Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, top left, and Andrew Young, former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, top center, hold a news conference outside the Regency Hotel in New York Wednesday. Dayan said he would welcome Young to visit his country, as long as it had nothing to do with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Carter, Kennedy fencing goes on

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his own hand, President Carter has told Sen. Edward M. Kennedy he meant no reference to Chappaquiddick when he said he himself could handle a crisis without panic.

Edward M. Kennedy says he appreciates the gesture.

But the fencing goes on.

Kennedy, appearing at a $1,000-a-plate party fund-raising dinner hours after a presidential aide delivered Carter's note Wednesday, said he "was glad to get it."

Kennedy said he did not consider the note an apology.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said the note was an "explanation" following what the president called "grossly exaggerated" press accounts of the remark made Tuesday night at a "town meeting" in New York City.

A participant at the meeting had mentioned Kennedy and then asked Carter how he intended to "inspire" voters. Carter replied:

"We've had some crises where it required a steady hand, a careful and deliberative decision to be made. I don't think I panicked."

Kennedy, at a reception before the dinner, said he considers presidential leadership a legitimate issue and intends to make it, not Chappaquiddick, one of the major issues of the campaign — if he runs.

"Were I to be a candidate," Kennedy said, "I'd be talking about the issues which are most in the minds of the American people and I think that's also what he'd want."

In the past, the White House has said that if Kennedy challenges Carter, the president would not make an issue of Kennedy's reaction to the crisis conditions when the senator drove a car off a bridge at Chappaquiddick, Mass., in 1969, resulting in the death of Mary Jo Kopechne.

Carter followed Kennedy's appearance at a poolside reception with a dinner speech laced with appeals for party unity.

Carter said the party had carried the country through a depression, two world wars and a commitment to help the poor in the 1960s "united."

"Now we must face the challenge of 1980 as a united Democratic Party," he said. "With selfish divisions among ourselves, our voice is fractured and cannot be clearly heard."

As for his leadership, the president said, "We have never avoided a single difficult issue, no matter what the political consequences might be."

He then delivered a laundry list of his administration's accomplishments from civil service reform to the fact that "not one single American life has been lost in combat" since he took office.

"Molester" suspect arrested

By DE. DRAHBRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Pampa Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman announced this morning the arrest of a man who is supposedly the "child molester" which has caused so much concern in recent weeks.

Randy Lee Ledbetter, 18, of Bowers City Camp was brought before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford last night on one count of indecent exposure to a minor child, which is a felony offense. Lunsford set the bond at $5,000, which has not been met at this time.

After spending the rest of the night in city jail, Ledbetter was transferred to the county jail this morning.

Ryzman stated that Ledbetter would be brought before a grand jury sometime in the near future, but that a definite date has not been set.

According to Chief Ryzman, he and Detectives Michael Hartscock and Ronald Howell were going over the modus operandi of some suspects in the case yesterday, and had come up with three probable suspects. Later that day, a citizen called to report her daughters had been approached in the manner usually attributed to the molester and she had gotten the license plate number of the vehicle he was in.

The license plate number matched the vehicle belonging to Ledbetter who was one of the prime suspects the detectives had come up with earlier.

After reviewing all the evidence, Detectives Hartscock and Howell arrested Ledbetter.

"This clears up approximately eight reported cases," Chief Ryzman stated and added, "I sure slept a lot better last night."

Ryzman also commented that this should clear up all the unreported cases as well as all the rumors that have been occurring for the past two weeks.

The rumors began flying after the police department issued a warning requesting parents to be on the lookout for a "dirty-looking" man driving a blue-green automobile who reportedly approached an eight-year-old girl on Sept. 12.

The man reportedly rode up beside the girl and asked her something she couldn't understand, followed her when she rode off on her bicycle, and asked her where a gas station was. The little girl rode home and told her parents about it.

The police became concerned because a similar incident had happened about a year earlier in which a child had been molested, and according to Chief Ryzman at the time, "We don't know what his intention was but we have to assume the worst."

Pemex denies it will pay for oil spill

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pemex officials deny a published report that Mexico's state-controlled oil monopoly, if pushed, would pay for damages to Texas beaches by a runaway oil well.

"Mexico has no intention to pay for any damages caused by the oil spill at Ixtoc I because we feel Mexico did not intentionally cause the oil spill," Miguel Tomasini, head of press relations for Pemex, said Wednesday.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Wednesday that one Pemex official said contracts on the well make the Mexican drilling contractor Permargo responsible for damages caused by negligence, but a special "Gulf" clause stipulates "responsibility in the case of loss of circulation falls on" Pemex.

If indeed it turns out that the well blew out because Pemex workers failed to keep oil from spewing out of control — "full responsibility" falls on Pemex. Reynaldo Jauregui Zentella, the new director of Public relations for Pemex told the Star-Telegram.

"We'll do our best not to pay when we're not supposed to," said Jauregui. "They'll have to prove it was oil from Ixtoc I" that stained Texas beaches during its peak tourist season.

The question of responsibility in the world's largest oil spill has been a touchy one with Mexico, which has refused to admit any liability.

A Pemex spokesman who refused to be identified when contacted Wednesday about Jauregui's statements had "no comment," but added "I personally believe Jauregui never said that."

Tomasini said, "I am not authorized to make any statements on the report by the young lady from the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. I can tell you that the young lady misinterpreted the statements made to her by Mr. Jauregui.

Henry Holcomb, assistant managing editor of the Star-Telegram, said Wednesday that the newspaper stood by its story.

The reporter reviewed her notes, said Jauregui spoke fluent English and there was no problem with the translation, Holcomb said.

"Mexico stands by its statements made shortly after Mr. Bob Kreuger (nominated as special ambassador to Mexico) requested Mexico to help pay for the damages to the Gulf Coast," said Tomasini.

Sagging dollar cutting revenue OPEC says

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC finance ministers meeting here today feel the sagging dollar is cutting their oil revenues, but a spokesman said they have no immediate plans to switch the currency used to set petroleum prices.

Hamid Zaheri, spokesman for finance ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said the group would discuss the falling value of the dollar, replenishment of the OPEC aid fund and increased cooperation between members to deal with developments in international oil markets.

Zaheri gave reporters few details, but the ministers were not expected to consider a possible price hike, and the spokesman strongly denied the meeting was a "dollar conference" to find a new currency for international oil transactions.

Reports published after the latest OPEC price hike in June said members were likely to call a mid-September meeting to vote another increase to compensate for the falling dollar, or to stop setting oil prices in dollars.

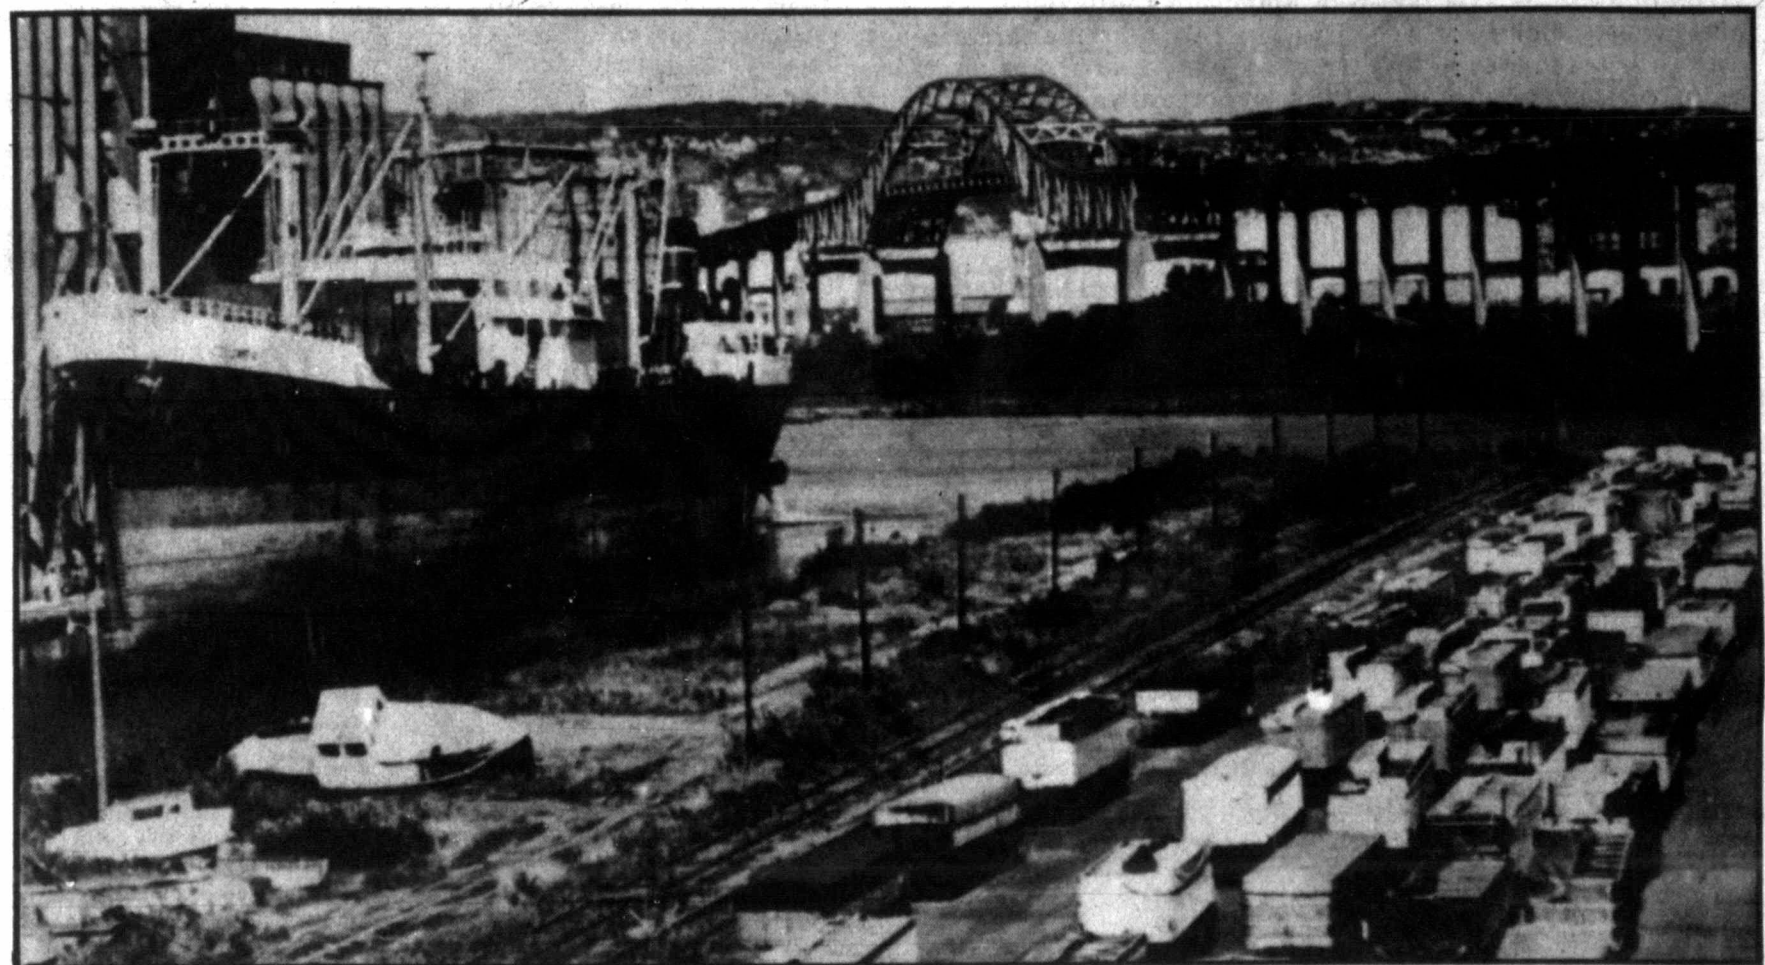

In June, OPEC raised the price of crude oil from $14.55 to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel, "depending on the quality. Economists predicted the increase would hit developing nations particularly hard, raising the annual cost of their oil imports from $18 billion to an estimated $27 billion.

A statement from the minister's indicated they would try to mute Third World criticism of soaring oil prices by requesting a $800 million boost in OPEC aid to poor countries, and calling attention to the rising price of Western manufactured goods.

The conference, in reaffirmation of the solidarity of OPEC with other developing countries as an integral part of the Third World, agreed to recommend to "members of member countries that they approve the replenishment of the OPEC special fund's total resources in under three years operation to $2.4 billion," said a statement issued on the eve of today's meeting.

OPEC is also proposing oil exporters and industrialized nations contribute to a joint fund "to compensate developing countries for imported inflation."

And now the wait

The 12-week old grain millers strike ended Tuesday and the hundreds of grain trucks are waiting to unload. It is estimated the strike cost the area's economy as much as $1 billion.

Carter asked for expert help on Cuban situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — For hours, the seven men grilled CIA agents and analyzed secret data on the situation in Cuba. Their mission: "Get all the facts" and help President Carter decide what to do about the armored Soviet brigade 90 miles off American shores.

Heading the elite group was former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford, who said the session lasted "eight, nine hours" at CIA headquarters in nearby Langley, Va.

All were there at the request of the president.

"The president wanted to get a group of very experienced men to explore fully all the facts regarding the Cuban situation," Clifford said from his Bethesda, Md., home Wednesday night.

The seven experts "went out to the CIA on Monday and we spent all afternoon and a good part of the evening there — eight or nine hours," Clifford said. "We got a briefing and were permitted to ask questions."

The meeting was held to give members of the group a "chance to talk the whole thing over among themselves; then see him (Carter) and see if we couldn't be of assistance in solving the problem." Monday's session was "very thorough. We talked it all out."

The group has not prepared a written report. Indeed, it has not even tried to reach a consensus. "It was not that kind of a group," Clifford explained.

The men, he said, would give their advice to Carter when summoned.

"We were all very experienced," in intelligence and national security, Clifford added, although he declined, as did the White House, to name the other six.

Clifford said he didn't know when the group would discuss its analysis with Carter. The president, however, said in New York City Tuesday that he probably will report to the nation on the situation within a week.

Carter said intelligence reports indicate the brigade numbers about 2,500 troops supported by about 40 tanks and "some field pieces." He said there are no indications the troops have weapons that could threaten the United States, but insisted: "It is a combat unit."

That flatly contradicted comments earlier Tuesday by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who told the United Nations "all sorts of falsehoods are being piled up concerning the policies of Cuba and the Soviet Union. It is high time that you honestly admit that this whole matter is artificial and proclaim it to be closed."

The issue was expected to be renewed again today at another in a series of meetings between Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance in New York.

Vance reportedly expected Gromyko to respond to U.S. proposals that range from withdrawal of the brigade to altering its combat capability.

For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Does big business favor freedom?

By BUTLER D. SHÄFFER

One of the biggest myths afloat in the popular mind is the notion that businessmen — particularly the owners and managers of "big" businesses — are opposed to the government regulation of economic activity. Advocates of a free market system are usually saddled with the charge of being flacks for the so-called "titans" of industry.

One of the reasons for this charge is, of course, that businessmen often speak in free market rhetoric, attacking one form of government regulation or another for its harmful effects on both business and consumer interests. In a recent full-page ad in the Los Angeles Times, for instance, Kaiser Aluminum reproduced the content of some commercials which they tried, without success, to get the three television networks to run. In the first commercial Kaiser asks: "Is free enterprise an endangering species?... (Does a country like ours require a diversity of business — both big and small? Will excessive control over big business lead to control over all our business? People, one by one, need to speak up now. You can help keep free enterprise free."

Sounds pretty good, at first glance, doesn't it? Sounds like the Kaiser people have been reading Milton Friedman and Murray Rothbard and Roger Miller and George Stigler and all the other free market economists and is saying that it, too, endorses the principle of a market-oriented economy. But wait, Kaiser's next aborted commercial deals with the energy crisis. After briefly summarizing the major positions on the energy crisis, Kaiser concluded that "one thing is clear. America needs an energy plan for the future now... (and) we're only going to get it if people, one by one, demand it." But to whom does Kaiser want us to make our demands known? Are we supposed to let industry know that we want them to practice better conservation methods or diversify into alternate energy sources? No, Kaiser suggests that we should "let your elected representatives know now." In other words, we need "an energy plan for the future," and our "elected representatives" are, presumably, the ones to implement such a plan.

I am not picking on Kaiser in particular; it's position, in this matter, is quite representative of the business community: advocate the free market mechanisms when it is in your self-interest to do so, and government intervention when it serves your purposes to do that. This, in fact, is what has led us into that utter confusion known as the "mixed economy". One which is somewhat free of government controls in some areas, and regulated and supervised by the government in others.

The so-called "energy crisis" is a classic example of the problem. For the edification of the people at Kaiser... we have had "an energy plan" in this country for years, and that is why we now have a "crisis." Many large industrial users of natural gas have been desirous of keeping the price of that fuel source low, since it is a major cost item in their manufacturing operations. They persuaded the federal government to place price ceilings on natural gas (thus discouraging the discovery of more natural gas; putting more pressure on petroleum as a fuel source; and resulting in the artificial shortages of natural gas that kept people shivering in the midwest and northeast during recent winters.)

The petroleum industry has also desired government intervention that would maximize industry profits. Accordingly, they persuaded the federal government to put import quotas on the amount of petroleum that could be shipped into the country (under the spurious claim that this was necessary for "national defense"). The oil companies also persuaded state governments to limit the amount of oil that could be produced in the various oil states. While this was accomplished under the banner of "conservation," the real purpose underlying such "prorating" laws was the stabilization of prices at higher than free market levels.

So you see, we've tried government "plans" and they have been responsible for getting us right where we are today. What we should consider now is the free market, not because "big business" wants it; they clearly do not. Rather we should try it because the rest of us need it as our only protection against the artificial shortages, created as a result of business-induced government intervention.

Civilized solution eludes Ireland

Until the tragic resurgence of Irish terrorism took the life of Lord Louis Mountbatten, it was possible to be a little optimistic about the chances for peace in Northern Ireland. There had been a lull in the bombings and assassinations which have taken 2,000 lives in the last 10 years. The non-sectarian Alliance Party which tries to keep Catholic and Protestant rivalry out of politics has been gaining ground in local elections in the Ulster provinces.

But this may be precisely why terrorists are again stalking targets, even striking for the first time at the British royal family. The terrorist-minded Irish Republic Army does not want to see Catholics and Protestants bury their differences in Northern Ireland under British out.

It remains to be seen if extremists on the Protestant side now will retaliate against their perceived enemies on the Catholic side. Whether they do or not, the old wounds of the "Irish" problem are once again torn and bleeding.

Pope John Paul II's strong denunciation of the murder of Mountbatten and the others offers some hope of second thoughts among Irish Catholics who still sympathize with the IRA. The pope has cancelled plans to step into Ulster during his visit to the Irish Republic. That was a sensible decision, but where his appearance in Northern Ireland might have symbolized the possibilities for peace; his absence now will symbolize the degree of setback those possibilities have received.

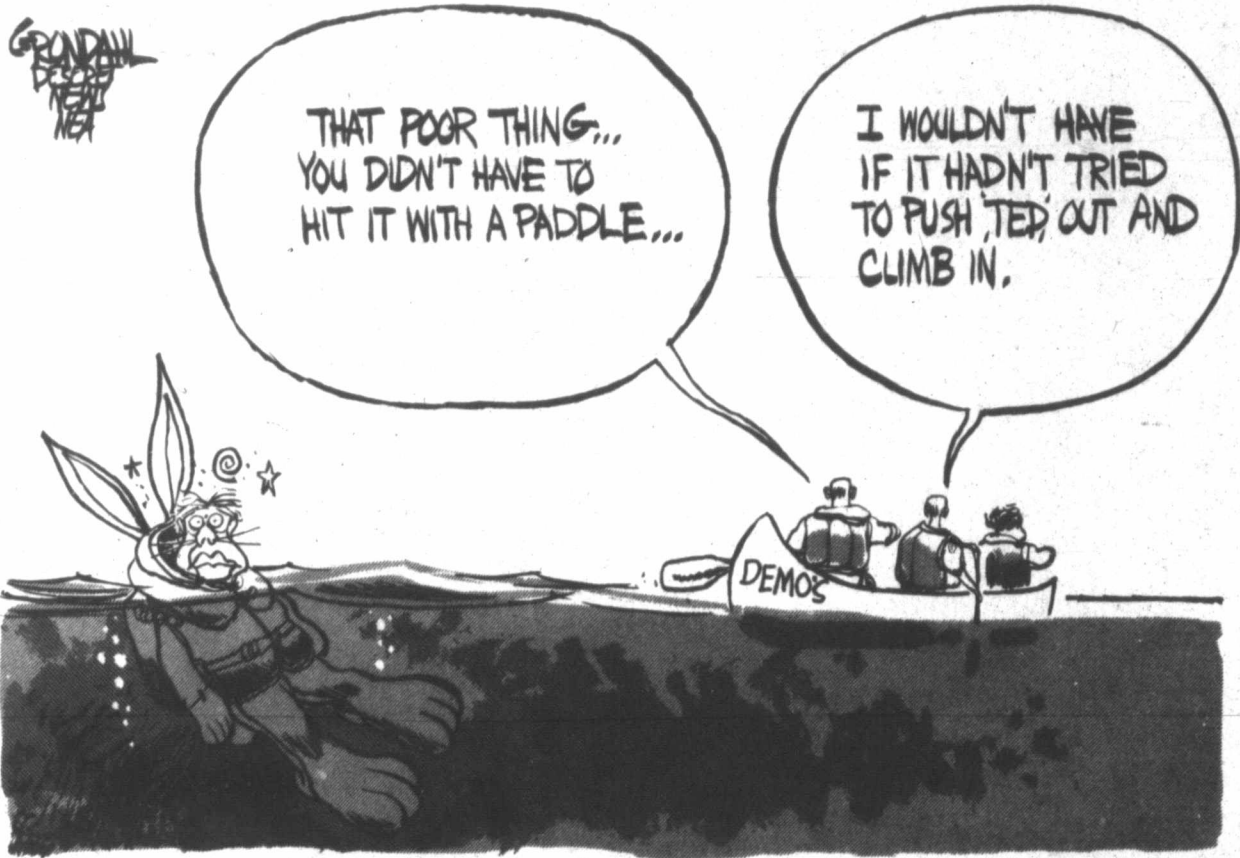

The government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will be pressuring Dublin to come down harder on the IRA terrorists who, it is presumed in London, are finding a haven in the Republic. The latest crimes attributed to the IRA give Dublin good reason to comply. The aim of Irish political leaders, both Catholic and Protestant, should be to dissociate religious sympathies in the Irish mind from sympathy for assassination and terrorism as political tactics.

The same can be said for Irish-American political leaders. The belief persists, rightly or wrongly, that IRA guerrillas are getting weapons or the money to buy them, in part, from sympathizers in the United States. Estimates of the support range from "meager" to "significant." It should be discouraged.

The U.S. should support any development that promises a peaceful route to civil justice for Catholics and Protestants alike in Ireland, but there is precious little it can do in this regard. The attempt by Gov. Hugh Carey of New York to get British and Irish officials together with him for a "Camp David" in New York may arise from good intentions, but it lends credence to complaints from abroad that American officials want to "meddle" in Irish affairs.

Many Britons insist that an "Irish lobby" in America is giving a pro-IRA tilt to U.S. policy. We think they're wrong. Yet the Carter administration's recent decision to stop selling weapons to the police in Belfast feeds that suspicion.

American officials should be prepared to come down hard on any sources of illegal support for Irish terrorists that may lie in this country. A firm policy in that regard is a contribution the United States can make toward an end to the bloodshed and in pursuit of a civilized solution to the problems in Ireland.

The car magazines

by Paul Harvey

I've never advertised anything I don't use.

A car-maker expressed an interest in sponsoring some of my broadcasts and his was a make and model vehicle I had never used.

"But ours is best," he insisted. "You can confirm that by reading Car and Driver."

What in the world was Car and Driver, I wondered.

Now I know—and exploring that publication and the several related periodicals exclusively about cars—old, new, classic, race, off-the-road and just-for-fun cars—has given me a new perspective on motors and motor cars and motoring.

I had neglected my car. I'd filled it with gas, sometimes barely in time. I'd had the oil changed more or less at 3,000-mile intervals.

But the filters I had neglected, and since break-in it had never been properly renewed.

After reading some of those automotive magazines and learning of the pleasure a driver derives from a properly responsive car, I had my neglected '78 model gone over—thoroughly.

The engine was tuned, filters changed, jets cleaned, wheels aligned, shocks replaced, and I don't really know what all else—but, sure enough, the difference is significant.

Now it's less like wrestling and more like dancing with a good dancer.

Some of those newsstand magazines are exclusively for Corvette owners, some for the owners of four-wheel drive vehicles, some for sports cars and others for the owners of recreation vehicles—but all of them teach the reader about torque and drift and compression ratios, about slip angle and understeer, about turning radius and aftershock oscillation and roll and pitch and yaw.

But mostly, what you glean from an inside-out understanding of modern cars is that they are supercars by the standards of yesterday.

Professional detractors of U.S. manufacture have tried to brainwash us with the notion that anything new is purposely flimsy junk, predisposed to self-destruct.

That is a lie large enough to sound convincing but it is not so!

No industry competes more exhaustively with engineering and technological advances than does the automotive industry.

And thanks to that competition and despite government mandated modifications, you and I are now able to buy an automobile which each year accomplishes new highs in performance and reliability.

Let's stop mean-mouthing ourselves.

One car now has a "thinking" detonator sensor in the ignition system—a tiny transducer—which listens for the onset of pre-ignition and automatically signals the distributor to retard the spark timing, thus using every bit of octane in the fuel.

And such is the competition for excellence that what's now "experimental" promises a whole bunch of Happy New Years!

Divorce, Form 1040 style

Divorce in recent years has become an increasingly accepted part of the American lifestyle for increasing numbers of Americans.

But for a Maryland couple it has become something more — an accounting procedure that has led to a confrontation with the Internal Revenue Service.

At the end of each of the last three years, David and Angela Boyter have gotten divorced. The following January they have remarried.

Although everyone has a right to a change of mind — even repeatedly — there is more than that to the on-and-off marriage of the Boyters, as recently reported at length in The Washington Post.

The Boyters are taking advantage of a provision in the tax code that determines marital status for tax purposes as of December 31 of each year. The purpose, beyond the sizable bucks saved on their tax returns, is to protest what they contend is unequal tax treatment of working married couples as compared with cohabitating singles.

Under current tax law, a married couple filing a joint return can end up paying significantly more to the IRS than two single people living together without legal bond.

The Boyters are far from the first to protest this particular quirk in our pervasively quirky tax laws. But theirs is the most dramatic and, to date, most effective form of protest.

The IRS, however, says it has had enough and is taking the Boyters and the case of the "tax sham" divorces to court.

There are acknowledged inequities in taxation of cohabitating earners. As an example, the standard deduction of $2,200 per individual adds up to $4,400 for a nonmarried couple filing separately. But a married couple filing jointly is limited to a maximum $3,200.

The tax men point out that many of the provisions now perceived as inequitable came about as the result of earlier complaints of unfair treatment on the part of unmarried taxpayers. This was before vast numbers of wives entered or returned to the job market, when the savings to be realized in a joint return tilted the tax laws heavily in favor of a wage-earning husband and non-employed spouse.

Tax code revisions in 1969 were designed to give singles a better break. But with the subsequent rapid increase in both two-income families and cohabitation outside of marriage, one couple's break has turned into another couple's penalty.

Or to put it in terms of Newton's Law as revised for tax purposes: To each and every action in the way of special treatment for one class of taxpayers, there is an opposite and frequently more than equal reaction in the form of heavier burdens for other taxpayers.

So it has been since the beginning of taxation and so it is likely to remain, at least so long as the tax laws are so complex.

The odds are probably against the Boyters in their court confrontation with the IRS, which rarely loses one. Their cause stands a better chance with Congress, which probably will get around to a revision of the 1969 revisions reconciling tax law with changed lifestyles. But it in all likelihood will be another quick fix that eventually will produce new inequities.

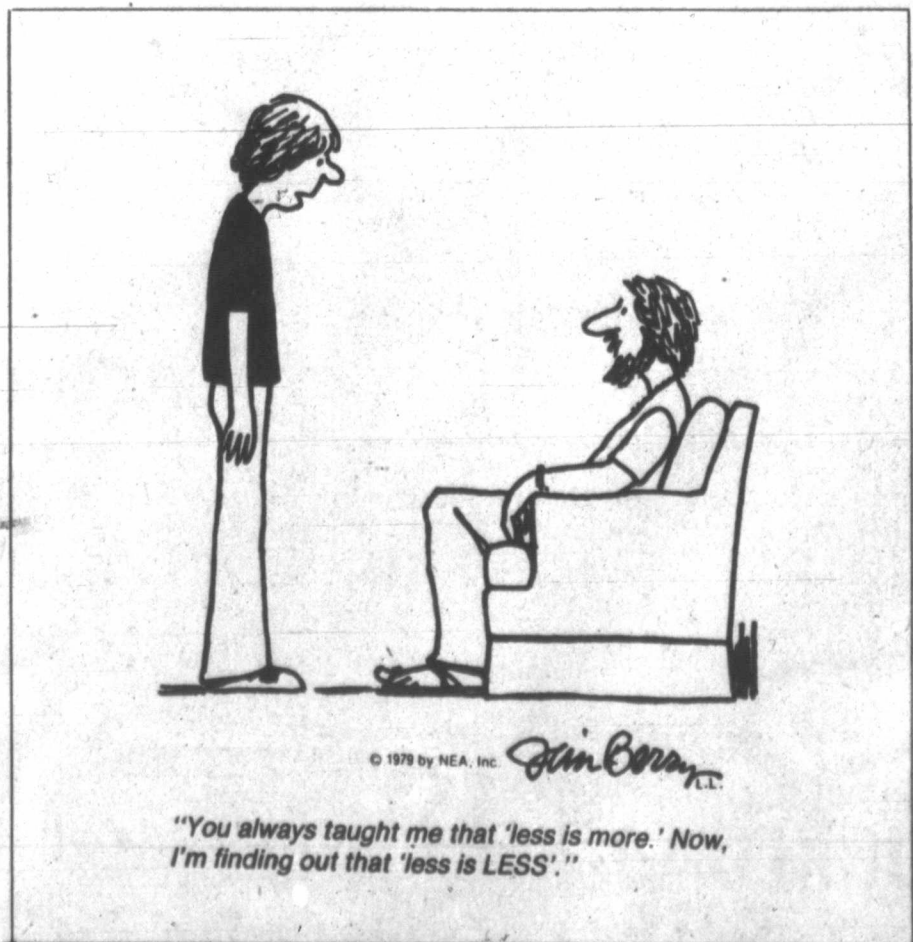

Back when he was THE tax authority in Congress, Wilbur Mills recognized that tax breaks tended to cancel out and become burdens. His vision of an ideal tax system, allowing virtually no exemptions and other special treatments, would levy a universal, and much lower rate on everyone.

Perhaps the Mills ideal could never meet the tests of reality — although it would seem that the money saved in tax law administration as a result of the dismantling of most of the IRS apparatus alone might make up for major losses through lowered rates. It does, however, still appear to make more common sense than the traditional patch and paste approach to tax policy.

But then, when has common sense ever determined government policy? (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Special meeting held by Chamber

The board of directors of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce held a special meeting yesterday afternoon to have a question and answer session with Southwestern Public Service President, Berl M. Springer.

Ed Aftergut started the questions with, "What about all these rumours about a plant being built here?"

After giving some background on the final Harrington unit completion and the building of the Tolk plant near Muleshoe, Springer explained Southwestern Public Service Company (SWPS) had purchased enough water rights in the Pampa area to operate a plant. He further reiterated SWPS had bought water rights in the Clovis-Hobbs, N. M. area.

Although Pampa would be the first choice, Springer said, "We do not know at this time which way we are going."

He further explained the decision would be determined by the success of negotiations with Central Telephone and Utilities Corporation in Kansas and Powerline Public Service of Oklahoma on the interconnections Southwestern Public Service could make in order to fully use the potential of a possible plant.

"However," Springer stated, "I would not want to leave the impression that there are any firm plans." He also stated that any project would not even be attempted until after the completion of the Tolk plant in 1985.

After some discussion on the floor and a commentary by Springer on coal and nuclear power, Rick Oncken asked, "What about a rate increase?" Springer replied the company was in the early stages of figuring a rate increase to be brought forward either late in 1979 or early 1980.

"Look at the situation," Springer said. According to him the last rate increase was in 1977; it will be 1980 before the increase goes into effect, a time span of about three years. Springer stated SWPS did not realize anything close to what was anticipated in the last rate increase, and feels even with this increase the company will be behind from the day the rate increase goes into effect.

Southwestern Public Service Company suffered a dramatic loss this summer due to weather conditions and the conservation effort. However, Springer states, "We're going to minimize and ask as little as possible," regarding the increase.

Springer did not know what percentage the increase would be, but commented, "It will not be anything near the 11 percent inflation rate." He said it will be 60 or 90 days before SWPS will be ready with the preliminary figures.

According to Springer, the company is instituting additional economy programs to keep the rate as low as possible and wanted to stress the fact that their plants are being built for one-half the national average cost due to the use of their own engineers and construction teams.

In other business, President Luther Robinson welcomed the new Chamber of Commerce directors: Jane Gattis, Rick Oncken, Phil Gentry, and Joe Gidden. Also discussed at the special meeting was the Chamber of Commerce Directors reception and banquet to be held on Oct. 25.

Clements challenges White

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says the state attorney general should stop talking and start acting if he thinks he can prove liability and recover damages for runaway Mexican oil that has stained the glistening white beaches of South Texas.

"I am not protecting anybody," Clements said on a television panel program carried by a number of the state's public broadcasting stations Wednesday night.

The governor was referring to statements by Attorney General Mark White that he intended to file suit against Pemex, the Mexican state-controlled oil monopoly, and SEDCO, the Dallas-based company that provided the drilling platform for the runaway well in the Bay of Campeche.

"If our attorney general thinks he has a suit against SEDCO then let him sue. Let him go ahead and sue and stop talking about it and get it out of the political arena," said Clements.

The governor is a founder of SEDCO, but his interests in the company have been placed in a blind trust while he is in office. The company now is directed by his son, Gil Clements.

Both Clements and SEDCO officials have denied the company had anything to do with the drilling operation on the Mexican offshore rig.

Welfare department building on schedule

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The new welfare and youth office building that Gov. Bill Clements tried unsuccessfully to veto will be ready for occupancy in 2 1/2 to 3 years, says Human Resources Commissioner Jerome Chapman.

Chapman reported Wednesday to the board that sets policy for the Department of Human Resources that an architect already has been hired to design the $40 million building.

Chapman said the architectural firm of Jarvis, Putty, Jarvis of Dallas is expected to have initial drawings in 60 days.

The building will house both the human resources department — formerly called the State Welfare Department — and the Texas Youth Council.

Clements had tried to block construction of the building — which will be financed with federal funds — but Attorney General Mark White held Aug. 31 the governor's veto was unconstitutional.

Meanwhile, he said, the department would move into rented quarters, turning its space in the John H. Reagan State Office Building near the Capitol over to the House of Representatives.

The board delayed until Oct. 26 its action on a proposed sharp curtailment of its hearing aid program for needy old persons.

Dr. Emmett Greif, chief of medical services, said the curtailment was necessary because the Legislature pared funds for it by 44 percent. When the House Appropriations Committee asked the department earlier this year where budget cuts could be made with the least harm, it listed the hearing aid program.

Susan Kelley, an Austin lawyer for the Senior Citizens Legal Project, said old people are particularly worried about a proposed rule allowing one hearing aid per lifetime instead of every five years.

Priscilla called to testify in trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes called the ex-wife of millionaire defendant Cullen Davis to testify in a stormy session that prompted a string of prosecution objections and a warning from the judge.

"I don't see what Mrs. Davis demonstrated," said prosecutor Jack Strickland, who objected 34 times in 37 minutes Wednesday.

Judge Gordon Gray sustained 32 of those objections and at one point threatened to hold Haynes in contempt.

"If you ask that question again you're going to be held in contempt," said Gray when Haynes asked Priscilla Davis about the defendant's $1.2 million dollar counter offer to her proposed $20 million divorce settlement.

With the jury out, Haynes persuaded the judge to allow the question.

Davis is accused of ordering his former pool-shooting crony, David McCrory, to arrange the contract murder of his divorce judge. His first trial on the charges ended in a mistrial in Houston with the jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of conviction.

The dark-haired defendant maintains he was framed by Priscilla McCrory and Pat Bursleson and that his vast family fortune was the impetus for the alleged scheme.

The scheme was the "$20 million gamble," contended Haynes. He would not comment on why Priscilla was called to the stand Wednesday, but earlier defense attorneys said they felt "obligated" to show jurors the "co-conspirators."

During her testimony Wednesday, Priscilla alluded to the 1976 shooting spree in which her lover and her daughter were murdered.

Without explaining why, she testified she hired around-the-clock security after the rampage "because I didn't ever want to enter a house that wasn't guarded again."

The blonde witness survived a chest wound and testified in 1977 that Davis was the man in black who gunned down four persons at his $6 million mansion.

That jury acquitted the 46-year-old industrialist of killing Andrea Wilbourn, 12, Priscilla's daughter by a previous marriage.

Students return to schools as largest teacher strike ends

The nation's largest teacher strike this year is over as classes open today for 189,000 pupils in Detroit. But negotiations seeking to end the nation's longest strike in a suburb of New Orleans reached an impasse.

In San Francisco, classes were conducted Wednesday in kindergarten through the eighth grades despite a 16-day strike by 1,400 teachers. About 75 percent of the students enrolled showed up for classes.

Walkouts ended in Michigan, Illinois and Spokane, Wash., but there were still about 18,000 teachers on strike in 10 states. The strikes affected some 292,000 pupils.

The 3-week-old Spokane dispute was apparently settled early today when negotiators reached a tentative contract agreement. Leona Dater, spokeswoman for the Spokane Education Association, said 7,400 teachers would vote on the new pact later today. Neither side released details of the contract.

Classes began Monday, but attendance has averaged only 50 percent.

The 12,000-member Detroit Federation of Teachers voted Wednesday to end their 17-day walkout pending ratification of a proposed three-year settlement.

Union president Mary Ellen Riordan told the crowd of teachers at Olympia Stadium that the proposed contract was "the best contract that will be available to us."

Detroit officials opened classes Sept. 5, but closed the district's 303 schools two days later when teachers rejected a tentative pact by a 612-vote margin.

In the Jefferson Parish district in suburban New Orleans, a negotiator for 2,000 striking teachers said early today the union had rejected what the board said was its final offer.

Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards spent 13 hours during two days shuttling between the two camps trying to find a proposal acceptable to both.

The teachers rejected an offer calling for a 10 percent pay raise this year and a 5.4 percent raise next year.

Strikes ended in Champaign and Charleston, Ill., sending some 13,200 pupils back to class.

Champaign's tentative contract settlement was reached early today, apparently ending the largest teacher walkout in Illinois. The district has 650 teachers and about 10,000 pupils. Classes were set to begin today after the 12-day strike.

The Charleston settlement, reached Wednesday, brought 143 teachers annual raises of up to $1,000 and other benefits. Other teacher walkouts in Illinois are keeping about 8,000 students out of class.

Teachers in the Allegan County Intermediate district in Michigan also ratified a new contract Wednesday, and negotiators in the Oxford district reached tentative agreement on a new three-year contract.

However, eight Michigan districts still faced strikes by a total of 4,100 teachers affecting about 80,650 pupils.

Other strikes continued in districts in Alabama, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Less talk, more drilling needed.

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas Railroad commissioner says less talk and more drilling are needed to rid the nation of its "iron lung" dependence on foreign oil.

"It will take fewer regulations and more mining and it will take less overall governmental interference and more energy production," Mack Wallace said.

Speaking before the Pacific Coast Gas Association, Wallace said Wednesday the nation's energy lifeline is based on tenuous foreign imports and vulnerable sea lanes that are dangerously susceptible to disruption and destruction from a variety of sources.

Wallace said the potential variety includes a coup in Saudi Arabia, the blockage of the Strait of Hormuz, another Arab oil embargo, an invasion of Kuwait or Saudi Arabia by Iraq, or interference with U.S. shipping lanes by any one of eight or more nations on the African continent.

He said it is dangerous and frightening for the nation to be 50 percent dependent on foreign oil.

"We must demand that our national leaders place the highest priority on energy self-sufficiency," he said.

"There is no strong national leadership to give us coal, and we need it. There is no strong national leadership to order the production of energy from public lands, and we need it."

He said the nation's real energy war is growth vs. no-growth.

"Unless the trend can be stopped, the United States is headed toward economic disaster," he said.

"What has happened is no-growth people and radical environmentalists have so propagated the notion that normal energy expansion in this country under the free enterprise system has been stopped for all practical purposes."

Wallace said a long list of environmental overkill includes three oil shale projects in Colorado, a 170,000 barrel-a-day refinery in Virginia, a 250,000 barrel-a-day refinery in Maine, the Long Beach-Midland pipeline project, the enhanced production of 94,000 barrels a day in heavy oil in California, the Kaiparowits generating plant in Utah, and the development of geothermal energy at the Geysers in California.

Judge confirms sale of Furr's

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal judge confirmed the sale Wednesday of financially troubled Furr's Inc. to a West German grocer, announced Patrick J. Murphy, president and chief executive officer of the Lubbock-based supermarket chain.

Murphy said proceedings in the bankruptcy court of Judge John Flowers confirmed the plan for arrangement as proposed by Furr's with its unsecured creditors.

Flowers determined that the required majority of creditors had voted for all elements of the plan and specifically found the plan to be feasible and in the best interest of Furr's creditors.

Murphy said final closing and the resulting transfer of ownership to a successful bidding group headed by Willie Leibbrand, a West German grocer, would begin Oct. 8.

Murphy also expressed his appreciation for support given to Furr's by its suppliers, employees and customers during the period after May 22 when the company filed for court protection.

He said the company has successfully reorganized and is no longer under supervision of the bankruptcy court. He said ample capital has been infused into the company by the West German group to enable Furr's to expand and improve facilities and services.

TEXAS

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Tom Green County officials are awaiting the return of a 33-year-old man arrested this week in California on an San Angelo murder indictment.

A county grand jury returned a murder indictment against Tommy Charles Perez, 33, Sept. 6, in the Aug. 18 shooting death of tavern owner Mike Rios.

Police said Rios and Perez argued over a cover charge at Rios' La Fiesta Club shortly before the shooting. The club owner was shot once through the heart.

Perez was arrested by Guadalupe, Calif., police Tuesday and is awaiting extradition to Texas.

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals is backed up 18 to 19 months on cases that require oral arguments or special study, the presiding appellate judge said Wednesday.

Judge John F. Onion Jr. of Austin told the Judicial Settlement Conference here the court has disposed of 2,087 cases in 1979, but is facing a backlog of 2,500 cases.

Onion said the backlog has increased significantly in the last 10 years.

"In 1966, 735 new appeals were originated," he said. "And this moved to 2,458 in 1976, 3,267 in 1977 and 3,104 last year."

Onion said the caseload could be eased with the passage of a constitutional amendment which would allow the courts of civil appeals to take criminal appeals.

But that proposal has disadvantages, Onion noted. He said some of the civil appellate courts are in smaller cities, and more than 50 percent of criminal appeals come from Dallas and Harris Counties.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission Wednesday set record high limits for quail hunting in the state.

The commission set a 20-bird per day limit for quail hunting in portions of the Trans-Pecos and South Texas areas. The commission also set a 60-bird possession limit.

The previous high limit was 12 per day.

Jim Cox, commission spokesman, said the high limits were prompted by heavy spring and summer rains which caused "outstanding nesting and survival."

Limits elsewhere in the state include: 16 birds per day and 48 bird possession limit in most of Central and West Central Texas; 12 birds per day and 36 bird possession limit in East Texas, Northeast Texas and the western portion of the Panhandle.

The quail season is determined by each county. Some will begin in mid-October.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission Wednesday announced the issuance of a surface mining permit for a uranium project in Karnes County.

Conoco, Inc., posted the required bond for the 1,760 Boso project.

The site is nine miles west of Falls City and a mile south of Deweesville.

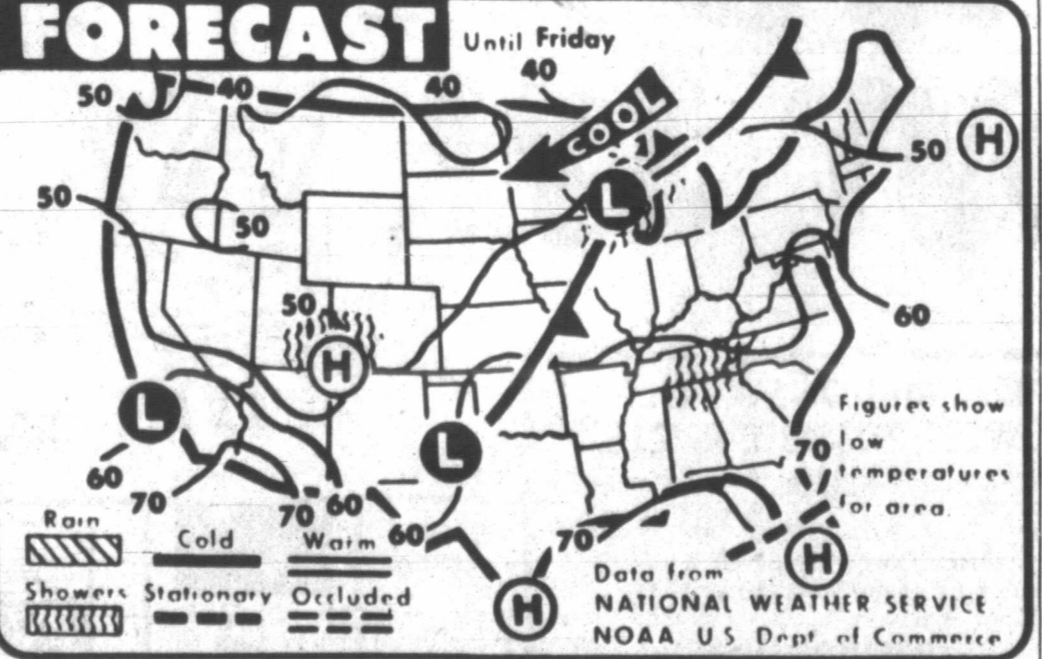

The company plans to mine some 91 acres of the area and expects to produce 86,000 tons of uranium ore per year for 10 years.

Judge reviews McInnis tape recordings

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has reviewed taped conversations in which Hidalgo County District Attorney Oscar McInnis allegedly plotted to have another man killed and will be asked today to admit the recordings into evidence.

Lawyers for the State Bar of Texas, seeking to revoke McInnis' law license, said they would ask Judge Joe B. Evins to rule today that jurors could listen to some of the tapes.

Evins told jurors in the disbarment to stay home Wednesday while he reviewed eight hours of recorded conversations between McInnis and jail inmate Daniel Rodriguez.

Texas rangers Joaquin Jackson and Bruce Casteel checked the Hidalgo County grand jury room Wednesday for listening devices before Evins and lawyers in the case began the long listening session.

Lawyers remained closeted with the judge until Wednesday at 4 p.m. when Sheriff Brig Marmolejo, his attorney Jon Wood and Rodriguez joined the judge in the room.

The State Bar wants to use the tapes as evidence to support its allegation that McInnis engaged in unprofessional conduct by asking Rodriguez to arrange another man's death.

The man was never killed. McInnis contends his troubles stem from a conspiracy led by Marmolejo set him up in an attempt to force him from office and replace him with Wood.

The conversations took place in April and May 1978 at the Hidalgo County jail where McInnis visited Rodriguez. Three telephone conversations between the men also were recorded by FBI agent Richard Graham.

Criminal murder-conspiracy charges against McInnis were dropped after state and federal judges ruled the tapes inadmissible in court. However, those rulings do not apply to the disbarment trial, which is a civil proceeding and governed by different rules of evidence.

Rodriguez has testified he suggested the only way McInnis would be rid of the intended victim, Noe Villanueva, would be to "blow his brains out."

McInnis had represented Villanueva's ex-wife in a bitter child custody fight.

Rodriguez, who was serving time on a state murder conviction and federal drug charge, said the district attorney took his remark seriously and asked if he could arrange it.

After the initial discussion of killing Villanueva, Rodriguez told Marmolejo about it and the sheriff gave him a recorder to hide in his boot.

Three conversations between Rodriguez and McInnis were taped in that manner. The sheriff went to federal prosecutors, who sent Graham to fit Rodriguez with a recorder attached to his back and operated with a switch mounted on his belt.

Director gives trash update

A. B. Cooke, Director of Public Works for the City of Pampa gave an update yesterday on the progress of the can-to-container transition.

According to Cooke, the City collection crews began setting the new boxes in the south part of Pampa, Monday. They are presently working in the Prairie Village area. The City now has one collection truck, 636 three yard capacity containers, and 54 one and one-half yard containers.

There are two crews working on the transition, one assembling the containers and one setting the containers.

Cooke expects to be through with the first two sections at the end of next week, and added, "We hope to do it a little faster next week."

The cans should be emptied at least one more time, Cooke stated, before they will be ready to start emptying the containers. "To begin with, the containers will be emptied once a week," the Public Works Director said and continued to say the sanitary department may increase the amount of pick-ups if necessary.

The boxes are metal, painted tan, with a heavy vinyl lid. The lids are light-weight yet built to resist the weather and animals. Cooke stressed that the lids should be left down in order to fulfill their original purpose of keeping trash in and unwanted elements out.

One box will serve four houses, two on one side of the alley and the two houses opposite. Cooke stated the boxes will be set in the middle of the property line as often as possible, but occasionally will have to be placed where the overhead power lines will not interfere with the emptying of the container.

Cooke commented he was very glad to finally get the transition started and that it should really clean up the community. He added all the towns he had spoken with were well satisfied with the container system.

Police receive first aid kits for patrol cars

Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman received six first aid kits for Pampa Police Department patrol vehicles from the Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday.

The kits were presented to Chief Ryzman by Jerry Burgdorf, Chairman of First Aid, and Darville Orr, Chairman of the board of directors for the Red Cross.

Orr commented that as soon as the Red Cross found out none of the patrol cars had first aid kits, they immediately got as many as possible. Orr added he hoped to have another six or seven kits as soon as the Red Cross can get them.

Ryzman said that all the police personnel are working toward certification in First Aid and CPR, many of them having an instructor's license or Emergency Medical Training already. He stated only about six need their certificates renewed.

Since the police are often the first on the scene, it was remarked, the kits will help a victim receive aid immediately, perhaps even saving a life. It was agreed by all present that the first aid kits are a very necessary item in a police department patrol vehicle.

Vaccination clinic to be held

A vaccination clinic will be open in Pampa on Oct. 11, 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., according to Jerry DeSha, Health Program Specialist for the Texas Department of Health.

The clinic will be offering vaccines that give protection against several childhood diseases and will be located at the Marcus-Sanders Community Center, 407 S. Crawford. Protection will be given against polio, diphtheria, lock jaw, whooping cough, measles, rubella, and mumps.

If your children are not up-to-date on their vaccinations, please bring them to the clinic for free protection against these childhood diseases.

Earnie's Second Chance

Tomorrow night in Las Vegas, Earnie Shavers will get his second chance to fight for the world heavyweight boxing title. The first time, in September, 1977, Shavers lost a 15-round decision to Muhammad Ali. "A man has to be crazy to enjoy getting hit on the side of the head," says Shavers, who usually makes things much less enjoyable for his opponents than for himself. He has fought 66 professional bouts, and has won 58 of them, scoring 56 knockouts. "I'm a natural puncher and can take out any opponent," Shavers says. He earned tomorrow night's title shot by knocking out Ken Norton in one round last March.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is Shavers' opponent in tomorrow night's title bout?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — During the Middle Ages, the falcon was often used for hunting.

Gill returns in lead role in Pampa High School play

A goal-setting young actress has returned to Pampa for a year, but she's not letting her acting skills gather dust while she's here.

Cynthia Gill will play the lead role next week in the Pampa High School production of "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds."

Gill, who leaves next September for a year of professional study in London, is recreating the role of Beatrice, which she played in 1973 when she was a senior at Pampa High.

"It's a good educational experience for me and the high school students," says Gill. "We're exposing ourselves to other people's work."

"It's been a real neat thing," she adds. "I've got to put in a lot of ideas."

Gill will portray Beatrice, an embittered young mother whose dreams of being a dancer have been shattered. Her feelings are vented on her two daughters.

"She got married to please her father and ends up being a never was," says Gill.

"Before, I played her as just a slob. Now she's more of an eccentric, a rounded character."

"Part of that is simply because of the skills I've picked up acting. A lot of the things she feels are the same fears I've had — family versus career."

"I've had more experiences now to pull from and I understand her feelings," says Gill. "I can call up times of anger, times of sadness for the part."

Directing the play will be PHS drama director, Rochelle Lacy, who worked with Gill in the earlier production.

"We've wanted to do it again for a long time," says Gill. "We spent several years tossing it around. It's very special to both of us."

While at PHS, she also appeared in "Bye, Bye Birdie" and "The Music Man." Interested in writing and music, Gill studied voice at Trinity University in San Antonio while she earned degrees in theater and speech.

For some time, Gill planned to do graduate work at the Dallas Theatre Center under Paul Baker, with whom she had worked in a professional theater group at Trinity.

"I wanted to be exposed to another way of working," she says, "and with him you train the entire theater artist — sound, acting, directing, set and costume design, lobby displays, etc."

From Baker, the originator of regional repertoire, she says she picked up a multi-part philosophy.

"Art is the process as opposed to the result," explains Gill. "Work is not result-oriented — it's a combination of the way you look at line, texture, rhythm."

She actually paid last year's rent in San Antonio as an actor, she says, when she worked with a professional theater group that presented the classics, Shakespeare, children's productions and some improvisation to civic and school groups.

"I quit because of artistic differences with the way the company was run," explains Gill. "I felt like my standards were higher and we were doing a lot of sloppy work."

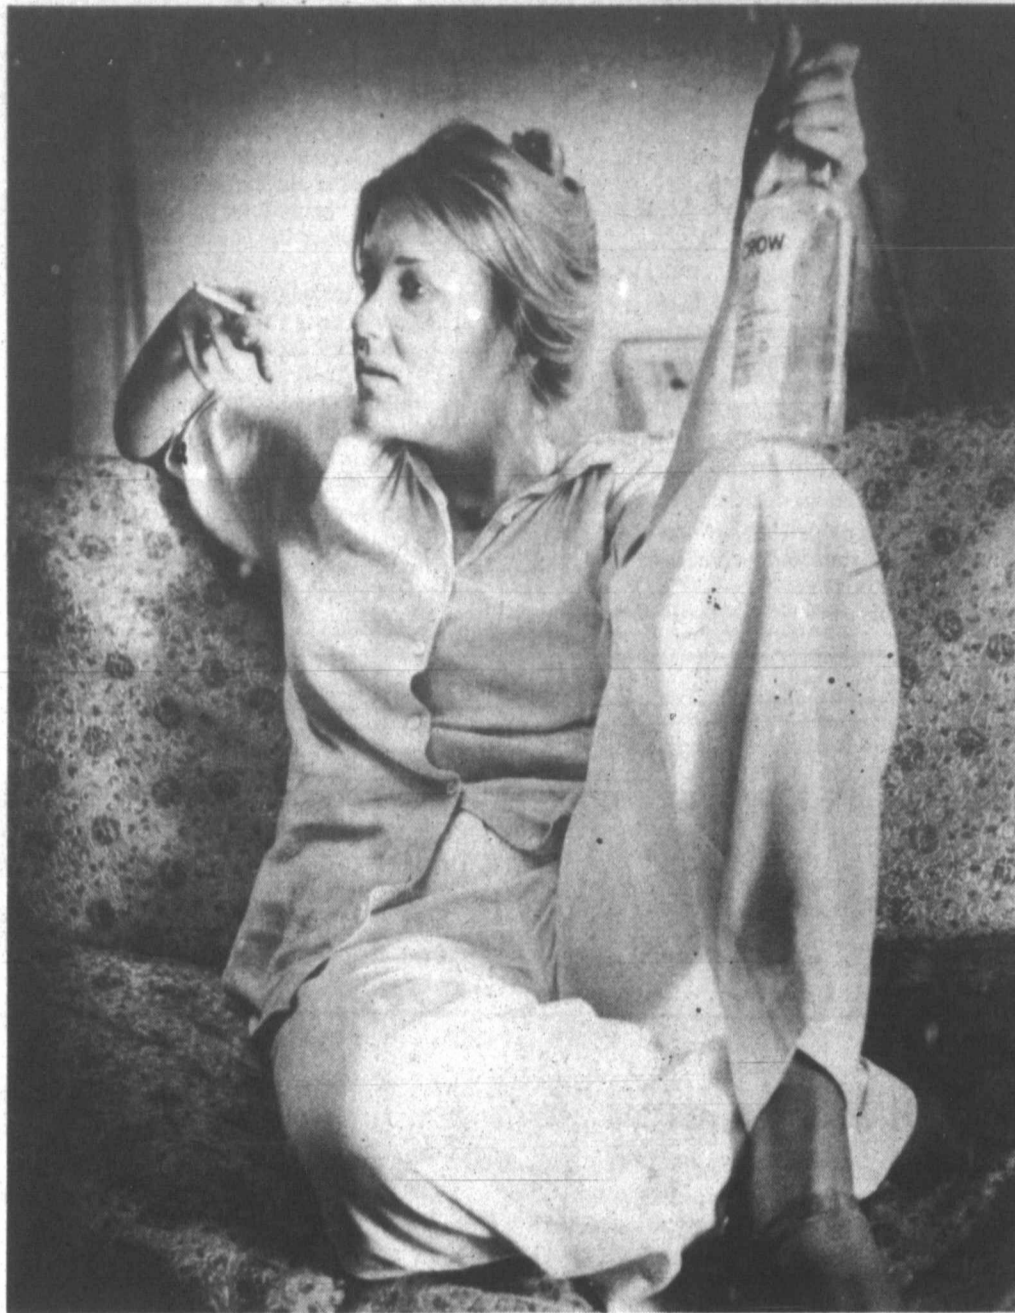

"Until the middle of my last semester at Trinity, everything I did was to prepare me to go to the Dallas Theatre Center," she says. "But when I got right down to it, I didn't want to do that."

"I liked doing all of the theater but I guess I wanted to specialize in movement, voice, acting styles," she adds.

She applied for a one-year program in London to study strictly with other actors whose aim is a professional career. After a two- and a-half hour interview, she was accepted to the school, which begins next September.

"At the end of the year's study they put together a show that's presented both in London and the U.S.," says Gill. "It's sort of a showcase thing so directors and producers can get a look at you and maybe hire you."

Gill is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gill, now of Weatherford. Employed in the personnel division at Celanese, she lives with her grandmother, Mrs. B.G. Gordon.

Audience sits on stage in year's first PHS play

The school year's first drama production at Pampa High will feature the audience in a little different light.

Those who come to see the performances of "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" will be seated on and around the stage area.

Performances are scheduled Oct. 4, 5, 6, 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. in the P.H.S. Auditorium.

Seating will be limited to maintain an intimate atmosphere with the audience.

"The concept is that the audience is sitting in our living room, a converted warehouse," says Cynthia Gill, a PHS graduate who returns to recreate the role of Beatrice, which she played in 1973 when the PHS drama department produced the same play.

The performance on Friday, Oct. 5, will be a special fund-raising benefit by invitation only, with a donation of $10 or more requested. Proceeds will go toward new equipment for the drama department.

Immediately after the Friday performance, a reception will be given for Gill. A graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio, she is a professional actress preparing for a year's study in London.

Advance tickets for the other performances are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students. Ticket prices are slightly higher at the door.

Written by Paul Zindel, it won a Pulitzer Prize in 1971. Recommended for senior high and adult audiences, it combines pain, humor, beauty and hope.

In the role of Beatrice, Gill plays the embittered mother who forfeited her dreams of a career for a family. She vents her unhappiness on her two daughters, Tillie and Ruth.

Glenna Wilkins plays the part of Tillie, who develops an interest in a science fair at her school. When she becomes a finalist in the competition, her mother and sister slowly change their attitudes toward her.

But a bitter exchange with the older daughter, Ruth, reopens Beatrice's old wounds.

Lori Barnes plays the smart and snobby Janice Vickery, Tillie's main competition in the science fair. Nanny, the senile old woman whom Beatrice tends for a meager income, is played by Lisa Anderson.

The production is directed by Rochelle Lacy of the PHS drama department. Assistant director and understudy is Stacy Finkenbinder.

DEAR ABBY

Guidelines needed for seat - savers

DEAR ABBY: The practice of "saving seats" needs some guidelines much like the guidelines for tipping. I recently attended a graduation exercise where two people arrived early and "saved" 20 seats in the front row for the rest of the family who arrived one minute before the activities started!

At least 500 people walked down to the front row during that time, thinking those seats were available.

Because no guidelines exist with regard to this practice, all persons honored the "Sorry, these seats are taken," explanation.

May I suggest a rule? One person may save ONE SEAT ONLY in public places.

Because this situation occurs frequently, your comments would be greatly appreciated.

NO SEATS IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR SEATS: Your suggestion makes a lot of sense. But a trend has to start somewhere; I'm willing. How about you? Readers!

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a very affectionate man. Don't get me wrong. I'm not complaining; I'm lucky, but I think there's a time and place for everything. My problem is that Henry will pinch me on the behind, or make a grab for me in front of the kids, and it makes me very uncomfortable.

I don't mind being patted and pawed when Henry and I are alone, but I get embarrassed when he does it in front of the kids. When I tell him how I feel about this, he says it's good for the kids to see this kind of thing at home, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

I agree, kids should witness love and affection between parents, but isn't there a limit? And if so, where is it?

THE OBJECT OF HIS AFFECTIONS

DEAR OBJECT: Love and affection are indeed beautiful. And children who witness it at home are blessed. But the limit is reached when you begin to feel uncomfortable.

DEAR ABBY: You told AMERICA FIRST, who objected to our taking in the boat people:

"Unless you are a direct descendant of the American Indian, you wouldn't be here if your forebears hadn't sought refuge from another country."

Am I to assume that you do not recognize over 20 million blacks in this country who are NOT descendants of American Indians?

OFFENDED IN VALLEJO

DEAR OFFENDED: You are right. I apologize for having overlooked the fact that YOUR ancestors were brought here in chains — to the everlasting shame of those who were guilty of such outrageously inhumane conduct.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

More tips on hard - to - swallow pills

By Joe Graedon

Q. Some time ago you answered a question for a person who was having trouble swallowing pills. You recommended a special pill-taking cup.

I'm plagued with the same problem. All my life taking medicine has been an ordeal. I have searched high and low for the "nifty" glass you mentioned but none of the pharmacists in my area know what I'm talking about.

Where can you get this pill taker? A. We were swamped with letters from readers who also had problems locating the "drink-a-pill" device. Your pharmacist should be able to order this special kind of cup either from Robbins Associates in Burnsville, Minn., or Apex Medical Supply in Minneapolis.

If you still have trouble finding the pill-taking glass, send us a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me at King Features Syndicate, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017, and we will supply specific product information.

We also have received many letters from folks who offered commonsense suggestions on how to make swallowing pills easier.

One reader from North Freedom, Wis., wrote to say: "I was one of the millions unable to swallow drugs. The answer is take your medicine with food. Chew the food well, and just before you are ready to swallow it press the pill into the food on your tongue, swallow and you will never know you are taking medicine."

A great-grandfather from Dunedin, Fla., had this to say: "Surprised you don't know the age-old method my mother taught me. Take a spoonful of jelly, jam or preserves — insert the pill — swallow with one gulp and follow with water. For a variation try applesauce."

Another contributor swears that milk is the answer. She says that even large pills will "slide down easily, especially if you tilt your head back and swallow."

A mother from Covington, Va., says that drinking the liquid through a straw is the solution. "I put my pills in the front of my mouth and take a big drink through a straw and you will never know when they go down the hatch."

A Beaumont, Texas, friend reports that you can make the medicine go down a whole lot easier if you cut a slit in a piece of canned peach or pear and insert the pill in the fruit. Then swallow the whole thing quickly. She says that a piece of banana will also do the trick.

Many of these helpful hints make good sense to us and if one works for you, great. One word of caution, however. Some medicine should be taken on an empty stomach, without milk or food. If this is the situation with your drug, we recommend that you invest in an inexpensive pill-taking cup.

Q. I am allergic to penicillin. Even a small dose can put me into shock. So when I need an antibiotic my doctor prescribes a drug called Ilosone (erythromycin estolate).

I have just heard that the FDA wants to eliminate this medicine from the market. That doesn't make any sense. If they ban it, what will people like me do? I'm worried sick.

A. Stop worrying! The Food and Drug Administration is not out to eliminate your alternative to penicillin.

Erythromycin will remain available in many forms and your doctor will continue to be able to prescribe it under various brand names including Bristamycin, E-mycin, Erythrocin, Ethril and Ilotycin. In addition, there are more than 50 drug companies that supply generic erythromycin.

The controversy you've been reading about surrounds only one particular chemical form of this antibiotic. There is evidence that the Eli Lilly Company's brand of erythromycin estolate (Ilosone) may be more dangerous than other forms.

Research over the last six years has linked Ilosone with a higher incidence of liver damage than its close erythromycin cousins. As far back as 1977, Dr. Peter Nicholas wrote in the N.Y. State Journal of Medicine that "it is difficult at this writing to justify exposing patients to the risks of morbidity associated with this drug."

Since this formula appears to have an advantage over other forms of erythromycin and may carry significant risk, we are declaring a People's Pharmacy Alert for Ilosone, at least until the Eli Lilly Company withdraws it from the market.

Altrusans focus on international issues

Altrusa Club of Pampa met this month for programs on World Literacy Day and The International Year of the Child.

At a luncheon earlier this month, Sister Rosorio Martine, a native of Mexico who is now associated with St. Vincent De Paul's Catholic Church, presented a history of the strengths, weaknesses and problems of the Mexican population in the U.S.

During a dinner meeting Monday, Altrusans were treated to an educational approach in the programming for the Year of the Child. The Storybook Players of Pampa High School Drama Department presented a series of short sketches from "One Basket" and "Free to Be You and Me". The sketches are designed as children's theater productions for the local elementary schools.

Rochelle Lacy, organizer of the group, explained their objectives. Hostess for the luncheon was Katherine Sullins. The dinner meeting was hosted by Irene Smith.

Altrusa's next meeting will be a noon luncheon Oct. 8 in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Coffee planned for homemakers

Homemakers in Pampa are invited to a get-acquainted coffee Oct. 9 at 9:30 a.m. in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Building.

Sponsored by the Jane Long Extension Homemaker Club, the get-together is an effort to expand membership in EH clubs, which work with the local extension agents to plan and carry out educational programs in home economics.

Elaine Houston, Gray County Extension Agent, will give a program on Christmas gift ideas.

Membership is open to all homemakers regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion or natural origin. For more information, contact the Gray County Extension Office at 669-7429.

Portrait artist at Pampa show

An artist who leans toward portraiture is Mary Beth Pineda, an exhibitor at the Arts and Crafts Festival Oct. 13 and 14 at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Pineda has lived in Santa Fe, N.M. for the past three years and will have a one-woman show there in January.

Working mostly in charcoals and pastels, she has done commercial portraits of Dallas Cowboy Roger Staubach, Nimo of the Fleetwood Mac group, Dick Hitt, columnist for the Dallas Times Herald, and various entertainers and public figures.

Pineda spent 15 years as a commercial and fine artist and has handled most major fashion accounts in Dallas. She was former director of arts for J.C. Penney in California.

DR. LAMB Digestive gas embarrassing

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Perhaps you can help me with what I consider a serious problem. It may not be serious compared with some others but it is to me. I produce more natural gas than the local gas company and I'm getting better at it all the time.

I just turned 50 and am in perfect shape physically. I'm active and live a busy life. I really don't know what to do about this problem. It's not the kind of subject that's discussed at cocktail parties but after three hours at the theater, I'm ready to pop.

Is this a physiological problem, a diet problem or a sign of an ulcer growing or what? Can you give me some suggestions?

DEAR READER — It's a symptom and it's a fairly common one. About 10 percent of the general population has difficulties because of trapped gas in the digestive system.

There are two major sources of gas. In many people, it's swallowed air. Some patients object when they're told that they swallow air but a careful analysis has been done by withdrawing the gas and chemically analyzing it. When the gas is mostly nitrogen and oxygen, it is air. The other major source of gas is from fermentation from undigested foods.

To give you a more complete understanding of the gas problem, I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter that I'm sending you explains, all of us swallow air. You can't drink water or any other liquid without swallowing some air. You can't eat food without that happening. This is more apt to occur if you have problems with dentures or some other reason for difficulty in chewing food.

The kind of fullness you feel immediately after eating is most often associated with air that's been swallowed and is in the stomach. A generalized distension is often associated with gas in the colon.

The average normal individual will swallow air and it will pass unnoticed by him or anyone else. It's the individual with underlying poor bowel function who's more apt to have gas symptoms. This can be from inadequate bulk in the diet or a spastic or irritable colon. There are certain foods that will contribute to gas.

I often forget to mention it when people ask about gas but physical activity is important. You say you're active. A good walk in the evening helps improve normal colon function and exercises such as sit ups that involve bending and use of the trunk muscle also seem to help.

In the rest of your letter you mentioned a popular product advertised on television for gas and indigestion. Don't pay too much attention to such products. Most of them don't work. It really doesn't matter whether gas comes in little bubbles or big bubbles. It still creates the same amount of bubble trouble.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Tale of betrayal

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I've got a big problem and it probably sounds like a soap opera.

The problem started on the last day of school before summer break. My best friend and I saw this cute guy named Paul. We asked around and someone who knew him said he was rich, stuck-up and cruel, but we still wanted to meet him and we finally did.

Our source of information was wrong. He was the sweetest, nicest, foxiest guy we had ever met and we both started liking him.

One night a bunch of us went out and Paul was with us. Well, he started flirting with my girlfriend. I was very happy for her but felt sad for myself.

The next day I told my friend that she was the winner and that I would not get involved with Paul.

One night when my parents were gone and I was home alone, someone knocked on the door. Expecting my girlfriend, I was shocked when I saw the handsome boy. It was Paul.

To make a long story short, after a few kisses, one thing led to another and we made love.

Now I see him every day and we spend a lot of time together just talking and doing other fun things.

I asked Paul if he liked my best friend but he said he liked her only for a friend.

Now I really feel guilty because I betrayed my best friend. I know I must tell her but I don't know what to say. Can you help me? — Lizzy, San Rafael, Calif.

Lizzy: The only person you really betrayed is yourself. If you are going to have sexual contact, at least take precautions so you do not bring an unwanted child into this world. So far as your girlfriend is concerned — say nothing.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 15-year-old girl and I'm very close to my mother who is in her late 30s. We are the best of friends. We share everything — we keep no secrets.

The problem is my mother is overweight and she thinks that my dad and the kids in our family are embarrassed by her. Mom has not always been overweight and I was wondering if this is just a "stage" in her life. — Julie, Rock Island, Ill.

Julie: The older one gets, the easier it is to be overweight. But there are many excellent programs available to help keep those extra pounds off. Encourage mom to look into one or two.

Extension council discusses projects

The Gray County Extension Homemakers Council held a regular meeting Monday morning to discuss several projects.

Pauline Beard, president, called the meeting to order and Janice Carter called the roll and read the minutes.

Pat Murray reported that plans were being finished for the annual luncheon, scheduled Oct. 22. A membership drive, sponsored by the Jane Long Extension Club, will be Oct. 9 at 9:30 a.m. in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Building.

Christmas in October will be Oct. 11 in the First Christian Church Fellowship Hall, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Westerns wanted

Pay attention, you would-be Zane Grey's. Twentieth Century-Fox and Bantam Books have arranged a $25,000 "First Western Novel" competition to encourage the writing of "the kind of Western fiction that has entertained readers and moviegoers for decades."

The winning novel — the contest is open to all U.S. residents who have not previously published a novel — will be published by Bantam in the fall of 1980 and the film rights sold to Fox. The author will receive a $5,000 contest prize, $10,000 as a publisher's guaranteed advance against royalties and $10,000 as Fox's price for the film rights.

Entries, which must be between 50,000 and 75,000 words, will be accepted through March 31, 1980. The winner will be announced next June.

Details and rules are available from Bantam Books - 20th Century - Fox, First Western Novel Competition, Boulder, Colo. 80306.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

Not long ago we moved our suitcases into a motel room while two chatty cleaning women were still there, fuming volubly about the mess left by friends of the honeymoon couple who had just moved out. It really was inexcusable. The pals had written endearments on all mirrors with liquid shoe polish, which is extremely hard to remove from glass. They had made a whole box of tissues into useless rosettes that shattered all over and had scattered so much rice into the shag carpet that the clean sweeper had to be emptied — and they'd spilled so much soft drinks and coffee that shampooing was necessary.

The young cleaning woman said, "If I ever get married, nobody's going to know about it but him and me." The older woman tossed her head scornfully. "If I'd known at your age what I know now, I'd never have had a honeymoon or even a marriage. All I want now is a divorce."

I hope none of you middle-aged twosomes share her views. I hope you are as happy in your marriages as I am in mine. Isn't it wonderful to remember that you knew then most of what you know now — and you're still together, convinced that double blessedness is far preferable to single loneliness? Many of us were joyously content as young couples and we never changed. At least that's what I tell myself when Otis hangs his suits on my side of the closet, so tightly that it puts odd creases in my blouses — or when I have dinner ready to come out of the fridge for cooking and he nibbles up all the ham and ice cream ahead of time. I sense his tension when I spill my allergy pills all over the floor and he steps on one or two I didn't recover — or when, as happened recently, I upset a glass of ice tea in his lap. (He changed his pants and left in a hurry. All he said was, "You soaked me!" as he disappeared.)

We have a telephone hook up that rings both in my office at home and his office downtown, so he won't miss any night calls. In the middle of an afternoon, he came puffing into the apartment, mumbling, "My office phone is out of order and I've got a stack of long-distance calls to make. I hope your phone works... Hey, honey, how long has this phone been off the hook?" I knew exactly how long. I said, "Well, I — I made a call two hours ago and I must have neglected to —" I broke off, waiting to be tongue-lashed. But he walked out without further comment. The next day a man knocked on the door with a new phone plus a new number for me alone.

The other day a caller told me she was getting a divorce at 65. She added, "I just love your column, Louise!" I sighed. "It didn't do you any good since you're breaking up your marriage." She said lightly, "Oh, it helped me a lot. I was sick of Mart as soon as I married him 30 years ago. I'm going to marry a lovely widower next week — and we're going to base our new, second marriage on all the good things you tell us to do. I've saved all your columns." I asked, "What was the biggest problem you and Mart had in your 30 years together?" She didn't hesitate. "We never did anything nice for each other. Even on our honeymoon, he played poker all night with some of the men in the hotel. And when our twins were born, he was at a ballgame in another town, 200 miles away." I said, "I hope your new husband will be more considerate." And she said, "He'd darn well better be."

San Antonio hosts first Mariachi convention

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio is an American center for conventions and mariachi music. So it was only a matter of time before somebody held a mariachi convention here.

More than 300 mariachis from Mexico, Texas, California, New Mexico, Arizona — and, strangely enough, Rhode Island — have gathered at the 1st International Mariachi Conference to exchange their ideas, methods and interpretations of the lively Mexican folk music.

The conference, said coordinator Belle San Miguel, reflects the growing popularity of the distinctive music most Americans usually hear for the first time in a Mexican restaurant while on vacation or a convention in the southwestern United States.

Mrs. San Miguel said there are more than 400 mariachi musicians and at least 33 organized professional mariachi groups in San Antonio, where it is still common for a young Don Juan to hire a mariachi band for a midnight serenade outside his girlfriend's window.

Enraged fathers, she added, also are still known to douse the band with a bucket of water if they don't approve of the suitor or the midnight noise. "One band member told me he would never do those jobs again because his instrument got wet," she said.

Several San Antonio high schools sponsor mariachi bands. The strolling trumpet-and-string bands — in elegant black costumes complete with huge white sombreros — are a staple in the numerous restaurants frequented by tourists and natives alike. There are few San Antonio social events without mariachi bands.

Large groups of mariachis regularly take part in masses at Roman Catholic churches — where mariachi music grew up and remained until it became a secular hit in the 1940s.

Mrs. San Miguel said there are hundreds of other mariachi groups in the southwestern states, especially California. The music is understandably popular in Mexico and South America, but there's also an all-girl mariachi band in Japan of all places.

The wailing string ballads and blaring, staccato trumpet polkas are believed to have originated in the state of Jalisco, Mexico, in the mid-1800s, said Mrs. San Miguel.

The generally accepted story of the origin of the word "mariachi" is that it comes from the French word for wedding, "mariage." Maximilian, who ruled Mexico from 1864 until 1867, enjoyed the folk orchestras and requested that they play in the homes of the French

Court on special occasions such as weddings. The Mexicans reportedly began calling the musicians "mariachis."

The music has never been written down or published, so there are numerous interpretations of the songs, she said. The convention is aimed at bringing together the various groups and giving them a chance to compare interpretations or techniques of playing the unique mariachi instruments.

"There's no correct technique, perhaps because it has never been put down as music before," she said. "Everyone has a different interpretation. It will be like that until we have organized mariachi music."

Mrs. San Miguel, who teaches a mariachi class at San Antonio College and whose four children are mariachi musicians, said a mariachi group should include six to 12 musicians. That can vary, she added.

In addition to trumpets, the band should include guitars, violins, a guitarron, which is a large bass guitar with four or five gut strings, and a vihuela, a small guitar with eight strings.

Comer unsure of course of action

District Attorney Harold Comer said today he has not decided whether to press for a settlement with the Ben Stokes' estate in the bondsman's bond forfeiture case.

Stokes, a wealthy Berger bail bondsman, was found dead Friday afternoon. He was to have appeared in 31st District Court Oct. 5 on a call for a $50,000 bond forfeiture filed by Comer.

"There are two things I can do if I decide to pursue the case," Comer said. "I can file a 'suggestion of death' telling the court the defendant is dead or I can file an amended plea naming the suit in the estate of Ben Stokes."

The bond forfeiture involves the case of a Melvin Horne who, after Stokes posted bond, failed to appear in 31st District Court for a probation hearing in July. Horne, convicted of burglary, was later apprehended in Little Rock, Ark.

Stokes said he did not receive his court summons until Horne was apprehended and that he intended to fight the bond forfeiture. The bondsman had refused a $10,000 out of court settlement before his death.

Agriculture officials looking for figure in set-aside program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials say it will be mid-November, at least, before they know for certain how many acres farmers took from production this year under the government's set-aside programs for wheat and feed grains.

Final "certified compliance" in the 1978 set-aside programs was ready last Oct. 19. But officials said Thursday that the 1979 process has been delayed for a number of reasons, including bad weather in parts of the country and new aerial survey techniques that developed problems.

Farmers earlier this year signed up to take from production 22.1 million acres of cropland under the government's programs for wheat, corn and grain sorghum. Barley was not included, as it was in 1978.

In exchange for their participation, farmers are guaranteed price support benefits on the respective crops.

Last year, farmers signed up to take from production about 24 million acres, but wound up idling only 18.7 million. Even after signing up, they have the option of changing their minds on whether to participate.

One official, who did not want to be identified, said he expected final 1979 participation to be "something less" than the 18.7 million acres idled last year.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced two months ago that wheat farmers will have no set-aside requirements for their 1980 crops. A decision on 1980 corn and other feedgrains must be announced by Nov. 15, but officials expect to disclose it before then.

Bergland has said frequently that he expects no large acreage set-aside, if any at all, for next year's feedgrain crops. Domestic and foreign demands for grain are large enough to warrant a return to all-out production, he says.

Despite the 1979 set-aside programs, corn production this year is estimated at a record 7.27 billion bushels, and wheat output at a near-record 2.12 billion bushels.

Department economists estimate total corn use in the marketing year that will begin on Oct. 1 at around 7.4 billion bushels, slightly in excess of the huge 1979 harvest.

Thus, they say, the U.S. corn reserve a year from now may be down to less than 1.1 billion bushels from an estimated 1.24 billion on hand at the present time. Both exports and livestock feed use are expected to increase.

Wheat use in the 1979-80 marketing year, which will end May 31, is forecast at nearly 2.27 billion bushels, also larger than this year's harvest. By June 1, the wheat reserve is expected to be about 782 million bushels, down from 922 million last June 1.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Honey production by the largest commercial beekeepers this year is expected to be down by 2.1 percent from 1978, according to the Agriculture Department.

Production from apiaries having 300 or more colonies of bees was estimated at about 144.3 million pounds, compared with 147.4 million last year, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Wednesday.

The larger commercial units produced about 64 percent of the total 1978 honey output of 230.3 million pounds. Officials said total U.S. honey production for 1979 will be announced in January.

Commercial beekeepers had an estimated 1.95 million colonies at work this year, a 2 percent increase from 1.92 million in 1978, the report said.

But production is expected to average 74.1 pounds a colony, compared with 76.9 pounds last year.

"California yield declined to a more normal level from last year's unusually good yield," the report said. "Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota honey flows were reduced by cooler temperatures and aerial grasshopper spraying. In addition, Nebraska honey flow was reduced by poorer alfalfa bloom."

A spokesman, who did not want to be identified, said USDA had no estimate on how many bee colonies might have been killed by grasshopper spraying this summer. No reports of honey contamination by pesticides have been received, he said.

About half the commercial honey production is accounted for by four states. Those are: California, 16,170,000 pounds this year and down 37 percent from 1978 output; Florida, 18,360,000 and up 10 percent; North Dakota, 21,476,000 and up 10 percent; and South Dakota, 15,770,000 pounds and down 21 percent.

Some other states that showed declines in honey output from 1978 included: Colorado, 2,280,000 pounds, down 6 percent; Michigan, 3,276,000, down 5 percent; Minnesota, 12,500,000, down 1 percent; and Nebraska, 4,600,000, down 40 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beef imports this year are still expected to be in line with earlier estimates, says the Agriculture Department.

Hefner is bouncing back into television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hugh Hefner's Playboy Enterprises, bouncing back from hard times, is making a major move into the television business. Hefner says his corporation will supply networks and pay TV with movies, specials, a monthly magazine and possibly even children's programs.

"It seems a natural extension of the business we're in," Hefner says. "It's all really a matter of communications and entertainment."

The linchpin of Hefner's TV venture will be a monthly series tentatively titled "Electronic Playboy," a television version of the girlie magazine that became an American institution.

"It's a very exciting notion," Hefner said, "a television show that will draw its attitude, personality and contents from the magazine, something that now we can do on cable and couldn't do on network television, at least at this point, (because) it will include some nudity."

"One can imagine in the not distant future having a TV version of the magazine that will be a monthly purchase in video tape or video disc, the way you'd buy the magazine."

Playboy Productions is casting "Electronic Playboy" now, and the show may begin production late this year. It will be distributed through cable systems in 1980.

Other projects are in the works, including a TV disaster movie for ABC (airing in October) and a Playboy anniversary series for cable distribution. This last matter is one of Hefner's pet projects, because it includes a reunion of Playmates from the past 25 years.

Playboy's television venture follows a rather dramatic turnaround for the company, which had slumped badly in the mid-'70s because of overextension, competition from other men's magazines and, says Hefner, some goofing off at the top.

"Yes, there was a period when I was goofing off, and that's when we got into trouble," Hefner says. "It was during the early '70s, when I was going with Barbie (Benton, Hefner's Playmate-turned-girlfriend-turned-country singer). I left all the day-by-day details to others. But I've been more actively involved in the last three to four years, and there's been... a dramatic turnaround."

Indeed, after selling a couple of hotels, dropping a losing record label and tightening up elsewhere, Playboy Enterprises regained its health. The company reported a 45.2 percent increase in annual earnings this year over last year's figure.

Now, says Hefner, the company will concentrate on its casino holdings, the magazine and television.

Hefner says he intends to make Playboy Enterprises a major supplier of TV programs, and that his products will not be limited to Playboy-related themes. Playboy may even make some kiddie shows.

Elite unit to guard pope during visit

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An elite anti-terrorist unit carrying submachine guns will escort Pope John Paul II everywhere on his three-day visit to Ireland starting Saturday, and they will be backed by 12,000 troops and policemen in Ireland's biggest security operation since its founding 58 years ago.

The special "flying squad" of Special Branch agents, beefed up by army marksmen, will fly in three helicopters that will flank John Paul's special craft as he flies around the country on the first papal visit ever to this Roman Catholic nation, police sources said.

"Security will be so tight that even the president will have to carry a special identification card with his photo to get near the Pope," one informant said. "So will government ministers and the bishops. We're taking absolutely no chances at all on this."

The sources said this includes countering possible terrorist attacks by skindivers from the River Liffey as the papal motorcade passes over Dublin's O'Connell Bridge.

Police Superintendent Peter McGing told reporters the nationwide operation is "the biggest of its kind" since the Irish Republic was founded in 1921.

He said even the hundreds of invalids in wheelchairs who will be given special places close to the pope on his stops will have to carry official accreditation and will be searched before they get near the pontiff.

All army and police leave will be canceled from tonight until the pope leaves Shannon airport next Monday for Boston aboard a jumbo jet for a five-day tour of the United States.

Officials said the security plan, which will cost $3.2 million dollars, will involve 7,000 police officers and 5,000 troops — nearly all the Irish Republic's security forces.

Officials said the huge open air masses the Pope will celebrate, including one in Dublin's Phoenix Park Saturday before an expected 1 million Catholics are "a security nightmare."

They said plainclothesmen will mingle with the crowds and random searches will be made among the estimated 2 million persons who will attend the string of services.

Yes there is a Slippery Rock

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa. (AP) — The little college in this little town, the one everybody mentions with a wink and a smile, will have the last laugh this weekend.

America is about to discover a truth patiently explained on T-shirts sold at the campus bookstore:

"Yes there is a Slippery Rock."

Not that it has been a secret. Fan clubs across the land gather in taverns every fall to wave pennants and sash allegiance to the Slippery Rock football team. Go, Rockets!

"Still," said Zane Gray, the bookstore proprietor, who has an inkling about rib-nudging names, "you would be surprised how many people believe Slippery Rock is really just a put on."

Well, hang on for a bulletin:

Next Saturday the dauntless Rockets will meet a rival Pennsylvania team, the Shippensburg Red Raiders, on neutral turf.

They will play upon the holy gridiron of the University of Michigan stadium, which seats

100,000 worshipers, and the thinking of the 5,700 students on this smug campus is that little of Slippery Rock just might fill that Big League joint.

As a gesture to the college whose cute scores it traditionally announces in the course of its own heroic Saturday struggles, the University of Michigan offered the use of its stadium. Noblesse oblige.

Now it is Slippery Rock's turn to wink.

Anything with Slippery Rock printed on it is a hot item.

Last year, the bookstore sold $250,000 worth of souvenirs to fans in every state, and abroad. To meet the ever-growing demand, Zane Gray this year put out a mail-order catalog.

Or you can buy your Slippery Rock cap at Scholz's Beer Garten in Austin, Texas, or at Caccipaglia's bar in Pacifica, Calif., or at Custard's Last Stand in Sylvania, Ohio.

"Everybody, ahem, wants a piece of the Rock," Zane Gray said.

Astros now 2½ out

Reds; Pirates increase leads

ATLANTA (AP) — Phil Niekro is one guy who doesn't like to give his younger brother a beating.

He especially, felt bad about it Wednesday night.

"I'm not proud of what I've done," Phil said after outdueling his brother Joe in what amounted to a family affair.

The result was a 9-4 victory for Phil Niekro's Atlanta Braves over Houston, dampening the Astros' hopes for the National League West title.

The defeat left the Astros 2½ games behind the Cincinnati Reds, who defeated the San Diego Padres 4-3. The combination reduced Cincinnati's "magic number" for clinching the West crown to merely two games.

In another big game Wednesday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Montreal 10-1 and took a 1½-game lead over the Expos in the NL East.

Phil Niekro gave up eight hits, walked one and fanned six, moving into a tie with Sandy Koufax on baseball's all-time strikeout list with 2,396.

Reds 4, Padres 3

Dave Collins' RBI single capped a two-run rally in the eighth inning as Cincinnati defeated San Diego. Collins' single came after doubles by Ray Knight and Heity Cruz had tied the game off loser Randy Jones, 11-12.

Pirates 10, Expos 1

Phil Garner and Tim Foli drove in three runs each and Bruce Kison scattered seven hits to lead Pittsburgh over Montreal. The victory reduced Pittsburgh's number for clinching the East to four games.

Kison, a clutch stretch-run pitcher in his nine-year Pirate career, raised his lifetime September record to 22-6.

Phillies 11, Cardinals 5

Philadelphia scored seven unearned runs in the third inning, including a three-run homer by Tim McCarver, en route to a home season-ending victory over St. Louis.

Pete Rose's 23-game hitting streak, longest in the majors this year, was stopped when the Phillies' star went hitless in five appearances.

Mets 8, Cubs 3

Richie Hebner drove in four runs with a homer and a double to lead New York over Chicago. Hebner, who extended his hitting streak to nine games, hit his 10th homer of the season in the first inning after Donnie Moore walked Lee Mazzilli.

Dodgers 8, Giants 4

Run-scoring singles by Dave Lopes and Bill Russell in the fourth inning led Los Angeles over San Francisco.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 4

Boston slugger Jim Rice collected his 300th hit of the season, but the Red Sox star still has some goals to shoot for. If he hits one more home run, he'll become the fifth player in the history of the majors to hit 40 home runs and have 200 hits in two consecutive years.

Rice has four games left to hit his 40th homer of the season and match those all-time greats.

Orioles 13, Tigers 2

"That's really something, wins No. 1,000 and 1,100 in the same season," exalted Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver after the Orioles had won their 101st game of the year.

The East Division champions gave Weaver his 1,000th victory on opening day in April. They gave him No. 1,100 against the Tigers with the help of homers by Eddie Murray, Benny Ayata and Doug DeCinces.

Royals 4, Angels 0

Frank White smashed a two-run homer, a triple, a double and a single while Dennis

Leonard pitched a five-hitter and struck out eight as the Royals defeated California's West Division champions.

Although the game was meaningless in the standings, a sellout crowd of 40,565 was at Anaheim Stadium, increasing the Angels' home attendance to 2,523,575. The 1948 Cleveland Indians were the only other AL club to draw more than 2.5 million in a season.

Yankees 6, Indians 3

Ron Guidry earned his 12th victory in his last 13 decisions and his 18th of the season with a seven-hit, 11-strikeout performance against Cleveland. Guidry also leads the AL in earned run average with a 2.82 mark. Oscar Gamble supplied the power for the Yankees, driving in four runs with a double and a homer.

Mariners 8, Brewers 1

Bruce Bochte knocked in five runs with his first career grand slam homer and a sacrifice fly as the Mariners capitalized on the most of their opportunities. Seattle collected only five hits, while the Brewers had 11 off Mike Parrott, who went the distance in winning his 14th game.

Rangers 5, A's 2

Texas scored all its runs in the seventh inning, the last two on Mickey Rivers' ninth homer of the season. Steve Comar limited the A's to five hits, including homers by Wayne Gross and Jeff Newman, in winning his 17th game.

White Sox 6, Twins 5

Jim Morrison walked leading off the 10th inning, stole second, moved to third on a fly ball and scored the winning run on a balk by Minnesota reliever Mike Marshall.

Marshall's appearance was his 89th of the season, an American League record. Rusty Torres smacked a two-run homer for Chicago while John Castino and Ron Jackson hit solo homers for the Twins.

THE PITTSBURGH PIRATES leave the field after their 10-1 romp over Montreal Wednesday night in Pittsburgh. Bill Robinson (28) leads the pack as Bill Madlock congratulates winning pitcher Bruce Kison (25). The Bucs now lead the National League East by 1½ games. (AP Laserphoto)

Yanks leaders in league squabbles

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, banished to fourth place and playoff exile, may still lead the American League in controversy.

In the span of some 12 hours Wednesday, the Yankees faced an investigation by the American League, a warning from the umpires and two published reports of the turmoil that seems to follow them.

One thing the club accomplished without incident was the signing of third baseman Graig Nettles to a three-year contract that one team source said was worth a total of $1.2 million.

The AL said it was investigating Wednesday's report in the New York Times that pitcher Bob Kammeyer had been ordered to throw a "brush back" pitch to the Indians' Cliff Johnson and that the pitcher had been handed $100 after leaving the game at Cleveland on Sept. 18.

New York's other problem involved negotiations with shortstop Bucky Dent, the 1978 World Series hero who claims the Yankees reneged on a three-year contract offer after team President Al Rosen resigned.

The brushback story, by author Gay Talese, claimed Kammeyer had received a signal for a pitch close to Johnson's body from catcher Bruce Robinson, who received the order from Manager Billy Martin.

The Times story also said Kammeyer, removed from the 16-3 loss one batter after his shoulder-high pitch hit Johnson, then was handed five $20 bills by Martin. Talese's story said the Yankees' batboy, standing next to Martin in the dugout at the time, had heard clearly the manager's expressed desire that Johnson be "knocked down" and indicated the money had been a reward for carrying out the order.

Martin later admitted giving the pitcher $100, but only so Kammeyer, Paul Mirabella and Rick Anderson — two other pitchers also routed in the 13-run loss — could "get drunk and forget about today and come back strong tomorrow."

Johnson, who had hit two home runs prior to being hit with the 2-2 delivery in the fourth inning of the game, was traded from the Yankees months after his clubhouse scuffle with relief ace Rich Gossage in April. The scuffle resulted in a thumb injury that required surgery and knocked Gossage out of action for three months.

Johnson seemed to believe the report that Martin ordered him hit.

"The people I'm angry at can destroy me," he said, "so I'm not talking. But I'll be able to do what I have to do when I do it."

AL spokesman Bob Fishel said the investigation would include a full report from the Yankees, along with statements from club officials and the umpires who worked the game. Martin is to appear Friday morning at the New York office of AL President Lee MacPhail.

ABC awarded bid on Olympics

LAS VEGAS (AP) — ABC will deliver 200 hours of 1984 Summer Olympics viewing at a record cost to the network of more than $1 million an hour under an agreement for the exclusive U.S. rights to cover the Games here.

In announcing the award Wednesday, the International Olympic Committee and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee said ABC agreed to pay $225 million in cash, build an Olympics broadcast center and provide a worldwide broadcast signal.

"We believe this to be the largest single television agreement ever negotiated," the IOC and LAOOC said in a joint statement.

Industry sources had outlined the plan to The Associated Press on Monday, but formal announcement came at a Wednesday news conference held by Monique Berlioux, IOC executive director, and Peter V. Ueberroth, managing director of the LAOOC.

The IOC executive board, chaired by Lord Killarin, must approve the agreement, but that is expected Oct. 25 when the board meets in Nagoya, Japan, they said.

In 1976, ABC's telecast of the Summer Games helped propel the network from its longtime third-place spot behind CBS and NBC in prime time to a position of dominance in that area. The results were dramatic enough to prompt ratings-poor NBC to bid about $100 million to win the rights to the 1980 Moscow Summer Games.

Here's what ABC agreed to provide in 1984, according to Roone Arledge, president of ABC news and sports:

—$100 million for the U.S. television rights.

—$125 million to the LAOOC for production and support services, which could include non-broadcast areas such as transportation and providing results of the contests.

—A "clean broadcast signal" for foreign users.

—An Olympics broadcast center where the broadcast signal would be picked up. "I honestly have no idea what that will cost," Arledge said.

ABC's costs beyond the four areas outlined above "could exceed another $100 million, but much of that will be recoverable," he said.

Arledge, who headed ABC's past Olympic coverage, said his network televised six of the past eight Olympics and "the fact that these Summer Games will originate in Los Angeles will enable us to provide more live coverage than ever before and we anticipate that coverage will exceed 200 hours."

Reporters asked Arledge how ABC's 1984 bid wound up being more than twice NBC's cost for next year's Games. Chuckling, Arledge said, "The 1984 Games will be twice as good as those in 1980. Being in the U.S. and being live, the interest will be huge. I don't know how the others figured their bids, but we decided what we could afford, figured in inflation and made our offer."

The IOC and LAOOC representatives would not comment on reports that CBS bid $160 million for the '84 Games and NBC reportedly bid $150 million, but they said the bids had been competitive.

Title fight Friday night

Shavers promises Holmes new look

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes will not see the same Earnie Shavers he easily beat last year when he defends the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night, says the 35-year-old Shavers.

"When the horse gets so old, you can't teach that horse new tricks," the 29-year-old Holmes said Wednesday.

In their first fight, Holmes won a one-sided 12-round decision that earned him his title-winning shot against Ken Norton.

"I hurt him in the second round with one punch," said Shavers, who contends he was bothered by managerial problems and was not in top condition for the first fight. "If I had thrown combinations, it would have been over. This time I will. I will knock him out in five rounds."

"I don't really believe Shavers has the punching power he says he has," said Holmes, who also feels he will win inside the 15-round limit.

Shavers earned his second title shot — he was outpointed by Muhammad Ali in 1977 — by stopping Norton with a two-fisted onslaught in the first round last March 23.

This will be Holmes' fourth title defense and his first since he looked unimpressive in stopping little-known Mike Weaver in the 12th round last June 22. "I learned I got to discipline myself," said Holmes, who admitted he was overconfident against Weaver.

Shavers said he doesn't expect to see the same Holmes that fought Weaver. "Larry is a much better fighter than that," he said.

One big difference for Holmes between the Weaver fight and Friday night's bout is money. The champion is guaranteed $2.5 million for the fight that will be televised nationally by ABC. He fought for a percentage against Weaver in a bout that was not televised and says that promoter Don King gave him $450,000.

Shavers is getting $300,000, the same amount he got for fighting Ali.

Also on the card are top welterweights Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran, WBC super bantamweight champion Wilfredo Gomez and heavyweights Jimmy Young and Michael Dokes.

Leonard, of Palmer Park, Md., will fight Andy Price of Los Angeles and Duran, of Panama, will fight Zeferino Gonzalez of San Jose, Calif., in two scheduled 10-rounders that will be televised live.

The ABC telecast will be from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. PDT.

Gomez, of Puerto Rico, will defend against Carlos Mendoza of Panama in a bout that will be taped for television. How long the Leonard, Duran and Holmes fights last will determine whether the 10-rounder between Young, of Philadelphia, and Dokes, of Akron, Ohio, will be televised.

Local shooters net national honors

By JOE BLOBAUM
Of The Pampa News

Though it is less than six months old, the Pampa Pistol Team is already attracting national attention — and national honors.

Two Pampans came home from the National Rifle Association's Hunter's Pistol Silhouette Championships in Wichita, Kan., last week with national titles. And indications are that it's only the beginning of a long success story for the local sharpshooters.

Waneta Nicholas ended a two-year layoff from competition by bringing home the women's national title at the Wichita event, held at the Air Capitol Gun Club. And Dick Spence, who began training under Richard Nicholas (Waneta's husband) only three months ago, garnered the Men's Class A division championship.

Mrs. Nicholas, who has never come home from a shooting competition empty-handed, said it was only natural for her and Richard to start a pistol team when they moved to Pampa in April.

"We've lived in small towns before and we know you have to create your own entertainment," she said Wednesday. "This is the fifth club we've started."

Associated with the Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club, the pistol team has already invested its time and money in a firing range 6 1/2 miles west of Pampa. They hold matches there the third Sunday of every month and hold training and safety sessions at the range every Tuesday. Practice sessions are also held Thursday night at an indoor range located near the rodeo grounds.

"I think this is a hunting area," said Mr. Nicholas, who has been knocked out of shooting competition for the time being with a back injury. "and I think people needed someone to show them what to do."

"We do all our big game hunting with handguns," he continued. "I took an elk last year and it was as easy as doing it with a rifle."

Mrs. Nicholas pointed out that "People have guns but don't know what to do with them. So we started this to give them someplace to go and shoot in safety."

Nicholas said he will coach any aspect of pistol shooting, including black powder. But he admitted he started the pistol team "to build up competition" and keep his skills sharp.

"We started with two people, and they're both winners now," he noted. "We've more than doubled our participation every month," he added, and the membership includes ladies and teen-agers as well as men.

About 30 people from Pampa are now active members of the pistol team, and Nicholas estimates 200 or more competitors reside in the Panhandle. In fact, enough interest has been shown to make the Pampa organizers bid for the 1980 National Hunter's Silhouette Championships.

"We're going to bid for the Nationals to come here," he said. "It sounds a little far-fetched, but we believe it's possible to get them here."

And if it sounds far-fetched to the reading public, simply stop and consider this: Five months ago, Pampa didn't have a pistol team. Now it has two national champions residing in its city limits.

Akers: Longhorns lacking passing attack

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Coach Fred Akers watched films of a Texas pass falling at the feet of an open receiver and remarked, "We're a little bit away from having what we want."

What No. 4 Texas wants — with No. 5 Missouri on the schedule Saturday — is a passing attack.

Sophomore quarterback Donnie Little was ineffective passing in Texas' opener last Saturday, with two of 10 completions for 10 yards and one interception.

Texas struggled to defeat Iowa State, 17-9, and Akers warned the Longhorn Club on Wednesday, "Iowa State does not have the talent Missouri does."

Akers saluted Missouri's Phil Bradley as the best quarterback in the Big Eight Conference and added, "He's one of the best in the country. He's quick, he throws well — he's a leader."

"Missouri has a very fine football team — they are impressive," said Akers. "They are nationally ranked, as we are, and they deserve it, as we do."

"Last year, Missouri had to outscore teams to win. This year they're winning ball games with their defense," said Akers. "We're getting geared for a real physical contest."

The coach disclosed that kicker Jeff Guy, a highly touted freshman, had not made the 60-player traveling squad for Missouri.

Akers said fifth-year senior Ted Constanzo would be the backup punter to sophomore John Goodson, and he indicated freshman quarterback Rick McIvor would be the No. 2 placekicker to Goodson.

"The best thing that happened to us besides winning" the Iowa State game, "was that we came away without a bad injury. We're as strong as we've been since we started the season," said Akers.

Lopez sets sights on victory in Dallas Open

DALLAS (AP) — Should Nancy Lopez decide to leave professional golf she should sell Dale Carnegie books on how to win friends and influence people.

The comely 22-year-old super star of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour doesn't know the meaning of vindictiveness. She is all peaches and cream.

Plus, the lovely, soft-spoken former resident of Roswell, N.M., who has dominated the tour and captivated the fans in her brief 27 months on the cash circuit, leads in money winnings, $174,252.

She will be going for her 17th title in the $150,000 Dallas Open under way at Bent Tree Country Club here. She has banked more than $400,000 in 16 tournaments.

The dark-eyed beauty, who married Ohio sportscaster Tim Melton a few months back, launched her career on the Roswell municipal links, won a dozen big amateur tournaments and then entered the University of Tulsa.

She left in July 1977 and became an instant success. Her achievements drew criticism in the press from some players, but she harbors no resentment. Conversely, she has nothing but praise and apparent admiration and friendship for her tour competitors.

She denies jealousy from other tour players and thinks most of the resentment was fabricated in the press.

"I know so many writers concentrate on my game when I am an also-ran and fail to recognize the play of those who are winning, or finishing in front of me," she explained.

Ms. Lopez expressed a desire to win the U.S. Open. "If I can win that one I will have achieved my major golf victory."

Since her marriage, she has cut down on tournament play. She said she wants to have children but does not believe now is the time.

Jimmy's White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House could soon be surrounded by a forest of parking meters if officials can't think of a better way to collect parking fees from members of President Carter's staff.

Under a Carter directive, free parking for federal employees, including those who work at the White House, will end Nov. 1. After that, Uncle Sam is supposed to collect the equivalent of commercial parking fees from government workers.

The plan will help reduce the federal deficit, if only minutely, but the major rationale for it is to encourage energy conservation by discouraging employees from driving to work.

One plan that has been discussed at the White House would call for installation of parking meters along neighboring streets and at other locations, some inside the White House fence, that are reserved for parking by Carter aides.

The eyesore will be avoided, however, of having parking meters along the stately driveway that leads to the main White House entrance on Pennsylvania Avenue. And that's a good thing politically, too, because driveway spots often are used by visiting members of Congress.

Should meters be installed on closed-off West Executive Avenue, where the president's highest-ranking assistants park, what will be done about Vice President Walter F. Mondale? He has a reserved spot there. One can imagine Hamilton Jordan leaving his work periodically to feed coins into a meter, but the vice president?

President Carter was not the only casualty of the now-celebrated Catoctin Mountain minimarathon.

Rosalynn Carter was waiting near the finish line when she received word that her husband had dropped out of the race. Uncertain about the state of the president's health, Mrs. Carter hurried to a waiting White House car.

In close pursuit was Frances Voorde, Carter's assistant appointments secretary. Ms. Voorde, a mainstay of the White House softball team but no runner, took a bad tumble. Now she gets around on crutches, one leg in a cast, because of torn ligaments.

Who's in charge here?

Shortly before congressional heavyweights from both parties emerged from a recent unannounced meeting with Carter on Soviet troops in Cuba, the White House press office professed to know nothing about the session.

Minutes later, however, ropes were strung across a White House driveway to pen in news photographers already awaiting the emergence of the conferees.

Who ordered the ropes? A White House police officer reported the directive came from the office of Chief Usher Rex Scouten, not the press office.

Guardsmen enter atomic plant

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Acting Gov. Bruce Babbitt's orders, National Guardsmen have entered the American Atomic Corp. plant and seized radioactive tritium in an action the company called "absolutely crazy."

The company said Babbitt's order for guardsmen to pack and remove the radioactive substance could endanger Tucson residents.

The plant, which used tritium to make luminous watch dials and signs, was shut down in June after $300,000 worth of food intended for school children was found to be exposed to radiation.

Babbitt said the company was moving too slowly to decommission the plant, and said he was afraid security problems might pose dangers that could end with the release of radiation.

The company has maintained that the levels of radiation involved do not pose any hazard. And Wednesday, Babbitt said American Atomic attorney Harold C. Warnock reiterated "his oft-repeated position that nothing is wrong and that the whole situation is a red herring."

The $500,000 worth of tritium, much of it inside glass tubes, will be removed to a location as yet undetermined for burial, processing or release.

"Don't worry, it (the site) will be identified when it's picked within 24 to 48 hours," Babbitt said. "There's no special secrecy attached to this operation."

The order came as a surprise, since the company agreed July 11 in hearings before the Arizona Atomic Energy Commission to surrender its license to handle tritium and to decommission its plant in 100 days.

Babbitt said there had been a break-in about a week before his order and that the plant lacked effective security.

"The fire protection was jury-rigged and in the event of fire or a breach of security it would have put a community of 500,000 people at risk of exposure to enormous masses of tritium," he said.

American Atomic president Peter J. Biehl blamed red tape for the delayed decommissioning.

Tom Caffarella, Biehl's assistant, refused to stay at the plant after state officials and Tucson police arrived. He called the order "absolutely crazy" and said he feared someone could push the wrong valve.

(BILL M. DERR BELIEVES IN PAMPA AND HIS CUSTOMERS-YOU WILL ALSO)

Don't Wait. Buy Now
Would you spend $5,000 to save $500? Certainly not. But this is exactly what some big car owners did during the summer gasoline crunch. They turned in perfectly good "gas guzzlers" to get subcompact cars with better gas mileage.

So much attention has been paid to gasoline shortages and gasoline prices that many motorists have completely overlooked the other, even costlier, aspects of car ownership.

For example, a used-car lot might offer a Ford LTD or a large Chrysler for less than $3,000 each. Both are 1977 model-year cars loaded with options (automatic transmission, power everything, stereo, tape decks, and so on). They both have low mileage.

Cost Is HIGH

Across town, someone is selling a Volkswagen Rabbit diesel for $8,000 (which is a considerable premium over the sticker price). You can also buy a loaded, top-of-the-line Honda for around the same price.

The VW Rabbit and the Honda are excellent cars, and they get mileage ratings that are much better than the Ford LTD and the Chrysler "guzzlers." When you figure it out with actual road-test mileage figures, however, instead of the misleading numbers you get from the Environmental Protection Agency, the saving on gasoline is around $500 a year.

In a sense, you're spending $5,000 to save $500. And that's not all. It's going to cost from $500 to $600 more a year in finance charges if you buy the $8,000 small car instead of the $3,000 big car. That cost wipes out most, if not all, of your gasoline savings. There is also the insurance. You pay around $75 a year extra for insurance (collision and comprehensive).

Then there's the whole question of safety. The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety says, when it comes to a severe collision, you're just not as safe in a small car as you are in a big car with more "crush space" and more steel around you.

This means you might suffer more personal injury, or even death, in a crash. The institute has sponsored considerable research including crash tests, which show that your chances of surviving a head-on collision in a "gas guzzler" are considerably better than they are in a gas-saving subcompact.

Image Plays Role

All the arguments about cutting depreciation costs and other expenses are based on a certain mathematical logic. Unfortunately, some of us do not buy cars through a strictly logical, decision-making process. We often buy an image or a concept of what we would look like owning and driving a certain type of car.

Right now, the small, gas-saving car is enjoying enormous prestige. Dealers say that people want to boast to friends and relatives that they have just bought such-and-such subcompact that gets "40 miles to the gallon" (if a test driver is at the wheel under controlled conditions).

If you have a big car, consider keeping it as long as possible. If you're buying a new car, take a look at the used "gas guzzlers" before you make your decision. Compare all the costs, not just the mileage.
