

Oil patches could reach coast within 24 hours

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Large patches of oil from a runaway Mexican well will hit part of southern Padre Island within 24 hours if National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration computer predictions are accurate.

"We believe there will be some shoreline impact along southern Padre Island south of Port Mansfield within the next day," said NOAA scientist John Robinson. "We expect one of the large patches to come ashore. It will be more than the tar ball incidence we've had in the past." Government experts said today that there had been no significant change over the weekend in the status of several large patches of oil that have lurked about 20 miles offshore.

Officials feared that a strong wind could blow any or all of the patches ashore.

The expected impact area is north of the tourist beaches of South Padre Island. Mostly uninhabited, the area is a part of the Padre Island National Seashore, a natural-state preserve.

Robinson said the apparently shorebound oil is a bit thicker than sheen, which is thin surface oil. He said the situation would not be as severe as has been experienced by some Mexican beaches, which have been blackened by thick oil.

The presence of the sheen oil probably indicates more oil beneath the surface, Robinson said.

Two oil-skimming rigs that had been on standby at Brownsville were moved to Port Aransas by the Coast Guard as a precautionary measure.

Port Aransas is about 20 miles north of Corpus Christi and some 170 miles from South Padre Island.

"It's (the oil) tending to move north, but offshore," said Coast Guard Lt. Jake O'Neal.

A Coast Guard task force was braced to clean the threatened beaches last week, but wind and ocean currents stalled the globs of oil in the Gulf of Mexico. Some tar balls washed ashore, and specially equipped Coast Guard vacuums have been scooping them off the sand.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, toured the coast Sunday in a Coast Guard helicopter. After finding the tourist-laden beaches virtually clear of tar balls, he quipped:

"The beaches are cleaner right now than they ever have been in Miami Beach."

Coast Guard pilots said sheen from the runaway Ixtor 1 well blanketed much of the water offshore from Brownsville at the tip of Texas, 30 miles up Padre Island to Port Mansfield. That sheen was about 30 miles away from the beaches, Meacham said.

Ribbons of mousse — heavier concentrations of oil mixed with seawater — were spotted about 20 miles offshore at Brownsville.

As a precautionary measure against the advancing sheen, the Coast Guard plans to install a 2,000-foot long boom and a skimmer at Port Aransas.

1,000 die after dam collapse

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — All-India Radio reported today that about 1,000 persons were killed following the collapse of a dam in western India that unleashed a wall of water nearly 20 feet high on the town of Morvi and buried it in mud.

"I am deeply shocked at the enormous loss of precious lives and destruction of property caused by the sudden floods," Prime Minister Charan Singh said in a message to the chief minister of Gujarat state, Babubhai Patel.

Singh sent Agriculture Minister Brahm Perkhani to Morvi to survey the flood damage.

Earlier a former mayor of the town said he feared the death toll would run as high as 5,000. That would have made it the world's worst dam disaster, more than double the previous record toll of 2,300 at Belluno, in northeast Italy, in 1962.

Troops were ordered to the town 300 miles northwest of Bombay to help dig out the bodies and care for the survivors, but they were delayed by highways and rail lines washed out by the weeks of monsoon rains that weakened the dam.

Indian news agencies reported that the downpour swelled the Machu River until it flooded over the top of one dam and collapsed an earth dam below it. The dam break sent a flash flood down on Morvi, four miles downstream, late Saturday while most of the 60,000 people of the town were asleep.

The flood destroyed the city's telephone exchange, and word of the tragedy did not get out until Sunday morning. The waters drained off quickly, and the first reporters to reach the city said parts of it were blanketed by mud that reached the second floors of some buildings.

Keshubhai Patel, the agricultural minister of Gujarat state, said about 5,000 houses were destroyed or badly damaged.

Bodies were scattered along the streets and roadways. The body of one girl was impaled on a timber in the wreckage of her home. A weeping child searched for three brothers she said were swept off the roof of their home.

Most of the survivors were without food or safe drinking water, the United News of India reported.

The fate of hundreds of persons living in villages between the shattered dam and Morvi was not known.

Seven dam workers assigned to open the floodgates on one of the Machu dams were reported stranded on a 60-foot tower.

Flood alerts were issued for 16 other cities and towns in Gujarat, India's westernmost state, because of overflowing reservoirs. Officials reported that floods killed 42 persons in the state of Maharashtra, southeast of Gujarat, and Orissa, in the eastern part of the country, and millions of dollars worth of crops were lost.

State accreditation at least two years away

Christian school to open here

By GREG HARDIN
News Managing Editor

A "need" for a new type of education system has prompted two former Pampa residents to return home and establish a Christian school which teaches more than reading, writing and arithmetic.

Larry Taylor and his wife, Janet, have formed what they hope will be a unique type of school for the area — a school where academic subjects are blended with religious beliefs and where discipline is carried out.

Taylor and his wife have been teaching at the Amarillo Christian School for more than four years. They freely admit not all institutions of higher learning accept Christian school diplomas as readily as those from a state-regulated facility.

"Most of our students go into a seminary, so there is no problem getting our diplomas accepted," Taylor said. "But not all schools will accept our diplomas."

Taylor likened the new Christian school to Harvard University.

"Harvard is not accredited by the state, but it still turns out some of the finest lawyers in the country,"

Taylor said.

(Harvard University is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, having received its last review in 1977, according to Mrs. Janet Guinee of the NEASC. Harvard, however, does not hold its degree granting authority through the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education since, along with some 30 other Massachusetts schools, it operates under a legislative charter.)

While the new facility is not an accredited institution by the state, Taylor said it may become part of two religious organizations which sponsor schools.

"There is the American Association of Christian Schools and the Texas Association of Christian Schools that we could belong to," Janet Taylor said. "We will wait and see what our needs are (before asking for membership in either organization)."

Larry Taylor said several recent court decisions have decided in favor of Christian schools having the right to teach children without state accreditation.

The Taylors plan to operate the new school on funds collected as tuition.

"We will charge a fee of $55 per month for students enrolled in grades one through 12," Taylor said.

"And $50 per month for kindergarten students," Mrs. Taylor added.

Taylor estimates the school will operate on a budget of between $15,000 and $20,000 per year for the first year.

"We had 125 students in Amarillo and we had a budget of $65,000," Taylor said. But he said he didn't expect Pampa to produce that many students.

"We have had about 25 people inquire into the school, but we are just getting started now," he said.

According to the Texas Education Agency, a school must wait two years before becoming accredited under state law. It must also have a license to operate as an institution of learning.

Taylor said the school was associated with the Pampa Baptist Temple, but was separate from the church and received no aid from the Temple.

Tomorrow: News staffer Dan Lackey will look at what a school must do to get a license to operate in the state of Texas.

AN UNIDENTIFIED MARCHER with the Ku Klux Klan is searched by Montgomery, Ala., police after he and nearly 200 others were arrested Sunday on charges of violating the city's ordinance against parading without a permit.

Mayor helps halt Klan march

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Backed by riot-equipped police and packing a pistol on his hip, Mayor Emory Folmar kept his pledge that Ku Klux Klansmen would not threaten their white power march through his city without a parade permit.

Klansmen began the 50-mile march Thursday in Selma, walking the route of a historic civil rights protest with vows to go "arrested to the hilt," and to destroy any challenging enemy. But the end of the march, scheduled for the grounds of the Capitol, took place behind the barred windows of police vans on Sunday when nearly 200 Klansmen were arrested as they entered the city without the permit.

The white-robed, hooded marchers surrendered without resistance.

Bill Wilkinson, the imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and organizer of the march, was silenced as he and his followers were arrested by Police Chief Charles Swindall.

Speaking into a bullhorn, Swindall told the marchers: "You are violating the law by parading without a permit. You are now under arrest for that violation."

Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., then stepped forward to say, "We are marching for civil rights." But Swindall interrupted him, saying he could not speak because he was under arrest.

As the marchers were taken away, they chanted, "The K-K-K is here to stay." Police booked 186 adults and 12 juveniles for the parade law violation and released the adults on $500 bond each. The juveniles were detained until a hearing today.

Once freed, Wilkinson promised to try again.

"We will march to the Capitol in Montgomery and hold our rally," he said. "It may be six months."

It was an echo of his pledge of four days ago, when he and his band, jeered at by blacks, marched through Selma and across the Edmund Pettus Bridge, retracing the route taken in 1965 by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and his followers to open Southern voting booths to blacks.

"We are going through to the state Capitol," Wilkinson said as the marchers set out, "to erase the shame of the 1965 march to the white race." Said his spokesman, Bill Riccio: "If the enemy confronts us, we will destroy the enemy."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS.
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Positive or negative

From time to time, we think it's a good idea to explain our editorial philosophy at The News. New readers are continually added as people arrive in Pampa, and it is a good idea for us to sit down and examine how good a job we are doing in getting our message across to our readers.

We realize that our editorials are sometimes controversial and generate criticism — that is the way it should be. Our editorials should make our readers think.

The following is a brief outline of the basic views of this Freedom newspaper. We hope to show you that our editorial opinion is very positive — and not negative as some people would say.

The News is for private property rights for homeowners, businesses, industries and organizations.

The News is for human rights for every person. We object to government taking away the rights granted by God for any reason. At the same time we do not think government should try to "force" others to get into the human rights question. Government can only take away human rights, not grant them.

The News is for the free enterprise system that has given our people the highest standard of living ever known — and which government is trying to destroy.

We are for schools and colleges. But unlike some who think such places of higher learning must exist on government funding, we believe people should voluntarily support formal instruction.

We are for personal advancement.
We are for freedom of religion.
We are for freedom of choice.

We are for people of different opinions voluntarily sitting down together to discuss their views without government intervention.
We are for our young people.

We are for wage earners and businessmen to keep what they make and spend the money on what they want.
We are for private voluntary groups that do good for others.

We are for a good standard of living for everyone.
We are for the elimination of the military draft and compulsory service to any government or organization.

We are for people deciding their futures for themselves.
We are for farmers, who feed the world.

We are for people. Our overall view is that, while God gave mankind a dose of imperfection, he gave men and women moral agency, a mind to choose between right and wrong and to chart the future course.

We are for believing that imperfect man can raise the level of humanity higher and that, if he is free to control himself, he will make the right and moral decisions that will better his kind.

We are for upholding the libertarian principles and publishing a quality newspaper while we do it.

Nation's press

Winds of change hit banking

(Reason Magazine)

The past five years have witnessed a competitive revolution in the banking business. Not only has competition proliferated among banks, savings and loans, and credit unions, but there has also emerged a whole crop of "near-banks" that are giving the thrift institutions a real run for their money. The result (besides an explosion of credit) is likely to be the virtual deregulation of consumer banking.

Much of the competition has come about from the efforts of institutions to get around existing regulations, especially the Federal Reserve's Regulation Q. To get around Q's prohibition on paying interest on demand deposits (checking accounts), a whole raft of new devices has been created: NOW accounts, telephone transfer accounts, credit union share drafts, and automatic transfer accounts. To evade Q's savings account interest-rate ceilings, we have seen the creation of mininotes, floating rate notes, rising rate notes, pooled savings accounts, and money market funds.

In addition, the McFadden Act's prohibition on interstate bank branching is being circumvented (for loans) by the ability of banks to issue credit cards nationwide. Likewise, networks of automated teller machines — while forbidden to move deposits across state lines — can dispense cash without regard to state boundaries.

Finally, the newest competition is coming from such nonbanks as Sears, Roebuck and Merrill Lynch. Sears, via its Allstate Savings and Loan affiliate, is now offering to its 23 million credit card holders a check-processing service in conjunction with credit unions. It is also planning to sell $500 million in small-denomination notes directly to the public. Business Week quotes a banker as responding, "If that's not deposit-taking and they're not a bank, then I don't know what banking is." Neither does anyone else, these days. Merrill Lynch is now offering account-holders of $20,000 or more a way to write checks and make Visa card purchases using their margin accounts. All of this competition is causing the thrift institutions to chafe at their regulatory burdens. More and more state-chartered banks, for example, are leaving the Federal Reserve system, so that they can earn higher interest elsewhere on their reserves. In the past six years 337 have quit, 152 of them in just the past two years. The drop-out rate is greatest in New England, where NOW accounts have led to intense competition and lower bank profits. The Fed's response was the proposed Monetary Control Act of 1979, to force all banks, not just federally chartered ones, to be members. Rep. Ron Paul cast the deciding vote to kill this bill when it was before the House Banking Committee in March, but a weaker version is expected to be introduced later this year.

In April a federal appeals court ruled that three of the end-runs around present regulations are illegal: banks' automatic fund transfers, S and L's automated teller machines in supermarkets and department stores, and credit unions' share drafts. That dumped the whole problem in the lap of a reluctant Congress. It's not at all clear what Congress will do, but House Banking subcommittee chairman Fernand St. Germain says he favors letting all financial institutions compete on a straight price basis.

When that unwarranted optimism proved totally unfounded, industry officials copped with the problem by merely adjusting their projections — first to 10 percent, then 15 percent, then 20 percent. Today, surging imports account for 25 percent of all sales.

By ROBERT LeFEVRE

Newscasters and commentators have been telling us that President Carter has come down from the mountain to tell us about energy. The effect sought is comparison between Moses and Carter; between Sinai and Camp David. I don't think the parallel is going to jell. To me, the Carter mountain was only a hill. And it may have been the one in the nursery rhyme down which Jack fell after breaking his crown with Jill tumbling after.

There are so many errors in the Carter energy program from my point of view that I will merely attempt to tabulate the major ones without offering more than sketchy explanations, due to space limitations.

1. The one thing the Carter proposals will do, if followed, will be to complete the regimentation of the people of the United States. No longer may a person do as he pleases with his own resources. The concept of share and share alike is to turn us into a nation of sacrificial victims. What happens to freedom? It is wiped out. 1984?

Here we come in 1979.

2. America has been the envy of the world because of its economic ability to create and maintain a high standard of living for millions of the people living here. Carter is succumbing to that envy. From here on, we are to use no more energy than our green-eyed neighbors who constantly get aid from us. American standards, of necessity, now come down to theirs.

3. By starting at the wrong end of the line, Carter virtually assures us of not being able to solve our energy problems. He says, beginning at once, we will import no more oil than we did in 1977. Who does the president think he is, imposing his values on us as though his ideas have been lightning-carved upon living stone?

What Carter should have done is open the market, letting the people having the available cash buy whatever supplies of oil they fancy from anyone in the world having oil to sell. This would have freed up the market, brought incentive and ambition back to these shores, and encouraged solution to problems. It would have meant getting the government out of the oil business and letting the oil companies make the necessary investments if they thought it wise. Some would and some wouldn't. Great! That's what competition is all about. Now all competition is to cease with the government in control.

4. Next, comes the so-called windfall profits tax. What Carter should have done is remove all taxes—overt and covert—on gasoline. If he really had compassion for the American people as he pretends, the price of gasoline at the pumps could have come down by close to 50 percent by this simple device. True, the government would have to abandon some of its give-away programs. Possibly those programs wherein we give billions of dollars away to foreign regimes each year like those of Nicaragua and Iran presently unmourned and no-longer functional. These are the people who hate us most and who are most exultant when it turns out that we have a problem.

5. Along with the windfall profits gambit comes a proposed expenditure of some $142 billion with government taking over, putting up taxpayers' money, and getting ever more deeply involved in the creation of substitutes for petro-energy. Wrong again. That $142 billion is money we presently don't have. It will be borrowed, in essence, from the oil companies, who are expected to tax us for these sums. However, the oil companies, who now need approximately $35 million to drill one well (only one of six ever come in) won't get what they need. Since the money will have to be borrowed, the taxpayers will be called upon to pay interest on it meanwhile. If that doesn't help raise all the prices in the country a few more notches, I miss my guess.

6. This nation has been built around the automobile. Many of our major cities do not presently have viable alternative methods of transportation. But instead of encouraging the creation of new individualized means of getting about which helped to make this country great, Carter will encourage collective and public transportation, never as efficient, always more costly. And the costs here aren't even included in the $142 billion. Los Angeles alone could drink up that much cash to replace the big red cars and we still wouldn't have a system that would achieve much of anything. Except more debt and higher prices, of course.

7. I know of no other nation, with the possible exception of Australia, which is as dependent upon petro-energy for its production and continued development. By seeking to make us toe the mark established in foreign countries, Carter is providing a blueprint for the destruction of America as we now know it.

8. And as he goes about the job of completing the regimentation recommended by socialist sophists, Carter is asking for a rebirth of the American spirit of freedom and independence. This is no way to rebuild the American dream.

1. Government bureaucrats and the military will have all the gas they need.

2. You and I will need special permits to operate cars of more than two, three or four cylinders. (No wonder all the government emphasis on jogging recently). Coming events cast their shadows ahead of them. The politicians foresaw that we'd all be walking.

3. You and I will be forced to move to stylized domiciles clustering about our places of employment.

4. Vacation time will be federally granted on the share alike theme.

5. Any unusual activity...a picnic, a hike, a visit from friends will be approved from above because it would be unfair, in the current definition of "fair," for one person to have a picnic if all others didn't get a picnic, too.

6. Ambition and the hope of excellence will be attacked as decadent and capitalist. Instead, loyalty to the regime will become the high virtue and, in time, self-seeking will be classed with high treason.

7. Thanks to Mr. Carter, your grandchildren and great grandchildren will look up from their toil where they will be slaving for the state and marvel at the age through which we have lived and which is now closing. But they will not look up for long. A federal overseer will order them back to work. How else can we keep going? They will be asked.

8. I have an alternative suggestion for Mr. Carter. May I suggest that, like Mr. Nixon he do the decent thing, and resign?

Senate's appeal slips

By Richard E. Cohen
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Rep. Mickey Edwards recently decided that the House can be a home.

The Oklahoma Republican surprised many people both inside and outside his home state when he chose not to run for the Senate in 1980.

In doing so, he joined a growing number of congressional devotees who find the House a more interesting and combative political arena than the Senate.

Statewide polls had given Edwards a good chance to succeed retiring GOP Sen. Henry Bellmon in next year's election. But his refusal to run gives the Democratic Party a good chance to capture a seat in what is expected to be a bad year nationally for its senators.

Edwards, who has represented the Oklahoma City area in the House since 1977, said the "ego satisfaction" of serving in the Senate was not enough reason to make the race, which would require ignoring his family and his House seat and spending three to four days a week for more than a year getting known across Oklahoma.

He was under considerable pressure from GOP leaders to run for the seat to help the party win a Senate majority but, he decided, "ultimately it's my career."

One factor that influenced his decision was that "the Senate is filled with loners and I like working with people." He dismissed the prevailing notion that the Senate is higher ranking than the House. This view stems partly from the Senate's responsibility for ratifying treaties and confirming presidential nominations.

As the Senate regularly gets bogged down on a few major issues each year, however, many persons see it as a quiet debating society where fine points are thrashed out endlessly and little is ever resolved. By contrast, the House is like a raucous national town meeting where tough issues are raised and the votes counted.

The Senate is filled with big egos who appear regularly on national television. Few House members are recognized outside their districts; some are not even well-known on their home turf.

But the image of Senate majesty is becoming less appealing, as was shown by the defeat of more than one-third of all incumbents seeking new Senate terms in both 1976 and 1978.

In a body as large as the House, members have few committee assignments and can concentrate on issues important to them and their constituents. Edwards, for example, is the senior Republican on the subcommittee that deals with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and has regularly lambasted the regulatory agency for undue interference with businesses.

The House often is more feisty than the Senate and inclined to reflect public sentiment rather than the views of a few wise old men.

Although Democrats hold a 276-159 edge over Republicans in the House, Speaker Tip O'Neill and his lieutenants have to struggle to get a majority on tough issues. This results from the breakdown of the seniority system and the influx of new lawmakers who are better educated and more concerned than their predecessors about the national implications of their actions. No longer do they have to "go along to get along," as the legendary Speaker Sam Rayburn advised a generation ago.

Although some of these trends have been duplicated in the Senate, the walls still shake when committee chairmen are challenged.

For Mickey Edwards, it is enough reason to stay in the House. He likes his job and thinks he can get more done where he is.

For those who think a seat in the House gallery gives the best and cheapest entertainment in town, his decision is gratifying.

Mindless devotion

WASHINGTON (NEA) - There is no more pitiful example of the inability of an old dog to learn new tricks than the domestic auto industry's continued resistance to the production and sale of compact, economical passenger cars.

After almost three decades of constant incursions into their market by the producers of smaller and vastly more efficient imported cars, Detroit's automakers remain mindlessly devoted to oversized gas-guzzlers.

In the midst of the recent increase in gasoline prices to the dollar-a-gallon level, for instance, General Motors Corp. mounted a major advertising campaign to sell its Oldsmobile Delta 88 to those who don't want to settle for less than full-size comfort.

With motorists increasingly worried about miles-per-gallon efficiency, GM is touting a new measurement called miles-per-tankful. By that standard, the Oldsmobile is a champion because it has a huge 25-gallon gas tank. Ford Motor Co. has launched an identical promotional effort on behalf of its Ford LTD.

Because the country's largest automakers remain oblivious to the concept of fuel economy, the inventory of unsold domestic cars now stands at 2 million vehicles — the highest level in the industry's history.

Yet the automakers continue to deceive themselves, proclaiming that big car sales will pick up as soon as the current gasoline crisis is forgotten.

Recent history suggests otherwise. When German's Volkswagen began exporting the now-famous Beetle to the United States in 1950, America's automakers were confident that imports would never account for even 5 percent of the country's total passenger-car sales.

When that unwarranted optimism proved totally unfounded, industry officials copped with the problem by merely adjusting their projections — first to 10 percent, then 15 percent, then 20 percent. Today, surging imports account for 25 percent of all sales.

Attorney wants controls on malpractice suit filers

DALLAS (AP) — Attorney Ellis Rubin, sometimes called a maverick by his brother barristers, is forming an organization to make filing malpractice suits a risky business — for lawyers.

Rubin says doctors and lawyers subject to malpractice suits ought to be able to countersue the attorneys who represent their accusers. So he organized Lawyers for Protecting People from Malicious and Unjustified Lawsuits, Inc.

The infant group, Lawyers for Protecting People from Malicious and Unjustified Lawsuits, Inc., was unveiled at the American Bar Association convention here this weekend.

"We want to stop unfounded malpractice suits," Rubin said. "We feel the filing of these suits clogs up the courts, slowing the wheels of justice and puts everything on the back burner."

Rubin said his organization pioneers what he termed "the next field of law... the field of legal malpractice."

"I believe there will be a good deal of opposition from lawyers who make their living threatening to file lawsuits or filing lawsuits," Rubin said. "But some attorneys feel the bar has to be cleaned up. Too many lawyers try to bludgeon a settlement out of a client."

"Many negligence cases are filed to get a fast insurance settlement."

Al Ellis, former president of the Dallas Trial Lawyers Association, said he thought attorneys who file "frivolous" lawsuits ought to be sued.

"I really don't have any problem with it," said Ellis, who has represented clients in personal injury cases. "The biggest problem is that so much of the time, the filing of a lawsuit is a judgment call. If the lawyer has the smallest amount of fact that he thinks might back up his claim, he has the duty to file a lawsuit."

Ellis said difficulties might arise in the definition of a "frivolous lawsuit."

"I don't think you could define it," he said.

"It is just like a client suing a lawyer for malpractice, only it will be a lot harder to prove that lawsuit that was filed was frivolous than to prove that a lawyer was negligent in some way."

"Frivolous to me means there is no basis in fact."

Rubin's crusade began in 1977 when he represented Dr. John Sullivan, a physician from Fort Pierce, Fla. Sullivan had been sued twice for malpractice, only to have the cases dropped on the eve of the trial.

Seeking recourse against the attorneys who filed the malpractice suits, Sullivan asked Rubin to countersue. Rubin said no law governing the matter existed, so he sued.

A Florida jury awarded Sullivan $175,000 in damages from one attorney. That case is now on appeal before the Florida Court of Appeals. A suit against the second attorney is pending.

As a result of the Sullivan case, Florida law now requires attorneys to have a statement from a doctor that says another doctor did something wrong and a statement from another attorney saying there are grounds for a lawsuit, Rubin said.

Ellis said he would oppose similar specific restrictions.

"As a practical matter, you would be making a paperwork battle out of it," he said. Rubin has been the prime mover in other notable changes in court systems.

When detaining 15-year-old Ronnie Zamora on a murder charge, he claimed the youth was "intoxicated" by television when the killing occurred. The trial was televised, blaring new trails in television courtroom coverage. But Zamora was convicted.

He also won a battle against the National Football League's mandatory local television blackouts of televised football games.

Rubin said he hopes the possibility of a countersuit will make attorneys think twice before filing a pleading and eventually unclog backed up court dockets.

Ellis agreed that could be the effect, but said the opposite could be true.

American Bar Association looks at media coverage in courtroom

DALLAS (AP) — "Cameras in the courtroom," a growing phenomenon resoundingly rejected by the American Bar Association earlier this year, has confronted its detractors at close range.

The ABA, an influential group representing a majority of the nation's 450,000 lawyers, sponsored two unusual courtroom sessions Sunday to explore the advantages and disadvantages of the use of electronic and photographic media equipment in the courtroom.

Both proceedings, one a mock state Supreme Court argument on the pros and cons of such news coverage, were televised over closed-circuit monitors in separate rooms.

Despite a vote by the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates last February against altering a 42-year ban on camera coverage of trials and appellate hearings, 21 states now allow some form of television, radio and photographic coverage in their courts.

ABA President S. Shepherd Tate, a camera-coverage advocate, insisted that Sunday's program was not aimed at showing the association the error of its ways but merely an "educational process." Tate, a Memphis, Tenn., lawyer, conceded, however, that "in time (the issue) will come up again before the House of Delegates."

Although the ABA's policy is merely advisory, it is believed to be a key factor in most states and the federal judicial system maintaining an absolute ban on such in-court media coverage.

The program was designed to show television's development of sophisticated, unobtrusive technology since the days when TV coverage of highly publicized criminal trials such as that of Billie Sol Estes led to overturned convictions.

The Supreme Court in 1965 ruled that television coverage of Estes' fraud trial denied him a fair trial.

In Sunday's mock courtroom debate, New York lawyer Floyd Abrams told a panel of judges that improved technology has made television "a medium whose time has come."

"We seek no absolute rule of coverage. We seek an end to an absolute rule of exclusion," Abrams said.

Washington lawyer Robert Hanley, who argued that appellate hearings but not criminal trials should be televised, said:

"The question is not whether the courthouse doors are to be opened or closed (but) how open this public trial has to be. Not so public as to jeopardize the integrity of the court. Not so public as to deny a fair trial."

In another courtroom, a mock criminal trial was televised by a single, silent camera. Lawyers attending the ABA's national convention could walk from the courtroom to a nearby room to watch the televised version for comparison.

Several news organizations coordinated the sessions under the ABA's aegis.

Nine states now permit some form of television, radio or photographic coverage of courtroom proceedings. They are Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, New Hampshire, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin.

Twelve states now permit some coverage on an experimental basis. They are Alaska, Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

Sentences set for two men in District Courts

A 17-year-old Pampa man was sentenced to three years adult probation and fined $350 Friday in 223rd District Court after pleading guilty to charges of burglary in connection with the June 9 breaking and entering of a Texaco Service Station on Price Road.

Chris Dixon testified that he was riding with a juvenile friend in the friend's pickup truck when the youth said he was stopping at the service station to use the restroom. The youth then said he intended to break into the station, Dixon said.

"I didn't really want to go along with it," Dixon said under questioning by District Attorney Harold Comer, adding that he agreed, however, to act as "a lookout."

The break-in attempt was thwarted when the two were shot with BBs from a shotgun by a property owner who had spotted them.

Dixon, who was struck with four BBs in the left leg, said that they drove to the Plainsman Motel. He then testified that he called his father and informed him of what had happened.

Comer asked Dixon if he understood "that to aid and abet criminal offense makes you just as guilty as the one who actually commits the offense. Serving as a lookout makes you just as guilty."

Dixon said he understood.

The verdict and sentence were set by Judge Don Cain, who acted upon a recommendation reached by Comer and defense attorney James Bowers in a plea bargaining arrangement.

In 31st District Court, Timothy Blocker was sentenced to six years in the Texas Department of Corrections by Judge Grainger McIlhenny after having his probation revoked for a 1977 conviction of unlawful delivery of marijuana.

Blocker was arrested in Miami, Fla., in July and returned to Grainger County on Aug. 6 after failing to report to probation officers or pay probation fees.

Blocker's probated sentence was reduced from eight years.

REGION TEXAS/OKLAHOMA Capitol regulars bide time between legislative sessions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There's one question you should never ask anyone who works around the old pink granite Capitol in Austin.

"What do you find to do when the Legislature is not in session?"

That question will get you a hard look, and maybe sharp answers.

"We're trying to get ready for the next legislative session," says Don Rives, top aide to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

"Hell, we're still trying to find out what they did to us in the last session," said a top agency employee who understandably wanted to remain anonymous.

Speaker Bill Clayton says this is the time for the Legislature to be sure state agencies are following through with the policies laid down by the lawmakers.

"It is imperative that the Legislature strengthen its procedures for overseeing the expenditures and activities of state agencies," Clayton said in a special message a few days ago.

"During the interim period (the House and Senate) standing committees have primary responsibility for monitoring agencies to determine whether they operate in accord with their statutory mandate."

Then there is always the special session that Gov. Bill Clements says he will call — when most inappropriate to legislators.

When Clements sets a date for the special session, Clayton says, House committees will go to work immediately on issues to be debated.

Public hearings already have been held on wiretapping legislation. The House Constitutional Amendments Committee is ready to look into a proposed constitution change for initiative and referendum, which Clements says will be the real reason for the special session.

In addition to regular Senate and House committees, there are 31 interim committees authorized by the recent Legislature to meet, hear testimony and make recommendations to the 1981 Legislature.

One House committee will look into the possibility of establishing state veterans' cemeteries. Another was asked to determine if a link exists between organized crime and exploitation of children in pornography. Another will examine the difficulty that the elderly and handicapped have in obtaining insurance. Another will hear testimony on unsolicited commercial telephone calls. Still another will try to develop a model hurricane evacuation plan.

A special Senate committee will look into the education of migrant children. Another will study gasohol as an alternative fuel source. Other Senate interim committees will study the administration of charitable organizations and possible ways of reducing paperwork in state government.

Just because Texas lawmakers are not in Austin does not mean they are not spending money.

Each senator and House member continues to get his or her $600 monthly salary.

Houston voters approve change in city council

In a federally ordered election, Houston residents have approved a plan to increase the city council to 14 members with nine elected from single-member districts.

And Irving residents approved a Proposition 13-type proposal to clamp a 6 percent ceiling on overall property tax increases and restricted the tax hike for any one resident to 8 percent.

In other weekend elections around the state:

—Balch Springs residents turned down a proposal to become part of its big neighbor, Dallas, by a margin of 1,948 to 648.

—Abilene citizens denied pay raises to their city's firefighters and police officers, who had asked for a general monthly base pay of $1,290 — a 35 percent increase for firemen and a 29 percent increase for police.

A near-record turnout of Irving residents approved the tax-limiting measure by a 3,914-3,282 margin.

"We're tickled to death at how it turned out," said Roy Brown, co-chairman of the Irving Concerned Taxpayers Association. "We had an almost record number of voters turn out today."

Tax Assessor-Collector Don Caldwell said, "I didn't expect it to pass. I don't see how it can help the city."

Houston voters approved the city council change after the Justice Department ruled that annexation of two predominantly white suburbs had diluted minority voting strength.

Prosecutor opens state's case in second Davis murder-for-hire trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A young prosecutor goes before a jury today to spell out the state's murder-for-money case against millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis.

The opening statement by chief prosecutor Jack Strickland, 36, was to be the prelude to testimony from perhaps a dozen or so state witnesses.

Strickland did not divulge the order of the witnesses, but was expected to lead off with State District Judge Joe Eidson, 61, target of the alleged murder solicitation scheme.

The state contends Davis, 45, plotted the contract murder of Eidson and others last summer and delivered $25,000 to a go-between when convinced Eidson was dead.

The defense, headed by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, maintains Davis himself was the target, a "patsy" in a conspiratorial frame orchestrated by his ex-wife, Priscilla.

A jury of eight men and four women was chosen last week to hear the case, expected to run between two and four months.

An earlier attempt to try Davis on the murder-for-hire charge ended in a mistrial Jan. 22. A Houston jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of conviction.

The state based its case on two tape-recorded conversations last August between Davis and FBI informant David McCrory, the key prosecution witness.

The FBI recordings coupled with videotape of the second meeting purports to show the crime unfolding and the exchange of $25,000 in blood money.

Davis testified in Houston he was duped into believing he was cooperating with the FBI when he discussed mass murder and delivered the money to McCrory.

He said he also played along with McCrory to head off an alleged plot on his own life by Priscilla, 38, from whom he was divorced last spring.

Davis since has married his longtime girlfriend, Karen Master, 30, a principal in both the Houston trial and an earlier murder trial in Amarillo.

The Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of killing his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, Priscilla's daughter by a previous marriage.

The child was one of two persons slain in a 1976 shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion, occupied at the time by Priscilla and her lover, Stan Farr, 30.

Farr was killed, Priscilla wounded and a young mansion visitor crippled by a bullet lodged in his spine in the midnight gunfire.

The shootings occurred about eight hours after Eidson ordered Davis to increase his estranged wife's support payments from $3,500 to $5,000 monthly and granted her request for a delay in the divorce trial.

Eidson testified as a state witness in the Amarillo trial and, after the acquittal, refused to surrender jurisdiction in the divorce case that dated back to 1974.

The judge told the Houston jury how he posed as if dead for FBI snapshots designed to convince Davis the contract on his life had been fulfilled.

Weather FORECAST for Tuesday

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms hit far southwest Texas about midnight and continued into the pre-dawn hours today. El Paso got .28 inch of rain from one of the storms.
The rest of Texas, from the Pecos Valley eastward, enjoyed clear skies, light winds and mild temperatures, except for some patchy low clouds over the Hill Country.
The National Weather Service reported temperatures generally in the 70s overnight, with cooler readings in the Panhandle and in sections where it was raining.
The forecast was for partly cloudy skies in most of Texas, with widely scattered thunderstorms in the southwest during the morning spreading to extreme South and West Texas by afternoon.

TUESDAY'S FORECAST calls for a broad band of showers extending from Maine and New England southward through the Ohio Valley and covering the Midwest north to the Pacific Northwest. (AP Laserphoto)

'Strange critter' 98 years

By TAD BARTMUS
Associated Press Writer

LYONS, Kan. (AP) — Wally Lattimer says he's beginning to feel plumb played out these hot summer days. Can't keep the pace of the old days — say, five years ago, when he was 93.

He used to rise before dawn, but now he sleeps till 6 a.m. He stays in the field only 12 hours a day, instead of 14. And when it's 103 in the shade, he heads for the house and a cold glass of beer.

At 98, he's a farmer, philosopher and traveler who says he'll never retire. He swears he's never had a backache or a headache, and remembers being sick just once — "got down with the flu in 1918."

He lives alone just outside this central Kansas town, along Little Cow Creek in the white wooden house he built in 1916. He's outlived two wives, raised nine children and buried one, and has 19 grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

He's never worn glasses, and his smile shows off a full set of teeth. The secret, he says, comes in two parts: "I don't worry and I don't get mad."

"Young bucks today won't hardly take hold of a hoe handle, let alone get down on their hands and knees in the dirt. I've done a lot of hard work in my life, and as you can see, it hasn't killed me," he says. "I've never owned a truck, never taken out a mortgage or a loan, never had a traffic ticket, and paid cash for everything."

"I guess in today's world, I'm a pretty strange critter."

Convinced that "you are what you eat," Lattimer keeps his weight at a trim 130 pounds and eats mostly fruit and vegetables, though he likes a little chicken now and then, or one of the catfish he occasionally pulls out of Cow Creek.

He says he enjoys television "but I don't watch sob stories or shoot-em-ups, which doesn't leave much else. I like the news. I read books, but I don't read fiction if I know that's what it is."

During winters, he travels. He says he's logged 48,000 miles on pleasure cruises to the South Seas and Alaska. And he's gone to Colorado every year since 1908.

April through October finds Lattimer at home, supervising his 40 acres of wheat and his 11-acre garden. By August, that rich patch of creek bottom is the lushest salad bowl in Rice County.

Lattimer's never advertised his fruits and vegetables for sale. But for the past 60 years there have been minor traffic jams in his driveway, as local customers crowd in.

This summer he has peas, tomatoes, four kinds of squash, a sweet corn field you can get lost in, a watermelon patch that will yield truckloads.

He recently turned over his wheat and milo farming to his son, James Lattimer of Newton, but he still helps out. The farm, though, is still all his.

As for retirement: "I guess I'll retire when they finally haul me off in the box."

LYONS, Kan. — Wally Lattimer, 98, says he's feeling plumb played out these hot summer days and has cut back on his time in the field to only 12 hours a day. The central Kansas farmer, philosopher and traveler says he'll never retire and that he's been sick only one day, when he had the flu in 1918.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Sick stepfather

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: Please help me. When I was 7 my mother remarried. Mother worked the night shift and I was left in my stepfather's car. Soon he was doing unspeakable things to me and said he would kill me if I ever told my mother.

I am now 15 and pregnant and my stepfather is responsible, scared and confused. — Nameless, Windsor, Ontario, Canada

Nameless: Your stepfather is a very sick man and he has been a very long time. Tell two people what has been happening and do immediately. First, tell your clergyman or if you don't have one, any clergyman (ask a friend if you could talk to hers).

After you do this, talk to your mother, tell her that you have talked to a clergyman, then tell her — everything.

Dr. Wallace: I have this so-called friend and the only time she calls me is when she wants to swim in my pool or when her friends go on vacation.

When her friend returns, she never calls except when she wants to take a dip.

Since we will be going to the same high school in September, I do want her as an enemy.

Please tell me what to do. — Susan, Kingsman, Ariz.

Susan: The next time the girl calls, tell her that you have plans and don't plan to swim that day, but that you will call her soon and invite her. This way, you are in control of the situation, not her.

Dr. Wallace: I have a problem that might not seem very serious but it is really important to me.

My dad and I want to get a dog but my mom says no. We're talking to her but it is no use.

Our last dog died and we think Mom's afraid of going through hardship again. Please help. — Kay, Klamath Falls, Or.

Kay: The next time you and your parents are driving, have Dad make an unexpected visit to the Klamath Falls Animal Shelter. Or Mom sees these wonderful "friends" groomed and ready for a good home, her heart will melt and it will be impossible to say no!

Affluent wives enter a labor force, too

Do wives who enter the labor force do so because their husbands don't earn good salaries?

Not necessarily so, says the American Council of Life Insurance, analyzing data from the Department of Labor, the Council found that almost 60 percent of the increase in the number of working wives between 1960 and 1977 occurred among women whose husbands' incomes in the upper and upper-middle ranges.

DEAR ABBY

Review your clues before you accuse

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to STUMPED, who discovered that her turquoise and silver ring was missing from the jewelry box on her dressing table. (It wasn't expensive but had sentimental value.) She asked if she should question the lady who had come to dinner that evening. (After dinner, the guest asked to lie down for a few minutes.)

You advised STUMPED not to approach the guest on the chance that she could be mistaken. I disagree with you, Abby.

Because their husbands work together doesn't mean the lady was honest. I know the type. I'm pretty sure she asked to lie down because she wanted to snoop in the bedroom and find what she could pick up.

You should have advised STUMPED to call the lady and tell her the ring was missing, and ask if she happened to see.

CAUTIONS
DEAR CAUTIONS: I intuitively feel that accusations should not be made without concrete evidence. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for advising STUMPED not to accuse the lady she suspected of taking her ring just because she had napped in the room where it was.

I still get a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach when I recall an incident that happened to me 43 years ago.

When I was 11, I went to a birthday party at the home of a classmate I'll call Johnny.

The following day Johnny's parents came to our house to talk to me and my parents about a gold pocket watch on a chain that was missing from the drawer in the master bedroom. They were sure it was there before the party, and it wasn't there afterward, and someone said they saw me go into that bedroom.

It's true I did go into that room, but only to use the bathroom because the other one was being used.

I was so hurt and upset at the accusation that my face turned beet red and I stuttered and stammered and burst into tears as I proclaimed my innocence.

I remember the woman saying, "I can always tell when someone is lying, and if ever I saw the look of guilt on a face, that boy is guilty!"

Thank God my parents believed me and stood up for me.

Even though I was innocent, I hated to go to school the next day because I knew all the kids would be talking about me.

A few days later, Johnny told me that the "lost" watch had been found! It seemed his little sister had taken it to play with.

REMEMBERS IT WELL
DEAR ABBY: I hope STUMPED takes your advice in regard to the missing ring.

I am a home health aide who was accused of taking "four beautiful linen napkins." I was told emphatically, "I remember seeing them on the hall table while you were here, and after you left, they were missing."

Abby, it was an awful feeling to be unjustly accused. I reported the incident to my office and never returned to that house. Two months later, my accuser phoned my office to say that she had found the missing napkins in the ironing board that pushes up into the wall! She was advised to call me and apologize, which she did.

I'm glad she made those phone calls because I learned that she died two weeks later.

NO NAME, PLEASE
DEAR ABBY: You were dead wrong when you advised that woman not to mention the fact that a ring was missing from her jewelry box after a visitor had taken a nap in her room.

If she suspected the guest had stolen it, she should have spoken up and at least given the guest a chance to defend herself or return it.

Now she will always suspect the woman of being a thief.

BEEN THERE IN EUREKA
DEAR BEEN THERE: You could be right, but I remain unconvinced. Readers?

Dr. Lamb

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries. I've had cataracts removed from both eyes.

I got new glasses just a few months ago and in that short time my vision has worsened. I also have trouble remembering names. For the past year or two, I have become forgetful and somewhat confused.

Is there anything I can do to retard the hardening of the arteries? Could hardening of the arteries cause me to lose my mind altogether and become completely confused later on?

I'm 77 and know these conditions are common with older folks.

DEAR READER — First, about eyes. Vision depends on more than the lens in the eye. Cataracts involve the developing of an opacity in the lens of the eye itself. When the opacity becomes sufficient to obstruct light rays entering the eyes, it can cause blindness. When a cataract is mature or causing significant difficulty in seeing, the lens can be removed as it was in your case.

The problem is you can also have changes in the retina at the back of the eye. This is the screen where the visual images are projected by the lens. The retinal screen can be affected by circulation to the eye and you'll have to depend on your eye doctor's evaluation of your status. If the retina has too many changes in it, then the improvement that you might expect from cataract surgery doesn't occur.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 13 - 6 on Cataracts. Other readers who want this information can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Changes in the arteries can lead to changes in brain cells. The brain cell changes can also occur without significant changes in circulation. We have a lot yet to learn about this area. We don't have any really good answers for most of these cases. In some instances, if you can identify a circulation problem in the arteries of the neck, surgery can be used to improve circulation.

About the only thing I can offer in that department is to have an evaluation by a neurologist to make certain that you don't have some underlying medical problem that can be corrected. If the problem really is the changes in brain cells often seen with age, limited things can be done. There are medicines that help to relieve associated anxiety and depression.

It's important in such instances to remain active, have goals and try to maintain your interests in life. It also helps to stay in the same surroundings if at all possible. Familiar objects and surroundings seem to help reinforce the functions of the brain and enable the person to avoid some confusion.

Travelers' diarrhea can be avoided

BY JOE GRAEDON
TRAVELERS' DIARRHEA CAN BE AVOIDED

Q. I'll soon be making a business trip to Africa. During my last visit, travelers' diarrhea interfered with my schedule. I had to stay in my hotel room, running back and forth to the bathroom for two whole days.

I have too many appointments this trip to take the "luxury" of recuperating in my hotel room. Is there any way to prevent travelers' diarrhea in the first place?

A. We can fully sympathize with your plight. On more than one occasion we too have been laid low with a case of "turista" during a trip. It can really put a cramp in your style.

There is some good news, however. Results of recent research offer relief for the harassed traveler. A carefully planned study carried out in Kenya revealed that a prophylactic course of the antibiotic Doxycycline could prevent travelers' diarrhea from striking.

This tetracycline-type of drug is most effective if you take one capsule (100 mg) each morning with breakfast — starting on the day you leave.

Unlike all other tetracycline antibiotics the effectiveness of Doxycycline won't be reduced if you take it with food or milk.

If you do receive a prescription for this drug there is one word of warning. Do not spend time in the sun. This medication can sensitize your skin to the sun's rays and lead to a very severe sunburn.

Pregnant women and children under eight years of age should avoid all tetracycline antibiotics (including Doxycycline) since these drugs can permanently stain developing teeth.

Good luck. We hope your trip is trouble free.

HER DOCTOR WON'T DESCRIBE NEW DRUG

Q. I've been taking HydroDiuril for years. My neighbor, who also has high blood pressure, was recently switched from HydroDiuril to a new drug called Selacryn.

She raves about it because her joints don't hurt anymore with Selacryn.

When I asked my doctor if I could take it, too, he said something about an interaction with my blood thinner, Coumadin. I don't understand why my doctor said no. Can you explain?

A. Selacryn (ticrynafen) is a wonderful new drug for some folks, but it's not for everyone. People with gout benefit because the drug lowers high uric acid levels which can cause joint pain and other symptoms.

In contrast, HydroDiuril (hydrochlorothiazide) and related drugs raise uric acid in blood and can make gout worse.

Selacryn won't do a thing for achy joints due to old-fashioned "rheumatiz," though. It is no more effective at lowering blood pressure than hydrochlorothiazide and it is a LOT more expensive. One hundred tablets will cost the consumer about $20.00 whereas the price of generic hydrochlorothiazide should be less than $4.00 for the same number of pills.

Primaries getting tougher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite all efforts to bring the quadrennial presidential marathon under control, 1980 candidates can look forward to the toughest grind ever, including as many as 35 primaries.

Although the situation is still unsettled in some states, it is fairly certain that there will be at least twice as many primaries next year as the 17 in 1968 when the reform movement began within the major parties to open up the delegate selection process. There were 31 primaries in 1976.

Although they will have varying degrees of power over the national convention delegations, they will in some way or other affect 2,548 of the Democrats' 3,331 delegates and 1,480 of the Republicans' 1,993 — the largest percentage ever selected, instructed or advised by presidential primaries.

In addition to the proliferation of primaries, the convention states are becoming just as demanding. Gone are the days when deals were made with key leaders to deliver a state. Now every delegate is fought over in every caucus.

Next year also will be the first when the new public financing system for presidential election will have full effect, probably assuring longer fights between the winners become apparent.

A Supreme Court decision ordering the restructuring of the Federal Election Commission cut off government funds for the candidates at a critical point in the 1976 primaries, forcing several to drop out sooner than they wanted.

In 1980, with the legal issue settled and the commission experienced in handling the flow of money, there should be more candidates with enough money to go the distance. The treasury matches, dollar-for-dollar, contributions raised from private donors once a candidate reaches a $100,000 threshold.

Complicating the lives of politicians also is the pattern of the primaries. The early primaries still hold prestige, but most of the delegates to the nominating conventions are elected in the later ones.

A candidate who runs poorly in New Hampshire in February may not lose many delegates but he may lose enough face and momentum to cost him delegates in Illinois in March or California in June.

Already there are 10 registered candidates for the Republican nomination. On the Democratic side only President Carter and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. are registered, but several draft efforts have been launched to get Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts into the race.

Although most candidates have not been as assertive as President Carter, who declares he will run in every state, they generally are planning to run in as many as they can.

"You almost have to take them one at a time and prepare for all of them," said one campaign official. "But that takes a bunch of money. You have to go to the early ones and see what you can do from there."

The Democrats have passed a new rule to shorten the primary season by requiring delegate selection to be held between March 11 and June 10, but New Hampshire is expected to be exempted one more time to keep its first-in-the-nation status.

Puerto Rico is threatening to jump in with its first presidential primary on Feb. 17, but New Hampshire has a law automatically shifting its primary a week ahead of any other state.

Meanwhile, the caucuses which begin picking delegates to state conventions begin as early as Jan. 21 in Iowa.

There will be at least five new primaries next year — Connecticut, Kansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Puerto Rico. While Mississippi also has a new primary law, its Democrats have decided against holding one, and the GOP won't decide until the fall.

Department wants milk program cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is working on program budgets for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1980, a month before the presidential election, and a dairy-state senator hopes that, in the process, a White House habit dating back two decades will be broken.

Every recent year, regardless of who's in office, the Agriculture Department asks in its budget to have the special milk program sharply reduced.

President Carter has been no exception, seeking this year to cut the program from $142 million to $32 million by withdrawing it from schools that serve federally subsidized lunches and breakfasts. Those meals include a half-pint of milk.

The program provides an extra half-pint of milk at schools that want to offer it, with USDA paying 7.75 cents per carton.

With identical regularity, the House Appropriations Committee has restored the funds each year and the program is seldom an issue when the USDA budget hits the House floor.

In the Senate, the result is always the same — the money stays — but there is usually a fight. For years, the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., overwhelmed his colleagues in the periodic debates on the program.

Now Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., is the recognized chief debater for the pro-milk side.

This year, observers thought he would lose, at least temporarily, in the Senate. Budget-cutting fever was high.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., the ranking Republican on the Budget Committee and, like Proxmire, a senior Appropriations Committee member, was leading the administration's charge for a $110-million cut and, later, a smaller one.

He called the program "unnecessary excess generosity."

Having lost several times in committee, Bellmon withdrew his amendment on one bill to cut the subsidy to 5 cents a carton — a $40 million savings — after hours of full-Senate debate apparently convinced him he still did not have the votes.

When he tried it later on the actual appropriations, he lost 66 to 32. Proxmire has been gleeful, and the $142 million is assured for fiscal 1980.

But, he said late last week, "There is a strong need to turn the Carter administration around on the question of support for the special milk program. Otherwise we face the prospect of yet another struggle ... for this vital program."

"It is time for this administration to change its tune and to join in the solid (congressional) support," he added.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, from neighboring dairy-state Minnesota, is also adamant about it, however.

Proxmire noted that the $142 million represents no gain to account for inflation. That was "a prudent and necessary step on behalf of a program that is important to the good health and nutrition of our children as well as helpful to the dairy farmer and dairy industry," he said.

Seventy percent of the extra milk is consumed by pupils who don't buy school lunches or have them provided free, he says. In most schools, however, those pupils pay 5 to 10 cents a day for the subsidized milk.

Because it is seldom wasted, milk is one of the most cost-effective items in the child-nutrition programs, he says.

Proxmire maintains that milk consumption would drop 28 percent nationwide if the less than 2 billion half-pints weren't subsidized. That would mean lower dairy prices — now above support levels — and government buying of excess supply.

This fiscal year, USDA has had to buy almost 178 million pounds of nonfat dry milk, compared with almost 320 million for the same period a year earlier. It had 498 million pounds on hand July 31, its records show.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has reopened and extended until Sept. 10 the opportunity for industry and the public to comment on a proposed regulation allowing meat processors to use tenderizers in pork, lamb, mutton, goat and mature-poultry meat.

The tenderizers — called proteolytic enzymes — come from various plant and mold sources, are officially considered safe by the Food and Drug Administration and are allowed now for use in beef.

WASHINGTON (AP) — For lack of enough businesses to regulate, the Agriculture Department has dropped rules covering handlers of live poultry in Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Newark, N.J., and surrounding areas.

The 44-year-old regulations date from congressional action that required licensing of all live-poultry dealers and handlers there. Agricultural Marketing Service officials said. But now such firms are "virtually nonexistent."

PLO rebuffs Carter, demands recognition

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization has rebuffed overtures from the Carter administration and again demanded recognition of the Palestinians' right to their own state, in effect killing chances for a change in U.S. policy feared by Israel.

At an often-heated weekend policy meeting, the 57-member Palestine Central Council decided that U.S. feelers toward the PLO were a ploy to divide moderates from radicals in the eight groups under the PLO umbrella.

The council, the PLO's political assembly, decided unanimously to reject any dialogue with the United States "as long as Washington refuses to recognize the PLO and the legitimate rights of our people" to an independent state. PLO spokesman Yasser Abd-Rabbo told reporters after the council meeting broke up Sunday morning.

"Most of the speakers last night were unanimous that what's being said about a dialogue between the United States and the PLO are only maneuvers aimed at clouding the Arab position and dividing the Arabs," he added.

He said the council also decided to reject any modification of U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 — as it already rejects Resolution 242 — that does not call specifically for establishment of an independent Palestinian state and does not recognize the PLO as the "sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

The Security Council is to meet Aug. 23 to take up a resolution sponsored by Kuwait expanding Resolution 242 to state that the Palestinians have a right to an independent state. The United States, under pressure from Israel, has said it would veto this, but it has been reported offering to accept an amendment calling for recognition of the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians, the language of the Camp David agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Informed sources said Arafat opened the meeting with a one-hour report in which he described his recent meetings with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt as part of an American plan to get the Palestinians involved in the Camp David peace process.

 MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young says he will back President Carter if the president chooses to run for re-election, as is expected.
 "A first-term Democrat, no matter who he is, cannot do as much as a second-term Democrat," Young told 1,000 persons Saturday at a tribute to black clergymen. "And President Carter will be a second-term Democrat."
 Young said Carter deserves the continued support of blacks who helped elect him in 1976, regardless of whether Sen. Edward Kennedy, a favorite of many blacks, enters the race.

Seattle runs over Cowboys to remain undefeated

SEATTLE (AP) — Two exhibition games do not a season make, but the Seattle Seahawks will take the results and file them away in their memories.

For good reason. After victories over the Minnesota Vikings and Dallas Cowboys, two National Football League powers that were models for Seattle's franchise, the Seahawks can't be blamed if they start thinking about playoffs.

The fourth edition of the Seahawks might be that good. "I thought Seattle was pretty good myself," Cowboy coach Tom Landry said after the Seahawks' 27-17 victory at the Seattle Kingdome Sunday night.

"I was very impressed with their linebackers and I was very impressed with their offense. They beat us decisively, both physical and technique wise."

Though Dallas hardly looked like the club that made it to its fifth Super Bowl last January, the Seahawks were impressive on a night when their offensive star, quarterback Jim Zorn, played only a little more than one quarter.

"This was a real confidence builder for us," smiled Seahawk running back Sherman Smith, who sprinted 41 and 19 yards for touchdowns in the opening half. "Isn't Dallas in the Super Bowl every year?"

Not quite but the Cowboys have made a record five Super Bowl appearances, including the last two.

Appearing on national television for the first time in the history of the franchise, Seattle spotted Dallas a first-quarter touchdown — on a 17-yard pass from Roger Staubach to Jay Saldi — and then went to work.

On Smith's first score, his 19-yard run, he wasn't touched. On his second touchdown, his 41-yard romp, three Cowboys got their hands on him near the line of scrimmage but he burst free to go into the end zone standing up.

After Rafael Septien kicked a 38-yard field goal in the third quarter, Efran Herrera, who missed field goal tries of 39, 42 and 52 yards in the opening half, booted three-pointers from 32 and 21 yards out to make the score 20-10.

With 9:15 left in the game, reserve cornerback Kerry Justin made the first of his two fourth-period interceptions of Glenn Carano and raced it back 56 yards for a touchdown to virtually settle the outcome.

On the Justin interception, 37-year-old defensive end Carl Eller, the Seahawks' new acquisition from the Vikings, batted the ball out of Carano's grasp high into the air.

"I thought the Seahawks were a good team last year," said Eller, "and I think they'll be a better team this year."

The Seahawks rushed for a total of 194 yards and restricted the Cowboys to just 61 yards on the ground. Even Jack Patera, the Seattle coach who once played for the Cowboys, was impressed.

"It's hard to tell from training camp how good your running game is," said Patera. "It's a pleasure to see it work like that."

In other NFL preseason contests Sunday, the New York Jets downed Houston 26-14 and Los Angeles beat New England 15-3.

On Saturday, San Diego blanked Minnesota 19-0, Miami outdueled Tampa Bay 13-7, Oakland mauled San Francisco 41-10, Cleveland romped over Baltimore 24-3, Pittsburgh intercepted the New York Giants 10-3, Chicago defeated New Orleans 13-6, Detroit beat Buffalo

13-13, Denver outlasted Washington 13-6 and Cincinnati toppled Green Bay 20-5.

Rams 15, Patriots 3

Quarterback Pat Haden hooked up with Rod Phillips for an 18-yard touchdown and Vince Ferrigamo found Preston Dennard with a 16-yard scoring pass as Los Angeles dealt New England its first defeat in their last nine preseason games before a rained-out, wind-blown Schaefer Stadium crowd of 26,324.

The Patriots, who surrendered a safety in the first quarter when the Rams' Elvis Peacock blocked a Mike Patrick punt out of the end zone, got only a 31-yard field goal from David Posey in the second period.

Jets 26, Oilers 14

New York Coach Walt Michaels has labeled his team as being able to do anything at any time.

They did any and everything early and late Sunday en route to a 26-14 National Football League exhibition victory over the injured and error-prone Houston Oilers.

Early, Kevin Bell ran 21 yards for a touchdown with a blocked punt on the fourth play of the game to give the Jets a 7-0 lead. Later, punter Chuck Ramsey threw a fourth down pass for a 13-yard completion, and most any time, it seemed Pat Leahy was on the field kicking one of his four field goals.

"We can do anything at any time," Michaels said. "We were in great field position to try the fourth down pass but now everybody knows that Ramsey was a quarterback in college."

Michaels said both teams were ready to play.

"Our people were ready to play and have some fun," Michaels said. "And I think Houston was ready to play too. Their first touchdown drive was as complete a football team as I've seen in Houston."

But even on the scoring drive, Michaels had to praise the Jets. "You are on the right track when you force a team to use two fourth-down plays to get points on the board," Michaels said.

Michaels referred to a pair of fourth-down runs by Earl Campbell the first to keep the drive going, and the second for a one-yard touchdown run. Campbell, who led Houston rushers with 61 yards of 18 carries, also scored on a nine-yard run in the second quarter.

Leahy kicked first half field goals of 19 and 33 yards and added a 38-yard boot and career high 52 yarder in the second half.

Dykes, a rookie from southeastern Louisiana, charged in from the right side to block Cliff Parsley's first attempt of the game. Bell, who played college football at nearby Lamar University, came in from the left side and took the ball on the bounce.

"Somebody got a piece of me, but my momentum carried me to the ball," Dykes said.

Backup quarterback Matt Robinson, battling the Jets' Richard Todd for the starting job, started the third quarter and took New York to the go-ahead touchdown drive, capped by Scott Dierking's three-yard run.

"I guess that after all is said and done the loss is my fault," Oilers Coach Bum Phillips said. "I didn't have fresh people in when Dan Pastorini went into the game."

Pastorini, seeing his first action of the pre-season, threw an interception on his first pass and later was sacked to end another series. Backup Gifford Nielsen started and played most of the first three quarters.

The victory evened New York's record at 1-1 and the Oilers dropped to a 1-1 mark.

HOUSTON OILER receiver Robert Woods (83) and New York Jets defender Bobby Jackson (40) wait downfield for a pass from Houston quarterback Gifford Nielson. Woods caught the pass, good for a 52 yard Oiler gain, setting up a touchdown the next play. It was the last Houston TD of the day as the Jets won 26-14.

Connors claims Clay Court crown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert Lloyd have matured from their days as teen-age tennis stars, but they proved they're still masters on clay surfaces by capturing singles championships in the $275,000 U.S. Open Clay Court tournament.

Connors, the No. 1 seed, captured his fourth Clay Court title Sunday, defeating Argentina's Guillermo Vilas 6-1, 2-6, 6-4 in a nationally televised match.

On Saturday, Lloyd overcame old rival Evonne Goolagong Cawley 6-4, 6-3 for her fifth Clay Court championship.

And both figured the experience will give them momentum as they look ahead to the U.S. Open in New York.

"My game has been a little rocky because I had other things on my mind," said Connors, whose wife Patti gave birth to the couple's first child two weeks ago. "It's pretty hard to have a baby and just get him out of your mind."

"My tennis is fine now," he said. "However, my mind still wanders a little. My mom is helping me with everything. I'm lucky enough to have someone interested in me and my game."

"It's like I've got three people behind me. I've got a mom, a coach and a friend," he said in describing his relationship with his mother, Gloria.

"It's not getting easier," said Connors, who won here previously in 1974, 1976 and 1978. "The depth in men's tennis is incredible. And this is one of the bigger tournaments. It draws an outstanding international field and it takes great tennis to win."

Connors said he would play one more tournament, in Stowe, Vt., before the U.S. Open Aug. 27-Sept. 9.

Lloyd, who won here four consecutive years starting in 1972, also mentioned the stronger competition.

"I can't just show up and claim victory. I have to work for it, and it isn't getting easier."

said Lloyd, who had not played here since 1975 because of World Team Tennis commitments.

John McEnroe teamed with Gene Mayer to capture the men's doubles 6-4, 7-6 over Czechoslovakia's Jan Kodes and Tomaz Smid. Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith captured the women's doubles title 6-1, 6-0 over Penny Johnson and Paula Smith.

Connors said the secret to continued success is being able to remain motivated after so many years of competition.

"After five or six years of doing that, you've got to have something else to keep you pumping. Some people never find it," he said.

Connors, who earned $25,000 with his victory and moved to within 200 points of Grand Prix leader Bjorn Borg, said the only change he wants to make in his game between now and the Open is to "hit the ball maybe a little cleaner at times."

Connors, Lloyd and other players competed in the new $8 million Indianapolis Sports

Center, where the tournament was held for the first time.

On Saturday, the International Tennis Association announced that it had elevated the status of the Clay Court tournament to a major international event. Only nine other events have that status.

Koosman hurls 10-hit shutout for Twins

By the Associated Press

The dictionary defines a troubleshooter as someone who locates the causes of trouble and makes needed repairs. Meet Jerry Koosman, who is usually the cause of his own trouble but generally knows how to fix it.

"If I pitched as hard out of trouble, I probably wouldn't go nine," the veteran left-hander said Sunday after hurling a 10-hit shutout — the major league record for a nine-inning shutout is 14 hits — as the Minnesota Twins edged the Oakland A's 1-0. "When I get into trouble I'm more of a power pitcher. When I'm out of trouble I go more with control."

Koosman, 14-10, had plenty of control Sunday in pitching his first American League shutout. He didn't walk anyone, but nine Oakland singles and a double, plus an error by right fielder Hosken Powell, kept him in hot water most of the time.

Angels 4, Mariners 3

Rod Carew's bases-loaded single drove in the tying and winning runs and capped a four-run ninth-inning California rally. Held to seven hits by Rob Dressler over the first eight innings, the Angels chased the Seattle starter when Don Baylor and Willie Aikens opened the ninth with singles.

Royals 7, Tigers 1

The Royals backed Chamberlain, a hard-throwing 22-year-old right-hander, with home runs by Al Cowens, Amos Otis and Frank White. It was the fifth victory in a row and 11th in 14 games for the defending champion Royals, who trail California by five games.

Indians 6, Rangers 3

Mike Hargrove drove in three runs with a home run and a double against his former team and Ron Hassey also homered as Cleveland defeated Texas behind the six-hit pitching of Dan Spillner and Sid Monge. Cleveland took a 5-0 lead and chased loser Steve Comer in the third inning.

White Sox 7-5, Blue Jays 0-7

After Baumgarten's masterpiece in the opener, John Mayberry drove in two runs with a pair of singles and scored three times to earn the Blue Jays a split.

Baumgarten gave up a bunt single to Bob Bailor in the first inning and a two-out triple to Al Woods in the seventh. He walked three and struck out five. Meanwhile, Jim Morrison drove in two runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly and Chet Lemon collected three doubles. Morrison's leadoff homer in the first inning was all the support Baumgarten needed.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

Where Bruce Sutter is concerned, baseball is a game of one-upmanship — and no one plays it better than the Chicago Cub relief specialist.

"I just try to get ahead (of the hitter) and keep the ball down," says Sutter, explaining his stunning success this year.

The National League's top reliever came on strong again Sunday, gaining his 28th save as the Cubs defeated the Cardinals. The tough right-hander got the last two outs to halt a St. Louis rally, striking out George Hendrick on an 0-2 pitch to end the game.

Giants 4, Dodgers 1

San Francisco scored two runs when Dodgers rookie right fielder Mickey Hatcher dropped a two-out fly ball in the seventh inning and went on to beat Los Angeles behind Vida Blue's four-hitter.

Johnnie LeMaster opened the Giants seventh with an infield hit and moved to second on a sacrifice fly by Mike Sadek.

Blue, 10-9, struck out and Bill North walked before Rob Andrews hit a high fly to right. Hatcher, apparently having trouble as he looked into the sun, backedpedaled and got under the ball but it popped out of his glove, allowing the Giants to break a 1-1 tie.

Reds 9-4, Padres 2-5

Ray Knight drove in three runs and Tom Seaver won his ninth straight decision as Cincinnati beat San Diego in the first game of their doubleheader. Seaver, 11-5, improved his lifetime record against San Diego to 24-7 with a seven-hitter.

Jerry Turner's pinch-hit single in the seventh inning drove in the winning run as San Diego came back to win the second game. Turner's first pinch hit after 15 unsuccessful tries capped a two-run rally for the Padres.

Braves 3, Astros 2

Atlanta right-hander Phil Niekro won his 15th game of the season and recorded the 200th complete-game performance of his career, scattering eight hits. Barry Bonnell belted three hits for the Braves, including his ninth homer of the year.

Texas wheeling, dealing again

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers have acquired first baseman Willie Montanez from the New York Mets and say he will join the club in New York tonight for a series against the Yankees.

For Montanez, the Mets got cash and two players to be named later, it was announced Sunday.

Montanez, 31, is hitting .236 with five home runs and 47 RBI.

"He's capable of playing two positions (first base and outfield), and with (John) Grubb out, we felt we needed a left-hand bat," said Eddie Robinson, executive vice president of the Texas Rangers.

Grubb, an outfielder, dislocated a finger while sliding into a base on the Rangers' last road trip and was placed on the 21-day disabled list.

Ranger outfielders Richie Zisk and Al Oliver, who were unhappy about losing outfielder Oscar Gamble in the recent trade with the Yankees for Mickey Rivers, expressed amazement about Sunday's trade for Montanez.

"Can Montanez pitch?" Zisk asked in disbelief. "Just what we need, another left-handed first baseman. They obviously chose Door No. 3. They didn't go for Door No. 1 or Door No. 2 or the box on Jay's tray or the cash in Monty's pocket." The Rangers already have Mike Jorgensen and rookie-of-the-year candidate Pat Putnam, both left-handers, at first base. John Ellis, a right-hander and frequent designated hitter, also has played at first base.

Oliver, a National League rival of Montanez for years when he was with Pittsburgh, said: "He can play. I'll say that. I just have no idea where Montanez can play, but so can all of our first basemen. And only one of them can play at a time."

The Ranger clubhouse was buzzing Sunday with speculation about the trade.

"It's like they said 'I'll give you Boardwalk and Park Place if you don't touch the utilities and the B&O Railroad,'" Zisk said.

Montanez played for the Philadelphia Phillies from 1970-1975 and was traded to the San Francisco Giants in the 1975 season. The Giants sent him to Atlanta in 1976, and he was traded to the Mets following the 1977 season as part of an 11-player, four-team trade that brought left-hander John Matlack and Al Oliver to the Rangers.

He has a lifetime batting average of .279 with 119 homers and 659 RBI.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Holtz actually speechless about Hogs

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz, who cracked up Johnny Carson with his one-liners, is at a loss for words and his Razorbacks are to blame.

"It's more difficult to talk about this team than any team I've been around," he said.

"When I talk about individual athletes I can get more positive, but anything you say about the team would be conjecture," he said. "We have ability, native ability, but we haven't seen them through adversity, the pressures, how they react to all the intrusions that occur during the course of the season.

"The only thing I can really evaluate is the overall attitude of the team and it's a very good attitude," he said.

Offensively, the Razorbacks are missing quarterback Ron Calcagni and running backs Ben Cowins, Jerry Eckwood and Micheal Forrest.

Defensively, they are without six players who started three years and another two-year starter.

"The defense will be one that gets better as the season goes along," he said.

"You only make steel by putting it through fire and they haven't been through fire. Individually, they have confidence in themselves but they haven't been through what they need to develop confidence in the guy next to them.

"Like last year, Jimmy Walker had complete confidence in Dan Hampton and Hampton in Dale White. All three had confidence in Larry Jackson and William Hampton at linebacker. The offensive line had confidence in the backs." Offensively, Holtz says he has high hopes.

"We're going to be extremely exciting," he says. "But I'm worried about the consistency. When you have young, inexperienced football players they are going to make some great plays, but they are also going to make some bad ones.

"The big strength of our defensive football team is that we have people who can run," he says. The problem is inexperience.

Holtz says Mike Massey "is probably as talented a linebacker as any in the country," but that he may be missing the savvy of Jackson and W. Hampton.

D. Hampton and Walker manned the defensive tackles for the past three years and Holtz says their successors — Jim Elliott and Danny Phillips — are about where Hampton and Walker were two years ago.

For the second year in a row, the secondary may be the biggest problem.

"I felt our defense was better last year than the year before except for the secondary," Holtz said. "Consequently, we gave up more points than we did the preceding year. Our secondary is probably the biggest single key on our football team."

Kevin Evans and Hugh Jernigan have ability if they can stay healthy. Randy Wessinger will probably start at one cornerback unless he is needed at quarterback. Freshmen may be No. 2 at several spots.

Bryant counts confidence as biggest 'Bama asset

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant is counting on the women and the drugstore owboys to help spur his Alabama football team to a successful defense of its national championship this fall.

"If we have any strength, and think we do, I believe it will be the fact that our players believe they can win," said Bryant, who has more victories than any active coach, 284.

"They should know now that the rewards are much better for winning the national championship.

"That little girlfriend or wife squeezes the hand a little differently and people are nicer when you go to the drugstore."

Alabama will start its quest for a fifth national title in Bryant's 22 years at the helm when it opens in a televised game at Georgia Tech Sept. 8.

"Our schedule is not as tough as it was last year, I hope," Bryant said. "On the other hand the games that are more difficult to get ready for are those the fans think you're going to win."

The Tide turned back such powers as Nebraska, Missouri and Washington, but lost to Southern Cal. before knocking off No. 1 Penn State 14-7 in the Sugar Bowl for its 1978 title.

In addition to games against six fellow members of the Southeastern Conference, which Alabama has owned in recent years, the Tide meets Tech, Baylor, Wichita State, Virginia Tech and Miami of Florida.

Quarterback Jeff Rutledge has graduated and his duties fall on Steadman Shealy, a quick-footed operator of the wishbone until he underwent surgery two springs ago.

Shealy played some last fall and has been working hard to strengthen his knee.

"Offensively we should be strong if a lack of speed doesn't kill us," Bryant said. "We certainly should be strong if Shealy is 100 percent."

Runners include Major Ogilvie, a proven blue-chipper although only a junior, Billy Jackson, Mitch Ferguson and Steve Whitman, all experienced.

Bryant said Whitman "probably is the most underrated player on our team. He might just be the best fullback we've had around here in a long time."

The offensive line, keyed by veterans Dwight Stephenson at center and Jim Bunch at tackle, should be as strong as last season's.

But, said Bryant, defensively "we are real weak and thin. We are inexperienced at linebacker." Gone are linebackers Rickey Gilliland and Barry Krauss, whose goaline stops against Penn State got him the Sugar Bowl's Most Valuable Player award.

"The thing that worries me most about our defense is the secondary where you can lose the quickest," Bryant said. He said he would try a variety of combinations there, including veterans Don McNeal and Ricky Tucker.

LOU BROCK of the St. Louis Cardinals gets his second hit of the game in the fifth inning against the Chicago Cubs Sunday afternoon. It was hit number 2,199 for Brock in his career. He is now just two hits away from the coveted 3,000 hit mark. Only 13 other players in major league history have ever reached that plateau.

Waters out for season

MUENSTER, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys star defensive back Charlie Waters, who suffered a knee injury in an exhibition loss to Seattle, underwent surgery today in Muenster Memorial Hospital.

The Cowboys' team physician, Dr. Marvin Knight, who works out of the hospital in this small town North Central Texas town just south of the Oklahoma border, began a two-hour operation at 9 a.m., according to his secretary.

Waters, who played in his third Pro Bowl game last season, suffered the injury in Sunday night's 27-17 loss to Seattle in an open field mishap that did not involve contact with another player.

Cowboys officials said after the game it was feared the All-Pro safety suffered damage to knee cartilage and possibly a torn ligament.

Officials at the hospital said they did not know the nature of today's operation, but knee surgery normally knocks a football player out for five to six months because of the rehabilitative factor.

Waters, 29, who played quarterback at Clemson, led the Cowboys in unassisted tackles last year with 76 and tied teammate Cliff Harris in interceptions with four.

BOSTON (AP) — A bit of iron-rich tissue has been found in the head of pigeons, and a biologist says the magnetic matter may be linked to the birds' homing skills.

Professor Charles Walcott of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, said in an interview with the Boston Sunday Globe that the primary question remaining is "whether this magnetic tissue has anything to do with the magnetic sensitivity the pigeons have." The tissue, less than a square-millimeter in size, is located outside the brain, near the back of the birds' eye sockets, he said.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Financial problems are threatening the existence of an organization that saved the life of a small beached whale three months ago and dozens of other marine mammals during the last year.

"We're going down fast," said Bob Schoelkopf, founder and director of the Marine Mammal Stranding Center. "We're just running out of money." The center opened about a year ago, largely funded by the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. But that non-renewable money source runs out next month.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Lawyers for the five defendants in Tennessee's clemency-for-cash case return to court this week to find out if the delayed trial will resume.

Judge Gilbert Merritt of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has been selected to replace U.S. District Judge Charles Neese, who removed himself from the case last week after suffering a heart attack. Merritt is expected to rule Wednesday on whether the trial will resume or there will be a new trial for the men charged with selling prison clemency during former Gov. Ray Blanton's administration.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA's display advertisements say it wants to hire "information-gathering specialists" with a "spirit of adventure" for "life in foreign places."

The ads in several major newspapers tout the satisfaction of "knowing that you belong to a small, very special group of people doing a vital, meaningful job in the face of challenges and possible hardship." The jobs pay $14,414 to $19,263.

"The response has been really remarkable," said Mike Russell of New York's Gaynor and Ducas agency, which designed the ads. He says thousands have responded since the ads appeared about a week ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, has reiterated his belief that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts — not President Carter — will be the 1980 Democratic nominee.

Dole, appearing Sunday on the CBS program "Face the Nation," said Carter's "resources have been shrinking in the past few weeks. We better be looking at what I consider to be the real threat on the Democratic side — Edward Moore Kennedy."

He said Kennedy is "articulate, charismatic and he beats Republicans. He would be a tough contender."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some consumers might end up victimized by a government program requiring utilities to offer "energy audits" showing where money can be saved on energy bills, the Federal Trade Commission says.

The National Energy Conservation Policy Act allows each state to draw up its own plan for the program. But the FTC says the Energy Department's proposed regulation in this area is inadequate and does not adequately say what constitutes participation in a state program. The commission suggests the department spell out that criteria exactly. The program is to start in the fall of 1980.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government at the city, state and federal level spent $1.646 billion in 1977 for social welfare purposes ranging from schools and housing to hospital and retirement benefits.

The total was $362.3 billion — up $30 billion or 9 percent from the year before, says a new Social Security Administration report.

That's an improvement over the average 14 percent annual increase of the preceding 10 years, the report says. And the 1977 figures mark a decline in social welfare spending's share of the gross national product for the first time in 20 years, dropping from 20.4 percent of the GNP in 1976 to 19.7 percent.

INTERNATIONAL

ROME, Italy (AP) — Premier Francesco Cossiga's minority coalition government settled into office today after winning its second parliamentary vote of confidence.

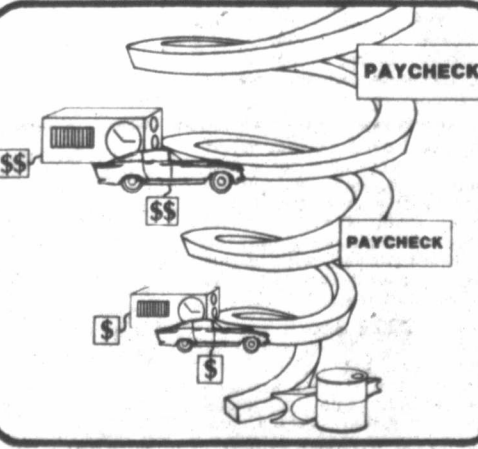

The Senate approved the coalition of Christian Democrats, Social Democrats and Liberals Sunday by a vote of 153-118, with the Communists voting against the government and the Socialists and Republicans abstaining. The lineup was the same on Saturday when Cossiga won a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies.

Many political analysts believe the government will last only four or five months. The Socialists can bring it down at any time by joining the Communists in voting against it, and the Christian Democrats are not expected to make enough concessions to the Socialists to retain their passive support indefinitely.

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — An emergency airlift of goods to and from Uganda is running into difficulties because of a shortage of aviation fuel in Uganda.

A Boeing 707 chartered jointly by the Tanzanian and Ugandan national airlines from Global International Airways, an American company, is scheduled to make two round trips daily between Dar es Salaam and Entebbe, Uganda. But since starting operations Thursday, the plane has been able to make only one round trip because it couldn't refuel in Entebbe after the first flight, Ugandan officials said.

FOCUS

The Wage-Price Spiral of Inflation

Current talks between the United Auto Workers Union (UAW) and the auto industry may affect consumers throughout the country. UAW leaders have asked for substantial increases in wages and benefits this September to offset the rising cost of living. If the automakers grant these increases they will probably raise car prices in the fall. Higher car prices would further boost the cost of living for most Americans. In turn other workers feel they need to demand pay raises. To grant those raises their employers would probably have to increase the price of their products. In this way, a large pay increase for a union as big as the UAW can help cause prices and wages to spiral higher and higher.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the president of the United Auto Workers Union?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Colombia borders Ecuador on the north.
