Oil slows movement into American waters

CORPUS CHRISTI. Texas (AP) — The leading edge of an oil spill stretching 500 miles across the Gulf of Mexico has slowed its beaches for the past week, landing farther north each day. But so far northward drift and was last reported eight miles south of Texas' southernmost point.

Scientists and engineers had predicted the oil. spilling since June 3 from a runaway well off Mexico's Yucatan Penisula, would enter U.S. waters by Sunday. But the experts said today the news of the slowdown was not necessarily encouraging Roger Meacham of the Environmental Protection Agency said scientists were sticking to earlier predictions that the goo could wash ashore on Texas beaches by Tueday.

'We're thinking that's a distinct possibility, but right now it's anyone's guess." said Meacham, one of about 150 scientists on a U.S. task force set up here to defend the South Texas coast against the oil.

The latest reconnaissance flights over the 2-month-old spill showed thick tar balls on the surface of the gulf had advanced only two miles farther north Sunday and approached to within eight miles of the mouth of the international border at the Rio Grande.

'We went looking for it and didn't find it where we thought it would be," said Coast Guard Capt. Roger Madson, commander of the tas: force. He said calm winds apparently slowed the oil's movement

Sticky globs of the thick crude have been washing up on Mexican none of the Mexican oil has entered U.s. territory, according to Carl Posey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

A few tar balls were spotted on South Padre Island Sunday, but officials said it is a common occurrence. Nevertheless, the samples were recovered for scientific analysis to determine if they are part of the Mexican oil.

Coast Guardsmen on Sunday directed the installation of floating barriers aimed at protecting environmentally-sensitive inland waters. Madson said the floating fences were in place in the mouth of the Brazos Santiago Pass, a 1,200-wide entrance to the Laguna Madre and Brownsville ship channel. The channel, however, remained open

Another boom was used to seal off South Bay, just south of Laguna Madre. The bay is rich in oysters, according to officials.

Skimming equipment, used to corral oil and pump it onto a barge. was also in the water and ready for use, Madson said.

The captain said officials are still discussing a variety of plans concerning protection of the coast and inland waters. He said he has discussed the feasibility of using the flow of the Rio Grande to deflect

Oil price may double by 1990

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger predicts oil priced by the international oil cartel will cost $40 a barrel — almost double the current price — by 1990

And with U.S. energy problems in mind, former Transportation Secretary Brock Adams is encouraging Americans to wean themselves from dependence on the automobile. The two departing Cabinet officers made the comments during Sunday interview programs - Schlesinger on CBS's "Face the Nation" and Adams on NBC's "Meet the Press.

Schlesinger, in a gloomy forecast of U.S. energy prospects, said while demand continues to grow, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries "is very close to its maximum production right

"We are going to look at oil prices by 1990 of at least $40 a barrel, in constant dollars." he said, adding the situation will be "far worse" if the OPEC countries hold down exports.

In another energydevelopment, an administration official says a government investigation has turned up no evidence of any deliberate action by oil companies to create the recent gasoline

A report to be released by the White House this week says the administration's gasoline allocation system is partly to blame for the fuel problems.

Firemen watch as tank burns

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Firefighters surrounding a flaming storage tank containing 800,009 gallons of gasoline decided today to let the $1 million fire burn itself out.

The fire, touched off by a bolt of lightning Sunday at a Gulf Oil Corp. fuel depot, was still raging this morning with flames shooting 35 to 40 feet into the air.

But Quentin Wallerstedt, a Gulf spokesman, said, "It's burning with a lot less intensity.

"They're letting it burn in a controlled burn." Wallerstedt said. "Right now, that's the best way to go."

He said the wind had shifted direction overnight, easing worries that the fire might spread to a nearby tank.

Gulf officials estimated the loss at $1 million

Two firemen and a company employee were treated for heat exnaustion at a Toledo nospital

Charles West was working at a railroad switch tower when he saw lightning arc into the tank at the refinery and depot on the east side of Toledo.

"There was a flash of light, then a big ball of fire," said West. 41. a Norfolk & Western Railway Co. employee

West said an explosion that followed the lightning bolt rattled the windows in his two-story tower, located about 200 yards from the burning tank.

Refinery manager James Walizer said the tank was one-fourth full and contained about 800,000 gallons of gasoline.

"That is gasoline that would normally be sent through our distribution system to consumers that's gone up in smoke. Walizer said. But he said the blaze will cause "no significant impact" on gas supplies to consumers.

"It's a significant loss, but no one should be able to see that at the pump level." he said.

Ohio Air National Guard personnel and equipment helped Toledo firefighters contain the blaze to the 40-foot tall, 120-foot wide tank, one of 10 in the storage field

Farm exports jump in 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of U.S. farm products to Eastern Europe rebounded by about 31 percent last year to $1.17 billion, but an Agriculture Department trade economist is warning that the market is not yet secure

On the surface, the jump from $900 million in shipments in 1977 to almost $1.2 billion last year, six times the level of 1970, seems encouraging, Thomas A. Vankai writes in today's edition of Foreign Agriculture magazine.

So does the recent weather damage to crops in the seven-nation region.

But, Vankai says, farmers and food exporters should look at these other developments, too Exports in 1976 were $1.45 billion, so last year's level amounts to only a partial recovery.

-Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania and Yugoslavia have plans to increase self-sufficiency in grains and oilseed products, which together comprise about 80

Overall, he said, there has been "a general lowering of sights regarding import plans" throughout Eastern Europe.

At the same time Vankai noted that "the overriding question . . is whether production goals in the region can be achieved. So far, performance has consistently fallen short of expectations, and there is good reason to believe this will be the case again.

But the juggling of retail food prices, import costs, domestic livestock herds and consumer demand is causing so many dislocations in Poland and East Germany that imports of feedgrains could be depressed in the near future, he wrote.

Poland is the single most important customer, taking $516 million worth of U.S. farm products last year, followed by East Germany.

The strong demand for U.S. feedgrains and the doubling from 1977 to 1978 of soybean exports reflect the efforts to increase livestock herds that need high-protein feeds, she said. AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A key government witness in the Colombian Connection dope smuggling trial of Las Vegas gambler Jimmy Chagra testified today that federal prosecutors had promised to help him get a reduced sentence if he cooperated fully in prosecuting Chagra.

Dudley Connell, an El Paso travel agent now serving a five-year federal prison sentence for marijuana possession, was cross-examined by Chagra attorney Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas about his deal with the government.

Connell, 31, said Friday he was arrested last year for attempting to sell cocaine to two undercover agents, but was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser offense of marijuana possession in trade for his cooperation Connell said today that his attorney had filed late last year for a reduced sentence and planned to file a new motion after Connell completed his testimony in the Chagra trial. "The government has said they would make my cooperation known to the court," Connell said.

Under questioning, he said the government also had promised to tell the court whether Connell deserved a reduced sentence

"The U.S. attorney's office said it would make known the extent of my cooperation in this and other cases, and the conditions of my confinement," Connell said

Asked by Goodman what conditions those might be. Connell said, "I have been in solitary confinment the past five months in protective custody.

Connell said Friday he is a prisoner in the Fort Worth Federal Correctional Institution, a minimum security prison for non-violent Asked who the U.S. attorney's representative was in making plea bargaining agreements with him, Connell it was Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr of San Antonio.

Kerr was a frequent courtroom opponent of Chagra's lawyer brother, Lee, who was murdered in his El Paso office last December during an apparent armed robbery

Goodman had said in an opening statement to the jury last week that the federal authorities had been attempting to make a case aainst Lee Chagra, but turned their attention to Jimmy Chagra after Oil companies to collect bonanza

WASHINGTON (AP) - A miscalculation by the Department of Energy in a gasoline-pricing rule will result in a $9-billion profit bonanza to the oil industry by the end of 1980. The Washington Post reported today The newspaper said the extra profits resulted from the so-called

'Tilt Rule.' which allows oil companies to make an additional profit on gasoline beyond actual crude oil cost increases and operating costs because gasoline costs more to produce than other petroleum products

When the Energy Department adopted the rule last March 1, the Carter administration predicted that the complex formula would cost motorists an extra 1.6 cents a gallon this year and 1.8 cents in 1980, meaning a maximum of $3.7 billion in extra profits.

Instead, the Post said, a survey of oil companies and interviews with federal officials shows that most oil firms took advantage of the rule to immediately raise their prices by 4 to 6 cents a gallon.

The effect will be to increase profits by up to $12.9 billion through 1980, the newspaper said.

Energy Department spokesmen were not available for comment immediately

The Post quoted Douglas G. Robinson, No. 2 official in the department's Economic Regulatory Administration and author of the Tilt Rule, as acknowledging that the 1.6-cent-a-gallon increase was clearly not a valid number for this year.

The Post said there were clear indications that the department knew its estimates were faulty but put the pricing rule into effect anyway without the customary 30-day period allowed for public

"It is fair to say that we had some indication at that time ... and the decision-makers were aware of that at that time, but that did not dissuade them from going ahead." Robinson was quoted as saying. The rule also was made retroactive to Jan. 1, meaning additional hundreds of millions of dollars in extra profits. Robinson told the Post there was "absolutely no justification" for doing so.

The idea behind the rule was that the extra profits would act as an incentive to oil companies to build more refineries and thus head off future gasoline shortages.

But the Post quoted industry officials as saying the increased profits may not yield more production capacity.

When more is less

Your city government is about to embark on another fools

Local officials in Pampa have been invited to pave a local roadway at a fraction of the total cost and readily plan to do so. The Texas Department of Transportation and Highways has offered to pay for most of the cost of paving 2.2 miles of roadway between State Highway 273 and State Highway 60, but why? No one seems to know the answer to that question.

Officials say the roadway would be used as a bypass for those people wanting to go from Highway 60 to Price Road.

Who would use such a bypass? Would you?

It seems the city could spend the estimated cost to them ($57,000) on improving the roads and streets within the heart of the city rather than on a road that no one uses and will not use in the future.

Most of our city streets are in need of repair and some have gotten to the point of being extremely dangerous to drivers and

Surely local government officials can see we need the streets we drive on repaired before we throw our money away on streets that

The only benefit that comes from improving this stretch of roadway would be this: At least then one street south of the railroad tracks would be in good condition. It seems local officials have forgotten people live south of the railroad.

The price the city must pay for the roadway is undoubtedly fair in today's over inflated economy, but is $57,000 all the city owes? Not if problems arise, according to printed statements by local

Should any of the utilities that run beside the proposed construction site be damaged, the city would have to foot the bill That means more tax dollars to be spent on a road which no one

Road improvements should be left up to the people who pay the

Were you asked your opinion on the proposed project? Was your neighbor? It is doubtful anyone outside of the city officials was asked for their opinion of the use of your tax dollars.

It is your money being thrown down the drain, and you should let your opinion be known about how it is being spent.

To pave a road such as this would be a crime against the men and women of Pampa who have to drive on the city streets - streets that often pose the danger of loss of life or property to drivers. Before worrying about the fringes of the problem, city officials would be wise to strike at the heart of the matter.

Several local officials have said that local government has made strides to improve local streets.

They are obviously referring to the worst joke Pampa has seen lately - seal coating the streets in Pampa.

The theory was not that bad but the workmanship was at best

Anyone should know that if a street that has been seal coated starts to "bleed" tar, then another load of sand should be applied.

Our city officials have obviously not driven on the streets since seal coating was completed. If they had, surely they would be as mad as hell about the tar being all over their new wax job

The city spent nearly $150,000 on the seal coating project. It has turned into a farce. Now Pampa plans to waste another $57,000 on an even bigger farce

All that money could have been used to improve one or two streets, which drivers would no doubt appreciate, instead of spreading our money onto our cars in the form of tar.

Do not disturb the grouse

Wall Street Journal

While the President is busy fighting the energy war and shaking up Executive Branch personnel, we thought we might offer him a couple of stories that involve both. Thoughtfully supplied to us by Mack Wallace, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, they also offer some further insights into the why of gasoline lines.

A Chevron oil drilling program in Redwash, Utah, was delayed through the winter of 1977-78 because sites were covered with snow, and before clearing and site preparation, the Bureau of Land Management required an archaeological check for Indian artifacts. So Chevron attempted to remove the snow without surface damage by using hot water or flame-throwers. But on some sites the hot water caused erosion, so BLM ruled it out. On others, the flamethrowers threatened to burn locoweed that might be an endangered species. So, at a cost of idled rigs and deferral of an estimated 10.000 barrels of production, Chevron had to wait to spring at one site until the snow melted.

At a site in Wyoming, a wildcatter ran afoul of the sage grouse, which likes to strut about as part of its mating ritual. Federal drilling leases in this area carry a rider prohibiting drilling starts during the mating season, on the grounds that "noise from around-the-clock drilling operations tend to suppress sage grouse strutting activities." Since bad weather kept one company from putting up a rig near one of these grounds until after the grouse had begun strutting, the oil and gas exploration had to wait still another three months.

Obviously, some branches of the administration have to consider themselves advocates of the environment rather than energy, so that by the clash of different interests a fair balance emerges. But the nature of that balance has to be defined by the man in charge, the President, who now has the chance to pass the word that excessive environmentalism may somewhat contradict the spirit of his

Editors Note: with hunting season just around the corner , we thought this recent article in Ducks Unlimited magazine worth

Men and women who hunt, fish and trap the abundant wild species of America were heroes until recently. Wild animals, ducksand fish were renewable resources like trees. Their furs clothed people and their flesh fed people. So how did the hunter, the trapper and the angler acquire the label "sadistic savages" at the same time other pioneering values were becoming a great tradition, desirable for rebirth in modern

By playing on people's emotional values, 'anti' groups have convinced many that they should oppose hunting. It took about ten years of concentrated work and several tens of millions of dollars to bring about this change in attitude toward the harvest of wildlife. And the sportsmen of America let the anti organizations sell a misleading impression of hunters, trappers and fishermen because they were slow to recognize the threat

Approximately ten years ago, a number of fund-raising anti outfits made a discovery as far-reaching in marketing value as that of halitosis or B.O. The discovery: how to attract funds for the anti-hunting cause. Brian Davies of the International Fund for Animal Welfare. Inc., may have been the first to use it. By avoiding talk about common varieties of wildlife, the anti's found they could reap a crop of green from emotional hearts.

ETTA FORT WORTH STAR TELEGRAM

People know about species of wildlife such as raccoons, skunks and foxes; they know that they are abundant and know neighbors and relatives who hunt them in season, and are good decent people. So antis don't discuss those animals; instead, they talk about remote, glamorous critters, particularly the baby seals of Newfoundland. They tell how seals are clubbed to death to make trimmings for boudoir slippers. Bowhead whales are good too - how many whalers does the average city voter know?

By inference, in advertising and magazine articles, antis convey the impression that a contribution to their organization will reverse the trend toward extermination of seals and other species labeled "endangered." They don't promise to do anything specific - just infer that money will solve the problem. Their first move is to get the money. Then, the organizations, sometimes called 'preservationists" and usually called

'anti' (meaning anti-hunting. anti-trapping, anti-fishing), are free to use the funds for whatever cause the promoters choose. This use may include elaborate administrative staffs, or it may involve a campaign to stop trapping in Ohio, California, New Jersey or Georgia. And some of the contributed funds will be used to buy more advertising to attract more funds. Several studies of the antiorganizations have put their annual revenues in the $40-$50 million range. The evidence we've seen indicates a somewhat more modest annual aggregate income of about $30 million.

"Sadistic savages"

The founders of four of the most successful anti organizations are still the chief executive officers of their groups and all have genuinely dictatorial powers. Brian Davies was founder and is still head of The International Fund for Animal Welfare, Inc. Alice Herrington was founder and is head of the Friends of Animals and its companion political organization. The Committee for Humane Legislation. Cleveland Amory was founder and is head of the Fund for Animals. Belton Mouras was founder and is head of the Animal Protection Institute. Their common target is the sports hunter. Most antiorganizations say quite frankly and often that they aim to stop the harvest of wildlife throughout America by any means.

To reach their goal, the antis have adopted two main strategies. One is to campaign vigorously for legislation to stop the trapping of wild animals. There are millions of hunters but relatively few trappers, and those few are usually rural and low income. What kind of defense can the tiny minority of trappers mount against attack? The antis hope that the hunters and fishermen won't be roused and won't come to the defense of the trappers. (And, until just recently, they haven't.) Once the antis get the public and legislators sold on the inhumanity of trapping wildlife, it will be easier to sell legislation that bans hunting. too. Right now there are campaigns in numerous states to get some or all methods of trapping wildlife banned.

A second strategy, just as vigorous as the first, is an attempt to destroy the autonomy of fish and wildlife agencies. These state agencies are mainly funded by license fees paid by hunters, trappers and anglers. The fee funds are earmarked for wildlife conservation - the acquisition. management and policing of wildlife areas. The anti's goal is to get these funds tossed into the general state treasuries. Then the state fish and wildlife agencies would be more subject to political pressure, and the antis already know how to pour on the

Everyone who contributes to an anti organization is on the newsletter mailing list. Each is urged, in every issue, to write or call their congressmen, senators, governors, city council members and the news media about current legislative issues in the "save the animals" campaigns. The statements made in newsletters to constituents can be more inflammatory than those made in mass media. One list of recommendations made by the Friends of Animals, Inc., a very prominent anti organization, in a leaflet to contributors, includes these suggestions:

1) "Patronize only businesses, doctors, lawyers, veterinarians who do not hunt. Ask them to display the 'I Don't Hunt'

2) "Ask the PTA to press for non-employment of teachers who hunt, and to bar speakers from the Game Commission or from sporting clubs.

3) "Reep your children out of the Boy Scouts and other youth groups until the policy of promoting hunting is changed to promote protection.

4) "Consider changing your church — or your religion - if the leaders hunt or sponsor fund-raising banquets on the flesh

5) "Ostracize socially those who hunt." Another series of statements, made by the Friends of Animals, Inc., and distributed in reprint form includes these

The hunter is an individual so lacking in virility that he uses hunting as a masculine image ploy." Quoting a psychiatrist, it continues: "The gun becomes a crutch or a stiffening mechanism - the hunter is aggressive, forceful, domineering, and tends to be somewhat sadistic. He likes to inflict torture. I think this type of personality makes up more than half of the gun-loving group."

8,000 Texans ask for flood relief

HOUSTON (AP) - Almost 8,000 persons have requested disaster assistance for losses inflicted along the Texas coast last month by Tropical Storm Claudette

Two disaster assistance centers - at Baytown and Port Arthur were closed Saturday, but federal officials said offices will remain open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily at Pasadena, League City, Alvin

Federal flood insurance officials say the claims resulting from the rains of Tropical Storm Claudette probably will amount to more than half the $146.9 million paid out in 1978 in 21 disasters involving flooding

"Obviously, when you compare these dollar figures, it is clear that Claudette did a lot of damage to a lot of people," said Dale Milford. regional director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Milford said large numbers of residents along the coast had maximum flood coverage, perhaps because of the area's history of flooding Del Greer, director of the agency's flood insurance division said the area has more than 116,000 policies worth about $5 billion. About 9.000 claims are expected to be filed, he said.

More than a half million dollars in benefits already have been paid to disaster victims, Greer said, much of it in partial payments.

Partial payments can be made within two or three days after an adjuster's first visit, and final payments can expected within two weeks of filing the claim. Greer added.

The Small Business Administration has begun receiving applications for low-interest loans for terms of up to 30 years. Victims who live in or own property in or adjacent to any of the six counties which were declared a disaster area by President Carter may apply for an SBA disaster loan.

The disaster counties are Brazoria, Chambers, Galveston, Harris, Jefferson and Orange counties. Adjacent to them are Fort Bend. Hardin, Jasper, Liberty, Matagorda, Montgomery, Waller and Wharton counties.

"These loans will aid in the repair or replacement of damaged or destroyed homes, personal property, businesses, farms, churches, non-profit organizations and privately owned hospitals and schools. said John L. Carey, district director for the SBA

The amount of loan eligibility is limited to the actual tangible loss. less insurance or other compensation funds received. The interest rate on the first $55,000 for primary residences and personal property loans is 3 percent. Refinancing of existing mortgagess available in cases of severe damage, to a maximum of $50,000 at the rate of 7%

Estes to be sentenced

DALLAS (AP) — Convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes, who has asked for a new trial based on the statements of a juror who found him guilty, is scheduled for sentencing today in U.S. District Judge Robert Hill's court.

Estes and former associate Raymond K Horton were convicted July 11 of conspiring to hide assets from the Internal Revenue Service. Estes also was convicted in connection with a scheme to defraud investors.

Estes, 54, faces up to 10 years in prison and $10,000 in fines. Horton, a Midland oilman, could be assessed up to five years in prison.

Estes filed an amended motion for a new trial last week, saying a juror was coerced into voting guilty against his will.

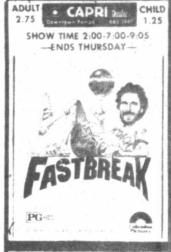

"I do not feel that I voted by my convictions in convicting Mr. Billie Sol Estes ...' juror Raymond L. Loggins said in an affidavit Loggins said he was suffering from poor health and claustrophia and was pressured into the verdict by other jurors. He also said he had read news accounts of the trial, in violation of Hill's orders, and was influenced by them in his vote.

At least two other jurors have said they might appear at the sentencing to appeal for probation in Estes' behalf.

Hill also is expected to tell Estes whether or not there will be another trial on those indictments on which jurors could not reach a decision. They deadlocked on a five-count indictment charging Estes and Horton with concocting a scheme to bilk legitimate leasing companies through the sale of non-existent oilfield steam cleaners.

Estes still is on parole for his 1963 conviction on the fraudulent use of non-existent fertilizer tanks as collateral. He was paroled in 1971 after serving six and one-half years of his 15-year.

Carter receptive to idea of more Hispanics on cabinet

DALLAS (AP) — President Carter seemed receptive to suggestions that he appoint more Hispanics to his Cabinet, the national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens said after his lunch with the chief executive Sunday.

Ruben Bonilla returned to Texas late Sunday night, following a trip to Washington. Bonilla was scheduled to visit Bolivia with First Lady Rosalynn Carter this weekend, but the uncertain political climate in that country forced cancellation of the trip Saturday night.

"We discussed far-ranging things, like the census, undocumented workers, more Hispanic appointments in the Cabinet and more visibility in the Hispanic community." Bonilla said. "I suggested he needed more town meetings, like in the Northeast and in Kentucky, in the Hispanic communities of the

'We suggested he consider Hispanics for the Deputy Attorney General's post, for the Undersecretary of Housing and Urban Development and for the Secretary of Education, the biggest plum, in the event Congress passes enabling legislation," Bonilla said. "He seemed receptive to all that, or at least attentive and

The Deputy Attorney General's post became vacant with Benjamin Civiletti's confirmation as new Attorney General and the HUD post was opened with the appointment of Patricia Harris as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Congress would have to separate the education branch from HEW, a move that has been discussed for several years to ease the bulk of that ever-growing department

Bonilla said he told Carter of his meetings with Civiletti on Friday, and that LULAC has withdrawn its opposition to Civiletti's appointment. Bonilla said the organization originally felt Civiletti would not be receptive enough to the problems of Mexican-Americans and law enforcement officers.

But LULAC withdrew opposition following Civiletti's assurances that the Chicano community would not be slighted and the formation of a Mexican-American advisory board.

"I told him we need to see the President in the community more, especially in the Southwest," Bonilla said. "There is a feeling somewhat that the President has been invisible in the Hispanic community.

When we mentioned problems with Mexican-Americans and law enforcement problems, he smiled and said he was aware of the problems.

Political charge to begin Labor Day Dorothy Edwards, 1317 N.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - September seems to be the month for 1980 politics to really get rolling in Texas.

Republican presidential aspirants John Connally and George Bush have been after the voters for several months now, but other state and national candidates are waiting until after Labor Day to charge. "I've been shaking a lot of hands but after Labor Day I'll be getting around the state quit a bit," says Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner, who will be seeking his first full 6-year term. Contests for two seats on the Railroad Commission - Poerner's and Jim Nugent's - will be the top statewide races in 1980 since there are no campaigns for governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general or U.S. senator. Although the official announcements may not come until the beginning of football season, the candidates have been busy for weeks lining up public relations and advertising firms to handle their campaigns — and raising money. Poerner's campaign staff will be headed by Neal Spelce, prominent Austin PR man, who handled Poerner's successful race in Poerner's opponent in the Democratic primary, will be Rep. Buddy Temple, Diboll, who made a move against Speaker Bill Clayton but gradually withdrew as Clayton's strength grew among legislators. Temple's campaign will be handled by John Rogers and Jack Martin, who worked in John Hill's unsuccessful campaign for

An Austin headquarters will be formally opened about the second week in September. -Nugent will be seeking the remainder of a two-year term left when former commissioner Jim Langdon retired. His campaign will be handled by Dwayne Holman, who handled Mark White's successful campaign for attorney general in 1978. A September announcement is expected.

The most active presidential candidate anywhere, nationally as well as statewide, has been Connally.

Energy plan deadly for those in poor health?

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hot enough for you?

That summertime platitude is taking on added meaning this year with President Cartr's new energy-saving temperature rules for commercial buildings.

In a normal year about 175 Americans succumb to the heat, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, but in severe years, such as 1936, the toll can top a thousand "And these are the direct casualties. No one can know how many deaths are advanced by heat-wave weather - how many diseased or aging hearts surrender that under better conditions would have continued functioning," reflected NOAA's

Carl A. Posey

While statisticians can show that summertime is a period of low death rates compared to winter, an intense heat wave can change this radically.

For example, William Hodge of the National Climatic Center studied the national death rate. day by day, for 1975.

The northeastern states experienced a severe heat wave in the first four days of August that year, and the national death toll climbed too, with 1,500 to 2000 more people dying in that period than would have been expected.

Sleeping babysitters get sympathy

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I was shocked when I read your recent column about the mothers who didn't want their baby sitters sleeping on

Since it has only been about 10 years since I was a young teenager and babysitting was my only source of income. the plight of the baby sitter is still fresh in my mind. I usually worked about two to four times a week, often on school nights. and usually past midnight. Then, being a conscientious student. I had to be to my 7:45 a.m. classes every morning

It doesn't take too much to see that for me to get even close to eight hours of sleep. dozing "on the job" was a must! And apparently none of my employers minded. since I was asked back time and again

I should add, though, that I was a light sleeper, and though curled up on the couch, I usually was awakened by the sound of the parents unlocking the door.

It's only fair that you hear both sides. -Leslie L. Anderson, Seattle, Wash.

Iron deficiency anemia is major diet disease

By Joe Graedon Many families are cutting back on meat and substituting other protein - rich foods in these times of high prices and scarcities. There is nothing wrong with that. However, too often in the summertime we are apt to eat less nutritious foods and turn to such thirst quenchers as iced tea. Unfortunately, too much of that popular beverage could deprive your body of needed iron. especially if you're a vegetarian. Doctors at the Upstate Medical Center in New York found that just substituting tea for water at mealtime - as many of us do in sweltering weather - cuts by nearly half the amount of iron absorbed from fortified baked goods, vegetables, fruits and the like. Iron from animal sources such as meat, poultry and seafood - is bound to an iron carrying protein called "heme". This makes it easier to absorb in general, and tea does not interfere with this heme - bound

The fact that tea may prevent adequate iron absorption from non - meat foods may not sound important, but it could spell serious trouble for some people. Iron - deficiency anemia is one of the most common dietary deficiency diseases in the United States today In the Ten State Survey of the late '60s, anemia was found among all age groups of the lower - income populations studied; it was a special problem for children under six. affecting almost one in three of these kids.

Inadequate iron intake isn't limited to the poor, however. The Health and Nutrition Examination survey in 1971 - 72 discovered most pre - school children and pre - menopausal women are getting less than their recommended dietary allowance from food.

Pregnant women, young children and adolescents have the greatest need because of growth demands. And regular menstrual blood loss may make other women anemic as well.

Is it so hard to get enough iron from food? We've always heard that a well - balanced diet will supply all the nutrients we need to keep us healthy.

Iron, though, is distributed somewhat capriciously in food, so you either have to know what you are doing, love liver, or get lucky to come up with an us needs these days. Besides, adequate intake of iron day after day if you are in one of these high - need categories.

One serving of enriched bran flakes, for example, can provide about a third of a woman's recommended daily iron, while a serving of enriched corn flakes offers less than 10 percent. Sardines have more than three times as much iron as salmon, and green peas have about twice as much as broccoli. The all time leader, with even more iron than liver, is oysters, but they are hardly an economical alternative.

How about iron supplements? They are usually only recommended for those few infants whose formula is not iron - enriched, and for women who are pregnant or who have exceptionally heavy menstrual periods. (This would include women using an IUD.)

Routine iron supplementation, even for these groups, has been questioned by some medical authorities. Because you absorb very little of the iron you eat unless you are anemic, healthy people taking iron eliminate most of it.

This can be quite an expensive proposition, something none of enteric - coated or timed high doses of iron can upset your release pills actually are less stomach. So in general, the useful. smart thing to do is have your blood tested if you think you may be anemic before you rush out to buy an iron supplement. If you really need a supplement, which is best? Because the quality of iron in ferrous sulfate, ferrous gluconate, ferrocholinate, or ferroglycine sulfate complex is the same, the cheapest (usually generic ferrous sulfate) is best. There's no apparent advantage to fancy preparations, and

So if you take your iron supplement at breakfast, take it with fruit juice and skip the tea. And if you're an iced tea lover instead of a liver lover, your favorite beverage may be making you anemic. Better save that tall refreshing glass for between meals.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's bed is squeaky even when wife is out of town

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from BLEARY - EYED AND ENVIOUS brought back memories. (BLEARY - EYED couldn't sleep because the newlyweds in the apartment directly above her had a squeaky bed. You advised her to come right out and tell the woman.)

When I was a bachelor, I had the same problem. Only the couple whose bedroom was directly above mine were middle - aged people who alternated between keeping me awake with their noisy arguments and their squeaky bed.

I decided to tackle the problems one at a time. After a week of the squeaky - bed disturbance, I saw the man in the elevator, so I whispered discreetly, "I haven't had a good night's sleep in a week, pal. Your squeaky bed has been keeping me awake every night!" He replied, "Thanks. I'll take care of it ... and please don't mention it to my wife when she gets back. She's been out of town.

DEAR ABBY: An elderly man had a heart attack aboard the same plane I was on just as it was taxiing for take - off. An ambulance with paramedics arrived within seconds of our return to the terminal I realized then that it had been two years since I had taken the cardiac pulmonary resuscitation course. Frankly, I couldn't remember all the prodecures. I had planned to refresh my memory (it's in my manual) but I never got around to it.

Yesterday, a neighbor's father had a heart attack. Another man and I did what we could, but the victim died. Actually, we did little or nothing to increase his chances of survival. In the panic, I couldn't remember what I was supposed to do, and the other man knew even less than I did. In short, neither one of us knew what the hell we were

Esophagus spasm is painful

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB - I had an X ray of my stomach about a year ago to determine whether I had a hiatal hernia but they found none. At that time I was having a lot of trouble with gas, burping even after I drank water and a sore feeling in the belt area in the front. At times when I ate or drank something. it would go down a little and then stop. Then I would feel a contraction and it would pass through. But when I had a bad attack, I would be awake the entire night and have pain between my breasts and across my chest. It was not a severe pain but I would feel sore for a day or so afterwards.

My heart has been skipping a beat for about five years now and I first noticed it when I had one of these bad attacks of trapped gas. My gallbladder was removed 15 years ago so that isn't the problem.

I'm 62 years of age and have seen a cardiologist about the skipped beats. After cardiograms and wearing a monitor for 24 hours, he said it comes from anxiety. He also thought I could have a spastic colon because of the pain in my left side. It feels as if something is in there that shouldn't be there and it seems to stick under my left breast.

The thing that bothers me mastly is the skipping of the heartbeats. I feel it mostly when I have these attacks but it does subside when I take Librax for a while. I have no trouble with my bowels. I would appreciate your thoughts on this condition.

DEAR READER - Your heart can skip beats from many different causes and it can be caused by nervousness. They are caused in some people by disturbances of the digestive tract, including distension of the colon with gas or other problems.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6 - 12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias, to give you more information about these conditions. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I can't be certain what is causing your pain but as you describe it, it sounds like even when you drink liquid that it is blocked before it enters the stomach. If that's true, you could be having a spasm of your esophagus. This won't show on an X ray unless the spasm occurs at the time the X ray is taken. Think of it as a muscle cramp. It only hurts when the muscle is cramping and in between time the muscle appears normal. Such a contraction can cause chest pain and discomfort.

If you have a lot of gas, it can accumulate in the colon and cause pain underneath the rib cage above your belt line. That's because the colon is located around the outer edge of your abdominal cavity. The upper part of the colon passes directly across underneath your ribs. It bends underneath the diaphragm on the left side. At this point, gas can accumulate and cause pressure directly under the diaphragm which could give you the sensation you're complaining about underneath your left breast. You can have normal bowel movements and still have a spastic colon.

Mays, two others inducted into HOF

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) - It has been nearly six years since Willie Mays stopped thrilling baseball fans with wondrous displays on the field. Now he's captivating them off the field

Mays was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday, along with Hack Wilson and Warren Giles. For the "Say Hey Kid," it was a special occasion, as memorable to him as his spectacular catches, great throws and clutch home runs were to the people who watched Legions of those fans turned out Sunday under a scorching sun to cheer for Mays. Every time his name was mentioned, they yelled "Willie!" When he was introduced by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, they rose as one and saluted the newest member of the sport's most elite society.

"I love baseball. it's a great game," said Mays. "Now I know the 22 years I played weren't in vain. You gave those years back to me.'

He meant the Hall of Fame, but it could just as easily have been the fans Willie was thanking. They came to expect greatness from him -

Willie's statistics seem to jump out of the record book. He played just short of 20 seasons with the Giants, first in New York, then in San Francisco. He finished his career with the New York Mets after a trade in May, 1972.

In those 22 major league seasons, Mays accomplished marvelous things with his bat. A 20-time All Star, he belted more than 40 home runs six times, knocked in at least 100 runs six times and had a lifetime batting average of .302.

For his career, Mays wound up third to Henry Aaron and Babe Ruth in home runs (660); third in total bases (6,066); fourth in at-bats (10,881), runs scored (2,062) and games played (2,992); seventh in hits (3,283) and RBI (1,903); eighth in slugging percentage (.557), and 10th in walks (1.464).

Even with all those hitting achievements, Mays may best be remembered for his fielding. He holds the major league record for putouts by an outfielder with 7,095. He made the basket catch a part of his routine, and the fans loved it. He also made the phenomenal catch an every-day part of his repertoire, climbing fences, diving, center field in the Polo Grounds in the 1954 World Series. That catch, his back to home plate, the ball falling from directly overhead into Mays' glove, is his most famous.

"It was simple," he said. "When the ball went up, I felt I should catch it. When I made catches that looked great, that's what I was supposed to do."

Wilson, who set the National League marks for home runs (57) and RBI (190) in 1930, was represented by his son, Robert. Kuhn called Wilson "a perfect character for the Chicago of the 'Roaring Twenties." The hard-drinking outfielder, who had a lifetime .307 batting average, died in 1948.

Giles, who like Wilson was elected to the Hall by the veterans' committee, of which he was a member until his death at 82 last February, served as NL president from 1951-69. He was vice president and general manager of the Cincinnati Reds for 15 years and put in half a century as a baseball executive.

Graham wins PGA at 3rd playoff hole

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — David Graham, leading by two. was confident going to the 18th tee of the 61st PGA Championship. Ben Crenshaw, on the other hand, was depressed once again, having finished second in three of his last five tournaments and facing yet another runner - up placing.

Graham, who started Sunday's final round four strokes behind third-day leader Rex Caldwell, had fired seven birdies during the first 17 holes to go 10-under par and take a two-stroke lead over Crenshaw, who was waiting by the 18th green.

Graham said afterward that he had never lost a tournament with a two-stroke lead and one hole to play.

"I was really in control of what I was doing," said the 33-year-old Australian, who had never won a major tournament. "I was in control of my game, my emotions. I felt very comfortable out there. I knew the situation I was in. I thought I had control of it."

He quickly lost control, hitting what he called his worst shot of the week from the 18th tee.

When I started my backswing, I really woke up to what was happening," said Graham. "I hit a dreadful shot. I had no idea where the ball finished up.

Graham's second shot went through the green. He needed two chips to get on the putting surface, then he missed a four-footer for a double bogey that sent the championship into a sudden-death overtime with Crenshaw "I was down," said Graham. "I never experienced anything like that before. Every chance I had to win a tournament with one hole to play. I won. I never double-bogeyed a hole to go into a playoff." Meanwhile, Crenshaw said, "I really didn't think I was going to get into the playoffs. But then I realized I had a chance to win. On the first two holes of sudden death, Crenshaw applied the pressure. But Graham, despite bad shots with woods and irons, survived by making putts of 25 and 10 feet to stay in the race for the $60,000 first prize.

On the 202-yard, par 3 third hold, Crenshaw hit a 4-iron to a bunker to the right of the green. Graham, also hitting a 4-iron, put his drive about 8 feet from the hole.

After Crenshaw blasted out and past the hole and missed the putt coming back. Graham needed only to get down in two to win. The perfect 7-iron to the green and a pressure off just a bit, he made his birdie putt. versus Brewers

By the Associated Press The Boston Red Sox took some extra batting practice Sunday. Wasn't it nice of the Milwaukee Brewers to supply the pitchers? "I haven't had many pitches like that recently." said Fred Lynn, who hit two home runs as the Red Sox recorded 37 hits in a 7-2. 19-5 double-header sweep of the Brewers. Lary Sorenson was one of seven Milwaukee pitchers battered by the Red Sox, who set an American League single-game high of 27 hits for the season in the nightcap.

The Pirates carried John Milner off the field after his pinch-hit, ninth-inning grand slam carried the Pirates into first place in the National League's East Division.

The questions are: What was Milner, a left-handed batter, doing up at the plate against Philadelphia left-hander Tug McGraw? And why was he pinch-hitting for Steve Nicosia. a right-hander batter who had gone 4-for-4 including a home run?

"If I told you, they (the Phillies) would know, too," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner after Milner's dramatic blast into the second tier of seats at Three Rivers Stadium in the opener of a double-header. And the Phillies, who lost their
