Primaries slated Saturday

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Pampa citizens will have another opportunity Saturday to exercise their right to vote in the May 3 political primaries.

Two issues to be decided in the Republican primary are: 1) under a judge's supervision, allowing the state police to use electronic surveillance methods, such as wiretapping, in cases where suspected drug dealers are involved; and 2) having an initiative and referendum — which would give Texans a way to vote directly on issues and make law through elections rather than through the state legislature.

A "yes" vote on the first question means the voter favors wiretapping by the state police in cases where suspected drug dealers are involved. A "no" vote indicates the voter is against this action.

A "yes" for the initiative and referendum question means the voter favors the public voting directly on issues and making laws through elections, while a "no" means the voter is against this course of action.

The passage of either of these questions does not make the issues into law. If passed, the questions will be placed on the November ballots for final approval by voters.

Republican primary candidates begin with presidential hopefuls, Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

Ron Slover is running unopposed for the United States Representative of the 13th District for the GOP.

Three candidates are vying for the Republican position for Railroad Commissioner. They are: E. W. (Billy) Kidd, John Thomas Henderson and Henry C. (Hank) Grover.

H. J. (Doc) Blanchard is running for the unexpired term on the Railroad Commission, and Will Garwood is vying for the four-year unexpired term of Place 4 as Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

Supreme Court Associate Justice, Place 1, is being sought by Republican Jim Brady.

Bob Price is running unopposed for State Senator, 31st District. Paul Simmons is running unopposed for Republican County Chairman.

On the Democratic ticket, presidential candidates are President Jimmy Carter and Edward Kennedy.

Uncontested Democratic races include:

Jack Hightower — United States Representative for the 13th District; Robert M. Campbell — Associate Justice, Supreme Court, Place 3; C. L. Ray for the four-year unexpired term as Associate Justice, Supreme Court, Place 4; Foster Whaley — 66th District State Representative.

Gray County to pay $75 for fire calls by Mobeetie firemen

BY SHEILA M. ECCLES
Of The Pampa News

Gray County Commissioners quickly disposed of a short business agenda during regular court session Thursday morning, agreeing to pay the Mobeetie Fire Department $75 per call for fire calls in Gray County.

The amount is the same as that paid by Wheeler County for fire runs.

Mobeetie Fire Department representatives Gary May and Paul Hathaway told the court the Mobeetie Fire Department answers only a few runs each year.

"There are only a few runs each year. However, we would like to have some understanding and communication with Gray County for such services," May explained.

Gray County pays Lefors, McLean, Groom and Pampa Fire Departments per call for county fire protection.

In other business, commissioners decided to join the city of Pampa in participation in the CETA program. Both the city and the county were previously involved with the program but through different channels. It was decided by the court that a joint effort between the two entities could produce a more effective system.

"As the second largest city in the Panhandle, we have received almost no funding from the CETA program," Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy told the commissioners.

The Community Action Program will deliver the CETA services to both the city and the county.

The amount of $506 was approved for the purchase of new equipment for the County Health Department. A new hearing detection machine is needed by the health facility. After reviewing information concerning prices on new and used machines, commissioners agreed that a new machine was the best option.

Commissioners were asked to approve the number of ballots delivered to the county clerk's office for use in the absentee voting for the primary election as a matter of record. Commissioners approved the number of ballots as requested.

Author asks appeals court to exhume Oswald

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The British author who wants to prove the body buried in Lee Harvey Oswald's grave is that of a Russian assassin has taken his exhumation case to a civil appeals court here.

The three-judge panel that heard arguments Thursday will decide later whether Michael Eddowes, author of "The Oswald File," has the right to ask that the body be exhumed.

Eddowes claims a Soviet imposter, substituted for Oswald in 1959 during his 17-month defection to the Soviet Union, shot President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The writer, who cited discrepancies between Oswald's Marine physical and the autopsy on the assassin, asked a state district court to order the Tarrant County district attorney's office and the medical examiner's office to open the grave and perform another autopsy.

County officials refused to disturb the grave, saying they would exhume the body only under a court order.

The district court denied Eddowes' petition, so he appealed.

Thursday, assistant District Attorney Fred Schattman argued Eddowes has no legal right to demand exhumation.

"The question is whether these individuals have an interest in this body. The only interest these people have is that he's written a book," Schattman said.

Schattman referred to Eddowes as "some interloper, some stranger, some foreign national coming in... perhaps to help the sale of his book."

At issue is Eddowes' right to ask for the exhumation order and Tarrant County's responsibility for exhuming the body to prove or disprove the author's claims.

If the justices rule in Eddowes' favor, attorneys would still have to go back to court to seek the actual exhumation order.

Eddowes' attorney, John Collins of Irving, argued that evidence uncovered by the writer makes it the "mandatory duty" of Tarrant County to put the imposter question to rest.

"The Code of Criminal Procedure speaks as what the district attorney and the medical examiner have to do when there is a question of identity of a body," Collins said.

Confusing the issue is the fact that the code is not specific about which medical examiner's office has jurisdiction: the one presiding in the county where a person dies or the one presiding in the county where that person is buried.

The presidential assassin was killed two days later by Jack Ruby in the basement of the Dallas police department building. He was buried in neighboring Tarrant County.

Tehran report says two Iranians executed

By The Associated Press

Two persons responsible for "events" at violence-plagued Ahvaz University in Iran's Khuzestan Province were executed this morning, Tehran Radiosaid.

The radio did not say specifically what the events were, but last week five persons were killed at Ahvaz in fighting between Islamic fundamentalists and leftists opposed to a government decision to purge the university system of anti-Islamic ideology.

The radio reported nine deaths in clashes at three universities April 21, including three at Tehran University, but unofficial estimates said seven to 20 persons were killed and many others were injured. At that time Japan's Kyodo news service reported that its count at hospitals and other places showed at least 21 killed and more than 500 injured.

The oil-rich southwestern province of Khuzestan, which has a large population of Arabs, is one of the regions of Iran where ethnic minorities have been fighting to win autonomy from the central government. Iran is not an Arab country; the majority of its population is Persian.

The three Iranians holding about 16 hostages at the Iranian Embassy in London are members of this Arab minority, and demand the release of Arabs held prisoner in Iran.

Hunt brother denies attempt to corner the silver market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas billionaire William Herbert Hunt told a House subcommittee today that at no time did he "attempt to corner, squeeze or manipulate the silver market."

Hunt said he purchased massive amounts of the precious metal purely as an investment because of "rampant inflation" and a lack of confidence in the U.S. dollar.

He blamed the dramatic slide in silver prices and the subsequent collapse of the silver market to actions taken by the commodity exchanges themselves.

Hunt, testifying with his brother, Nelson Bunker Hunt, before a House Government Operations subcommittee, charged that silver prices began to fall in January from a $50 an ounce high only when the exchanges imposed new limits to silver trading.

The Chicago Commodities Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade required silver buyers to put up higher margins to purchase silver contracts and limited the amount of contracts parties could purchase.

William Hunt charged that this barred access to the silver market for many average investors and speculators. Moreover, the limits on contracts forced big traders to sell off silver, thus flooding the market.

"The natural result of these artificial factors was to drive the price of silver down," William Hunt said. "Mine was the distressful economic situation of being compelled to be a seller without a buyer," he told the subcommittee.

The Hunt brothers testified in the face of a possible contempt citation after failing to appear before the House panel on Tuesday, despite a subpoena.

The brothers also were to testify later today before a Senate Agriculture subcommittee investigating the silver market collapse, the Hunts' role in it and the reaction of federal agencies to the crisis.

Some insight into federal actions are contained in a report issued Thursday by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

According to the report, the Hunts worked for three months last year to buy up to 42 million ounces of silver through a veiled Bermuda-based company before the strategy was detected by the CFTC.

The commission acknowledged it was not aware until late September of the Hunt manipulations, which began in July.

Once the agency did detect these Hunt activities, "concern was heightened" that the brothers might imperil the silver market, commissioner Read P. Dunn said in an interview.

"It took us a while" to learn of the Hunts' silver moves because the firm, International Metals Investment Co. Ltd., was outside the United States, Dunn said.

The report also said that despite intensified surveillance of the silver market, the commission "did not predict the rapid price declines that occurred after March 25."

While a sizeable downward movement in price was detected, the collapse on March 26 and 27 — which threw financial markets into turmoil — "was not anticipated," the report said.

Silver prices shot up to $52.50 in January, only to slide to a low of $10.80 in late March.

BILLIONAIRE HUNT BROTHERS William Herbert, left, and Nelson Bunker are sworn in before a House Government Operations subcommittee in Washington today looking into fluctuations in the silver market. Earlier this week, they defied a subcommittee subpoenae which caused an unanimous vote to cite the Hunts for contempt.

Dallas principal resigns

DALLAS (AP) — An assistant high school principal who testified in the murder trial of his roommate that he and the roommate frequently solicited sex from male "hustlers" has resigned.

George Blair, an assistant principal at Hillcrest High School, said Thursday he was resigning "in the best interests" of the school.

In a prepared statement read to reporters, Blair said, "In what I feel will be the best interests of Hillcrest High School, its students, faculty and parents, I have, today, tendered my resignation as assistant principal, a job I have held there for the past two years."
 "Even though I have not been charged with any crime, I do realize the testimony I voluntarily gave in the murder trial of my friend, Lynn Edward Trout, has caused a great deal of discussion in both the community and the media," Blair's statement said.

O.L. Presley

Dear Gray County Precinct No. 1 Voter:

As a candidate for re-election as Gray County Commissioner Precinct No. 1, I am asking you for your vote on Saturday, May 3, 1980.

I have served the people of Precinct No. 1 as commissioner for the past 3 years and although the job has many problems, it is one which I enjoy because I am able to help those whom I have known and lived along side for so many years.

My wife, Opal, and I have lived in Lefors for 40 years where I owned and operated my own small business, dirt contracting, for 18 years. Having lived in a rural area these past years has prepared me not only for the ongoing county business in which I participate as commissioner.

Thank you for your past support and the opportunity to serve. I appreciate your vote on Saturday, May 3, but above all REMEMBER TO VOTE!

Sincerely,
O.L. Presley

Camel Corps combats smugglers

ROMANI, Egypt (AP) — When Egypt's 3rd army was encircled by the Israelis in the Sinai desert during the 1973 Middle East war, food and supplies were smuggled through enemy lines by a corps of camels and elite trackers.

Now the unique cavalry force, which sources estimate to number more than 2,500 men, is being used to combat a growing tide of smuggling that has sprung up among desert nomads following the opening of borders between Egypt and Israel.

"There was virtually no smuggling in Sinai before we had peace because the army maintained tight control," Col. Mahmoud Singer explained to a reporter on a tour of the Romani camel corps post in the Sinar near the Mediterranean, about 100 miles northeast of Cairo.

After Egypt and Israel signed a peace treaty in March 1979, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat returned the Sinai to civilian control and thousands of front-line troops were shifted to the volatile Libyan border area.

Some of the 120,000 bedouins living in the 23,000-square mile Sinai resumed an ancient nomad tradition: smuggling.

Televisions, tape recorders, fans, sheep and cotton sold at government regulated prices in Egypt began flowing north to Israel while tea, chocolate, beer and stolen cars came south to Egypt.

Hashish, a derivative of the marijuana plant, is the prime target of the camel corps in Sinai. Sixty smugglers and 20 tons of hash have been seized since the new era of peace began — part of 87 smuggling arrests made in 1979 and 64 the year before, Egyptian officials said. More precise figures were unavailable.

Brig. Sayyed Abdel Rahman, a rugged 6-footer who once led camel patrols himself, said most of the drugs were smuggled in at night by fishing boats and rubber dinghies.

"The bedouins meet the boats along the coast in jeeps or with camels and head into the desert," he said. Western experts say the hashish originates in Lebanon, where civil strife makes policing impossible. The sources said a 600-ton crop is expected this year with much of it earmarked for Egypt's 1 million users who smoke it or chew it for the intoxicating effect.

Speed boats, helicopters and army jeeps patrol the seacoast and inland routes, but in a country that is 96 percent desert there is little chance of the corps being phased out.

"A jeep costs me $4,000 and can wear out in a year in this terrain," said Abdel Rahman. "A camel costs $400 and is good for at least seven years. Besides, you don't have to worry about maintenance or spare parts."

Camels can move swiftly and silently in waist-deep sand that is impassable for even four-wheel drive vehicles. They also get better mileage, traveling up to 30 miles a day for three days without water, he said.

The more than 40 camels at Romani are from Sudan, bred for speed and durability and given a special three- to six-month training course. Abdel Rahman says the cream-colored male dromedaries known as Bisharis are used here because they are the "Cadillacs of camels — fast and comfortable." He scorns breeds such as the thick-legged Al Hadandawis, comparing them to breakdown-prone Russian cars.

Ironically, the corps is known in Arabic as the Hagannah, the same name adopted by Jewish underground fighters who founded the state of Israel. The corps is made up mostly of volunteers known for their keen tracking abilities. The riders are armed with Russian light machine guns and carry daggers in their belts, while each of the camels is branded with an identifying number.

Insurance Board recommends rate decreases Aug. 1

AUSTIN (AP) — State Insurance Board staff members today recommended a 6.5 percent average statewide decrease in rates for property insurance, effective Aug. 1.

Included in the rate package is an average reduction of 4.3 percent in the price of homeowners coverage, the most common coverage purchased by Texans.

Rate reductions recommended by board actuaries would reduce the premiums paid by Texans for property coverage by $67.1 million a year.

The board divides Texas into three areas for setting homeowners rates, and all but one would get a reduction.

The seacoast territory, which includes Houston, would get a 7 percent cut. The central territory, which includes Dallas, Fort Worth and San Antonio, would receive a 3.8 percent reduction. Only the north-northwest territory, which includes Amarillo, Lubbock and Midland-Odessa would have an increase and it would be only one percent.

The state recommended average reductions also in fire, tenant home owners, farm and ranch owners, and extended coverage rates.

The insurance industry, speaking through the Texas Insurance Advisory Association, proposed an average 3.5 percent reduction for all lines of property insurance, including a 0.8 percent cut in homeowners rates.

Texas International adds Omaha to routes

OMAHA (AP) — Texas International Airlines will extend its route to the midwest next month with non-stop service between Omaha and the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

At least one of the two daily round-trip flights expected to be operated initially also will link Omaha with Houston, Texas International's headquarters city.

The entry of Texas International will increase the number of major airlines serving Omaha to nine. Three commuter carriers also use Eppley Airfield.

Dallas-based Braniff International is the only carrier that presently serves the Omaha-Texas market. All of its southbound flights from Omaha stop at Kansas City, Mo. Texas International and Braniff were among five airlines that were given clearance by the Civil Aeronautics Board to fly non-stop between Eppley and Texas in a route case instituted at the request of the Omaha Airport Authority.

Other carriers in the case were American, Republic and Frontier.

Texas Education Agency upholds TABS testing

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas Education Agency officials say the scores on writing tests involving 500,000 state fifth and ninth-graders are accurate.

El Paso area school administrators questioned the scoring on the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests.

Raymon Bynum, deputy commissioner of the state education agency, said Thursday he is "perfectly satisfied with the results and I believe the scoring was valid."

Officials in the El Paso Independent School District said the test results showed few high achievement students.

Bynum said the complaints were unjustified.

"I think a lot of us are going to find that what we assess as an objective for students is not always what the districts feel the objective should be," said Bynum.

"I think we all should be concerned with writing skills and should have a high objective to reach," he added.

The skill tests are used by districts to determine individual program needs and changes. The problem with the test results, according to The El Paso Times, was first brought by some scorers working with the University of Iowa. The scorers reportedly contended grading rules were changed after some of the tests were scored, altering the validity of the results.

Westinghouse DataScore, in Iowa City, Iowa, was in charge of grading the examinations.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

A pointless attack on real estate

High rates of interest and skyrocketing property values have combined to bring the real estate industry to a virtual standstill in California. At this time of vulnerability the industry is being unjustly attacked for doing nothing more than setting requirements for the distribution of its own printed material. Leading the attack is a young San Francisco attorney named David Barry who, despite four consecutive defeats in court, the latest of which came earlier this week, has refused to give up on a fight that should have been forgotten long ago.

The Feb. 11 issue of New West contained an article about Barry's fight with the California real estate establishment. The article, and its follow-up piece in the April 7 issue of the magazine, made it appear that the conflict is a classic example of a struggle between a powerful special interest group and a public-minded citizen. Appearances can be deceiving.

If this is a battle between David and Goliath, David is the aggressor. Barry has initiated a fight with the industry over its own publishing practices and the prerequisites it places on recipients of its publications. The publication in question is the Multiple Listing Service. It is published by local boards of realtors and details all the houses that people have listed for sale with licensed brokers in the area. There is one major stipulation for anyone receiving a copy of the MLS. It is available only to real estate professionals and is not to be given to the general public.

David Barry notwithstanding, the real estate industry has a right to set any preconditions that it chooses. It's called freedom. If Barry does manage to get a judge to force local real estate boards to make an MLS available to everyone, undoubtedly the publication would soon cease. Why should anybody put work into a publication and an organization that is not profitable?

Barry contends that the confidential nature of the MLS puts the real estate industry in restraint of trade. The only people anyone is suggesting be restrained is the real estate industry itself. Anyone else is free to publish home listings. In a free and competitive market — which exists to some extent in the real estate business — customers will gravitate toward those alternatives. Importantly, people are free now to create those alternatives if they so choose, but they have no right to tell the realtors, or anyone else, how to run their business.

The public perception of Barry's struggle has been distorted because of the young lawyer's ability to manipulate news coverage. He suggests his case has something to do with protecting the legal right of individuals to undercut the standard 6 percent commission charged by most real estate brokers. Indeed some individuals who have offered to sell houses for less than the 6 percent commission have been threatened, but that has nothing to do with whether the industry should be forced to give up MLS confidentiality. The two issues are separate, and it is dishonest to link them. No one is denying anyone's legal right to undercut the standard commission.

As long as membership is not a legal prerequisite to offering one's services to the public, professional organizations are totally justified in setting conditions on those who desire to join their ranks. In this case, if the realtors desire to keep their private publication private, they are well within their rights. And as for David Barry, maybe it is time he moved on to a new crusade.

$70 to fly to Hawaii!

Through May 15, World Airways is offering a one-way fare to Honolulu, the New York area and the Washington, D. C. area for about $70. Needless to say, business is booming.

World is rather a rebellious young Turk of the airline industry and the established carriers have not taken kindly to its approach in the past. These days, however, the others are forced to respond to its inroads by competing for customers as best they can — so works the magic of deregulation.

Though fuel costs and other factors have forced the price of most flight tickets upward in recent months and have undermined the health of many of the airlines, the overall effect of the liberation this industry enjoyed in the late 1970s continues to be cause for great joy among consumers. The tremendous bargains passengers have enjoyed thanks to the crafty competitors of the trade is evidence once again that the best buyer-protection law a government can write is none at all. Nothing so endangers the gougers of the private sector as an unrestrained threat posed by prospective "unfair" challengers.

The recent history of the airline industry shows that even in a business where entry of new firms is not a snap — DC-10s and terminal space are not easy to come by — the lure to profit by serving the customer is still the best ticket to widespread betterment of society's lot. When was the last time a heavily regulated industry or a government agency accomplished anything comparable to flying you to Hawaii at a total cost of about $70?

Tobacco imperialism

By Don Graff
No advertising for tobacco products is permitted in the mass media. Posters and media spot announcements urge people, particularly young people, not to start smoking. And for those who do smoke but may wish to stop, there is advice on where to seek assistance.

No smoking is the rule on public transportation and increasingly in restaurants and other public places. It sounds familiar. And it is, as a matter of fact, very similar to the anti-smoking campaign, by private organizations with partial federal backing, that has been under way in the United States for more than a decade.

Except that the measures cited in this instance are being taken not in the United States but in the Soviet Union.

The effect of smoking on national health is one issue on which the superpowers do not find themselves at odds these days. Not only are they in agreement, but they have considerable company. Almost all of the developed countries are similarly discouraging the smoking habit among their populations. Even huge China, the world's leading tobacco consumer, is attempting to decrease usage.

The consequence is not, as might be expected, fewer smokers worldwide. For as their numbers in the developed countries peak and in some cases decline, they are multiplying in the developing world.

It is a development that has attracted the concerned attention of the World Health Organization, which has made it the subject of a special report on what it sees as "one of tomorrow's major health hazards" to the Third World.

The reasons are several, WHO finds. For one thing, although smoking is indigenous to many countries in the Western Hemisphere and goes back to the start of this century and earlier elsewhere, it was not until World War II that smoking spread throughout many poorer societies and began to be promoted as a source of commercial profit. With a less-developed mass market, there is more potential for growth than in the richer countries.

Also, authorities in many developing countries are encouraging local production. Tobacco is regarded as a profitable crop with the expertise for cultivation and processing readily available. There are hopes in many regimes not only of supplying local demand, and in the process expanding a source of tax revenues, but of developing export markets.

They are likely to be disappointed, according to WHO, because they are entering the market too late and with too little. It is already cornered by the big international tobacco companies. And in what WHO sees as the most disturbing development of all, these are turning their sales attentions to the developing world at the very time that consumption at home is dropping off.

Worst of all are the sales tactics being employed. Where cigarette packets in Western countries by local law must carry health warnings — Sweden uses 16 variations in wording so that the message isn't dulled by repetition — these are not generally required on exports.

More, manufacturers are switching to low-tar products at home. In what is being termed the "tar wars" in the $17 billion U.S. industry, 43 percent of all cigarettes sold are now in the low-tar (15 milligrams or less) category compared with 10 percent only five years ago. The trend is not as exportable as the product, however. Spot checks, according to WHO, indicate that cigarettes shipped to developing countries have tar contents several times that of the identical labels sold in the countries of origin.

And then there is advertising. Where in most developed countries associating smoking with sex appeal, athletic ability, social achievement and the like is now discouraged, in the Third World, as WHO notes, "anything goes." "Every emerging ambition has a cigarette to cater for it" and success, consumers are assured, is reached "on a magic carpet of cigarette smoke."

It might be explained, if not condoned, as economic imperialism on the march as usual, merely doing what comes naturally, were it not for the health aspect which is of serious enough concern in the exporting countries to prompt efforts to curb tobacco use at home. But it is a concern they are not exporting, and the developing countries themselves show no inclination to follow the example.

As a result, WHO observes pessimistically, "there seems to be nothing that can prevent the Third World becoming tomorrow's disaster area."

Britain's Iron Butterfly

by Paul Harvey

President Carter's proposed "balanced budget" would result more from increased taxes than from decreased spending.

And for him it is an election year convenience that the major tax increase is levied against the "oil giants."

Most voters do not realize that all corporate taxes eventually are paid by consumers.

How might President Carter choose to curtail inflation if he did not have to consider his own re-election?

He would be tougher on us all, to be sure. Britain's problems are similar to our own—soaring prices, rising unemployment, sagging industrial production.

But Britain's leader is not having to run for re-election. That makes a difference.

Maggie Thatcher has such a hefty majority in Parliament that she is virtually assured four more years in office. She does not have to yield to political pressures. She can prescribe strong medicine.

Make no mistake, Maggie Thatcher wears the britches in British politics. She has impressed everybody, including her opponents, with her stern, no-nonsense style.

The most recent public opinion polls in Britain show her Tories are trailing the Labor Party by 10 percent.

For lack of a lobby

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - Why must chronically ill children, malnourished elderly people and indigent members of our society be forced to bear the burden of reducing government expenditures and balancing the federal budget?

Because they are the people whose wrath politicians fear least — especially in an election year — since they lack any semblance of the "political clout" that allows others to influence the decision-making process in this capital.

No determined lobbyists make compelling presentations to leaders of the executive and legislative branches of government on behalf of disease-prone babies.

No political action committees make generous contributions to the campaign treasuries of presidential and congressional candidates in the name of the aged and infirm.

No sophisticated lawyers circulate among this city's power brokers to subtly but convincingly plead the cause of hard-working but impoverished Americans.

As a result, it's hardly surprising that the poor and powerless are the principal victims of the budget cuts now being proposed by both the White House and Congress.

Many domestic social programs whose funding is to be slashed, delayed or eliminated in the current round of fiscal belt-tightening deserve that fate because the evidence indicates they are inefficient, extravagant, unnecessary or otherwise failed experiments.

But when President Carter belatedly decided to offer a balanced budget for the 1981 fiscal year, he also proposed cuts in the funding of many useful programs that stand as a tribute to our society's generosity toward its less fortunate members.

One notable example involves the little known but highly successful Agriculture Department Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children, known as WIC.

"A recent study conducted by the Yale Medical School found dramatic reductions in infant mortality as a result of the WIC program," said Carter's original 1981 budget proposal. "Another study conducted at the Harvard University School of Public Health found equally striking results."

The president originally called for $970 million in federal spending on the WIC program, then cut the figure to $900 million in his revised budget. The Senate Budget Committee has slashed the figure again, to $850 million.

To save another $399 million in the coming fiscal year, the president is calling for a year-long delay in initiating the Child Health Assistance Program, designed to provide preventive medical care to those who need it most but can afford it least.

A series of cuts in the food stamp program — some justified but others unwarranted — would save another $433 million under Carter's revised budget.

"Carter eviscerated those programs with the fiscal equivalent of a butcher's knife," says Barbara Bode of the Washington-based Children's Foundation.

"But Congress, anxious to outdo him, is hacking away with a meat cleaver."

A Senate proposal, designed to cut another $1.2 billion from the food stamp budget, would eliminate alleged "duplication" by slashing aid to families whose children benefit from federal school lunch programs.

The average monthly bonus in purchasing power received by food stamp recipients amounts to $32.92 monthly. That's slightly more than a dollar a day or 36 cents per meal — but the Senate proposal would eliminate 51.6 cents for every school lunch served to children in a family receiving food stamps.

Where are the concomitant cuts in ill-advised subsidies to the maritime industry, inflationary price supports paid to dairy farmers and overpriced weapons system contracts doled out to the aerospace industry?

What about hospital cost containment, increased waterway user charges and repeal of the generous depletion allowance enjoyed by oil and gas producers?

Nobody either in the White House or on Capitol Hill has had the temerity to suggest that the well-organized special interests who benefit from those programs should make the same sacrifices now being demanded of the poor.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

But she is risking public disfavor on the gamble that she can doctor Britain through the present recession and leave her country permanently healthier after recovery.

Where past administrations, yielding to complaints, have sought to cool the fever by printing more money — Mrs. Thatcher will not do that.

She is going to stick with her policy of monetarism — however painful. The growth of the money supply will be held down even if economic activity gets choked off by record interest rates.

Welfare benefits will be cut at a time when more people than ever are in need of them — because the country cannot afford to keep them high.

More people will lose their jobs, but the Thatcher government will not step in with expensive schemes to create jobs.

Resilience on the part of a government leader is all very well until the leader's own party begins to desert. A small but growing number of Britain's Conservatives are growing restive. Some are beginning to criticize the leader they hailed so fervently 11 months ago.

But the whole modern world has wondered from time to time if any elected leader dared to retrace the economic facts of life — that the way to get more is to produce more.

If even one leader could re-sell that economic philosophy, others might be encouraged to try. The Iron Butterfly is going to try.

Procedure is complicated

Saturday vote only beginning process for Texas Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats and Republicans will be marking ballots Saturday on their presidential preference, but only the GOP votes will have a direct effect on the presidential race.

The Democratic process of choosing a presidential nominee does not begin until the 7:15 p.m. precinct conventions Saturday.

"Beauty contest" is the name commonly given the Democratic voter opinion poll.

At their 1978 convention, Texas Republicans decided that the vote in the May 3 presidential preference primary would be used in determining how many national convention delegates are committed to a candidate.

This will be a choice between Ronald Reagan, George Bush or "uncommitted."

On the other hand, Texas Democratic leaders decided last year to select their national convention delegates at the June 20-21 state convention in San Antonio.

However, last March 10 the State Democratic Executive Committee also decided to hold a non-binding voter opinion poll.

This referendum for President Jimmy Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy or "uncommitted" has no direct effect on the choice of the delegates to the August national Democratic convention in New York, where the party's presidential candidate will be picked.

After Saturday's voting, state Republican headquarters will be able to say exactly how many national delegates were allotted to Reagan or Bush.

If either of the Republican candidates gets 50 percent of the vote in one of the 24 congressional districts he gets all three delegates from that district. If the leading candidate has a plurality but less than 50 percent, he gets two delegates and the other gets one delegate, provided the trailing candidate got at least 20 percent of the vote in that district.

This will account for 72 of Texas 80 delegates to the July national convention in Detroit. The other eight delegates will be selected at the June state convention in Houston, using the May 3 vote as a guideline.

At the Democratic conventions in the 5,804 voting precincts, those who voted Democratic on Saturday will sign in, giving their preference for the presidential nominee. This sign-in procedure will be used in selecting delegates to the county conventions on May 10, which in turn selects the state convention delegates by a similar sign-in.

At each convention the delegates will be divided proportionately between Carter, Kennedy and "uncommitted," provided each one gets at least 15 percent support.

When the 3,900 delegates to the state Democratic convention arrive in San Antonio they will hold a caucus for each of the 31 state senatorial districts, and sign-in for presidential candidates.

This senatorial caucus sign-in, the last chance for anyone to change his mind, will be used in dividing the 152 Texas delegates to the New York convention.

GEREM SENNA, the son of Mrs. Carmen Senna, shows how much fun running can be — and is a likely candidate for Saturday's "fun run — walk — or jog" through city parks Saturday. The non-competitive, "no prize" event will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday in Coronado Park near the Boy Scout office. (Photo by Larry Cross)

Fun run - walk - or jog planned for Saturday

A "fun run — walk — or jog" will be conducted Saturday morning through Pampa city parks on the hike and bike trail.

Registration for the non-competitive event will be from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. near the starting line on the west end of Coronado Park, near the Adobe Council Boy Scout office.

Anyone who wants to participate may register and walk, run or jog the course.

Runners are asked to meet at 8 a.m. at the starting line to run as one group.

Senior citizens, families and children are invited. Water will be available at the registration desk, but no other refreshments will be furnished. Families may want to pack snacks or refreshments for family members.

No prizes or T-shirts will be awarded — and no ranking of winners will be tabulated.

The event is strictly for fun. If successful, Volksmarches are planned for the future.

MKT officials hold out for government funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad spokesman says MKT management has not changed its mind about accepting a loan from shippers to help it assume temporary operation of a 450-mile route of the bankrupt Rock Island Railroad.

"They still feel the financing should come through a government source," MKT attorney Art Albin said after presenting the shippers' loan offer to top railroad officials.

But Albin said the railroad had accepted the invitation of federal officials to attend a second meeting aimed at working out a plan for its temporary operation of the three-state route from Herrington, Kan., through Oklahoma to Dallas.

The meeting, scheduled for Tuesday in Dallas where the MKT is headquartered, will also include officials from the transportation departments of the three states.

"I really believe this second meeting will offer us a strong opportunity to put aside the obstacle to acquisition" by the MKT, said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The MKT says it needs $3 million in "start-up" money before it can consider resuming service on the line that stopped operating March 23 when federal subsidies expired. About 45 percent of the Rock Island's 7,000 miles of track are now being temporarily operated by 17 other railroads at their own financial risk.

Federal Railroad Administration and the Interstate Commerce

Commission officials told Albin at the April 23 meeting that no federal funds were available, and shippers along the route offered a $1.5 million loan to the MKT and agreed to pay higher freight rates to help the railroad repay that loan.

"Management has the facts in front of them for consideration and I'm sure they've been thinking about it," Albin said of the shippers' offer. "But there really is no practical change in the outlook."

He said the MKT remains opposed to risking the shippers' money on a route that may not be successful, especially when it deals with many of those shippers on other routes. He said one possibility that could be discussed at the upcoming meeting is whether the state governments provide the start-up cash.

Congressional sources, who asked not to be named, said the meeting was scheduled in Dallas in hopes that top decision-makers at the MKT would attend so some hard decisions could be made. Albin said he was not sure anyone but himself would be at the session.

"Everybody just wants them to decide," one source said. "They either have to do it or not do it."

Shippers, who have been forced to rely on more expensive trucks and cutback on shipments since trains stopped running, told federal officials in April that if the MKT turned down their financial offer, they would take it to another railroad.

Common Cause group questions sources of candidates funds

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two incumbents seeking election to the Texas Railroad Commission have received most of their campaign funds from sources that might have business before the regulatory agency, according to Common Cause.

The self-styled citizens lobby reported Thursday that 71 percent of the identifiable contributions to the four Democratic candidates in Saturday's primary came from sources with a potential conflicts of interests.

"Our study reveals serious problems in the way that Railroad Commission campaigns are financed," said Ruth Milburn, chairwoman of Common Cause of Texas. "Several candidates have received a large percentage of their contributions from sources with economic interests directly regulated by the Railroad Commission."

As of April 3, Commission Chairman John Poerner had received about $362,000. Common Cause said it tracked $224,018 — 61 percent — to sources with potential conflicts.

Challenger Buddy Temple of Diboll listed about $300,000 in contributions. Common Cause said $47,342 — 16 percent — came from sources with possible conflicts. Temple reported $103,600 in donations from his wealthy family.

Common Cause found Commissioner Jim Nugent received $405,000, including $284,288 — 70 percent — from donors with possible conflicts.

Rehab Center offered to state

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has been reminded that the Harris County Rehabilitation Center is still for sale if the state wants to use it for a prison.

State prison officials and the Legislature said the facility would not be appropriate for state use.

Nevertheless, Harris County Judge Jon Lindsey, in a letter to Clements, said the building, to be abandoned by the county this year, could make a valuable addition to the state prison system.

"I believe it makes sense for the state to buy this facility and most of the land and use it as a prison where skilled trades can be taught," Lindsey told

Clements. "Ex-inmates would certainly have an easier time finding employment in Harris County if they had training in a trade rather than training in the fields."

Tribal drums set pace for Mass in Kinshasa

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Sunday evening Mass at Kinshasa's Notre Dame cathedral is a toe-tapping blend of tribal drums, throbbing African rhythms and Roman Catholic ritual brought to the Congo by European colonizers a century ago.

But profession of a "colonial" faith by nearly half the people of a country in search of its African roots has been a cause of friction between church and state which Pope John Paul II hopes to ease with his visit to the former Belgian Congo this week.

Arriving Friday for the first stop on his six-nation African tour, the Polish-born pontiff will be welcomed by President Mobutu Sese Seko. A Catholic who was baptized Joseph Desire Mobutu, he is also Zaire's autocratic, self-styled guide, founder-president and author of an Africanization program which in the 1970s tried to curtail sharply the power of the church.

Programs this week on Tele Zaire, the government TV network, depicted the pope as the "defender of the poor and a friend of the weak." The deputy minister of information organizing the papal visit, Bolela Wa Boende, called it "not only an affair of the church or of the government but a national affair."

Though church-state relations have improved in recent years, many among Zaire's 11.7 million Catholics — about 45 percent of the population of 26.5 million — hope the papal visit will help to improve the lot of the church in the long term.

A Belgian Catholic missionary who has lived in Zaire for 25 years said he hopes the visit will also have some moral impact on the Zairean authorities.

In a country larger than the United States east of the Mississippi, the mass of the population lives barely above subsistence level while Mobutu is described as living in luxury. Allegations are frequently made of widespread official corruption.

"If the pope can manage to make the Zaireans more Christian, and live that Christianity," said the priest, who declined use of his name, "there will be change. The authorities will be there, too, and hear what the pope says."

It was in 1971 that Mobutu, 49, a former army colonel who seized power in 1965, ordered a return "to truly African authenticity of life so that Zaire may discover its true personality."

Teaching of religion was abolished in all schools and portraits of Mobutu replaced the crucifix in classrooms.

But the restrictions proved unpopular and unworkable, and over the past few years they were lifted. Church and state began a reconciliation. Cardinal Joseph Malula, who lived briefly in exile at the Vatican during the repression, will be with Mobutu at the airport to welcome John Paul II.

Methodists slate conference

The 1980 session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church is scheduled Tuesday through Friday, May 27 - May 29 on the McMurry College Campus in Abilene.

Bishop Alsie Carleton of Albuquerque will preside over the events of the seventy-first annual session.

Dr. Finis A. Crutchfield of Houston will be this year's conference preacher. He is the Bishop of the Southwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

All ministerial appointments in the Northwest Texas Conference for the coming year are announced during the Declaring and Accepting of Appointments Tuesday evening.

The theme of this year's conference is "Alive in Him - Celebrating Our Faith and Heritage."

Several special programs are scheduled around that theme, including a Religion and Race sponsored breakfast for ethnic minorities on Tuesday morning.

A luncheon for Women in Professional Ministry is another of the special events scheduled during the conference, and will be held the same day.

Tuesday evening, the attendees will see a dramatic presentation of the "200th Birthday of the Sunday School."

Other conference activities include a luncheon for retired ministers and spouses, a "Good News Fellowship Luncheon", and a minister's wives gathering.

There will be a joint musical presentation Wednesday evening of choral from the Abilene United Methodist Churches.

Conference officials expect approximately 600 to 800 area United Methodists to attend.

'Morgan's Passing' makes good reading

Anne Tyler's "Morgan's Passing" is one of those novels that it is almost impossible to put down.

It is the story of Morgan Gower, a warm-hearted, eccentric character whose life seems settled and secure. He is married to Bonny, an amiable and attractive woman, and is the father of seven normal girls. In addition, he is assured of financial stability by his wife's wealth and his own cozy job of managing a hardware store.

But even though Morgan is surrounded by comfort and peace, he is dissatisfied with his life. As Bonny notes: "There's something missing. I don't understand what he wants."

Morgan's dissatisfaction becomes apparent by the way he leaves his own role in life — that of a hardware-store manager and husband to Bonny — to become somebody else. He pretends to be a shoe repairman and a priest among others. And although Morgan's pretending seems innocent and clownish, his role-playing inevitably disrupts the lives of the main characters.

What happens, basically, is this: Morgan, while passing himself off as a doctor, meets a woman he falls in love with — Emily Meredith.

Eventually, Emily becomes pregnant by Morgan, and this causes Morgan to leave Bonny, and Emily to leave her husband, Leon. But Morgan and Emily's love affair is not necessarily a destructive act, as the reader may discover.

"Morgan's Passing" for all of its buffoonery and wit, is a novel with a rich texture. Anne Tyler has written a wonderfully engaging work, a joy to read.

SCULPTURE SHOW
WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — "Sculpture by Hugh Townley," an exhibition of the recent work of the contemporary artist, is on view at the Worcester Art Museum through June 1.

More than 60 works — including graphics — are being shown in Townley's first major one-man exhibition since 1972.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life, in thy presence is fulness of joy..."
PSALM 16:11

HERE IS THE PATH

"For Me to Live is Christ"

"And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in draught, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not."
Isaiah 58:11.

"For me to live is Christ" is to be living for a purpose — to serve God by drawing out my soul to the poor, lonely, hungry, and lost. "For me to live is Christ" is to lead men everywhere to Jesus Christ who is the fountain of the water of life. And He has promised that when I am in His service He will guide me, and satisfy me, and I shall be like the flowers in this picture, like a watered garden, sustained by Him.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

FOREIGN BRIEFS

MISSIONARIES FLEEING LIBERIA

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Most of the 25 American Methodist missionaries in Liberia and their families were fleeing abroad today because the country's Methodist bishop, ex-Vice President Bennie Warner, announced he had set up a government-in-exile in the neighboring Ivory Coast.

Warner, who was in the United States when Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe and a group of enlisted men overthrew and killed President William Tolbert, claimed in a broadcast he had all the military force he needed to oust the new government.

Doe's officials ridiculed Warner's claims, but Methodist leaders feared a backlash and ordered their missionaries out. The U.S. Embassy said it did not feel the 6,000 Americans in Liberia were in danger and did not plan an evacuation. The Lutheran, Baptist and Roman Catholic missionaries said they had no plans to leave.

THAI WITHDRAWS REQUEST

NONG KHAI, Thailand (AP) — Thai officials have returned a Laotian air force trainee who asked for asylum but later changed his mind, authorities said today.

The sources said the trainee and his flight instructor flew to Thailand in March in a fighter-bomber, but later the trainee said he was homesick and wanted to return.

He was turned over to Laotian officials on Wednesday, but the flight instructor and the plane remain in Thailand, officials said.

BIRTH CONTROL

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The best way to achieve birth control is "not to like someone," according to President Joao Figueiredo.

"If you really like somebody, in my opinion there's no human force that can prevent conception," the 62-year-old former army general told high school students during an informal chat this week on sex and morals.

"Sex is only meaningful when there is love and caring. Otherwise it's not sex. It's something else."

Figueiredo said he favors sex education in public schools as long as it is done "naturally" and not taught to children who are too young. He added that he is opposed to abortion.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

PEACE GROUP CONTRIBUTES MONEY

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The attorney for Barbara Timm paid for her trip to Iran last week to visit her hostage son with money contributed by a "peace group."

Mrs. Timm, mother of Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, had previously declined to explain how the trip was financed. But she said in a radio interview that the money came from her lawyer, Carl McAfee of Norton, Va., and a peace group with which he is associated.

McAfee was involved in securing the freedom of other hostages, including U.S. spy plane pilot Francis Gary Powers and the sailors of the USS Pueblo.

THREE RETURNED TO JAIL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 13 prisoners who escaped from the San Francisco jail over the weekend apparently used two pistols smuggled into the facility along with hand-made knives, investigators say.

Meanwhile, police Wednesday surrounded a Mission District residence and captured three more of the prisoners who escaped Sunday in the largest jailbreak in the city's history.

Authorities said five escapees were recaptured earlier, including two apprehended in a raid Monday. The five were ordered held on $1 million bond each pending a May 12 preliminary hearing on charges assault, robbery and escape.

CHEMICAL DUMP SUIT

NEW YORK (AP) — A $510 million lawsuit has been filed by a Staten Island family against the owners of a condemned New Jersey chemical dump where explosions and fires sent a cloud of acid smoke over the metropolitan New York area last week.

The suit, filed Wednesday, accuses the Chemical Control Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J., and six of its current or former officials with recklessness, carelessness and negligence.

The complaint filed by Patrick McCloskey and his wife and two children seeks $10 million in compensatory and $500 million in punitive damages.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

DC-10's unsafe

WASHINGTON (AP) — McDonnell-Douglas DC-10s, which were grounded for 37 days after last year's Chicago crash that killed 273 people, still are unsafe, says a retired American Airlines pilot.

Fred G. Johnson, who retired four months ago after 35 years as a pilot, said that the DC-10's hydraulic systems are interconnected through pumps so that if one system fails, it places a strain on the others, posing a safety hazard. It also is "not common" to have a failure of flight guidance systems, he said. Johnson spoke at a news conference called by Playboy Magazine to publicize its two-part report critical of aviation safety. McDonnell-Douglas spokesman Frank Tomlinson noted the Federal Aviation Administration study of the aircraft, which concluded that the pylon assembly, which holds an engine and was blamed for the Chicago crash, is safe unless damaged in maintenance.

VIETNAM WAR MEMORIAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, voting on the fifth anniversary of the withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam, has authorized a memorial to the Vietnam war.

The memorial is to be built in Washington's Potomac Park with private funds raised by the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Fund Inc. The measure passed by voice vote Wednesday and was sent to the House after all 100 members of the Senate had signed as sponsors. "If not unprecedented, this is an extremely rare occurrence, and I think it says something to the men and women who served in Vietnam," said Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md.

Samuel Johnson used Nathan Bailey's "Dictionary Britannicum" to write "A Dictionary of the English Language."

Moderate standard of living costs $20,000 per year

WASHINGTON (AP) — It now costs the average American family of four more than $20,000 a year just to maintain a moderate standard of living, the Bureau of Labor Statistics says.

Costs varied according to geographic areas and those living in urban areas paid more than those living in rural areas, the report said. The income required for an average standard of living in metropolitan areas was $20,935, compared to $18,651 in rural areas.

The Labor Department agency said Wednesday that a family comprised of a husband, non-working wife and two children needs $20,517 for an "intermediate" standard of living, based on last fall's prices. Officials conceded the figure would be higher by current cost levels.

The same size family maintaining a lower standard of living would need $12,585 a year, the report said. It would take $30,317 for what the government calls living at "higher levels."

The new figures compare with $18,622 needed for families on an average plane in the fall of 1978, $11,546 for a low budget family and $27,420 for those maintaining a higher standard.

LEARNING TO COPE is the emphasis of a program for children with asthma in Honolulu, Hawaii. Kathy Lum, a coordinator of the Kokua Na Keiki program, explains to a group of youngsters what is happening when they have a wheezing attack. The program helps the children manage and control asthma.

Conditioning helps asthmatic children

HONOLULU (AP) — They look like any other kids — frolicking in the pool, shouting to each other, splashing each other, and having a good time.

But what makes this group of some 20 kids a little bit different is that all suffer from asthma.

The kids — aged 5 through 14 — are enrolled in Kokua Na Keiki (Help the Children), a health-education and physical-conditioning program for asthmatic children and their parents.

"It's a fun thing for kids and not a heavy academic program," said Harlan Yuhara, state coordinator of the program, which is sponsored by the American Lung Association of Hawaii.

The children participate in weekly hour-long classes in which they learn about asthma and how to control and manage it.

The classes include breathing exercises, demonstrations of yoga and karate (both considered good exercises for asthmatics), and an explanation of what is happening when they have an asthma attack, how to handle it and how to prevent future attacks.

"There is emotional and physical interaction with other kids with asthma. It helps them understand they are not the only ones," said Yuhara.

"It helps their self-image," said Kathy Lum, the Oahu coordinator of the program. "Sometimes they feel they're weird, but they see other kids with asthma who look healthy, and they find out they can learn how to swim."

"It helps their self-esteem and self-confidence," she said.

"We also want to help the kids learn not to panic when they have an asthma attack," said Yuhara. "That helps control it."

Parents attend separate classes and are given similar instruction to that of their children. "It helps parents better cope with their children's problem and gives them more confidence," Yuhara said.

"It also helps educate parents before they get too much misinformation," added Miss Lum.

"Sometimes parents are overprotective, and children don't get the opportunity for exercise," she pointed out. "Many are afraid to let their children swim."

"In Kokua Na Keiki, the children get this opportunity, and it gives them a boost to join regular classes when they complete the program. These kids believe they cannot do some things," Miss Lum said.

"We give them the push. They are surprised at the confidence they gain once we break the ice. They trust us."

The coordinator explained they also tried to get the kids to vent their feelings. "Having asthma is difficult for young kids to cope with," she said. "We tell them it's OK to express their feelings."

"We also try to tell them it's OK for Mommy to get upset — she's human, too," said Yuhara.

The State Department of Health estimates that 15,000 of Hawaii's children under the age of 16 suffer from asthma.

"We're really not sure of the cause," said Yuhara. "It could be the salt air, pollen from the many flowers, molds, or a combination of things."

The Kokua Na Keiki program began in 1976 and is based on a physical-training program for asthmatics in New York. But officials of the Lung Association here combined the physical and educational aspects into an eight-week summer program for about 20 children at each of seven locations throughout the state.

Because of a long waiting list, a winter class was added this year. But because of cold and windy weather the class had to be held at a location with a heated pool.

"We are looking into the possibility of having winter classes with karate as the emphasized exercise in place of swimming," Miss Lum said.

Respite from woes sought in remote Caribbean

EDITOR'S NOTE — April in Paris ... or the South Sea islands ... or, for that matter, Timbuktu. Anywhere, to get away from inflationary immobility, transit troubles, professional perils. Sid Moody, reluctant landlubber at other times, followed the sun — and his son — to the West Indies to provide us with this vicarious visit to the back islands of the Caribbean.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CODRINGTON, BARBUDA, W.I. (AP) — Inflation had both hands in my back pocket: the hostages had been blindfolded since before the basketball season started; the furnace cost more to feed than a kid in college; smoke from its wood-stove substitute threatened brown lung. Madness.

Balm was sought in Gilead, a week of role reversal aboard charter captain son's sailboat in the back islands of the Caribbean. Surely, stability and tranquility would be found in the steadfast easterly trade winds that blow eternally — all day, all night, Mary Anne.

Anguilla, just north of the French-Dutch island of St. Martin's, is ideal goat country, flat, scrubby and rowdy. The tiny Customs shack is closed. Three years ago a captain rowed ashore.

"I'm here," he said.

The Customs man, a constable, awoke from a snooze and mumbled in heavy West Indian: "I see you are," then resumed his nap.

Today the island's chief minister, Emile Gumbs, pads down to the beach just beyond his house at Sandy Ground to inspect the indolent waterfront. He gazes at the tired island schooner, collapses with a sigh to the bottom of the harbor, then, clad in flip-flops and faded blue shorts, returns to his house to get out of the sun. Across the dusty road, a neighbor has laboriously advertised in a mixture of lower case and capital letters he will make you a skiff or casket with equal skill.

Around the point in the lee of a high, grottoed cliff, nothing is in sight but pelicans kamikazing into the blue-eyed waters after small fry and long-tailed bob'n birds flying acrobatics up towards the ice cream clouds.

Anguilla has come a long way since the '60s when it revolted to become independent of St. Kitts, whose overlord, Robert Bradshaw, attired in cocked hat and epaulettes, announced his decrees in the town square with a flourish of his sabre and then set off to tour his domain in a 1935 canary yellow Rolls Royce. Bradshaw is gone now.

Anguilla nipped like an island mongrel so provokingly at the heels of the British Lion that Her Majesty invaded with paratroopers and a cordon of London bobbies who waded ashore in woolen uniforms, their familiar hats just cresting the waves. During the occupation, roads were built, power lines laid, phones installed and perhaps the best ice house in the Caribbean erected.

Five miles or so offshore Goat Island is a cay deserted but for a mysterious airstrip. It has an A-plus crescent beach where the only footprints will be your own. Uncle Sam would like to make a deal for Goat Island: let the Navy blast it as a gunnery target and Washington will give Anguilla a desalination plant and a new generator. The matter pends.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps if less importance were placed on the size of a woman's breasts, women wouldn't have such a horror of mastectomies. As an American Cancer Society volunteer, for 10 years I have driven patients to and from hospitals for chemotherapy treatments, and believe me, I could write a book!

One woman I drove for over a year old me that she had deliberately put off seeing a doctor for three years because she was afraid that the lump she felt in her breast was malignant, and she might have to have her breast removed. (It was and she did, but, unfortunately, it was too late.)

I myself fell victim to cancer and had to have both breasts removed. The day after I came home from the hospital, I helped cook dinner for my family of five. Two days later I was driving in the car pool again, and within two weeks I was back into the full routine of housework, social activity and volunteer work.

The loss is minimal. Sign me, "Better 30 inches in the chest than 60 inches in the ground," or ...

ONE OF MANY

DEAR ONE: Thanks for a timely letter. I wonder how many women are aware that simple self breast-examination instructions are available at every local American Cancer Society office. They're free for the asking.

DEAR ABBY: My compliments on your new picture. But, Abby, I must ask, didn't you have your face lifted?
M.C. IN TUCSON

DEAR M.C.: No, but my photographer lifted a few lines.

DEAR ABBY: From the very first time my mother-in-law held my twins, there were hugs and kisses and tickles on the tummy, and she told them that they were the prettiest babies on earth and that Grandma loved them best of all.

Today, at 18 months, they drop everything and run to her shrieking with delight when she comes into the room. It bothers me because I am not as open as she is, and I'm afraid they will really believe that Grandma loves them best, so I asked her to stop it.

She said she understood and would stop it if I thought about it some more and still wanted her to stop. She says in time they will realize that everyone loves them in a different way and that I love them just as much as she does. What do you think?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Be honest. What bothers you is that Grandma is more demonstrative in her affection than you, and you're afraid your children will love her more than you, so you're asking her to cool it. You're being unfair. Grandma is right.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old guy. I saw this pretty girl, so I asked her for her phone number and she gave it to me.

I called her up and asked her if she wanted to go out with me, and she said, "I don't care." She told me where she lived so I picked her up.

I really fell for this girl, and she must have liked me, too,

Thirty miles to the southeast lies St. Barthelemy — St. Barts — where there are tiny quality hotels, cement roads the width of sidewalks, two dozen Americans, many secluded coves, few bathing suit tops and a sign warning girls against riding their mopeds bottomless. On the beach at Bay St. Jean, the proprietor of the wind surfboard establishment, presides topless from a beach chair — conducting her business with a straighter eye than her male customers. From under the palms a gaggle of topless French ladies dash oo-la-la-ing towards the water, then withdraw with the arrival of a three-minute sprinkle. Their bathing suits, such as they were, hardly got wet.

But ...
Downtown in Gustavia, a postcard port ringed by narrow streets and old stuccoed buildings with red roofs, M. Edouard Magras has bad news. A case of Barbados rum which cost $9 three years ago with a little haggling now costs $25, no haggling. Whatever the present, in the past smuggling made the Cost of Living Index on St. Barts an uncertain yardstick. Economics were topless as well as bottomless, you might say. No longer.

The boat is bashing through wind and wave now toward Antigua, 80 miles eastward. In the smoggy heavens, the stars stab the eye as brightly as an optometrist's flashlight. But the horizon is as black as ingratitude. Unseen beyond the comforting glow of the compass light are the upthrusting isles of the magical names — St. Christopher, Nevis, Redonda, Montserrat.

In the morning, St. John's, Antigua, the capital, is a movie set — honking horns, hordes of West Indians talking West Indian. Of all things, a Soviet cruise ship is in town. A native woman strides by balancing a large carton on her head. An elderly lady aches her way along the path through the unweeded cathedral burial ground mumbling to herself. A brand new Ford whose horn is in the bloom of youth elbows its way through the uncaring thorough. It is far the biggest car in town and is driven, of course, by a military officer.

Across the island, past where the sugar cane fields are being burned off, past where a goat guns his way through what once was a planter at the big crossroads service station, past and sometimes almost through the jaywalking donkeys, is Horatio Nelson's old dockyard at English Harbor. Where ships of the line once moored are yachts of the world, tied stern to old cannon buried muzzle-up in the parade ground. Nestled among them is an ancient ketch newly arrived after 34 days from Gibraltar. Her crew is typical of the pelagic world of the "yachties" — two Scandinavian girls along for the ride, picked up in Gib, a Maine handyman with time on his hands between winter and summer, a yacht designer polishing up on his celestial.

The skipper is a fiftyish American, Peter Throckmorton. He has lived most of his adult life at sea, on it or under it. He is wearing the Caribbean uniform of the yachtie: old jeans patched with sailing twine and cut off at the thighs; faded blue cotton shirt, tails knotted at the waist instead of buttoned, bottle of Heineken's (universally known as a Greenie) in his hand.

He is a marine archaeologist, surveying and exploring shipwrecks from the Aegean to the Falkland Islands, now interested in the Antigua area where reefs devour ships as ravenously as dogs eat biscuit chunks in TV commercials. Throckmorton himself, or his family, or his friends, have served, it seems, on most of the yachts tied to the old dock at one time or another. As skipper, as mate, as deck ape. The sun drops with tropical swiftness, and Throckmorton talks of Tahiti, Christmas Island, the mistral wind of the Mediterranean, a life at sea. A landsman's dream.

But ...
"I was crew once on a trading schooner in the South Pacific. The skipper had counted on his son succeeding him, but the boy disappointed him by going ashore. He offered me the job. For five years. I didn't do it. Never eat the last mango."

Barbuda has almost as many wrecks around her as days in the year. The island, 25 miles north of Antigua of which it is a part, is as flat as Kansas and dry as Nevada. Navigating there is by eyeball. Once it was a stud farm to breed slaves. Now 1,200 people live there, almost all of them in Codrington, a dusty village with public water taps at occasional corners. Goats and chickens and little boys playing cricket with driftwood bats roam freely. All get home by nightfall. There's no place else to go.

The beaches, deserted, arc for miles and miles. Behind them is scrub except for an overgrown old fort from distant times and a small luxury hotel. The donkeys and roaming cows don't mind you clambering over the fort. The hotel makes it quite apparent you are not welcome anchoring off its beach. It interferes with the water skiing.

One small plane a day flies into Barbuda from Antigua. Another takes the lobster meat that is the islanders' livelihood, other than the hotel, to St. Thomas.

Maybe, just maybe, there are no ifs or buts here. Codrington looks like it has lived in the dark before. It's nice to get a lift in the island's new yellow truck three miles down the pebbly, powdery dirt road to the beach. But you can always walk. Or ride a burro. The coconut plantation is ringed with barbed wire. But there is always lobster, or goat or beachcombing among the flotsam of the windward reefs.

But ...
Life would be poorer than it already is, absent the world. No, there's no getting away from it all, inflation, headlines, wars. The sailor eventually comes home from the sea. The chickens, and the kids, come home to roost in time. Even the wealthy water skiers down at the hotel will have a last swing around the reef at some point, then go home.

As John Donne almost said, no island is an island.

Cucumber is cool

In the heat, when you have a craving for something to eat, reach for a cucumber. Not only will this 15-calorie vegetable keep you thin, it will also keep you cool. The pulp temperature of a cucumber is 20 degrees cooler than the outside air. A good way to eat them: sprinkle chopped cucumber with lemon juice, salt and pepper.

because we went out a lot after that, but no matter what I asked her, she always said, "I don't care." She has never given me a yes or no!

We are engaged now, and nothing has changed. She still answers every question with, "I don't care."

What is the matter with a girl like that?
A GUY, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — Some time ago I read about an experiment at Harvard that showed that animals use the same amount of energy going from one point to another regardless of the speed at which they ran the distance. That is, an animal moving forward at a trot used the same amount of energy covering the same distance as the same animal traveling at full speed. I'd like to know if this relates to my activity. I've been a jogger for 15 years and run three miles a day. As a result of aortic stenosis and two episodes of cardiac insufficiency while jogging, I was asked by my physician to stop jogging. He suggested I replace jogging with brisk walking.

Since then I instituted a walking program for myself and try to walk approximately five miles per day at four miles per hour. I am interested in comparing the energy used to walk the five miles with the energy I was using to jog three miles a day. What will the aerobic effect of the five miles walking be? Will it be necessary for me to adjust my caloric intake to avoid gaining weight? Or are the conclusions drawn from the Harvard experiment applicable to human activity?

DEAR READER — Thank you for an interesting letter. I've tried to make the point to readers before that their body weight and the distance traveled, in most instances, are the two major considerations that affect how much energy is used. That remains true unless you run real fast and decrease the overall efficiency of the body.

The facts would indicate that you'll probably be using more energy walking five miles a day than you would jogging three miles a day at a moderate pace. Your walking program should be adequate to keep your caloric balance in control.

I want to emphasize that you should follow your doctor's advice and not jog. I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 13-4, A Perspective on Jogging Deaths. Some of the people who died from jogging are those who have exercised contrary to their physician's advice. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I realize you have probably been jogging a number of years because you enjoy it. Your heart already is working an extra amount because of the aortic stenosis even when you're standing still. The problem you have is to avoid increasing the work of your heart, so you don't want any aerobic effect. For that matter, you don't even need to walk briskly. I would favor walking at a very comfortable speed below the level that tires you or causes you to be breathless in any way.

Finally, I would suggest that you follow your doctor's advice carefully and have regular check ups with him in the event that your basic heart condition changes. If your aortic stenosis is severe or becomes more severe, he might feel that you should have cardiac surgery. When it is indicated, a diseased aortic valve can be replaced and a person can lead a relatively normal, fairly active life thereafter.

TWEEN 12 AND 20 By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: In one of your columns you said that a person who drinks booze and smokes pot is a loser. How can you make that statement? I'm 20 and have been getting high for the last five years.

I agree that the majority of boozers and potheads are losers but I happen not to be a loser. I am a college student and work as a messenger for a highly regarded law firm in Columbus.

Pot and alcohol haven't interfered with my goals in life. I have great drive and I plan to be a success. All this and I smoke about 15 joints a week. It used to be 30, but I couldn't find the time and had to cut down.

I used to think you were cool until now. You insulted me. — William, Columbus, Ohio

William: I didn't mean to insult you and you weren't the only person to write complaining about pot smokers and alcohol consumers being labeled losers. Maybe losers was the wrong word and a bit harsh.

Instead of losers I'll substitute the word misguided. Those who need drugs or alcohol to forget reality or to escape life's problems come down from "highs" only to face reality and problems once again. It's a cycle and the user can never win.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 12-year-old girl who has a big problem. A girl and I were as close as any two friends can be. About three months ago, she got a horse and she started hanging around another girl who also has a horse.

At school I would ask her if she wanted to do something after school but she would always say that she was busy. I found out that she was at the other girl's house.

I don't know what has happened to our friendship. Can you help? — Freda, Wheeling, W. Va.

Freda: Your girlfriend places more value in a material thing (the horse) than in your friendship. You could say that she is a "fair-weather friend."

Don't chase after your "girlfriend."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

May 3, 1980
 Your financial picture looks good this coming year, as long as you don't become involved in situations that are risky speculations. Keep your luck healthy by continuing on a prudent course.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Feeling sorry for yourself and thinking of the world as you see it is a free ride will get you exactly no place. In fact, you could end up getting angry at pals who really care. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A loved one might be deeply hurt because you could support an outsider over him or her. Chances are, this other person is really using you.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Disappointment is likely today when you knock yourself out to help someone who shows little or no gratitude. Don't be taken in by a sob story.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Affections don't become you. In fact, they'll turn others off. Make every attempt to be who and what you are in all social situations.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Allow for the frailties in others and you can lessen a disappointment over someone who you have always held in high esteem. Everyone is human.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're apt to be a harsher critic of yourself today than others will be. Try to see the same good points they see in you instead of only the negative ones.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Treating a serious matter far too lightly today could lose you a friend. Don't play games, especially where something of value is at stake.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have a tendency to procrastinate today, and you could lose out completely in attaining a goal you've been chasing. Now is not the time to make excuses.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Doing things for others with strings attached will not get you the response you might hope for. Instead, unkind things may be said.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Boasting or putting on airs could backfire today when the group you're with sticks with the tab. You'll have only yourself to blame.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unfortunately, victories never come from sheer wishful thinking. Unless you have the ability or the cooperation necessary, don't go after the big fish.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Better take those rose-colored glasses off. Wishful thinking will create big problems. View things realistically if you hope to be productive.

Harris receives new contract

HOUSTON (AP) — Del Harris, a rookie head coach who led the Houston Rockets into the National Basketball Association playoffs, received a three-year contract today.

The announcement came two days after George Maloof, who purchased the Rockets last year, gave Ray Patterson a new three-year contract as general manager and said Patterson would be in complete charge of all operations.

Maloof said today Harris overcame 100 player games lost because of injuries or illness while integrating four new players into the team's system and saw the Rockets finish with the third best record in their history.

Finishing the regular season at 41-41, the Rockets defeated San Antonio in a best-of-three series and then lost four straight to the Boston Celtics.

"With this past season under his belt and his 20 previous years of coaching experience, there is no doubt as to Del's qualifications to continue directing the progress of the team," Maloof said.

Harris said team orientation and aggressiveness will continue to be the key factors for the Rockets.

"I know we can put together a team that can get the job done," he said.

Dolphins end season at Lubbock meet

Eleven youngsters on the Pampa Dolphins swim team won first place ribbons or certificates last weekend at the Lubbock YWCA swimming meet.

Winners were Tim Darling, Reid Steger, Zach Pope, Brad Pope, Scott Pope, Susan Darling, Russ Rabel, Kathy Wheeler, Shonda Corcoran, Robbie Hill, Richie Hill, and Raymond Hill.

"Everybody improved their times," said Pampa coach Mike Eckhart. "I was very elated with their times and the progress they've shown."

Teams from Lubbock, San Angelo, Big Spring, Amarillo and Odessa Aquatic Clubs, and Hobbs, New Mexico were entered in the meet.

A banquet, honoring the Dolphins, will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday night at Celanese.

"This banquet will close out the short course season for the Dolphins," Eckhart said. "They've done an outstanding job and they've got a lot to be proud of."

Placings and times for the Dolphins in the Lubbock meet are listed below:

Jennings inks with Tech

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — Bubba Jennings, one of the most highly sought prep basketball players in New Mexico history, has decided to attend Texas Tech on a basketball scholarship, his father said today.

The 5-foot-11 Clovis High School star selected Tech from a field of nine schools because of its proximity to Clovis and because some of his friends attend the Lubbock school.

When Clovis won the state tournament two years ago, Jennings teamed with guard Nelson Franse, who accepted a scholarship to attend Tech.

Jennings scored 111 points in three games during the 1980 state tournament in March to lead the Wildcats to a second-place finish.

Teams needed for Miami tournament

A girls' and a boys' basketball team is needed to fill the bracket for the Miami Invitational Basketball Tournament Dec. 4-6, according to Bill Daugherty, superintendent of schools.

Coaches interested in entering should contact Daugherty at Miami High School.

Baseball fans ripped off

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The good folks in Salt Lake City have baseball fever. They want to catch more of it.

Baseball won't let them. Last year, independent TV station KSTU in Salt Lake City made arrangements to show selected major league games of Seattle, Oakland and San Diego.

Advertisers climbed aboard and fans clamored for it.

It just so happens that when major league baseball went west, it didn't stop in Salt Lake. If you're a fan, you can't go to a major league park. You can watch games on Saturdays (NBC) and sporadically on Monday nights (ABC). But if that didn't satisfy your devotion to the national pastime, KSTU was going to be the answer.

Until the commissioner's office pulled the plug, KSTU isn't the only non-major league city to be deprived of more televised baseball. Most recently it's happened in Miami and Tucson.

What gives? "We have to protect our agreements with the networks that says the clubs' regional TV markets cannot be expanded," said Tom Villante, baseball's director of marketing and broadcasting. "The networks are very concerned about dilution. The game of the week has a unique quality and the networks have paid for this uniqueness."

"So if the station is not within a major league market's (ballpark) drawing area, we have to turn them down."

Unfair and discriminatory, says Bill Pepin, manager of KSTU, a two-year-old station that wanted to bring new programming into the area.

"I'm not competing with the network games. I wouldn't have done any games on Saturday or Monday nights," said Pepin. "And the networks don't really care about us anyway. They've told us it's not their concern, that they don't want to be the scapegoats for baseball."

Privately, several network sources say that additional baseball exposure in outlying markets builds interest in their national games.

"Villante tells us he's got to protect his network deals, that he can't have further proliferation of games," said Pepin. "But then he turns around and negotiates a cable deal with UA-Columbia to show baseball in non-major league markets on Thursday nights."

"Won't that hurt the networks?"

"He's discriminating against us. Villante won't let KSTU show Oakland A's games."

KENTUCKY DERBY nominee Genuine Risk, with exercise rider Luis Ortiz, moves along in a workout in the fog at Churchill Downs in Louisville. Genuine Risk is the first filly in the Derby in 21 years, but trainer LeRoy Jolley says she is a strong horse and has a good chance in the race.

Kentucky Derby labeled mystery

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — This is a "Mystery Derby" and that's the way it ought to be, says Eddie Arcaro, looking toward Saturday's running of the 106th Kentucky Derby.

"There is always an unknown quantity about the Derby," added the 64-year-old riding legend, rated the greatest stakes jockey of all time. "It's the first big test of the season. The East meets West. Most of these horses are barely 3 years old. To most fans it may appear to be a 'so what' Derby. It's true the performances against time haven't been as good as those of Seattle Slew, Affirmed and Spectacular Bid, the great colts of the last three years."

"But, who knows? There could be a superhorse in this lineup which just needs a little more experience. I look for an exciting race."

Arcaro, who rode in 21 Derbies and won five in a brilliant career that spanned three decades, again this year will be the pressbox expert for ABC-TV.

A sort of like the second horse, Rockhill Native, said the saddlesmith, speaking by telephone from Miami. "No special reason. I just love it."

Plugged Nikkie, winner of the Florida Derby and Wood Memorial, is the early favorite at 9-5 with Rockhill Native, who won the Blue Grass Stakes last week, second choice at 2-1.

Arcaro admitted that he was unable to generate much enthusiasm for Genuine Risk, the first filly to challenge the males since 1959.

In the 105 previous runnings of the Kentucky Derby only one filly ever won it. That was Regret in 1915. That, insists Eddie, should tell us something.

"Fillies don't run well against males this time of year," he said. "Spring is in the air. When they get around males, they fall in love and get kind of frisky and unmanageable."

Arcaro said he found this a delicate situation to explain on the air 10 days ago when Genuine Risk ran a close third in the Wood at Aqueduct.

"I asked Chuck Howard (ABC producer) how I might say it," he said. "I was afraid I would get bleeped. Around the track, we call it horsing around. So I simply said fillies are inclined to fall in love in the spring. I wasn't bleeped."

He was aboard Nellie Flag, a filly and strong race favorite, in the 61st Derby in 1935 — his debut in the Churchill Downs classic — and finished fourth behind the winner, Omaha.

"She was a good filly," he explained, "and she looked good early in the week. But when the race started, she came up dull. Normally she shot out of the starting gate like a bullet. But she dropped back at the start and never got into the race. Her heart was somewhere else."

Pigeon racing results

V.C. Moore had the winning pigeon in the Top of Texas Racing Pigeon Club race held last week.

Moore's pigeon made the 400-mile trek from Organ, New Mexico to Pampa traveling at 643.382 yards per minute.

The 71 pigeons entered flew in cloudy weather. Other winners were Marion Waldrop, second, 604.273; Margaret McPhillips third, 590.757; Margie Moore, fourth, 587.141, and fifth, 587.024; Jim Cantrell, sixth, 583.202, and seventh, 554.288.

Lakers, 76ers have similarities

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pair of redhot teams will collide in the National Basketball Association championship series, but that's not all the Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers have in common.

The 76ers enter Sunday afternoon's first game of the best-of-seven series with 10 wins in 12 playoff games, while the Lakers are 8-2 in postseason competition. So each team reached the finals with ease.

Both were considered championship contenders a year ago but watched on the sidelines as Seattle whipped Washington for the NBA title.

The 76ers have a superstar — forward Julius Erving. So do the Lakers — center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Both players have been at their best in the playoffs and will provide defensive headaches for their foes in the upcoming series.

The supporting casts aren't bad either, in fact they've had a lot to do with their teams' achievements thus far.

Newcomers in the backcourt have contributed immeasurably to the success stories of both — Philadelphia's Lionel Hollins, a five-year veteran who came to the 76ers in a trade with Portland last winter, and Los Angeles' Ervin "Magic" Johnson, a superb rookie.

The above-mentioned pair are teamed with youngsters who came into the NBA without much fanfare — the 76ers' Maurice Cheeks, a second-year performer from West Texas State, and the Lakers' Norm Nixon, a third-year man out of Duquesne.

There's bulk up front to go with the finesse of Erving and Abdul-Jabbar. On the Philadelphia side, Darryl Dawkins and Caldwell Jones provide the muscle, while on the Los Angeles side, Johnson, when he plays forward, Jim Chones and reserves Mark Landsberger and Spencer Haywood aren't easy to push around.

On each side, there's also an outstanding sixth man — the 76ers' Bobby Jones and the Lakers' Mike Cooper. The existing Philadelphia and Los Angeles franchises have each won one NBA championship — the 76ers in 1966-67, the Lakers in 1971-72.

The teams split a pair of regular-season games and logged almost identical records over the year, with the Lakers earning the homecourt advantage in the series by virtue of their 60-22 record to the 76ers' 59-23 mark.

The first two games will be played at the Forum where the Lakers are 42-5 in 1979-80. Game Two is slated next Wednesday night. Games Three and Four will be played at the Spectrum in Philadelphia on Saturday and Sunday, May 10-11.

Jamaal Wilkes, a 20-point a game scorer in addition to a standout defensive player, will have the unenviable task of guarding Erving.

"I'll be guarding Dr. J and he's a great player," said Wilkes after the Lakers' 111-105 series-clinching victory over Seattle Wednesday night.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham summed up what his team must do in a brief statement:

"We have to stop their transition game and keep them from running against us. And, of course, there's Abdul-Jabbar. We have to neutralize the big guy or it's all over."

National league baseball results

Matt "The Scatt" Alexander will do in a pinch — especially if the occasion demands a pinch-runner. Like Thursday against the Montreal Expos.

Willie Stargell had singled leading off the 10th inning for Pittsburgh and the Pirates' speed specialist was brought in to run for the lumbering first baseman.

Jitterbugging off first, Alexander distracted everyone, including Bill Robinson at the plate, who admitted: "I'm not used to having a guy in front of me dancing around like that."

But it made a difference. Relief pitcher Woodie Fryman, afraid of throwing a changeup in that situation, came in with a fastball. Robinson connected for a double and Alexander came spinning home with the winning run in a 2-1 Pirate victory.

It was a duplicate of the situation Tuesday night when Alexander scored the winning run from first in the 10th on a Bill Madlock double.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Houston Astros whipped the Cincinnati Reds 9-3, the Philadelphia Phillies stopped the New York Mets 2-1 and the San Diego Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 4-3. The victory went to Kent Tekulve, who worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the 10th.

Reds 9, Astros 3
Joe Morgan drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Houston ganged up on Mike LaCoss for five unearned runs to defeat Cincinnati behind Joe Niekro's six-hitter.

It was the second straight game in which Morgan homered against his former teammates and the victory completed a Houston-sweep of a three-game series in Riverfront Stadium for the first time since September 1972.

The Astros now have won six straight games and lead the Reds and the Los Angeles Dodgers by 1½ games in the National League West.

Phillies 2, Mets 1
Luis Aguayo hit his first major league homer to account for both Philadelphia runs as the Phillies survived a major league record-equaling strikeout performance by Pete Falcone to beat New York.

Falcone struck out the first six hitters he faced at the start of the game to become only the second pitcher in modern National League history to accomplish that feat. The other was Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles Dodgers, in 1973. Three American Leaguers have done it. Falcone permitted only three hits in seven innings and finished with eight strikeouts. Two of the hits came in the fifth when Larry Bowa singled ahead of Aguayo's home run.

Padres 4, Braves 3
Willie Montanez stroked a ninth-inning single to score Gene Tenace from second and give San Diego its victory over Atlanta. Tenace had reached base on an error by third baseman Manuel Ruiz and Dave Winfield moved him to second with a single off loser Rick Camp.

Reliever Larry Bradford then surrendered Montanez' single, ending the game. Bob Shirley picked up the victory in relief for San Diego.

The loss was the eighth straight for the Braves on the road this season.

Gene Shue leaving Clippers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gene Shue, head coach of the two-year-old San Diego Clippers, is leaving the National Basketball Association club "to explore other opportunities," according to club president Irv Levin.

In a joint announcement issued Thursday, Shue and Levin said the departure was by mutual agreement.

Shue's two-year contract, with a one-year option, expires July 1, but Levin said he gave Shue permission "effective immediately" to commence negotiating for future opportunities.

The move set off speculation that Shue may be the leading candidate to coach the new Dallas expansion franchise.

"Gene indicated he wanted to explore other opportunities which he felt were more professionally and financially rewarding, and I agreed to honor his decision," said Levin.

Shue, 47, was considered a miracle worker in his first year at San Diego. Taking over a first-year club, he guided the Clippers to a 43-39 record, with his team narrowly missing the playoffs. This past season, stripped of two starters through the Bill Walton compensation case, the Clippers were 35-47, with Walton sitting out most of the season with various injuries.

Shue, a five-time NBA All-Star, previously coached the Baltimore Bullets to four division titles in seven years and guided the Philadelphia 76ers to another before his dismissal early in the 1977 season. At San Diego, he became only the fifth NBA coach to reach the 500-victory plateau.

In January, Shue was hit with the stiffest fine for a coach in NBA history for striking an official. NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien levied a $3,500 fine and suspended Shue for a week without pay.

Shue, who compiled a 526-520 record in 14 NBA seasons, agreed to stay during the transition of the coaching change, Levin said.

"We plan to interview a number of qualified candidates for the heading coaching position," said Levin.

"I have set no timetable for the hiring, other than to promise it will be far enough in advance of the college draft to permit the new head coach to be involved in those important decisions."

Candidates for the vacant position could include Shue's assistant coach Bobby Weiss, a 12-year NBA veteran who previously pursued the Chicago Bulls' head coaching job two years ago.

The Clippers finished fifth in the six-team Pacific Division, 25 games behind champion Los Angeles.

Red Sox edge Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Don Zimmer heaved a sigh of relief and said, "Thank God we don't have to play them again for a while," after his Boston Red Sox edged the Chicago White Sox 4-3 Thursday night in a game which ended in a heavy fog. "They hit, they pitch and they steal bases. What else is there?" asked Zimmer, who also was pleased that his Red Sox came up with good pitching in the series. It marked the first series Chicago has lost this season after winning its first five. In the only other American League games played Thursday, Cleveland edged Toronto 2-1 and California nipped Seattle 2-1. "We hadn't been pitching well, but we got some good pitching in this series," said Zimmer. "The kid (Bruce Hurst) pitched good and Dick Drago was outstanding. We needed it all because they also got good pitching. "In that ninth inning, I kept pulling for ground balls because I could just see someone losing the ball in that fog with all of those runners on base," said Zimmer. With the bases loaded and one run in, Zimmer got his wish. Reliever Tom Burgmeier came in and got Marv Foley to bounce to shortstop Rick Burleson, who stepped on second for a forced play to end the suspenseful ninth inning. Steve Trout, 1-2, finished brilliantly for the White Sox and didn't allow a hit in the last five innings. But he was the victim of the long ball in the early going. Despite the loss, the White Sox remained in first place in the American League West while the Red Sox moved into a second-place tie in the East, one-half game behind Toronto. Indians 2, Blue Jays 1 Mike Hargrove drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning to lead Cleveland over Toronto. The Indians loaded the bases and chased Blue Jay starter Dave Lemanczyk in the eighth with a double by Rick Manning and walks to Ron Pruitt and Jorge Orta. With nobody out, reliever Joey McLaughlin got pinch-hitter Andres Mora to pop out, but Hargrove followed with a shot down the right field line past a diving John Mayberry at first that drove in the two runs. Angels 2, Mariners 1 Pinch-runner Bert Campaneris scored on a fielder's choice in the seventh inning to lift California over Seattle in a game which was protested by Mariner Manager Darrell Johnson.

Mavericks start personnel search

DALLAS (AP) — Now that the National Basketball Association's 23rd team has a name, the Dallas Mavericks, and a color, blue and green, the next step is to hire a coach and find some players. Spokesmen for the $12 million expansion franchise say it will be at least a month before the Mavericks go after a coach either from the college ranks or an established NBA team. Player personnel director Rick Sund is on the road contacting free agents and judging talent before the NBA's June draft. Ralph Drollinger, a 7-foot center for the Athletics in Action, and teammate Marvin Delph, are two players being sought by the Mavericks. "We don't feel the pressure of getting a coach right now," said Norm Sonju, one of the prime movers in getting the franchise in Dallas. "We are preparing for the draft. We won't announce a coach for some 30 days." He added "We'd love to have Ralph, but just about every team is after him. I do know this—there wouldn't be a better city in the NBA for him to play. He wants to go to seminary and play. Dallas would be ideal for him." There was no hint who the Mavs would like for a coach. Sonju has said that Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton has ruled himself out. Dallas will be in the Western Conference's Midwest Division which includes two other Texas teams, San Antonio and Houston. With the signatures of NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, Douglas J. Carter, Sonju and Douglas Adkins, vice presidents of Dallas Basketball Limited, the Mavericks brought professional basketball back to Dallas Wednesday in a formal press conference. "The NBA has long recognized Dallas as one of the top sports areas in America," said O'Brien. "We in the NBA are happy to enter into an association with the Carter family and his associates." The Mavs will begin play this October in the brand new $25 million Reunion Arena which seats some 19,000 for basketball. "In NBA history there has never been a similar situation—a new arena and a new franchise. Last year I went to New York disbelieving the arena would be ready. To my utter amazement, I was wrong. It's a remarkable site, perfect in every respect," said O'Brien. Carter, owner of Home Interior and Gifts, Inc., has 100-per cent control of the team but will sell shares for some $600,000. "I never played basketball but my wife did," said Carter. "It was my wife and kids who got me interested. It's been a long run to get a franchise." Carter gave the NBA a $100,000 check two years ago to show his sincerity. The Maverick logo shows a cocked white cowboy hat hanging on a block blue M which is super imposed over a green basketball. The white hat symbolizes the good guys of America's west. The capital M in italic type suggests movement and the team colors are supposed to reflect the two prevailing colors of the North Texas countryside. Asked if he was aware that the University of Texas at Arlington nickname was Mavericks, Sonju admitted he didn't know that's what the nearby college was called until after a commitment had been made on a name for the NBA team. A Maverick is a motherless calf.

Rain plagues Houston Open

HOUSTON (AP) — As he often does, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Berman held a brief, routine new conference to brief local writers on "the state of the Tour." "The state of the Tour," the Commissioner said in solemn tones and without a trace of a smile, "is wet." He paused for a moment. "What is this, 13 out of 16 weeks or something like that?" He made his remarks during another of a series of weather-delays that have plagued the tour all season. The latest, caused by a violent thunderstorm, was almost three hours in duration. It came Thursday in the first round of the $350,000 Houston Open. Play eventually was resumed in late afternoon but was halted again by darkness with 57 men in the field of 156 stranded on the rain-soaked course. They marked their positions and were due to resume first round play at 7 a.m. (CDT) Friday, with the second round to follow immediately. The morning half of the starters played in what John Mahaffey called "almost ideal conditions," mild temperatures, light breezes and overcast skies. And they took advantage of it to post some extremely low scores. Well over half of that group, 43 of 78, broke par. Gil Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist who has averaged about $160,000 a season in golf earnings for the past three years, set the pace with a 6-under-par 65. Mahaffey, a hometown boy, ripped the back nine with a 5-under-par 30 and topped a group of four at 66. Also at that figure were Dave Edwards, Skip Dunaway and Jay Haas. The group at 67 included Dave Edwards' older brother Danny, Greg Powers, Sammy Racheis, Rex Caldwell, Mexican Victor Regalado, Canadian Jim Nelford and Australian Open champion Jack Newton. Arnold Palmer matched par 71 on the 6,918-yard Woodlands Country Club course before the storms halted play. Tom Watson is not competing. Morgan's lead was not secure, however. Curtis Strange and veteran Lou Graham, a former U.S. Open champ and three-time winner last year, each had it 5-under par when they were held up by darkness. Graham had completed 14 holes, Strange 15. Bill Rogers was 4 under par with three holes to play. Ron Streck 4 under with four to play. Morgan, a consistent money-winner who has won four titles in the last three years, played his front side one under par and then had a much better ball-striking effort than he anticipated over the back. "I'd been hitting the ball pretty good, but I took a couple of weeks off and my game deteriorated," he said. But he reached a par-5 in two and 2-putted for birdie, held a 20-footer and hit short-iron inside of five feet for three other birdies. He saved par, and sole control of the lead, with a 6-footer on his 18th hole. Mahaffey, a former University of Houston player and a now a resident, benefited from a remarkable putting effort over the last nine.

Staub out of action

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Ranger first baseman Rusty Staub broke a finger in a baseball game with Detroit and will be out of action for at least 10 days, team officials said. Staub jammed the little finger and the ring finger of his left hand Wednesday as he was diving back to second base. An X-ray showed a chip fracture on the ring finger. Doctors put the finger in a splint, and club President Eddie Robinson said Thursday that Staub, who is also a designated hitter and has a batting average of .412, would be idle for at least 10 days.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY
ARLINGTON, TEX. (AP) — Basketball coaches are usually annoyed when a foul is called against one of their players, but in a recent game Coach Bob LeGrand of Texas-Arlington was doubly disturbed. It was over an infraction called against his top scorer, Melvin Polk. It seems that Polk lost a couple of teeth after running into another player's elbow. Coach LeGrand's protest brought on this reply from the referee who made the foul call: "Polk's teeth didn't have any business making contact with the other man's elbow."
