take marching orders from the Kremlin. In signaling its independence and its common sense, the Senate is expected to amend the SALT II treaty before considering whether the agreement should be ratified or rejected.

It was to be expected that the Soviets, having negotiated a strategic arms treaty that concedes them considerable advantages, would favor its approval by the Senate without alteration. It was likewise to be expected that the Soviets would publicly express their support for the treaty's existing terms even as the Senate prepared to consider whether those terms are in the best interests of the United States.

What no one in Washington seemed quite prepared for was an explicit Soviet ultimatum. Ratify the treaty as is or the entire arms negotiation process will be cancelled. That is what Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said in a recent Moscow news conference.

To ensure there would be no misunderstanding, Gromyko switched from Russian to English to tell reporters, "no matter what amendments would be made, it would be impossible to reopen negotiations. It would be the end of negotiations, the end, no matter what amendments would be made."

Should the Soviets stick to this position, we can be all but certain SALT II is dead. Indeed, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd went to Moscow to tell the Russians as much.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker announced his decision to oppose the treaty unless it is amended. That appeared to doom chances for ratification without alteration.

The Senate should not be deterred by threats from Moscow. If the Soviets insist on ending the decade-long arms negotiation process because of amendments that could render SALT II more fair to both sides, so be it. Such an action would unmistakably reveal the Soviet Union's real objectives and alert the American people to the challenge they face.

Conversely, should the Soviets subsequently decide to accept a more equitable and verifiable agreement, American security could be enhanced and the necessary preconditions for negotiating a balanced SALT III treaty would be established.

Eighteen years ago, John F. Kennedy said that the United States should "never negotiate out of fear." The Senate would do well to remember that admonition as it ponders changes that will be necessary in SALT II.

Nation's Press

The dollar abroad

Wall Street Journal

With money growth since April higher than prior to the dollar rescue program of last November, it is well to note that things are different in today's international arena from what they were the last time there was a run on the dollar.

During the last year's run, the dollar got some much needed support from the Swiss and Germans at the cost to them of importing our inflation. The Germans are still having inflationary problems and are unlikely to take on more just so Jimmy Carter, for domestic political reasons, can hold the gasoline price and the interest rate below market levels.

The new European Monetary System in operation since mid-March will make the Germans even less likely to support the dollar. The EMS is committed to holding roughly fixed rates of exchange between member country currencies. That means the German central bank must stand prepared to support the weaker EMS currencies. With this commitment and their limited tolerance for inflation, the Germans are naturally hesitant to pump out many marks in support of the dollar.

The EMS also means that the dollar is likely to fare worse in any future run on it. The last time around the dollar lost ground heavily against the Swiss franc, the German mark and the Japanese yen, but didn't do too badly against the trade-weighted exchange rate average, a basket of currencies of our trading partners. The depreciation of the dollar against the French franc and the Italian lire, for example, was nothing like what the dollar suffered against the stronger currencies.

But if the EMS succeeds in maintaining the exchange rate alignment between member countries, a future run on the dollar would see the French and Italian currencies moving with the German mark against the dollar. A run on the dollar, then, would not be confined to a few major currencies.

An even bigger change since last November is the Saudis' expressed unwillingness to be the holder of last resort of a depreciating dollar. Another run on the dollar like last year's an the Saudis may abandon the dollar as an exclusive settlement mechanism for oil bills and demand payment in a basket of currencies.

The question is afout whether this administration, preoccupied as it is with political imagery, is aware that the next run on the dollar would be more difficult to arrest than the last and would, therefore, be best avoided. People are also wondering what the administration would do. Would it choose an interventionist "solution" of the type it has chosen for every other economic problem and impose exchange controls?

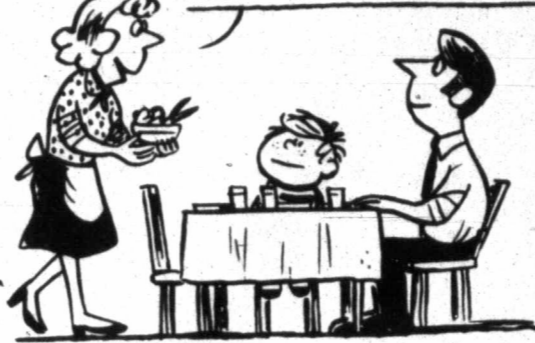

The President already has exchange control authority, and as he has said that the depreciation of the dollar adds to inflation, both rationale and power are in his hands. This itself makes the dollar markets nervous, because reducing the tradeability of the dollar makes it less valuable. The administration could reduce the chance of a run on the dollar by asking Congress to repeal exchange control authority, as the Shadow Open-Market Committee has recommended.

More importantly, the administration can look to its macro-economic policies. With surprising candor the Council of Economic Advisers admitted in its 1979 annual report that the dollar became an uncertain asset and went bad over the summer and fall of 1978 because of concern about the administration's macro-economic policy. Nothing fundamental about that policy has changed. There's still an outpouring of dollars, and the administration has shown itself even more enamored with non-market approaches to economic problems.

With all of these factors working to undermine confidence in the dollar, the President staged an unprecedented upheaval in the top level of government, informing the world to expect political expediency rather than leadership.

Now that the President has dealt with the political complexion of his Cabinet maybe the dollar can flag his attention before he gets a crisis that can't be managed with Caddell polls and Rafshoon imagery.

Good neighbors do not butt in

Are you not weary of American politicians trying to run from and escape home-front problems by redirecting our attention overseas?

Here we are with such ailments as inflation, energy and crime - which could prove fatal - presuming to tell the South Africans, the Cambodians, even the Guatemalans how to conduct their affairs.

How dare we condemn another government because some of their civil liberties are inhibited by government when here at home our civil liberties are restricted by anarchy in the streets!

Five administrations ago the Good Neighbor Policy was enunciated because it sounded politically palatable.

But we adopted it without stopping to think what it really means to be a "good neighbor."

In every neighborhood, the good neighbor is the one who minds his own business.

He lives his own wife. He sees that his own children behave. He tends his own garden and cuts his own grass and keeps his own house painted.

And as a good example, his influence tends to inspire emulation.

For more than a hundred years we Americans led the world that way - by example.

Watching our experience with individual liberty and self-government England initiated sweeping democratic reforms; the French threw off the yoke of their dissolute king and rapacious aristocracy. Watching our example our Latin American neighbors freed themselves from Spain.

From 1776 until the early 1900s, every other enlightened nation on earth was going our way.

We were good neighbors. We were a lighthouse for the world.

But the day we began calling ourselves "good neighbors" we tended to abandon leadership by example. Then and since we have sought with money, duress, threats or force to make other nations over in our own likeness.

In your home community a buttinsky is the most despised of persons.

In the community of nations also.

And worse is the conspicuous inconsistency of our rude, pompous, presumptuous impertinence.

We boycott one nation for allowing few rights to blacks, yet we wrap our diplomatic arms around nations which allow no rights to women.

It has become ludicrous, the manner in which the United States encourages and supplies first one side and then the other in Angola, in Zaire, in our own hemisphere in Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay.

And sometimes both sides at once - as in the Middle East.

Henry Kissinger once told a Harvard seminar: "We got involved in Vietnam to contain Moscow. Then we discovered it was not Moscow we were containing but Peking. Then we discovered we were really there to contain Hanoi."

"And gentlemen," Kissinger concluded, "Hanoi is not worth containing."

As we approach another campaign time, several hopefuls in both parties are traveling the world in an effort to appear "presidential."

The smart ones will be those who stay home - recognizing that we want our next President of the United States to be a President of the United States - addressing himself to the gut, do-or-die home-front issues of inflation, energy and crime.

Only if we confront and resolve these problems can we give the world something better than a red star to steer by.

Anybody but Kennedy

If Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., decides to seek the presidency in 1980, at least 10 percent of the electorate probably will reject his candidacy because of his personal conduct 10 years ago.

For the second time in less than a year, a national survey undertaken by a major magazine indicates that there is a significant group of anybody-but-Kennedy voters that has neither forgiven nor forgotten the senator's Chappaquiddick auto accident in the summer of 1969.

The most recent poll, commissioned by McCall's magazine and conducted by The Gallup Organization Inc. of Princeton, N. J., consisted of interviews with almost 1,500 adults.

More than one-quarter of all respondents - 27 percent - said they believe Kennedy's behavior during and after the accident is indicative of a serious flaw in his character.

Not for publication

Washington journalists traditionally have abided by an informal guideline that limits the free "hospitality" they properly can accept from an outsider to "whatever you can eat or drink at one sitting" - a meal or a round of drinks.

Letters

I didn't think the world had very many compassionate people left in it, let alone Pampa.

In this day and time not many people will stop and offer assistance when someone has a pretty good fender bender, but Mr. and Mrs. Price Smith went beyond that. They not only stopped, but gave their name as a witness and said to call them, if I needed a friend.

What beautiful Pampa People!

A grateful citizen

But John B. Connally, the former Texas governor and treasury secretary now running for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, has never been accused of being a small-time operator.

The Connally campaign organization devised a scheme to invite, three or four at a time, several dozen journalists and their spouses to spend a weekend at Connally's Picoosa Ranch near San Antonio, Texas.

But many of those invited declined the opportunity to partake of five meals, a steady flow of drinks and a choice of swimming, tennis, skeet-shooting or horseback riding - as well as some informal political chatter.

Because the plan generated little more than unfavorable publicity and criticism of Connally and his guests, the campaign's communications director, Julian Read, won't even disclose the names of those who accepted the invitations.

Hispanics to meet with deputy attorney general

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic spokesmen scheduled a meeting today with Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, whose nomination as attorney general they are fighting.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., suggested the meeting midway through testimony at the Senate Judiciary Committee began Civiletti's confirmation hearing Wednesday.

"We are strongly opposing Mr. Civiletti's nomination," Paul Sedillo of the Forum of National Hispanic Organizations said. "We feel that as a minority have been neglected by the Justice Department."

Central to the Hispanic opposition is the contention that the Justice Department, with Civiletti in a top leadership spot, has been reluctant to prosecute for civil rights violations involving alleged police brutality against Hispanics. Nineteen of 57 cases the group outlined to the committee were in Texas.

"The number of cases that the Justice Department has initiated ... is absolutely a horrendous record," Sedillo said.

Elisa Sanchez of the Mexican-American Women's National Association said, "Our people are being assaulted, murdered and otherwise brutalized while their cries for help fall on the deaf ears of the Justice Department."

Civiletti is scheduled to respond further to senators' questions Friday after the Hispanic groups complete their testimony today. He denied Wednesday, however, any bias in Justice Department activities.

"I have not, in my view at least, shied away or shirked or neglected to move in these areas, and move positively," he said. "I believe we have made strides in the Justice Department."

The deputy attorney general said the Justice Department decided not to issue any indictments in the death of a Larry Lozano because of insufficient evidence of civil rights violations after an extensive investigation.

He said the decision in the Lozano case was a unanimous one, refuting reports Washington officials overruled U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd of San Antonio.

Lozano died in the custody of Ector County, Texas, authorities.

Ruben Sandoval of the League of United Latin American Citizens, who represented Lozano's family in court proceedings, said there were too many inconsistencies in the Justice Department's decision to close the Lozano case.

The San Antonio, Texas, attorney, said, "There has been not only a refusal but an outright ignoring of our rights."

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., asked if the Hispanic spokesmen still would oppose Civiletti if commitments to more minority representation and involvement in the Justice Department are made.

"The relationship is not beyond repair," Sandoval said, adding he was skeptical because of the lack of progress made after previous meetings.

Sedillo proposed that the next deputy attorney general should be a Hispanic.

DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL Benjamin R. Civiletti's nomination as attorney general is being opposed by Hispanic organizations. "We are strongly opposing Mr. Civiletti's nomination," Paul Sedillo of the Forum of National Hispanic Organizations said. "We feel that we as a minority have been neglected by the Justice Department." (AP Laser photo)

Civil rights trial has abrupt stop

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor says he disagrees with a federal judge's findings that prompted an order for acquittal of two fired policemen charged with violating civil rights in a "throw down" gun case.

U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton Jr. made final arguments and jury deliberations unnecessary Wednesday by abruptly ruling the government had failed to prove the defendants had specific intent to violate the rights of Billy Keith Joyvies, 18.

Joyvies was fatally wounded on July 11, 1975, at the end of a high speed chase that began after a tool box had been stolen from a truck.

The indictment against Walter Plaster 53, and John Stephen White, 28, alleged a conspiracy to place a gun in Joyvies' car to make it appear the Houston youth was armed.

A police internal investigation later showed the gun found in the car had been traced to an officer who had been slain earlier in a gunbattle with escaped convicts.

There was conflicting testimony during the trial whether Joyvies was armed.

Singleton described the actions of Plaster and White as "improper and shocking" but said there was no conspiracy as the officers sought to protect themselves and the police department.

"The government has the duty to produce sufficient evidence to prove beyond a reasonable doubt each of them had the specific intent to violate a right of Billy Keith Joyvies was guaranteed," Singleton said.

"The evidence in this case does not support any reasonable inference either officer had this intent."

Calvin Botley, the chief prosecutor, said he differs with such findings.

"His findings were the defendants' conduct was shocking, but their purpose was to cover themselves and the police department, not to violate Joyvies' civil rights," Botley said.

Mary Sinderson, head of the U.S. attorney's civil rights division, said investigations of such cases will continue.

"We are, of course, disappointed to lose a case, but it will not slow down our investigations," she said. Two members of the jury that never got to deliberate indicated agreement with Singleton.

"My feelings were running about the same as the judge," said F.D. Utsey.

"Joyvies was dead or near dead and I don't feel you can violate the rights of a dead man."

Singleton talked with several jurors, including Ralph Sheets, outside the courtroom after announcing his ruling.

"I didn't see any evidence against them," Sheets said. "We were all in agreement. Everyone had the same idea I had."

Joanna Joyvies, mother of the dead youth, did not seem surprised by the outcome but said she thought the trial made it clear "Billy didn't have a gun."

Without elaborating, Mrs. Joyvies said she had not expected too much "because of what has happened in other cases."

This was an apparent reference to two earlier federal court trials in which five other fired Houston officers were involved in civil rights violation charges.

In a similar "throw down" case, former officers Danny H. Mays, 32, and Norval Wayne Holloway, 28, received five-year suspended sentences on May 14, with U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan saying they already had been punished enough.

The two officers had been found guilty of charges of lying to a federal grand jury while covering up the fact Randall Alan Webster, 17, Shreveport, La., was unarmed when he was shot to death in a 1977 high speed chase that began after a van had been reported stolen.

The gun found in the Webster vehicle was traced to the police property room, where records indicated it had been destroyed after it had been acquired in the investigation of a suicide.

Pet skunk pride of McAndrew clan

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

The Jack McAndrew family of 2112 N. Zimmers St. wants strangers to know Charlie as they know Charlie.

"We go through this every time because we want everyone to seem him the way we do," says Doria McAndrew.

Fortunately, husband Jack has arranged for two strangers to see what he likes to call "the true Charlie" through sliding glass doors from a "safe" distance on the back porch.

Inside, a small dining room circus is taking place. Daughters Jackie, 12, and Mitzi, 11, are coaxing a creature — which looks at first like a humorous cross between a dog and a cat — to its feet with scraps of baloney.

The McAndrews seem to have had great success with their pet female skunk — named, shortly after her birth in captivity three years ago, for the perfume.

The family considers the animal as safe as it is affectionate. Although Charlie is relentlessly shy around strangers, scurrying away like a cartoon weasel at the first whiff of a newcomer, the McAndrews say no one has ever disliked their pet.

"When my father first saw her he was quite surprised," said Doria. "To him, a skunk was a thing you killed on the farm — but he learned to like him."

Charlie stays in a cage in the garage when the family is not home or when they are sleeping. The rest of the time she has full run of the house, which she has left only a few times in her life.

Cleaner even than a cat, she fastidiously uses a litter box in the back bathroom. Her coat is shiny from a daily staple of cat food. But the skunk will eat crickets, spiders, hot dogs, pizza, cheese, grapes, baloney — virtually anything, including popcorn as long as it is buttered.

Describing the family as "just dumb animal lovers," Doria says that of the dogs, cats, roosters, gerbils, rabbits, and ducks they have owned, the skunk is the all time favorite.

Like all pet lovers, the family never tires of the animal's antics, and takes pride in her small accomplishments, among which is the ability to open the sliding glass doors with his paws.

Jack says the eyesight of skunks is weak and that they rely for direction and recognition on their sense of smell. Charlie rarely ventures out, especially in the day, because the animal's skin is highly sensitive to heat.

The father is alleged to be Charlie's favorite, and a color photo of "the true Charlie" draped like a living stole over a reclining Jack's shoulder is evidence of the contention. The family says the only time the skunk has shown any temper was when they tried to put a leash around her neck a few months after she was born.

The skunk is very much a part of the family. Jackie wrote a 12 page paper on Charlie for class last year at Pampa Middle School because "that's the thing I knew most about."

But Jack McAndrew says "he is quite concerned" that children understand "they should not try to pick up a wild skunk. I want to discourage that."

The McAndrews say it is unfortunate that the state wide concern about the increase in rabies has led to the discouragement of skunks as pets. "It would be cruel to abandon the pet," he says. "He's been raised in captivity."

Upper Texas coast hit by Claudette's rainy remnants

By The Associated Press
 Wind blown rain drenched the upper Texas coast early today as National Guard troops and police evacuated residents of low lying areas as water poured into homes and businesses.
 One death was reported Wednesday in Beaumont, where a man drowned when his automobile went into deep water at an intersection.

The National Guard was mobilized Wednesday by Texas Gov. Bill Clements to help with the evacuations.

There were no indications as to when relief might be in sight from the torrential rain as forecasters said radar indicated that the showers extended well into the Gulf of Mexico. The overall, slow movement of the system, the remnants of Tropical Depression Claudette, was northward, meaning the activity would continue.

Flooding was reported early today in Harris, Matagorda, Liberty and Brazoria Counties as well as several counties in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

Hundreds were housed in temporary shelters in numerous communities along the upper coast area. Exact figures were not available as flooding appeared to be reaching new areas by the hour.

New evacuations started during the night were reported under way at Freeport, Alvin and El Lago, League City, Dickinson and Clear Lake Village. Evacuations had been under way Wednesday at Port Arthur, Bridge City and Lakeview.

More than 20 inches of rain fell at Alvin, the National Weather Service said, adding that it was still raining "extremely heavy" there during the pre-dawn hours.

Street flooding was said to be "severe" at Alvin.

"This is a record breaking flood," said a spokesman at the National Weather Service office at Houston.

Forecasters urged motorists to stay off roads and streets because many are flooded and closed because of high water and stalled vehicles.

Strong southerly winds prevented tides from flowing out of Galveston Bay, adding to the problems and causing more flooding problems for residents living along the bayous leading into Galveston Bay.

At Galveston, the National Weather Service said the area very heavy thundershowers covered most of three counties and is moving little. The thundershowers covered a vast area of Southeast Texas, extending from near Bay City to West Columbia and Brazoria to Rosharon, Alvin, Friendswood, La Port and Baytown.

It was the second time in three months that floodwaters had plagued the Golden Triangle area bordered by Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange.

The only flood-related death reported by early today was in Beaumont where Lewis Yokum drowned when his car stalled in the bottom of a flooded underpass.

Yokum's body was recovered from one of three cars pulled from under 10 feet of water in the underpass, according to Deputy Fire Chief Fred Carter.

The other drivers were not immediately located.

"They might have been able to get out their cars or they might have been swept away by the current," Carter said.

Law enforcement officers at Port Arthur reported difficulty keeping streets open during the height of the early morning deluge.

police report

Ramon Galaviz of 218 W. Craven reported the theft of an RCA black and white television, a stereo turntable and an eight-track tape player.
 An employee of Alco Discount Store reported a female shoplifted a bottle of base make-up and two bottles of nail polish.
 An employee of Ideal Food Store at 431 N. Ballard reported observing a male shoplift several items. The male fled on foot before police arrived.
 Stapleton Boot and Saddle Shop at 612 Frederic was reportedly burglarized, but nothing was removed from the store.
 Police responded to 29 calls in a 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Labor leader foresees battle

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Organized labor faces a determined assault by business on prevailing construction wage laws and must get tougher in its political activity, a national AFL-CIO official says.

Thomas R. Donahue, executive assistant to national AFL-CIO president George Meany, addressed the Texas AFL-CIO convention on Wednesday.

He predicted a continued attack by business on prevailing wage laws and said the activity "represents guerrilla warfare against workers and decent working conditions."

Prevailing wage laws prevent contractors on government jobs from paying workers less than the wages normally paid in a community. A bill to repeal the Texas law died in this year's Legislature only after thousands of "hard hats" thronged the Capitol in protest.

Donahue said opponents of the prevailing wage law talk of holding down costs, "but the real goal is not economy but busting unions."

The convention of delegates from 1,000 union locals, representing some 265,000 union members, began Wednesday and runs through Saturday.

Delegates are expected to re-elect Harry Hubbard as president and Joe Gunn as secretary-treasurer without opposition.

Donahue recalled that last year's "Labor Reform Act" was killed by a U.S. Senate filibuster after a move to cut off debate failed by a single vote.

"We probably spent $6 million to $8 million on that effort," he said.

Donahue said with irony that labor should have "an honor roll of COPE-endorsed senators" who voted to let the filibuster continue. COPE is the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, which endorses candidates and funnels labor money into political campaigns.

He named five senators who he said were endorsed by COPE but voted against shutting off the filibuster: Dale Bumpers, D-Ark.; Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.; Richard Stone, D-Fla.; Howard Cannon, D-Nev.; and Edward Zorinsky, D-Nebraska.

"We need to be even tougher in giving support to candidates and in supporting the candidates we endorse," Donahue said. "We need to take a harder look than in the past at those who say they are our friends. ... The lesser of two evils should not be good enough for us any more."

Hubbard urged the 1,500 delegates to donate or pledge $200 apiece toward supporting labor-endorsed candidates in the 1980 Texas elections.

Personal safety equipment vital to farmers

Hard hats, protective eyewear, safety shoes — farmers are not fully prepared for a day's work unless they're wearing them.

Industry has found that safety apparel has paid off in fewer and less serious on-the-job injuries. Farm safety leaders believe that agriculture can also benefit from routine use of protective equipment.

According to William D. Hanford, manager of the National Safety Council's Farm Department, an analysis of data derived from farm accident surveys suggests that nearly half of the work injuries might have been prevented or made less severe if the victim had been wearing appropriate personal protective equipment.

"Rising production costs are forcing farmers and ranchers to look for ways to improve productivity and efficiency," Hanford says. "Accidents add tremendous expense, time loss, and waste of skills. And insurance and compensation costs are soaring, due in part to needless accidents. Farmers and ranchers simply can't afford not to make safety a part of their working day."

"Of course, the best safety device is to work in a way that reduces the chance of accidents. But, for the best possible job of injury prevention, we must urge the use of personal protective equipment."

The cost of the equipment is reasonable and, said Hanford, "downright cheap when you consider the money and misery it could save."

The head is vulnerable to blows from falling objects or bumps from working in low or tight spaces. A hard hat can help the farm or ranch worker avoid head injuries or even a fatal fracture. The bump cap, its lightweight (but less sturdy) brother, is suitable for most everyday farm and ranch work.

Eyes are susceptible to dust, chaff, flying pieces, pesticides, ammonia fertilizer. Several kinds of safety glasses, goggles, and face shields are available. Industrial-rated safety glasses can be ground to the wearer's prescription. All regular eyeglasses and sunglasses should have shatter-resistant lenses mounted in sturdy frames.

Farmers and ranchers suffer a high rate of noise-induced hearing loss, usually due to operating noisy equipment for long hours.

Nylon tow ropes should be handled with care

Nylon tow ropes are like rubber bands: they stretch under tension, storing great amounts of energy.

This energy is useful when towing a mired tractor, but it can come back at you like a jet-propelled boomerang if a chain or hook breaks while the tow rope is under tension. The National Safety Council reports numerous cases of serious injury and death, plus ominous "near misses."

In most cases reported to date, the tow rope itself had not failed. However, hooks, clevises and chains used in hitching have snapped when the towing vehicle made a running start trying to free a stuck vehicle or dislodge an object.

To take advantage of the energy-storing feature of the nylon tow rope, manufacturers suggest that you start with a slack rope and move ahead until the towing vehicle is ready to "spin out"; then quickly set the brakes and use the stored power in the stretched rope to yank out the stuck or lodged object.

To do this safely, any hooks, clevises or chains used to attach the rope to the towing vehicle and the object to be towed must be stronger than the rope

According to Joe Smatana, Safety Director of the Texas Farm Bureau and Texas Safety Association board member, the best defense against towing mishaps is common sense and following these precautions: always use a tow rope strong enough to withstand the towing vehicle's power.

If possible, attach the rope itself to the stationary object.

Don't be like the fellows trying to pull a van out of the mud with a pickup truck and a nylon tow rope. When the truck "hit" the load, its rear bumper was wrenched off and crashed through the windshield of the van. Fortunately, no one was hurt... but the next time they might not be so lucky.

Watch out for power lines

A Great Plains farmer and his two sons were pushing a portable auger elevator from one bin to another when they were suddenly stopped in their tracks, literally "frozen."

They heard the crackle of electricity above them, then felt the electric current surge through their arms and legs. The older man wrenched free of the machine only to watch in horror as his sons slumped into unconsciousness and death.

Tragically, similar scenes are repeated on farms and ranches across the country. Any piece of metal equipment that can reach power lines is capable of bringing the "lightning" down. Sections of irrigation pipe upended for cleaning, hay stacking booms, communication antennas, raised dump truck bodies, metal ladders — they're just a few of the objects implicated in accidental overhead power line injuries and fatalities, according to Dr. Gary S. Nelson, a safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and vice president for Farm and Ranch with the Texas Safety Association.

In a study of electrical accidents made by the National Safety Council's Farm Department, three out of every four resulted from contact with overhead power lines, either the high-voltage supply lines or the distribution lines carrying power from one building to another.

Nelson urges all farmers and ranchers to take a good look at power lines near their operations and determine what precautions and training are needed to prevent electrocutions. Where tall equipment must be used, consider an underground electrical supply. Lines over lanes, drives and field entrances might have to be raised to accommodate modern equipment.

Safety week runs through Tuesday

About 10,000 Texas farmers and ranchers suffer disabling injuries. In view of this fact, Wednesday was the beginning of a week's emphasis on agricultural safety.

Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Week, designated by Gov. Bill Clements, runs through July 31.

The observance of the special safety designation is to encourage renewed emphasis to make Texas farms and ranches a safer place to live and work. Texas joins the entire nation in the safety emphasis.

The governor, urging all who live and work on Texas farms and ranches to make accident prevention a part of all activities, noted, "One of the most persistent barriers to agricultural well-being has been farm and ranch accidents."

Western art reveals romanticism

By EUGENE LAYCOCK
Pampa News Staff

Romanticism rolled out the canvases for the Western art of Frederic Remington and Charles Russell, whose works are now a prominent part of the Amon G. Carter Museum in Fort Worth.

The world of the cowboy and Indian is illustrated in both artists' works at the museum in pastel hues that are most representative of the colors in the Plains and in sculptures that freeze wild prairie action.

The color, form and action of riding, hunting and other Western experiences were captured on canvas after the two men had spent many years with both cowboys and Indians.

Russell, whose work predominately has been representative of the Indian, had done poorly in school because he was more interested in the adventure of the West.

His father had offered a trip in that direction as an incentive to improve grades while Russell was attending Burlington Military Academy in New Jersey.

He returned from the academy with bad marks, and his father, in a last effort to formally educate his son, employed the services of a tutor who lasted three weeks.

Then, Russell began to learn what would become invaluable to his trade when he travelled to Montana to work on a sheep ranch.

On his way, Russell conversed with a group of Crow Indians who were chasing Blackfeet tribesmen. The Blackfeet had stolen the Crows' horses.

Some of Russell's earliest sketches recorded his memories of these Indians and indicated a developing sympathy for the red man.

Russell, who was in his mid-twenties, had lived with a tribe of Blackfeet in Alberta, Canada for more than a year in the late 1880s. He called the Indians "red brothers."

He was able to watch the form of animals, as he followed a hunter named Jake Hoover.

Russell hunted none himself, but studied the muscle movements, colors and habits of elk, deer, buffaloes, bears and other wild animals.

With Hoover, he learned to be a horse herdsman and followed several cattle drives while studying the cowboy's routine. He sketched these memories in his spare time.

He had many shortcomings as a cowboy, but his tales and illustrations caused cowboys to be fond of him.

During his time as a cowboy, a postcard drawing of an emaciated cow replaced a descriptive letter that Jesse Phelps, a prominent rancher, had planned to send to an Eastern friend, who was curious to the effects of a current winter.

He later combined his knowledge of the Indian with animals in creating works such as "Buffalo Hunt" and "Crow Indians Hunting Elk." They are both represented at the Amon Carter Museum.

"Buffalo Hunt" displaying an Indian mounted on a horse with a bow drawn in pursuit of a fleeing bison, has been one of Russell's most reproduced works.

However, Frederic Remington's action concentrated more heavily on the habits of the cowboy, although he layered many canvases with the color of the Indians as evidenced at the Fort Worth museum.

The museum's "The Smoke Signal" demonstrates Remington's brush work and desire to record Western history. In this work, two Indians blanket a fire to produce smoke in intervals for a message, while another Indian sits on top a white mound and stares into the distance.

Remington came to Montana during the same decade Russell did and encountered the cowboys each day. One painting, entitled "Cowboy," is enspirited with the Western man's love of action. The bronco rider flippantly holds to his air-bound horse.

Like Russell, Remington finished school prematurely and immediately went West. He had been studying art at Yale University.

A sculpture in the museum, "The Dragons" displays a murderous struggle between Indians and white men in a whirl of concentrated action.

His works also illustrate the serenity of the plains' skies and an open campfire surrounded by tired cowpokes.

Together, Russell and Remington have contained a piece of the Old West at the Amon Carter Museum, which could be said to hold the heart of the Texas cowboy.

The People's Pharmacy

by Joe Graedon

Q. Yesterday my eight-year-old son came home from the neighborhood pool complaining that his heart was pounding and his head ached. He seemed irritable and anxious and had a hard time getting to sleep. My neighbor, a nurse, took his pulse. She said it was faster than it should be, and that the symptoms sounded like he might have caffeine toxicity.

Johnny doesn't drink coffee; he doesn't even like iced tea. Besides, the vending machines at the pool only sell soft drinks and candy. He said he had several cans of Coke and a big chocolate bar in the afternoon, but how could this have caused his symptoms?

A. Although most people know that coffee and tea contain caffeine, we often ignore the amounts of caffeine present in popular soft drinks. It would be convenient to have caffeine levels listed on the labels of these drinks but the companies have resisted this strongly.

Two researchers in California published the results of their analyses of coffee, tea and nine brands of carbonated beverages in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association this year. The Pepsi, RC and Diet-Rite colas they tested had 32 to 43 mg. of caffeine per can, or about as much as a three-minute cup of hot tea. Coca Cola, Mountain Dew and Dr. Pepper, on the other hand, checked in with 50 to 65 mg. of caffeine per can, or about as much as a cup of instant coffee.

Even the chocolate bar your son ate contributed to his caffeine intake. Chocolate and cocoa contain a caffeine-like substance: a small chocolate bar may have the equivalent of 25 mg. of caffeine. Other places this substance turns up unexpectedly are in over-the-counter drugs. Stimulants, pain relievers and diet pills often contain up to 200 mg. per capsule.

Caffeinated beverages are so familiar to us that we often forget that caffeine is really a drug. It has effects on the heart and blood vessels as well as on the chemicals in the nervous system. Although 250 mg. of caffeine, the amount in two or three cups of coffee, can cause a 14 percent increase in blood pressure, people accustomed to drinking tea, coffee or caffeinated soft drinks no longer notice the increased urination or insomnia excess caffeine can cause. It takes a sharp doctor to detect high caffeine consumption as the culprit from among many other possible causes of headache or diarrhea.

While it may take five or six cups of coffee, or sometimes more, before an adult notices toxic effects due to caffeine, children weigh less and are susceptible to lower doses. The caffeine researchers point out that a young child drinking a can of Coke or Dr. Pepper is getting as strong a dose of caffeine as an adult would from four cups of instant coffee.

Many parents who would never dream of giving their child that much coffee don't realize that a couple of sodas could cause the very symptoms that your son experienced.

Q. After reading your column on the problems of measuring liquid medicine accurately in teaspoons because of the different sizes they come in, I checked the regular measuring teaspoon I use for recipes against some other spoons in my kitchen drawer. Sure enough, there was a big difference in how much water they held.

Since almost every household has kitchen measuring spoons, most people will be able to find a teaspoon of the correct size on hand without buying the fancy medical measuring spoon you recommend.

A. Thanks for the handy tip! When we got your letter we checked our kitchen measuring spoons carefully, and found that the cooking teaspoon indeed holds that 5 ml. the doctor has in mind when she prescribes a "TEASPOONFUL."

We find that a calibrated medical spoon made specially for medication is more convenient than the tippy teaspoon we normally use to measure vanilla for a cake, but with care the standard kitchen measuring spoon will also give an accurate and safe dose.

Project image by appearance

Do you sometimes get the feeling you scare people away? Are you tired of being brushed off as "cute and frivolous" or do people think you're too tough? People may be reacting to your hair style, notes an article in the Aug. 7 "Family Circle" on how to project the image you want through your makeup and hair.

As psychologist Judith Waters of Fairleigh Dickinson College, who was interviewed in the article, says, "Society has determined that certain looks have certain meanings." David Daines, owner of Manhattan's Davian Salon, provides an example: "A woman with very severe short-cropped dark hair may make people tense when they first meet her, because what she is projecting is a tough, masculine image." On the other hand, bright blond hair, carelessly coiffed, may be a way of telling people you're still not grown up, while severely pulled-back hair may send out a warning to the world to "stay away."

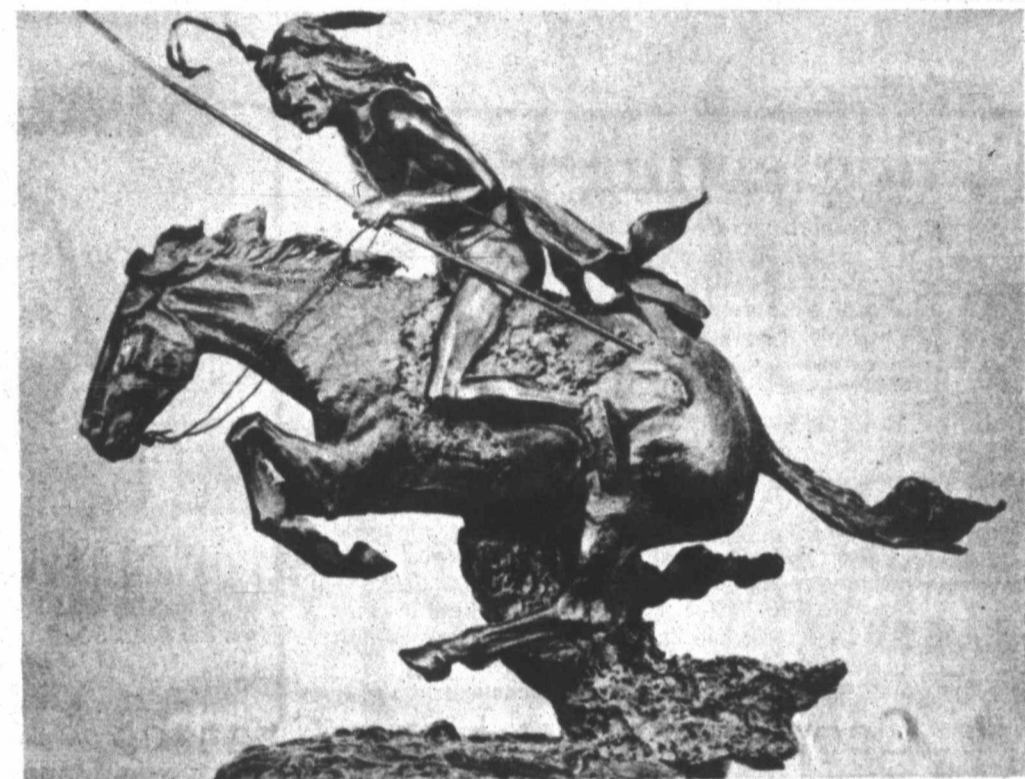

Makeup or the lack of it, points out the article, is also a clue to the image you are projecting. "A lack of makeup can mean poor self-esteem, a cry for help," says Dr. Waters. "Too much is frequently an attempt to recapture your lost youth."

Changing your hair or makeup, suggests the magazine, may be the key to getting people to react to you differently and to bringing your appearance closer in line with your own self-image. To make people respond more warmly to the soft, feminine you, replace tightly pulled-back hair and dark eyeliner and pale skin with a softer hairstyle and color on your cheeks.

To find out whether the impression you are giving others is the one you want them to get, the article has several suggestions. For starters, the magazine recommends paying attention to the messages you get from others. Do people tend to treat you as if you are older or younger than you actually are? Are you rarely, or always, taken seriously? Clues like these, points out the article, can give you some ideas about what people think of you.

But, warns the magazine, if you decide to change your appearance, even if others notice it immediately, it may take you about a year before you get accustomed to the new you.

Dishwasher cleans with steam method

Using one of man's oldest forms of energy — steam — engineers have devised one of the newest conveniences — a dishwasher that cleans with steam. Thermador - Waste King Division of Norris Industries has made what it calls the most advanced breakthrough in home dishwasher technology since the first dishwashing machine 134 years ago.

Four years in development, this new Steam Machine harnesses the cleaning power of steam to soften and loosen food soils. The steam rises in a gentle mist from the bottom of the machine and goes places water can't.

This is how effective it is: On Monday you can put in the baked bean dish; Tuesday, add the meatloaf pan; Wednesday, the spaghetti casserole; eat out on Thursday; toss in Friday's goopy peanut butter knife; come Saturday turn on the Machine and witness the results — clean, clean dishes. Now, spend Sunday thinking up stickier situations for the Steam Machine.

Pooh Bear will greet children at annual pageant

Winnie - the - Pooh will greet 24 youngsters on stage during the children's segment of the Miss Top O' Texas Pageant, scheduled for Aug. 18 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The four-, five- and six-year-olds will meet informally with Pooh backstage, then the popular storybook character will escort each child to his stage position during the children's pageant, planned as a mid-point for the night's activities.

The youngsters — 12 girls and 12 boys — will be presented individually to the audience by Donna Axum, former Miss America.

Little girls scheduled to appear in the non-competitive portion of the pageant are Alicia Webb, Shelly Stubblefield, Leigh Ellen Osborne, Summer Ziegelgruber, Amber Stephens, Joy Cambern, Amy Phillips, Darla Sanders, Shannon Gurley, Kristi Lytle, Angi Long and Norma Whittley.

Their escorts will be Bryan

Kincannon, Marty McFall, Zach Thomas, Brian Bullard, John Newman, Zach Cambern, Tomas Zavala, Tony Musgrave, Sean Hardman, Glenn Morehead, Jeremy Farmer and Tommy Moen.

Steven Pettit of White Deer will portray Winnie - the - Pooh. Assisting him will be two of Pooh's storybook friends, played by Sherrie and Linda Kaye Nunn, also of White Deer.

Mrs. Steve Thomas is children's chairman for the pageant.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

'Just deserts' wished on many mates

By Louise Pierce

Do you know any middle-aged couples who sometimes wish "just deserts" on each other? Of course you do. If the wish isn't made aloud, it is done mentally and manfully — or womanfully — by most of us.

She wrecks the car and he yells, "You ought to have to walk for the rest of your life!" He forgets the medicine she ordered and she pouts, "You deserve to be as sick as I am!" Sometimes it's more serious, as when he plays poker with the boys until after midnight, three nights in a row — and she shouts, "If you got what's coming to you, I'd be gone when you got home — and next time I will be!" That kind of fury can land you in the divorce court. And we don't want that, especially not when we've been married 30 or 40 or 50 years.

I hope I can help you over this possible hurdle by telling you about some of the just deserts I should have gotten from Otis — but never did. Oh, in our young years together, he offered a few snide remarks when I committed unforgivable offenses. But in the last 20 years he has put up with anything I did, literally anything.

I locked my key in the car. I forgot to pick up his favorite suit from the cleaners on Saturday afternoon. I sorted the washing and let a black sock drop in with the white shirts. He left me the names of golfers to call for a Saturday match and I lost the list. In each case, he sighed a little and frowned a lot, but he forgave me, without verbal scolding, again and again and again.

Then, last week, I lost my billfold. With it went all my credit cards, driver's license, memberships, the key to the deposit box and many other essentials.

And there seemed no explanation except that I put the wallet down somewhere in my afternoon shopping spree — and failed to pick it up. Since Otis' credit cards matched mine, his were not usable either. I thought, this time he will give me my just deserts. He'll say I'm rattle-brained and irresponsible and even off my rocker, all of which I probably am. He'll refuse to speak to me for a week. Maybe he'll even leave home to cool off.

I didn't have to pretend my despair. When he got home that night, I'd called all the card companies to report the loss. I'd resolved to spend nothing on myself for years, to make up for the money I'd lost along with the cards. And I'd cried a bushel of tears in the fury and frustration I felt for myself.

But Otis only said, "Nobody's dead or even hurt. And this is the first time in 42 years that we ever lost any important papers. Come on, we'll go out eating and dancing to let you forget your sorrow." We did. And life was good again.

Two days later the billfold turned up in a supermarket, intact even to the amount of money. Thankful for one person's honesty,

I was almost too relieved to think, I sat down and shook a while. I doused hair spray into my throat and soused my hair with cough medicine. At dinner time I put sugar on the hamburgers and salt on the strawberries. And Otis said, without the least surprise or annoyance, "Let's eat out." We did.

I know every wife isn't as lucky as I am. Mrs. J.K. wrote me that her husband shouts at her and calls her the stupidest woman in the world whenever she does anything off-beat. Mrs. T.F. says she sleeps alone at least once a week because her husband won't even hold her hand if she forgets or misplaces something. And Mr. R.R. says he works late at the odd jobs he does since he retired, but his wife is mad when her dinner gets cold — and she "jaws" about it all night and sometimes the next day.

To all of you who suffer your just deserts, let me ask you to attempt what I'm trying to accomplish — self-reformation. And let me console you with the probability that, sooner or later, your spouse will likely offend you as you did him. When he (or she) does that, exercise the control you wish you had gotten from him when the shoe was on your foot. If he doesn't take the hint and you upset him again, remind him that you bore his insult well and tell him that you expect the same treatment.

Altrusa Club members hear program on child abuse treatment

A representative of the Department of Human Resources presented a program to members of the Altrusa Club of Pampa at a dinner meeting Monday evening.

Mrs. E.B. Tidwell presented the speaker to the group. Joyce Shimek of Pampa, using a slide presentation to accompany her talk, pointed out aspects of child abuse. She emphasized the progress being made in this area in Pampa.

Mrs. M.S. McDaniel, president for the 1979 - 1980 club year, has chosen "Rhyme and Reason — to Know and to Grow" as her theme.

Other officers are Mrs. Vincent Simon, vice president; Mrs. Bill Bailey, recording secretary; Mrs. Bill Wallis, corresponding secretary; and Miss Geraldine Rampy, treasurer.

The club's next meeting is scheduled for Aug. 13 in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

DEAR ABBY

Avid volunteer probably isn't neglecting home

DEAR ABBY: I was raised to believe that charity begins at home, so I want to ask you what you think about a lady who spends three whole days a week as a volunteer in a nursing home for old people.

She says they need the love and attention she can give them. Well, they have a staff paid to care for those old people. And their families are supposed to give them love. So where does a volunteer who is a stranger fit in?

"This lady has a retired husband and a 40-year-old handicapped daughter, and I'm sure they need her at home. What do you think?"

T.B. FROM KY.

DEAR T.B.: I think anyone who works as a volunteer three days a week can't be all bad. Nursing homes need volunteers to keep the residents in touch with the outside world and make them feel that they are still a part of the community.

Staffs often are overburdened and some families aren't able to visit often. And, as for the retired husband and handicapped daughter, don't assume that they are being neglected. Chances are they manage nicely without her, and they all appreciate time away from each other.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 23 years and have two sons, 20 and 18.

The problem is this: My husband and I were married (briefly) to others before we met each other. Both marriages ended in divorce. There were no children involved. We have never told our sons about our previous marriages, but now I have the feeling that we should tell them. My husband disagrees. He says, "It's all in the past and it's best to let sleeping dogs lie."

What do you say? I've got a secret. DEAR SECRET: I say sleeping dogs have been known to awaken at the most unexpected time to set up a disturbing howl. Tell the boys.

DEAR ABBY: Lenny and I have been married nearly three years. He's 26 and I'm 24. We have good jobs, a car of our own, a neat apartment and no serious problem. However, I do have one mini-problem. I'm curious, suspicious, or maybe I'm just plain nosy. Anyway, when Lenny is in the shower I can't resist going through his wallet.

The last time he caught me he just about hit the ceiling. What do you suppose he has to hide?

SNOOPY

DEAR SNOOPY: Maybe he has nothing to hide; he just resents your nosiness. If you don't want your mini-problem to grow into a maxi, stay out of his wallet.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.B. IN B.H.: Heed the wise advice of Joseph Zabara, the 13th century Spanish Hebrew physician and poet who wrote: "Before the trouble comes, advice obtain; After it has come, advice is vain."

Average American owns estate

One of the things that you, the butcher, baker and candlestick maker have in common with the world's wealthiest people is that you all own an "estate."

This type of estate is the kind lawyers talk about when they're counting everything you own and what's coming to you and your family in the future.

So, unless you're absolutely destitute, you should know that you have an estate today that probably totals a lot more than you think, says the American Council of Life Insurance.

Where does all that money come from?

The Council lists the following sources:

- The face value of your life insurance less any policy loans.
- The proceeds of your company or private pension plan.
- The total value of your house or other real estate.
- Any stocks and bonds you may own.
- The value of your cash, savings and checking accounts.
- The sale value of your personal property including cars, furniture, jewelry, collections and the like.

To get an idea of what your estate is worth now, you can total the above items, subtract the balance of the mortgage on your home, if any, and other debts, to reach a rough estimate. The balance, minus estate and inheritance taxes, is what your family or designated heirs would receive if you died tomorrow.

Now that you know how much your estate is worth, the Council suggests you make sure you have a will, that it's in order and that it tells what you want done with your estate.

The Council also suggests that you consider preparing one more crucial document — the "letter of instruction" to tell your family lawyer or whoever you entrust, exactly where all your important documents are, and other wishes you may have.

Rivera works found

Carefully rolled and wrapped in plain brown paper 46 years ago and then forgotten in the museum's basement, giant drawings created by Diego Rivera for his famous "Detroit Industry" frescoes have been rediscovered by archivists assigned to the Detroit Institute of Arts.

The giant "cartoons" are now assigned for caretaking to the Graphic Arts Department. It is expected they will be the subject of a special exhibition in 1983, the 50th year of the frescoes' creation.

Rivera composed the 9-by-26 foot drawings in charcoal and pastel chalks to guide him through the concepts envisioned for the wet plaster of the four walls of the inner fountain court in the museum's main building.

The drawings were thought lost in the intervening years. However, archivist Marilyn Ghaust recently was searching the basement for architectural drawings of the building and came upon the wrapped rolls.

Astro-Graph

July 27, 1979

This coming year unusual opportunities could come through persons you already know quite well. No matter how strange the tips may sound, you would be wise to study them from all angles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may experience an urge today to gamble on something that's out of your field of expertise. Better think it over carefully before you plunk your money down. Discover with whom you best get along romantically by sending for your new Astro-Graph Letter which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Use no methods today that could make you appear as if you're trying to be a martyr. Do what's expected of you without any dramatic frills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Through someone else's efforts you could enjoy unexpected gains today. When discussing what occurred, don't pretend you did it all on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid socializing with a pal today who always seems to stick you with the tab. He or she may attempt to pull off this same ploy again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Achievements may not come as easily to you today as you hope, but don't use this as an excuse for quitting. Second or even third efforts may be required.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Say nothing unflattering about one friend to another today unless that person is there to defend himself. It could jeopardize your relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you know is very curious about a joint venture you're involved in, and may pry a bit too much today. Take care you don't say more than is wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your first decisions are likely to be your best today. If you begin to overanalyze, you could become confused and impede your progress.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It isn't that you won't have the opportunities to be productive today, because good chances will keep popping up. Your indifference will stop you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could lose out on an unexpected fun invitation today because of shyness. Don't beat around the bush. Accept it happily.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do what needs to be done immediately, instead of making promises to get to the chores later. In your heart you know you won't get back to them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be complimentary rather than critical of those who strive to lend you a hand today. If you fear they can't perform as expected, do it yourself!

Sports Festival opens tonight

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — National Sports Festival II, dubbed the United States Olympics and aimed at stimulating the development of young talent, begins Thursday night with a tremendous sprinkling of the nation's outstanding competitors in 31 sports.

The festival, launched last year by Robert Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has caught on quickly. From less than 2,000 athletes in 26 sports in its inaugural, it has mushroomed into a 31-sport program with more than 2,300 competitors.

In his opening remarks to the athletes last year, Kane said, "I just hope all you athletes will some day look to this inaugural festival and think that only the Olympic games preceded it in enormity and prestige."

The festival not only is a conglomeration of sports held in the summer Olympics, but it includes such winter sports as ice hockey and figure skating and non-Olympic sports like softball, baseball, roller skating and tennis.

"This will help the smaller sports," Kane said. "It can be one of the most productive things the U.S. Olympic Committee has ever done."

The new sports added this year are yachting, roller skating, tennis, indoor speed skating and equestrian, but track and field, swimming, gymnastics and figure skating — the backbone of the summer and winter Olympics — are expected to attract the most attention.

In fact, seats for gymnastics and figure skating, two of the three sports with top admission prices of $5 — the other is equestrian — already are sold out. This, despite the withdrawal of world champion Linda Fratianne of Northridge, Calif., from the figure skating competition because of an injury.

However, the world champion pairs duo of Tai Babilonia of Mission Hills, Calif., and Randy Gardner of Los Angeles is competing, and the gymnastics field includes Kurt Thomas of Indiana State University, the gold medalist in floor exercises at the 1978 world championships, and Marcia Frederick of Milford, Conn., the first American woman to win a gold medal in the world championships, taking first in the uneven parallel bars last year.

Heading the list of track and field stars are Renaldo Nehemiah, the world record holder in the 110-meter hurdles; four-time Olympic discus champion Al Oerter; Olympic relay gold medalists Harvey Glance, Steve Riddick and Herman Frazier; 1972 Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter; sprinter Steve Williams and the brilliant high school sensation from Dallas, shotputter Michael Carter.

Tennis briefs

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France (AP) — Ilie Nastase beat Jimmy Connors 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 in the only match at a $75,000 four-man exhibition series.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Evonne Goolagong of Australia beat Emilise Raponi 6-1, 6-2 to advance to the semifinals of an indoor tennis tournament among four world-ranked stars and Argentina's top four women players. Billie Jean King beat Ivanna Madruga 6-4, 6-3 in the day's other match to also advance to the semifinals.

Powell claims first American gold medal

MOSCOW (AP) — Two brief days in Moscow, one good throw out of six, and John Powell was on his way home to the United States today with the gold medal in the discus in the pre-Olympic Spartacade Games.

Powell helped the U.S. track and field team to a triple gold medal day in chilly Lenin Stadium Wednesday night, ending the United States' gold-medal shutout.

The former San Jose, Calif., policeman descended on Moscow Monday night and had almost no time to get acclimated.

He was hopelessly off form with his first five throws, and the Americans wore glum faces. Then Powell suddenly clicked. He heaved the discus 206 feet, 9 1/2 inches to win.

"I'm glad someone asked me to come," he said as he headed for the U.S. National Sports Festival in Colorado Springs. "I think I'll come again."

Powell was not the only American winner to procrastinate Wednesday. Henry Marsh of Eugene, Ore., ran last for most of the 3,000 meters, was at least four yards behind the leader entering the straightaway, and then produced a tremendous finishing kick to win the steeplechase in 8 minutes, 28.09 seconds.

The third gold medalist was Wardell Gilbreath of Houston, who led all the way to win the 200 meters in 20.84.

Don Coleman of Eugene, Ore., was second behind Gilbreath, and 18-year-old Carl Lewis of Willingboro, N.J., finished third in the long jump. So it was a night of glory for the depleted American squad, which had struggled against adversity and failed to win a single gold medal in the first three days of competition.

Powell, 32, was the United States' No. 1 discus thrower for three years from 1973 to 1975. After the 1977 season he retired.

"I didn't even know my gold was the first for the United States," Powell said. "That makes it a double pleasure. Now I'm on my way back, and maybe I will be America's No. 1 again."

Gilbreath failed to qualify for the AAU Nationals.

"Now the gold is starting to come," he said. Meanwhile, the United States track team looked forward to Friday, when it had another excellent chance to resume its quest for gold.

Sub-four-minute miler Craig Mosbach of Princeton, now at school in Europe, and relay man Cliff Wiley of the University of Kansas were expected to run the 1,500 meters. The first round of heats is set for Friday and the final for Sunday.

Spartacade is the Soviet Union's big festival and teams from the 15 republics of the Soviet Union participate. Because of next year's Olympic Games, foreign athletes were invited this year, but there is little strength in most of the foreign teams.

The triple American success Wednesday was the first real challenge to Russian supremacy.

Tatyana Anisimova led a 1-2-3 Soviet sweep of the women's 100-meter hurdles, winning in 12.90. The top American was Deby LaPlante, who was fourth in 13.13, barely missing a bronze medal when she finished .03 behind Nina Morgulina.

In gymnastics, Teresa Schneider of Minneapolis, Minn., walked out of the competition in protest, and Nelli Kim, darling of the Russians, failed to shake her bridesmaid complex.

Schneider, an 18-year-old blonde, was upset because the judges refused to raise the uneven bars. She claimed they were not fixed properly and she might get injured.

U.S. gymnastics coach Barbara Calleher of New Haven, Conn., said: "We simply took her out because the bars were not fixed and she would have hurt her feet."

It was the first serious dispute of the games. The trouble had been brewing for four days and came to a head in the uneven bars competition, Schneider's last qualifying event.

Don Tony of Yale, the chief of the U.S. gymnastics delegation, said Schneider, 5-foot-5, has long arms and needed the apparatus raised.

"It's just ridiculous that the bars don't fit a normal-sized woman," Tony said.

Perez propels Expos to victory with 3 doubles

By the Associated Press

Tony Perez strode to the plate and surveyed the field. There were two out in the ninth inning, and he represented whatever hopes the Montreal Expos had of beating San Diego.

It wasn't enough that Perez had doubled twice already and helped the Expos pull within 5-4 after trailing 4-0. As Jerry White danced off second base and Rodney Scott stepped off first, Perez looked to the outfield while awaiting a pitch from the Padres' Eric Rasmussen.

"When I come up in these situations, I feel that the pitcher is the one in trouble," said Perez.

He was right. Rasmussen was in trouble because Perez noticed Padres center fielder Gene Richards had shifted way over to right-center, "and I thought if I could hit one into the gap it would score both runners."

Right again. Rasmussen's 3-2 pitch, which could have ended the contest, was decisive in a different way: Perez sent it to the gap in left-center for his third double of the contest, two runs, and a 6-5 Montreal triumph Wednesday night.

"They were looking to me to hit one and it was a big hit for us," said Perez, who has 87 hits this season — 29 for extra bases.

And that's below his average. Of his 2,193 lifetime hits, 885 have been doubles, triples or homers.

"Perez hasn't been stinging the ball lately," observed Expos Manager Dick Williams. "He had only two runs batted in on our road trip (six games) before tonight. But he really came through when we needed him."

The victory eased the pressure somewhat on the National League East leaders, who boosted their margin to two games over Pittsburgh which lost a 6-5, 10-inning decision to the Cincinnati Reds.

Reds 6, Pirates 5

A 10th-inning double by Heity Cruz drove in Dave Collins with the run that gave Cincinnati its rain-delayed victory over Pittsburgh.

Johnny Bench hit two homers and Joe Morgan one to aid the Reds' cause. Morgan's sixth homer of the year snapped a hitless streak of 26 at-bats.

Bench's second homer of the game tied it 5-5 in the eighth after Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria retired 16 consecutive batters.

Astros 6, Cubs 4

J.R. Richard, the major league strikeout leader, raised his total to 174 by striking out 12 Cubs in 7 1-3 innings of work. He was knocked out in Chicago's three-run eighth, but Joe Sambito relieved, recorded four more strikeouts, and completed the five-hitter for his 12th save.

Sambito, the phenomenal Houston fireman, lowered his earned run average to 1.16 over 612-3 innings of work in 39 appearances.

Craig Reynolds' sixth-inning single delivered the winning run.

Braves 13, Cardinals 4

Barry Bonnell's three-run triple keyed an eight-run Atlanta seventh inning and powered the Braves past the Cardinals.

Pepe Frias had three hits and three RBI in the 17-hit Atlanta attack. Joe Nolan also had three hits for the Braves.

Dodgers 16, Phillies 8

Joe Ferguson and Dusty Baker combined to drive in nine runs as Los Angeles overwhelmed Philadelphia and won its sixth game in seven.

Ferguson had five RBI with a two-run single and a three-run homer while Baker — who had a grand slam in the Dodgers' 15-3 victory Tuesday — had a two-run single and two RBI doubles.

Mets 3, Giants 0

Craig Swan's six-hitter, his second shutout of San Francisco this season, carried the Mets past the Giants.

The lowly Mets won the season series 8-4, and Swan observed: "The numbers show we don't play like this against too many teams."

Indians 2, Twins 0

Rick Waits found some old-time religion and, finally, he's found his old-time pitching touch.

The Cleveland Indians left-hander, who'd lost four straight games since he got married in June and five straight overall, pitched a two-hitter in blanking Minnesota Wednesday. Through his non-productive streak, Waits never lost the faith.

"I had lost some confidence but never really lost the will to win," said Waits, Cleveland's top starter for three seasons. "I have a deep relationship with Jesus Christ and he never let me give up. Yet I struggled."

It was the Twins who struggled against Waits, going six innings without a hit before Bombo Rivera led off the seventh with a single. Glenn Borgmann singled in the ninth for the other Minnesota safety.

"It was about the fifth inning when I started thinking about it," said Waits, 10-9, who pitched his fourth shutout and second two-hitter the season. "I just said let's go out and enjoy it."

Jim Norris led off the game with a homer for Cleveland and Andre Thornton doubled in the other run in the seventh off Dave Goltz, 9-7, who threw a seven-hitter.

Mariners 5, Orioles 4

Fourteen times in their three-year existence the Mariners took the field at Memorial Stadium. Fourteen times they lost.

This time, they found a new way to be beaten by red-hot Baltimore, with a seven-game win streak. Leading 5-3 after scoring three times in the seventh, two on Ruppert Jones' double, the skies opened and a deluge halted the game for about an hour. If it hadn't resumed, the score would have reverted to the last full inning, making it 3-2, Baltimore.

"The longer it rained," said Jones, "the more I thought it would really be something if they pulled another one out. I thought, 'Here we go again.'"

Red Sox 16, A's 4

Jim Rice slugged two mammoth home runs, Carlton Fisk also homered and Boston had 19 hits, its biggest offensive outburst this season. Rice had three hits and five RBI. Dave Revering had three hits and a homer for Oakland.

Angels 9, Yankees 5

Nolan Ryan lasted one inning — and still struck out two men to land fifth on the all-time list with 2,854 — and Tommy John departed in the third as rookie Ralph Botting was the pitching star. Botting, who entered the game with a 21.21 ERA and left with it at 10.80, pitched 51-3 innings of one-run relief for his first major league victory.

Ryan "felt something pop" in his arm while pitching to Reggie Jackson in the second and was sent back to California for X-rays. Joe Rudi knocked in three runs and Dan Ford had three hits for California, which stretched its first-place lead in the AL West to three games over Minnesota.

Tigers 11, Brewers 2

Detroit erupted for four homers, three in its seven-run eighth, with Champ Summers, John Wockenfuss and Lance Parrish connecting. Parrish's and Wockenfuss' came in succession and Al Greene had his first major league homer in the fourth.

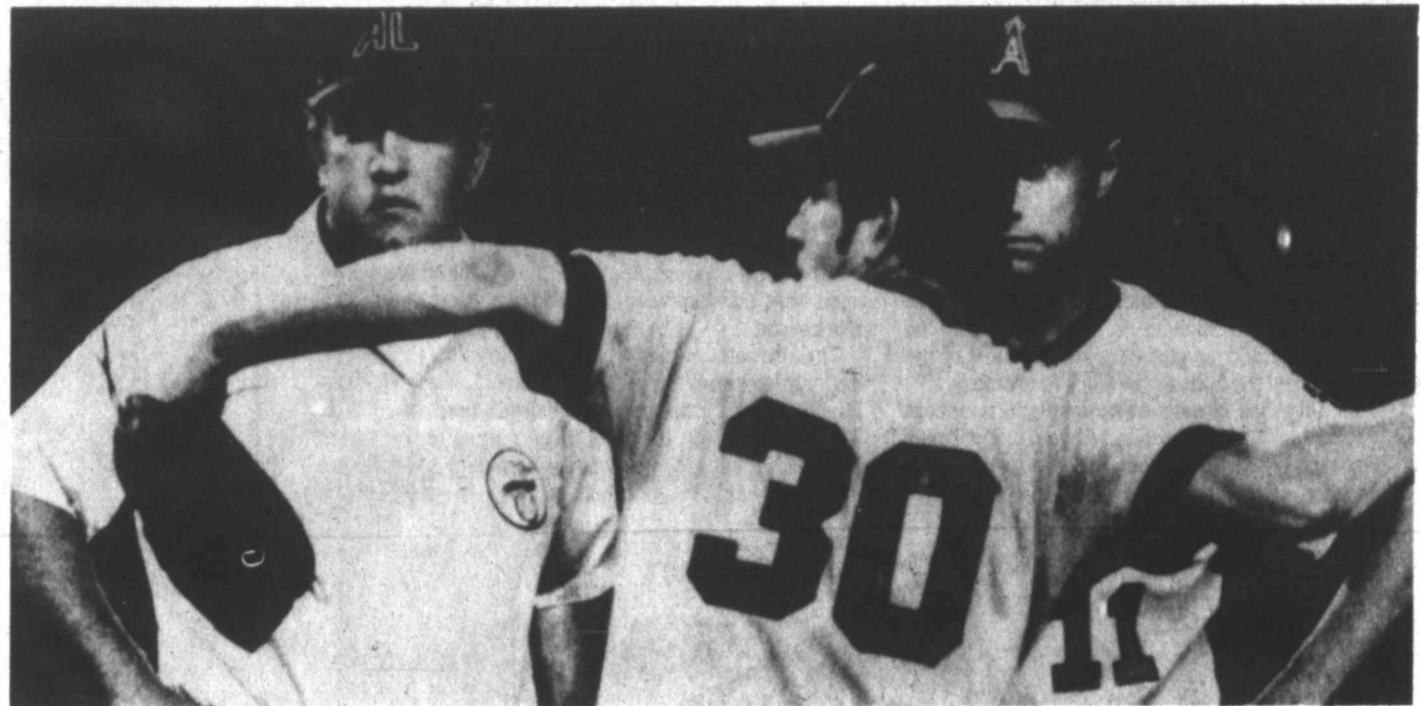

Jack Morris, 9-5, got relief from John Hiller for the triumph.

White Sox 6, Royals 2

Kansas City helped the White Sox' victory by committing five errors and getting just five hits off Rich Wortham, 11-9. Bill Nahorodny knocked in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the four-run eighth.

Blue Jays 8, Rangers 3

Otto Velez and Rick Bosetti homered and Dave Stieb — the only pitcher with a winning record on the Jays — won for the third time in four decisions. The victory snapped Toronto's seven-game losing streak.

NOLAN RYAN, ace fireballer for the California Angels, tries a throw under the eyes of umpire Larry Barnett and manager Jim Fregosi after he "felt something pop" in his right elbow in the second inning of Wednesday night's game with the New York Yankees at Yankee Stadium. Ryan shook his head and left the mound after the throw. He will fly to California for a doctor's examination.

Oiler back wants trade

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oiler running back Ronnie Coleman, whose past includes two seasons as the Oilers leading rusher, says there's no future for him with the Oilers.

Coleman said from his home here Wednesday he will sit out the entire season "if that is the only alternative open to me."

Coleman, the only Oiler player who failed to report to training camp at Angelo State University, added "I don't see any future for me with the Oilers. I would like to be traded to another team. My agent has tried to talk with them to arrange it but they won't talk." Coleman said the Oilers wanted him to come to camp and talk but "I won't do that," he said. "My agent takes care of that business."

Defensive end Elvin Bethea missed Wednesday's workout with a shoulder problem and Billy Johnson did not practice because of a sore muscle in his right thigh.

The Oilers open exhibition play Aug. 2 against St. Louis in the Astrodome.

Coleman, who led the Oilers in rushing in the 1976 and 1977 seasons, played out his option last season and became a free agent. He therefore is not subject to a fine for not reporting to training camp.

Public Notices

The Pampa Independent School District hereby announces that all persons are entitled to receive an exemption of $5,000 from the market value of their residence homestead for the purpose of school taxes. In addition, all persons who are 65 years of age or older or under a disability for purposes of payment of disability benefits under Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance are also entitled to an additional exemption of $10,000 from the market value of their residence homestead for the purpose of school taxes.

To qualify for these exemptions, an application must be filed with the school district tax office by July 27, 1979. Application forms are available at the school tax office located at 321 West Albert Street, Pampa, Texas.

To qualify for the disability exemption, a person need not be actually receiving disability payments, but must meet the qualifications for disability as defined by the Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance law.

Persons who were 65 years of age or older on January 1, 1979, who have already applied for the $3,000 assessed value exemption formerly offered by the Pampa Independent School District need not reapply. The application currently on file will be converted to the $10,000 market value exemption. July 12, 19, 26, 1979 T-33
