OIL FROM the world's worst oil spill in the Bay of Campeche is coming ashore on south Texas beaches. One large slick is just south of Corpus Christi. The Coast Guard has established floating fences across Brazos Santiago Pass to protect inland waters.

Coast Guard battles oil spill

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Vacationers surfed, swam and basked in the warm South Padre Island sunshine apparently undisturbed by a Coast Guard counter-attack against the lead edge of an invading Mexican oil spill.

Coast Guardsmen employed a sophisticated array of equipment Tuesday to scour South Texas beaches soiled by tarry globs of crude that apparently came from a blown-out Mexican well spewing approximately 20,000 barrels of oil a day into the Bay of Campeche.

Stiff winds that propelled the massive Mexican oil slick on its northern course diminished Tuesday, stalling the advance of the runaway crude that government scientist said possibly could damage hundreds of miles of sensitive coastline from Texas to Florida.

Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Roger Meacham said it is a "distinct possibility" that the Mexican oil could reach the entire Gulf coastline.

However, Meacham added that there is "no way in the world anybody could say that for sure... It would be like predicting the weather three months from now.

There are too many unknowns.

After touring a section of the stricken area Tuesday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he assumes Gov. Bill Clements will seriously consider declaring it a disaster area.

"Chances are very good that long-term ecological damage can be avoided. But we are going to see some very dirty beaches. It will look terrible, but they can be cleaned up without lasting damage... but it will take a lot of effort and a lot of money," said Hobby.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration spokesman Carl Posey said the white sands of Padre Island had been only "lightly oiled" by tar balls that floated in on the surf. And that the heaviest concentrations of the thick globs of crude were found near the Port Mansfield cut.

Neither the oil or the cleanup operations appeared to worry vacationers who packed the island's resort hotels.

Tourist swam, surfed and sunned themselves less than 50 feet from where a beach cleanup crew had turned its attention to freeing a large vacuum truck that had bogged down in the soft sand.

The morning tide left a dotted line of oily residue on a park beach at the northern edge of the island. But some visitors there contended it was not as bad as they had seen it in the past.

"We don't have a serious problem here," said Ralph Thompson, the executive vice president of the island's tourist bureau.

"When we have a major problem here I'll be the first to tell you. We don't want people coming down here and being disappointed," he said.

Volunteers planned to check early today on an overdue burs of 87 Ridley turtles. The eggs, buried 18 inches below the Padre Island sand, were expected to hatch several days ago.

Carl Jorgensen, a retired mailman who is watching the isolated strip of beach where the eggs are buried, said he doubts the oil spill has anything to do with the delay in the hatching of the endangered turtles. He said a higher-than-usual tide caused by a recent tropical storm may be to blame.

Beach cleanup efforts, which ended at sundown Tuesday, were to resume today.

Commission delays budget approval

By JOHN PRICE
Of The Pampa News

At the request of City Manager Mack Wofford, the Pampa City Commission delayed wrapping up a budget for the 1979 - 80 fiscal year Tuesday night so Wofford could have more time to hammer out an employee pay plan acceptable to commissioners.

Before discussing budget items, the commission voted unanimously to participate with the county and state in widening a 2.2-mile stretch of F.M. 750 (McCullough Street) between Barnes Street and Highway 60.

At its last regular meeting July 24, the commission postponed approval of the project after several commissioners questioned the cost and priority of the job. Estimated cost of rebuilding the road is $594,000, of which the city will pay more than $60,000.

Commissioners wanted to postpone committing money to the project, but not at the expense of killing it entirely. Asked Tuesday night what would happen if the city "put it (F.M. 750) off for a while," Jerry Raines of the state highway department said the project would be cancelled.

The rest of the commission agreed with Mayor Ray Thompson's contention that they shouldn't risk losing hard-earned state aid in widening the road, even though "there may be more urgent needs in the city."

Pampa's cost for constructing concrete curb and gutter on F.M. 750 within the city limits is $57,200, but the city will have to pay several thousand dollars more to bury conduits along the road to ease the future installation of utility lines.

"This is a section of road that's in pretty bad shape," Raines told the commission. "It's a narrow strip, and somewhat out-of-date."

Commissioners were shown highway department figures estimating the projected traffic flow along F.M. 750 to be 3,250 vehicles per day in 1989 and 4,250 vehicles per day in 1999.

A bid for the project is scheduled to be awarded on Aug. 23.

Turning to the budget, the commission agreed to schedule another special session tonight after Wofford said he "had really pushed for time" and needed to work more on a new pay plan for city employees.

"We're really not prepared as well as I'd like to be," Wofford admitted. "The numbers just don't look right."

Wofford was instructed Monday to slash a salary plan that would have added $572,000, or 14 percent, to the current budget. Tuesday the city manager told commissioners he had trimmed $200,000 from the plan, but that they were "still looking at some substantial problems with funding" the remaining $350,000 - $400,000 in salary increases.

Also increasing by almost $70,000 is the city's cost of participating in the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, which Wofford said is still less than that of most member cities, such as Borger.

Reviewing the proposed capital outlay with the commission, Wofford said "I've gone through these things over and over and over, and I really don't see anything that I can cut out in good conscience."

At the close of the meeting, Commissioner O.M. Prigmore said he would like to see another $200,000 cut from the budget.

What's Inside

Weather

The forecast calls for fair skies with continued warm afternoons and mild nights through Thursday. The high today and Thursday is expected in the mid 90s with the low tonight in the upper 60s. Winds today will be out of the southwest at 15 to 20 mph and gusty, decreasing to 10 to 15 mph tonight.

STATE BRIEFS

Davis testimony may begin

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The presiding judge in the second murder-for-hire trial of Cullen Davis has predicted that testimony against the Fort Worth industrialist will begin Monday.

State District Judge Gordon Gray said testimony will start Thursday if defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes finishes questioning prospective jurors Wednesday. But Haynes said he probably would take two more days to complete defense queries.

Haynes, who questioned 11 prospective jurors Tuesday, faces at least 12 more before a jury can be seated. After a panel of 32 potential jurors is qualified, prosecutors and defense attorneys will strike 10 each. The remaining 12 will hear the case.

Storage tank continues to burn

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — A gasoline storage tank fire ignited by lightning continued to burn today near the Texas City waterfront.

An estimated 150 industry mutual aid firefighters and municipal firemen kept watch overnight at the Texas City Refining Co. plant.

Lightning struck the tank during a heavy Tuesday morning thunderstorm, forcing the precautionary movement of two tankers and two barges from nearby docks.

Odessa man abducted

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A 21-year-old Odessa man was abducted from his trailer house late Tuesday when he came home after picking up his wife from work, she told Odessa police.

Capt. Larry Lindley of the Ector County sheriff's department said the wife of Michael Todd Franks, 21, said Franks picked her up about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday from her job as a clerk. When they arrived home, all the lights in their trailer home were out and someone grabbed him as they walked in the front door, she said.

She fled next door to call police, and the assailant forced her husband into Franks' white-over-grey pickup truck and drove off, she said.

Jet makes emergency landing

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Continental Airlines jetliner made an emergency landing Tuesday night after the wheels on the left side would not come down, an airline spokesman said.

"The right side was working perfectly, the nose gear was working perfectly, but on one part of the left side the wheels didn't come down," said Continental spokesman Jack Gregory.

None of the 34 passengers aboard Flight 253 was hurt, Gregory said.

The flight originated in Houston and was bound for Tucson, Ariz., with stops in Midland-Odessa and El Paso, he said.

The best coach in the world

OOOOOH, HIT it mommy. Out for an afternoon of golf Tuesday, Natalie Tafur, 4, and her mother, Anne, both concentrate on the coming practice stroke behind Stephen F. Austin Elementary School. Natalie's coaching may not help her mother's golf game improve, but could stimulate some extra enthusiasm. Mrs. Tafur is taking more advanced lessons with a Cabot group. She said she has played a little before, and she now tries to improve her strokes in a slight wind. (Staff photo by Gary Clark)

Researchers try to reduce need for farm fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is $48,468 enough to develop a meaningful relationship between greenhouse plants and bad breath in a so-called cozier boudoir? The Agriculture Department apparently hopes so.

It is backing solar-energy researchers who made that connection — sort of — in trying to find ways to reduce the use of fossil fuels in agriculture and the food industry.

Growing and marketing food takes more than one-fifth of the energy consumed in the nation.

Keeping brood chickens, farrowing hogs and the resulting offspring warm "appears to be one of the more promising uses of solar energy in agriculture," officials say. Behind drying crops, more USDA research seems to be focused on it.

In the last five days, USDA's Science and Education Administration, partly in tandem with land-grant universities, has handed out almost $250,000 in new solar research grants.

Under one, scientists at Kansas State University plan to add greenhouse to a hog-farrowing house.

The greenhouse will collect the sun's energy to heat both facilities. The carbon dioxide-enriched, exhaled air from the animal shelter will be circulated back through the system to the plants to improve their growth, the agency said.

Other one-year projects, ranging from $18,700 to $82,500 in cost include attempts:

—To compare the economy of heating broiler houses with a system that stores solar heat in rocks to one that lacks storage and uses section of metal roof as a collector.

—To compare solar systems to a furnace burning farm wastes, a means to both heat swine-farrowing houses and dry grain.

—To develop a cheap solar method of drying common round hay bales that weigh up to 1,500 pounds and sit exposed in many fields. This system is to be designed to dry shelled corn and heat machine-repair and storage area after the hay is dried.

USDA officials repeatedly have said they are committed financially and philosophically to solar-energy research.

But three of its economists, in an unpublished recent manuscript wrote, "Unfortunately, many researchers believe that the overall impact of solar energy use in agriculture will probably be rather limited. Dramatic technical breakthroughs to lower costs are not foreseen."

Most of the areas in which solar power has strong potential now use relatively little fossil fuel, they found after reviewing the research results to date.

Bail bondsman - someone who helps set you free temporarily

By DAN LACKEY
Of The Pampa News

The bail bondsman—the man who for a percentage fee posts the bond necessary to temporarily free you from jail—may be the last vague facsimile of the infamous bounty hunter of yesteryear.

In relation to the man whose temporary release he has negotiated, he plays half of two different roles. Under one hat, he's a private businessman entering into an agreement with a private citizen—the prisoner. Under the other hat, he's a private citizen entering into an agreement with the state—to guarantee the offender's appearance in court to answer the charges that have been filed against him.

If the offender fails to appear on the scheduled date—or "jumps bail"—the bondsman is expected to file a bond warrant for the offender's arrest. But he is still liable for the forfeiture of the bond if his client has failed to show.

Law enforcement personnel can be expected to help, but the bondsman is responsible for the return of his client. And it's here that he enters the twilight zone between being a private citizen and a law enforcement officer.

He is more than a private citizen because the state has usually given him a limited amount of time to find his client or forfeit the bond money. But he has no power to arrest his client. Only an understood obligation to bring him back to jail.

Stonie Ferguson, of the bond service which bears his name, and his brother, John, seem to find some adventure in the hunt. Both claim to have traveled as far as New York and Kentucky to bring back a prisoner.

"It seems like they run more in the summer," says Stonie Ferguson. "I don't know why that is. We had about twenty we had to chase last summer. About six so far this season."

The Fergusons say they don't weigh the monetary advantage of the bond posted versus the expense of the hunt, and claim to have spent a trip east to bring back a driving while intoxicated offender.

"The reason why is that, well, if the word ever got out that you were easy... that would be bad for business," explains John.

But just what authority the bondsman has is not clear. The Fergusons carry hand guns ("Would you go out after some of these fellows without one?" asks John) and hand cuffs. Only licensed police officers are permitted to carry hand guns in Texas, and District Attorney Harold Comer says the bondsman has no more right to carry a pistol than a private citizen.

On the question of the carrying of a gun, however, an attorney with the District Attorney's office in Lubbock says the bondsman "just might" be able to justify the weapon under the provision of the law which allows travelers to carry hand guns.

"In my opinion, they are the bounty hunters of the twentieth century," the attorney says, echoing the opinion of many, including Comer.

"I just think it's a dirty business," Comer says. "Or let me put it this way: there's the few that make it a dirty business. I suppose it's a necessary evil..."

But Comer admits that he "credits" efforts of bondsmen who bring in their "bounty" in the out-of-court settlements he tries to make in bond forfeiture cases.

"I don't go by the book in these things because most of the bondsmen I deal with are co-operative," he says. "I generally give them 20 days (after the bond is forfeited), sometimes 60 days. If they don't come up with the man, well, if they've made an effort to find him I take that into consideration."

The process of bond forfeiture, however, is governed by laws which allow the bondsman to eventually appeal the forfeiture by showing a legitimate cause as to why his client failed to appear.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

They go forth unprepared

After talking to some recent job applicants it became very obvious that they were ill-prepared to face the business world. As a potential employer, we were both amazed and shocked when we were asked about sick time, holidays, vacations, told that Saturdays and overtime would not be worked and all of this before we even got to discuss what the job entailed.

Some other young people were unaware that Social Security, Federal income tax and insurance payments would be deducted from their paycheck.

These are not isolated cases occurring here in Pampa. Dean Richard R. West of The Amos Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth College said that "ignorance among young Americans on personal finance means that a broad segment of our population doesn't have the ability to handle their own business affairs and function as intelligent consumers, to say nothing of trying to accumulate assets for the future."

We spend 18 to 22 plus years preparing our youth for occupations but generally less than a few hours on value, use, and protection of the assets they will earn during their careers.

A recent survey at a Pacific Coast university found that juniors and seniors did not know the difference between whole life and term life insurance, how a corporate bond differs from a municipal bond, how to figure interest on an auto loan, or even how to balance the family check book.

A check here in Pampa at banks and savings and loans revealed the same findings. Young people don't know how to balance checkbooks, causing them to frequently "bounce" checks and aren't aware that they are charged for checks returned, usually $5.

Most young adults aren't aware that you can shop for auto loans or that various savings institutions pay different rates on similar savings plans.

Many people are shocked when they find they have to pay additional income tax on April 15th and don't have any money to pay it with.

Insurance payments are missed and policy's lapse when memory fails and credit payments often are more than income.

What is the solution? Some authorities, including West, assert that every school system should give courses in basic consumer economics, beginning in the lower grades and continuing into high school.

Another possibility is having young people start early to participate in family financial planning.

Either or both possibilities would be a great way to introduce young people to the "real world."

Democracy

"Democracy" and "democratic" are much-abused words these days. They are used to describe such divergent forms of government as those whose citizens enjoy the most freedom and those who enjoy the least.

In every case "democracy" and "democratic" are used to mean that the decisions of government are made by the people "majority rule."

Since we -- in the United States -- have made such a fetish of the word it is surprising, perhaps, to learn that the Founding Fathers managed to write the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution without once mentioning it.

We didn't have a democracy, our forefathers said, we had a republic. Essentially what our forefathers meant was that they had established a government more limited in its powers than any the world had ever known, that it was to be the servant of the people, and not their master, that it existed to protect the unalienable rights of the sovereign individual, that these rights preceded government, coming from a higher source, that they existed and would continue to exist whether there was a government at all, but all men not being saints it was necessary to set up a government to protect those rights.

Some people had to be selected to manage the government, to serve as referee in conflicts of right with right. There had to be some elections. But the Founding Fathers no more depended upon universal suffrage to defend personal liberties than they did the English Parliament.

It isn't voting per se that gets us into trouble. It's what the people are privileged to vote on that is dangerous, or in what elected representatives are privileged to do to us.

Suppose, for instance, that we are privileged to vote on a government subsidy for ourselves -- and we do all the time, through our representatives in Washington and in Austin. To approve the subsidy is to favor taking some money from some people and giving it to other people. If our neighbor happens to be flush, why don't we pull a gun on him and demand our subsidy? That would be stealing, of course -- a crime, but so is the government subsidy. We wouldn't think of doing the former, but in the latter case, it's perfectly legal, and so our conscience is assuaged.

The subsidy is wrong because it is immoral. The source of the moral law is the same as the source of our unalienable rights.

Should the government of a free people have the authority to force a citizen to support something which he believes is unwise, is immoral and against his conscience? If, for instance, we believe that the welfare laws create dependence upon government -- that they're destructive of personal responsibility, that they result in slothfulness, that they destroy initiative and industriousness -- is it right that we should be coerced into supporting welfare recipients? I, the Selective Service represents a form of involuntary servitude -- and even here conscientious objectors are exempt -- so is the coercion that makes us work and pay for something we cannot, in conscience, support.

Thus a part of our liberty is taken from us, and the threat to the remainder increases -- even though we have liberty of the ballot box, the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, all of which pay homage to the individual, whose moral claims are unalienable rights.

There wasn't, in those early American days, a lot of sentimental palaver about the "democratic process" as the key to maintaining freedom. The founders did not put much trust in the ballot. They set up a system that called for the election of the President other than by direct, popular vote and that system continues to exist. How wise they were to foresee -- and to try to forestall -- the emergence of such personalities as Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Harry Hopkins, whose advice was "tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend, elect, elect, elect."

The tax-spend-elect theory has been proved many times. We have, in fact, reached the stage at which elections amount to a kind of public auction in which the candidates bid for votes. The one who promises the most in special privileges stands a good chance of getting them.

Freedom is something that has to be nourished. Each generation is put to the test. Each generation must, in a manner of speaking, earn freedom, or it will be lost. This is the kind of "eternal vigilance" our forefathers commended to our attention. This is what Benjamin Franklin meant when he said we have "a republic if we can keep it." It is easy to lose -- easiest of all through the beguiling appeal of universal suffrage.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

The other day I had a telephone call which impressed me favorably. A retired lieutenant colonel, now living in California, was on the other end of the line taking me to task for one of my recent columns on the subject of welfare.

"I have received quite a number of brickbats for these columns as well as a number of rounds of applause and at the outset wasn't sure whether the colonel had called to protest or to praise. After a sentence or two he left no doubt. I had disturbed him profoundly and he was among those who protested.

The difficulty, as he ultimately revealed, was that he was the recipient of government funds himself. He lived on a pension which, as he saw it, was deserved. He had been drafted in the Korean conflict, having served in World War II prior to Korea. He had been wounded. Although he had actually had his whole life pre-empted by the military demands made on him, he had still managed to serve as a private attorney for about seven years between wars. Other than that, he had been living on checks from the government either as an employee or a pensioner, and, after Korea, an injured one at that.

The colonel came right to the point with this sentence: "I gave my life and my good health to my country and am receiving government checks as a consequence. I think my situation is different from that of a woman whom I had as a client on one occasion, who had a dozen children and was getting aid because of that."

Since the telephone call I have also had a letter from this ex-military man saying that he hoped I would write a column which would point out the area of mitigating circumstances in respect to receiving welfare.

What favorably impressed me about the colonel was the fact that after our verbal exchange on the phone, he quite willingly admitted he was on welfare. That was refreshing. I've had many people who are receiving taxpayers' money as welfare recipients, who, despite the evidence, insist they are not on welfare. And, curiously, nearly all of them object to the welfare others are receiving. It's just that, in their case, they have rationalized the matter in their own favor.

I told the colonel that I felt a great deal of sympathy for his situation. Clearly, he had been imposed upon. Probably entirely capable of enjoying a fine and lucrative career without depending directly on the state, he had found himself in two wars and after his second tour of duty he was crippled.

He didn't want my sympathy. He wanted me to understand that he was justified in taking tax money.

I'm terribly sorry about this, but I don't think so. There is no doubt that in each and every instance when a person begins accepting government funds, in his own mind or heart he reasons that (1) he is coming; (2) he can't manage without it; (3) in view of circumstances, he is justified in accepting it.

In what has happened in this nation I see a great moral decline. What began some few decades ago as an attempt to bail out the unemployed and destitute has been rationalized into a financial Golconda for anyone having any kind of problem.

There was a time when we Americans were too proud to go on welfare. I well remember the men and women I have worked with shoulder to shoulder in one job or another who had been crippled, had suffered one privation or another, but who nonetheless threw back their heads proudly, looked anyone right in the eye and worked to pay their own way. Of course, I know nothing about the colonel personally. But I do know of others who have received injuries at least as serious as his who have finally made it out of the hospital and are working. Of course, I must admit, some of them are taking tax money, too.

But the real hurt of the matter is this: We are dealing here with reality, not with sympathy or with how we wish things were. We must deal with things as they are. The taxpayers of this country are putting up all the money that is paid out in welfare under any and every relief, pension or welfare plan, including Social Security. Government has no money of its own. Everything it has is taken from the rest of us by force and most frequently without our consent. The truth is that when anyone, the colonel included, accepts funds from the government, he is engaged in looting his neighbors and is living at their expenses. It sounds harsh. Tragically, it is harsh but true.

The colonel taking the money has been imposed upon by the government. But what about the woman with a dozen children? Was she black? The colonel didn't say, but, regardless of race, what were her circumstances? I don't know. But I warrant that she felt imposed upon, too. If not by the government directly, by circumstances of various sorts which could have included poverty, lack of education, prejudice, unemployment and surely by some man or men. In that mother's mind I venture to say she felt as justified in accepting help from the state as the colonel felt.

I see it everywhere. The elderly justify welfare. The young and healthy justify it. The school aged people accept it. Business men vie with each other for it. Those with Social Security accept it. The injured, the sick, the discouraged all believe it is owed to them. But the "it" is nothing more than a forceful taking of money from their neighbors through the medium of government. These people are all on welfare and each has his own mitigating circumstances. Each is letting the circumstances dictate his income rather than shaking off the problems and emerging to handle them himself.

That's what is destroying the country. Instead of striving to stand on our own two feet (assuming they have not been shot away) we have become a nation of leeches. We lean on the government. And the government, by its nature, simply loots everyone to pay the costs of this leaning.

I will probably be criticized for this column also. But I must call the shots as I see them. Naturally I have great sympathy for the poor, those who experience prejudice, the young, the elderly, the sick, the veterans, the mothers, etc., etc. But sympathy does not justify grand theft and I sympathize with the victim of theft, too. The road we have taken in this nation is leading to a final wrap-up and burial of a once proud, great people. And I cannot stand by and see it happening without calling things by their right names.

COMMENTARY

Abandoning Ship

by donald f. graff

If the Geneva conference on refugees accomplished anything, it was to demonstrate the futility of attempting to deal with human tragedy of the magnitude of the Indochinese exodus in terms of government policies and diplomatic trade-offs.

The 65-nation gathering convened by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim included all the key participants -- other than the refugees themselves -- in what has become, forgetting the energy debacle for a bit, the world's top-line crisis.

It produced some strong language on the subject and pledges of funds, higher refugee admission quotas on the part of several recipient nations and tentative plans for improved transient facilities in the countries of "first asylum."

But all this is still comes nowhere near meeting the problem. And it also has produced some new causes for concern.

It is yet to be seen whether the refugees will be any better off as a result of Geneva, but one party may have improved its situation marginally -- Vietnam.

By attending and agreeing at least to discuss the situation, the Hanoi regime may have been trying to improve its image somewhat. It shouldn't have, considering that the major Vietnamese contribution to the deliberations marks anything but an advance.

Hanoi's agreement to restrict emigration has received much attention. And at first glance it might appear welcome in that it suggests a lessening of the refugee flow. But what this really means is that departure by people who want to leave will be prevented, a violation of the UN Charter of Human Rights. Hanoi has not promised to clean up its own act so that existence under its authority will be tolerable. And it has said nothing whatsoever about renouncing its well-publicized practice of exorbitant payment from those who do leave its jurisdiction, legally or otherwise.

The fundamental truth of the Vietnamese refugee situation is that there is no solution that would bring a natural end to the exodus short of replacing the present regime with one the overwhelming majority of the population would wish to live under. And that is a solution that neither the world community nor any member of it, some having already attempted something along the line, is going to buy.

It may be that as the pledges of funds and refugee admissions are redeemed, as the new holding camps promised by the Philippines and Indonesia are established and as tenuous contacts with Hanoi expand, the situation will begin to look more hopeful.

But for the present, the major lesson of Geneva would appear to be that efforts to develop effective international measure to deal with the boat people are still a draft.

The United States, which is increasing its admission quota to 15,000 a month, has already absorbed some quarter million Indochinese refugees.

And for most of them, principally Vietnamese, this is indeed proving to be a land of opportunity.

According to a current study of changing U. S. immigration patterns, as reported in The Christian Science Monitor, the newcomers have done remarkably well in adapting to their new country with better than 90 percent employed and most of the remainder in school.

Most of those studied came in the first wave following the collapse of South Vietnam in 1975, some 130,000. Typically, initial jobs were far below qualifications. But improvement in employment situations and increase in incomes was rapid thereafter. This may be because the newcomers are "self-selected," according to economist Barry R. Cheswick of the University of Illinois, hard workers whose toughness in seeking a new home assured success there.

The latest wave of refugees may be somewhat different in that many are unskilled and may have more difficulty in the competitive job market. But overall, the refugee record is one of considerable and rapid accomplishment.

Rather than an economic burden, they become net contributors to the economy to the benefit of the host society as a whole.

Which should raise a question: Why, instead of agonizing over what to do with the refugees, aren't all those countries that gathered at Geneva competing to receive them?

Tough talk, easy limits

Despite President Carter's tough talk about imposing stringent limits on future petroleum imports, he actually has established very generous ceilings. Carter says he will not allow "one drop more" than 8.2 million barrels of oil per day to be imported this year. But net imports during the first half of the year amounted to only slightly more than 7.7 million barrels per day.

That means that during the last half of 1979 the country could import almost 8.7 million barrels of oil daily -- the highest rate in history -- and still meet the president's goal.

The ceiling for future years will be pegged to 1977 net imports, which totaled almost 8.6 million barrels per day -- the greatest amount of oil ever purchased from foreign sources.

While Carter logically might have selected 1978 imports as a standard for the future, that goal would have been difficult to attain because they amounted to fewer than 8 million barrels per day.

California hardest hit

Which state was most severely affected by the recent spot shortages of gasoline? According to a just-completed study, only California was forced to resort to four different mandatory emergency measures to deal with the crisis.

The survey, conducted by the National Governors' Association, identified the states that required minimum purchases, odd-even sales, flag systems to designate fuel availability and measures to keep service stations open.

New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia were forced to institute all four measures. But unlike California, each of those states made at least one of the steps voluntary.

Minimum purchases, odd-even sales and flag systems were used in hard-hit Delaware, Florida, New York, Rhode Island and Texas. And at least two emergency measures were implemented, on a voluntary or mandatory basis, in Connecticut, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

But no special action of any type was taken in another 29 states, apparently because gasoline was readily available.

Dent put into planned Texas vacations

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — For the Marshall Lutons of Tulsa, Okla., a little tar on the beach does not ruin the vacation they planned for four months — it just puts a little "dent" in it.

"We're still having a good time... Even though we have to clean up a little more," said Reba Luton, Marshall's wife.

The Lutons and their four young children were among the thousands of tourists on this South Texas Island who Tuesday discovered more clumps of tar than usual on the beach and in the water. Officials believe the sticky substance is the first trace of a massive Mexican oil spill that has been drifting north since June 3.

"It's definitely different than it was here last year," Luton said. "We're kind of reluctant to go out and get it all over us."

But the suntan oil on the faces of the children was proof that the Lutons were not overly concerned about the oil. Even 12-year-old Marshall, Jr., who said cleaning off the oil was "too much trouble," admitted he'll head back onto the sand and into the surf the first chance he gets.

"All it's really meant to us is that we came down a day earlier to get some swimming in before the oil came," Luton said, adding that the family has gone through quite a bit of nail polish remover in its battle with the tar.

The scattered clumps of oil did not seem to deter many tourists on the packed island.

They swam, surfed and sunned less than 50 feet from where a beach cleanup crew had turned its efforts to hauling a large vacuum truck that had bogged down in soft sand.

In a county park on the northern end of the island it was a routine summer weekday despite the dotted line of oily residue left by the morning tide. Some said it was not as bad as they had seen it in the past. Others said it was worse.

Mary Mielas, who works in the hotel where the Lutons are staying, said business in the gift shop is brisk — especially for a product guaranteed to remove even the most persistent of oil.

"But in the summer we always have tar. When it's hot it stays on the sand. When it's cooler it goes back into the sea," she said.

"They're visiting and they're buying. Noone's worried about a little tar."

But Mrs. Mielas was upset about reports of blatant profiteering. She proudly pointed out that the shop had not raised its $1.25 price tag on the tar remover.

"I hear some of them are selling it for $2 now. Where there's a flood or where there's a fire there's always some wise guy."

Back on the southern tip of the narrow island, tourist official Ralph Thompson waited to answer one more reporter's questions.

"I think the island is being unduly persecuted," said the executive vice president of the island tourist bureau. "We don't have a serious problem here."

New type of doctor to develop

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — American medical schools will soon turn out a new breed of doctors — energy specialists — to cope with oil shortages and growing use of nuclear power, the head of the American Medical Association predicts.

Dr. Hoyt Gardner said Tuesday the new branch of medicine should be flourishing in 10 years.

"We will have the circumstance of long-time nuclear plants (operating continuously for a lengthy period)," he said. "No one can say what the long-time hazards or benefits are."

Energy doctors also will deal with possible health hazards associated with manufacturing of equipment for solar energy collectors, Gardner said.

Oil shortages and resulting added inflation, he said, will affect push up medical cost like any other service.

But he compared the energy crisis to the United States space program, which led to aerospace medicine.

Aerospace techniques brought advanced technology to local hospitals in the forms of coronary care monitoring units and other sophisticated equipment, he said.

Despite his forecast of the growth in energy medicine, Gardner said such techniques will take time to perfect.

He dismissed as "at least premature" reports in London newspapers that the cancer deaths of John Wayne and other actors may be linked to atomic bomb fallout on a 1954 film location in Utah.

"It's so early to run around and make these allegations," he said. "To say that the exposure that Mr. Wayne and others had caused cancer is just not certifiable. It's easy to make accusations but it takes a lot of time."

The English newspapers reported Wayne and others associated with the film "The Conqueror" might have been exposed to high concentrations of fallout from a May 19, 1953, Nevada nuclear test.

The head of the 300,000-member association defended advanced medical technology against criticism it sometimes costs too much and is more sophisticated than most patients need.

"Everybody says that something has to be done about medical costs but everybody who's sick says they want everything possible done (to cure them)," he added.

Chagra linked with narcotics operation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — BETWEEN Christmas and New Year's Eve 1977, the Coast Guard seized three small freighters — linked by witnesses to Las Vegas gambler Jimmy Chagra — containing 77.9 tons of marijuana. Coast Guard officers and drug agents have testified.

Chagra, 34, is on trial in federal court on a four-count indictment accusing him of cocaine and marijuana smuggling and "continuing criminal enterprise."

The "continuing criminal enterprise" law — which federal prosecutors say is known as the "kingpin statute" — carries a possible life sentence.

Attorneys for Chagra attempted unsuccessfully Tuesday to suppress Coast Guard testimony about seizure of the Miss Connie, the Eco Pesca IV and the Dona Petra on the ground the Coast Guard had no warrants to search the ships.

They also told U.S. District Judge William Sessions of El Paso they will need an interpreter for a defense witness but refused to tell reporters who the witness will be.

Sessions took the case after the original judge, John H. Wood Jr., was assassinated May 29 outside his San Antonio apartment by an unknown rifleman.

Previous witnesses said Chagra "freelanced" the Miss Connie and Eco Pesca IV after their American contacts failed to keep a rendezvous on the high seas to unload their cargo. Henry Wallace, an alleged accomplice of Chagra, said he arranged for the Dona Petra to sail for Florida from Colombia with 30 tons of marijuana.

Lt. Cmdr. James Kenney, then the executive officer of the cutter Steadfast, said a boarding party found bales of marijuana in the hold of the Miss Connie while seeking its permanent identification plate.

Texas gasoline

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Automobile Association reports more service stations plan to be open Sunday than at any time since it began weekly fuel reports in early May.

The Texas Division of AAA said Tuesday its survey of 415 stations also showed better gas availability on weekday and Saturday nights.

Grandmother gives up home for Peace Corps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bea Alford, a 76-year-old grandmother from Santa Monica, Calif., is giving up her mobile home and Cadillac to enlist in the Peace Corps — for the second time.

She quit her $13,500-a-year job as a Peace Corps recruiter and will leave Friday for Jamaica to work with rural women, teaching them such things as hygiene, gardening and how to preserve food.

She is one of the oldest of some 330 Peace Corps volunteers over age 50 who are serving around the world.

"My son can't understand why I would give up a salary to do volunteer work," said Mrs. Alford, who has four children and 11 grandchildren.

"But I didn't like collecting material things and having to pay rent and stand in gas lines," she said. "Money was becoming important to me, and I didn't like that. I wanted to get away from money."

As a volunteer, she will receive a living allowance of about $100 a month. At the end of her tour, she will also get a readjustment allowance of $125 for each month she served.

In an interview, Mrs. Alford said her messages to the volunteers she has been recruiting for the last 10 years differ.

"I tell the younger ones to give two years of their life, and old ones to add two," she said. "I try to make older people see they need to be useful. To be needed offers a new life."

Incentives for older Americans to sign up are that they still qualify for Social Security and that they often get more respect in foreign countries than they do in the United States.

Citizens of other countries "sometimes find older people easier to approach," she said. "Older people can sometimes gain their confidence faster than younger ones."

The Peace Corps, started by the late President John F. Kennedy in 1961, now has about 6,400 volunteers.

Viets lift ban on congressmen

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Nine U.S. congressmen investigating the plight of Indochinese refugees in Southeast Asia are flying to Hanoi today after the Vietnamese government lifted a ban on the visit.

The Vietnamese on Monday withdrew their invitation to the group because one of its members, Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., accused the Hanoi regime of human rights violations on a colossal scale. Then the Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok announced on Tuesday that the entire group including Drinan would be welcome after all.

A Vietnamese spokesman said the ban was lifted after a "proposal" from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Details of Vance's proposal were not available.

Drinan, a Roman Catholic priest who was one of the leading early opponents of U.S. participation in the Vietnam War, said last weekend that "Vietnam is engaged in one of the most fundamental violations of human rights that we have seen in this century."

He did not soften his criticism after Hanoi accused him of slander and withdrew the invitation.

"The whole word knows there are 400,000 Vietnamese people who are in detention camps, who are refugees, who are boat people. The conscience of the world has been shocked," he said on Tuesday.

Weather

TEXAS

By The Associated Press
Showers and thunderstorms were forecast today for eastern and southwestern sections of Texas.

Forecasts called for most of the showers and thunderstorms to be east of a line from Tyler to Waco to San Antonio to Alice and in Southwest Texas. Most of the state was to have clear to partly cloudy skies and continued hot temperatures.

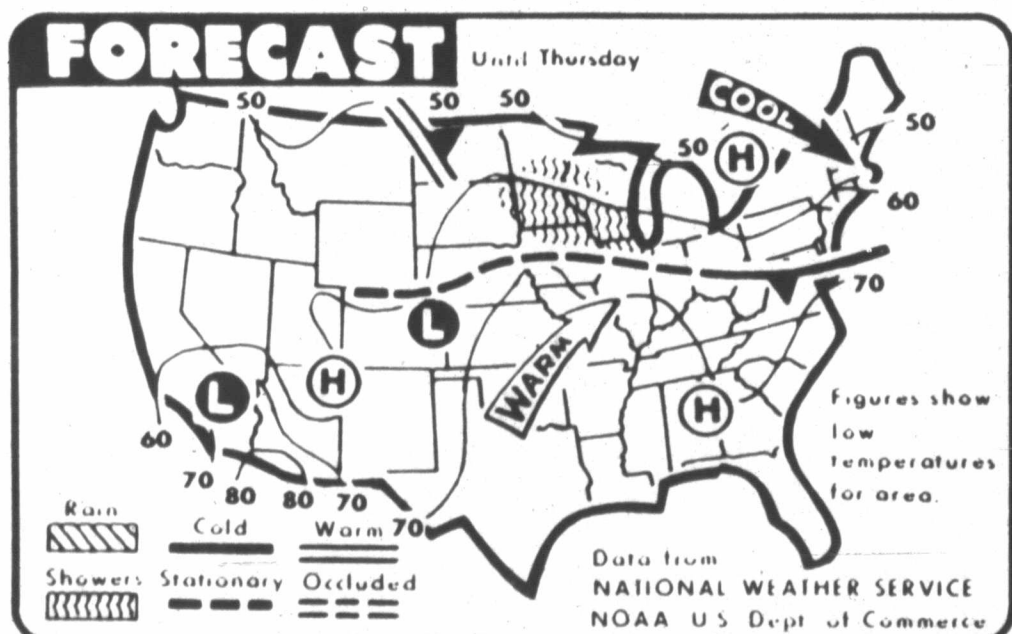

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s. Readings in the Wichita Falls area and in an area along the Rio Grand from the Big Bend to Del Rio were expected to approach the 100-degree mark.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported late Tuesday in East Texas and Southwest Texas, but the activity stopped by early today. Thunderstorms were reported early today just offshore from middle and upper sections of the Texas coast and just northwest of Amarillo.

NATIONAL

Thunderstorms rumbled through northeastern Wyoming and western South Dakota early today after a night in which tornadoes were seen in Osage and Newcastle, Wyo., near the South Dakota border.

The Weston County, Wyo., sheriff's office and the National Weather Service said there were reports of rain damage, downed limbs and power lines and broken windows because of the storms Tuesday night, but there were no reports of injuries or major damage.

WARM TO very warm weather is expected in the forecast period, Wednesday until Thursday morning, for most of the country. Cooler weather is forecast for northern New England. Showers are predicted for Michigan, Wisconsin and the upper Midwest.

Old lights are preserved

By Nancy Ellis

Finally it is settled: This streetlamp has won a reprieve from extinction.

It is simple, elegant, and has stood proudly since the early part of the century.

But its underground wiring — so chic and modern when it was installed — is difficult to maintain, complains the local utility. Repairs are costly, officials explain, and supplies are depleted. Besides, the mold used to cast new poles has somehow been misplaced.

Thus begins a phase-out of antiquated lighting systems.

One day, a woman standing at her window watches as utility workers remove streetlamps down the block, toss them into the back of a truck and replace them with 25-foot mercury vapor poles.

She is outraged. As they prepare to uproot her light — the one by the driveway — she is overwhelmed, and charges at the workmen demanding an explanation.

"Just following orders, ma'am." It is not enough.

"Nobody asked me!" she cries in anger, then halts the project with a threat to have them arrested for trespassing.

The scene is of an early skirmish in a neighborhood battle to preserve a valued part of its heritage. The conflict is long and hard-fought, amazingly so for what some consider to be such a trivial matter.

Solidarity, resourcefulness and perseverance bring triumph for neighborhood forces as the city, previously unwilling to assume the higher costs associated with the decorative lights, capitulates to the will of its citizens.

Perhaps here is food for further thought.

It is easy to discard the complicated, to dispose of things in need of repair. Convenience is supreme, efficiency essential. But sometimes in our eagerness to shed the past and move into the future, we risk tearing at our own skin.

Not everything can be replaced.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Punishment should not go on

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 13 and in big trouble. Just before school was out, I ditched school and went to my boyfriend's house.

The school found out and called my mother who knew exactly where I was. Mother came by in the car and took me home. On the way, she started crying and told me that I had let her and Daddy down.

My punishment was fair: three weeks of being grounded and no telephone.

Now here is my problem: Mom keeps adding little extra restrictions and grounding extensions and I don't think it's fair.

Mom is making a bigger deal out of my ditching school than she should. I learned my lesson and won't do it again. How can I keep her from adding the restrictions and grounding extensions? —Janet, Porterville, Calif.

Janet: Assuming that you are not doing things that warrant these punishments, buy the nicest card you can find and on it write, "I'm sorry. It won't happen again. I love you." sign and mail it.

Lisa Blodgett

Young woman from White Deer is Miss Top O' Texas entrant

Lisa Karen Blodgett, a spring graduate of White Deer High School, is a contestant this month in the Miss Top O' Texas pageant.

She is sponsored by Wheeler-Evans Elevator Company in White Deer.

During the talent portion of the scholarship pageant, Lisa will sing a recent Bonnie Tyler hit, "It's a Heartache".

The 18-year-old has studied twirling, dance and piano, and enjoys singing and poetry as well. Hobbies include cooking, photography and playing the organ. She has served as a hospital auxiliary volunteer.

Lisa plans to attend Texas Tech University, where she will major in special education. Her future ambition is to teach deaf children.

The daughter of Raymond and Jeri Blodgett, Lisa was an active student at White Deer High School. She was twirler for four years, Band Sweetheart and secretary, vice president of Fellowship of Christian Athletes and secretary of her senior class.

She also was a candidate for Miss WDHS and football queen, and was Miss Congeniality and first runner-up in the 1978 Miss Carson County Pageant.

Favorite sports for the blue-eyed blonde include basketball, swimming, snow skiing and tennis.

DR. LAMB

Woman questions estrogen

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Several years ago my doctor prescribed Premarin for me during the menopause stage. I took this for quite a while and then, since I wasn't having any menopause symptoms, I began to decrease the amount and eventually stopped taking medicine at all. During a recent physical examination, the doctor asked me if I was still taking the Premarin and when I said no, I was told quite emphatically that I should follow his instructions since on his examination he had noted my "color was bad."

Now I've recently read in the paper that a study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine conducted at Johns Hopkins University said that it was true that female hormones can cause cancer of the uterus. I know this has been controversial for some time, but as I read the report it sounds like there's now definite evidence that this is the case. This has me terribly concerned and I really don't know what to do. I don't like to disobey my doctor but I really hesitate to take more Premarin.

DEAR READER — You're certainly right about it being a controversial subject. There are benefits from using estrogen. It isn't the first medicine that we've used to help people that also has the capacity to cause harm. Digitalis is an important life-saving drug but if you take too much, it can cause serious cardiac irregularities and other problems. You can go down the list from there.

The important point is to make the right decision in each individual case. That's why you usually have to rely on your doctor's advice based on what he's found.

The study you have referred to is pretty well documented and it does settle some of the questions that were raised. Apparently, altering the dosage or taking estrogen intermittently doesn't eliminate the increased risk of uterine cancer that it may cause. I think it's safe to say that there definitely is an increased risk. There are still some unanswered questions such as the point that some investigators raised that using progesterone, the other female hormone, helps to negate the estrogen problem. That may need further study.

Let me stress again that women who have already had a hysterectomy shouldn't have any concern at all about the increased risk of female hormones and uterine cancer. You have to have a uterus before you can develop a cancer of it. You might be surprised how often that's been misunderstood in various news releases.

Now, I don't like to be in the position of disagreeing with a physician who's seen a patient but the current weight of evidence is that you shouldn't use female hormones in a woman with her uterus intact unless there's a definite indication for them.

To give you more information on the menopause I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Material offered for personal, family financial planning

If your group or organization wants information on personal and family financial planning, the American Council of Life Insurance can help.

The Council's Education and Community Services, in conjunction with the Health Insurance Institute, provides assistance in program planning and offers educational materials about life and health insurance and pensions to community groups, secondary schools, universities and community colleges, marriage and family counselors, adult basic education teachers and others who are interested in family financial planning.

Their latest publication is a 32-page booklet designed to give young people a basic understanding of life and health insurance. Single copies of "Life and Health Insurance: A Guide for Young Adults" are available free by writing to the American Council of Life Insurance, Order Department, 1850 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Dear Abby

abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: You were asked what you would do if you were on an airplane and were forced to sit in the smoking section because there were no more seats in no-smoking. You said, "I'd speak to the flight attendant."

Well, thanks a lot! I'm a flight attendant and, if the flight is full, the most I can do is try to get someone in the no-smoking section to voluntarily give up his seat to sit with the smokers. You can imagine how many people go for a deal like that.

Tell your readers that the best way to circumvent that problem is to reserve seats well in advance. When flying standby, take the same attitude you would have at the gaming tables: you pay your money and you take your chances.

IN THE MIDDLE IN TEXAS

DEAR IN: You are not only in the middle, you are in error. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Here's a hot flash to ALLERGIC TO SMOKE, and to all others annoyed by smokers on airplanes.

All domestic airlines are now required by law to provide a no-smoking seat for every passenger who wants one, even if the entire plane has to be given over to non-smokers.

In other words, if only one person in the whole plane is a non-smoker, that person's comfort and well-being must be considered above the whims of those who willfully pollute the air with the stench and irritants of tobacco smoke.

Since you are more widely read than government regulations, you can render another great public service by disseminating this information:

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

August 9, 1979
 Creative endeavors will occupy a large portion of your time this coming year. Your chances for success in their development is excellent. Also, look for some interesting trip opportunities to come along.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be careful you don't send good money after bad today, because the whole family will suffer, as well as you. Talk things out first. The alternatives are plentiful. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make certain your hunches aren't masking selfish motives when dealing with others today. You're a good salesman, and could peddle something worthless. This you'd later regret.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Take care you don't turn your back on your work today just because something nice has happened to you. You could lose more than you anticipated.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Without stepping on the toes of others, take charge and handle important situations properly. Be sure to use extreme tact, however, or someone will be hurt.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 31) If you're not too sure of yourself with something new you're involved in, take a back seat and let others have their way. You'll learn a valuable lesson.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't let outsiders interfere in your important business. They may mean well, but chances are they'll only confuse things and make extra problems for you.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Let only experience and well-researched data guide you in decision-making today. You'll get past all intrusions if you stick to this formula.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A situation could pop up today which seems to be unsolvable. However, if you look below the surface you may find several better solutions.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Bold measures will be necessary to overcome neglected tasks. However, they had better be well thought out or your recovery could prove expensive.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The place to be today is home with your loved ones. The social sphere has too many complications and will only prove frustrating.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might just as well take a day off and have fun with a pal, doing little or nothing. Everything else you attempt will result in beating your head against a brick wall.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be extra careful what you say and to whom you say it today. Telling jealous persons of your good fortune will prove harmful to you.

Aggie recruit receives threat from LSU backer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Running back Johnny Hector says he won't ask the NCAA to look into an alleged threat to send his brother back to prison unless he signed to play football for Louisiana State University.

"As far as I'm concerned the issue is over," said Hector, who signed with Texas A&M after his brother told him of the incident.

"I feel there have been other cases like this in the past that haven't been brought up and I'm sure there'll be some in the future. As far as my family and myself are concerned... it's dropped," the hotly recruited running back from New Iberia said Tuesday.

Hector disclosed last month that an anonymous caller had told his brother his parole would be revoked if Johnny chose a school other than Louisiana State, where he had signed a Southeastern Conference letter of intent.

William Hector was paroled last February after serving one year of a 3-year prison sentence for negligent homicide.

A state lawyer said Tuesday he told Louisiana State University about the alleged threat.

But neither Richard Crane, a lawyer for the state Department of Corrections, nor LSU officials would identify the LSU supporter from Lafayette who asked a parole officer for William Hector's phone number.

"We are satisfied that no official employee of the university is involved," Athletic Director Paul Dietzel said. "Since the entire matter is based on allegations or hearsay, it would be inappropriate for us to discuss any names. There is no reason for us to pursue this matter. Any further inquiry in the Hector recruiting will be in the hands of the NCAA."

Crane said Tuesday he gave the findings of his investigation of Department of Corrections involvement to Dee L. Glueck, LSU assistant athletic director. He said the findings included the identity of the LSU supporter who requested William Hector's telephone number from parole officer John Delee.

"What Mr. Crane has given us is the name of a individual who allegedly called William Hector Glueck said. "We have not determined whether or not the call was made. Until that time, we don't feel the name should be divulged. We have no reason to believe any recruiting violation occurred."

"Again, the information we received is just the name of an individual. We have numbers of individuals all over who are calling young men urging them to come to LSU. We have no information to substantiate that a violation occurred," said Glueck.

Pros assemble for GHO

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Eight golfers who have won more than $100,000 this season on the pro tour head the field of 156 contestants for this year's Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller is the top money-winner among the players in the $300,000 tournament, which gets under way Thursday.

Zoeller, who also won the Andy Williams-San Diego Open in January, ranks seventh on the PGA money list with $185,967. The top money-winner, Tom Watson, is not competing at the 6,534-yard, par-71 Wethersfield Country Club course.

The other golfers who have topped the $100,000 mark on the PGA circuit this year who are competing at the GHO are Hubert Green, Wayne Levi, Mark Hayes, Ray Floyd, Calvin Peete, Grier Jones and Dr. Gil Morgan.

Green and Larry Nelson are the other two-time winners on the PGA tour this year in the tournament, which carries a record $54,000 first prize.

Green, who lost a playoff to Don Bies for the 1975 GHO title, has recorded victories at the Hawaiian Open and the New Orleans Open. Nelson, who was the co-leader in the first round of last year's GHO, won the Jackie Gleason Invitational Classic and then the Western Open five weeks ago.

Defending champion Roc Funseth heads a list of 10 past winners at the tournament. The California rancher posted his first PGA triumph in five years with a four-stroke victory last year.

Other former winners of the tournament, which began 28 years ago as the Insurance City Open, who are entered are: Bill Kratzert, 1977; Rik Massengale, 1976; Bies; Dave Stockton, 1974; George Archer, 1971; Bob Murphy, 1970; Charles Sifford, 1967; Art Wall, 1966; and Gene Littler, 1959.

LA shifting blame in suit over fight

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the Los Angeles Lakers, defendants in a multimillion dollar damage suit, are attempting to prove that the punch proffered by Houston Rocket star Rudy Tomjanovich came after another Rocket player touched off the dispute.

A federal court jury viewed a film of the Laker-Rocket game of Dec. 9, 1977 in which Tomjanovich was hit in the face by the Lakers' Kermit Washington.

But defense attorney Robert Dunn told the jury that before Tomjanovich was hit, Rocket center Kelvin Kunnert had given Washington an elbow in the face.

A fight erupted, with the film showing Kunnert hit by Washington. Tomjanovich is viewed trotting toward the scuffle and receiving a swinging right fist flush in the face.

Kunnert, now a teammate of Washington on the San Diego Clippers, said, "I never threw an elbow. Washington was holding onto my trunks during a fast break and I was just trying to knock his hands away."

Dunn insisted Kunnert look at the film closely and Kunnert answered, "That wasn't an elbow."

The film was shown in both black-and-white and in color, in normal and slow motion.

Earlier, Robert Reid, a Houston forward, viewed the film and said it appeared to him that Kunnert had swung an elbow at Washington.

A Houston surgeon testified the face of Tomjanovich had to be rebuilt like "a jigsaw puzzle... like putting a cracked egg-shell back together with scotch tape."

Dr. Daniel C. Walker, an oral and face surgeon, said he had "never seen such damage made by a bare human fist. I have seen people with less severe injuries and not make it."

The Rockets are seeking $1.4 million from the Lakers for the loss of Tomjanovich during most of the 1977-1978 season.

Tomjanovich is asking an unspecified amount, but more than $1 million, for the injuries he suffered.

Dr. Walker also testified that Tomjanovich will be troubled throughout his life with pressure on his sinuses, possibly loss of his teeth at an early age, and a susceptibility to meningitis.

He added, "many of the smaller bones broken will never heal in his lifetime. His facial structure will never be as strong as before. He could receive an injury of a much lesser degree and suffer severe injuries. For example, if he had a bad fall on the tennis court or struck his head on the dashboard of a car."

Dorsett, Laidlaw hurt

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys running backs Tony Dorsett and Scott Laidlaw are expected to be out of action for as long as three weeks with injuries.

Doctors discovered Tuesday that Dorsett apparently fractured a toe in a freak accident prior to the Cowboy's first exhibition game. Laidlaw suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his left leg during practice Tuesday.

Dorsett dropped a mirror — a gift from a group of fans — on his foot prior to the Cowboys' appearance against Oakland in Canton, Ohio July 28. The fracture was discovered only after Dorsett complained of pain during a workout Tuesday.

Coach Tom Landry said both players could be sidelined for up to three weeks.

The Cowboys are continuing preparations for a nationally televised exhibition game Sunday against Seattle. The team will break training camp and return to Dallas on Aug. 17.

Connors opens defense of clay court title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors, buoyed with renewed enthusiasm by the birth of his first child, feels he's ready to climb out of a rut that has cost him the world's No. 1 tennis ranking.

Connors, playing in his first tournament since the arrival of his son, Brett, last week, opened defense of his U.S. Clay Court Championship Tuesday night with a 4-7, 7-5 victory over Mark Edmondson of Australia.

"I have a much clearer mind than in the last couple of months," Connors said afterwards. "This is my first child, and if I wasn't thinking about that I wouldn't be much of a father."

Connors has won the Clay Court championship every even-numbered year since 1974.

Connors, top-seeded here, said his son has provided "a new incentive for me. He gives me something to play for again."

"It got to where I thought I was too good. Maybe I was too good. I thought all I had to do was walk on the court and I would win. Now, I've gone back to the routine that got me where I was in the first place, the No. 1 player in the world."

Connors' victory put him into a second-round match today against Pavel Slozi of Czechoslovakia, a 6-2, 6-0 winner against Argentina's Fernando Dalla-Fontana Tuesday.

Connors trailed Edmondson 4-3 in the first set and 5-4 in the second set before rallying to his victory.

"I was pleased with the way I played," Edmondson said. "The last time I played Jimmy I only won four games. He was too good then and he got past me tonight. I was serving well, but he returns so well."

Chris Evert Lloyd, winner of four straight Clay Court championships from 1972 through 1975, continued her dominance Tuesday with victories over Paula Smith and Wendy White.

Last minute pitching change irks Oriole manager

By the Associated Press

It is one of a manager's simpler duties. He comes to the ballpark, sees who is pitching for the other team, and makes out his lineup card accordingly.

If the opposing pitcher is left-handed — Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell, for example — the manager is likely to stack his attack with right-handed batters.

A's 9, Angels 5

Pinch-hitter Mike Heath hit a bases-loaded single in the seventh inning, driving in two runs and sending Oakland past California.

Tigers 3-8, Rangers 1-2

A pair of two-run homers by Jerry Morales powered Detroit to victory in the nightcap after Steve Kemp's two-run homer in the ninth inning gave the Tigers the opener.

That's just what Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver did Tuesday night when informed Caldwell would be facing his Orioles.

Caldwell warmed up, but after the Brewers had batted in the first, it was right-hander Jim Slaton who took the mound for Milwaukee. Caldwell, tackled by New York's Reggie Jackson during a game 11 days before, claimed a rib cage injury.

The Angels went ahead 4-3 in the top of the seventh on Don Baylor's broken-bat single, which delivered Rick Miller and raised Baylor's RBI total to 98.

Twins 5, Mariners 2

Glenn Borgmann hit two doubles and a single and drove in three runs, giving the Twins their victory over Seattle and moving Minnesota into second place in the West Division.

White Sox 9, Yankees 5

Alan Bannister hit a two-run single while Chet Lemon and Rusty Torres added two-run homers to help Chicago beat New York.

Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with two hits — one of them the 360th homer of his career.

Needless to say, Weaver's protest was announced long before the Brewers beat his Orioles 7-5 Tuesday night.

Sixto Lezcano, Gorman Thomas and Dick Davis each hit two-run shots for the Brewers, who had lost seven of their last eight games. Lee May and Pat Kelly hit homers for the Orioles, with Kelly's blast marking his third of the year as a pinch-hitter.

Blue Jays 3, Royals 2

Rick Cerone's single in the bottom of the ninth scored pinch-runner J.J. Cannon and gave Toronto its victory over Kansas City.

Otto Velez opened the ninth with a walk and was replaced at first base by Cannon, who took second on Rick Bossett's single, third on a force play, and scored on Cerone's hit.

Phillies 4, Expos 2

Home runs by Manny Trillo and Garry Maddox backed the six-hit pitching of Larry Christenson as Philadelphia topped Montreal.

Montreal took the lead when Warren Cromartie tripled to open the game and scored on Tony Perez's single. Perez sacrificed fly drove in Montreal's final run in the ninth.

Was Watergate operation successful?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "cancer on the presidency" that led to Richard M. Nixon's resignation five years ago still lingers, in the opinion of the four men who were charged with removing it.

Leon Jaworski, the special prosecutor who persuaded a grand jury not to indict Nixon, says the aftermath of Watergate has lingered much longer than he expected, and he blames the ex-president for it.

"I'm not saying it's the sole reason," Jaworski said. "But I think Nixon's own conduct has kept it alive, the fact that he's emerged publicly at times and has not shown any particular repentance, no particular remorse. I think this has kept people agitated."

Nixon announced on Aug. 8, 1974, that he would resign the following day. For the anniversary of the first presidential resignation of an American president, four leading figures in the Watergate drama were interviewed: Jaworski, who went to the Supreme Court and pried loose the White House tapes; former Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., head of the Senate Watergate Committee; Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., who presided over the House Judiciary Committee that returned articles of impeachment, and John Sirica, the U.S. district judge who refused to let Watergate pass into history as a simple burglary.

All agreed that Watergate proved the country's institutions could stand a profound shock but that it also left painful scars.

"I think there is yet the after effect of Watergate," Rodino said. "There is yet lurking somewhere a question, suspicions, lack of faith, lack of confidence, lack of credibility in governing officials generally."

The public opinion polls support Rodino's conclusion. The latest Harris survey on the subject, early this year, showed only 15 percent of the public has any great confidence in the presidency.

Congress was little better with 18 percent, and Rodino blames former President Gerald R. Ford's pardon of Nixon for the lack of faith in government generally.

"People, after having gone through the ordeal and having shown they were willing to be supportive of responsibility and decency and those who would say that this is a government of laws and not of men, found instead the president of the United States, Ford, was issuing the pardon to a man who hadn't been found guilty of this terrible conduct," Rodino said.

Ervin, now retired from Congress, agreed that the Watergate cloud would have dissipated more if President Ford had not pardoned Nixon.

"I think the people felt like that was a very unwise and a premature act," Ervin said, "that he ought to have waited until a grand jury had indicted President Nixon and he had been tried and convicted before he granted a pardon."

"I think that made the American people doubt whether President Ford had sufficient wisdom to exercise the awesome powers that belong to the presidency," Ervin said.

Jaworski, a Houston lawyer, also believes the pardon hurt Ford, but not the presidency as an institution.

"Ford was handicapped some because undoubtedly there were many people who took umbrage at the granting of the pardon," Jaworski said. "But I don't see how the present incumbent can use that as any excuse."

But Rodino says President Carter is suffering from Watergate's aftermath.

"Despite the fact that President Carter has been a very moral, decent man and there is no question about his honesty, nonetheless I think that what does remain is an uncertainty about all of our public officials and whether they are really to be trusted," Rodino said.

But all four of the men agree that their Watergate operation did succeed in at least one sense in removing what Nixon aide John Dean had called a "cancer on the presidency."

"I think it was a success because it proved that our institutions of government do work, and they worked without missing a beat," Rodino said. "And I think this is something that should give us pride."

Ervin added: "I think the fact that when the president proved faithless to his constitutional trust ... and Judge Sirica and the Supreme Court and the Senate committee and the House Judiciary Committee remained faithful to their constitutional trusts (it) convinced the people of the wisdom of the Founding Fathers in dividing the powers of government among the president, the Congress and the courts."

Sirica, now graduated to the semiretirement of a senior judge, is particularly proud of the performance of the courts.

Firefighters wait for aid from rain

Weary but dogged, firefighters are looking to the skies for a break from strong winds and high temperatures as fires burn out of control in four dry Western states, roaring across thousands of acres of timber and range land.

"There's no force on Earth powerful enough to cope with what we've seen," said Gordon Stevens, fire boss on one of the biggest blazes, the Mortar Creek fire in Idaho. "Nature will just have to do her thing first."

Smoke from that blaze, which Stevens said "will rank with the greatest fires in recent memory," darkened the sky more than 100 miles away at Yellowstone Park on Tuesday, and state officials said the huge firefighting effort was taxing Idaho's diesel fuel supply.

From a bustling headquarters in Boise, Idaho, fire bosses were calling reserves from as far away as New England to battle 15 fires out of control in Idaho, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming.

At least 135,000 acres of forest and rangeland have been destroyed, and National Weather Service forecasts for the next few days held little hope for rains to help douse the flames.

The Interagency Fire Center, a federal agency that coordinates and supplies firefighting manpower and equipment around the country, has mobilized a force of 4,500 — including 2,500 Forest Service firefighters, hundreds of Indians from reservations across the West and the Idaho National Guard.

"Some of them have been out there since July 26th. They can't go on much longer and we've got to pull them out," fire information officer Barry Wirth said Tuesday.

Despite the effort, the fires, sometimes whipped by 30- to 35-mph winds, raged on.

The Mortar Creek fire along the Middle Fork of Idaho's Salmon River covered at least 50,000 acres by midday Tuesday. The fire was burning along a 62-mile perimeter and crews had cut fire lines through only four miles of the roadless wilderness, Stevens said.

In eastern Idaho, the month-old Gallagher Peak fire reached 57,000 acres, although its advance was stopped on the northern end.

In Oregon, reinforcements were called Tuesday night to help extinguish a 920-acre blaze in remote terrain of the Umatilla National Forest. Officials hoped to have 500 firefighters on the lines today and contain the blaze Thursday morning.

In Montana, a crew of more than 300 began to gain control over a 2,500-acre blaze west of Anaconda on Tuesday, and officials said there was some hope of putting it out soon — despite dry weather, rough terrain, and high altitude.

Another Montana fire, however, doubled its size in the Lincoln-Scapegoat Wilderness, and fire bosses called for reinforcements.

In Wyoming, a blaze in the Laramie Range had destroyed an estimated 5,110 acres. A smaller fire in the eastern foothills of the Wind River Range was starting to die.

In addition, officials at the fire center reported that blazes in Utah and California were controlled on Tuesday.

Protestors demand chief's resignation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A group of protesters demanded the resignation of Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson Tuesday because of the death of a Brenham man during a struggle with police officers last week.

Travis County grand jurors are investigating the death of Gril Couch, a 41-year-old black man who died after struggling with two police officers outside an East Austin restaurant.

After meeting with Dyson, residents of the predominately-minority area left city hall chanting, "Dyson must resign. His job is on the line."
