Gunmen free hostage in showdown with Khomeini

LONDON (AP) — Arab gunmen holding the Iranian Embassy in London freed a British hostage today and let two death deadlines pass for their dozen or more Iranian captives. They gave no immediate indication of their next step in the tense showdown with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime.

As British authorities sought to resolve the day-old standoff peacefully, several hundred pro-Khomeini Iranian demonstrators clashed with London police in nearby Hyde Park.

The three Arab-Iranian gunmen are supporters of autonomy for Khuzestan, Iran's Arab-populated oil province, and were demanding that the Khomeini regime free 91 Arab imprisoned there. They had threatened to blow up the embassy, themselves and the Iranian hostages if their demand was not met by noon today — 7 a.m. EDT.

The gunmen have promised not to harm non-Iranian hostages. At least three non-Iranians were reported among the total of 19 hostages.

The British Foreign Office said it was in contact with Tehran but refused to provide details. British news reports quoted the Foreign Ministry in the Iranian capital as saying, however, that Iran rejected the demands and held Britain responsible for the safety of the hostages.

Before the first deadline passed, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told the gunmen by telephone that Iran would not meet their demands and that if embassy hostages were harmed an equal number among the 91 Arabs would be executed, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

The noon deadline passed without incident, and 45 minutes later the gunmen issued another ultimatum for 2 p.m. — 9 a.m. EDT — demanding that Iran acknowledge by then that it had begun negotiating with the British government.

"This is not a sign of weakness but of humanitarian duty," the trio said in the statement, which was telephoned to police who then read it to reporters.

A Foreign Office spokesman told reporters after the second deadline was set. "We are in close touch with the Iranian authorities about the handling of the situation in London."

By 2 p.m. there was no new public word from Iran. But as the deadline passed there also was no indication the death threats had been carried out.

Earlier today, the gunmen freed one non-Iranian, Chris Cramer, 32, a British Broadcasting Corp. producer who was applying for a visa when the embassy was taken over. Police said he was freed because of a stomach ailment, which the BBC said he contracted on a recent foreign assignment. Hunched over as though in pain, he was taken off to a hospital.

In addition to Cramer, the non-Iranian captives in the embassy included at least two other Britons and a Lebanese. But the gunmen telephoned out a statement that the "British hostages, as well as all other non-Iranian hostages, would not be harmed."

This raised the possibility that more than four non-Iranians were in the embassy just before noon when the three Arabs slipped in a back door and took over the mansion on a fashionable residential street a block from Hyde Park.

Cramer said Wednesday that in addition to the prisoner release, the Arabs demanded autonomy for oil-rich Khuzestan, where Arabs are the majority ethnic community, that the 91 prisoners be flown to London, and that the prisoners, the embassy hostages and themselves be flown out of Britain to an unannounced destination.

Canadian to vote on power plant sale

CANADIAN — After studying a proposed $3 million sale from Southwestern Public Service (SPS) for serving the city's power needs, the Canadian city council unanimously agreed Wednesday to put the sale of the local power plant to a vote of the people.

The referendum, empowering city fathers to sell the plant to the highest bidder, will probably be conducted in August as required by law.

SPS representative Chis Milnar said his Amarillo company would spend about $3 million to extend a 115-kv line from Gray County with enough capability to serve the community for the next 50 to 100 years.

The company would assume the city's bonded indebtedness of $660,000 on the local plant, leaving the city debt free and would spend about $250,000 for upgrading the system here.

Approximate cost of the Pampa-to-Canadian extension line would be $2.3 million.

Milnar said the present plant would serve in the backup role until a second extension line is completed.

Then, SPS would deed the phased-out plant to the city of Canadian.

Milnar said SPS would offer all local power plant personnel a job. However, he said relocation was possible. If such a transaction is made, SPS would establish a local office in Canadian.

Ghotbzadeh advised of mission, magazine says

HONG KONG (AP) — A White House official told Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh in advance that the United States was planning a mission to rescue the American hostages in Teheran, the news magazine Asiaweek reported today.

The Hong Kong-based magazine said the message was "strongly suspected" to have come from Hamilton Jordan, President Carter's White House chief of staff "who was at loggerheads with the confrontation line of National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski."

In Washington, Jordan called the report "absolutely untrue." He said, "Obviously no one in the Iranian government knew in advance of the rescue mission, and only very few people in the U.S. government knew about it."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Tehran denied Ghotbzadeh had any advance knowledge of the mission.

Asiaweek said the message was relayed to Ghotbzadeh when the foreign minister flew to Paris on the weekend of April 11, reportedly "to settle personal matters."

It said that although no details were provided about the operation being prepared, the message clearly indicated that it would be carried out before May 17.

The magazine said it learned of the communication six hours before the operation started and from the same source who briefed Ghotbzadeh.

The magazine described the source as someone "who had acted several times as an intermediary between the White House and the Iranian Revolutionary Council."

It said May 17 was the target date because that was the deadline for the Common Market to take sanctions against Iran.

The magazine also said its sources had confirmed that Washington had formally told its European allies that no military action would be mounted before that date.

The mission to rescue the 53 hostages was aborted a week ago, reportedly because of technical problems with the helicopters involved.

Rosalynn predicts Carter win

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Even with his recent setbacks, President Carter will be a big winner over Sen. Edward Kennedy in Saturday's non-binding Texas primary and the subsequent precinct caucuses, predicts First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

Mrs. Carter campaigned Wednesday afternoon deep inside San Antonio's impoverished Mexican-American barrio, appealing in Spanish and English for support for her husband in what is Kennedy's Texas stronghold.

Earlier in the day, she campaigned in a plush downtown Houston hotel and appealed for support from black voters at a Baptist church in Houston's predominantly black Fifth Ward.

President Carter has refused to personally campaign for his re-election since the Iranian crisis began six months ago, but Mrs. Carter has been making numerous appearances across the country.

The president is favored to defeat Kennedy in Texas, despite last week's unsuccessful hostage rescue mission in Iran, the resignation of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Kennedy's popularity with the state's large population of Mexican-Americans.

Texas has 152 national convention delegates at stake. "I feel very confident about Texas," Mrs. Carter told reporters upon her arrival here.

Asked if those recent setbacks might cause her husband to lose the primary, she replied, "We're not going to lose Texas."

She said the aborted rescue mission has prompted a nationwide outpouring of support for her husband. "I think people thought it was the right thing to do," she added.

Mrs. Carter was in San Antonio only two days after her husband made a rare foray away from the White House and flew here to visit the five hospitalized American commandos. Kennedy campaigned here Monday night and Tuesday.

Kennedy and farmworker leader Cesar Chavez received a rousing welcome from thousands of Mexican-American supporters in their Monday night rally in San Antonio's traditional Mexican marketplace.

Kennedy also drew a heavy turnout of Hispanics in Houston on Tuesday.

The Massachusetts senator is extremely popular among Mexican-Americans, who comprise much of the population of South

Texas and more than half of Bexar County's million residents.

Mrs. Carter was greeted Wednesday by a crowd of more than 300 at a Christian community center in the middle of a deteriorating, crime-racked Mexican-American housing project just southwest of downtown San Antonio.

She told the predominantly Hispanic crowd, "The president has appointed more Hispanics to positions in government than all other presidents combined. That is so important. It can make a difference in the way a government works."

Mrs. Carter opened her speech in Spanish, telling the crowd that the president "is thinking of you and wishes he could be here with you."

She ended her speech with an appeal in Spanish for votes and caucus support Saturday.

The community center hosts many programs for the elderly, and Mrs. Carter vowed that social programs, especially those for the elderly, would not be cut in the face of inflation.

"I feel confident we will have the support of the Mexican-American community," Mrs. Carter told reporters. "I think the president has a very good record in working with the Mexican-American community."

She courted black support in Houston, appearing before a crowd of 1,500 blacks at the Pleasant Grove Baptist Church.

"He has appointed more blacks to high offices than all other presidents combined," she said of her husband. "He has appointed 30 black federal judges, all needed to give us justice."

Mrs. Carter was faced with numerous questions about Iran while in Houston and San Antonio.

In Houston, Mrs. Carter said if voters blame the president for the unsuccessful mission, "Jimmy will just have to suffer the political consequences."

She said the rescue mission had "sent a message to Iran," and added, "They are now nervous. It also showed our allies that America will do something on its own."

The president's "nonpolitical" trip to San Antonio was his first outside the Washington area since the crisis began. He did no campaigning while here.

FIRST LADY ROSALYNN CARTER, in San Antonio, Texas, hugs a baby while campaigning in the Mexican-American barrio. The baby, however, seemed distressed by all the attention.

Reagan victory expected in closest race

DALLAS (AP) — The nearest contest is the Texas Republican primary on Saturday, but Ronald Reagan is focusing his campaign on the November election and President Carter.

The Republican front-runner flew to Texas on Wednesday and in stops in El Paso and Midland mentioned his Republican opponent, George Bush, only when asked for comment.

Most polls show Reagan with a wide lead in Texas, a state where Bush has made his home for the past 25 years.

Four years ago, Reagan demonstrated the depth of his support among Texans when he scored a landslide victory over then-President Gerald R. Ford in the Republican primary.

This year Bush is campaigning hard, hoping to make a respectable showing following his victory over Reagan in the Pennsylvania primary popularity poll. Bush strategists say that they would consider 30 percent a respectable showing against Reagan.

Despite Reagan's big lead in delegates in the 1980 race, Bush has managed to keep his candidacy alive and has resisted all efforts to knock him out of the race and leave Reagan a clear road to the GOP presidential nomination.

Originally, Reagan intended winding up his Texas campaign today and going on to Tennessee and North Carolina, which hold primaries on Tuesday. But an added appearance in Houston on Friday was put into the schedule.

Reagan commented scornfully on Carter's announcement Wednesday that he would begin campaigning, ending his moratorium imposed after the Iranian hostage crisis began.

Carter said that the problems keeping him in Washington had become "manageable."

Asked about the Carter statement, Reagan said, "He says now that the burdens have been lifted off his back, presumably about the hostages which had been his reason for staying in there."

"He had said he would stay and not do any politicking until they were safely home. If he feels freed I wonder if he feels the hostages now somehow are freed."

"To pretend that the situation is any less grave now... with the hostages does sound a little strange. Their situation is more grave than it's ever been," Reagan said.

Reagan called the length of captivity of the hostages "a national disgrace" and said he would not rule out future efforts to free them.

In a prepared statement that contained some of the harshest criticism of Carter's handling of the crisis since the rescue attempt, Reagan said, "The global ramifications of this tragic episode take on far greater dimensions for the future and they should be deeply troubling to every American."

FTC -- out of money, out of business

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is fresh out of money because Congress, at least temporarily, has failed to enact new legislation to pay the bills.

Similar things have happened in the past, but this time there's a new wrinkle: The attorney general says the agency has no choice but to shut down.

The FTC's 1,700 employees were told to report for work today, but only "for the purpose of closing down the agency." Asked what this meant, one official said: "We can secure our files. Things like that. But we can't do our regular work."

The money stopped flowing despite a House-Senate conference committee's approval Wednesday of a compromise bill funding the agency for three more years.

Before that action can be converted into dollars and cents, however, the conference committee report must be written and submitted to both the House and Senate for final approval before being sent to President Carter for signature into law.

As a stop-gap solution, the House Appropriations Committee was expected to take action today on an emergency bill that would supply $55 million to the FTC until the permanent measure is enacted.

Federal agencies, including the FTC, have been left without funds for short periods on similar occasions in the past. In most cases they continued some activities on the assumption the legislation would be approved quickly.

However, a recent opinion by Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said that business-as-usual approach in the absence of official funding violates a 110-year-old law. He indicated the law allows no spending beyond what is required to shut down agency operations.

"No statute permits federal agencies to incur obligations to pay employees without an appropriation for that purpose," Civiletti said in an April 25 letter to President Carter.

The measure approved by the conference committee Wednesday contains permanent reductions in authority for the commission, whose pro-consumer regulations have angered many business groups. Business lobbyists flocked to Capitol Hill to urge the FTC be restrained.

The conferees approved a provision that would allow Congress to nullify future FTC regulations by votes in both the House and Senate. The president would be unable to veto such nullification decisions.

Carter defends construction of rescue helicopters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the failure of three of the eight helicopters used in the attempt to free the hostages in Iran, President Carter says that "the helicopters were the finest that can be designed."

Defense officials said Wednesday that five of the eight helicopters were accidentally sprayed with firefighting chemicals and salt water 10 hours before takeoff, but none of the operating equipment was affected.

Carter told a group of community leaders Wednesday afternoon at the White House that the rescue mission could have been attempted by "no other nation on earth, including the Soviet Union."

Its failure, he said, should not indict the nation's military capacity.

"There is no question in my mind that the degree of maintenance" on the helicopters used was good, Carter said.

The president has said he canceled the raid to free the 53 hostages because three helicopters developed mechanical trouble.

"No one anticipated this high a degree of failure in the helicopters," the president said. "It was unpredictable and we had bad luck as far as the number that were afflicted."

"I can assure you those helicopters were the finest that can be designed. The maintenance was done by the finest, best trained, people in the country," he said.

Crime jump hits south and small communities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious crime, which soared nationwide last year after a three-year lull, is growing faster in smaller communities and in the South, the FBI says.

As measured by preliminary data released Wednesday, serious crimes reported to police increased 8 percent in 1979 — the biggest jump since 9.8 percent four years ago. The crime index decreased 1 percent between 1976 and 1978.

The FBI said the figures showed that the number of serious crimes rose 11 percent in cities of less than 50,000 population and 8 percent in larger cities.

Overall crime rose 10 percent in the South, compared with 9 percent in the Northeast, 8 percent in the West and 7 percent in the North Central states.

Nationwide, violent crime was up 11 percent from the year before, with forcible rape and robbery each up 12 percent and murder and aggravated assault each up 9 percent.

Superintendent draws jail term in 'gold plumbing' caper

MIAMI (AP) — The suspended superintendent of the nation's fifth-largest school district faces five years in prison for his role in the "Gold Plumbing Caper," and still must answer yet another set of criminal charges.

Johnny L. Jones was convicted of second-degree grand theft Wednesday by a jury that deliberated for 2½ hours after a nine-day trial.

The state said Jones called the shots in a plot to use Dade County school money for $8,934,433 worth of deluxe bath and kitchen fixtures intended for a vacation retreat Jones is building.

At the prosecution's request, Circuit Judge Thomas E. Scott told the jury of four women and two men not to discuss the case "with anyone." He set sentencing for June 27. In addition to a five-year prison term, Jones could be fined $5,000.

Trial is expected to begin almost immediately for high school Principal Solomon Barnes who faces the same charge as Jones.

Jones is to be arraigned Friday on charges of receiving unlawful compensation or reward for official behavior, solicitation to commit perjury in an official proceeding and tampering with a witness.

Prosecutors allege he extracted more than $70,000 in kickbacks from a Baltimore reading consultant who sold Dade schools a home learning program for poor children. Jones also is accused of urging the consultant to withhold information and lie.

Five years added to Chagra term

EL PASO (AP) — Jamiel A. "Jimmy" Chagra, already sentenced to 30-years in prison on a continuing criminal enterprise conviction, has been assessed a five-year prison term for jumping bail.

U.S. District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth, who denied defense motions Wednesday to acquit Chagra on a technicality, said the five-year term could run concurrently with the earlier sentence.

Chagra was convicted two weeks ago of jumping bail.

However, defense lawyer Oscar Goodman contended the bail Chagra was accused of jumping did not exist because it had been revoked on Aug. 21, two days before Chagra failed to show for a scheduled court appearance.

Goodman said when Chagra failed to meet with federal probation officers, his original bail was revoked and a new bond was set at $3 million.

Goodman argued that Chagra could not be in violation of a non-existent bond.

Chagra disappeared last August after he was convicted in Austin, Texas, on federal drug charges.

Gold medal winner steps into politics

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Olympic gold medal winner Bobby Morrow is going after a different kind of victory Saturday.

The star sprinter of the 1956 summer games has entered the political arena for the first time and will try to defeat a 16-year incumbent for the Democratic nomination for a Cameron County commissioner's post.

Morrow, 44, says he let friends persuade him to run for office but he mixed suggestions to play up his three gold medals won at Melbourne, Australia.

"I want people to vote for me not for my achievement in athletics but for my integrity and honesty," he said.

After working for several banks, Morrow returned to his native Rio Grande Valley 10 years ago from Houston. He farmed his father's land near San Benito and a year ago opened a men's clothing store.

At San Benito High School, he ran for two consecutive state schoolboy championships in the 100-yard dash. Going on to Abilene Christian College, he claimed 80 collegiate victories in the 80-yard and 200-yard events and ran on a world record-setting relay team in the 40-yard and 880-yard events.

At age 19, Morrow swept three gold medals in Australia for the best individual performance since Jesse Owens' appearance in the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

Morrow says he thinks most voters know of his sports past but he doesn't bring it up. However, customers at his store can see two of the medals and other awards on display.

The third medal was given to the Smithsonian earlier this year.

"I had to think about it a long time," he said of turning over the award. "But I thought after I'm gone, they'll just be thrown in a drawer."

Besides the medals in his store, there's his Sportsman of the Year Award from Sports Illustrated, plus a copy of the magazine announcing his selection in 1956.

In another case is a cap adorned with pins of different teams that competed in the 1956 games.

It's been 24 years since he beat the world's best sprinters. And kids still write for his autograph.

"I get letters from foreign countries, even now, addressed to 'Bobby Morrow, Texas.' These are kids who weren't even born when I was in Melbourne but they read about it somewhere," he said.

Morrow strongly opposes President Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics this summer.

"This is going to discourage a lot of young kids in grade school and junior and senior high," he said of American athletes staying out of competition. "Politics should stay out of sports at all costs."

Russia had invaded Hungary when Australia hosted the games, he said.

"There was one incident I remember when a Russian climbed up a flag pole and pulled down a Hungarian flag and burned it," he said.

Morrow no longer runs and says he does not exercise or play a particular sport regularly.

Lance claims victory over prosecutor

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. budget director Bert Lance, acquitted on nine bank fraud charges, savored his victory with a call from friend Jimmy Carter and said of the prosecutor who dogged him for years: "We just plain licked 'em."

Despite a hung jury's inability to reach a decision on three other counts, forcing a mistrial on those counts, the president's former adviser said: "I have been totally and completely exonerated."

Lance spoke with Carter after the verdict was handed down Wednesday following a 16-week trial — the longest in Georgia history — and a 2-year federal investigation.

He said Carter reminded him of an occasion nearly three years ago when Carter was taken to task for saying "Bert, I'm proud of you," while Lance was under investigation. Carter told him on Wednesday, "I'm still proud of you," Lance said.

A blue-collar jury of six men and six women deliberated for nine days before handing down its decision. Lance tried to call them individually to thank them for the verdict.

The jurors were unable to reach verdicts on six of the 19 counts against Lance and three associates, all north Georgia businessmen who were friends for years.

U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moya Jr. declared a mistrial on the remaining counts and said he would consider entering directed verdicts of acquittal after reading briefs from both sides.

Prosecutor Edwin Tomko said he did not know whether the Justice Department would seek a new trial.

"The mistrial on the remaining counts, that doesn't concern me at all," the tall, portly former banker said. "If the government wants to try them again — ring the bell."

All nine counts on which Lance was found innocent charged him with misapplication of funds from the Calhoun First National Bank and the National Bank of Georgia in loans to his family and friends. The jury deadlocked on a 10th misapplication charge and two counts alleging that Lance falsified his financial statements.

Several jurors said the vote was sometimes 10-2 and at other times 8-4 in favor of conviction on the false statement counts.

"I feel and the others feel like financial statements have to be filled out correctly," said Anthony Tigner.

But William M. Savage Jr., a 36-year-old carpenter, said he did not think there was enough evidence for any convictions.

FORMER BUDGET DIRECTOR Bert Lance and his wife, Labelle, are surrounded by news people Wednesday in Atlanta after a jury found him not guilty on nine counts of bank fraud. A mistrial was declared on another three counts.

Of the defendants, only Thomas Mitchell was found innocent on all charges. He was accused of making a false statement to a bank in connection with his duties as trustee while all Lance's holdings were in a blind trust.

Richard Cabr, a former bank president, was acquitted on three counts and a mistrial was declared on three others, including one in which he and Lance were charged jointly. Jack Mullins, a former druggist, was acquitted on three of four charges.

Red authorities tagged capitalists

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Karl Marx probably wouldn't approve, but "Freedom Flotilla" boat captains returning from the crowded Cuban port of Mariel describe communist authorities overseeing the boatlift as profiteering masters of capitalism.

"They have all those boats over there that have been there for a week, and they're making as much money as they can off of it," said Glenn Abend, who returned here Wednesday night with a dozen refugees aboard his small yacht.

"They know the American way over there," said George Block, a crewman on the Viking Starship, a giant commercial boat that brought 500 Cuban refugees ashore early today.

There are more than 1,000 boats crowding Mariel, and Cuban government boats patrol the port offering food and other supplies, the seamen reported. Boat captains also were permitted ashore to purchase supplies from a government store.

The boats, many hired for thousands of dollars by exiles hoping to bring their relatives to the United States, often must wait several days in port while the government slowly releases refugees.

A storm trapped the boats in port Sunday and Monday.

Abend said a 5-pound ham was selling for $45 while a bottle of soda pop commanded $1.50 on the Cuban port market.

Lawsuit hits top song in Disney movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Zip-a-dee-doo-dah" has been zapped in a lawsuit that claims zero credit was given to the real authors of one of Walt Disney's best-known movie songs.

Judge E. Peterson of Washington said he wrote the lyrics to the song in 1939 and James A. Payton, otherwise unidentified, wrote the words.

Peterson, in a suit filed in U.S. District Court, called the song a "statement of America's yesterdays, a musical child that Samuel Clemens would have been proud to call his own."

Peterson claimed the song "suffered and still suffers from the curse of illegitimacy" because the real authors "were denied the recognition...that was their just due for the authorship of this masterpiece."

According to the suit, a "long-forgotten impresario" in Washington was responsible for hiding the real authorship and giving credit to two other men.

The song then was sold to the Disney studios and became the theme song of the movie, "Song of the South."

Peterson sued Walt Disney Productions of Burbank, Calif. He asked for $10 million in damages, an accounting of proceeds from "Song of the South" and all related ventures and a 5 percent ownership in Walt Disney Corp.

Richard T. Morrow, vice president and general counsel of Walt Disney Productions, said, "There's no question Ray Gilbert was the author of the song. He wrote a lot of music for us."

Candidates uncertainty not unlike Sharpstown

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Candidates for the 1981 Legislature expected to be the wildest in years — go into the May 3 primaries breathing an air of political uncertainty unlike anything since the Sharpstown scandals.

The primaries come at a time when House Speaker Bill Clayton's political future is clouded by the FBI's Briab (bribery and labor) investigation.

Clayton already has two opponents, Reps. John Bryant and Bill Caraway, in his bid for a fourth term as speaker. Several other representatives are ready to join the contest if Clayton's legal troubles force him out of the race.

The outcome of the speaker's race will depend on the results of this year's House races, since the 150 state representatives elect the speaker.

"Out of 104 contested races, there is at least one candidate committed to us in more than 100 of them. In some cases there are more than one," says Carlton Carl, a Bryant aide.

Twenty representatives, including as many as 15 who would have voted for Clayton, decided against seeking re-election, sparking lively contests among political newcomers.

Crime ring dispute ends in murder

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — State police Maj. Quimby Johnson said Wednesday a dispute over loot among members of a crime ring apparently was the motive in the recent slayings of two former inmates of a federal prison in Kansas.

Johnson, director of the state police criminal investigation division, said investigators have questioned persons in four states in the slayings of James Harrison Newton, 43, of Basehor, Kan., and Homer Lewellen, 45, of Leavenworth, Kan.

Johnson said Newton and Lewellen apparently were members of a crime ring that was operating in Arkansas and surrounding states.

He said the ring is believed to be responsible for several crimes, including the attempted robbery of a jewelry store and a kidnapping in Joplin, Mo.

Both Lewellen and Newton were former inmates in the federal prison at Leavenworth. Johnson said a number of other former Leavenworth inmates have been questioned in the slayings.

Johnson confirmed that Lewellen, Newton and possibly other former inmates formed the crime ring after they were paroled from the prison.

"We're still running down former inmates at Leavenworth and people we know were associates of Newton and Lewellen," Johnson said. "We think the killings may stem from another criminal case."

Johnson declined to disclose information about the specific crime about which the dispute arose. However, he did say that investigators do not believe that the dispute began because of the unsuccessful jewel heist in Joplin.

Authorities are questioning persons in Oklahoma, Missouri, Texas and Arkansas.

The investigation was started after Lewellen's body was found April 14 by a passing motorist alongside Interstate 40 near Morrilton.

Conway County Sheriff Carl Stobaugh said it appeared that Lewellen had gotten out of a vehicle on the shoulder of the road and that another person in the vehicle shot him in the back of the head with a 20-gauge shotgun.

Newton's body was found by a fisherman April 19 in Crooked Creek in Lonoke County. He had been shot in the neck and his body had been weighted by a concrete block tied to his waist.

Lewellen's pockets had been emptied except for 31 cents and some attorneys' cards. The cards were used to locate a former Leavenworth inmate in the Pulaski County community of Sweet Home who later identified Lewellen's body.

The former inmate told authorities that Lewellen visited him April 6 and told him that he needed $30,000 because of a charge pending against him.

At that time, Lewellen was fighting extradition to Missouri where he faced a charge of attempting to kill the Cole County sheriff. Missouri authorities say they also were preparing to file kidnapping and aggravated robbery charges against Lewellen in the attempted robbery of the jewelry store in Joplin.

Police say that robbery was unsuccessful because the elderly store owner arrived at the store early and accosted the robbers. After the owner feigned a heart attack, the robbers took his wallet and fled.

Case against lipstick murder suspect will go to Dallas County grand jury

DALLAS (AP) — The murder case against a television repairman charged in the so-called "lipstick murder" is to be sent to a Dallas County grand jury.

Justice of the Peace Pat McDowell made the ruling Wednesday following an examining trial for Donald Wayne Hemphill, who is accused in the strangulation death of Debra Martinson.

McDowell also refused to lower Hemphill's $500,000 bond.

Mrs. Martinson's nude body was found in her fashionable north Dallas home March 31. Authorities said she had been strangled with a macramé plant hanger.

Someone had written "Now we are even Don" in lipstick on a mirror in the bedroom where the body was found. The victim's husband, Don Martinson, was a Dallas lawyer.

Harry Felker, a handwriting expert from the Dallas County Forensic Science Laboratory, testified that there were similarities between Hemphill's writing and the writing on the mirror.

Prosecutors also introduced evidence that Hemphill's blood type matches the semen found in Mrs. Martinson's mouth.

McDowell said that although the evidence concerning the handwriting and semen was not conclusive it "at least does not exclude the defendant as a suspect."

In addition to the technical testimony, prosecutors also presented testimony from a young girl who lived near the Martinson family who said she saw Hemphill in the area the day of the slaying.

Jody Fried, 12, a neighbor of the Martinsons, testified Wednesday that she and some friends saw Hemphill several times on the morning of the slaying.

Jody told assistant District Attorney Kelly Loving she saw Hemphill four times between 9 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. and that he was wearing a white patch over one eye.

College financing group recommends fixed percentage rate

AUSTIN (AP) — State college tuition should pay a fixed percentage of higher education costs, a blue-ribbon committee on higher education financing has agreed.

The recommendation, if adopted by the Legislature, probably would mean an increase in tuition every year or two as inflation forces college budgets ever higher.

The Special Committee on Higher Education Financing in Texas, headed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, put off until June 18 its decision on what share of college costs should be paid by students through tuition.

State College Coordinating Board staffers were told Wednesday to prepare figures showing how high tuition would go if it had to cover 6 to 15 percent of the cost of an education.

The committee said students should get more financial aid from the state if tuition rises.

Speaker Bill Clayton suggested the fixed percentage approach, at first mentioning 10 percent as the share of higher education costs that tuition might cover.

"Would that not be a way to get at it and not have to keep coming back and changing tuition all the time?" he said.

The Coordinating Board has recommended that the 1981 Legislature raise tuition but offered no suggestion how big the increase should be. Gov. Bill Clements also favors a tuition increase.

Tuition is $4 per semester credit hour for Texas residents, with a minimum of $50 a semester. A student taking a typical 15-hour course load would pay $60 a semester or $120 a year.

Texas' tuition and required fees for Texas residents rank 46th in the nation.

Coordinating Board statistics show resident tuition covers only 4.38 percent of senior college and university appropriations, which average $2,738 annually per student.

Twenty years ago, resident tuition — then set at $50 a semester — covered 15.15 percent of the cost.

Non-residents pay $40 per semester hour, and their average $1,200 yearly tuition covers 43.82 percent of the cost, compared with 60.6 percent in 1960.

Only Fred McClure of Waco, a Baylor University law student, voted against making resident tuition cover a fixed percentage of costs.

"If we make moves that are going to economically disadvantage Texas residents, I think we are defeating our purpose. ... I don't think we should put our students in the position of being deeper in debt," McClure said.

Iranian assets could be used as compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen suggests that some of the Iranian assets frozen after the takeover of the American Embassy in Tehran last fall could be used to compensate the hostages.

The Texas Democrat and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., introduced a Hostage Compensation Act on Wednesday that would allow up to $1 billion of the blocked assets to be used as a compensation fund.

The bill would use the money to provide $200 a day from the fund for any U.S. citizen detained in Iran up to the time the bill becomes law. After that, each hostage or other American hiding in Iran would receive $500 a day until his release.

Families of U.S. servicemen killed in last week's unsuccessful military mission to Iran also would be eligible for compensation from the frozen assets.

Commandos' conditions unchanged

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — No change has been reported in the conditions of four servicemen burned during the unsuccessful attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran.

All four are being treated at Brooke Army Medical Center's Institute of Surgical Research in San Antonio.

Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph Beyers, 37, of Charleston, S.C. was in critical condition in the intensive care unit. Brooke spokesman Lt. Donald Cravens said Wednesday night.

Marine Maj. Leslie B. Petty, 34, of Jacksonville, N.C. was listed as serious, and Marine Maj. James Schaefer Jr., 36, of Los Angeles and 26-year-old Air Force 1st Lt. Jeffrey B. Harrison of Warren, Ohio, were satisfactory, Cravens said.

Song writing team hits with 'The Way We Were'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Memories, in the corners of my mind, misty water-colored memories of the way we were."

The words are sentimental, cynics might even say soppy. The piano and violin-laden arrangement, sung by Barbra Streisand, was certainly a far cry from the electric sound of most music on the radio in 1973-74.

But "The Way We Were" was a smash hit then and is a contemporary classic today, proof that there will always be an audience for a good, old-fashioned romantic song.

And stylishly-expressed sentiment has been Marilyn and Alan Bergman's stock in trade for more than 20 years now. A profitable trade, too, judging from their lovely Tudor-style home of the last 12 years.

The husband-and-wife team are among Hollywood's top lyricists, and their greatest successes, like "The Way We Were" which they wrote with composer Marvin Hamlisch, have been songs for films.

"The Way We Were" and "The Windmills of Your Mind," written with Michel Legrand for "The Thomas Crown Affair," brought home the Bergmans' two Oscars. They also won two Grammys, including the prestigious song of the year award, for "The Way We Were."

And six other Bergman songs have been Oscar nominees since 1968, including one of this year's contenders, "The Promise" ("I'll Never Say Goodbye"). In many cases the songs have been far more successful than the films.

The Bergmans have also written words to non-film tunes, including last year's smash "You Don't Bring Me Flowers," and two Broadway shows. But films are their first love.

"When we finish a song and the composer and Marilyn and I go into the projection room and play the cassette against the images that appear, when that happens, it's magic to us," says Bergman.

It's a highly specialized craft, requiring not only musical but dramatic sensitivity, and the process varies from film to film and composer to composer.

The Bergmans feel strongly that a song must be an integral part of the film, she adds. "A song really should be like a character, it shouldn't be just there gratuitously."

As for the composers, Bergman smiles, "they're all different, all very interesting."

THE HUSBAND and wife song writing team of Marilyn and Alan Bergman are Hollywood's top lyricists. Their top two songs "The Way We Were" and "The Windmills of Your Mind," have won them two Oscars. Six other Bergman songs have been Oscar nominees since 1968, and one of this year's contenders is their song "The Promise."

Star meets producer on a park bench

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Beau Bridges and writer-producer Larry Gelbart, now working together on "United States," had their first collaboration on a park bench about 35 years ago.

when I first met him. It happened when he was 17 or 18 years old and first came to Hollywood and didn't know anyone. He was sitting on a park bench and nearby was a family playing in the park with a baby.

"The baby crawled away and crawled up on his lap. Then he heard the parents calling, 'Beau, Beau.' He said that's when he met his first Hollywood actor, my father, Lloyd Bridges. I was the baby who crawled on his lap."

Opry star has a higher calling

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Grand Ole Opry may be a country music kingdom, but Opry star Stu Phillips has a higher calling.

Phillips doesn't fit the country music stereotype of the beer-drinking good ol' boy wearing a cowboy hat and singing about the girl who left him.

Grand Ole Opry fans know him as a suave, sweet-singing Canadian. And offstage, he's a deacon at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church.

Phillips, who's been singing on the Opry for 13 years, has studied five years for the priesthood — much of his study at home while not doing concerts on the road. His ordination could come this year.

"I prepare during the week," he says of his crowded Saturday night schedule, which leaves little time to get ready for Sunday services.

Like the separation of church and state, Phillips has divided his country music career from his ministry. He doesn't wear his clerical collar when he sings on the Opry, nor does he sermonize from the stage. He's introduced as "Stu Phillips," not "the Rd fellow singers and musicians on the Opry call him simply "Stu."

"It would be against my nature to blend my music career and my church," he says. "He (the Lord) hasn't called me to be a preacher within the context of the Grand Ole Opry."

Phillips, who's been singing on the Opry for 13 years, has studied five years for the priesthood — much of his study at home while not doing concerts on the road. His ordination could come this year.

As a deacon, he teaches an adult Bible class, visits hospitals and assists in various other church functions. Phillips, who came to the United States in 1965 after a successful television career in Canada, would like to minister to the religious needs of Nashville's singers and musicians.

The Nashville Sound column for March 14, from San Francisco, quoted entertainer Ernest Tubbs as saying the recording industry had deserted true country music for a hybrid designed to appeal to a wide audience.

The story included reaction to Tubbs' observation from Jim Foglesong, president of the Nashville division of MCA Records: "We sold a lot of records with Ernest at one time and we put him with the Andrews Sisters and Red Foley. What happened to him is what happens to most artists — after so many years, you don't sell so many records."

A subsequent comment — that "the people running the company now, they don't know nothing about country music" — appeared to be a continuation of Foglesong's response. The remark was made by Tubbs.

Bishop College problems aired

DALLAS (AP) — Former Cabinet officer Joseph Califano says he approved a grant to financially troubled Bishop College after President Carter asked him to meet with Bishop officials.

"The president called me, and in a very brief conversation, just asked me to see Dr. (Milton K.) Curry," said Califano, former secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"The president said 'Daddy King' called him and asked if I could see Dr. Curry."

"Daddy King" referred to Martin Luther King Sr. Curry was the president of Bishop College.

Califano testified Tuesday in the federal trial of Curry and two other former Bishop officials charged with conspiracy and fraud.

They are accused of transferring money from the school's retirement fund to the general operating budget, making fraudulent statements to a bank to secure a loan and conspiring to defraud the government of more than $3 million.

Bank hearing scheduled

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court said today it wants to hear more arguments on whether banks are subject to the state's Deceptive Trade Practices Act.

The high court set new arguments for May 7 on an appeal by Riverside National Bank of Houston from decisions of a Houston trial court and the 1st Court of Civil Appeals in Houston.

James Lewis sued the bank after it first said it would lend him money then rejected his loan application.

According to case records, Lewis had borrowed $10,500 from Allied Bank of Houston in February 1975 and secured the note with a $6,000 certificate of deposit and an interest in his new Cadillac El Dorado.

But Lewis failed to make the first payment in April 1975 and issued Allied a check that bounced. Allied asked him to move the loan.

A Riverside employee took his application and later told both him and Allied the loan was approved. But on May 15, Riverside's executive vice-president, James Means, rejected the loan after learning that Lewis' loan from Allied was delinquent.

TEXAS BRIEFS

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Federal investigators say Jose Gonzalez-Cruz packed 17 illegal aliens into his van and promised to drive them from Southwest Texas to Fort Worth for a fee.

The testimony came Monday during a preliminary hearing for Gonzalez-Cruz, who is charged with harboring aliens. He was stopped by a Department of Public Safety officer April 17 near Granbury.

DALLAS (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare granted an additional $430,000 to Bishop College two years ago despite the college's history of financial mismanagement, a top HEW official testified Monday.

The grant was the result of a legal opinion given to Joseph Califano, who was secretary of HEW at the time, according to testimony from Henry G. Kirschenmann, director of grants and contracts for HEW.

His testimony came in the federal trial of three former Bishop administrators accused of illegally taking $306,000 from the college's restricted retirement fund and using it in the general operating budget.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Police officials say they plan to convert five squad cars from gasoline to propane to save money.

"Propane is much, much less expensive than gasoline, and we concluded we could realize an appreciable savings by using propane," said Deputy Chief Marion Rettig. He said it would cost about $1,000 each to convert the five cars.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors say Houshang Sheikh, 38, an Iranian accused in a heroin smuggling conspiracy, drove a circuitous route through the Dallas-Fort Worth area to throw federal agents off his trail Feb. 5.

But Sheikh says he wasn't trying to shake any agents — he testified at his trial Monday he was lost and trying to find his way.

He is accused in a conspiracy to smuggle high grade heroin past Customs agents at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport concealed in a display case that held a Koran, a Moslem holy book.

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ruled the Revolutionary Communist Party can hold a May Day parade on Thursday but must walk on sidewalks along a specific route.

Judge Carl O. Bue also barred enforcement of city ordinance provisions requiring liability insurance for parades. He said a group which cannot obtain liability insurance for its parade need not provide it.

American Civil Liberties Union lawyers had urged that the court permit the paraders to march in the street. They said the parade group wants to reach Hispanics and blacks but the specific route order will prevent them from doing so.

The parade is to start at Moody Park on the north side and end at Emancipation Park southeast of downtown Houston. Bue's route includes Main Street in the downtown area.

The parade permit application said about 500 are expected to participate.

HOUSTON (AP) — About 100 policemen may soon lose the privilege of taking city-owned cars to their homes.

About 700 now have such a privilege but a change recommended by Assistant Chief Tommy Mitchell would change the ground rules in June.

Currently, no officer residing more than 35 miles from police headquarters have take-home cars. This would be reduced to 30 miles by the new plan.

Mitchell said about 15 percent now in the take-home category will be affected unless they move closer to headquarters.

YAQUI INDIAN children interrupt their game to pose for a photograph in a street in Guadalupe, Ariz. Guadalupe is an impoverished, isolated community of 5,000 — mostly Yaqui, Mexican or a combination of the two — set in among prosperous metropolitan areas. Some residents say the inability of public education to meet the special needs of Yaqui and Mexican schoolchildren helps perpetuate the town's economic blight. (AP photo)

Yaqui Indians combine poverty and pride

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Yaqui Indians fled Mexican persecution in 1904 to found a tiny town in the Arizona desert. Prosperity bloomed all around, but the years have not been kind to the Yaquis. They remain in the bondage of poverty, but now they seek to break those chains and let their unique culture speak again.

By ROBERT McEWEN
Associated Press Writer

GUADALUPE, Ariz. (AP) — This town of 5,000 in the middle of the bustling, prosperous Phoenix metropolitan area has attracted no industry and few businesses.

But it has attracted academic attention in abundance. The residents — overwhelmingly Yaqui Indians, Mexicans, or both — have been surveyed by anthropologists, demographers, sociologists, graduate students, newspaper reporters and television crews. Guadalupe was founded in 1904 by Yaquis fleeing persecution in Mexico. Promised fertile land, they wound up on a barren desert slope.

Today, the community sits on one square mile along the eastern edge of Interstate 10, a heavily traveled freeway that connects Phoenix, Tempe and Mesa with Tucson.

Poverty is endemic. The median educational level of Guadalupeans over 25 is seventh grade. Per capita income is below $1,000. Unemployment hovers around 29 percent. Most of those with jobs work outside the community as farm laborers, domestics, grocery checkers and the like.

Roosters strut with authority about the dusty, gravel yards, many of which have colorful shrines to Our Lady of Guadalupe. Others are littered with junk.

But if Guadalupe has poverty, it also has pride — pride in its own cultural tradition and identity.

Too much scrutiny has produced a certain resentment.

"Sometimes we're made to feel like we were living in a zoo or a fishbowl," says Lauro Garcia, director of a community action group that fought and won the battle for Guadalupe's incorporation in 1975.

"We're a warm people and always have been," says Jose Solarez, assistant town manager and a fourth-generation Guadalupean. "But when people start looking into your windows and knock at your door asking questions, some doors will be slammed."

Leading the parade of studies was a mid-'60s project funded by the federal government and conducted by former Arizona State University Prof. J. A. Jones.

The Army wanted to find ways of getting Vietnamese communities to rebuild themselves without direct help from American advisors, he says, and the Guadalupe experiment was designed to define principles of community rehabilitation.

Jones started baseball leagues, housing programs and cultural projects. His work, he says, taught

Guadalupeans how to "deal with a dominant society without having to go through intermediaries."

But Solarez says no study has produced results "in such areas as economic development and other positive things."

Schooling is a sore point between Guadalupe and outside officials. Some Guadalupeans are unhappy over what they regard as the inability of public education to meet the special needs of Yaquis and Mexican youngsters. They accuse the Tempe school district of diluting the power of the community by dividing more than 700 Guadalupean children among eight different schools in order to get more federal funds.

The district says federal grants are based on the total of minority students, and that distribution promotes integration.

Religion plays a big part in Guadalupe's life, both "La Iglesia," St. Mary's, a Roman Catholic church, and "El Templo," the Yaqui temple.

Solarez says "there's been an infusion of Catholicism into Yaqui culture," dating back to the middle of the 17th century, when the Spanish conquerors in Mexico brought Christianity to the Yaquis.

Rev. Roman Ament of St. Mary's says the church cooperates with the tribe's religious leader, called a maestro, "as we would with a lay deacon."

Community Concert drive is sellout

Board members of the Pampa Community Concert Association announced Wednesday that the 1980-81 season is sold out.

The annual membership drive ended Saturday. Mrs. Bob Curry sold the most memberships, while Mrs. H.J. Johnson sold the most new memberships.

Mrs. Connie McDaniel was chairman of the annual drive. Almost 150 community workers assisted with the drive.

Membership cards will be mailed to all members during the fall. The Caribbean Carnival of Trinidad will perform in October to open the concert season.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By JOE GRAEDON

Q Now that warm weather is here I'm really looking forward to the start of the swimming season. But one thing I'm not looking forward to is red eyes.

I am so sensitive to chlorine that just a few minutes in the water makes them extremely bloodshot. Can you recommend drops that will keep me from looking like I've been out all night carousing?

A Rather than seeking eye drops to cover up the redness it sounds like you would be better off following the old dictum "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." If your eyes are that susceptible to chlorine you would be better off buying a pair of small swimming goggles in order to eliminate the irritation in the first place.

However, if eye protection isn't enough to completely prevent redness, here are some recommendations on drops:

Look for the ingredients tetrahydrozoline or naphazoline (Clear Eyes, Murine Plus, Naphcon, Ocusol Vaso Clear and Visine). These agents are more stable and tend to have a longer lasting effect than phenylephrine, another constituent in some brands of eye drops.

Never keep any eye product beyond the expiration date on the label or longer than three months after it's been opened. Bacterial contamination can cause serious trouble if you use drops left over from last year. You should also discard any solutions which have drug crystals or have become discolored.

Try not to get into an eye drop habit. Prolonged use of these products may cause a rebound congestion of the tiny capillaries in your eyes and lead to drug-induced redness. This may set up a vicious cycle whereby you start using the drops to relieve the redness caused by the drops.

With any luck the goggles will put an end to your swimming pool problems and eliminate the need for symptomatic relief.

Q Estrogen-related uterine cancer is well known, but what about the woman with no uterus?

I am 58, and have had a hysterectomy. My doctor prescribed hormones several years ago for a painful bone condition, thinking estrogen could delay the onset of osteoporosis. I feel better when taking it.

Do I risk ovarian or breast cancer by continued use of estrogens?

A Clearly, any woman who has had a hysterectomy no longer has to fear cancer of the uterus. The question of breast or ovarian cancer, however, is a different matter.

Various studies that have looked into this possibility have shown that estrogens neither increase nor reduce the risk of breast cancer for most people. Nevertheless, if there is a history of breast cancer in your family, you would probably be smart to avoid hormones.

Women who have experienced problems with blood clots in their legs (thrombophlebitis) or suffered a stroke or heart attack should also steer clear.

However, if none of these risks applies in your case there is no reason to fear your medication.

There is some evidence that estrogen replacement therapy can assist in relieving the symptoms of osteoporosis (weakening of bones) and may even halt the course of this disease if started early enough.

Q I've recently taken up jogging to lose a few extra pounds and improve my health. I'm really enjoying it but there is just one problem.

After running, my nipples are red, sore and often bleed. Is there any non-prescription medication that will alleviate the discomfort?

A No need for a drug. A little petroleum jelly applied to the nipples before running may help. To be extra safe, use a bandage as well.

This problem can affect both men and women. Although it may seem natural to wear a soft and absorbent cotton shirt while you jog, that's a mistake. A shirt made of synthetic material that reduces friction on the nipple will also help prevent irritation.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A long time ago I read in your column about blood vessels on the nose. Mine are broken and I'm afraid my nose will become bulbous. Your article mentioned a medication that you can take to prevent this. I asked my doctor about it and he said it was just from blowing one's nose the wrong way. His, by the way, is really bad. I realize no physician can know everything so I dropped the subject. It's getting worse, though, and before it's beyond the help of medication I'd appreciate some information from you on what could be done about it.

DEAR READER — It's not uncommon to have increased prominence of small veins in the nose as a person gets older. It's part of life. However, if you're talking about the problem of acne rosacea, which is the enlarged bulbous red nose that some people develop, there are things that can be done to help prevent progression of the condition.

It used to be said that people with the large red nose had a "rummy nose" and it was associated with drinking alcohol. It is true that anything that increases the blood flow through the skin and, consequently, to the skin over the nose may contribute to the problem. However, people who have never had a drop of alcohol to drink may develop such a nose. In the extreme case, plastic surgery is sometimes required to produce a more acceptable looking nose.

Individuals who have any evidence of this, such as lots of prominent veins, can be put on tetracycline antibiotics.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 69 years. I am 93 and she is 90. Before we were married, Myrtis and I "went together" for almost a year. In all that time she never found out whether I was a "poor lover" or a great one. My work took me out of town from Monday through Friday, so we spent our Saturday evenings together in her parents' home (in the "parlor") often with either one or both parents present. Sometimes the two of us would enjoy a meal in a deluxe restaurant. (It cost me 75 cents plus a 10-cent tip.) I was doing well as a traveling salesman. I made $100 a month plus expenses!

Sunday mornings we always went to church together. Myrtis sang in the choir. So did I until they found out what was the matter with the choir — then I didn't sing there anymore.

We fell in love, but not the way they do today. No so much as a good-night kiss before we became engaged. When I asked her to marry me, after much pleading on my part she finally said yes. Then I took her in my arms and planted a big kiss right on her lips. And that was it. No more than a hug and a kiss until we were married some two months later.

Well, I guess I turned out to be a pretty fair lover. We had five children, 17 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

You may want to put this in your "My, how times have changed" file. Anyway, Myrtis joins me in sending you our love and appreciation for all those wonderful columns through the years.

ELIAS P. TYLER, SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR ELIAS: Thanks for a wonderful column piece. Your letter was a real "upper."

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with the woman whose 46-year-old husband has begun taking clarinet lessons. How about a 56-year-old wife who has taken up tap dancing?

Do you think I'm being unreasonable when I insist that she do her tapping out in the garage? She has a long extension cord for the record player.

HAD IT IN LOS ALAMOS

DEAR HAD IT: Better not banish your dancing doll to the garage, or it might be "taps" for your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that you aren't aware that most married women consider every single attractive female a threat to their marriages.

For your amusement, when I became a widow, a married woman whom I had known only slightly called to tell me that she was beside herself with grief because her husband's doctor had told her that her husband might go "any minute." But, of course, she was not allowed to tell him.

Well, today, seven years later, the husband is still hale, hearty and thriving.

Very clever, wouldn't you say?

BERT

DEAR BERT: Yes, and also devious. Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

ON THEIR OWN. Roger and Virginia Meyers, a mildly retarded California couple whose story was on national television a year ago, say they're still in love but have the same problems as other married couples. They were married 2½ years ago. (AP Photo)

Virginia and Roger: still in love, struggling to overcome obstacles

By DAN TEDRICK
Associated Press Writer

EL CAJON, Calif. (AP) — Virginia and Roger fell in love at a crafts class held at a home for the mentally retarded. The matchmaker was Virginia's papier mache rabbit.

That was a decade ago. Roger was 21, Virginia 18. Things clicked like they do for other young lovers, but unlike most couples, Virginia and Roger faced financial, social and physical obstacles some people said were insurmountable.

Their IQs were below 80, Virginia dragged her left leg and tired easily because of birth defects and neither had ever lived without special care.

Today, they are husband and wife. And the story of their special love and struggle has made them minor celebrities.

A paperback version of their story, "Like Normal People," came out this spring. Written by Roger's brother, Washington Post reporter Robert Meyers, the book was made into an ABC-TV movie that aired April 13, 1979, starring Shaun Cassidy as Roger and Linda Purl as Virginia.

Their life now is stable and close, but "it was like a bumpy road for the first five months — and that's why we had the psychiatrist," Virginia says.

The psychiatrist, paid with public funds, visits only occasionally now, "just to show us simple ways to stretch our money," she says. Still, the road for a mildly retarded married couple in 1980 is far from smooth, they say.

The busboy's job Roger handled four days a week is down to a single night at a local barbecue because of declining business. He earns $12 for that shift, plus $6 or $7 in table tips. After several months, Virginia has given up training as a hotel maid.

Recalls Roger: "She came home cranky."

Roger is now doing part-time work as a handyman for the manager of their apartment house, but he was recently turned down for a job he really wanted — stockboy at the corner convenience store. He says he dreams of a profession.

"The community won't accept me — I can't understand it," he says.

But Virginia is proud of how well her husband has done, and together they're saving for a plane trip to visit relatives in New York state this August.

"We'll put aside $150 — and that's no April Fool's joke," Virginia said in a recent interview.

Their second-floor apartment costs $220 a month — up $15 from what they paid for the ground-floor unit they rented as newlyweds back in June 1977.

A check for $660 comes every month, a combination of state and federal funds under the Supplemental Security Income Law. They plan to "get off the program and really on our own" someday.

Meanwhile, they bank a monthly check from Roger's brother and they keep their financial records straight with three savings accounts.

But their unexpected fame last year complicated their dream to live as a "normal" couple. And they complain Hollywood did not paint an entirely accurate picture of them.

"At first, they made us look more retarded than we really were," Roger says of the movie characterizations. "A few of our friends didn't think it was the real us."

When Iassidy said in the ABC-TV movie that "getting married is like coming out of retardation," Roger felt proud of the phrase he had coined.

But he didn't like it when the movie version had Roger telling Virginia: "You have pretty blue eyes." In real life, Roger says, "I said, 'You have pretty brown eyes.'...I also don't have buck teeth like he (Cassidy) does."

Truthfulness is one of the qualities people remember about Roger at the Home of Guiding Hands, where he met Virginia.

Administrator Don Chambliss calls Roger "quite a ham" who enjoys fame.

Twice, Roger and Virginia have returned to narrate their movie at the institution where he lived for six years and she for nine.

They have talked at several conferences and special education classes, telling how handicapped people can survive together when nobody thought they could.

Their lives "never changed a bit" because of the book and movie, a neighbor says of the couple.

Roger bowls, roller skates and helps at home with cleaning and the dishes. He and Virginia cook their own meals. And of course there's the handyman's job.

Counselor Michael Self, who visits them twice a month, says "on the whole, they do pretty well with the same kind of problems of couples trying to make it everywhere."

Roger, now 31, reminds his wife that "we had to wait six years to prove we could make it."

But Virginia had confidence in their relationship right from the start — "I knew I had him when he saw me making that rabbit," she says.

April market prices surge one percent

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Grocery bills went up by a full percentage point during April, according to an Associated Press survey which shows the increases spread across almost all the shelves in the supermarket.

More than half of the items checked rose last month in at least four of the 13 cities surveyed by the AP. Less than a third of the items declined in four cities or more.

The AP drew up a random list of commonly purchased food and non-food products and checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 2, 1979. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket total went up during April at the checklist store in eight cities and decreased in five cities. Overall, the marketbasket totals were an average of 1 percent higher at the start of May than they were a month earlier.

In March, in contrast, the marketbasket declined at the checklist store in eight cities and rose in five, leaving the average bill unchanged, according to the AP survey.

Although the April increases were widespread, they hit hardest at non-foods. The non-foods represented 23 percent of the items checked, but accounted for 30 percent of the increases. Fabric softener went up at the checklist store in nine cities — more than any other item. Pork chops, paper towels, butter, eggs, detergent, milk and sugar also increased at the checklist store in at least four cities.

The good news last month came at the meat counter. The price of a pound of chopped chuck went down at the AP checklist store in eight cities. Beef production is still lower than it was a year ago, but output during the rest of 1980 is expected to be close to 1979 levels.

Prices for pork chops and eggs — two alternatives to beef as a source of protein — have gone down over the past year because of abundant supplies, but the April picture was mixed. The AP survey showed pork chops went up in six cities and down in four; eggs went up in six cities and down in six. The only item besides chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs to decline in at least four cities was frankfurters, down last month at the checklist store in five cities.

The AP did not try to weight the survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease. The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut 'ork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter.

Sect leader says world war is still at hand

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Leland Jensen says he was sent, like Noah, to warn the world. But the bombs of nuclear war did not fall at 7:55 p.m. EDT Tuesday as he had predicted they would.

The 65-year-old leader of a religious sect later told newsmen that he believes the seeds of World War III were sown at the appointed hour. He said it might be days or weeks before American cities are bombed.

Jensen's followers in Wyoming also expressed belief that the end is near. "I do believe it is going to happen in the future," said Mike Rueffert in Cody. "Even if our dating is off, I think it's coming."

Jensen and other members of the sect, an offshoot of the Baha'i faith, had sought refuge in fallout shelters in several Western states. Jensen said he will keep the shelter in the basement of his home prepared and he will stay ready "until the bombs drop" to enter it.

Jensen was expelled from the worldwide Baha'i faith in 1960 and the church doesn't sanction his teachings or predictions, a spokesman at the religion's national headquarters in Wilmette, Ill., said.

He served four years in the Montana state prison at Deer Lodge after being convicted of sexually molesting a child in 1969. Warden Roger Crist said Jensen started a chapter of his sect at the prison.

A former chiropractor and "naturopathic physician," Jensen claims membership in his sect of several thousand people.

FARM SCENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new International Food Aid Convention has been signed under which the United States pledges to provide at least 4.47 million metric tons of grain a year to help feed hungry nations.

The U.S. share represents nearly three-fifths of the total minimum annual commitment of 7.6 million metric tons by 19 countries that have made pledges of food aid under the convention.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who signed the pact Tuesday on behalf of the United States, noted it was negotiated as part of the International Wheat Agreement and replaces the Food Aid Convention of 1971 in which the total annual aid was only 4.2 million metric tons, including a U.S. minimum commitment of less than 1.9 million.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, in the case of wheat, is equal to 36.7 bushels.

However, Bergland said annual U.S. aid shipments have exceeded the minimum specified in the 1971 agreement. In the 1978-79 fiscal year, which ended last Sept. 30, for example, shipments totaled about 5.3 million metric tons.

The 1980 aid pact, subject to approval by the U.S. Senate and governments of the other countries, was agreed upon despite unsuccessful negotiations for a new International Wheat Agreement.

But the 1971 IWA — as the general agreement is called — was extended until June 30, 1981, in hopes a new one can be developed.

Bergland said the new aid agreement "represents a substantial improvement in world food security" and is a major step toward providing a goal of at least 10 million metric tons of wheat and other grains annually for use in developing countries.

The target of 10 million metric tons annually was set by participating nations at a World Food Conference in Rome in November 1974.

Bergland said the goal of 10 million metric tons is "the absolute minimum to reach a measure of food security in the poor countries" and urged other nations to join as donors, "especially the OPEC countries."

Annual contributions to the food-aid pool can include outright gifts of grain or cash to buy grain within a recipient country, sales in exchange for currency of a recipient country, or long-term repayment provisions at low rates of interest.

The U.S. mechanism for carrying out its aid under the convention is the Food for Peace program. Of the 5.3 million metric tons provided under it last fiscal year, 1.5 million were outright donations.

Donor members of the 1980 Food Aid Convention, which will replace the old pact on July 1, and their minimum pledges, include:

Argentina, 35,000 metric tons annually; Australia, 400,000; Austria, 20,000; Canada, 600,000; the European Economic Community and its nine member countries, 1,650,000; Finland, 20,000; Japan, 300,000; Norway, 30,000; Sweden, 40,000; Switzerland, 27,000; and the United States, 4,470,000.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An additional 40.4 million bushels of corn that had been expected to be shipped to the Soviet Union has been bought by the government to help boost farmers' grain prices.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced the latest purchases Tuesday. No price or total cost figures were immediately available.

The purchases raised to about 99.6 million bushels the amount of corn the Agriculture Department has bought to help offset President Carter's Jan. 4 partial embargo of U.S. grain exports to the Soviet Union in retaliation for its invasion of Afghanistan.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people getting government food stamps increased to an estimated 21.4 million in February, says the Agriculture Department.

That was up about 3.4 percent from a revised participation of 20.7 million in January, the department's Food and Nutrition Service said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, groups representing poor families urged that Congress take immediate steps to keep the government's food stamp program from going broke.

The administration says that unless Congress provides additional money by May 15, food stamps will be cut off to about 20.8 million people June 1.

"It is inexcusable that Congress would let such an important program run out of funds," said Jacob Clayman, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

"About a million elderly households look to food stamps each month for a significant part of their food purchasing power. I don't know where they'll be able to go if the program closes down."

Deceptive trade suit reflects in used goods

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today agreed to review a deceptive trade suit that could have enormous impact on sales of second-hand goods between persons who are not in the business of selling.

Oral arguments were set for June 4 in a Dallas suit in which Charles Pennington sued J.W. Singleton III, who sold Pennington a trailer, boat and motor.

A Dallas judge awarded Pennington a $981.86 judgment.

The 5th Court of Civil Appeals in Dallas first affirmed the judgment, concluding that the Deceptive Trade Practices Act "is not limited to sales by persons in the business of selling."

It said Pennington had bought the boat and motor after Singleton had assured him they were in "excellent condition," "perfect condition" and "just like new."

Actually, the appeals court said, the gear housing of the motor had been cracked and inadequately repaired and two months after the sale Pennington spent $481.68 on repairs. The court said Pennington should recover damages even though Singleton did not know about the faulty motor.

On rehearing, however, the appeals court said that since the trial court had found Singleton did not know his statements were false, "we conclude that the court erred that such statements were in violation of the act."

The Supreme Court said it would hear that point and seven other alleged points of error by the appeals court.

"I quit, Mr. President", is gaining a familiar ring

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson was the first secretary of state to say the hell with it. William Jennings Bryan was another. Now, Cyrus Vance. Vance left saying: "I could not support the difficult decision taken by the president on the rescue operation in Iran." Those words are key: "I could not support."

Beginning with Jefferson in George Washington's administration, American history has had its share of resignations of conscience, even though most of the time the real reason is hidden in honeyed words.

Vance's chosen successor, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, agrees that quitting is the way to handle a disagreement with the boss. Muskie told his first news conference as secretary of state-designate Tuesday that "any man who holds public office who feels he cannot do so without violating his principles does a courageous thing when he resigns the office."

Between 1900 and 1970 alone, say authors Edward Weisband and Thomas M. Franck in their 1975 book, "Resignation in Protest," 389 top American officials resigned of their free will and in their prime. Of that number, 355 left government without trace of public protest and only 34 went public with their disagreement. Jefferson could not support an administration that ignored his advice. And besides, he was bored. In Bryan's case, it was a note Woodrow Wilson sent the Germans to protest the sinking of the Lusitania.

The first chief justice of the United States, John Jay, resigned because there was not enough work to keep him busy. He became governor of New York, which presumably was more active.

The most famous protest resignation in recent years was that of Attorney General Elliot Richardson and his No. 2 man, William French Smith, in 1973. They resigned rather than follow President Richard Nixon's order to fire Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox. The event became known as the Saturday Night Massacre.

Military officers often feel they have no choice but to resign when they oppose the policies of the civilian leadership. Maj. Gen.

John K. Singlaub resigned in 1977 after publicly disagreeing with President Carter over his plan to withdraw American troops from Korea.

Lt. Gen. Edward Rowley, a SALT negotiator, resigned from the Army in 1979 so he could speak out against the treaty. And Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker wrote a lengthy, blistering complaint that he was barred from speaking out against the dangers of communism before he took off his two stars in 1961.

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin quit the Army in 1958 because of his disagreement with Dwight Eisenhower's defense policies, quit as John M. Kennedy's ambassador to France because he didn't see eye-to-eye with that administration, and became a loud critic of Johnson administration policies in Vietnam.

Dean Acheson, who later became Harry Truman's secretary of state, quit as Franklin D. Roosevelt's under secretary of the Treasury in 1933 because he disagreed with the president's gold buying plan, a dollar-devaluating maneuver. His letter of resignation concealed any sign of conflict.

When another official resigned with less grace, Roosevelt growled: "Tell that man to go see Dean Acheson to learn how a gentleman resigns."

Years later, a man named John L. Sullivan loudly left the Truman administration, his protest filling the front pages of the morning papers. He was welcomed at a party by Acheson "to the most exclusive club in America — the club of men in public life who have resigned in a cause of conscience."

Harold Ickes, who had made a reputation in the Roosevelt administration as a fearless defender of the public interest, became angered in the Truman years over the nomination of Truman crony Edwin W. Pauley to be under secretary of the Navy. He went public with harsh criticism.

Truman, outraged at such impudence, supported Pauley and Ickes sent a letter of resignation that Truman said was "the sort of resignation a man sent in, knowing it would not be accepted." But Truman did accept it and Ickes made a radio broadcast to the nation.

Freedom gained in prison break proved short lived

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — What is 13 hours of freedom worth? Eighty-two days of digging under the massive stone walls of the state's maximum security prison? Johnnie Verton and Donald Williamson think so.

Williamson and Verton are escape addicts. Each man is serving two sentences for escape in addition to their original terms — Verton 5 to 18 years for robbery; Williamson 25 years for kidnapping. But the break-out through a 38-foot tunnel last year was their most daring.

For tools, they used a cereal bowl, a mattress cover and hacksaw blades. An extra mattress came in handy to make dummies to "sleep" in their beds at night while they tunneled.

To make it even more complicated, Verton, 23, and Williamson, 31, were serving time in North Hall — the top-security cellblock, where inmates are supposed to be checked every half-hour by guards.

"I would think the security would be foolproof. It wasn't," Dick Mohn, then superintendent of the prison, said on the day of the escape, July 24. The escape went undetected for nearly eight hours.

The stage was set in late April when the two were caught trying to escape through the ventilation system and were given long terms in separate five-by-seven-foot cells in North Hall.

It wasn't the digging that took the most time, Verton says, but the way they used a hacksaw blade to cut holes through the quarter-inch steel walls of their cells.

"We took one tooth at a time and we just grooved it the length of the hole we planned to cut," Verton says. Cutting was daytime work when the sounds of radios and televisions and showers would drown out the scratching.

Behind the wall was a "break" — a four-foot wide, dirt-floored space for pipes and wires that supplied the cells.

Verton says he started cutting his legal pad-sized hole May 4 and finished it June 30. Verton was sewed the dummies they tucked under the beds. The dummies from Playboy were used to cover the hole in his cell.

The two men would slip out of their cells after the 10 p.m. check and return before 5:30 a.m.

Verton did most of the digging using a knife fashioned from a metal strip off of his bunk and a plastic cereal bowl, while Williamson packed down and smoothed out the dirt in the break.

The tunnel was about five feet wide, and at the lowest point about nine feet from the surface.

Denton courthouse removed as barrier

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today refused to throw out a capital murder charge against a man who claimed the indictment is invalid because the Denton County courthouse is not in the county seat.

Brian Thomas Knowles was indicted in the May 2, 1979, death of Linda Rene Williams. She was hit and crushed by an automobile driven by Knowles during an attempted aggravated rape, according to the indictment.

Knowles asked the appeals court to order State District Judge Bob Scofield to dismiss the case. The appeal claimed "every act required by law to be performed at or in the county seat" in Denton County is null and void.

The appeal complained the Joseph A. Carroll Courts Building in Denton, opened in 1978, is not in the county seat.

The opinion, written by Judge Sam Houston Clinton, included the history of the Denton County seat, a history complicated by an 1875 courthouse fire that destroyed all records.

Clinton said the court could not find records to prove Knowles' claim that the building is outside the county seat.

"Being unable to find from the record before us a factual foundation so free from doubt that establishes clear legal right to the extraordinary relief sought by petitioner, the court must refuse it," Clinton said.

The Carroll building is in the city of Denton, but Knowles' appeal claimed the county seat set in the 19th century does not include all of the city.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

May 2, 1980

This coming year you will be quite fortunate in things dealing with your self-interests and social activities. Dame Fortune has some nice events scheduled for you that will help things along.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Listen attentively. There is information floating around that can be quite valuable to you. It could come from a least-expected source. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph Letter, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) People tend to confide in you today where they wouldn't do so with others. This could serve to strengthen a bond important to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Deal in the realm of new ideas today, especially in areas involving your work, and you'll come up with something extremely beneficial to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're particularly fortunate today, both financially and in your career. Your outgoing, sociable attitude may play a big role in this.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instinctively, you put bits and pieces together today to serve you in a most practical and fundamental way. Your thinking is clear and precise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Assert your natural shrewdness in commercial situations today. The buys or means to buy that might be hidden to others won't be hidden from you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Close associates and partners will play an important role in your affairs today in helping to realize a material goal you've been striving for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't hesitate to accept additional responsibilities today. You're more than adequately equipped to handle challenging situations, and the rewards will be worth it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep all channels of communication open today. Good news is trying to break through. You won't want to miss it, since it could mean a lot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Joint ventures aimed at doing things for your group of friends or club appear to be quite fortunate for you today. This should be right up your alley.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your keen, fair thinking is your ticket to success today. You know how to observe things for what they really are and use your knowledge advantageously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Those ingenious little ideas you get today will help you make much out of nothing and could pay off quite handsomely. Put them to work.

JUNIOR RIGHTHANDER Leroy Kuhn gets the starting mound assignment when the Pampa Harvesters meet Palo Duro at 4 p.m. Friday in a District 3-AAAA game in Amarillo. Kuhn has a 2-2 won-lost record to go with a 4.1 earned run average. The Harvesters face a must-win situation to stay alive in the district race.

Harvesters need two wins to stay alive in district race

It's getting down to the final chapter in the District 3-AAAA baseball race this season, and two things are going to have to happen for the Pampa Harvesters to salvage a happy ending.

First, The Harvesters are going to have to win their final two games with Palo Duro and Amarillo High to have any chance of making the playoffs. Second, Caprock must lose its final game to Palo Duro Monday.

"We not only have to play good ball these next two games, but we've also got to depend on some other people (Palo Duro) to come through for us," said Pampa coach Steve Scott.

Caprock downed Tascosa, 5-3, Tuesday to knock the Rebels out of sole possession of first place. Both Caprock and Tascosa have 2-1 second-half records. Amarillo High downed Palo Duro, 9-1, Tuesday, and is now 1-1 in loop play. The Sandies must win their final two games to gain a tie for the second-half title, provided Caprock defeats Palo Duro.

Pampa is also 1-1 in second-half district action after dropping a 4-3 heartbreaker to Tascosa last Friday.

"We played as good defensively as we ever have and we had some good hits, but we just couldn't get the runs when we needed them," Pampa coach Steve Scott said.

With the score tied, 3-3, Tascosa scored the winning run on a base hit in the bottom of the seventh inning.

"We had a couple of things happen to us that were just bad omens I guess, like a ball hitting the base and hitting the baserunner with a batted ball," Scott said. "But that's the way it goes in baseball-sometimes."

Pampa plays Palo Duro there Friday with Leroy Kuhn(2-2) scheduled to start on the mound. Palo Duro is 0-2 in district play and 4-12 overall.

Bradshaw's brother going to Oilers

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tatum and Bradshaw. The names, linked together before, are entwined again. But one of the faces is different.

It doesn't belong to Terry Bradshaw, the quarterback of the Pittsburgh Steelers, whose 1972 playoff pass became Franco Harris' "immaculate reception" when Oakland's Jack Tatum deflected the ball.

Instead, it is Craig Bradshaw, Terry's kid brother, a reserve quarterback at Utah State in 1979 and, on Wednesday, a seventh-round pick by the Houston Oilers in the National Football League draft.

Tatum, once an All-Pro defensive back, once one of the most feared safeties in the business; was part of the three-for-one deal which enabled the Oilers to pick the younger Bradshaw — which shows just how much Tatum's market value has plummeted.

In exchange for Tatum and Oakland's seventh-round pick this year (Bradshaw) and next, all the Raiders got in return was running back Kenny King. As a rookie last year, King, a third-round pick out of Oklahoma, carried the ball three times for nine yards.

Tatum and Bradshaw were the only real "name" players mentioned during Wednesday's conclusion of the two-day, 12-round, 17-hour, 333-player draft. Among the other veterans changing teams — each in exchange for a low-round pick this year or next — were running back Don Hardeman, from Baltimore to Denver, tight end Paul Seal, from San Francisco to Tampa Bay, and defensive end Willie Fry, from Pittsburgh to San Francisco.

This year as last, the last of the draftees was picked by Pittsburgh. This time it was Tyrone McGriff, a guard from Florida A&M.

In all, the 28 teams drafted 165 offensive players (45 running backs, 39 wide receivers, 19 tackles, 18 guards, 18 quarterbacks, 16 centers and 10 tight ends), 159 defensive players (58 defensive backs, 50 linebackers, 30 ends and 21 tackles) and nine specialists (four kickers, four punters and a kicker returner).

Nebraska and Southern California contributed 10 players apiece to share the lead among colleges (Baylor and Oklahoma were next with nine apiece), while the Pacific 10 was the top conference with 41 draftees to the Southwest Conference's 38.

Tatum's fall from grace shows what can happen when a player is enveloped by controversy.

A few years ago he was an integral part of an unsuccessful lawsuit filed by then-teammate George Atkinson, who took umbrage at Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll's pointed suggestions that a "criminal element" existed in pro football.

In a 1978 exhibition game, Tatum and New England's Darryl Stingley collided in midair on a pass play. The Patriots' young wide receiver was paralyzed from the neck down. Although Tatum was absolved of any guilt, it clearly affected him. His intensity and effectiveness seemed to dissolve.

And because he never contacted Stingley during his lengthy hospitalization (Tatum said he was told not to), the Patriots characterized him as callous, a label which further blackened his reputation.

Then, in 1979, he helped to smudge it some more. He wrote "They Call Me Assassin," a provocative book in which he admitted he and Atkinson had conducted their own little game of "knockout" wherein each tried to outdo the other in injuring or kayoing opposing players.

"I haven't read the book, but I think it was written to sell," said Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, insisting it had no bearing on the trade. "I've never seen him do anything I wouldn't want one of my players to do."

Tatum, too, said he thought the book was only incidental. "Al Davis just wants to rebuild the team and give the younger guys a chance to play. I really don't think the book had anything to do with it."

And Oakland Coach Tom Flores noted: "We had no problem with Jack ... But we felt we had to make a move to let our younger players play."

What cleared the way for the trade was the Raiders' acquisition on Tuesday of Burgess Owens, a starting safety for the New York Jets.

"When they traded for Owens, I knew some kind of deal was up," Tatum said. "It didn't surprise me at all. It's not a bad move for me at this time in my career. I'll be playing for a contender with a shot to get to another Super Bowl."

That presumes he'll stick with Houston. When the Raiders shipped quarterback Ken Stabler to the Oilers he filled the void created by Dan Pastorini's departure to Oakland. But Tatum is joining a defensive unit which already has an All-Pro (Mike Reinfield) and a playoff sensation (Vernon Perry, with his five interceptions) in the starting safety positions.

"He is a proven player who can help us attain our goal," Ed Biles, Houston's defensive coordinator, said of Tatum.

Filly bucking the odds

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A lot of horsemen are wondering what a nice filly like Genuine Risk is doing running against colts and geldings in Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

Mrs. Bert Firestone's filly is bucking the odds for the 1 1/4-mile event at Churchill Downs which had only one filly winner in 105 runnings. And that was back in 1915 when Regret led all the way to turn back 15 rivals. The last filly to start in the Derby was Silver Spoon who finished fifth in 1959.

"Yes, I do think we can win it," said Mrs. Firestone Wednesday. "I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so. My husband and I didn't come here for the Derby parties. She's bred for the distance."

Trainer Leroy Jolley, who saddled 1975 Derby winner Foolish Pleasure said immediately after a third-place finish in the April 19 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct the daughter of Exclusive Native-Virtuous wouldn't go in the Derby. She previously had won all six starts against fillies.

Genuine Risk also was nominated for the rich Kentucky Oaks for fillies here Friday and for New York's Triple Crown for fillies.

Jolley denied that he was overruled on the Derby by the Firestones, but said the change of mind came about when the expected Derby field dropped from more than 20 to about a dozen.

"We just didn't come here to be in the parade," Jolley said. "I think she is a legitimate third choice (behind Plugged Nickle and Rockhill Native) and she could win it."

When the entries were taken today for the $200,000-added first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, those three were expected to be opposed by ten others: Bold 'n Ruling, Degenerate Jon, Execution's Reason, Gold Stage, Jaklin Klugman, Rumbo, Super Moment, Tonka Wakhan, Withholding and Hazard Duke.

Genuine Risk, who will have Jacinto Vasquez aboard, will have a five-pound sex allowance, carrying 121 pounds to the males' 126, the same weight she carried in the Wood. Plugged Nickle won the 1 1/4-mile Wood, 1 1/2 lengths in front of Colonel Moran, who finished a head in front of Genuine Risk.

"One and a half lengths is not insurmountable to overcome at 1 1/4 miles," said Jolley. "This is a good chance to test her."

"A year ago, we wouldn't have entered her in the Derby. There were too many super colts, about 10 of them. We think in this company where there is no superhorse."

"She's a good-sized filly, about the size of an average colt. What I saw in the Blue Grass (won by Rockville Native last week) wasn't overly impressive."

Genuine Risk worked five furlongs in 1:02.5 over a slow track for the fastest time of any of the Derby horses working Wednesday. It was two seconds faster than Rockville Native's workout, but the Blue Grass winner's trainer, Herb Stevens said,

Cowboys forced to go with low draft choices

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, who built five Super Bowl teams on the National Football League draft, had to resort to 50-to-1 shots Tuesday when they couldn't work a trade for Thomas Henderson, Ed (Too Tall) Jones and Butch Johnson.

Relegated to the 78th and 80th choices because they traded No. 1 and No. 2 round picks to Baltimore for John Dutton, the Cowboys took chances on a running back and a linebacker coming off knee injuries.

The names of linebacker Bill Roe of Colorado and running back James Jones of Mississippi State sent Cowboy publicists scrambling for those schools' respective media guides.

The 6-foot-3, 221-pound Roe was a second team Associated Press All Big Eight selection. He made 161 tackles and ran 69 yards for a touchdown with an intercepted pass. He had knee surgery in his junior year.

Roe also boxes but laughingly assured the Cowboys that "professional boxing is not in my future plans."

Jones is 5-11 and 200-pounds. Although Mississippi State ran the Wishbone offense last year, his talents are more suited to the Cowboy I formation in the tailback position.

Jones said "I'm not a blazing fast back but I do a lot of cutting and I can run over people if I have to."

Jones can also throw the halfback pass, a trait Coach Tom Landry dearly loves. Jones completed two halfback passes for touchdowns in 1978. He was injured his senior year and played sparingly.

"Both Roe and James Jones have excellent chances of making it in the NFL," said Landry. "Roe will give us some depth at linebacker—a position where we needed a lot of help."

"Jones will fit into the tailback role behind Tony Dorsett. There is no question that we got both of these players because they are coming off knee injuries. Most teams were afraid to take a chance on them. When you get down as far as we were in the draft, you don't have much choice."

"I'm happy and surprised to be with the Cowboys," said Roe. "I think I can help them. I'm pretty good in pass coverage."

Asked the status of Henderson and Ed Jones, Landry said "I know Ed Jones is going to come back to football. But a lot of talking has to be done."

"As for Henderson, I guess we could trade him for a 1981 draft choice. That would be an attractive deal to a lot of people. He could play a year for them without the other team paying for him. I'd like to borrow some money that way."

About the draft Landry concluded, "It was kind of discouraging. There was just no way you could get excited."

He added: "If we had to miss out on a draft, this was a good one to miss. There just weren't that many can't miss players."

In the 20-year history of the Cowboys, they never had to draft as far back as they did Tuesday.

Chiles new Ranger boss

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth millionaire Eddie Chiles is the new board chairman of the Texas Rangers Baseball Club, ending the six-year reign of Brad Corbett.

Chiles was officially elected board chairman and chief executive officer Tuesday afternoon.

Eddie Robinson, who had been executive vice president of the Rangers, was elevated to the title of president and chief operating officer.

The board was trimmed from 10 to six members. Holdover directors include Fort Worth publisher Armon Carter Jr., the club's general counsel, Dee Kelley of Fort Worth and Charles Sharp of Dallas. Rejoining the board after a year's absence is Bill Seay, a Dallas resident and board chairman of Southwestern Life. Seay had resigned as a protest move against Corbett's operating policies.

Chiles also brought in B.M. Rankin of Dallas as the third largest stockholder in the Rangers behind Chiles and Carter.

Chiles noted that the smaller board would be "far more active" and easier to do business with, but emphasized the front-office operation would be under Robinson's direction.

"Eddie Robinson will be in charge of the baseball operation," Chiles said. "As a matter of policy we will consult with the team's management — that being Eddie and (manager) Pat Corrales — on any needs the ball club might have in regards to making a trade."

"Should any trade involve a lot of money," he noted, "the board will, of course, have to approve any capital expenditures. There will be no trades made in the dark of night under a new moon."

Corbett was often criticized for having a large hand in the club's trades, often involving a number of players from several different teams.

KELLYE RICHARDSON of Pampa signed a basketball letter of intent with Amarillo College Wednesday. The 5-10 senior averaged 22.6 points per game for the Lady Harvesters this season. (News Staff Photo)

High-scoring Kellye Richardson signed by Amarillo College

Kellye Richardson, Pampa's leading scorer the past two seasons, has signed a basketball letter of intent to play for the Amarillo College women's basketball team, according to Lady Badger coach Kelly Chadwick in a press conference Wednesday.

Richardson, who averaged 22.6 points, 10 rebounds and seven steals per game this season, was a third-team Class AAAA all-state selection. She was also a three-time District 3-AAAA all-league choice and a second-team Globe-News 1980 Panhandle-Plains Super Girls' Basketball Team pick.

"Kellye is quick, strong and she's not afraid to hit the boards," Chadwick said. "She drives with the ball better than any high school girl I've seen."

"I chose Amarillo College because it has a good academic program and a good basketball program," Richardson said. "Plus it's close to home and I want my parents to be able to see me play."

Richardson is the third Panhandle area cager signed by the Lady Badgers. Stratford's Lisa Albert and Amarillo High's Marcy Dale signed earlier.

Richardson had only one game below double figures this season, scoring over 20 points in 13 outings and over 30 points five times. Her high game was 36 points against Tascosa.

World champions dethroned by Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There will be no more miracles by the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics this year. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, with a little help from his friends, made sure of that.

Seattle fought from the brink of elimination in its Western Conference semifinal series with Milwaukee, coming from a 3-2 deficit to beat the Bucks and earn a shot at Los Angeles in the conference finals. The Sonics fell behind again, but the Lakers wouldn't let them off the hook.

With Abdul-Jabbar performing brilliantly, even for him, the Lakers finished strong, as has been their pattern recently, to end Seattle's season 111-105 Wednesday night and earn a berth in the NBA championship series against Eastern Conference titlist Philadelphia.

So the Sonics were eliminated, meaning that for the 11th straight year there won't be an NBA champion successfully defending its title. That hasn't happened since the Boston Celtics won in 1967-68 and again the following season.

There will be a couple of red-hot teams competing in the NBA finals, the Lakers, who are 8-2 in postseason play, and the 76ers, who are 10-2 in playoff action.

Los Angeles lost the opener of its best-of-seven series to Seattle 108-107 at the Forum, where the Lakers were 37-4 during the regular season, and will open the finals against the 76ers Sunday afternoon.

But after that setback, the Lakers blew the Sonics away in four straight. Seattle was bidding to become only the fourth team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit in a playoff series, but it wasn't to be.

Abdul-Jabbar had game-high totals of 38 points, 11 rebounds and seven blocked shots Wednesday night. He scored 12 points in the fourth quarter, including a skyhook with 3:13 to go that gave the Lakers a lead they would hold the rest of the way.

It looked for a while that there might be a Game Six. Seattle led 59-46 late in the second quarter, 62-54 at halftime and through most of the second half. But the Lakers scored 14 of the game's final 21 points to win going away.

Twenty-year-old rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, playing with the coolness of a 10-year veteran, had 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Lakers. Norm Nixon and Jamaal Wilkes added 19 and 15 points, respectively, for Los Angeles.

Dennis Johnson led the Sonics with 29 points, including a 40-foot three-point field goal as the third quarter ended which gave his team an 84-82 advantage heading into the final 12 minutes.

John Johnson and Gus Williams added 19 and 18 points, respectively, for Seattle.

Lopez talks about quitting

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton was sitting around talking about her final practice round for today's start of the fifth annual $100,000 Women's International Golf Tournament.

The talk turned to quitting golf. "I definitely won't be playing 10 years from now," said the 23-year-old New Mexico native. "I want to win 30 tournaments and then retire."

"I don't want to wait until I'm too old to have children," she added. "There are other things in life besides golf."

The reason she set a 30-win goal, she said, was a rule that a golfer must have that many victories — one of them in a major tournament — to qualify for the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

Lopez-Melton has won 18 tournaments in less than three years on the LPGA tour, and at her current pace she could reach her goal in two years.

The record-setting superstar of women's golf, who won eight tournaments and $197,000 in 1979, said she expects stiff competition as she goes after her 19th career triumph at Moss Creek Plantation. She believes her strongest competition may come from recent first-time winners Donna White and Barbara Barrow.

"I know they're playing well, especially Donna. This is a good course for her," said Lopez-Melton. "She can hit shots to the green. She's very powerful."

White was runnerup to Lopez-Melton in the 1979 Women's International and gained her first tour victory just two weeks ago in the Lady Citrus in Florida. Barrow won her initial LPGA tournament last week in the Birmingham (Ala.) Classic.

Another possible challenger is veteran Donna Caponi Young, who always plays well on the 6,500-yard, par-72 Devil's Elbow South course. But Young, who finished third in the last two Internationals and has two victories already this year, is recovering from a pulled groin muscle.

"It feels pretty good now," Young said. "I couldn't make any stronger swings than a 7-iron. But I'm playing well."

Young also picked out White and Barrow as two of the golfers to be reckoned with. "You have to look at the ladies who have been shooting well lately," she said.

Two golfers who always do well at Moss Creek are former international champions Sally Little and Jan Stephenson. Little won the inaugural event in 1976 and finished ninth the next two years. Stephenson captured the tournament in 1978 and finished second in 1976 and fifth in 1977.

Tigers slip past Rangers

DETROIT (AP) — When Champ Summers first came to Detroit last year, Rusty Staub told him he would grow to like the Tigers' fans. Staub is with the Texas Rangers now, but his words still echo in Summers' ears.

Detroit fans not only like Summers, they absolutely love him — and the feeling, he says, is mutual.

Summers went 2-for-3 Wednesday in the Tigers' 5-4 10-inning victory over the Rangers, including a long homer in the first inning that landed in the third deck. He also dove headlong into the rightfield wall, attempting to catch a liner by John Ellis, and had to leave the game.

"I fell in love with the ball park and the fans," Summers said. "I got a very warm ovation before I ever picked up a bat here, with no promises or anything. I can't explain it. All I know is I'm very comfortable here."

"If they gave me $1 million tomorrow, I'd still be the same player I am today. I'd still dive into the wall for that ball."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson noted that Summers gets cheers, even when he strikes out, because he always gives the pitcher a battle.

"Champ is going to do these people a very good job for a long time if they continue to be good to him," the Detroit manager said.

Canadian girls in Class AA state track meet

Canadian is entered in the Class AA Girls' State Track Meet Friday and Saturday in Canadian.

The Lady Wildcats' 880-relay team, consisting of Alicia Hobdy, Marcee Cole, Linda Reeves, and Teresa Morehead, will be there after taking first in the district meet. Hobdy and Morehead are also entered in the 200 after placing first and second respectively at district.

Canadian tied Slaton for first-place in the team event during district competition.

Questions and answers

By Murray Olderman

Q. How do you pronounce the name of the new Masters champion? I can't even spell it. Why do people say it's the new Arnold Palmer? Isn't he much younger than Palmer was when he started winning tournaments? — H.R., Cincinnati.

The true pronunciation of Severiano Ballesteros is Seve (as in "heavy") Bah-yes-tay-rus. I gave him the shortened first name. Comparing him with Palmer is a matter of style. They both rip at the ball with every ounce of strength, ending up off balance, and have a physical elan which separates them from the rest of the plastic, grooved golf crowd. Palmer's breakthrough as a magnetic golfing force came in 1958, when he won his first Masters. He was 28, though he'd won his first tournament three years earlier. The Spaniard is just 23 and has been a winner on the European circuit since he was 19.

Q. What team won the NBA championship, the NFL championship and the World Series in 1954? — Jon Mishra, Coos Bay, Ore.

The Cleveland Browns topped pro football, the Minneapolis Lakers won the pro basketball title, and the New York baseball Giants defeated the Cleveland Indians in the World Series that featured Willie Mays' miraculous over-the-shoulder catch.

Q. What is the record for the most consecutive knockouts by a pro fighter? How many did Rocky Marciano have? — G.S., Knoxville, Tenn.

The Ring Record Book tells us that Lamar Clark, a mediocre heavyweight from Utah, and Billy Fox, a light heavy of the 1940s, share the pro record with 43 straight knockouts each. But Clark's mark was built up against setups, and Fox's skein is equally suspicious. He once "stopped" Jake LaMotta in one of the most putrid bouts in history. The feats that impress me are the 30 straight KO's by Ruben Olivares, a world bantamweight champ of a decade ago, and the 27 straight by multi-champ Henry Armstrong, though he was a swarmer more than a slugger, and by heavyweight clouter Earnie Shavers of current vintage. Although Marciano won 43 of his 49 bouts via knockouts (he is the only champ in history who never lost a pro bout), his longest string was the 16 straight KO's at the start of his career — including nine in the first round.

Q. Do you think that since the Denver Broncos got Matt Robinson as their quarterback, they will have a chance to get to the Super Bowl? — Greg Oetken, Crawford, Neb.

Let's say they have an improved chance. The Broncos were disappointed with Robinson initially in a spring workout because he arrived out of shape, but the more he threw, the better he looked. I still feel the team to beat in the American Conference West will be the San Diego Chargers.

Q. Tell me about the peculiar batting stance of Dan Ford of the California Angels. Has anybody else ever stood with his left foot so far to the right, turning him around to first base? — N.M., Palm Springs, Calif.

They call it a "closed" stance. Though Ford's is certainly exaggerated, I can recall Elston Howard, the former New York Yankee catcher, standing with his rear foot practically out of the batter's box while his left foot was on its way to first base. Ford, vital to the California attack, is coming off knee surgery. On the same team, for vivid contrast in batting form, catcher Brian Downing practically faces the pitcher in an "open" stance.

ZAMBONI ART
BOSTON (AP) — Have you ever driven a Zamboni? Probably not.

A Zamboni is an ice-making, ice-shaving machine on wheels and is found at ice rinks. It has a four-wheel-drive chassis and includes a 190-gallon icemaking wash-water tank and a 100-cubic-foot compacted snow tank.

"Anyone can drive a Zamboni," said Dave Edmonson, the superintendent of the Boston Garden, the home of the Boston Bruins. "But there's an art to making the ice and shaving the surface."

Gardening by Moon signs: May is busy month

By LOIS BOYNTON

The moon will be decreasing: 1-13, 30-31. The moon will be increasing: 14-29.

The fruitful signs are: 9-10 until 3:45 p.m. (Pisces); 17-18 (Cancer); 27-28 (Scorpio).

The semifruitful signs are: 4-5 (Capricorn); 13-14 (Taurus); 24-26 (Libra); 31 (Capricorn).

The barren signs are: 1-3 (Sagittarius); 6-8 until 1:30 p.m. (Aquarius); 10th from 3:45 until 4:30 p.m. the 12th (Aries); 15-16 (Gemini); 19-20 (Leo); 21-23 (Virgo); 29-30 (Sagittarius).

Use the fruitful signs for all planting when possible. The semifruitful signs are second choice.

Remember to plant seeds that produce their fruit above ground during the increasing moon. Plant seeds that produce their fruit below the ground during the decreasing moon.

May is a busy month. There are more chores to be done than there are hours in the day to do them. More crops are planted in May than any other month. It is also a time for gathering from your garden enough for a fresh salad of lettuce, radishes, onions, asparagus and spinach. Oh! the delicious taste of the first fresh vegetables gathered from your own garden.

Planting out from the greenhouse and windowsill growing can be done now with caution — there still could be a light frost so be prepared.

Plants from a mail-order house generally arrive dry so give them a good soaking in a pail of tepid water for several hours or overnight.

After the wonderful rains of last week, growing and sowing conditions are at their best just now and the garden is a place of joy with the lilacs blooming and all plant life greening up with new buds opening every day. The snowballs, peonies and iris are getting ready for their shows. It is a great time in the garden. So don't be so busy that you miss the joy.

Cut back poinsettias to two eyes above the ground and plunge them to the brim in a bright sunny spot in your flower bed.

Cut the spent blooms from your Easter lily, knock it out of the pot and plant in your flower bed where you want it to bloom. Plant as deep as it was in the pot. It will bloom for you next year later than Easter, sometime in June.

Sometimes a conical evergreen tree loses its leader, as one of ours did several years ago. For some unknown reason it just died back about eight inches.

We cut out the dead part, selected a branch from the top whorl of side branches, carefully bent it straight upright and tied it with a piece of old nylon hose to a strong stake we had driven close to the trunk, and tied it in two places to the trunk. The stake should be left for a full season or until the new leader can stand alone.

Winter-killed shrubs should be cut practically to ground level. This will encourage their new shoots to grow stronger and better.

Cut old wood out of crepe myrtle. It blooms on the new wood.

Seeds benefit from overnight soaking in warm water before planting. Try placing the seed between moist paper towels and let them completely sprout before planting. This works great for seeds that are slow to germinate like okra, petunias and others. This will give a head start and insure germination of the seed.

Scatter poppy seeds in empty places for color. Rake in and pat down and cover with vermiculite to mark the spot.

If you like spinach, try New Zealand spinach, although not a true spinach, a great substitute. When warm weather arrives, it continues to produce new tender succulent leaves. It is an annual but persists on returning year after year, even after rototilling.

Check roses again with pruning shears in hand. Perhaps you did not prune them severely enough. It is a mistake to leave weak growth on a bush.

To make a beautiful and unusual flower bed in a sunny place, plant masses of petunias so thickly that weeds will not take over. Edge the bed with curly parsley. This will almost be trouble free when the planting is over. There will be little upkeep only cutting the dead heads off the petunias and clipping the parsley for the kitchen. Of course, it will need watering now and then.

Cut the spent blooms from jonquils, tulips and spring flowering bulbs, side dress with bone meal. Do not remove or restrict the foliage. It is manufacturing food for next year's blossoms and should be allowed to die back naturally. Plant annuals around them to take over while the foliage is maturing.

Peaches and pears should be thinned properly to insure large fruit and protect the tree. When the peaches are well formed, they should be thinned to six inches apart. Pears should be thinned to two per cluster, and the clusters should be about six inches apart.

A new lawn from seed will benefit from a light top-dressing of 50-50 mixture of sand and coarse peat each month. This will help to create a smooth level surface and encourage the growth of young grasses.

Established lawns should be mowed at least weekly between May and early September, sometimes twice weekly in good growing conditions.

If mowing is not carried out with sufficient frequency, the vigor of the grass may be impaired by the shock of cutting too much at a time.

In planting our tomatoes, we dig the holes a foot deep and put bone meal, cottonseed meal and a sprinkling of gypsum in the bottom of the hole. We set the tomato plants in the hole and around them place gallon cans which have the bottoms and tops removed.

We sucker the plants regularly. Suckers appear in the axils of the leaves. We think they should be removed.

When the tomatoes are about 18 inches high, we remove the cans and place tin bands around each plant. Some are three feet, some two feet in diameter, and all are four inches high. These are made at the Tin Shop. They hope preserve the water and make the job easier.

After the rings are in place, we put on the wire cages or cylinders. They are 18 inches in diameter and five feet tall. These are held in place by two 3/4 inch pipe, six feet long. They are grown down through the wire and driven into the ground. We have grown our own tomatoes by this method for several years. They produce well and the fruit is clean.

We always grow several varieties. Some of our favorites are glamour, porter and beefmaster.

Now that we spring ahead with daylight savings time, it will give us one more hour in the evening to work in our gardens.

Soldiers indifferent to Marilyn look alike

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — The soldiers at Fort Carson appeared indifferent, despite the presence of a "Oui" magazine cover girl, a squad of Denver models sent to recruit soldiers and the chance to see Marilyn Monroe on stage.

ABC-TV crews had hoped to get thousands of soldiers out on a chilly weekend for the filming of a scene for "Marilyn," a three-hour television movie adapted from Norman Mailer's book of the same name. Only 500 Army men showed up.

But never mind, said ABC-TV's "MM" look-a-like, Catherine Hicks — the film editors will make it look like a much bigger crowd.

The scene shot at the Army base near Colorado Springs was part of a sequence revolving around the blonde screen siren's honeymoon with Joe DiMaggio. She decided to do USO shows while he was in Tokyo scouting baseball teams in the early 1950s.

Miss Hicks — dressed in a tight brown sequined dress with hair dyed Marilyn Monroe's platinum blonde — undulated, blew kisses and sang "Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend."

The soldiers who did show up didn't seem to have to act very much. Dressed in uniforms like those worn during the Korean war, they cheered, waved, whistled and stomped their feet with satisfying vigor, said production coordinator Rande Smith.

SOLDIERS AT FT. CARSON, COLO., applaud actress Catherine Hicks portraying Marilyn Monroe during the filming of a network television special based on Norman Mailer's book "Marilyn." The special to be aired this fall is about Marilyn's USO shows in Korea. About 500 soldiers, dressed in uniforms to fit the era, got into the spirit of things, as did Miss Hicks.

7,000-Pound Cake Headed For Boston
LYNN, Mass. (AP) — What's red, white and blue on the outside, yellow on the inside, weighs 7,000 pounds and has to be carried by a compliment of National Guardsmen and sailors? A birthday cake for Boston, of course.

The behemoth pastry, completed Wednesday by Lynn baker Arthur Strasnick, celebrates the city's 350th birthday.

Strasnick's creation will be the centerpiece today when Boston kicks off its summer-long celebration with festivities at the city's Government Center.

But before Mayor Kevin White and other notables can cut the cake, a convoy of National Guardsmen and personnel from the Charlestown Navy Yard will have to transport it via a 2 1/2-ton Army truck and a commercial van from Lynn.

Strasnick, who has baked giant cakes for other occasions, started work on his latest creation April 20th. He estimates it took 250 hours to make.

How do you make a 3 1/2-ton cake? The recipe includes 2,000 pounds of flour, 1,000 pounds of sugar, 500 pounds of shortening, 3,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk.

Strasnick said he made the $3,500 cake for free, as a birthday present to the city. He will also be contributing a 16-foot cake later next month to commemorate the second visit of the Tall Ships.

Commissioner Runs Up $600 In Unpaid Tickets
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — City Traffic Commissioner Jerrold Levitin got caught with his meter expired, so to speak, when it was discovered that he owed $600 in unpaid parking tickets.

Police records showed that two cars owned by Levitin had accumulated 25 unpaid tickets in the last five months. The citations were issued for a wide range of violations, including parking in front of a fire hydrant, in a yellow zone, in a cross walk, in a truck zone and in a bus zone.

"I'm human like everybody else, and I'm so glad the story has come out," said Levitin, who rules on parking tickets given in the city. "Everybody assumes that me being the traffic commissioner, I can either fix my tickets or I don't have to pay them. It's not true."

Levitin, who is running for a judgeship, told a reporter from KRON-TV that his car had been borrowed by campaign workers and that "I didn't know this was happening."

"When you brought it to my attention, I paid the full amount, like most of the citizens of San Francisco do," he said.

"I'm human, and I also park illegally in a city that's very difficult to park (in)," said Levitin.

Fine old gentleman once was German death camp guard

By Tom Tiede

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (NEA) — For the short time he lived here, Feodor Fedorenko seemed like the rest of the people who've retired to the pinched apartments that line the walks of south Euclid Avenue. He was a quiet widower, played checkers, and received a small pension from the North.

People remember him as being Old World, somewhat courtly, a European immigrant who struggled with the English language and lost. A fine old gentleman, they say. He stayed to himself, did callisthenics on the beach, and was seen from time to time in the market shopping for meat and produce bargains.

Then one night he packed his belongings and abruptly left the neighborhood. The following day the newspapers explained why: Feodor Fedorenko was said to have once worked in a German concentration camp. He was accused of having tortured and murdered Jews at the Treblinka death compound in Poland.

Now the charges against Fedorenko, 73, have in part been verified. He has admitted having been a camp guard during World War II. He likewise admits having concealed his past when he immigrated to America. As a result, the United States is presently attempting to denaturalize and deport the old man.

Authorities are also after others in the nation who are suspected of war crimes. A Justice Department task force is investigating more than 365 cases, and 16 of them are in litigation. Nine of the litigants, including Fedorenko, are now American citizens. The rest live here in lesser categories.

Of the lot, Justice Department officials say Fedorenko is a comparatively small fish. He was not a Nazi during the war, nor even a German soldier. And yet the fine old gentleman from Euclid Avenue has become one of the most important legal principals in the 35-year history of this nation's search for war criminals.

The reason is that Fedorenko's denaturalization process has gone further than any other. It is now in the U.S. Supreme Court, and is expected to be heard this summer. The decision could have a milestone impact, positive or negative, on the effort to find and deport thugs of the Second World War.

Of course, Fedorenko does not consider himself a thug. He says he is a victim of circumstances that began, actually, in Russia. Fedorenko was born in the Ukraine, in 1907, dropped from school in the third grade, and was employed as a truck driver for the state until the early years of the war.

In 1941, Fedorenko and his truck were mobilized by the Russian army, and three weeks later he was captured by the Germans. Court records indicate he was a prisoner of war at first, and moved from camp to camp in Eastern Europe. But then, at Treblinka, he was given a gun and uniform and became a sentry.

Fedorenko says he didn't want to be a guard. He did it only under threat of death. In any event, Treblinka was among the most notorious of Nazi compounds. Camp survivors say guards there maintained an "eternal" fire in a lazarret pit. Jews were brought to the edge, shot and left to fall into the pyre.

When the war ended Fedorenko melded with the armies of displaced persons, and applied for U.S. immigration. He said he'd been born in Poland, rather than the Ukraine, and claimed he was a farmer and factory worker during the war. His visa was approved, and he came to the U.S. through Boston in 1949.

Once here, Fedorenko became a model citizen. He married (his wife later died), worked in a Connecticut foundry,

KELLYE RICHARDSON of Pampa signed a basketball letter of intent with Amarillo College Wednesday. The 5-10 senior averaged 22.6 points per game for the Lady Harvesters this season. (News Staff Photo)

High-scoring Kellye Richardson signed by Amarillo College

Kellye Richardson, Pampa's leading scorer the past two seasons, has signed a basketball letter of intent to play for the Amarillo College women's basketball team, according to Lady Badger coach Kelly Chadwick in a press conference Wednesday.

Richardson, who averaged 22.6 points, 10 rebounds and seven steals per game this season, was a third-team Class AAAA all-state selection. She was also a three-time District 3-AAAA all-league choice and a second-team Globe-News 1980 Panhandle-Plains Super Girls' Basketball Team pick.

"Kellye is quick, strong and she's not afraid to hit the boards," Chadwick said. "She drives with the ball better than any high school girl I've seen."

"I chose Amarillo College because it has a good academic program and a good basketball program," Richardson said. "Plus it's close to home and I want my parents to be able to see me play."

Richardson is the third Panhandle area cager signed by the Lady Badgers. Stratford's Lisa Albert and Amarillo High's Marcy Dale signed earlier.

Richardson had only one game below double figures this season, scoring over 20 points in 13 outings and over 30 points five times. Her high game was 36 points against Tascosa.

World champions dethroned by Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There will be no more miracles by the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics this year. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, with a little help from his friends, made sure of that.

Seattle fought from the brink of elimination in its Western Conference semifinal series with Milwaukee, coming from a 3-2 deficit to beat the Bucks and earn a shot at Los Angeles in the conference finals. The Sonics fell behind again, but the Lakers wouldn't let them off the hook.

With Abdul-Jabbar performing brilliantly, even for him, the Lakers finished strong, as has been their pattern recently, to end Seattle's season 111-105 Wednesday night and earn a berth in the NBA championship series against Eastern Conference titlist Philadelphia.

So the Sonics were eliminated, meaning that for the 11th straight year there won't be an NBA champion successfully defending its title. That hasn't happened since the Boston Celtics won in 1967-68 and again the following season.

There will be a couple of red-hot teams competing in the NBA finals, the Lakers, who are 8-2 in postseason play, and the 76ers, who are 10-2 in playoff action.

Los Angeles lost the opener of its best-of-seven series to Seattle 108-107 at the Forum, where the Lakers were 37-4 during the regular season, and will open the finals against the 76ers Sunday afternoon.

But after that setback, the Lakers blew the Sonics away in four straight. Seattle was bidding to become only the fourth team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit in a playoff series, but it wasn't to be.

Abdul-Jabbar had game-high totals of 38 points, 11 rebounds and seven blocked shots Wednesday night. He scored 12 points in the fourth quarter, including a skyhook with 3:13 to go that gave the Lakers a lead they would hold the rest of the way.

It looked for a while that there might be a Game Six. Seattle led 59-46 late in the second quarter, 62-54 at halftime and through most of the second half. But the Lakers scored 14 of the game's final 21 points to win going away.

Twenty-year-old rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, playing with the coolness of a 10-year veteran, had 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Lakers. Norm Nixon and Jamaal Wilkes added 19 and 15 points, respectively, for Los Angeles.

Dennis Johnson led the Sonics with 29 points, including a 40-foot three-point field goal as the third quarter ended which gave his team an 84-82 advantage heading into the final 12 minutes.

John Johnson and Gus Williams added 19 and 18 points, respectively, for Seattle.

Lopez talks about quitting

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton was sitting around talking about her final practice round for today's start of the fifth annual $100,000 Women's International Golf Tournament.

The talk turned to quitting golf.

"I definitely won't be playing 10 years from now," said the 23-year-old New Mexico native. "I want to win 30 tournaments and then retire."

"I don't want to wait until I'm too old to have children," she added. "There are other things in life besides golf."

The reason she set a 30-win goal, she said, was a rule that a golfer must have that many victories — one of them in a major tournament — to qualify for the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

Lopez-Melton has won 18 tournaments in less than three years on the LPGA tour, and at her current pace she could reach her goal in two years.

The record-setting superstar of women's golf, who won eight tournaments and $197,000 in 1979, said she expects stiff competition as she goes after her 19th career triumph at Moss Creek Plantation. She believes her strongest competition may come from recent first-time winners Donna White and Barbara Barrow.

"I know they're playing well, especially Donna. This is a good course for her," said Lopez-Melton. "She can hit shots to the green. She's very powerful."

White was runnerup to Lopez-Melton in the 1979 Women's International and gained her first tour victory just two weeks ago in the Lady Citrus in Florida. Barrow won her initial LPGA tournament last week in the Birmingham (Ala.) Classic.

Another possible challenger is veteran Donna Caponi Young, who always plays well on the 6,500-yard, par-72 Devil's Elbow South course. But Young, who finished third in the last two Internationals and has two victories already this year, is recovering from a pulled groin muscle.

"It feels pretty good now," Young said. "I couldn't make any stronger swings than a 7-iron. But I'm playing well."

Young also picked out White and Barrow as two of the golfers to be reckoned with. "You have to look at the ladies who have been shooting well lately," she said.

Two golfers who always do well at Moss Creek are former international champions Sally Little and Jan Stephenson. Little won the inaugural event in 1976 and finished ninth the next two years. Stephenson captured the tournament in 1978 and finished second in 1976 and fifth in 1977.

Tigers slip past Rangers

DETROIT (AP) — When Champ Summers first came to Detroit last year, Rusty Staub told him he would grow to like the Tigers' fans. Staub is with the Texas Rangers now, but his words still echo in Summers' ears.

Detroit fans not only like Summers, they absolutely love him — and the feeling, he says, is mutual.

Summers went 2-for-3 Wednesday in the Tigers' 5-4 10-inning victory over the Rangers, including a long homer in the first inning that landed in the third deck. He also dove headlong into the rightfield wall, attempting to catch a liner by John Ellis, and had to leave the game.

"I fell in love with the ball park and the fans," Summers said. "I got a very warm ovation before I ever picked up a bat here, with no promises or anything. I can't explain it. All I know is I'm very comfortable here."

"If they gave me $1 million tomorrow, I'd still be the same player I am today. I'd still dive into the wall for that ball."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson noted that Summers gets cheers, even when he strikes out, because he always gives the pitcher a battle.

"Champ is going to do these people a very good job for a long time if they continue to be good to him," the Detroit manager said.

Questions and answers

By Murray Olderman

Q. How do you pronounce the name of the new Masters champion? I can't even spell it. Why do people say he is the new Arnold Palmer? Isn't he much younger than Palmer was when he started winning tournaments? — H.R., Cincinnati.

The true pronunciation of Severiano Ballesteros is Seve (as in "heavy") Bah-yes-tay-rus. I gave him the shortened first name. Comparing him with Palmer is a matter of style. They both rip at the ball with every ounce of strength, ending up off balance, and have a physical elan which separates them from the rest of the plastic, grooved golf crowd. Palmer's breakthrough as a magnetic golfing force came in 1958, when he won his first Masters. He was 28, though he'd won his first tournament three years earlier. The Spaniard is just 23 and has been a winner on the European circuit since he was 19.

Q. What team won the NBA championship, the NFL championship and the World Series in 1954? — Jon Mishra, Coos Bay, Ore.

The Cleveland Browns topped pro football, the Minneapolis Lakers won the pro basketball title, and the New York baseball Giants defeated the Cleveland Indians in the World Series that featured Willie Mays' miraculous over-the-shoulder catch.

Q. What is the record for the most consecutive knockouts by a pro fighter? How many did Rocky Marciano have? — G.S., Knoxville, Tenn.

The Ring Record Book tells us that Lamar Clark, a mediocre heavyweight from Utah, and Billy Fox, a light heavy of the 1940s, share the pro record with 43 straight knockouts each. But Clark's mark was built up against setups, and Fox's skein is equally suspicious. He once "stopped" Jake LaMotta in one of the most putrid bouts in history. The feats that impress me are the 30 straight KO's by Ruben Olivares, a world bantamweight champ of a decade ago, and the 27 straight by multi-champ Henry Armstrong, though he was a swarmer more than a slugger, and by heavyweight clouter Earnie Shavers of current vintage. Although Marciano won 43 of his 49 bouts via knockouts (he is the only champ in history who never lost a pro bout), his longest string was the 16 straight KO's at the start of his career — including nine in the first round.

Q. Do you think that since the Denver Broncos got Matt Robinson as their quarterback, they will have a chance to get to the Super Bowl? — Greg Oetken, Crawford, Neb.

Let's say they have an improved chance. The Broncos were disappointed with Robinson initially in a spring workout because he arrived out of shape, but the more he threw, the better he looked. I still feel the team to beat in the American Conference West will be the San Diego Chargers.

Q. Tell me about the peculiar batting stance of Dan Ford of the California Angels. Has anybody else ever stood with his left foot so far to the right, turning him around to first base? — N.M., Palm Springs, Calif.

They call it a "closed" stance. Though Ford's is certainly exaggerated, I can recall Elston Howard, the former New York Yankee catcher, standing with his rear foot practically out of the batter's box while his left foot was on its way to first base. Ford, vital to the California attack, is coming off knee surgery. On the same team, for vivid contrast in batting form, catcher Brian Downing practically faces the pitcher in an "open" stance.

Q. Where does Dandy Don Meredith live and what does he do when he's not working those Monday night football games? — F.L., Aberdeen, Wash.

The droll-talking man from Mt. Vernon, Texas, who used to split time between the East and West Coasts, has located permanently in Los Angeles because that's where the movie and TV acting action is. When not filling out the ABC troika, he does commercials, some dramatic emoting, has been co-host of the Dinah Shore syndicated TV show and is mulling going into the production end of show business.

Q. I recently saw a list of former NFL players who also played major-league baseball at one time or another, among whom were Jim Thorpe, Ace Parker, Ernie Nevers, George Halas, Charley Berry, Tom Brown and Carroll Hardy. Doesn't Jack Banta, who pitched for the Brooklyn Dodgers in the late 1940s, fit in there somewhere? — Sam Meyer, Allentown, Pa.

No. Jack Banta out of Southern California was a running back and defensive back who started with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1941 and finished with the Los Angeles Rams in 1948. He is not the same Jack Banta who pitched for the Dodgers from 1947 through 1950, reaching a high of 10-6 in '49. Baseball Jack, born in Hutchinson, Kan., was a 6-2½ stringbean. Football Jack was a chunky 195-pounder.

Q. How many countries is baseball now played in? Are there any behind the Iron Curtain? — D.V., Santa Cruz, Calif.

According to ex-Stanford coach Dutch Fehring, former president of the World Amateur Baseball Association, the game is now played on an organized basis in 45 countries. That includes Communist Czechoslovakia, where there are three teams that use hand-me-down American equipment. If the summer Olympics are held as scheduled in Los Angeles in 1984, there is a good chance baseball will be on the agenda as an exhibition sport.

ZAMBONI ART
BOSTON (AP) — Have you ever driven a Zamboni? Probably not.

A Zamboni is an ice-making, ice-shaving machine on wheels and is found at ice rinks. It has a four-wheel-drive chassis and includes a 190-gallon icemaking wash-water tank and a 100-cubic-foot compacted snow tank.

"Anyone can drive a Zamboni," said Dave Edmonson, the superintendent of the Boston Garden, the home of the Boston Bruins. "But there's an art to making the ice and shaving the surface."

Gardening by Moon signs: May is busy month

By LOIS BOYNTON

The moon will be decreasing: 1-13, 30-31. The moon will be increasing: 14-29.

The fruitful signs are: 9-10 until 3:45 p.m. (Pisces); 17-18 (Cancer); 27-28 (Scorpio).

The semifructful signs are: 4-5 (Capricorn); 13-14 (Taurus); 24-26 (Libra); 31 (Capricorn).

The barren signs are: 1-3 (Sagittarius); 6-8 until 1:30 p.m. (Aquarius); 10th from 3:45 until 4:30 p.m. the 12th (Aries); 15-16 (Gemini); 19-20 (Leo); 21-23 (Virgo); 29-30 (Sagittarius).

Use the fruitful signs for all planting when possible. The semifructful signs are second choice.

Remember to plant seeds that produce their fruit above ground during the increasing moon. Plant seeds that produce their fruit below the ground during the decreasing moon.

May is a busy month. There are more chores to be done than there are hours in the day to do them. More crops are planted in May than any other month. It is also a time for gathering from your garden enough for a fresh salad of lettuce, radishes, onions, asparagus and spinach. Oh! the delicious taste of the first fresh vegetables gathered from your own garden.

Planting out from the greenhouse and windowsill growing can be done now with caution — there still could be a light frost so be prepared.

Plants from a mail-order house generally arrive dry so give them a good soaking in a pail of tepid water for several hours or overnight.

After the wonderful rains of last week, growing and sowing conditions are at their best just now and the garden is a place of joy with the lilacs blooming and all plant life greening up with new buds opening every day. The snowballs, peonies and irises are getting ready for their shows. It is a great time in the garden. So don't be so busy that you miss the joy.

Cut back poinsettias to two eyes above the ground and plunge them to the brim in a bright sunny spot in your flower bed.

Cut the spent blooms from your Easter lily, knock it out of the pot and plant in your flower bed where you want it to bloom. Plant as deep as it was in the pot. It will bloom for you next year later than Easter, sometime in June.

Sometimes a conical evergreen tree loses its leader, as one of ours did several years ago. For some unknown reason it just died back about eight inches.

We cut out the dead part, selected a branch from the top whorl of side branches, carefully bent it straight upright and tied it with a piece of old nylon hose to a strong stake we had driven close to the trunk, and tied it in two places to the trunk. The stake should be left for a full season or until the new leader can stand alone.

Winter-killed shrubs should be cut practically to ground level. This will encourage their new shoots to grow stronger and better.

Cut old wood out of crepe myrtle. It blooms on the new wood. Seeds benefit from overnight soaking in warm water before planting. Try placing the seed between moist paper towels and let them completely sprout before planting. This works great for seeds that are slow to germinate like okra, petunias and others. This will give a head start and insure germination of the seed.

Scatter poppy seeds in empty places for color. Rake in and pat down and cover with vermiculite to mark the spot.

If you like spinach, try New Zealand spinach, although not a true spinach, a great substitute. When warm weather arrives, it continues to produce new tender succulent leaves. It is an annual but persists on returning year after year, even after rototilling.

Check roses again with pruning shears in hand. Perhaps you did not prune them severely enough. It is a mistake to leave weak growth on a bush.

To make a beautiful and unusual flower bed in a sunny place, plant masses of petunias so thickly that weeds will not take over. Edge the bed with curly parsley. This will almost be trouble free when the planting is over. There will be little upkeep only cutting the dead heads off the petunias and clipping the parsley for the kitchen. Of course, it will need watering now and then.

Cut the spent blooms from jonquils, tulips and spring flowering bulbs, side dress with bone meal. Do not remove or restrict the foliage. It is manufacturing food for next year's blossoms and should be allowed to die back naturally. Plant annuals around them to take over while the foliage is maturing.

Peaches and pears should be thinned properly to insure large fruit and protect the tree. When the peaches are well formed, they should be thinned to six inches apart. Pears should be thinned to two per cluster, and the clusters should be about six inches apart.

A new lawn from seed will benefit from a light top-dressing of 50-50 mixture of sand and coarse peat each month. This will help to create a smooth level surface and encourage the growth of young grasses.

Established lawns should be mowed at least weekly between May and early September, sometimes twice weekly in good growing conditions.

If mowing is not carried out with sufficient frequency, the vigor of the grass may be impaired by the shock of cutting too much at a time.

In planting our tomatoes, we dig the holes a foot deep and put bone meal, cottonseed meal and a sprinkling of gypsum in the bottom of the hole. We set the tomato plants in the hole and around them place gallon cans which have the bottoms and tops removed.

We sucker the plants regularly. Suckers appear in the axils of the leaves. We think they should be removed.

When the tomatoes are about 18 inches high, we remove the cans and place tin bands around each plant. Some are three feet, some two feet in diameter, and all are four inches high. These are made at the Tin Shop. They hope preserve the water and make the job easier.

After the rings are in place, we put on the wire cages or cylinders. They are 18 inches in diameter and five feet tall. These are held in place by two 3-4 inch pipe, six feet long. They are woven down through the wire and driven into the ground. We have grown our own tomatoes by this method for several years. They produce well and the fruit is clean.

We always grow several varieties. Some of our favorites are glamour, porter and beefmaster.

Now that we spring ahead with daylight savings time, it will give us one more hour in the evening to work in our gardens.

Soldiers indifferent to Marilyn look alike

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — The soldiers at Fort Carson appeared indifferent, despite the presence of a "Oui" magazine cover girl, a squad of Denver models sent to recruit soldiers and the chance to see Marilyn Monroe on stage.

ABC-TV crews had hoped to get thousands of soldiers out on a chilly weekend for the filming of a scene for "Marilyn," a three-hour television movie adapted from Norman Mailer's book of the same name. Only 500 Army men showed up.

But never mind, said ABC-TV's "MM" look-a-like, Catherine Hicks — the film editors will make it look like a much bigger crowd. The scene shot at the Army base near Colorado Springs was part of a sequence revolving around the blonde screen siren's honeymoon with Joe DiMaggio. She decided to do USO shows while he was in Tokyo scouting baseball teams in the early 1950s.

Miss Hicks — dressed in a tight brown sequined dress with hair dyed Marilyn Monroe's platinum blonde — undulated, blew kisses and sang "Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend."

The soldiers who did show up didn't seem to have to act very much. Dressed in uniforms like those worn during the Korean war, they cheered, waved, whistled and stomped their feet with satisfying vigor, said production coordinator Rande Smith.

SOLDIERS AT FT. CARSON, COLO., applaud actress Catherine Hicks portraying Marilyn Monroe during the filming of a network television special based on Norman Mailer's book "Marilyn." The special to be aired this fall is about Marilyn's USO shows in Korea. About 500 soldiers, dressed in uniforms to fit the era, got into the spirit of things, as did Miss Hicks.

7,000-Pound Cake Headed For Boston
LYNN, Mass. (AP) — What's red, white and blue on the outside, yellow on the inside, weighs 7,000 pounds and has to be carried by a compliment of National Guardsmen and sailors? A birthday cake for Boston, of course.

The behemoth pastry, completed Wednesday by Lynn baker Arthur Strasnick, celebrates the city's 350th birthday.

Strasnick's creation will be the centerpiece today when Boston kicks off its summer-long celebration with festivities at the city's Government Center.

But before Mayor Kevin White and other notables can cut the cake, a convoy of National Guardsmen and personnel from the Charlestown Navy Yard will have to transport it via a 2 1/2-ton Army truck and a commercial van from Lynn.

Strasnick, who has baked giant cakes for other occasions, started work on his latest creation April 20th. He estimates it took 250 hours to make.

How do you make a 3 1/2-ton cake? The recipe includes 2,000 pounds of flour, 1,000 pounds of sugar, 500 pounds of shortening, 3,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk.

Strasnick said he made the $3,500 cake for free, as a birthday present to the city. He will also be contributing a 16-foot cake later next month to commemorate the second visit of the Tall Ships.

Commissioner Runs Up $600 In Unpaid Tickets
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — City Traffic Commissioner Jerrald Levitin got caught with his meter expired, so to speak, when it was discovered that he owed $600 in unpaid parking tickets.

Police records showed that two cars owned by Levitin had accumulated 25 unpaid tickets in the last five months. The citations were issued for a wide range of violations, including parking in front of a fire hydrant, in a yellow zone, in a cross walk, in a truck zone and in a bus zone.

"I'm human like everybody else, and I'm so glad the story has come out," said Levitin, who rules on parking tickets given in the city. "Everybody assumes that me being the traffic commissioner, I can either fix my tickets or I don't have to pay them. It's not true."

Levitin, who is running for a judgeship, told a reporter from KRON-TV that his car had been borrowed by campaign workers and that "I didn't know this was happening."

"When you brought it to my attention, I paid the full amount, like most of the citizens of San Francisco do," he said.

"I'm human, and I also park illegally in a city that's very difficult to park (in)," said Levitin.

Fine old gentleman once was German death camp guard

By Tom Tiede

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (NEA) — For the short time he lived here, Feodor Fedorenko seemed like the rest of the people who've retired to the pinched apartments that line the walks of south Euclid Avenue. He was a quiet widower, played checkers, and received a small pension from the North.

People remember him as being Old World, somewhat courtly, a European immigrant who struggled with the English language and lost. A fine old gentleman, they say. He stayed to himself, did calisthenics on the beach, and was seen from time to time in the market shopping for meat and produce bargains.

Then one night he packed his belongings and abruptly left the neighborhood. The following day the newspapers explained why: Feodor Fedorenko was said to have once worked in a German concentration camp. He was accused of having tortured and murdered Jews at the Treblinka death compound in Poland.

Now the charges against Fedorenko, 73, have in part been verified. He has admitted having been a camp guard during World War II. He likewise admits having concealed his past when he immigrated to America. As a result, the United States is presently attempting to denaturalize and deport the old man.

Authorities are also after others in the nation who are suspected of war crimes. A Justice Department task force is investigating more than 365 cases, and 16 of them are in litigation. Nine of the litigants, including Fedorenko, are now American citizens. The rest live here in lesser categories.

Of the lot, Justice Department officials say Fedorenko is a comparatively small fish. He was not a Nazi during the war, nor even a German soldier. And yet the fine old gentleman from Euclid Avenue has become one of the most important legal principals in the 35-year history of this nation's search for war criminals.

The reason is that Fedorenko's denaturalization process has gone further than any other. It is now in the U.S. Supreme Court, and is expected to be heard this summer. The decision could have a milestone impact, positive or negative, on the effort to find and deport thugs of the Second World War.

Of course, Fedorenko does not consider himself a thug. He says he is a victim of circumstances that began, actually, in Russia. Fedorenko was born in the Ukraine, in 1907, dropped from school in the third grade, and was employed as a truck driver for the state until the early years of the war.

In 1941, Fedorenko and his truck were mobilized by the Russian army, and three weeks later he was captured by the Germans. Court records indicate he was a prisoner of war at first, and moved from camp to camp in Eastern Europe. But then, at Treblinka, he was given a gun and uniform and became a sentry.

Fedorenko says he didn't want to be a guard. He did it only under threat of death. In any event, Treblinka was among the most notorious of Nazi compounds. Camp survivors say guards there maintained an "eternal" fire in a lazaret pit. Jews were brought to the edge, shot and left to fall into the pyre.

When the war ended Fedorenko melted with the armies of displaced persons, and applied for U.S. immigration. He said he'd been born in Poland, rather than the Ukraine, and claimed he was a farmer and factory worker during the war. His visa was approved, and he came to the U.S. through Boston in 1949.

Once here, Fedorenko became a model citizen. He married (his wife later died), worked in a Connecticut four-dry, and retired to Miami Beach in 1977. A year after he came to Euclid Avenue, he was summoned to district court for denaturalization. Until then his only brush with U.S. law had been a parking ticket.

Fedorenko admitted his past at the trial. He also said he lied on his citizenship application. Even so, the court ruled against denaturalization. The judge said the U.S. failed to show that it would have denied Fedorenko citizenship had his deception been previously known.

The government promptly appealed to the 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans, where the district decision was reversed. Fedorenko appealed the reversal to the Supreme Court, where the matter now stands. If the high court rules for Fedorenko, the U.S. search for war criminals could be dealt a severe blow.

Back on Euclid Avenue, Fedorenko's former neighbors have their fingers crossed. Many of them are Jews who survived the war, and they want Fedorenko and others like him thrown out of the country. They say anyone who cooperated with the Germans during the Jewish holocaust is not fit to live in America.

Few here expect justice to prevail, however. Neither do many federal attorneys. Even if the court rules against Fedorenko there will be more litigation, more appeals and more delays. Indeed, the consensus seems to be that the fine old gentleman from Euclid Avenue could very well die before he is deported.

'Supergrasses' are weapons for Scotland Yard

EDITOR'S NOTE — When does "squealing" — criminals giving evidence against other criminals — stop being helpful to law enforcement officers and begin to infringe on the justice and fairness of the legal system? Scotland Yard has found the practice effective, but many jurists find it unethical, at the least.

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — After two years of pulling off holdups that netted $4.6 million, "The General" figured he had it made.
His planning was meticulous. His five-man gang was tight and ruthless. Scotland Yard hadn't come close to nailing them.

But as the General, also known as ex-housepainter Charles Knight, planned his most ambitious caper, a commando-style raid on the ship QE2 to steal $8.05 million in foreign currency, he became a victim of the Yard's secret weapon — the "supergrass."
Detectives nabbed him after a high-speed chase through London's Cockney East End and rolled up his gang.
It was the latest in a long string of Yard successes against the British capital's increasingly organized and violent gangs, or "firms" as they're known here.
The mobsters were all fingered by "supergrasses."

big-time hoods wanted for major crimes who spill the beans on their erstwhile partners in return for lenient sentences.
"Supergrass" derives from the Cockney slang for informer.
Thirty of the last few years fingered more than 200 gangsters for 1,000 crimes, including murder, dating back two decades. Police estimate the loot from these crimes at more than $69 million.
Despite these triumphs, the use of informers on this scale has triggered growing unease in legal circles, partly because it violates the cherished British tradition of fair play.
But the cops say the supergrasses are indispensable to combat London's "heavy mobs."

The Daily Telegraph wrote recently: "London's gangland is reeling from the biggest betrayal in its notorious history."
The most sensational stoolie is George Bradshaw, a killer who confessed to 420 crimes and named 105 major underworld figures.
One detective says Bradshaw's testimony was "probably the single biggest break we've had in the war against organized crime in Britain."
The first supergrass was bank robber Bertie Smalls, who was arrested in December 1972, at a time when the Yard was the ropes from an alarming surge in bank and payroll holdups.

Smalls was charged with several heists. But he "did the Royals," underworld jargon for turning Crown's evidence, in return for immunity from prosecution.
His testimony put 27 of the most violent bank robbers in London behind bars for a total of 315 years. He was the only one to get total immunity. But he set the pattern.
The informers have become marked men. Several have been the targets of assassination attempts.
Police sources say one supergrass has a $92,000 price on his head. David Smith, a gunman and killer whose confessions jailed 90 of his cronies, has been saved twice from hit men by detectives.

Another, John Wesson, was given plastic surgery by authorities to change his appearance after he survived a shooting. He was also given a new identity and a job outside London.
Maurice "Mo" O'Mahoney, self-styled "King Squealer" whose evidence put 20 men behind bars, recently told The Observer newspaper:
"I haven't got peace of mind. How could I with the thought that some maniac might gun me down?"
O'Mahoney was jailed for five years for 102 crimes, including 13 armed robberies. He was paroled after only 23 months.

He spent most of that time in one of the six maximum security police stations around London where supergrasses are guarded in luxury cells with color TV, liquor and "conjugal visits" from wives and lovers.
But mounting judicial and public disquiet over the stoolie system could herald the end of the era of the supergrass.
Immunity from prosecution and plea-bargaining for short sentences are common in the United States, but they're generally frowned on in Britain. Immunity, particularly, has rarely been invoked in criminal cases.
The Home Office says it approves lenient sentences for supergrasses, even if they're guilty of major crimes, "to encourage others to give similar assistance."

Judge Edward Clark recently jailed two supergrasses — one put the finger on his brother — for longer sentences than they expected even though they informed on 62 men. He sternly warned informers there can be "no bargaining with justice."
Many lawyers believe the practice is fraught with legal pitfalls and miscarriages of justice in which supergrasses have settled old scores "fitting up," or framing, rivals by implicating them in crimes they did not commit.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

BISHOP SPEAKS AT CONFERENCE
CHICAGO (AP) — The United States should not allow international tensions to compromise its balance between defense and social spending, says Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco.
Quinn, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, on Tuesday told a convention the country must maintain its perspective while debating inflation and events in Afghanistan and Iran.
"Some increase in defense spending as in other areas may be justified," he said. "But surely not all increases are justified either in view of the international situation or in face of the drastic cuts in social services to the neediest of our citizens."

VANDALS HAVE CONSCIENCE
JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — In Jackson, some vandals apparently have a conscience.
Jackson Parks Director Douglas N. Rittenger said Tuesday that $1,000 in cash was left inside his screen door with a note saying it covered the destruction of two redwood signs at Ella Sharp Park on April 10.
Authorities said the hand-penciled note read, in part, "We are not rich and we didn't get this from our parents. This is hard-earned money. We are sincerely sorry. This isn't our typical idea of having a good time."

INVESTIGATION LAUNCHED
CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities have launched an investigation into an explosion and fire that destroyed a closed restaurant in the Loop, injuring two persons.
The fire and blast, which occurred at the height of the Tuesday morning rush hour, injured two passers-by and sent hundreds of pedestrians fleeing from heavy smoke. No one was inside the restaurant, firefighters said.
Chicago Police Bomb and Arson Squad officials said an investigation has begun into the incident, adding that the building's gas supply had been shut off Monday for non-payment of bills.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

AMOCO PAYS PENALTY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Amoco Oil Co. has agreed to pay a record $200,000 civil penalty to settle charges that it discriminated in rejecting credit card applications from women, black and Hispanics.
Amoco, which has about 6.1 million credit card holders, also agreed Tuesday to reconsider on request as many as 50,000 applications that the Federal Trade Commission said were rejected because of bias the last three years. Amoco denied any violations and said it agreed to the settlement to avoid lengthy litigation. The FTC charged Amoco with racial discrimination because of use of ZIP codes in deciding who gets credit. It also charged the company with bias against women because Amoco failed to consider alimony, child support or part-time work as sources of income.

PRICE STANDARD VIOLATION
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has angrily accused the Hyatt Hotel chain of violating voluntary price standards by raising its room rates more than 20 percent from 1978 to 1979.
The maximum increase allowed under the voluntary standards was 9.5 percent.
Officials for the chain, which operates 50 hotels across the country, said Tuesday its profit margins have "remained static during the period of the president's guidelines. However, Alfred Kahn, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said Hyatt has repeatedly refused to file basic information needed by the council to monitor compliance. "They leave us no choice but to tell the public they are not cooperating," Kahn said.

Mad shopper wants a consumer revolt

MAYFLOWER, Ark. (AP) — Arkansans have to pay higher prices for groceries than shoppers in all but two states. Norma Logan of Mayflower can't understand why the buyers don't revolt.
Earlier this month, she began a campaign to find out why Arkansas ranks third in the nation in high prices at the grocery store. She put out a call for shoppers to join her crusade. She's been disappointed in the response.
"I put my phone number in the paper, asking for people with suggestions to call."
"I've had exactly six calls, five of those from people who moved here from out-of-state. I'm just real mad about the whole thing."
Mrs. Logan, 56, is not usually an activist.
"I'm usually a follower, until I ran into this thing," she said.
It all started in December when Mrs. Logan read an article in a Little Rock newspaper. The story said that although Arkansas ranks 12th nationally in agricultural production, food prices are higher here than in any other state except Alaska and Hawaii.
It was something she had been quietly complaining about since she moved to Arkansas from Texas 20 years ago.
"I've been mad about it for a long time, but I didn't have anything to go on. That (the newspaper article) was proof for what I suspected all along."
"I'm not fighting the price of groceries as such. It's this third in the nation bit. It's just driving me crazy."
Although she has written to newspapers, congressmen, television talk show hosts and consumer advocates, "I've gotten no satisfactory answer about why this is."
She got back letters from the congressmen and a call from Gov. Bill Clinton, "but very poor response from the people."
Mrs. Logan knows shoppers in other states pay less for food.
"You can go to Breckenridge, Texas, and buy a can of salmon for $1.39. Come back here to Arkansas and it costs $2.05."
"They ship Arkansas chickens to California and sell them for 39 cents a pound. Cheaper than you can get them in Arkansas."
Mrs. Logan doesn't buy the argument that the shortage of food processors in Arkansas contributes to the high cost. And she doesn't think the cost of labor is to blame either. The state ranks 49th in per capita income.
"I think it's just that they don't think we know any better," she said.
Mrs. Logan isn't giving up. She's still hoping Mary Lou King in the governor's office, whom Gov. Clinton has assigned to look into the question, will come up with the answer.
If not, Mrs. Logan is ready for action.
"We're already organized in Mayflower."
She estimates there are 25 other households in town who have pledged their support.
"They're ready to picket or boycott any time I say so. I'm just waiting to hear from Gov. Clinton."
"I may not ever find out (why prices are higher in Arkansas), but at least I will know that I tried."
