Tide of Cuban refugees swells past 25,000

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—The tide of Cuban refugees reaching U.S. shores swelled past 25,000 today and officials struggled to keep control in overcrowded processing centers strained by the 18-day "Freedom Flotilla."

Federal officials reported nearly 1,000 new arrivals had docked at Key West by 9 a.m., adding to the 4,051 who came ashore on Wednesday in a fourth straight record day of refugee arrivals.

The new refugees pushed the total to 25,941.

More than half have arrived this week, prompting Wednesday's announcement that another processing center will be opened at Fort Chaffee Army Reserve Base near Fort Smith, Ark.

The continually increasing pace defeated efforts to keep order. Federal coordinator Tom Casey said the Freedom Flotilla was the toughest relief effort he's handled since the Buffalo, N.Y. blizzard of 1977.

In Buffalo, "I went through, saw what was going on and did my thing," he said. "Here, day-to-day it changes. It seems Castro is juggling us. He is playing games with us, is trying to embarrass us. One day no one can come, the next day there is a flood."

In Washington meanwhile, the Carter administration announced new standards for seizing private boats involved in taking refugees from Cuba.

Justice Department spokesman Robert M. Smith said boats now will be seized only if they are found to meet one of three criteria: they are unsafe, there are large numbers of Cubans aboard, or their owners are engaged in profiteering.

There have been reports of some boat owners charging Cubans for the trip to the United States.

The FBI, meanwhile, said it has identified and is watching a number of Cuban spies among the refugees. FBI agent Arthur F. Nehrbass would not say how many suspected spies had been picked out, but The Miami Herald quoted sources who said there were at least 20.

Senate wants Muskie's voice on policy to go unchallenged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Edmund S. Muskie's Senate colleagues are signaling President Carter that they want Muskie's to be the unchallenged voice of American foreign policy once he is sworn in tonight as secretary of state.

Before voting 94-2 to confirm Muskie's nomination Wednesday, many senators said U.S. foreign policy has been severely damaged by the open, highly publicized conflict between former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser.

Muskie said he will approach his new duties positively, asserting his office's once traditional primacy in foreign affairs rather than challenging Brzezinski to battle.

Muskie told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that as he enters his new office his first and most important priority is to establish the fact that "the secretary of state is the principal adviser to the president on foreign policy issues."

"He must have the primary responsibility for recommending our foreign policy course and seeing that the president's decisions are implemented," he said. "President Carter has made clear he expects to play this role and I intend to do so."

Muskie told reporters later that his determination to be the principal foreign policy architect "has not been challenged" by Brzezinski or anyone else on the White House staff and that there "seems to be agreement" on his role.

At the confirmation hearings, senators made clear that they believe the Vance-Brzezinski conflict damaged American interests and that a Muskie-Brzezinski struggle would equally destructive.

During the first three years of the Carter administration, Brzezinski often took positions that were perceived as "hard line," especially regarding the Soviet Union. Vance was deemed to be more moderate and conciliatory and resigned after his opposition to the attempt to rescue the hostages in Iran by military force was overruled.

Nazi takes 43 percent of North Carolina vote

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Harold Covington lost the Republican primary for North Carolina attorney general but says his 43 percent showing demonstrates that "There are 56,000 people in this state who are either Nazis or fools."

Covington, 26, is the leader of the National Socialist Party of America, one of several groups known generically as the American Nazi Party. And he did, in fact, win 56,006 votes in losing the GOP nomination to former federal prosecutor Keith Snyder of Asheville in Tuesday's primary.

Covington, who waged the barest of campaigns, came a lot closer than Republican state leaders, who had disavowed his candidacy, had hoped.

"I don't say it's an embarrassment," said state party chairman Jack Lee. "It's a freak."

"Good grief," said Snyder, the victor, when told of Covington's total. "I'm appalled. I really am. I would hope that it's because I just am unknown."

Covington became well-known in the state by publicly espousing his party's white-supremacy line and vocally defending 16 Nazis and Ku Klux Klansmen who face a variety of charges stemming from the shooting deaths of five persons at an anti-Klan rally in Greensboro last fall.

"There are many closet Nazis in the Republican Party. Most conservatives are closet Nazis. If you scratch a conservative you'll find a Nazi underneath, just as if you scratch a liberal you'll find a communist," Covington said.

Covington carried 45 of the state's 100 counties. Most were rural, but he won in some large areas too.

Covington lost Forsyth County, which includes Winston-Salem, by a mere 75 votes out of more than 5,000 cast.

"I don't think there are that many people in the party who would share his philosophy," Snyder said. "I would be awfully disappointed if there were."

Lee said most of the Covington vote came from Republicans who don't know who he is and simply cast their vote because his name came first or had a familiar ring.

Covington disputed that argument.

"I don't think ignorance played that much of a role," he said. "Either way, the Republicans don't come out of this looking too hot. There are 56,000 people in this state who are either Nazis or fools."

Snyder will face incumbent Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten in the fall election.

Identification of bodies underway

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP)—Officials at this Delaware air base aren't saying when a special civilian Defense Department team might finish identifying the remains of American commandos killed in an aborted rescue attempt in Iran.

"We're not speculating on how long the identifications will take or when the bodies will leave. We're not even speculating on any number of bodies," Sgt. Ed Haney, a base spokesman, said Wednesday.

The Carter administration has said eight American servicemen lost their lives when a helicopter and transport plane collided in the Iranian desert two weeks ago as the mission to rescue the hostages held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was aborted.

The Iranians say nine or 10 bodies were recovered at the scene.

Nine coffins were returned to the United States on Tuesday. Sources said mortuary officials were investigating whether the ninth coffin contained the remains of an Iranian civilian.

But Maj. Sam Floca, a Defense Department spokesman, said "The Iranians returned nine caskets. We have nine caskets and our mission is to identify our eight servicemen."

American flags were to remain at half staff through sunset Friday, by presidential order, in mourning for the commandos. A national memorial service will be held in Washington on Friday.

The bodies were taken to this Delaware air base because its mortuary, built to handle Vietnam war casualties, is among the largest and best equipped in the world. It can process 100 bodies a day.

Israeli commandos strike Palestinian guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Israeli commandos striking from the sea ambushed two bands of Palestinian guerrillas deep in southern Lebanon early today, killing four guerrillas, the Palestine Liberation Organization reported. Six others were reported wounded.

New Palestinian disturbances were reported, meanwhile, in the Israeli-occupied Arab sector of Jerusalem. Israeli Radio said Palestinian students from two schools stoned Israeli cars, and about 200 youths started marching toward the Jewish quarter of the walled old city of Jerusalem but were dispersed.

Lebanese provincial authorities said the Israelis moved up the coast by sea and ambushed two Palestinian jeeps, killing three guerrillas. Six other guerrillas were wounded in Israeli grenade and machinegun attacks at two or three points along Lebanon's coastal highway.

The Israeli command in Tel Aviv said only that "a number of terrorists suffered casualties and vehicles in their possession were destroyed."

and that all its troops returned safely.

A spokesman for the governor's office in Sidon, the provincial capital of southern Lebanon 25 miles south of Beirut, said Israeli gunboats landed about 150 troops who set up roadblocks near the Palestinian-run town of Damour, 12 miles south of Sidon, the adjacent village of Sadiyyat and the fishing village of Saksakieh, six miles south of Sidon.

Israeli chief of staff Lt. Gen. Rafael Eytan, was quoted as telling Army Radio the raid was part of "the general war against terrorism," and not a direct reprisal for last week's Palestinian ambush in the occupied West Bank city of Hebron that killed six Israelis and injured 16.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, Israeli forces today used bulldozers and dynamite charges to destroy the homes of two Arab families whose sons were charged with throwing grenades at Israeli military vehicles earlier this year, the military command said.

Yugoslavians bid farewell to Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP)—Packed onto sidewalks and blanketing hillsides, Yugoslavians by the hundreds of thousands bade farewell today to President Josip Broz Tito in a funeral marked by military pageantry and vows to protect his legacy of independent communism.

At the end of a three-mile procession, cannons fired and sirens blared throughout Yugoslavia as an honor guard of eight generals lowered the oak casket into a marble vault in the garden of Tito's estate overlooking Belgrade.

The vault bore the simple inscription: "Josip Broz Tito, 1892-1980."

"In parting with you, our country and all our working people and citizens thank you for their most precious possession — that of being sovereign masters of their fate," Lazar Kolisevski, president of the collective leadership that takes over Tito's role as head of state, said in the graveside eulogy.

"You have traversed this whole, long painful road, leaving in your wake one of the deepest traces that a man can imprint on history."

Earlier, the flag-draped coffin had been borne by a guard of generals and workers from the rotunda of the Parliament to a gun carriage for the funeral procession. It rode down Belgrade's tree-lined streets past kings, presidents and throngs of Tito's countrymen to his grave.

Before the procession began, Stevan Doronjski, chief of the collective leadership that succeeds Tito as Communist Party chief, described Yugoslavia's break with the Soviet Bloc in 1948 as "one of the turning points in the history of our movement."

"At that time, it was a question of relations between socialist and communist parties, a question of independence, equality, respect for sovereignty and an independent path in the development of socialism."

Doronjski said it was "alien to the spirit of socialist Yugoslavia to tie itself to any power bloc. Tito saw this quite clearly and he deeply believed that the very existence of the blocs increased threats to the world."

His speech was heard by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, who with scores of other foreign leaders came to join hundreds of thousands of Yugoslavs for the ceremony and procession to the gravesite.

The tombstone was to bear the inscription "Josip Broz Tito, 1892-1980."

The funeral procession also was to include the presidents of the six Yugoslav republics and two autonomous regions who form the collective leadership to whom Tito bequeathed his presidency, and the 24-man collective, similarly drawn from the eight regions, he devised to run the Yugoslav Communist Party.

Hordes of Yugoslavs, including veterans of Tito's wartime Partisan forces and young people who knew no other national chieftain, poured into Belgrade to jam the broad Knez Milosa Avenue as the cortege took the three-mile route to the gravesite. The same street was used for the procession of assassinated King Alexander in 1934, the last big state funeral in the Balkan capital.

Facts in Blackthorn crash released

WASHINGTON (AP)—A marine board of inquiry has found a January ship collision in Tampa Bay, Fla., that killed 23 persons in the Coast Guard's worst peacetime disaster occurred as both vessels were near the middle of the channel.

The information came from an investigative board's report that was released today.

The partial report, limited to "findings of fact," located the site of the collision between the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn and the tanker Capricorn as close to the midpoint of the Tampa ship channel.

Conclusions and recommendations will be published at a later date after the Coast Guard commandant, Adm. John B. Hayes, takes final action on the report.

Twenty-three of the 50 crew members aboard the Blackthorn were killed when it sank after the Jan. 28 collision. No one aboard the Capricorn, which grounded, was injured.

Rear Adm. Norman Venzke, head of the Coast Guard Marine Board of Investigation that conducted 41 days of hearings, scheduled a news conference today to discuss the partial report.

At issue is whether one or both of the vessels strayed from their proper sides of the channel.

Ships in a channel, like cars on a highway, are expected to stay to their right. In conflicting testimony during the hearings, the captains and crews of both vessels maintained that they stayed in their proper courses.

The conclusions of the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board, which plans to publish its own report, could affect more than $40 million in suits stemming from the collision.

The marine board used the testimony and an analysis of debris to determine that the collision occurred almost head-on about midway between two buoys marking the channel.

The board said an anchor chain from the Capricorn led under the Coast Guard cutter's hull, causing the Blackthorn to sink rapidly. Testimony at the hearing said the vessel sank within four minutes of the collision.

The report shows the last minutes before the collision as being full of mutual astonishment as the crash approached.

It said the Capricorn's captain remarked about the approaching Coast Guard cutter, "What's this guy trying to prove?"

The report said the Blackthorn's lieutenant commander, sighting the oncoming tanker for the first time, exclaimed, "Where the (expletive deleted) did he come from?"

The Blackthorn was outbound, returning to its home port of Galveston, Texas, after more than three months in dry dock at Tampa. The Capricorn was inbound.

There is evidence that neither ship was making full use of its radar for detection of approaching vessels, the report said, but visibility was clear before the evening collision.

The report said many of the Blackthorn's crew members did not know where life preservers were stowed or how to launch life rafts, while some of the officers did not understand basic information included in the vessel's stability book.

Chrysler first quarter 1980 record high in loss

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., which lost a U.S. record $1.097 billion last year, has begun 1980 with a first quarter loss of $449 million.
 Broken down by sales and time, Chrysler's loss — only slightly less than the automaker's record quarterly loss of $460 million in the third quarter of 1979 — came to $1,364 per vehicle and nearly $14,600 a minute.
 At $6.84 cents per share, the loss represents 94 percent of the latest price of the common stock.
 But the No. 3 automaker's loss, announced Wednesday, is not as great as Ford Motor Co.'s in the United States during the first quarter — $473 million.
 In the 1979 first quarter, Chrysler lost $53.8 million, or 95 cents per share, on revenues of $3.30 billion. Revenues fell 30 percent to $2.33 billion in the latest quarter.

In its earnings report, Chrysler told its shareholders for the first time officially that if it does not get federally guaranteed loans, it will have to file for court protection under federal bankruptcy laws — something that has been a distinct possibility since the automaker decided to seek guarantees last summer. Chrysler has made similar statements in filings with the federal government.
 Chrysler has said previously that consumers would be so reluctant to buy from a company operating under court protection that it probably would have to liquidate.
 The Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board, which is considering the company's request for guarantees, meets Friday. Chrysler said it believed it had met all the requirements of the law authorizing $1.5 billion in guarantees and had told the board action was "urgent."

Cubans in Dallas helping refugees

DALLAS (AP) — Cuban refugees who built a new life in Texas remember what they left behind and now rally to lend helping hand to thousands of countrymen sailing in the "Freedom Flotilla" to the United States.
 Cubans living in the Dallas-Fort Worth area have collected food, clothing and money for the refugees arriving in Florida.
 "We just want to let our people still in Cuba know they are not alone in their resistance against a negative regime, and that we want to help them in their struggle," said Gisela H. Rodriguez of Fort Worth. She says she is working to find sponsors for refugee families expected to arrive in Dallas.
 In the past 17 days, more than 24,000 Cubans have fled their homeland in a mass exodus by boat.
 "A lot of Cubans here have fallen asleep, and what we want them to do is awaken and remember what the left behind," said Roberto Menendez of the Committee for Cubans of Carrollton.
 Other organizations, such as the Catholic Committee for Cubans, have collected non-perishable food, clothing, beds, medicine, money and other supplies.

Getting fat off is serious business with Iowans

By JUDY DAUBENMIER
 Associated Press Writer

STRATFORD, Iowa (AP) — Farmer John Bergquist says he's eaten so much lettuce his ears are growing and Kaylen Leeds can be heard mumbling to herself, "I'm not hungry. I'm not hungry."

Bergquist, Ms. Leeds and more than 300 of their neighbors in this central Iowa town of 870 have enlisted in a 4½-month diet called "The Great Stratford Fat-Off."

Begun as a publicity stunt for the community's centennial celebration, it's turned into serious business. Pride is all that's at stake, as the men and women compete to see which sex loses the most.

And all over town, people are tightening their belts and pinning on buttons that plead, "Don't Feed Me."

The "Fat-Off" waddled off the ground March 1 when the groups of men and women climbed on the truck scales at the Stratford grain elevator. It will end with a weigh-in during the town's July 12 centennial celebration, when both the "before" and "after" figures will be announced.

That means the participants are only about halfway through, and to some it seems like the diet will never end.

"I'm starting to sprout gills and my ears are growing longer from all the rabbit food and fish I've been eating," said Bergquist, who has already shed 55 of his 357 pounds.

"I'm good for another 30," he said, then moaned. "I've only had two drinks and one steak since the first of March."

Bergquist, who farms near Stratford, has a dieting companion, his hired man Ed Berry.

BELT TIGHTENING proves a point with this Stratford, Iowa citizen, Stan Quick. Taking in his belt a few notches proves that he has lost 33 pounds during "The Great Stratford Fat Off." Begun as a publicity stunt for the Stratford centennial, citizens of the central Iowa community have gotten serious about getting skinny.

Monument stands in cow pasture: no one remembers why it's there

UNION, W.Va. (AP) — Confederate monuments, moldy with age and memory, preside over courthouse lawns throughout Dixie.

It is not strange, then, that one should grace this county seat, whence the flower of southern manhood marched to glory under the brave banner of the 27th Virginia Infantry.

Except the monument isn't here. It's out there. Out there, north of town, in the approximate middle of a 20-acre cow pasture.

"People driving down the highway are always stopping to ask what that is," said Ralph Hinkle. His house backs up to the pasture fence. It is the logical place for the curious to knock.

"I tell them it's our Confederate monument. They ask why it's 'way out there. Damned if I know. All I can tell them is, that's where it was put."

It's a puzzle, all right. The monument is a statue of a soldier, in a slouch hat, holding a rifle. It is carved in white marble. The soldier stands, at parade rest, atop a limestone pedestal. Pedestal and soldier are 20 feet tall. The soldier's countenance suggests a Mediterranean origin.

Aha. Town files reveal that the statue was carved in Italy.

Old files also reveal that the monument was unveiled with much pomp on Aug. 29, 1901, after a parade. Belles dressed in gray gowns with sashes of red-white-red attended horse-drawn floats representing each of the 11 states of the Confederacy.

Grizzled veterans of the Lost Cause, 250 of them, sang "Auld Lang Syne." Spectators, 12,000 of them, the most ever assembled in Monroe County, wept. Orators, three of them, orated. One of them, the son of a general, had put up half the money for the monument. Daughters of the Confederacy raised the rest.

All of which is more than most people want to know about the monument, but still leaves unanswered question number one. Why did they put the blamed thing in a cow pasture?

Next stop is Karen Mitchell's parlor.

Mrs. Mitchell lives across the road east of the statue — the statue, need it be said, faces south — in a grand old antebellum mansion with 12-foot ceilings. She owns the 350-acre cattle farm that includes the pasture where the monument stands.

She has two theories. One is that the town was expected to grow in that direction, northward, eventually to encompass the monument, which would become the focus of a lovely park. So much for urban planning.

The other involves the legacy of this once-troubled state, which split from the Confederacy in mid-war. Mrs. Mitchell wonders: When the monument was built, could local government have been controlled by ones who deemed a Confederate monument unseemly within the city limits? So much for binding up wounds.

Religion law is ruled unconstitutional

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled unconstitutional the 1972 amendment to the Civil Rights Act requiring unions and employers to accommodate "reasonable religious needs" of workers.

Such federal statutes violate the First Amendment and "result in an impermissible government entanglement with religion," said U.S. District Judge Edward L. Schwartz.

Schwartz ruled in favor of General Dynamics Convair Aerospace Division, which fired a worker for refusing to join a labor union because of his religious beliefs.

Although other federal courts have ruled on side issues concerning the 1972 amendment, attorneys said Schwartz' decision Tuesday was the first on the law's constitutionality. They said it could have a nationwide impact on many religious groups whose members seek accommodations on their jobs in line with their beliefs.

The statute declared unconstitutional by Schwartz, presiding federal judge in San Diego, says an employer must honor an employee's religion, and "the term 'religion' includes all aspects of religious observance and practice, as well as belief, unless an employer demonstrates that he is unable to reasonably accommodate an employee's or prospective employee's religious observance or practice without undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business."

David Anderson, a General Dynamics employee and a Seventh-Day Adventist, invoked the statute after he was fired for refusing to join the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Anderson was an employee since 1965 but it was 1972 before a new contract demanded that all General Dynamics-Convair workers join the union. When he fought his dismissal, a federal judge ruled in 1977 that General Dynamics could accommodate him by allowing him to pay a charity an amount of money equivalent to the applicable union dues.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw that out but never ruled on the constitutional questions. Last year, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to consider the case, and Anderson returned to work as a process tank leader last June 11 under a tentative agreement with the union. General Dynamics and the union moved for a summary judgment solely on legal issues, asking for a declaration that the accommodation clause violated the Constitution.

Spokesmen for the company and the union hailed Schwartz' ruling as significant. Anderson said he was uncertain of his next move, but his attorney, David Watkins, said in Dallas that he plans to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Congress could be writing first balanced budget in twelve years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is well on its way to writing the first balanced federal budget in 12 years, but a skidding economy threatens to throw it out of whack before the ink is dry.

The House approved a $611.8 billion balanced spending plan Wednesday and the Senate is expected to follow suit soon with its own defense-oriented version, perhaps today.

But the action comes amid growing concern that the deepening recession and rising unemployment could force the 1981 budget out of balance not long after the fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The House version passed 225-193, largely on Democratic votes. Most Republicans opposed it, apparently out concern its spending level is too high and will result in a deficit.

The Senate hoped to complete work today on the $612.9 billion spending plan submitted by its Budget Committee. Differences between the House and Senate proposals then would be worked out in a conference committee.

Whatever compromise emerges, the much-discussed plan to balance the budget could be upset if the recession now settling over the land proves longer and deeper than the relatively mild downturn congressional economists have predicted.

Some economists now fear the recession could push unemployment to 9 percent — the high-water mark of the 1974-75 recession — and turn the $2 billion surplus in the House budget into a $40 billion deficit.

Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., claimed that last month's sharp increase in unemployment — from 6.2 percent in March to 7 percent in April — was proof "we're just kidding ourselves" in projecting a balanced budget.

However, House leaders say they are holding to their relatively optimistic economic forecasts and were encouraged by recent declines in interest rates, a development that could help the construction industry.

Higher unemployment hurts the federal budget by reducing tax revenues and by raising spending for social programs, such as unemployment benefits and food stamps.

After approving the balanced 1981 budget, the House voted 241-174 to raise the 1980 spending ceiling by $24 billion to accommodate higher-than-expected spending in the current year. The change would increase the projected 1980 deficit from $29.8 billion to $42.8 billion.

Also Wednesday, the Senate handily defeated two liberal attempts to trim the Budget Committee's proposed huge increases in defense spending while restoring some money cut from social programs.

Tropical diseases target for World Health group

NEW YORK (AP) — Officially declaring smallpox a thing of the past, the World Health Organization today turned its attention to immunization programs, battling tropical diseases and providing clean water and adequate sanitation.

The objective is "health for all by the year 2000."

Smallpox, the first disease man has eliminated, is one of the five most deadly diseases in world history. As recently as 1966, it accounted for 500,000 to 1 million deaths a year worldwide.

But it was to be declared eradicated at a ceremony during a meeting of the World Health Assembly, WHO's governing body, in Geneva, Switzerland, today. It has been two years since the last recorded case of smallpox — the most recent suspected case, two weeks ago, turned out to be chicken pox.

The national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta marked the demise of smallpox last October. However, CDC spokesman Don Berreth said WHO's celebration marks the formal end of the disease and will be attended by CDC officials.

Officials say diseases such as polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles and tuberculosis — which kill some 5 million children a year and leave an equal number disabled — can be controlled through immunization but will not replace smallpox as targets of an eradication program.

They also don't expect to eradicate the four other killer diseases ranked with smallpox: cholera, plague, yellow fever and typhus.

"Unfortunately we are not in a position to eradicate these diseases" because it would require more sophisticated systems, said Dr. Ralph Henderson, director of the WHO Expanded Program on Immunization.

Instead, the goal, to be achieved by 1990, is to "assure that every child born receives a course of immunization in the first year of life, and only then can we consider eradicating these diseases," he said Wednesday.

Politicians in developed and Third-World countries are the biggest obstacle, Henderson said. Officials who may face cancer can understand giving high priority to financing cancer research, he said. But "nobody is speaking for the child under five. It is a largely unappreciated and silent population," he added.

Three craft unions settle

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — A 16-month strike that triggered outbreaks of violence and prompted a special city ordinance banning mass gatherings near a plastic plant came to an end when three craft unions accepted contract offers.

Pickets at the gates of the Arco Polymers Inc. plant came down Wednesday shortly after the craft union membership voted approval of the new pact that concerned work issues rather than wages, union officials said.

"I, for one, am damn glad it's over," said Hugh Davis, bargaining agent for Machinists Union Local 823. "We're looking forward to a long, harmonious relationship with this company."

Tensions flared at the plant gate earlier this week when some workers tried to cross picket lines, police said.

Five persons, including one brandishing a shotgun, were arrested after the confrontation, and the Port Arthur City Council met in emergency session to pass an ordinance banning gatherings of more than 10 persons at the plant gate.

"It's just regrettable that the strike had to last 16 months," said Arco's chief negotiator, Joe Thompson, after the agreement. "The company is satisfied with the contract."

The strike began Jan. 8, 1979, when about 550 members of five unions walked out as their contracts expired.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covington Commandment.

The confessions of a Keynesian

Who is to blame for this nation's near-catastrophic economic conditions? Jimmy Carter likes to blame the oil sheikhs, the big oil companies, big business and even big unions. Yet it is becoming increasingly clear that the real culprit is the federal government. Recent statements by Mark Willis, president of the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, illustrate that even people responsible for enforcing government economic policy realize that what they are doing is contributing to the country's economic plight.

Willis, who is the top "credit cop" for the Federal Reserve in the northern Midwest, believes that current inflation is due primarily to past government spending and monetary policy. "The two most important causes of inflation are government deficits and we in the Central Bank printing too much money." That's what Willis says and his words are right on target. Without at least one of those two ingredients — deficits or printing too much money — Willis says inflation can't exist. In the case of contemporary America, we have both.

It is rare to find a member of a quasi-government agency like the Federal Reserve Bank being so candid. But Willis is more than an agent of government policy; he is a former academician. When he was a professor he was an advocate of Keynesian "deficit-is-OK" economics. Willis now says he has nightmares about the false economic theories he used to drill into his students. It is too bad more economics professors are not given the chance Willis has had to see how their theories work in practice.

Willis is just as unimpressed with the credit-control moves the Carter administration is promoting as a method of slowing inflation. They are, as Willis says, a "dumb idea." From his vantage point, and he is the one who enforces the new rules, they are not very effective as well as being discriminatory and costly. Like any other government intervention these credit controls place hardship on productive people who are simply trying to protect themselves from government-caused inflation.

The solution, as Willis now sees it, and as many others have seen for a long time, is controlling the printing of money and putting an end to deficit spending. But this solution requires a certain amount of political action and Willis is justifiably skeptical that the politicians are going to come through.

It took an economist like Willis, with no profit to be made by promising voters new spending proposals, a long time to realize that government spending has to be cut. Likely it is going to take politicians a lot longer to recognize what is needed to do the job. And after that it is going to take courage to do the necessary trimming. That may be more than the public can expect from politicians. It is even questionable that the public has the courage to support such spending cuts. Industry is becoming all too accustomed to being bailed out by the government whenever there is trouble. Individuals likewise have grown to rely on the state.

What is bracingly unusual about Mark Willis is that he is speaking up. Over the years it is likely that many people charged with enforcing government policy realize the negative impact of their activities. They, with few exceptions, kept their mouths shut. Willis should be given credit for having the courage to speak up.

Open up Alaska

The incompetency of the Carter administration staggers the imagination, especially when it comes to energy. With all the studies conducted by highly-paid government experts one would think the president's energy program would include provisions to develop, or at least encourage the private sector to develop, what may be America's greatest potential provider of energy. Instead, Alaska has been ignored.

Two former governors of Alaska, Walter Hickel and William Egan, are complaining that their state has been written off as a possible solution to America's energy problem. Instead of focusing on Alaska's huge oil reserve, which they claim could be as big as that of Saudi Arabia, the two Alaskans contend President Carter is concentrating on costly development of synthetic fuels and other experimental programs. At a time when the economy is being severely injured by the massive importation of oil, their words should be heeded. They say Alaska could produce 4.5 to 5 million barrels oil per day, which would cut oil imports in half.

Hickel, who served as secretary of the interior in 1969-70, charges, with good cause, that the Carter administration is crippling any attempt to put Alaska's resources to use improving the lives of this nation's citizens. Carter's secretary of the interior, Cecil Andrus, recently reclassified 125,000 Alaskan acres, effectively sealing their mineral wealth. Carter-backed legislation now pending in Congress would write those administrative rulings into law. This is being done, of course, in the name of environmentalism and conservation. These are the same arguments used against the building of the Alaskan pipeline, which now provides this country with 1.475 million barrels of oil per day. One need only consider where the economy would be without that pipeline oil to see the frivolity of this kind of environmentalism.

Commonwealth North, a group headed by Hickel and Egan, sponsored a study by geologists-engineers and experts from the public and private sector to find if Alaska's energy resources could be retrieved from that state's Arctic area without threatening the state's wild life. As in the case of the pipeline, the study showed that the job could be done without environmental damage.

And enormous oil reserves are not Alaska's only potential energy resource. It is estimated the state has more than one thousand years of recoverable coal at current U.S. consumption levels. It has natural gas deposits that have been estimated to range from 55 to more than 400 trillion cubic feet. Alaska may also have up to 35 percent of this nation's undeveloped hydro potential. The Carter administration has not addressed itself to any of these potentials.

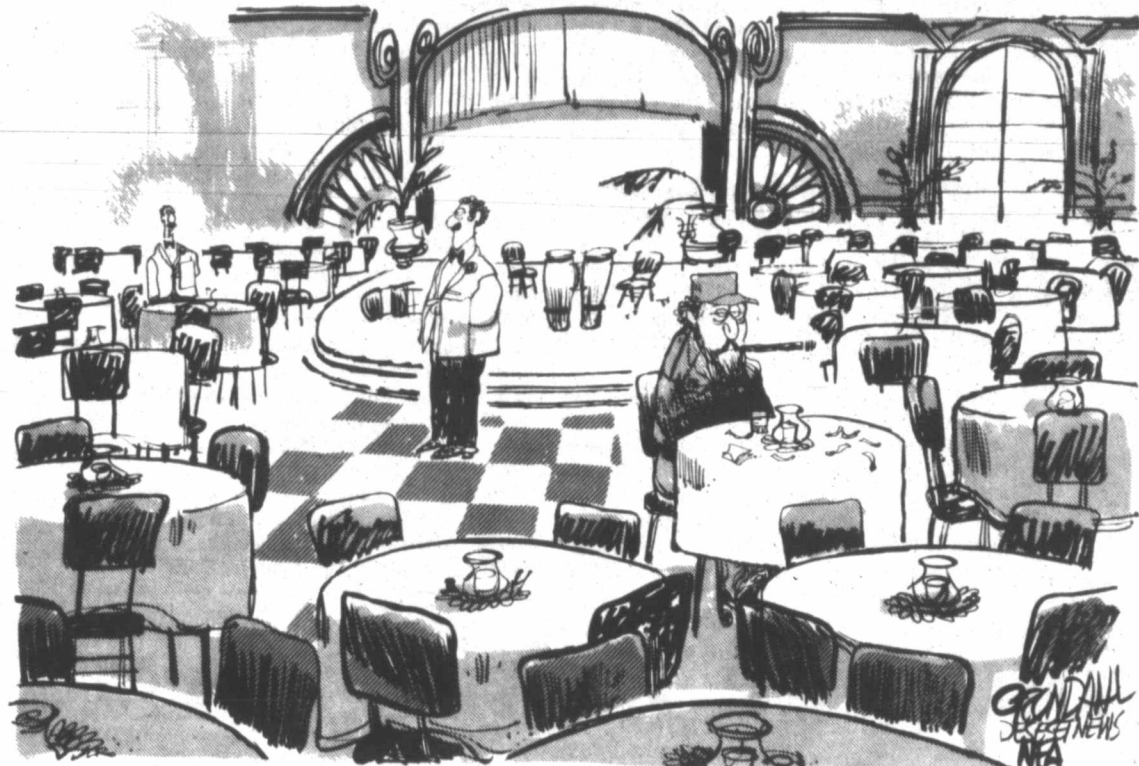

Alaska has been labeled America's last frontier. If our forefathers had relied on the federal government it is likely the first frontier would yet to be settled.

By Charles D. Van Eaton, Ph.D.
There can be doubt that he is sincere. Though I have no reason to believe that God speaks through Him (the evidence suggests the contrary) I always think of the Old Testament Prophet Amos when I see or hear him.
There can equally be no doubt that he is mischievously, even destructively, ignorant.
He is ignorant of the burden which is laid upon mankind by the scarcity of economic means relative to economic ends. He is ignorant of the fact that since scarcity flows from nature and is not contrived it can be dealt with only if resources are continuously free to be allocated to their most productive uses as dictated by the choices made by free people in free markets — otherwise poverty wins.
He is mischievous in his ignorance because he refuses to consider what students of economic theory and economic history have been saying for over two hundred years. He is aware of the arguments, he cannot refute them, he purposefully ignores them.
He presses on, using every instrument of the American legal system to turn his own private world of vague and mystical economics into a harsh reality which everyone else will be forced to accept whether they want it or not and regardless of the costs. Outside the OPEC oil cartel he has been the single most potent force for national impoverishment of the past decade.

His name is Ralph Nader.
If you think I've given the gentleman a harsh and undeserved indictment, consider what follows.
Mr. Nader's big push right now is to extend his attack on big business, as exemplified by his group's Big Business Day on April 27, over the coming decade. Central to his effort is the passage of legislation which bears the title, The Corporate Democracy Act of 1980. As I discovered in a radio debate in Cincinnati, Ohio, with one of Mr. Nader's associates, Mr. Merrill Gozner, the heart of this legislation is to make it virtually impossible for a business to make any decision regarding its employment, its location, or its output without Federal approval.
There are eight parts to Nader's legislation but one part stand out — Title III which requires a firm to obtain permission from the Federal government before it can relocate its facilities. This is not the first time that legal restrictions against relocations have been sought and there is another bill before Congress in addition to Nader's at the present time which attempts such restriction.

In 1977 a bill was introduced into the House of Representatives by Representative William Ford of Michigan. It made no headway. Undaunted, Representative Ford has reintroduced his bill. His bill, along with Nader's, is designed to impose such severe penalties upon firms which wish to leave, say, Ohio and move to, say, Texas that for all intents and purposes they will just have to stay where they are.
Nader and his people have made it clear that in their judgment a firm which decides to shut down an operation and relocate in order to earn greater profits has behaved in a "socially irresponsible" manner.
Suppose Nader and his followers in and out of Congress are successful (there is evidence of growing support for anti-relocation legislation) and a firm which finds its rate of return on equity (which is the proper measure of profitability) falling due to increasing labor costs in its area; or to higher state and local taxes; or to any of a multitude of reasons associated with the area, cannot relocate. Will it be able to sustain itself and the employment which it provides? No, it will not.

Sooner or later competition in product and capital markets from firms located in more profitable areas will force the contraction and eventual death of the less profitable firm. The jobs and output which are lost due to firm death in the area Nader thinks he's protecting will not just be lost to that area but to the economy as a whole as a result of reduced competition and the misallocation of resources. Is that an example of "social responsibility"??
It's easy to note the short-run impact on a single community of a plant closing and conclude that had the plant not closed all would have been well forever. When this view is taken a vital fact is overlooked — the closing of the less efficient plant and its relocation to another area makes the total economy stronger as a result of resources being freed to move to those uses which are more highly valued in the market place.
As I noted in an earlier article, Dr. Richard McKenzie found that only 1.5 percent of manufacturing jobs lost in the North from 1969 to 1972 were the result of plants relocating while 98.5 percent were lost from firm death or contraction. I cited this in my Cincinnati debate with Nader's associate. He protested that my figures were out of date. He was right, they were out of date. Based on updated studies done by the Economic Development Division of the United States Department of Agriculture it is not just 1.5 percent due to relocation but, rather 1.6 percent. Big deal!
Nader says that Ohio is being ruined by firms moving out. In fact, after a decline from 1965 to 1972, manufacturing jobs in Ohio have rebounded well above their 1965 level and have increased by over 100,000 since 1975.
Nader cites the impact of the close of the Youngstown Sheet and Tubing Plant in Ohio as an example of what could have been avoided by his legislation. In fact, one year after that plant closed the unemployment rate in Youngstown had returned to the level which prevailed before the closing. The firm was able to survive because it was free to close a plant which was killing it. Had Nader's legislation been in effect every job offered by that firm could be gone.
I wonder what it is Nader has against people earning a living.

The price of happiness

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The thing which made this country great was that everyone believed money could buy happiness. But because of inflation, the price of happiness has doubled in the last 10 years, and the people who sell it have no idea what it will eventually cost.
An analyst for the American Dream Company told me, "For 25 years people have consumed happiness without a thought for tomorrow. They never realized that there is just so much happiness in the world, and at the rate they were using it, we would eventually run out."
I agreed. "Happiness was so cheap we all took it for granted. But we were urged to buy happiness today and pay for it tomorrow. We can't be blamed for wasting it."
"It's not a question of blaming anyone. But we have to wake up to reality, and that is, if you want to have happiness now, you're going to have to pay for it through the nose. The day of the 5-cent pack of bubblegum is gone."
I said, "I think the problem is that Americans still believe the happiness shortage has been contrived so that the people who sell it can make windfall profits. Is it real or isn't it?"

"It's true that the happiness industry may be taking advantage of the situation, but there are many other factors at work which are driving up the price. Twenty-five years ago it took very little to make people happy. A home, a car and a TV was enough to make most people content."
"But then we were told it wasn't enough. If we really wanted to be happy, we had to have a second car, and a second home. We couldn't find happiness unless we used deodorants, and bought new clothes, and gave our children guitar lessons and stereo sets, and bought them their own car. We were warned that unless we had been to Disneyland we weren't truly happy."
"Then we were told that happiness really meant enjoying our leisure time. This means ski trips, tickets to ball games, and Europe, golf and tennis equipment, overnight camping trips and drinking Coca-Cola. It also meant eating out and paying baby-sitters, and not leaving home without an American Express Card."
"All the banks had instant happiness plans where you could borrow money for practically anything you wanted, and pay it back on the installment plan."

"But no matter what we bought, we were told we didn't have true happiness unless we consumed more. Just when we thought we had all the happiness that money could buy, a new product came out on the market which made our old happiness obsolete. If we didn't rush out and buy it, we were warned we would be very unhappy. It stands to reason that the price of buying happiness would go through the roof."
"What you say has merit," I said. "But if money can't buy happiness, what's left?"
"First, we're going to have to conserve the happiness we have now. People will have to face up to the fact that despite the TV commercials, they can't be happy all the time."
"Then, we're going to have to find new resources for happiness, which are cheaper and will last longer. We will have to go back to a simpler way of life when happiness was a warm puppy who ate leftover scraps, instead of Alpo dog food. And finally, if this doesn't work, we're going to have to put a tax on happiness until it hurts."
"If you do that you'll really make people unhappy," I said.
"It's bitter medicine, but it's the only way the price of happiness will ever come down."

Move over

By Anthony Harrigan
America's radical community is unhappy with the two party system. One manifestation of its unhappiness is the formation of a Citizens' Party which in mid-April nominated Barry Commoner, an environmental activist, as its presidential candidate.
To be sure, that's an inadequate way to describe Barry Commoner. Dr. Peter Metzger writes that "presidential hopeful Barry Commoner came out of his political closet and openly acknowledged his debt to Karl Marx." In 1976, he said, Commoner "presented his intensely coercive solution to the problems of pollution, blaming capitalism alone for smog."
At a rally last September, Commoner promised the radical community: "You will have a chance to vote against nuclear power, oil companies and utilities."
That was the promise and mood at the citizens' Party convention in Cleveland in April. Mario Savio, leader of the dirty speech campaign at Berkeley in the 1960s, was on hand to chant the party slogan "Move over...move over...move over."
Author Studs Terkel gave the keynote address, charging that "The corporate big boys are squeezing the American dream into this thimble."
The Citizens' Party hopes to qualify for $7 million in federal funding on a retroactive basis. But its real aim is to lay a foundation for future elections. If the recession deepens and the American industrial system continues to deteriorate, with an acceleration of plant closings, radical groups such as the Citizens' Party may find a sympathetic response among some segments of the electorate.

Government-funded community protest groups already have laid the groundwork for radical politics on a larger scale. The group known as ACORN (Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now), with headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., sounded off at its national convention, saying: "We have nothing to show for the work of our hands." It called for a government takeover of investor-owned utilities and a breakup of energy companies. Incidentally, ACORN is provided with government-paid VISTA volunteers.
If ACORN has its way, doctors will be thrown off hospital boards. Private banks will be required to provide home loans up to $50,000 to the "poor." New tax-supported "public banks" for the poor will be created. Dr. Metzger reports: "Curiously, some banks unwittingly supported ACORN, having bought advertisements in ACORN's 'People's Platform' document." How's that for a death wish?
The aim of ACORN and similar groups is the revolutionary restructuring of American society. They hope to eradicate the separation of powers doctrine in the American constitutional system, substituting a form of plebiscitary government. Of themselves, they aren't likely to topple our system. But they feed hurtful ideas into mainstream parties. They bear watching.

Today in history

Today is Thursday, May 8 the 129th day of 1980. There are 237 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On May 8, 1541, the Mississippi River was discovered by the Spanish explorer, Hernando de Soto, at a point near the present city of Memphis, Tenn.

On this date:
In 1884, the 33rd American president, Harry S Truman, was born on a farm near Lamar, Mo.
In 1942, the Pacific war battle of the Coral Sea ended in allied victory, a costly defeat for the Japanese.
In 1972, President Nixon ordered North Vietnam's ports mined to hamper communist shipping.
In 1973, militant Indians holding the South Dakota hamlet of Wounded Knee surrendered to federal officials, ending a 70-day siege.

Test scores challenged by grads

HOUSTON (AP) — Four graduate students have challenged the validity of a test that will be used to identify problem areas in Texas classrooms and determine where $42 million in compensatory educational funds will be spent. The Houston Post reported today.

The four told the newspaper that changes in the grading system threatened to undermine the accuracy of the test taken by 500,000 Texas school children.

"After we got into the grading, their were a million changes," said the student, who asked not to be identified. "The main problem was they kept changing the grading system."

The tests, administered in February to all fifth and ninth graders in the state, is called the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills.

Texas Education Association

officials have defended the test scores as valid. However, they have asked the Westinghouse DataScore Systems, the firm which supervised the scoring, to send additional information about its procedures.

Westinghouse was awarded a $1.5 million contract by TEA to grade essay questions.

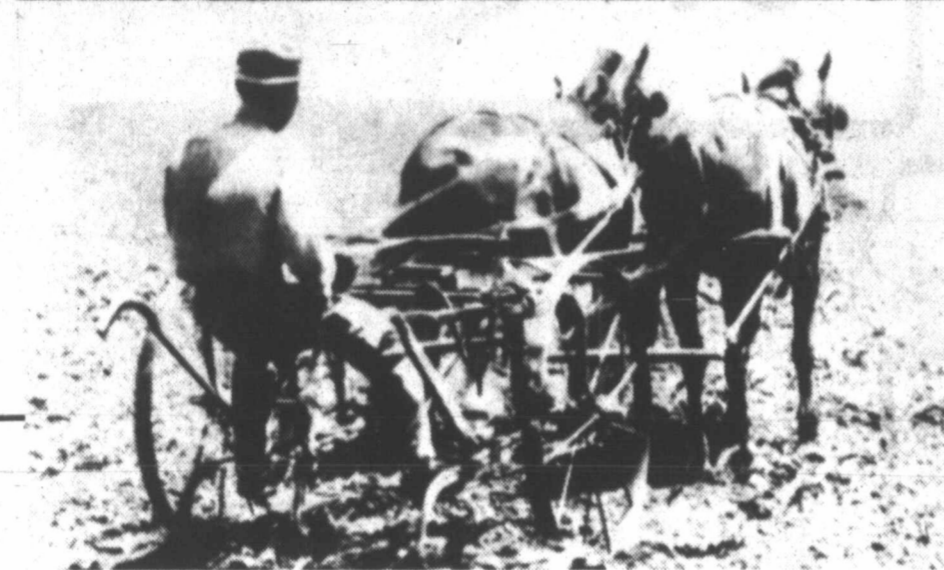

"The materials we have, the documentation we have, does not indicate a change (in grading) took place," said Grace Grimes, deputy TEA commissioner.

The results of the test are to be used to determine where $42 million in compensatory educational funds will be spent as well as find problem areas in Texas classrooms.

Famed primate dead in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — He may have been a wife-beater, a full-time ham and a not-so-red-hot lover, but Je-Je will be missed by thousands.

The 11-year-old lowland gorilla, long the prime attraction at the Houston Zoo, died Tuesday of kidney failure and bacterial colitis. He was buried on zoo grounds near his home.

"I thought he was a ham," said zoo director John Werler. "He was one of the biggest attractions at the zoo."

Je-Je, a primate who belonged to an endangered species, entertained the crowds by splashing in the water and occasionally cuffing his mate, Vanilla.

The female gorilla probably isn't all choked up about Je-Je's death, according to Werler.

Fort Worth desegregation picture gains new plan

FORT WORTH (AP) — A federal judge has issued a school desegregation order that stresses magnet schools — not additional busing — as a way to achieve racial balance in Fort Worth schools.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon issued an 18-page order Wednesday that made broad changes in a compromise school integration plan worked out by the NAACP and the Fort Worth school board.

Changes included instructions that school officials make an intensive "good faith" effort to employ more black teachers and administrators.

Mahon directed the school district to offer magnet programs in an effort to attract white students to predominantly black schools.

Magnet schools offer programs and specialty courses not available at other schools.

The judge ordered the school board to provide free transportation to students enrolled in magnet programs and stipulated the students enrolled in those programs must attend the magnet schools full time.

Mahon also said he would continue to insist that black and white teachers are assigned to every school and he rejected arguments by attorneys for both the NAACP and the school board that black students need teachers with similar cultural backgrounds.

"The courts have long held that benevolent motives do not excuse racially discriminatory practices," said Mahon.

"Segregative measures, even though sincerely intended to benefit black students, are unacceptable under the principle that separate can never be equal," he said.

Mahon said he would not consider any school faculty integrated if less than 10 percent of its teachers are black or if the proportion to black teachers is 15 percent greater than the proportion of black teachers in the school system.

Mahon told school officials to show a "sensitivity to cultural backgrounds" in shaping disciplinary policies. But he emphasized that he did not intend for them to tolerate "disruptive behavior."

The judge congratulated the school board for agreeing to intensify minority recruiting efforts. And he said he would not set a timetable for the district to achieve minority hiring goals until he saw the results of the board's efforts.

Another change in the proposed plan requires the district to list students under white, black or Mexican-American categories when filling out reports at six-month intervals.

A previous order directed the district to include Mexican-Americans in the white category.

The judge also praised the school board and NAACP for working to resolve their differences.

"It is a tribute to the responsibility and realism of both parties, and to the professionalism of their advocates, that his court has not met with the kind of antagonism and recalcitrance that has pressed many other courts to the outer reaches of their authority," said Mahon.

Olympics issue studied

MOSCOW (AP) — After urging Soviet leaders to ease international tension for the sake of the Moscow Olympics, the president of the International Olympic Committee is hoping to talk President Carter into dropping the U.S. boycott, sources say.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday night that Lord Killanin had requested a meeting with the president to discuss the Games and the request was under consideration.

Killanin reportedly expects to see Carter on May 15. He indicated he had told Carter in advance about his meeting with Soviet leaders.

In talks Tuesday and Wednesday with Soviet officials including President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Killanin presented a plan for scaling down some of the nationalistic ceremonies accompanying the Olympics and raised the issue of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, according to sources familiar with the Olympic committee.

The Soviet military move prompted Carter's call for the boycott, which has been taken up by several other nations and threatens to embarrass the Soviets and dim the prestige of the Olympics.

Killanin apparently won few concessions from the Soviets.

Sources said that when Killanin mentioned Afghanistan, Brezhnev restated the Soviet position that all troops would be withdrawn from that nation only when the United States and its allies stop alleged aggression there.

When Killanin suggested that all nations including the Soviet Union do whatever they can to create a favorable climate for the approaching Games, Brezhnev replied the Soviet Union had already done all it could.

Then Brezhnev criticized Carter for mixing sports with politics by calling for a boycott.

After the meeting with Brezhnev, Killanin said the talks were "frank. You can interpret that any way you like."

On the international level, such a description normally means the two sides have outlined their positions without compromise.

The day before, Killanin outlined for Soviet officials a European plan designed to drastically scale down the Olympics' opening ceremonies. It was drafted during a meeting in Rome last week by 18 nations and has not yet been formally approved by the IOC.

The plan calls for de-emphasizing nationalism by removing national flags and anthems. Sources said the Soviets indicated they would not object.

Even before the controversy over Afghanistan, the nationalism of the Olympics had become an issue among sportsmen.

From Moscow, Killanin was headed for Lausanne, Switzerland, where he will attend Friday's IOC executive board meeting, where the European plan is to be discussed.

Suit filed in slaying

WAILUKU, Hawaii (AP) — A judge here has ordered 15 persons, including five by name, to quit an alleged plot to kill the father of one of two men shot and killed near here two years ago in an alleged murder-for-hire.

J. Albert Warford sought the preliminary injunction granted Tuesday by Circuit Judge S. George Fukuoka as part of his $11 million civil suit against his son's former wife and a former Honolulu police officer, alleging they were responsible for the son's slaying.

Paul R. Warford, 34, and his roommate David Blue, 24, were shot and killed at an apartment in Lahaina, across Maui Island from here, on May 4, 1978. Harriet Savage, 21, was also in the apartment and was critically wounded but survived.

Anthony Kekona Jr., admitted the killings and was the state's key witness in the murder trial and conviction last month of John K. Lincoln, who Kekona said hired him for $10,000 to kill Warford.

In his suit brought last month against Mrs. Warford, who is the former Sue Lynn Beard of Slaton, Texas, and former police officer Isaac Sanga, the elder Warford claims they arranged for the killing of his son.

It also contends they attempted to hire an unknown person late last year to do "serious physical harm to J. Albert Warford," members of his family and others.

Named in the preliminary injunction issued by Judge Fukuoka are Lincoln and his wife, Robin; Kekona; Patrick K. Hawkins, who admitted accompanying Kekona during the killings; and Sonny Arnold, identified as a Lubbock, Texas, contractor.

The others in the injunction are listed as unnamed persons.

Mrs. Warford and Sanga are both now living at Slaton, Texas, near Lubbock, according to court testimony. Fukuoka did not include them in his injunction because they were represented in Tuesday's court by attorney Brook Hart of Honolulu.

In a related development, Hart told the court that Mrs. Warford's children were threatened over the weekend at their home in Slaton. Hart said he informed the FBI of the reported threat and had the children moved to another location.

The Warford family was involved in various housing developments here, but their company folded in late 1976 because of financial problems.

The Paul Warford's were divorced Jan. 14, 1977 in Honolulu.

Paul Warford carried $300,000 in life insurance of which Mrs. Warford was the beneficiary and $100,000 in a policy on which he changed the principal beneficiaries from his former wife to his children shortly before his death, according to court records.

Mrs. Warford failed in a civil suit challenging the change in beneficiary on that policy.

Little change seen in economy decline

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates are posting fresh skids amid new signs of a worsening recession, including a marked slowdown in consumer borrowing, a record trade deficit and additional woes for the beleaguered Chrysler Corp.

The government reported Wednesday that consumers borrowed 36 percent less in March than in February as the Carter administration's credit controls took hold. Installment debt rose $1.4 billion in March, compared with $2.3 billion the month before.

Those credit controls were imposed March 14 to dampen business and consumer borrowing, which was feeding a spending spree that kept the economy from falling into a recession — a step considered necessary by Carter to halt rampant inflation. Now, that recession appears to have taken root, signalled in part by sliding interest rates.

On Wednesday, the nation's third largest bank, Chase Manhattan, lowered its prime lending rate a full percentage point to 17 percent, the lowest level for this key index since February. Many other banks, including the top-ranked Bank of America, cut their rate to 17.5 percent.

And the nation's largest thrift institution, California's Home Savings & Loan Association, slashed its prime mortgage rate 4.75 percent to 12.75 percent.

Despite this dramatic one-of-a-kind reduction, most housing experts anticipate a gradual decline in mortgage rates to somewhere between 12 percent and 14 percent by year's end.

The government on Wednesday also reported a record $12.2 billion merchandise trade deficit for the first quarter — the result primarily of higher-priced petroleum and metals imports.

That deficit compares with a $8.6 billion trade gap in the last quarter of 1979 and exceeds the previous record of $11.9 billion for any quarter, registered from January through March 1978.

U.S. exports in 1980's first quarter increased 6.8 percent, from $50.5 billion in the final three months of 1979 to $53.9 billion, the Commerce Department said.

Very high interest rates in March were reflected in the slowdown of consumer borrowing, particularly auto loans.

The Federal Reserve Board reported that the total of such loans rose only $395 million in March, compared with $881 million in February. In other economic news Wednesday:

—Chrysler Corp. reported that from January through March it lost $449 million, as its revenue fell nearly 30 percent to $2.33 billion because of slumping sales.

—The Carter administration declined to increase the voluntary price standard provided for in its anti-inflation program. But the administration said industry-by-industry exceptions will be considered.

—The Labor Department estimated that 545,000 Americans filed first-time unemployment claims in the week ending April 25, second only to the previous week's 607,000 filings as the highest since such statistics were first kept in 1967.

Alien wage kickback investigated

DALLAS (AP) — Job-hungry illegal aliens who make the dangerous and arduous trek to Texas to find work at a living wage are being forced to kick back some of their earnings to unscrupulous employers for "the privilege of staying on the payroll," authorities say.

U.S. Department of Labor strike forces investigating alleged federal labor law violations in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston during recent months have uncovered $1.2 million in underpayments owed to more than 4,000 illegal alien employees.

Investigators noted a Houston area employer who forced undocumented workers to kick back $50 a month just to keep a job and another Houston businessman who charged $25 to cash payroll checks for illegal aliens who lacked proper identification.

Bill Belt, regional administrator for the Employment Standards Administration in Dallas, said the $1.2 million represented only "a small percentage" of the money owed undocumented workers.

The figures lend weight to claims by Gov. Bill Clements and others that unscrupulous employers are exploiting many of the at least 3 million undocumented workers in Texas. Clements contends the bulk of those workers are underpaid and living in squalor in order to send money home to Mexico.

The extent of the debt is difficult to uncover, the governor explained, because illegal aliens hesitate to report abuses for fear of being deported to Mexico.

"These people are not going to come to us. They are afraid to come to us. They know we are a government agency. They don't know we can help them," said Belt.

"The real tragic part of it is that until this kind of practice stops, these kinds of employers are going to continue this because the individuals are afraid to come to us, are afraid to go to any other government agency to report they are being abused," said Belt.

Labor Department spokesmen in Washington say they have uncovered $15 million in back wages due 94,000 undocumented and American workers during the first six months of the fiscal year that began in October.

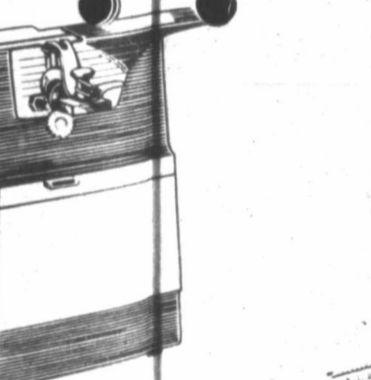

Belt said the 16 agents in the three city investigation focused on the construction, hotel-motel and restaurant industries which earlier investigations showed relied on illegal aliens willing to work long hours for low pay.

Aquino is in Texas

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Former Sen. Benigno Aquino Jr., the most prominent critic of President Ferdinand Marcos, returned to the Philippines, left for Manila to undergo open heart surgery.

"I hope to be back in three weeks," said Aquino, who has served more than 7 1/2 years in jail for his opposition to Marcos' rule and is expected to return to detention when he comes back from American.

Aquino boarded a Philippine Airlines flight with his wife Corazon, their only son and two of their four daughters. Their destination is Dallas where Aquino will enter the Baylor University Medical Center for a coronary artery bypass operation.

Deputy Defense Minister Carmelo Barbero, who was with Aquino at the airport, disclosed that the former senator suffered a mild heart attack in his detention quarters on March 15.

Aquino told reporters he is not unduly worried because "this is a common operation." But he said doctors at the Philippine Heart Center for Asia told him his life would be in danger within six months unless he underwent the surgery.

Aquino, 47, was arrested shortly after midnight on Sept. 22, 1972, hours after Marcos proclaimed martial law and disbanded the old U.S.-style Congress. Aquino was among hundreds of political enemies Marcos had arrested, but all except him were released long ago.

Aquino has been released several times for furloughs, the longest a three-week stay at home with his family last Christmas.

LEAPING FOR HOME. Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox leaps to home plate as Texas Rangers catcher Jim Sundberg takes a throw from center field relayed by pitcher Adrian Devine in the eleventh inning of Wednesday night's game at Arlington Stadium in Arlington, Texas. Yastrzemski scored the next-to-last run in the 7-4 Red Sox victory over the Rangers.

Brohamer's run gives Red Sox win over Texas Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Players in both dressing rooms agreed that Jack Brohamer's latest trip around the base paths was about the wackiest thing they've ever seen.

But it provided Boston with a 7-4 victory in 11 innings over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night, enabling the Red Sox to salvage the final game of a three-game series.

"We couldn't get that guy out, and we had three chances at him," said Texas catcher Jim Sundberg, whose throw in a rundown hit Brohamer in the hip, allowing him to score.

Rick Burleson had hit a solo homer in the first inning, and Carlton Fisk hit a two-run clout in the seventh for Boston, and the Red Sox led 4-2 going into the bottom of the eighth.

But a fielding error, followed by two walks, set up Buddy Bell's bases-loaded single to tie the game.

A rain that began falling in the seventh was still coming down when Brohamer came to the plate with one out in the 11th and the score still deadlocked at 4-4.

He hit an innocent-looking tap between the mound and first base, and almost fell down as he left the batter's box. But Adrian Devine, the Rangers' fourth pitcher of the evening, did fall down as he was trying to field the grounder, and Brohamer was safe at first with a single.

Then Carl Yastrzemski hit a grounder to second, where Bump Wills grabbed the ball, tossed to newly acquired shortstop Bud Harrelson at second, and Harrelson threw to Pat Putnam at first, just too late to complete the double play.

Brohamer says he was about halfway to third, trotting back to the Red Sox dugout, when he heard somebody yelling that he was safe. Second base umpire Bill Deegan was saying Harrelson had his foot off the bag when he got Wills' throw.

"I looked up and saw Putnam standing there with the ball, so I started running to third. I'd already been to second," Brohamer smiled.

Burleson then hit a grounder to Devine, who saw he had Brohamer trapped between third base and home. Brohamer also realized he was a goner, but stopped, forcing a rundown so the other runners could advance.

Devine threw to Sundberg, but the ball slipped and the Texas catcher hit Brohamer in the right hip as the Red Sox player ran toward third. As the ball caromed toward the middle of the infield, Brohamer raced in with what proved to be the winning run.

The Rangers had to walk pinch hitter Jim Dwyer on purpose to load the bases then, and Jim Rice's sacrifice fly and Tony Perez' third single of the night brought in Boston's final two runs.

Clyde files grievance against Texas Rangers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — David Clyde doesn't hold any animosity toward the Texas Rangers for cutting him near the end of spring training this season when he had little chance to get a job with another team.

Clyde doesn't begrudge the Rangers for not remembering that in 1973 he was credited with saving the franchise when he packed them in as an 18-year-old pitching sensation less than a month out of high school.

But that hasn't kept Clyde from filing a grievance against the Rangers, whom he says illegally waived him from their roster while he was still injured.

"It says right there in the book they can't release you while you're injured," Clyde said Wednesday from a hospital bed where he had just undergone his second shoulder operation in four years.

"Baseball is a business and unless a person is doing the job and is competent, you can't keep him around," Clyde said. "I wasn't competent at the time."

Still, Clyde had hoped for more consideration from the Rangers.

"I once put a quarter of a million people in the stands," Clyde said. "I hoped they might put me on injured reserve and let me work myself back into shape. Then they could give me a chance or trade me. The way it turned out, it was too late to get on with another team and now nobody is calling."

Ranger Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson says Clyde's injury had nothing to do with his release.

"We didn't release Clyde because he was injured," Robinson said. "We released him because we didn't feel he could make our ball club. We didn't want to send him to the minors and we didn't think he could benefit our club."

"But I did offer him a job. I told him if he couldn't get on with another team, we'd see what he could do with our AAA club. But he never came back."

Clyde said doctors at Methodist Hospital removed some tissue from his shoulder during a 30-minute operation Tuesday.

"The doctors told me the operation was a technical success but I don't know at this time if I'll be able to pitch again," Clyde said. "I won't be able to do anything for three months and won't be able to start playing catch until December."

Despite his descent to the minor leagues, two shoulder operations and release by the Rangers, Clyde still intends another comeback attempt.

Flyers may reach Stanley Cup playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers can reach their first Stanley Cup playoff finals in five years tonight when they host the Minnesota North Stars in the fifth game of their series.

The Flyers, who lost the opener here, lead the best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff set 3-1, thanks largely to their ability to kill off the power play.

The young North Stars were unable to capitalize on 12 power plays in Tuesday night's fourth game, which the Flyers won 3-2. In the last two games, Minnesota is one for 27 on the power play.

"We're getting lots of good chances. That's not the problem," said Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor. "You've got to give (goalie) Phil Myre and their penalty killers a lot of credit, but we also need a little luck and some help from above."

The Stars ended Montreal's three-year stranglehold on the Stanley

Cup by polishing off the Canadiens in seven games. They insist they aren't worried about playing at the Spectrum here.

"The 3-1 advantage means something: the home-ice advantage doesn't," insisted Sonmor. "We've just got to win three in a row now."

Philadelphia Coach Pat Quinn said veteran Myre would start again. He is 4-0 in the playoffs with a 1.59 goals against average.

Two North Stars were added to the Minnesota injury list Tuesday. Rookie Steve Christoff, their leading goal-scorer in the playoffs, is listed as questionable with bruised ribs and defenseman Curt Giles is the same because of a badly bruised shoulder.

Fatigue may be the biggest enemy for the Flyers tonight. They rely heavily on the legs of Clarke, Bill Barber and Reggie Leach to kill off penalties, man the power play and take a regular shift.

Cowboys keep Hegman despite pending trial

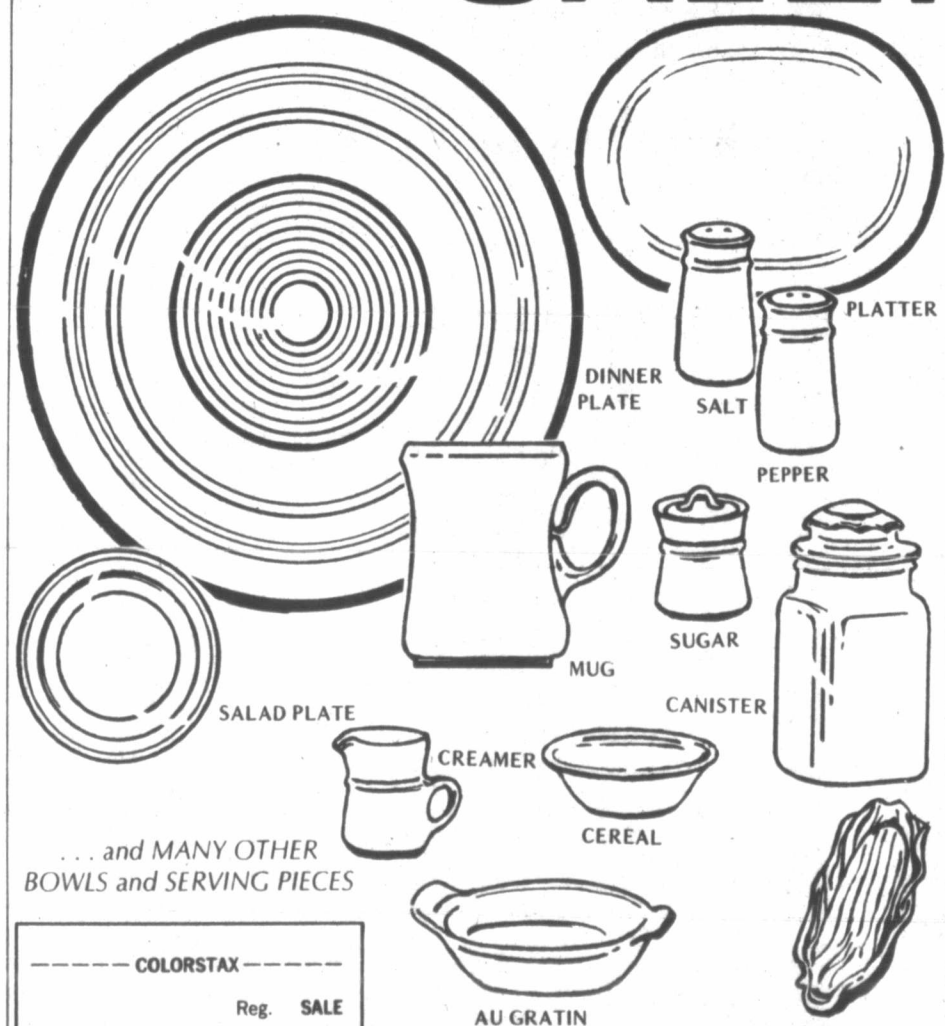

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' defense, riddled by retirements, injuries and a mid-season dismissal, apparently will not lose indicted linebacker Mike Hegman for the 1980 season, according to a televised report.

Hegman was indicted March 17 on charges he forged his roommate's name to more than $10,000 worth of checks while the roommate was out of the country, and his case was set for trial this week.

But Hegman's attorney, Spencer Kopf, Wednesday told WFAA-TV reporter Bill Macatee the trial had been re-set to Dec. 8, just two weeks before the end of the National Football League regular season.

"We found one of the state's witnesses wasn't going to be available for several months," said Kopf. "So we came down and looked at the calendar and tried to find a date. The only

Sabres feel their luck has turned

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — According to the script, the Buffalo Sabres should be applying suntan lotion or weeding gardens. Instead, they take renewed confidence and the belief that their luck has turned for tonight's fifth game of their Stanley Cup semifinal series with the New York Islanders.

"Now the pressure is off," said goaltender Bob Sauve, whose performance in a 7-4 Buffalo victory Tuesday earned him a repeat start for the first time since October.

"Now we have beat them once, we can start beating them again. Pittsburgh used to have a thing on us, where we couldn't beat them with (Denis) Herron in the net. This year, we beat them in the first game and after that every game was easy," Sauve said.

Sauve and his teammates believe they can become the third National Hockey League team to lose three games in a playoff series and come back to win four in a row. The Toronto Maple Leafs did it in 1942 and the Islanders in 1975.

But Islanders goalie Billy Smith pooh-poos the idea that Buffalo is free of the spell he cast on the Sabres during 11 straight playoff wins dating back to April 1976.

He said the five goals allowed which drove Coach Al Arbour to replace him in the net with Glenn "Chico" Resch for one period Tuesday was a momentary lapse.

"I'd have to say they scored some bad goals and there were some bad penalties in the second period."

Losing at home didn't faze the Islanders, center Butch Goring said.

"If you give up seven goals in your building, you can't win many hockey games."

New York has won all seven of its road playoff games, including the series opener that ended Buffalo's 27-game home unbeaten streak.

For the important game, Sabres Coach Scotty Bowman has installed Sauve in goal. He also said he would continue with the contingency plan he developed because of injuries to forwards Craig Ramsay, Rick Dudley and Ric Seiling, replacing them with mobile defencemen John Van Boxmeer and Lindy Ruff.

Dudley and Seiling have been playing hurt, as has team captain Danny Gare, another valuable winger.

Watson man to beat at Nelson Classic

DALLAS (AP) — Preston Trail Golf Club is fast becoming known as "Watson's Alley."

Like Ben Hogan used to ravage Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth, Tom Watson is the player you have to beat each year in the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Hogan won five Colonial Invitation tournaments. Watson has won three Nelsons in five years, including the last two.

The $300,000 Nelson tournament, which began today over the 6,993-yard, par-70 Preston Trail Golf Club, was supposed to be strictly a race for second place, even though the glamorous field included Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and the latest PGA-tour winner, Curtis Strange, who beat Trevino in a playoff in Houston.

"Sure, you have to pick Watson," said tour veteran Al Geiberger. "He puts these greens like a bandit. And he's hitting it good — real good."

Watson, a dues-paying member of Preston Trail, comes to the Nelson fresh from a week off after successive victories in the Tournament of Champions and the New Orleans Open.

He is close to a dead-even pick to pocket the $54,000 first prize. The Dallas Times-Herald had him listed as a 2-to-1 choice despite the fact there were 144 players in the field.

Watson, who has won almost $2 million and has sacked $246,525 in just 10 tournaments this year, sometimes visits Dallas when his game goes sour so Nelson himself can take a look.

In fact, Watson came to Dallas last week for a lesson on his iron play.

"Thanks to Byron, I'm striking my irons much better now," said Watson. "That will be a big help here."

Nicklaus won successive Nelsons in 1970 and 1971. He is the Nelson's all-time leader in stroke average, 69.60 for 20 competitive rounds.

However, the 40-year-old Nicklaus hasn't won a tournament since the British Open in 1978.

Trevino, who is on his game lately, has never won at the Nelson but plays the course well.

"I'm hitting the ball as good as I ever have," said Trevino. "I'd like to win it (the Nelson) one time in front of the home folks."

Watson shot a 5-under-par 275 last year to win a weather-plagued tournament.

STOLEN BASE. Astros picked wrong day to try to win

MONTREAL (AP) — The Houston Astros should have known better than to try to win a baseball game on the birthday of Montreal Expos Manager Dick Williams.

"Since I've been managing, even in the minor leagues, I can't ever remember losing a game on my birthday," said Williams, and Wednesday was no exception as the Expos rode the combined six-hit pitching of Scott Sanderson and Woodie Fryman to a 3-0 National League victory.

Sanderson, 2-2, equalled his longest outing of the season by scattering five hits over the first seven innings and was virtually invincible after discovering his curve ball in the third inning.

"The first two innings I didn't throw a breaking pitch for a strike," said Sanderson, who was nicked for three hits in that time. "Once I made the adjustment it gave (catcher) Gary Carter an extra pitch to work with."

Meanwhile, the Expos chipped away at starter Nolan Ryan, 1-2, for a first-inning run and added a pair in the second. Ron LeFlore engineered the first run by dragging a lead-off walk, stealing his 12th base of the season, advancing to third on Ryan's wild pitch and scoring on Rodney Scott's grounder back to the mound.

Ryan, who had allowed only three hits when he left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning, yielded a walk to Carter and a double to Warren Cromartie in the second inning and both runners scored. Ken Macha's infield hit brought home Carter while Wynegar in the third inning of their game in Baltimore Wednesday night. Shortstop Roy Smalley backs up the play.

Cromartie scored when Tony Bernazard rapped into a double play. Sanderson coasted until the seventh when Jose Cruz cracked a lead-off double. With one out, Sanderson fired a pitch that struck Art Howe on the flap of his batting helmet, and the Astros first baseman fell to the ground.

"It was a fastball that I was trying to get inside and at the belt," said Sanderson. "It completely got away from me. I certainly didn't mean to hit him. Before the pitch I tried to wipe the perspiration off my wrist so I could have a better grip on the ball but it was still a little slick."

Howe never lost consciousness, and was carried from the field on a stretcher. He was taken to hospital where x-rays showed that he suffered a fractured left jaw.

Sanderson, who called the Houston clubhouse to check on Howe after he reached the dugout, retired the next two batters to end the threat but Williams lifted him at the end of the inning.

"He's had a head cold for the last few days," explained Williams. "We weren't even sure if he could go today, and I had Bill Lee warming up just in case. Also, the Astros had five left-handed batters coming to the plate so I wanted to get the left-handed pitcher in there."

Fryman, who along with a few other members of the Expos' relief corps, has struggled early this season, turned in his most effective performance of the year, retiring six of the seven batters he faced.

Parker leads Pirates to victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer. When your knuckleball isn't knuckling, Dave Parker is not the man you want up at the plate.

Charlie Hough was in that paralyzing situation Wednesday night. The Los Angeles Dodger relief pitcher served up what he called "the worst pitch I think I've ever thrown" to Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder in the seventh inning.

And Parker gave it a ride into the right field at Three Rivers Stadium, leading the Pirates to a 7-6 victory over the Dodgers.

"I threw it right over the plate," said Hough. "and he hit it like you're supposed to."

While Parker was supplying the punch, newcomer Pascual Perez was supplying the pitching. Just brought up from the minors this week, the Dominican Republic native held a 6-2 lead over the Dodgers before leaving in the seventh inning. He was deprived of the victory when the Dodgers later tied the game.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds edged the New York Mets 3-2 in 12 innings; the Chicago Cubs whipped the San Diego Padres 7-4; the Montreal Expos trimmed the Houston Astros 3-2 and the St. Louis Cardinals routed the San Francisco Giants 12-2. The Atlanta-Philadelphia game was rained out.

Parker's homer was the Pirates' fourth of the night. Shots by Willie Stargell, Bill Madlock and Ed Ott had staked Perez to a 6-0 lead through five innings. Reds 3, Mets 2.

Junior Kennedy's 12th-inning single drove home Ken Griffey from second with the winning run as Cincinnati nipped New York in the third straight extra-inning game played between the two.

Griffey opened the 12th with his third hit of the game and moved up on an infield out. After Dan Driessen was walked intentionally, Kennedy singled to left, scoring the winning run.

John Stearns' pinch RBI single had tied the game for the Mets in the bottom of the ninth.

Cubs 7, Padres 4

Jerry Martin broke a fifth-inning tie with a home run, triggering Chicago past San Diego. Martin's shot put the Cubs ahead 3-2 against Rick Wise, 2-2. Then Scot Thompson lined a one-out double and scored on Mike Tyson's second hit of the game, a single.

Cub starter Mike Krukow, 3-1, worked 52-3 innings, giving up three Padre runs on eight hits. Chicago used three pitchers in relief, including Bruce Sutter, who gained his eighth save.

Expos 3, Astros 0

Scott Sanderson combined with Woodie Fryman on a six-hitter and Rodney Scott and Ken Macha each drove in a run to lead Montreal over Houston.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead off Nolan Ryan, 1-2, in the first inning without a hit, Scott driving the run home with a grounder. Macha brought home another run for the Expos with an RBI single in a two-run second inning.

Cardinals 12, Giants 2

Bob Forsch pitched seven innings of three-hit ball and contributed a three-run homer, pacing St. Louis over San Francisco. Forsch's homer in the sixth inning was the fifth of his career and the second this season.

The 30-year-old right-hander struck out seven and walked one before a sore heel acted up and Jim Kaat relieved in the eighth.

Last-place teams in first place

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN

AP Sports Writer. No, it's not April Fool's Day, but if the American League season ended right now you could see the Oakland A's and the Toronto Blue Jays in the playoffs.

Oh, the Blue Jays would first have to win a one-game East Division shootout with the New York Yankees, but why quibble when two last-place teams that combined for a 107-217 record a year ago (Oakland 54-108, Toronto 53-109) are enjoying the rarefied atmosphere of first place.

Dave Stieb scattered 10 hits — he was backed by five double plays — and Al Woods and Otto Velez hit two-run homers as the Blue Jays whipped the California Angels 7-3 Wednesday night. That gave the Jays a club record-tying fifth consecutive victory and they remained deadlocked for first place in the AL East with the Yankees, who beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1.

The 4-year-old Blue Jays' only other five-game winning streak was Aug. 20-23, 1978.

The A's dropped a 2-1 squeaker to the Cleveland Indians but still hold a one-game lead in the West over the Chicago White Sox, who were routed by the Kansas City Royals 12-5.

Elsewhere, the Baltimore Orioles downed the Minnesota Twins 6-6, the Boston Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 7-4 in 11 innings and the Seattle Mariners nipped the Detroit Tigers 7-6 in 10.

who homered earlier, added a sacrifice fly after Baltimore blew a 6-1 lead. Bumby opened the eighth with a walk off loser Mike Marshall, 0-3, and raced to third when third baseman John Casino fielded Mark Belanger's bunt single and overthrew first base. Bumby scored as shortstop Roy Smalley had difficulty fielding Singleton's chopper.

Red Sox 7, Rangers 4

Boston scored three unearned runs in the 11th inning with the help of two Texas errors, one by newly acquired glove man Bud Harrelson. Jack Brohamer started things when Texas pitcher Adrian Devine slipped on the soggy infield while trying to field a slow roller. Carl Yastrzemski grounded to second but shortstop Harrelson, making his first American League appearance after being signed for infield insurance, missed the bag after taking second baseman Bump Wills' throw.

In the confusion, Brohamer went to third. He was trapped on Rick Burleson's grounder back to the mound but scored the go-ahead run, when catcher Jim Sundberg's throw hit him as he scampered back to third.

Mariners 7, Tigers 6

Joe Simpson's two-out single delivered the winning run. Loser Pat Underwood walked Tom Paciorek leading off the 10th and pinch runner Rodney Craig was sacrificed to second. Larry Milbourne was walked intentionally and Bill Stein flied out before Simpson's game-winning homer.

Seattle's Jim Anderson smacked his third home run of the season with one out in the ninth to tie the game 6-6. The Tigers had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the ninth on Dave Stegman's RBI double.

Baseball negotiations focus on pensions and compensation

NEW YORK (AP) — The major issues of pensions and compensation for free agent signings were expected to be discussed at today's session of negotiations between the Major League Players Association and the owners' Player Relations Committee.

Progress was minimal at the talks Wednesday and even federal mediator Kenneth Moffett was beginning to sound and safety, the definition of a salary and other administrative matters.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, said management representatives suggested discussing the difficult compensation question near the end of Thursday's meeting.

"Why should I bring up something that would be subtracting from what the players have?" he said. "As far as compensation, it's their issue."

Management wants teams signing top free agents to make replacement players from their rosters available to the teams losing those players.

Asked to charterize the talks so far, Miller said: "The overall flavor is more of disagreement than agreement."

DOCTOR IN FLIGHT. Philadelphia 76ers forward Julius "Doctor" Erving (6) flies through the air on his way to sinking a shot during first-half action Wednesday night in the second game of the NBA championships in Los Angeles. Lakers Earvin Johnson (32) and Spencer Haywood try to avoid Erving's flight.

(AP Photo)

INTIMIDATION. Philadelphia 76ers Darryl Dawkins (53) intimidates Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) into missing a shot during second half action. Dawkins scored 25 points, brought down seven rebounds and blocked two shots as the 76ers evened the series 1-1 with a 107-104 victory.

76'ers prove to be 'superior' to Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham was getting sick of reading that the Los Angeles Lakers were much better than his 76ers.

"All I'd read or heard for the past three days is how the Lakers are far superior," said Cunningham, shaking his head. "Now I'll be reading that we're far superior."

The 76ers were vastly superior through the first three quarters of Wednesday night's second game of the National Basketball Association Championship series, then were — more importantly — slightly better in the closing moments to take a 107-104 victory and even the series at one game each.

The way Cunningham sees it as the playoffs shift to Philadelphia for games Saturday and Sunday, any claims of superiority one way or the other are premature.

"The teams are a lot alike," he said, "and looking at the first two games (the Lakers won 109-101 Sunday), you see two teams that want the championship very badly."

The 76ers dominated the game for the first three periods and led 6-71 heading into the final quarter. The Lakers, however, staged a furious rally to close to within 99-98 with 2:26 remaining. But a pressure-packed jumper by Bobby Jones at the top of the key with seven seconds remaining gave Philadelphia the winning margin.

Los Angeles had a final chance to tie it, but Norm Nixon missed from three-point range with three seconds remaining.

The 76ers to a man said they weren't surprised that the Lakers, who trailed by 23 points at one time, rallied in the fourth quarter.

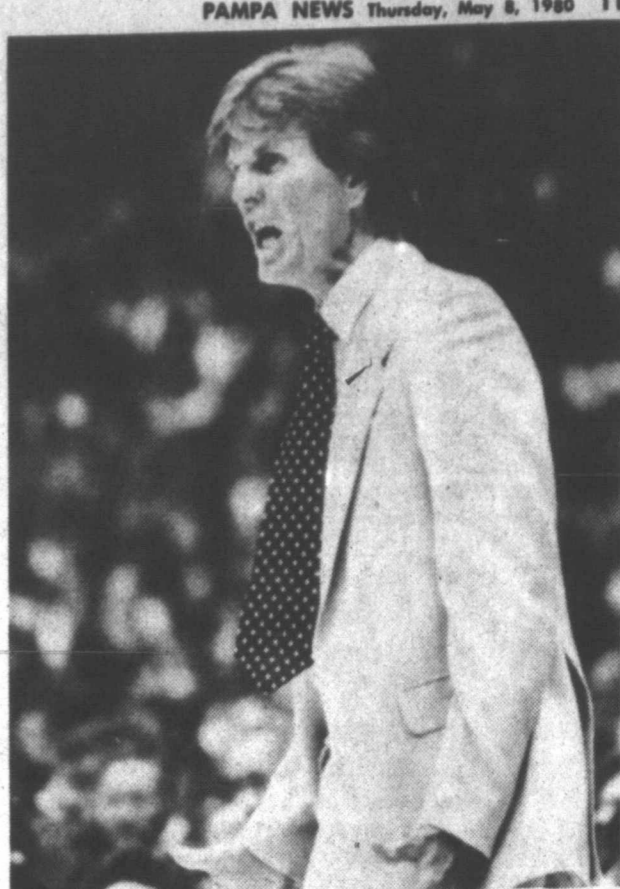

"We know they're an explosive team," said Darryl Dawkins, who led Philadelphia with 25 points. "We didn't relax; they just played real well in the final quarter."

Guard Maurice Cheeks, frequently getting open shots while the Lakers were double-teaming Erving, scored 23 points — hitting 11 of 12 from the floor — and Erving also had 23.

The Lakers were led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 38 points, with Jamaal Wilkes scoring 18, Jim Chones 14 and Earvin "Magic" Johnson 13.

"I thought we played courageously in the second half," said Coach Paul Westhead, whose Lakers trailed 59-41 at the intermission. "We're now a stronger, more confident team. I feel that way because we came back under difficult circumstances."

FRUSTRATION. Los Angeles Lakers coach Paul Westhead lets out a yell in frustration as a call by the officials goes against the Lakers during the second game of the NBA championships in Los Angeles. The Lakers came from a 20-point deficit in the fourth quarter to within one point but fell to the Philadelphia 76ers 107-104 to tie the best of seven series 1-1.

NBA playoffs lack TV appeal

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writers

In some cities, the NBA on CBS isn't on CBS. The game might be dribbled over to an independent station but, then again, it may not be seen at all.

About 15 of CBS' 200 affiliates aren't showing the National Basketball Association's championship series between Los Angeles and Philadelphia. WSPA in Spartanburg, S.C., one of the key dissenters, hasn't had anybody storm its station in protest, either.

"We have an obligation to show programs that people want to see," said David Handy, station-program manager of WSPA. "All the evidence that we have is that not too many people want to watch it."

The NBA's final round is akin to baseball's World Series and football's Super Bowl in capping a season and crowning a champion but certainly not in television appeal.

While the last Super Bowl game and five of the seven 1979 World Series games were in prime time, no NBA playoff game will get the high-visibility time slots normally reserved for "M.A.S.H." and "The Dukes of Hazzard."

The reason is simple. The NBA just doesn't attract enough viewers to warrant prime time exposure. Although CBS Sports would love to air one of its prize products when more people are watching TV, the network's affiliates and entertainment division rejected the idea.

So Wednesday night's second game was seen live in the east at 11:30 p.m., but on tape on all of CBS' West Coast affiliates, except Los Angeles. If the series goes to a sixth game Friday, May 16, in Philadelphia, starting at 8:05 p.m. EDT, it would be seen on tape-delay almost everywhere. The sixth game could be a championship-clinching game, and it would be a sorry thing for sports fans to learn the result on their late news stations.

But that's what happens when the NBA's ratings become little league compared to some of the other major sports shows on the weekend and, of course, any entertainment programming at night — even though the league's regular-season ratings were up 12 percent and its playoffs are up 16 percent.

"We carried the NBA for four seasons. Each year the audience level dropped," said Handy. "During those four years, the CBS stations in Atlanta and Charlotte (N.C.) both stopped carrying the NBA. We thought if the two markets east and west of us stopped covering the NBA, we would get some fallout. But we didn't have any growth."

"The audience was so low we couldn't find people interested in buying local sales. The ratings for golf and tennis are also low, but at least there is some sponsor interest."

"The other two networks were trouncing us from January to May. They were beating us with movies."

So WSPA decided to switch and not fight anymore. On Sundays, the station's viewers can see "Virgil Ward's Championship Fishing Show," movies, "Fishing with Roland Martin" and "Sports Afield."

"They all do better than the NBA did," Handy said.

The tipoff:

Amazing are the lengths some people will go to in spreading the sports gospel. Andy Russell, the former all-pro linebacker, leads a foray of Pittsburgh Steelers to far-off Singapore to put on a football clinic for the American colony. Then Andy hops up to Kuwait to instruct the sheikhs and their American-educated offspring on the nuances of football.

Q. I've heard all the blame for so many bases being stolen on the San Francisco Giants this season is not due to the poor throwing of catcher Milt May but to their pitchers' lack of ability in holding runners on base. What do you think? — S.D., Sacramento, Calif.

I think the defense of May by the Giant bosses is a ploy to justify the startling sum he got as a free agent — $1.4 million for five years for a fair-hitting, scatter-armed receiver. Some of the press-box pundits are already calling him Venus de Milo. His throwing in the early season has been pathetic. Maybe it's true that Ed Whitson, for instance, among the pitchers kicks his leg too high in his delivery, giving the runner an edge. But no one ever had a higher kick than former Giant hurling great Juan Marichal, and the guys on base didn't run wild against him.

Borg leads tennis in '80's

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

What's happened to "The Kid"? Were all of us premature in predicting that the innate talent and competitive steel of young John McEnroe would propel him — not in a few years but right now — to the pinnacle of men's tennis?

What's happened to Jimmy Connors? Have a marriage and the experience of becoming a father cooled the fiercest temper in the game and transformed Peck's Bad Boy into a Frank Merriwell — honest and true, subdued, ready to regain lost honors while the whole world cheers?

What's happened to Bjorn Borg? Will the frozen-visaged Swede continue to spurn most American tournaments and leave it to McEnroe and Connors to decide between themselves which should be top contender for his throne?

Such are the conundrums as pro tennis faces the decade of the Eighties.

"I'm not thinking of No. 2, I'm only interested in No. 1," says a determined Connors, the southpaw court assassin who ruled the sport for five years.

"I've had some problems," insists McEnroe. "I'll be okay."

Borg remains characteristically silent. He hasn't lost a tennis match since Roscoe Tanner beat him in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open last September.

He is indisputably the best. No one else — not Connors, not McEnroe, not Guillermo Vilas, not anybody — is close. This summer he goes after his fifth straight Wimbledon and takes a bride, marrying Romania's Mariana Simionescu, in a lavish Riviera ceremony.

At age 23, he has the world by the ear-lobe.

Meanwhile, Connors and McEnroe are prepared to square off for the second straight week — this time in the finals of the $500,000 WCT Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills.

Last week it was Dallas — the showdown of Lamar Hunt's WCT tour — and Connors was the victor in four sets, rallying to crush "The Kid" with a savage, whirlwind attack — vintage Connors — that left McEnroe numb and glassy-eyed.

McEnroe lost to Connors in the Pro Indoors at Philadelphia. He bowed to both Jose-Luis Clerc and Vilas as the Americans lost in the Davis Cup to Argentina. Vilas beat him again at Monte Carlo.

McEnroe's fiber appeared to go soft in Dallas. He surrendered meekly. It was not the McEnroe of 1978 and 1979.

Singing . . . Sightseeing . . . Surfing . . .

TEXT BY DEBBIE DUKE
Pampa News Intern and Concert Choir Member

After months of planning, fund-raising, and rehearsing, the "Golden Voices" of the Pampa High School Concert Choir made their way to Tempe, Ariz., last week to compete in the Rocky Mountain Music Festival where they took superior ratings.

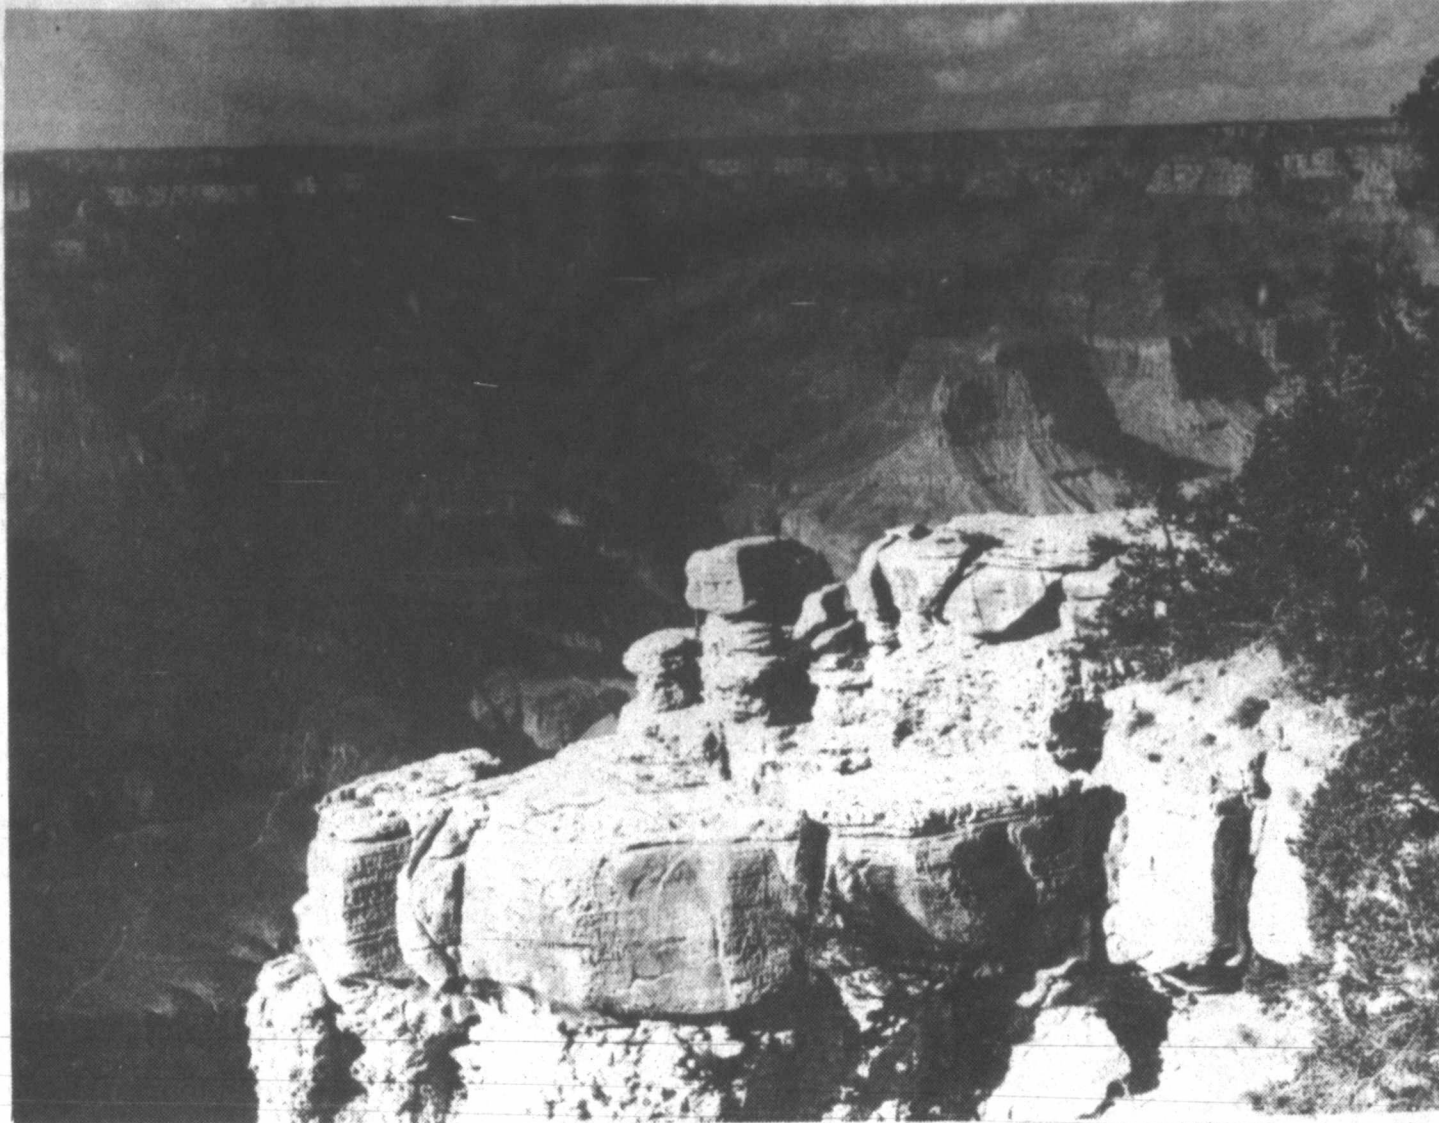

While on the five-day tour, the group sang concerts at West Texas State University in Canyon and Wayland Baptist College in Plainview. Following an overnight stay in Roswell, N. M., the group endured an eleven-hour bus ride to Tempe, where they competed the next morning at Arizona State University. Both the Concert Mixed and the Concert Women's choirs received first division superior ratings for their performances.

"It was probably one of the finest performances I have ever conducted," director John Woicikowski reflected on the Concert Choir's performance. Woicikowski, who is in his eighth year as Pampa High choir director, will be leaving the music profession after the completion of this year to take on another form of employment.

One highlight of the trip was an afternoon at Big Surf, a recreation area in between Tempe and Phoenix, providing tourists with swimming and surfing fun with the help of man-made waves.

Later, the group departed Tempe, heading for the Grand Canyon. The choir sang a vespers service on the North Rim which spectators and tourists seemed to enjoy, as well as the young singers. After a one-night stay at the Canyon, the group loaded the buses at 5 a.m. Pacific Time, heading for home. They arrived in Pampa at approximately 11 p.m.

Although the trip is over, the year is not quite finished for the choirs. The annual choral department banquet is scheduled for 7 p.m. May 16 in the M.K. Brown Heritage Room, followed by Spring Festival, May 22, in the Pampa High School Field House. The choir will also perform at the vespers and graduation exercises May 28 and 29.

RIPPLING THE PIANO KEYS and singing a few notes, Mary Jane Johnson checks out the grand piano at M.K. Brown Auditorium, where she will perform Friday at 8 p.m. The concert, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, will spotlight Mrs. Johnson in selections by Handel, Mozart, Rodrigo, Copeland, Puccini and others. A former all-stater in choir at Pampa High School, the voice instructor at Amarillo College was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera's recent regional auditions.

Operatic job-hunting is vicious circle

By TINA McCLOY

Mary Jane Johnson can relate to college students trying to find a job. As she discovered recently in Houston, the world of opera is much the same — you won't be hired if you don't have experience, but you can't gain experience unless someone's willing to give you a chance. It's a vicious circle.

"They told me I was too advanced for the opera theater program — the people used for the chorus or for bit parts with the Houston opera," says the former Pampa resident, who auditioned at the Houston Grand Opera a couple of weeks ago. "But they also told me I wasn't well known enough and didn't have enough experience for the Houston opera."

"It's probably harder to break in at Houston or Santa Fe than at the Met," says the former Pampa resident, now a voice instructor at Amarillo College. "They will not hire anybody who does not have a big name — someone who's sung with the Metropolitan Opera, the New York City Opera, San Francisco or the Chicago Lyric."

The four major companies never have trouble drawing a crowd, but the smaller companies need a big name to fill the seats, she explains.

"I'm at the point where my voice is starting to do things," says Mrs. Johnson. "I can't start my career at 50 — I've got to do it now."

George Biffle, former Amarillo High choir director who's now at AC, agrees that her voice is "doing things." "Vocal ability is almost a direct geometric progression — as you get older the voice matures. It's gotten to the point where Mary Jane's voice is usable from a maturation standpoint."

"It's not even at its fullest peak now, but it should get better and better," adds Biffle, who often performs with her during recruiting trips to area high schools.

In March, Mrs. Johnson had a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity — a chance to audition at the Metropolitan Opera in New York. One of 26 finalists from across the United States, she earned the expense-paid trip by garnering top honors at the Met's Southwest Regional Auditions in San Antonio.

She didn't win the Met's semi-finals, but she used the opportunity to attend some operas and try out for the New York City Opera Company, directed by Beverly Sills.

"I want to sing anywhere they'll let me," says Mrs. Johnson. "I'd like to sing the New York City Opera, and I finally got the time of day from them the other day. A lot is who you know."

"New York City will hire you if you fit a part they have open," adds the bubbly singer. Last month's auditions give her the chance to return for later auditions.

A 1968 graduate of Pampa High School, the former Mary Jane Rose was in all-state choir two years. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Rose, she went to Texas Tech on scholarship, sang with the Lubbock Symphony and earned a music education degree.

She met her husband, David Stith Johnson, in Lubbock. "He played basketball at Tech and I sang the national anthem at the games," she laughs. "We were quite a duo."

She taught three years at McMurry College in Abilene and studied with Coleen Blondeau of Abilene Christian University. She then earned a master's degree in performance at West Texas State University, studying under Jerry Doan, who's now at Arizona State.

Mrs. Johnson teaches private voice lessons to 20 AC students and to 30 high school students. For two years, she's gone to Denton once a month for coaching sessions with Harold Heiberg of North Texas State University.

Teachers attend state convention

Several Pampa schoolteachers were honored in Abilene at annual convention of Kappa Kappa Kappa, a national honorary teachers' sorority.

Nickie Gordon, Laura Penick, Kay Crouch, Pat Southerland, Wilma Hogan and Jo Johnson, all members of the Gamma chapter in Pampa, attended the convention.

Mrs. Myrl Cable, formerly of Pampa and now of Norman, Okla., gave official greetings from the national KKI. A former Pampa schoolteacher and member of the Gamma chapter, Mrs. Cable served two years as the state president and also served as national president.

Pat Southerland of Pampa, installed as first vice president, also provided entertainment with a group from Midland.

Special recognition was given to Alene Coker, Nickie Gordon, Hazel Parker, Dora Meech, Faye Stowell and Lily Nuckols, charter members of the state organization.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

A friend of ours is a veterinarian who grew up on a ranch, loves horses, and is glad to vaccinate them when the need arises. But he hates dogs and avoids giving them shots if possible.

I asked him, "What's wrong with vaccinating dogs?" He sighed as he told me, "They bite!"

He went on to explain that colts don't kick him, kittens don't scratch him, but puppies yelp when the needle hits and almost always bite the nearest person, invariably the vet.

He was wealthy enough to select his animal patients and rule out the ones he disliked. But many vets must surely be forced to accept all comers.

That reminded me of older marriages, yours and mine. At this late date, we can't be choosy about what qualities we like or don't like in our longtime mates. We made our choices many years ago. What we see is what we've got.

If our mates let out a yelp now and then, I believe it is our Christian and marital and humane duty to understand that the protests are natural reactions to unexpected hurts. All of us object vigorously to something sometime. And when we're fired up, we bite.

The bitten one is usually the spouse because that is the person we're closest to.

I get mad because somebody runs a stop sign and barely misses me, because a gossip acquaintance attacks my good friends or when (as happened once) I make coffee for the Sunday School class and a woman screeches, "What idiot made this stuff? Nobody could drink anything this strong!"

When such blows hit me, I fume and fume and fly through the air, straight home to Otis. He knows I've been a yelper all my life when I've been hurt. He doesn't mind. He understands that another day may find him emitting a howl because somebody stepped on his toes without cause.

Expecting a little justified yelping should be part of any marriage. And by the time a marriage has survived a quarter or half a century, the mates ought to accept the ranting and raving, sympathize with it and try to help it run its course as quickly as possible.

By the same token, we need to keep our yelps at a minimum. I hope I get my gripes done in five minutes now. I used to carry on for hours. I know I owe it to Otis to upset his happy disposition, as well as my own, as little as I can.

DEAR LOUISE: My old man has always been real mean. But the older he gets, the meaner he is. Nothing suits him any more, not me or the neighbors or the government or nothing. I've stood it for 40 years but I'm about to leave him before I die of exasperation from listening to him growl all the time. Would I be crazy to take out because of this? L. C.

DEAR L. C.: In my opinion, you would. A new life might be even more irritating. And it would be lonely besides.

Why should you want to be rid of yelps that have been part of your life for 40 years? We don't develop new traits in older age. We just emphasize them a little more. So I should think you would be immune to your crochety husband's bitter reactions to everything.

Apparently the growling is your only objection to him. You'd better balance his good traits against it. And don't tell me doesn't have any good ones. Everybody has good and bad ones. If we love our older mates as we should, we will opt for enjoying their better points. Remember we took them for better or worse.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife had a heart attack ten years ago. The doc says she's fine now but she don't believe him. She says she can't do any work or go any place because she might keel over and die. I don't want her to do that because I love her. But I'd sure like to take some trips. We've got the time and the money to see some of the world. Can you suggest any way for me to get her out of the dumps? R. A.

DEAR R. A.: Since you have money, I believe you should spend some of it on the best psychiatrist you can find, one who is recommended by your medical doctor or by a friend who has been helped by psychiatric therapy. Your wife obviously won't listen to you or your family doctor because she knows you so well. A new face, if attached to a competent mind and a good personality, might do what you have been unable to do.

If you don't want to do that, you might ask her to take a one-day trip to another town with you. Promise to bring her home if she becomes ill. She might find that she enjoys new scenery, new stores, new faces.

If you love her, you'll keep trying to help her. And if she loves you, she'll finally listen. Good luck.

Underweights, overweights have higher death rates

CHICAGO (AP) — Thin may be in — but a few pounds more might be much healthier, say researchers who compared two weight studies.

Overweight people long have been known to have a higher death rate than those of average weight. But it now appears that underweight people also have higher death rates than people whose poundage is average, a group of researchers has concluded.

The researchers, in an article published in this week's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, challenge a 1959 insurance companies study which said the lower a person's weight, the lower his risk of death.

Their conclusion was reached after they took information on body build and blood pressure collected from insurance companies in 1959, and compared it with information gathered from a random sample of 5,200 people in the Boston suburb of Framingham from 1948 through 1972.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By Joe Graedon

Spring has sprung, and close behind the daffodils comes poison ivy. It's often hard to avoid contact with those shiny leaves and if you're sensitive to the stuff that means a red rash and a terrible itch.

Over the years home remedies have been suggested to neutralize the nasty chemicals in poison ivy, poison sumac and poison oak.

The theory went that if you applied baking soda, hydrogen peroxide, kerosene, iodine, or buttermilk to the skin soon after contact you could prevent a rash or reduce the severity of the blisters. Unfortunately, none of these recommendations have proved effective.

My mother always told me to wash with green laundry soap after she caught me near the notorious plant. Her suggestion never worked very well either, since by the time I got around to heeding her the damage was already done.

People who are really sensitive to poison ivy should wash within a few minutes of contact if they want to prevent problems. Any soap will work. And they'd better shuck off all their clothes and gingerly remove shoes because continued contact with anything (including an animal) that has been contaminated will bring on the rash just as surely as direct exposure.

Once the red rash and itching make an appearance there really isn't much you can do to halt the inevitable. Although drugstores offer a wide array of non-prescription products designed to relieve the discomfort of ivy and oak poisoning, most aren't terribly effective.

One of the more popular ingredients in many preparations is zirconium (Ivarest, Poison Ivy Cream, Rhuli Cream, Rhulihist, Rhuli Spray, Zircostan and Zotox). According to an expert for the American Pharmaceutical Association, "tests have found it completely ineffective."

If zirconium were just worthless it wouldn't be so bad, but some sensitive individuals react to this chemical by developing little benign growths on their skin called granulomas.

A couple of months may pass before these painful lumps show up so it's easy to see how people would not associate them with the poison ivy preparation they used in the spring.

Zirconium isn't the only ingredient to be wary of. Antihistamines like tripelemamine and pyrilamine and local anesthetics like benzocaine are not very helpful for relieving the pain and itch of poison ivy. And they can create problems for susceptible individuals.

These ingredients can add to the victims' woes by causing a red, itchy, allergic reaction on-top of skin already red and itchy. Many people don't realize that the medicine they have been using has been complicating their treatment and slowing down recovery.

So what can people do if they are unfortunate enough to come down with a case of ivy or oak poisoning? Well, it's a mild case I would recommend simple calamine lotion.

Cool compresses made of Burrow's solution (diluted 1:20) may also bring some relief, used as a 20-minute soak four to six times a day. Aspirin taken orally can also help reduce the misery.

If the skin reaction is really bad or covers a large part of the body a doctor should definitely be consulted. He can prescribe cortisone-type drugs such as Prednisone. When only used for one or two weeks, side effects are rare and the drug can provide impressive relief.

Whenever a drug like Prednisone is used, however, it should not be discontinued abruptly. A gradual reduction in dose will prevent a flare-up or a rebound rash.

Naturally, the best solution to the problem of poison ivy is prevention. Children should be taught how to recognize and avoid the distinctive three-leaved stalk. And adults should be just as vigilant when working in the backyard or strolling through the woods.

REGENCY SANDWICH LOAF

Sandwich loaf is a pleaser

Editor's note: The following recipe, and many others, will be featured tonight at the Southern Kitchens Cooking School, sponsored by local businesses and the Progressive Farmer magazine. Free tickets for the event, to begin at 7:30 p.m. in M.K. Brown Auditorium, are available at several Pampa locations.

A Mother's Day gift that will be appreciated and remembered takes imagination to conceive. Even for someone we know as well as our mothers, it's hard to come up with a new idea for Mother's Day. This year, why not offer a gift that will bring more pleasure than any that can be purchased — pack up a picnic and take it to mom.

This special day calls for a memorable main course. For a change in sandwich fare, try a sandwich loaf. Easy to serve, the triple-decker can be made ahead of time and refrigerated until time to eat.

REGENCY SANDWICH LOAF

Ham salad filling:
 1 1/4 cups finely chopped ham
 1 can (8-oz.) crushed pineapple, drained
 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
 one-third cup chopped peanuts
 1/4 cup Miracle Whip salad dressing
 1 tablespoon Kraft pure prepared mustard
 1 teaspoon ground ginger

Chicken salad filling:
 2 cups finely chopped chicken
 1/2 cup chopped celery
 one-third cup pickle relish

one-third cup Miracle Whip salad dressing one-third cup chopped pimiento
 1 hard-cooked egg, chopped

Cheese filling:
 2 1/2 cups (10-oz.) shredded Kraft sharp natural cheddar cheese
 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
 2 tablespoons green onion slices
 1/4 cup Miracle Whip salad dressing

1 unsliced white sandwich loaf,
 16 inches long
 Miracle Whip
 3 pkgs. (8 oz.) Philadelphia Brand cream cheese

Combine ingredients for fillings; mix lightly. Remove crusts from sides and top of bread; cut in 4 lengthwise slices. Spread each slice with salad dressing and a filling. Stack layers; chill thoroughly.

(Sandwich loaf can be prepared to this point, wrapped securely and refrigerated one or two days. Frost before serving.)

Combine softened cream cheese and one-third cup salad dressing, mixing until well blended. Frost sandwich loaf, reserving 1/4 cup cream cheese mixture for decorating with pastry tube. Garnish as desired. Cover lightly; chill. Let stand at room temperature 30 minutes before serving.
 Makes 12 servings.

Frozen juice is excellent buy for costwatchers

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports that frozen orange juice concentrate is an excellent buy for cost and value-conscious consumers.

It takes one and one-half medium-sized oranges to squeeze four ounces of juice, at a cost of 15 cents or more. With concentrate approximately $1.11 for a 12-ounce can, four ounces of juice from concentrate cost about 9 cents. Another advantage of the frozen product is its consistency. Processors blend out-of-season juices and concentrates to insure perfect taste at all times, regardless of seasonal changes in the taste of the fresh fruit.

According to the USDA's report, the convenience of frozen concentrate, as well as its high quality, have earned an enormous and still growing market.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: According to a recent article in the Pacific Stars and Stripes, an American serviceman stationed in Korea wrote a Dear Abby letter telling you how sad it was to see those guys run to mail call every day hoping to get a letter, and walk away each time empty-handed and downhearted.

You published his letter and asked your readers to write to these lonely servicemen. The response was overwhelming! More than 10,000 letters came pouring in from school classes, church groups and concerned citizens. (One kid sent his entire allowance — $1 — to make sure "his" soldier had enough money to return a letter.) Many sent postage stamps and promises of cookies and goodies to come. It was a super show of support for the American serviceman.

What a break for those guys stationed in Korea. How about doing the same for us non-commissioned servicemen stationed in Okinawa? We're also far from home, lonesome, and would love to get mail. I promise you, you'll make a lot of guys happy.

IN THE SERVICE IN OKINAWA

DEAR IN: You're on! Anyone out there who wants to correspond with a serviceperson on Okinawa — and don't forget women are stationed there, too — address your letters to: CONCERNED NCO; USACC-J, SB (PROV) BOX 244; APO SF 96331.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the widow who says older women are turned off by men who suggest that they'd sure like a good home-cooked meal. I happen to be an older man who has dated a lot of older women, so may I respond?

There are a lot more older women around than older men, so since they're lonely, let them make the overture by saying they were "forced to buy tickets" to something and need an escort, etc.

Most men who live alone are tired of restaurant food, so why not admit they'd appreciate a good home-cooked meal? Nearly every widow I've dated is loaded from what her husband left her, and if I try to get romantic I find out that she may have contributed to her husband's death by denying him love, so the poor guy killed himself making money to forget his sexual boredom.

Personally, I'd rather eat alone at the Elks Club than take out some over-the-hill broad and plunk down $12 or $15 for her dinner. Plus, most of them can drink me under the table, and at today's prices, I can't afford it.

CALIFORNIA WIDOWER

DEAR WIDOWER: Now let's hear it from the distaff side:

DEAR ABBY: A widow wrote to say that most widows are turned off by gentlemen who say, "Gee, I'd sure enjoy a good home-cooked meal," and if a man really wants to make a big hit with a lady he should say, "I certainly miss company at mealtime. What time shall I call for you?"

Well, that woman can speak for herself. I'm a widow who loves to cook, and I'd consider it a pleasure to show a man how well I perform in the kitchen. So far the men I've met seem interested only in how well I perform in the bedroom!

Onions, garlic not really good for blood

For centuries, onions and garlic have been reputed to be good for the blood. As it turns out, according to a health article in a current women's magazine, both contain a compound that inhibits aggregation, or clumping, of platelets — elements in blood involved in clot formation.

When abnormally active, platelets are believed to have a role in causing strokes and possibly heart attacks. Medical researchers at George Washington University have purified extracts of garlic and onion and found that they do stop platelets from clumping.

Millsap practicing in alleys these days

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Blind country music kingpin Ronnie Millsap wants to improve his bowling average.

Millsap has neglected bowling while his singing career has rolled along and knocked down some of country music's top awards.

By perfecting his approach steps and using the same form repeatedly to throw the ball, Millsap once boasted a 161 average.

But lately he has been more involved with his singing.

"I haven't bowled in a while, but I used to go a lot."

the likeable Millsap said in an interview in an office at RCA Records.

"When you have success, you get too busy to do some things. I enjoyed it, and I need the exercise."

Millsap, 34, blind since birth, is the only singer voted male vocalist of the year three times (1974, 1976, 1977) by the Country Music Association. His current two-sided hit, "My Heart" and "Silent Night," has been zipping up the country music charts as quickly as his previous hits like "It Was Almost Like a Song," "Only One Love in My Life,"

"Legend in My Time," "Night Things" and "Pure Love."

One of his occupational hazards has been falling off the stage, which has happened two or three times. Now, before his concerts, he paces the steps between his piano and the edge of the stage.

But that doesn't always work. Once in Bakersfield, Calif., he paced off the distance only to fall off the stage when arrangements were altered.

"I fell right in this lady's lap," recalled Millsap, who's able to discuss his blindness with humor, and often jokes about it. "It startled me and her, too."

"I don't feel bad about it. It's happened to Charley Pride and Waylon Jennings also."

"I don't consider it (blindness) a handicap but more of an inconvenience. But I would be better at what I do if I could see, because I could read faces and do arrangements myself. I'd definitely be a whole lot better at music."

He vowed to have more fun at his concerts this year. He was disenchanted with some 1979 concerts that were in theaters-in-the-round and drew stuffy audiences. It was like throwing a gutter ball.

"When the fun level gets below 90 percent, you need to take a look at things," Millsap said. "Some of the theaters-in-the-round and the showrooms didn't appreciate my music as much as I wanted."

"Slick shows don't appeal to me. I felt a little stiff. I enjoy auditorium shows where the audience isn't inhibited."

Election blues follow voting

HOUSTON (AP) — If they gave an election and nobody came, Rae Lynn Merriam and Frederica White would know exactly what to do.

Ms. Merriam, a Democrat, and Ms. White, a Republican, both attended precinct conventions last Saturday for their respective parties following the Texas primary election.

And both were the only ones to show up.

"I just went to the convention to see it," Ms. White said. "It happened as an accident."

Since she was the only GOP member there, Ms. White said she made motions, seconded them and passed them — all with nary a dissenting vote.

Ms. Merriam had the honor of naming all 11 precinct delegates to the Democratic party caucus and was named permanent precinct chairwoman.

By Tuesday, she had found two other Democrats in her precinct willing to be delegates.

"I didn't care if they were for (President) Carter or (Sen. Edward) Kennedy," she said. "I was just looking for interested people who would attend the convention."

"It's grinding, hard work," said Ms. White. "When I realized what I got myself into, I knew I would hate myself Sunday morning. And I did."

FARM SCENE

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pinched by a declining world supply, sugar prices are expected to continue climbing at least gradually in the foreseeable future, says the Agriculture Department.
Although U.S. farmers indicate they will boost production of sugarbeets this year, it will not be enough to offset the higher prices, the department said Tuesday.
Officials said the world crop for 1979-80 is estimated at 85.4 million metric tons of raw sugar, down 6.1 percent from the 90.9 million produced in 1978-79.
The new estimate also is down 2.6 percent from the department's initial forecast last November of 87.7 million metric tons.
On Feb. 6, however, USDA warned that this year's output would be less than the forecast of last November, possibly by "as much as one million" metric tons. The new figure actually was a drop of 2.3 million.
A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.
The report said the Soviet Union's beet sugar production "is sharply reduced from last season and cane sugar output is down considerably among some major producers — Brazil, Cuba, India and Thailand."

In all, the reduced 1979-80 sugar output is expected to fall short of world consumption by about 5.5 million metric tons, the report said.
The U.S. raw sugar price, based on the New York spot market, averaged 21.85 cents a pound in the first three months of this year, about 45 percent higher than in January-March of 1979, it said.
In early May, the price was more than 27 cents a pound.
Those prices compare with an average of 14.85 cents a pound over the entire 1978-79 marketing year, which ended last Aug. 31, the report said.
"Although U.S. sugar output in 1980-81 is forecast to be up, and sugar consumption will likely be reduced — mainly from market inroads by corn sweeteners — the U.S. raw sugar price will probably strengthen in 1980-81," the report said.
"This result is based on early indications of another deficit in world production relative to consumption following the large shortfall in 1979-80."
U.S. wholesale prices of refined sugar rose to nearly 30 cents a pound, on the average, in the first quarter, and increased further to about 35 cents by early May. At retail, sugar prices in the first quarter averaged 29.2 cents a pound, nearly 19 percent more than a year earlier, the report said.
"Both wholesale and retail prices of refined sugar are likely to be higher at year's end, in marked contrast to the stability of these prices during 1977-79," it said.

Retail prices of sugar-containing products are also expected to increase in 1980, but less than the price of sugar. This is the opposite of what occurred in 1979.
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has sold contract rights for 250,000 metric tons of corn that originally had been destined for the Soviet Union, the first of a series of sales scheduled in the coming weeks.
After President Carter ordered a partial embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union Jan. 4, the Agriculture Department assumed contracts for the undelivered grain from private exporters.
Under sales procedures announced a week ago, the department is selling its rights to the contracts to exporters who then will be able to ship the grain to foreign buyers other than the Soviet Union.
In all, USDA took over contracts totaling about 8.9 million metric tons of corn and 4.2 million of wheat, equal to 351.7 million bushels and 156 million bushels, respectively.
A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

May 9, 1980

This coming year should be fun for you where new friendships are concerned. However, be careful not to let your new-found playmates take up so much of your time that you ignore more serious responsibilities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try not to be too influenced by negative opinions today. Victory comes through being hopeful and doing your own positive thing. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph Letter, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You handle yourself well in challenging situations today, provided you see a quick victory. Where tenacity is required, you might not be as strong.

CANCER (June-July 22) Be supportive of friends' ideas today, rather than telling them what might go wrong. Even if they make mistakes, they won't appreciate an "I told you so" attitude.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Business dealings could be a mixed bag for you today. In certain situations you're very shrewd, in others, you could be foolish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Know what you are agreeing to today before making a firm commitment. Only by taking time to eddy things from every angle will you be able to spot possible flaws.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're performing work or service for anyone today, have a clear-cut understanding as to payment, thus avoiding future problems.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you may find yourself in the company of persons of whom you're not overly fond. Don't let your dislike be too obvious.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're very helpful today, provided the idea originates with you. Persons who make demands of you are apt to get another type of treatment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will know the right course of action today but you may lack the courage of your convictions and do what is expedient instead of what is necessary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It would be wise at this time to pay off an old obligation if you have some surplus in your budget. Later, it could be a shade more difficult to do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your attitude will be greatly affected today by the types of companions with whom you chum around. Select buddies who are bright and cheerful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things look encouraging materially today, but there is a chance you may not make the most of your opportunities. Follow through on what offers promise.

TEXAS BRIEFS

GENERAL TELEPHONE
AUSTIN (AP) — A full hearing on General Telephone Co.'s request for $58.3 million in increased rates was postponed Tuesday from May 12 to May 19.
 "The delay was necessitated in order to insure that all intervenors had received sufficient notice of hearing," the Public Utilities Commission said.
 The PUC notice added that the hearing was expected to continue for several weeks.
 There have been several preliminary hearings.
GRAND JURY INVESTIGATING

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A special grand jury investigating questionable business practices in the Fort Worth school district's transportation, food purchasing and maintenance departments has heard testimony from six people, including former school superintendent Julius Truelson.
 Truelson said Monday he was a "good friend" of Otto Stepp, a transportation department purchasing agent who shot himself to death last January in a Houston hotel after reporters questioned him about discrepancies in records of purchases and repairs.
 Truelson, appearing without subpoena, later said new accounting procedures caused the district's problems and that bookkeepers "don't know what they're doing out there."

JURORS DELIBERATE
DALLAS (AP) — Jurors deliberated just five minutes before convicting adult bookstore clerk Michael Wayne Kickbush of commercial obscenity for displaying a film prosecutors said violated community standards of decency.
 Kickbush received the maximum sentence Monday of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.
 Defense attorney Malcolm Dade introduced a poll of 600 Dallas County residents that he said showed the community did not object to the sale and display of sexually explicit materials.
 Dallas Cowboys football coach Tom Landry testified last week he found the film obscene. Also, two women in Dade's poll said they did not recall answering the questions and they objected to explicit sex in books, magazines and movies.

COUNCIL VOTES
BALCH SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Meeting in a closed session Monday, the city council has voted to drop an investigation of the city's fire department and to end the probation of fire chief Harry Stockton and seven firemen without filing any charges.
 The council had voted two weeks ago to place the eight men on 6 months probation, but conditionally rescinded the order after six firemen threatened to sue.

STUDENTS INJURED
AUSTIN (AP) — Six students were injured Tuesday when a car ran a stop sign and crashed into an elementary school library.
 A custodian at Goyville Elementary School was injured later as the damaged wall was being torn down.
 All of the injured were treated and released at a local hospital.
 The 17-year-old driver of the car told police his brakes failed. He was not injured. Two children were temporarily trapped under the vehicle, which wound up fully inside the library.
 "I looked up and the car was coming through the wall. I couldn't believe it. The children were screaming," said librarian Sheridan Moore. "I think it was the card catalog file and the big atlas we had against the wall that saved us."
 Police said the car hit two parked cars before it went through the stop sign and into the library.
 The driver, who returned to the scene 30 minutes after the wreck, was given three traffic tickets, including one for violation of a restriction requiring a licensed driver to be in the car with him, according to Sam Ballard, Austin Police public information officer.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

CONSTRUCTION WORKERS INJURED
ATLANTA (AP) — Eleven construction workers were injured when part of a building under construction at Hartsfield International Airport collapsed, authorities said.

Steve Fulford, spokesman for Holder Construction Co., said the accident occurred Tuesday when the men were preparing to work on the roof of a loading dock canopy 15 feet above the ground. He said one man sustained a crushed hip when the canopy collapsed and the other 10 workers received bruised and broken bones.

He said the cause of the accident at the new air cargo facility was under investigation.

CHEMICAL FIRES FORCE MOVES
SAUGUS, Calif. (AP) — A chemical fire that forced the evacuation of some 300 people began when a power outage allowed a chemical reactor to overheat and rupture a pipeline, officials said.

The explosion Tuesday in a Keyser Century Corp. storage tank released toxic fumes and sent up flames that could be seen for several miles. The tank contained polyvinyl chloride, which gives off a poisonous gas when it burns, and officials briefly evacuated a nearby plant and six homes.
 Fire officials said they were allowing the fire to burn itself out.

ARMY SETS HEARING DATES
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The Army has set Thursday and Friday for hearings on pretrial motions for a Fort Bragg parachute rigger charged with murder.

The hearing will be for Pfc. Alvin P. Williams, 20, who was accused of sabotaging a parachute used by Capt. Lawrence Hill. Hill fell more than 1,000 feet to his death March 26 when his parachute failed to open.
 Among motions expected to be argued are requests that the trial be moved and that some statements allegedly made by Williams be suppressed.

FAN CAUSES BLAZE
SPANGLER, Pa. (AP) — A spark from a fan probably was to blame for a fire that destroyed a fireworks factory, killing one person and injuring 10 as the building disintegrated amid thunderous explosions.
 The blasts were heard 15 miles away and windows were shattered in homes up to three miles from the Terrizzi Fireworks plant. Damage in the blaze Tuesday was estimated at $175,000.

"I thought I was back in Vietnam," said night shift worker George Lewarchik, who had just gone to bed in his nearby home when the explosion ripped through the factory. Killed was a 26-year-old factory worker. Six people were hospitalized and four treated and released.

Arkansas governor runs into buzzsaw on woodpile project

ARIZONA, Ark. (AP) — At first, it seemed like a masterstroke of political ingenuity — training the unemployed in Arkansas to cut firewood as a cheap source of energy for the elderly poor.

But the once-bright idea has turned into a costly fiasco, prompting the resignation of the state official who conceived it and causing young Gov. Bill Clinton considerable embarrassment at the hands of his elderly opponent in the May 27 Democratic gubernatorial primary.

Clinton, 33, the nation's youngest governor and regarded as one of the Democratic Party's rising stars, is running for a second term against Monroe A. Schwarzlose, 78, a retired turkey farmer from nearby Kingsland.

Confident and popular with youthful good looks, Clinton represents, in a way, the triumph of urban management and planning. By contrast, Schwarzlose is contentious, wears overalls and preaches old-fashioned common sense over government spending. He doesn't even have a telephone.

When the two were competing in 1978 to succeed Gov. David Pryor, who was elected to the Senate, Clinton, the former state attorney general, defeated Schwarzlose handily. But then, Clinton didn't have a record to run on and Schwarzlose didn't have much to criticize.

Now, Schwarzlose is making the most of what has become known as "Clinton's woodpile." It was a good idea, some say, that simply didn't work.

The program, known as Special Alternative Wood Energy Resources, or SAWER, and financed entirely by federal funds, was intended to train the jobless to cut firewood for the low-income elderly.
 When the SAWER program was officially terminated last week in a bureaucratic mess, the final tally of its cost showed that more than $69,000 in taxpayers' money was spent to cut 12 cords of wood. That amounts to $5,750 per cord. Initial estimates had put the cost at $62,000.

State officials blamed SAWER's failure on a federal regulation that prohibited trainees from cutting wood on the land of the elderly homeowners it was intended for.

Although the SAWER program folded last week, the embarrassment to Clinton's administration and his campaign for a second term is just beginning.

When Clinton beat Schwarzlose two years ago, he promised to eliminate government waste.

The flap is not believed to pose a serious threat to Clinton's renomination for governor. Clinton said he laughed when he saw the ad. "I figured he, or someone, would make something out of it. People are very frustrated by that sort of thing," the governor said.

Pope John Paul II is honorary chief

By ANDREW TORCHIA
 Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Pope John Paul II was made a ceremonial tribal chief today, donning African gear and beating on a drum to the delight of hundreds of thousands of Kenyans.

The pope drew exultant whoops from the crowd when he put on a black and white monkey-skin hat shaped like a bishop's miter, grasped an African shield and the staff of a tribal chief, and beat on the drum.

Despite his white robes he took on the appearance of a tribal elder. Kenyans show their appreciation of a foreign visitor by making him a symbolic chief.

The crowd then entertained the Polish-born pontiff by beating out on a drum the Polish song, "May He Live 100 Years," and John Paul responded, "I love you! I love you!"

The pope, on the third stop of a six-nation tour of black Africa, said Mass at an altar constructed in Freedom Park in central Nairobi, and in his homily urged Christians to be political activists for good.

He spoke to a crowd that residents described as the largest ever assembled in Kenya. Unofficial estimates ranged upwards from 250,000. Catholic leaders had expected about 500,000.
 The pontiff spoke in English. His message was later read in Swahili, the dominant local language, while African choirs sang and hundreds took communion. The faithful sat on benches, stood in ankle-deep mud by days of heavy rain around a lake and overflowed on a distant hill.

Many carried umbrellas as protection against the sun during the three-hour service. The crowd included two presidents, Daniel Arap Moi of Kenya and Godfrey Binaisa of neighboring Uganda.

Nearby stood a Masai husband and wife, their two young children and two goats to contribute to the service offering. The pope patted one of the goats on the head. Other offerings included the products of rural Kenya — oak wood, coffee and honey.

Traditional Catholic chants and the vibrant rhythms of African songs echoed across the silent city, where a public holiday had been declared.

In his homily, the pope, who is opposed to Catholic clergy holding elected office, urged Christians to take part in politics as activists for good.

Jesus did not give the Church an economic or political mission but "it would be a mistake to think that the individual Christian should not be involved in these areas of life," John Paul said.

He said Christians "are called by God to be involved in the world in order to transform it according to the Gospel."

OPEC tries resolution

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The OPEC oil ministers are meeting in Saudi Arabia in an attempt to resolve their pricing differences and restore the unity that enabled them to dominate the oil market.

The ministers failed at their last meeting in Caracas, Venezuela, in December, to agree on a uniform price, setting off a free-for-all ranging from the $26 a barrel charged by conservative Saudi Arabia to $45-$50 on spot markets.

The current meeting, in the Red Sea resort city of Taif, "is, essentially, an attempt to give OPEC a new lease on life after the Caracas slump, the most fractious deliberations on prices in OPEC's history," a Saudi diplomat said.

The diplomat, who requested anonymity, said the Taif conference has been overshadowed by "discouraging action" with some members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries unilaterally increasing their prices and reducing production.

Libya, Iran, Venezuela, Algeria are among the price hawks, while Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Iraq and the United Arab Emirates are the leading moderates, he said.

Mrs. Wang spoils strangers in have-not society

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent
PEKING (AP) — The dreaded Mrs. Wang is the nearest thing to a dictator in Peking. Strong men quail when she appears on their threshold.

A beaming, rosy-cheeked member of the proletariat, Mrs. Wang runs a housing compound for about a thousand foreign diplomats and journalists.

She runs it with glacial indifference to the dismayed cries that greet sky-high estimates on the cost of installing kitchen shelves, painting a room or hooking up air conditioners.

She knows that foreigners, no matter how much they complain, have nowhere else to go. She and her small army of plumbers, carpenters, electricians, painters, garbage collectors and engineers are part of the Diplomatic Services Bureau. They and they alone are allowed to work for the inmates of this "waiguoren" (foreign) ghetto, one of three in Peking.

The inhabitants of these ghettos are the spoiled elite of a have-not society. Within the snug cocoons of their guarded and walled compounds, they live lives of luxury laced with boredom. If it wasn't for Mrs. Wang, many wouldn't have much to talk about.

The Services Bureau serves, coddles and occasionally rips off the estimated 3,000 diplomats, foreign correspondents and their families now in the Chinese capital.

It supplies not only living quarters but also specialized personnel to smooth life's little wrinkles. These include interpreters, cooks, drivers, maids, office boys and telex operators. A prospective employer must take what he is given, and that varies from excellent to dismal. The ghettos abound with horror stories of cooks who can't cook, drivers who can't drive and interpreters who need interpreters.

Monthly salaries range from 180 yuan ($120) for the most menial tasks to 1,000 yuan ($666) for the most skilled, but the worker takes home only about 60 or 70 yuan. The rest goes to the state.

The apartments provided the bourgeois elite vary in size — one to four bedrooms — and in price, from 400 to 1,200 yuan. Though the rooms are often large, heat is chancy, hot water is available at odd hours and the drains are smelly. Cockroaches command the kitchens.

Yet, life can be beautiful. Many of the cooks are masters of their art — able, with little notice, to whip up sumptuous dinners for a dozen guests. Part-time waiters and waitresses are available for about $15 an evening. They mix the martinis, empty the ashtrays, pass the munchies and serve the dinner. When it's over, they wash up and tidy the apartment.

If one wishes to entertain out rather than at home, the ghetto dweller has dozens of splendid restaurants from which to choose. The prices also vary — depending on where patrons sit.

Foreigners almost invariably are taken to a special, screened-off room, where the price is always seven to 10 times more than that paid by the Chinese.

In the leading Mongolian restaurant, for example, one American paid 25 yuan for a dinner behind screens which barely equaled in splendor one eaten later with Chinese friends, at a cost of three yuan apiece.

Despite all the luxuries, foreigners in Peking find existence can be hostile or hazardous.

The hazards come not from violent crime — it is comparatively rare — but from driving along Peking's streets, almost always jammed with bicycle riders. These two-wheeled anarchists ride against traffic and zig-zag between lanes. The adventure acquires particular zest at night because headlights are forbidden.

Another hazard is climate. January begins with penetrating cold and skin-cracking dryness. Wheezes, sniffles, coughs and galloping pneumonia move in, nourished by air laden with soft coal gas.

Spring brings young buds but also Gobi Desert sandstorms. Summer heat prostrates. Only autumn — long, cool and dreamy — is truly pleasant.

Hostility, always subtle, is sensed in the persistent measures to discourage contacts between Chinese and foreigners. Even while reaching out to the West, Chinese newspapers, politicians and bureaucrats remind the citizens of the dangers of revealing state secrets to foreigners.

Yet many foreigners do mix with ordinary Chinese. Language is important but not absolutely essential. Despite official warnings, most Chinese are eager to befriend sympathetic foreigners.

And like their grandparents and great grandparents, they are marvelously inquisitive about a visitor's "dabitze" — big nose.

Prison 'Olympics' will name 'King of Mountain'

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Inmates at West Virginia Penitentiary are stretching their muscles with weights and their brains with table games in an effort to be crowned "King of the Mountain" — in a prison Olympics.

A five-month series of skill tests, including checkers, chess, weightlifting, boxing, basketball shooting and track events will culminate next fall in a free-for-all wrestling match in a mud pit, Warden Donald Bordenkircher said Tuesday.

Last November, the maximum-security facility, located in the panhandle community of Moundsville near Wheeling, was the site of a break-out by 15 inmates. One state trooper and one escapee died in a shootout at the prison gates. Thirteen were recaptured and one is still at large.

The games are expected to start May 17 and will continue through Oct. 5. Contestants will earn points according to how they do in each event.

"We'll have the brain games, like chess and checkers, and the necessary brawn games — boxing, wrestling, track events, obstacle courses, things like that," Bordenkircher said.

"Then in the fall, we'll take the top 10 winners in each weight class, put them in a mud pit, and let them go at it.

"It's going to be a no-holds-barred wrestling match — everybody jumps in the pit and when the referee blows the whistle the last guy still in there is the King of the Mountain."

Bordenkircher said money from the Inmates Fund will be used for trophies and cash prizes.

The winner of each contest will receive 10 points, with second place worth five points and third place three points.

Consequently, the warden said, inmates are stretching their brains as well as their muscles.

Near miss startles airport officials

CHICAGO (AP) — An American Airlines DC-10 and a Britt Airways plane had a "close call" during a six-second air traffic control computer failure at O'Hare International Airport, investigators say.

The Federal Aviation Administration was investigating the incident, in which the two aircraft came within 1 1/2 miles of each other as they approached the airport Tuesday.

"On a scale of 1 to 10, the close call ranks as about a 5 as far as near-hits are concerned," said an FAA official.

The agency said American Airlines Flight 184 was descending Tuesday afternoon to land on runway 32 Left and the Britt Swearingen twin-engine turboprop was also inbound.

A six-second computer failure occurred at the air traffic control center at O'Hare, officials said, and radar targets become mixed when the computers return to regular status.

By coincidence, traffic controllers were changing positions at the time so the mixup was not noticed until the last moment.

Both planes landed safely.

An American Airlines spokesman said he was unaware that an inquiry was under way. "A distance between planes of 1 1/2 miles is not that unusual... I don't see what they are investigating," he said.

Hopkins resumes race

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dust off the Colostomy Cup. The turtles are ready to run again.

The Johns Hopkins Turtle Derby, for 45 years a rite of spring before falling victim to student apathy two years ago, is being resurrected May 16. The turtles race from the center to the edge of a painted circle for prizes ranging up to $100, with the Colostomy Cup going to the overall winner.

The Pithotomy Club, a medical students' organization running this year's event, has invited 500 students and turtles to participate.

Delicatessen Customers Rounded Up by Sheriff
MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The judge needed some jurors — so the sheriff sent out to Norm's Deli.

Customers standing in line in the Montpelier delicatessen Tuesday found themselves suddenly diverted across the street to Washington County Superior Court.

A shortage of jurors caused Judge Thomas Hayes to cite a seldom-used law that allows the court to solicit jurors from the street. Sheriffs looking for 13 additional prospective jurors found several standing in line at Norm's.

The jury drawing was in a suit brought by ousted Washington Electric Cooperative Manager Saily Ennis against the co-op. He contended his dismissal was illegal.

Because co-op members could not serve on the jury, Hayes called in reinforcements to ensure there were enough jurors. As it turned out, they weren't needed.

Swifts Swoop Into Chimney Nests
NORTHVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — They're not as well known as the swallows of Capistrano, but every May 6 the chimney swifts of Northville wing in from an 8,000 mile journey to nest in the chimney of a defunct, burned out baseball factory.

They arrived as usual Tuesday. Hundreds circled the chimney shortly before dusk and then darted inside.

The little gray birds fly each spring from the upper Amazon basin in Brazil to this area in the southern Adirondack foothills.

Raymond Hubbel, who operated the factory early in this century, first noticed that the swifts arrived annually on May 6, his birthday.

The factory burned more than 60 years ago, but the swifts continue to use the chimney, known as the Hubbel chimney.

ABC tops in weekly rate race

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS listed the four highest-rated programs, but ABC won the network's prime-time ratings race for the second week in a row.

The 1979-80 season ended April 20 with CBS on top by one-tenth of a ratings point. ABC has won both weeks' competition since then.

CBS' "Dukes of Hazzard" was the top-rated show for the period ending May 4, according to the survey by the A.C. Nielsen Co. It was followed by "M.A.S.H.," "60 Minutes" and "Flo," with ABC's "That's Incredible!" fifth.

The rating for "Dukes of Hazzard" was 24.8. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, just under a quarter saw at least part of the program.

ABC had seven shows in the second 10 in the ratings, and compiled a score for the week of 16.7 to CBS' 16.3. NBC was third at 14.5.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.7 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC.

A couple of specials provided a bright note for NBC. The Country Music Association awards show was No. 6 in the ratings and the John Denver-George Burns motion picture, "Oh, God!" was 11th.

CBS scored with "Gideon's Trumpet," a Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation starring Henry Fonda. It was No. 16 for the week while ABC picked up points with "Battle of the Network Stars," 21st, and "Ann-Margret's Hollywood Movie Girls," 25th.

NBC suffered at the bottom of the ratings, with four of the five least-watched programs. CBS' "Tim Conway" show was 59th, followed by NBC's "BJ and the Bear," Part II of a "Disney's Wonderful World" presentation of "The Secret of the Lost Valley," and a two-part repeat of the movie "The Towering Inferno," with the conclusion 62nd and the first installment 63rd.

The week's Top 10 shows: "Dukes of Hazzard," with a rating of 24.8 representing 18.9 million homes, "M.A.S.H.," 24.5 or 18.7 million, "60 Minutes," 24.2 or 18.5 million, and "Flo," 23.3 or 17.8 million, all CBS; "That's Incredible!" 22.3 or 17 million, ABC; Country Music Awards Show, NBC, and "Three's Company," ABC, both 21.6 or 16.5 million; "Dallas," 21.3 or 16.3 million, and "Real People," NBC, and "Vegas," ABC, both 19.8 or 15.1 million.
