Begin in confidence vote

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin faces the first of a series of no-confidence votes in the Israeli Parliament today but is expected to survive them with the help of resigned Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and despite an adverse Supreme Court ruling.

Dayan told a news conference today shortly after his resignation became official. "I will vote for confidence in the government I served until an hour ago. I would like to see the present government serve to the end of its term" in 1981.

During the parliamentary maneuvering today, Begin's government also is expected to reject the opposition Labor Party's call for new elections.

Dayan resigned Sunday because of his inability to modify the hard line the government is taking in the negotiations to arrange autonomy for the Palestinians of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

In a television interview today with Barbara Walters of ABC, Dayan said the main disagreement with Begin was over "my concept of how to deal with the West Bank and Gaza."

He said he does "not insist they become part of Israel. They should not be allowed to become part of a Palestinian state or under foreign rule. But they should not become part of a sovereign Israel."

Asked if he feels "a solution would be a link to Jordan," Dayan said no.

"There should be some compromise as an area in between Jordan and the state of Israel where we are living together without one party ruling the other."

Asked at the press conference about his future plans, Dayan said: "I hope to write a book about the peace negotiations and the treaty we achieved with Egypt."

Dayan said he did not intend to try to start a new political party and would remain an independent member of the Knesset. He left the Labor Party in 1977 to become Begin's foreign minister.

"Being a foreign minister in the government means that you have to carry out the policy of the government," he said. "If you cannot do that wholeheartedly, it's your duty to resign. That's what I did."

The Supreme Court dealt the government a second blow Monday by ruling it illegally seized private Arab land for a Jewish settlement in the West Bank. It ordered the dismantling within 30 days of the hilltop outpost of Elon Moreh, near the Arab town of Nablus.

Dayan predicted the government would try to find some legal avenue to keep Elon Moreh alive, but Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor said the government would comply with the decision.

The court sustained an appeal by 17 Arabs whose land was expropriated for Elon Moreh. It said Begin's government chose the site under pressure from right-wing settlers.

It was a clear warning to the government that the court will no longer automatically accept the claim of national security as a reason for seizing land for settlement.

Begin and many of his ministers believe the West Bank belongs to the Jewish people by biblical right. But since Elon Moreh was established in June the government has decided it will restrict settlement to state land and no longer take privately-owned Arab property.

Egypt's deputy foreign minister, Butros Ghali, told reporters in Cairo the ruling was "a positive step" and predicted it would encourage West Bank and Gaza Palestinians to end their boycott of the autonomy talks and join in.

Seeks damages for Mexican oil spill

Justice Department may file suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department may file suit against SEDCO today seeking monetary damages in connection with the blowout of a runaway Mexican Oil Well in the Bay of Campeche. The Associated Press has learned.

The claim probably would be filed in federal court in Houston where U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor had set today as the deadline for damage claims against the oil well drilling firm founded by Gov. Bill Clements.

Justice Department officials have not yet determined the dollar amount the claim would seek if filed.

SEDCO officials went to court last month to ask the judge to limit the corporation's liability to $300,000 in the massive oil spill. O'Connor granted the company an interim guarantee.

Corporation attorneys said that is the amount SEDCO would have earned in the lease with the Mexican company drilling the offshore well.

The Justice Department claim would be filed in response to SEDCO's request for the judge to restrict its liability.

Mexican crude spewing from the well that blew out June 3 produced the world's largest oil spill.

Thick, black patches of crude washed ashore from South Padre Island to Aransas Pass, staining glistening tourist beaches with a gooey coating and threatening the ecologically-delicate inland waterways.

A group of Texas fishermen filed a $155 million damage suit Sept. 13, naming SEDCO, Permango, a privately owned Mexican oil drilling company; and Pemex, the Mexican state-controlled oil monopoly, as defendants.

Four days later a $100 million damage suit was filed against SEDCO and Pemex. The suit was filed in behalf of the Willacy County Navigation District, White Sands Developers, Hilton Sea Island Hotel, Port Mansfield Utility District and all political subdivisions with taxing authority in Willacy and Cameron Counties.

Texas Attorney General Mark White also filed suit against SEDCO, and Permango on Oct. 13, seeking at least $10 million in damages.

However, White said the state might seek a higher damage award when the full impact of the oil spill washing on Texas beaches is known.

White also asked for additional civil penalties of $1,000 a day for every day since the oil spill entered Texas waters about Aug. 1.

The attorney general said more than 2.4 million barrels of oil have spilled out of the well since it blew out June 3.

Mexican workers recently succeeded in placing a steel and concrete "sombbrero" over the well, but oil is still leaking from the well. Officials say the well probably cannot be capped until two relief wells are completed.

Commissioners receive wastewater plan report

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Pampa city commissioners received a report from a representative of a Lubbock engineering firm handling the plans and specifications for the stormwater overflow ponds in the regular meeting of the city commission this morning.

Chester Green of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper Engineering Consultants reported the plans have been drawn for the stormwater overflow ponds required by federal law to help regulate the amount of water being treated by the wastewater treatment plant in times of heavy rainfall.

"The last time the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) asked for an estimate, I estimated a cost of about $90,000 for construction of the facilities," Green said, adding the grant will fund 75 percent of the total project.

City Manager Mack Wofford said approximately $25,000 to be paid by the city would be funded by bonds issued several years ago when the wastewater treatment plant was begun.

The city has applied for a second grant from the EPA to pay for the project, but has to meet several requirements before becoming eligible.

One of these was having plans and specifications which meet Texas Department of Water Resources requirements, the state agency involved in the grant. Wofford said the plans have to be approved by the agency before the grant will be given.

"I am hopeful we can begin advertising (for bids) within the next 30 days," Green said. Wofford pointed out to the commission that no action could be taken until authorization from the Department of Water Resources was received.

The commission received bids on a three wheel vehicle to be used for traffic control purposes in the police department. One bid was received from Associated Supply, the Cushman dealer in Amarillo, for a vehicle meeting specifications set by the city, at a cost of $4,750 with delivery about 60 days after purchase.

The commission decided to table the action until further study could be made on the bid.

No public comments were made during the hearing on the proposed zoning changes of four tracts of land within Pampa. The first tract is an area between Price Road and Wells Street which is recommended to be zoned for agricultural to commercial. Tract two is south of Kentucky to Price Road, also to be changed from agricultural to commercial zoning.

Tract three is north of 28th Street, now known as the Butler Nursery property. The land has been recommended to be given a special permit in order for it to continue doing business as a nursery if sold. Tract four is known as Price Road Plaza and has been recommended to be changed from agricultural to light industrial. It is located in the northwest corner of Kentucky and Price Road.

Commissioners approved changing the operating address of the Yellow Cab Company from 320 S. Cuyler to the Coronado Inn, 1101 N. Hobart.

As part of the grant process discussed earlier, the commission approved a resolution making the city of Pampa the management agency for the wastewater collection and treatment within the corporate limits of the city. Wofford stated the resolution was "more of a formality of meeting the requirements" set by the Texas Department of Water Resources for the grant and said he did not feel it would change any of the city's responsibilities.

Commissioners also approved the final reading of ordinances providing for a two-hour parking limit in the 300, 400, and 500 blocks of South Cuyler Street; prohibiting parking after midnight in certain downtown areas; and providing for one-way travel on the alley located between Charles and Russell streets north of Harvester.

Five men — all licensed master plumbers — were appointed on the newly reactivated City Plumbing Board. R.D. Wilkerson, Hugh Hall and Richard Gattis were appointed to two-year terms, while Leo Hurst and Pete Watts were assigned one-year terms.

Other business conducted by the commission included the appointment of J. B. Fowler, pastor of the First Methodist Church, as the representative of the city to the Regional Mental Health - Mental Retardation Board to replace David Gantz, who has recently moved from Pampa.

Nov. 13 was set as the date to receive bids on a half-ton truck to be used by the city. Wofford said the vehicle was budgeted as part of the city's capital this year.

Commissioners went into executive session with City Attorney Don Lane to discuss possible action to be taken regarding the Gray County tax appraisal board as set up by Senate Bill 621. The bill provides for the forming of a single district tax appraisal board comprised of representatives of the taxing entities in a district.

Bank loan rate 15 percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. raised its prime lending rate on Tuesday to a record 15 percent, the first major bank to do so.

Only two weeks ago, the nation's biggest banks raised the rate they charge for loans to their most credit-worthy corporate borrowers by an unprecedented full-percentage point, to 14.5 percent.

Morgan Guaranty, the fifth-largest U.S. bank ranked by deposits, said the 15 percent prime was effective immediately. A bank official declined to comment on reasons for the boost, except to say the bank bases its prime rate on several factors, primarily the cost of acquiring funds and the demand for business loans.

Banks use the prime rate as the basis for setting interest rates on almost all business and industrial loans. Although the prime has no direct effect on consumer loan interest rates, it is viewed as an indicator of trends in interest rates generally.

Many banks in several areas of the nation, faced with high costs of acquiring funds, have cut back lending or raised interest rates for consumer credit such as installment loans or home mortgages.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Pe... Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

A richer philosophy

The trouble with the libertarian philosophy is that it may just be too simple.

Most people hear the word "philosophy" and immediately get a sour taste in their mouths, recalling with agony the trials of high school and college, when they were forced to read all sorts of unreadable works from the pens of the "great philosophers."

This is not to say that libertarians are childish, anti-intellectual or simplistic in their beliefs. Rather, the philosophy is based on a foundation that can be readily understood by anybody: the individual is the keeper of himself. He is free at birth, and should be permitted to conduct his life as he sees fit, as long as he hurts no one else.

Libertarianism is aptly and succinctly described in the words that appear in The Pampa News every day above the editorial columns. Briefly, libertarians (to varying degrees) believe that no man has the moral right to hurt another — to seize his property or molest his innate liberty in any way. Like all philosophies, libertarianism is based on an objective concept of morality — that it is wrong to damage another.

Libertarians often are described as being "anarchists" and in a sense that is true, but with one important caveat. Individuals are thoroughly capable of governing their own affairs. The only conceivable purpose for any sort of "government" beyond that would be one that is created with everyone's consent, and its purpose strictly to guarantee that each individual could seek his own special fulfillment in peace.

Is The Pampa News "conservative" and "right-wing"? Not necessarily. Like many so-called "conservatives," we advocate the existence of a free marketplace, unhampered by government control and regulation. But while many "conservatives" call for clamps on individual expression and certain pursuits, we say there should be no taboos.

Are we "liberals"? Again, not quite. In their most recent incarnation, "liberals" want to control the economy and take resources from some people and give them to others. But we are "liberal," it could be said, when we advocate that a person be allowed to seek enjoyment in the way he sees fit, as long as it doesn't interfere with his neighbor's welfare.

It seems our positions involving drugs, pornography, prostitution and such (they ought not be outlawed) tend to confound our critics and those who misunderstand libertarianism more than anything.

There are thousands upon thousands of pages to be read if one wants to delve into the various schools of the freedom philosophy, particularly in the area of economics.

But at the crux, all libertarians are saying the same thing: the human being is a unique creature, capable of utilizing logic and reason. Therefore, he is smart enough to take care of himself. While it may forever be argued whether individuals cannot exist totally without government as we know it, one should look to the self rather than to somebody else to solve a problem and make life a richer experience.

What newspapers

haven't figured out yet

By D.R. SEGAL

The reason there is only one newspaper in most towns is because newspapers are so dumb that the only way they can survive. No, I didn't learn that in journalism school.

Take banks, for example. There are more banks today than ever before, and fewer newspapers. The reason is that banks are smart and newspapers are cuckoo. Do you remember when you grabbed a counter check and wrote down the amount and that was that? Ha, just try that now. You have to have special checks, which you pay for, with coded numbers printed on them so the computers can read them. You pay for that when you buy the checks. And if you bank by mail, you fill out a deposit slip with all the codes on it and mail it back at your expense. You get your statement whenever it's convenient for the computer to send it out.

What it comes down to is that you are doing most of the bank's work for it. I can remember when you called the grocery store and had them send over the kid on the bicycle with a pound of butter. Yeah.

I had dealings with the Bell family the other day and I had to go over to the "Phone Store" and pick out my phone, assemble it and plug it in. There are more phones today than ever before, and fewer newspapers.

Clearly the difference is that growing industries have figured out ways to get their customers to do most of the work for them.

Newspapers, on the other hand, continue to figure out ways of delivering a product to your door today just as they did 75 years ago. Kids are just as adept at throwing a paper on the roof or in a mud puddle today as they were when I was a child. And for some reason completely beyond human understanding, some newspapers deliver to your home cheaper than they sell their product at newsstands.

Now if that isn't dumb-dumb-dumb, tell me what is. I've used the argument myself that there is only one newspaper in Bent Prong, Wyo., because the merchants can only support one newspaper and blah, blah, blah like that. But the real reason is that we've never learned to sock it to the customer properly. If we could figure some way of getting the advertiser to come down and set his own type, or get our subscribers to drop by and pick up their paper every day, then we'd be able to proliferate like banks and grocery stores and the phone company, which have learned to get the customer off his duff and put his back to the oars.

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) — Where adolescents and sex are concerned, ignorance is not bliss. It is instead an invitation to a disaster that is reaching epidemic proportions in this country — teen-age pregnancy.

Somehow, that message seems uncommonly difficult to convey to countless frightened and insecure adults who have been swept up in "moral" crusades against sex education in the schools and elsewhere.

In community after community, as educators and public officials are only too aware, conservative groups with and without religious affiliations are launching all-out assaults on even the most elementary and cautious sex-education programs. These same groups frequently campaign as well against family-planning programs and abortion.

What has upset these people, of course, is the rather striking increase in adolescent sexual activity that has occurred over the past decade. Studies indicate more than half of today's 21 million teen-agers ages 15 to 19 have had intercourse at least once, compared with just 30 percent who had done so in 1970.

This is a behavioral revolution of some magnitude, but it wasn't caused by classroom discussion of sex and reproduction and it won't be halted by eliminating sex education.

Indeed, what most teen-agers desperately need is not less but more information about sex and contraception if they are to avoid the inevitable consequence of their conduct — pregnancy.

The need, furthermore, is urgent. For despite a dramatic decline in overall fertility rates in the United States over the past decade, the rates are actually rising among teen-agers under 17.

More and more children each year are being born to mothers who are themselves still children. In 1950, 20 percent of all first children were born to mothers under age 20; by 1975, the proportion had risen to 35 percent.

An appalling 1 million teen-agers a year become pregnant; some 400,000 of them obtain abortions, but the other 600,000 bear their babies — two-thirds of whom are born out of wedlock.

The consequences are little short of catastrophic for all concerned. Pregnant adolescents face far greater physical risks in childbirth than more mature women, including a maternal death rate 60 percent higher than that of women 20 to 24 years old. A baby born to a teen-ager is two to three times more likely to die in its first year than the child of an older mother. The offspring of adolescent mothers are much more likely to suffer mental or physical birth defects.

Teen-age mothers suffer a lifelong loss of schooling that all too often condemns them to poorly paid dead-end jobs or to welfare dependency. Perhaps because their career opportunities are so limited, they also have more children than women who start their families later — an average of five kids apiece for mothers who first gave birth at age 17 or younger. This, in turn, exacerbates family poverty.

Early pregnancies not only ruin the lives of young mothers and their children, they also drain the public treasury — to the tune of some $8.3 billion a year in welfare aid related outlays.

For all the hand wringing by parents and preachers, sex education and readily available birth control remain the only practical weapons for reducing the incidence of teen-age pregnancy. Withholding them from adolescents won't prevent the youngsters from having sex; it will simply "punish" more of them with unwanted pregnancies — an outcome nobody could possibly call "moral."

For if teen-age promiscuity is deplorable, teen-age pregnancy is downright disastrous — for the young mothers, for their children and for society as a whole.

Today in history

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1979. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1917, American troops saw their first action in World War I, near Lunenburg, France.

On this date:
In 1776, George Washington's Revolutionary Army withdrew from Manhattan, leaving New York City to British occupation.

In 1925, 25,000 women marched in New York City, demanding the vote.

In 1929, stock prices fell sharply in New York, but it was only a prelude to the crash that came six days later.

In 1944, the Allies recognized Charles de Gaulle's provisional French government.

In 1954, the United States, Britain, France and Russia agreed to end their occupation of Germany.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon reversed himself and agreed to turn over the Watergate tapes to Judge John Sirica.

Jane Fonda for president

by Paul Harvey

Ask violinist Isaac Stern how he justifies using his artistic talent for political purposes—specifically to promote the objectives of Israel—he will tell you that "Artists are people. As long as politics affects our lives we must try to influence politics."

Critics, however, see him as a Pied Piper—using his violin magic to lure admirers of his music to follow him wherever.

Most conspicuous of the performers presently overtly campaigning for social caus... Jane Fonda. She says her interests are "purely humanitarian," yet she is on a 50 cities barnstorming tour promoting the political ideology of Gov. Jerry Brown.

And her critics ask, "Would you want Jane Fonda for President?"

Performers injecting themselves into politics is not a recent innovation. During the era of Sen. Joe McCarthy's broad-brush public indictments, Hollywood luminaries by the trainload converged on Washington.

Jane Fonda and singer Joan Baez were militantly opposed to our involvements in Vietnam.

Now the latter is equally militant in her denunciation of the Hanoi regime.

Britain's actress Vanessa Redgrave has carried her political crusading into a formal candidacy for public office. She was overwhelmingly defeated.

They came to cheer her but did not want her in a policy-making position.

Thus most professional political strategists are convinced that the major contribution a celebrity can make to a cause is to attract a crowd.

Bob Squier, who specializes in directing campaigns for Democrats, credits John Denver with an important role in electing Richard Lamm governor of Colorado in 1974 "mostly by attracting money from people who otherwise would not contribute to a political campaign."

Jimmy Carter's phenomenally effective campaign for the Presidency received immense financial support from country music executives and performers.

What is overlooked in this evaluation of the proper prerogatives of performers is their inevitable kinship with politicians.

Ever since F.D.R., there have always been show business people sprinkled like a garnish over otherwise lackluster White House social events.

Politicians—as other performers—have gigantic egos. All are helplessly hooked on the narcotic of applause. Intermingling, they can reciprocate flattery.

There are classic examples—Jimmy Davis—Ronald Reagan—Shirley Temple Black—George Murphy—of entertainers who became sufficiently politically astute that each of their abilities eventually complemented the other.

There have not been many like those.

Union violence

By Anthony Harrigan

The most poorly reported story in the United States is the story of union violence.

A single act of violence in a civil rights situation results in massive media attention and concern on the part of the U.S. Justice Department. Union violence against workers and employers receives only minimal news coverage, however. Yet union violence is an alarming fact of life in the United States. For example, it was only a short time ago that non-striking truckers were the target of ambush attacks with rifles.

A particularly shocking case of union violence occurred in New Haven, Conn., in early October. According to the Associated Press, about 800 strikers, some armed with clubs and baseball bats, swarmed outside the Olin Corporation's firearms plant in that city and blocked the hiring of replacement workers. Strikers attempted to drag people out of their cars as they came to work.

Police Chief Edward Morrone was quoted as saying: "There is no question in my mind that if we had attempted to bring anyone into the plant, we would have had some heavy violence."

What was the response of New Haven mayor Frank Logue? He ordered the closing of the plant instead of protection of the people who wanted to work.

Imagine the hue and cry if Ku Klux Klan members in Decatur, Ala., had been allowed to shut down a factory in that city. There would have been demands for the use of troops to open the plant and safeguard the rights of threatened employees.

There's no difference between hoodlums armed with baseball bats and union members armed with clubs and bats. In Connecticut, however, the unions have political clout. They have the power to persuade the political leadership of a major city to close a factory instead of enforcing the law and protecting working people and the company.

The New Haven police chief admitted that no arrests were made, though eight intersections around the plant were blocked by strikers. The New Haven police had an obligation to clear the intersections and arrest the armed and violent strikers.

The national media, for its part, had a duty to focus attention on this example of major union violence in a large city. By failing to give conspicuous coverage to such actions, the national media encourage the notion that union violence and threats of violence are legitimate strike activities.

The unions, for their part, regard themselves as above the law. In some unions, such as the Teamsters, an arrest record is virtually a credential for a union organizing job.

The United States won't be a proper, law-abiding country until unions are made subject to the law and union goon squad tactics are eliminated by swift, stern law enforcement at the local and state levels.

Lagging federal prosecution of gangster elements in union organizations also should be the subject of congressional and public concern. No federal authorities stepped in to curtail the union violence in the recent farm strikes ordered by the United Farm Workers in California. Non-striking farmworkers and employers were deprived of their civil rights by union hoodlums, but Washington did nothing to protect them.

One of the most basic instruments for requiring unions to behave in a civilized, lawful manner is a law making the labor organizations subject to the Antitrust Law. Happily, Sen. Strom Thurmond is considering re-introduction of legislation designed to achieve this end. Every senator who is concerned about an orderly society should co-sponsor this legislation. It would help end union monopoly power and protect the right to work.

The bottom line

What will cost $1.2 billion, take two years to complete and have us reading at the ninth-grade level?

The simplified tax forms that the Internal Revenue Service is under congressional mandate to produce and that it is now commissioning a team of private consultants to develop.

The intended result is a form the taxpayer can comprehend and complete more easily than the present version, which supposedly was designed for those who read on an 11th-grade level.

The convenience of the taxpayer is not the real reason for the change, however. That's a matter of dollars and cents.

The complexities of the present forms are held largely responsible for roughly 5 percent of returns that contain errors, and these cost money to correct. The new forms are expected to reduce the error percentage and thus save money — for the IRS, not the taxpayers.

It figures.

Authorities begin ride crash probe

DALLAS (AP) — Two safety devices failed to function when a pair of gondolas on the Swiss Skyride dropped, killing one man and injuring 16, the manager of the ride at the State Fair of Texas says.

Also, a third safety device used on similar cable car rides was never installed at the State Fair ride.

Ride manager Bill Hawkins said a wind monitor designed to stop the tram if winds get dangerously high was "not functioning right, I guess."

The other device that apparently failed was an emergency switch which was supposed to stop the ride if the cable holding the cars dislodged. It "didn't work and we don't know why," Hawkins said.

The third device, which was never installed, is a safety shield that can prevent an accidental release of the grippers holding the gondolas to the cable. It was installed on many such rides after a fatal accident in St. Louis last year.

Workers today continued removing the remaining gondolas from the ride in search of further clues.

"The gondolas will be stored and examined thoroughly in the next phase of the operation, but no conclusive findings are expected for several days," fair spokesman Bob Halford said.

Fair officials said one of the ride's foremen had ridden the skylift minutes before two gondolas crashed to the crowded midway Sunday.

One of the gondolas jammed when crossing a support post and then stalled, causing the next three gondolas to strike the first. The two in the middle fell off the cable and onto two carnival booths.

The officials concluded, however, that the 23 mph wind was not dangerous enough to close the ride.

Witnesses said the wind, which gusted to 35 mph, caused the first gondola to hit a support pole. Others said gondolas were colliding as they passed each other.

"If there had been any reports of those buckets hitting each other or the posts, they would have shut the ride down," said Bill Hawkins, who has been in charge of the ride for seven years.

Officials at nearby Six Flags Over Texas closed a similar ride, manufactured by the same company, Sunday because of the high winds.

Fred Millard, 41, of Dallas, was killed Sunday afternoon when one of the cable cars plummeted 65 feet and crashed into a booth where he, his wife and three daughters were playing Skeeball.

Only three of the injured remained in the hospital, none in serious condition.

Meanwhile, an $850,000 damage suit was filed against the State Fair of Texas by Dallas attorney Windele Turley on behalf of Dennis and Cindi Holder.

The suit claims Mrs. Holder, 20, is paralyzed from the chest down from injuries sustained in the accident. She was in fair condition at Parkland Hospital.

Holder was treated and released.

The suit, filed in State District Judge Snowden Leftwich's court, also puts a restraining order on the fair's investigation of the accident until independent investigators are allowed to join the probe.

While the cause of the accident remained under investigation, Millet's brother-in-law said he believed officials also should investigate why the ride was operated over concession areas.

"What I don't understand is why they (fair officials) allowed a ride like that to go over a tent. It seems to be an act of negligence as far as I'm concerned," said Jeff Green, of Mobile, Ala.

Dallas City Attorney Dan Holt said the City of Dallas will not be liable for damages in connection with the accident.

'Nose to grindstone' lifestyle dead

HOUSTON (AP) — A New York social scientist is convinced that a majority of Americans regard "a nose-to-the-grindstone" way of life too high a price to pay for financial success.

Daniel Yankelovich, in a paper prepared for the Third Biennial Conference on Growth Policy, said there still is a desire for security, but not when it means "unquestioning loyalty to employers and a suppression of desires that conflict with obligations to others."

The scientist-researcher was asked to write the report for the conference opening at The Woodlands, Texas, Sunday where 500 businessmen, governmental officials and academicians will meet in an effort to find answers to the problems caused by a booming global population.

Topics to be discussed are population trends, employment needs, energy, food, security, and limits to government.

The sessions are sponsored by Mitchell Energy & Development Co. of Houston, the University of Houston, and the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies.

Yankelovich said his research points to a feeling in the nation "that we have devoted too much of time and attention to the task of how to make a living and not enough to the question of how to live."

"The fantasy today is not the pot at the end of the rainbow nor the dream of sudden wealth. The drive to reach the top has been replaced by the need to keep one's life on a relatively even keel."

"Most Americans no longer believe that a lifetime of shoving, struggling and competing, even if it results in your becoming the wealthiest man in the neighborhood, is worth... a nervous breakdown or heart attack," he said.

Despite this changing philosophy, Yankelovich said the people still don't want to give up the family cars, the central heating or the washing machines.

"But they are prepared to make modest cutbacks in the use of energy, to keep their cars longer, to waste less, to reduce consumption of meat and clothing," he said.

Police catch restaurant burglar

A local man was charged with the burglary of a Pampa restaurant after being apprehended by Pampa police early Monday morning.

According to police reports, Officer Kenneth Hopson patrolled by the Coney Island Restaurant located at 114 W. Foster when he saw a broken window in the back door of the business.

After calling for assistance from the Highway Patrol and the Sheriff's Department, Hopson investigated the burglary and reportedly found the suspect in the building.

Walter Ray Arbuckle, 28, of the Davis Hotel was arrested and charged with two counts of burglary after police gathered evidence linking the man with another burglary of the eatery Friday.

John Gikas, owner of the Coney Island, reported the first burglary to police. According to police reports, it is believed the burglar injured himself in the break-in after blood was found at the point of entry.

Arbuckle was brought before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford, who set a $5,000 bond for each charge.

Arbuckle was placed in city jail and later transferred to county jail.

Burn specialists say Marines have 50-50 survival chance

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Army's famed burn specialists are battling to save 37 young U.S. Marines severely burned Friday in a freak fire at their Japanese base, but officials concede that 19 of the victims generally have a less than a 50-50 chance of survival.

"We anticipate more deaths," Col. Basil A. Pruitt Jr., commander of the crack Brooke Army Medical Center burn treatment unit, said Monday.

More than 70 sleeping Marines at the Mount Fuji base were burned before dawn last Friday when Typhoon Tip caused a 5,000-gallon rubber fuel container to rupture. The fuel ignited and swept through an enlisted man's barracks.

Two of those victims died in Japan and 19-year-old Pvt. Thomas J. Breunig of St. Paul, Minn., died Sunday night en route to Brooke. Two others were left in Japan because they were too critical to move.

Nineteen of the 37 victims airlifted Sunday to Brooke had suffered burns over a majority of their bodies and were listed Monday night in critical condition. Some were being monitored by as many as three specially-trained nurses.

Pruitt said four of the victims were burned over more than 81 percent of their bodies and seven others had burns covering more than 60 percent of their bodies.

"As a group, there's a little less than a 50-50 chance of survival with burns this critical," Pruitt said of the 19 in critical condition.

The odds vary slightly with each of the victims, he added.

But Pruitt said the Marines have a better chance of survival than most burn victims because they were all from 17 to 22 years old and were in excellent physical condition.

"This is a young, healthy group. They are in the age group where the chances of survival are most favorable," he said, adding that the next three weeks are the most critical for survival.

Eleven of the Marines were listed in satisfactory condition, some of whom were able Sunday night to walk into the hospital under their own power. Seven were in serious condition.

The airlift brought back memories of the Vietnam War, when Brooke's famed burn specialists handled hundreds of casualties. The 37 Marines were the most patients to be admitted at one time since Vietnam.

The victims filled the regular burn treatment ward, forcing hospital officials to press another ward into service. Extra nurses were mobilized.

Brooke, known worldwide for its burn research and treatment, takes in about 300 severely burned military and civilian patients per year.

An 18-person burn team was dispatched from Brooke to Japan on Friday afternoon to stabilize the victims and treat them during the grueling 14-hour flight to San Antonio.

Senate confirms nomination

Krueger begins work as ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a long wait in temporary State Department quarters, Robert Krueger can begin work as the first ambassador-at-large for Mexico with Senate confirmation behind him.

The Senate voted in favor of the nomination Monday, three months after Krueger unofficially started the job to coordinate increasingly tense and complex relations with Mexico.

"I'm glad to have that seal of approval," Krueger said by phone after the Senate vote. "I'm just pleased that the Senate, and particularly the Democrats in the Senate, have joined President Carter in indicating that they want U.S.-Mexican relations to have a high priority."

Krueger participated in the last stages of the negotiations that produced a natural gas agreement.

He provoked a strong protest from Mexico at the end of the summer by suggesting that talks might be in order about liability for the massive Bay of Campeche oil spill soiling Texas beaches.

Krueger lost a tight Senate race last fall to incumbent Republican John Tower, and the confirmation vote split almost entirely along party lines.

Only two Republicans voted for confirmation, and four Democrats opposed it.

Tower voted against Krueger's confirmation, which was approved 48-35. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he opposed making the diplomatic corps a haven for defeated Senate candidates.

Other senators opposed to the nomination said the new position was unnecessary and set a precedent for ambassadors-at-large to be appointed for other important nations.

Mexico will be the first nation to have a U.S. ambassador in its capital and an ambassador-at-large coordinating relations from the Washington end.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said U.S. relations with Mexico are more complex than with any other nation. The new ambassadorial position would indicate to Mexico a genuine commitment to improving relations, he said.

"The relationship with Mexico unique? You bet it is," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said in support of the nomination. "It is a fact that many of the 'domestic' actions we take in this country have a direct and immediate impact on our neighbor to the south," Bentsen said. "If there was ever a bilateral relationship in need of effective coordination — in Washington and in the field — it is our relationship with Mexico."

Issues mentioned as ripe for need of coordination included water rights, pollution, fishing rights, drug enforcement, immigration and agricultural policy.

Other supporters of naming an ambassador-at-large for Mexico said the rank would give Krueger sufficient clout to perform his duties.

The ambassador to Mexico would continue to spend most of his time in Mexico City. Ambassador Patrick J. Lucey has announced his resignation effective Nov. 1, and a successor has not been selected.

Previous appointments of ambassadors-at-large have been to handle a particular problem, such as the Indonesian refugee situation, or an area, like the Middle East.

Reports of Krueger's pending nomination as ambassador-at-large first circulated last spring but Carter did not send the nomination to the Senate for confirmation until June.

Krueger arrived in Washington in July, saying he expected quick Senate confirmation.

Shah in New York hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, deposed ruler of Iran, was hospitalized today at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center for "extensive medical examinations" for an undisclosed ailment, an adviser said.

Pahlavi was installed in a three-room suite and surrounded by tight security, said the hospital's vice president for public affairs, Eamon Brennan.

Brennan said shortly before 9 a.m. that the patient was resting and the nature of his illness and his condition had not yet been classified.

"They've not begun diagnostic tests yet and it's unlikely there'll be any results to report before this time tomorrow, if then. He'll undergo all the usual tests — blood, urine, radiology, but no one's being more specific than that," he said.

William Greene, hospital administrator, said the shah was admitted around 11 p.m. EDT Monday, about an hour after he slipped into New York at LaGuardia Airport aboard a Gulfstream twin-engine jet.

Seven hours after the shah's arrival, one of his senior advisors released a statement which did not reveal the shah's ailment.

"His imperial majesty has come to United States to undergo extensive medical examinations at New York Hospital. The shah and members of his family are optimistic that the outstanding medical care available in the United States will diagnose his ailment and provide a cure," the statement from Robert F. Armao said.

"The shah will not make any public statements nor hold any news conferences. For now he has authorized me to say that he is grateful President Carter and the United States government for making him welcome. To the extent that it is practical and advisable, efforts will be made to issue timely reports on the shah's condition," the statement said.

Oil company profits draw fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil companies are drawing new fire this week as some third-quarter profits reports show near-record earning levels.

President Carter made another pitch Monday for his tax on oil company windfall profits, saying that while oil concerns already generate large sums of money, "they want more. But it's not fair to the American people for them to have more."

Carter was particularly piqued at Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, which said Monday its profits had risen 118 percent in the July-September quarter. The increase was the biggest in Exxon's history and among the most ever earned in a quarter by a U.S. company.

White House press secretary Jody Powell called the Exxon profits "rather enormous."

Also announcing a big rise in third-quarter earnings Monday was Atlantic Richfield Co., the nation's seventh-largest oil company, which said its profits rose 45 percent. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana announced a 49 percent profit gain last Friday, and other major oil companies are expected to weigh in with similarly large increases in earnings this week.

The profits probably will also seem high to Americans who began the third quarter in gas lines and ended it wondering whether they'd have enough heating oil for the winter and what it would cost.

But both Exxon and Arco said profits from domestic refining and marketing units were hampered by price regulations which limited the amount of cost increases that could be passed on to consumers.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and cool weather prevailed across Texas today with mild temperatures expected to remain the rule statewide.

Predawn temperatures ranged from the 30s in the Panhandle to the 60s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Although winds were generally light and variable, areas along the coast reported northerly gusts ranging from 15 to 25 mph.

The forecast called for fair skies statewide with high temperatures in the 60s in the northeast, 70s in South Texas and 80s in West Texas.

A variety of photographs by local photographers will be on display Friday and Saturday at the Pampa Mall.

Honored at the show will be Ernie Grady, Frank Anderson, Lloyd Harvey and Will Breazeale. Their works include photographs of Panhandle scenes, flowers, weddings and children.

Sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the show will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Grady does photographic work for area individuals and organizations.

Anderson, who's been with Pampa Independent School District for 17 years, teaches photography and math at Pampa Middle School.

Active in photography since high school, Anderson shot his first wedding 25 years ago, and since then has done numerous weddings and portraits.

He received a bachelor and master degrees at North Texas State University and has done graduate work at Michigan State University in Lansing, Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, and West Texas State University. He has also taken photography courses at Amarillo College.

He and his wife and daughter live at 1832 Fir. Harvey is a farmer who lives at 307 Linda Dr. with his wife and two children. A graduate of Texas Tech, he has a degree in advertising art and design, and specialized in photography his senior year at Tech.

Harvey was medical photographer at Camp Pendleton Naval Hospital while he was serving in the U.S. Navy. At the time he and his wife and several others were partners in an art gallery in Old Town, San Diego, Calif., where he sold his work.

After naval duty in Japan and a year as manager of a Houston camera store, he moved to Pampa, where he also does metal sculpture with his father, L.R. Harvey.

Breazeale, of 1931 N. Nelson, has been a Pampa resident for 23 years. A salesman for McKeason Drug Co. of Amarillo, he attended school in Mississippi and at the University of New Mexico.

Photography became a serious hobby for Breazeale about four years ago. Equipped with his own darkroom for color processing and printing, he enjoys closeups of Panhandle life and flowers.

He also has photographed weddings and private parties, and his works hang in local hospitals and clinics.

He is married and has four children. Many photographs will be for sale or for order during the two-day show.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

While many spouses smile when they hurt, sometimes even trading hilarious jokes for sniffling sympathy, there are far too many people — and younger, who writh and whine when they suffer the least headache or heartburn or heel blister.

Otis has never let illness get him down mentally. He can be sporting bandages or black eyes or broken bones — and still top every wisecracking birthday card or casual caller. Once, in our younger years, he had a near-fatal bout with peritonitis, and his doctor told him specifically not to lift anything heavier than a sheet of paper for three months after his surgery. We were in the lumber business at the time, and my bookkeeping desk faced a window with a partial view of the yard. Four weeks after his operation, my window was open a crack and I heard him telling a husky trucker, "Louise worries about me too much. So I'll help you carry these two-by-sixes as far as her window. Then you drag them past her. I'll take hold again then."

I almost jumped through the window but chose the door instead. I grabbed Otis' end of the lumber before he dropped it. He grinned as he said, "Somehow you always pop up exactly where you're needed, honey." I said, "It's a trick I learned from my husband."

He's never changed his habit of not grumbling over health problems. Recently as he left for his office, he said, "Don't kiss me as hard as you did yesterday. I've had a fever blister inside my mouth for a week." I gasped, "Why didn't you tell me?" And he said, "If I had, you wouldn't have kissed me at all. And I don't ever want that to happen."

It has been said that if you take a trip with a group and get along so well that you are still friends when you get home, your friendship is genuine and lasting. I believe it's the same with marriage. Constant rehashing of where you hurt and how bad your pain is and how much sicker you are than anybody else anywhere — well, you know as well as I do that such an attitude can alienate family and friends.

Worst of all, it can affect your mate's feelings for you. A husband is likely to do one of three things: (1) call a doctor for your minor cough, which you could have done for yourself if you really needed to; (2) try to get your mind off you ailments, a gesture you should have made instead of complaining to him; or (3) get so fed up that he ignores your complaining, only sighing and going back to his paper when you begin your harangue. You'll be lucky if there isn't a fourth reaction, the one of spending more and more time away from home until he's almost never with you. He could even move out to seek relief from your frets and fevers.

DEAR LOUISE: I work hard in a business that I've owned for 27 years and is losing money in these inflated times. I'm tired when I get home at night and I used to vent my frustrations on Meg. I griped about headaches and indigestion and a lot of other aches and pains, some of them real, some just in my mind. A month ago I realized that she was spending every evening with her sister or some neighbor, leaving the house right after supper. It didn't take me long to figure out that she had to get away from my nightly tirades that neither of us could help.

So one night I brought her some flowers and kissed her without frowning or yelling about anything. I told her a joke I'd heard that day — and she told me the tall tales she'd picked up at the beauty shop. She's stayed home every night since. And you know what? Since I don't talk about my headaches any more, I don't have near as many as I used to. Even my business is a little better. And if it never profits greatly, Meg and I have some savings and a little rent property and Social Security. Best of all, we have each other. B.F.

DEAR B.F.: Yours is one of the best letters I ever received. I'm using it in entirety — and hoping that all my readers will take it to heart and do likewise.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband is 45 years old and for the last eight years he has had a heart condition the doctors call atrial fibrillation. He's only had about three attacks in eight years and the last one was very recent. The doctors have done all kinds of blood tests, sugar tests, electrocardiogram and the study of his arteries and everything is normal. They don't seem to be able to find out what's causing it since he's never had a heart attack.

Lately he's starting to worry about himself and it is acting up about every three days. He was told not to smoke and he's trying to stop. Is there any answer to this and is there any known cause? Is it at all common and can it be cured?

DEAR READER - It's more common than you might think and it does occur with and without heart disease. It was even found in one of the astronauts. He was apparently a healthy, robust individual who was first found to have atrial fibrillation when his heart tracing was being recorded while he was on the human centrifuge used for space flight training. A review of the records showed that he was fibrillating even before the run started.

I saw a number of young healthy people in the Air Force flying population over a period of about 10 years who had attacks of atrial fibrillation without heart disease.

Atrial fibrillation means that the two top collecting chambers of the heart merely twitch or fibrillate rather than contracting in a rhythmic fashion to aid the normal pumping mechanism of the heart. The atria can twitch as rapidly as 500 times a minute while the lower part of the heart that pumps blood beats much slower.

It follows that some patients have a very rapid heart rate in the presence of atrial fibrillation and still others have a relatively slow almost regular pulse rate.

Atrial fibrillation can be from heart disease caused by fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries and heart attacks or by such non-heart problems as an overactive thyroid. It may occur when there is a chemical imbalance of the body, such as after too much alcohol or a severe bout of diarrhea. It may be a complication of an infectious process such as acute pneumonia and it can occur in individuals apparently during variations in blood sugar levels.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias, which includes more information on this problem. Other readers who are interested in atrial fibrillation, skipped beats, palpitations and tachycardias can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Certainly anyone who has such a problem should eliminate coffee, tea, colas and caffeine-containing drinks. And, as your doctor has advised your husband, he should eliminate cigarettes. Alcohol should probably be prohibited and if there's any triggering factor in lifestyle that's been found to be associated with the problem, it should be eliminated or controlled.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Bonaparte, 13, from beautiful Colorado Springs, Colo., is unhappy with his name and would like to hear what other teens have to say about odd first names. Beverly O'Hara, 17, from San Diego, Calif., and Percy Pride, 17, who lives in Springfield, Ohio, will do the honors.

Dr. Wallace: As you can see by my signature, my problem is my first name. I don't like it at all and I have always taken a terrible ribbing from my friends.

My mother is proud of the name because it is her maiden name. She has instructed all my teachers to address me as Bonaparte but I would like to be called by my middle name, Brian.

I would like to hear what you and your teen guest writers have to say about parents branding their children with stupid names. — Bonaparte, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Bonaparte: I agree with you totally that "odd" first names can be very irritating to the bearer. Many times parents do not realize all the problems they give their child when they saddle him or her with an oddball moniker.

By the way, do you know O.J. Simpson's real first name? It's Orenthal. No wonder he uses O.J. — Dr. Wallace

Hi B.: I just can't greet you as Bonaparte. I think it is a stupid name and I think your mother was very selfish by hanging it on you. But you are fortunate that once you get out from under mother's wing, you can legally change your name or better yet, go by Brian. — Beverly, San Diego, Calif. Hello Bonaparte: I know how you feel. My parents named me Percy after my grandfather. Thank goodness, I go by my middle name, Allen. My dad was overseas in the military when I was born. When he got home, he was furious that my mom slapped a Percy on me and he would not allow me to use it (thank goodness) because I can't think of a name worse than Percy — unless it would happen to Bonaparte. Good luck. — Percy I mean Allen, Springfield, Ohio

If you would like to be a guest teen writer, please write to me in care of this newspaper.

For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Some people sure have evil minds. (Including you!) Why should anyone suspect Beverly of hanky-panky because she leaves her home at 6 a.m. for a 15-minute drive to a job that doesn't begin until 8 a.m.?

I'm not due at my job until 8 a.m., but I always get there at 7 a.m. That's the only time of day I don't have to put up with ringing telephones and kids yelling and fighting. The office is quiet, and I use the time to organize my day's work.

Also, I take the bus, and it's never crowded at 6:30 a.m., the traffic isn't as heavy, and I never have to stand up.

I can't see dashing through the office door just before the clock strikes 8 the way most of my co-workers do. Some are so nervy they arrive at 8 a.m., prepare coffee and sit around drinking it until 8:30!

NO SLACKER IN TWIN FALLS

DEAR ABBY: I have a strange (and touchy) problem. We recently retired and moved to a lovely resort town. In the six months we've been here, we've had five different couples from all over the country visit us. Some stayed a weekend. Others longer.

Our guests use a sofa-bed in the library where all our books are kept.

Several days ago my husband and I were discussing a certain book, so I went to get it. It was gone. In fact, on the same shelf I saw four "holes" where four other books had been. I hate to think that one of our houseguests had taken these books, but there is no other explanation.

I have made a practice of writing my name on the flyleaf of all my books, but, of course, the flyleaf could have easily been torn out.

My question: If I should visit the home of one of these guests and see a book I'm sure is mine, should I ignore it, or say something? And if you think I should say something, what should I say?

DISAPPOINTED

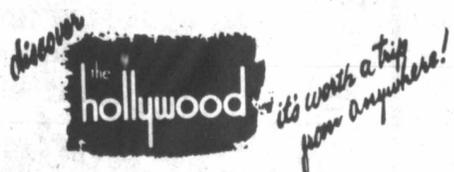

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Don't ignore it. Say, "I see you were so fascinated with my book that you took it home to finish it. May I have it now?"

DEAR ABBY: I recently was a maid of honor and a bridesmaid in two weddings. On both occasions neither my parents nor my boyfriend were invited.

Is it no longer proper to invite the parents of those in the wedding party to enjoy the wedding festivities? And don't you think the maid of honor and the bridesmaids should be allowed to bring a guest?

ILLINOIS INQUIRY

DEAR INQUIRY: Unless the parents of those in the wedding party would have been invited anyway, they shouldn't expect to be invited because their daughter (or son) is in the wedding party. And as for bringing a guest, only fiancés of those in the wedding parties should be included.

Problems perplex store's customers

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though we have been assured that rubber bands and paper clips will continue to hold the world economy together, at least through tomorrow, there remain some very puzzling concerns.

—With the Christmas catalogue season upon us, why is it that the best customer sometimes get the worst price?

The situation comes about this way: Existing customers are mailed the latest issues of catalogues from which they have previously ordered, and urged to place their holiday orders early.

Meanwhile, through direct mailings or media advertisements, the company seeks new customers by offering them a one-time discount from the regular, or catalogue, price.

Asked why this was done, an officer of one company, Pfalzer Bros., a Chicago meat products company, replied that almost all companies do it in order to attract new customers.

He assured the complainant that it was in his best interests that they do so, presumably in order for the company to raise its volume and thus hold catalogue prices from being even higher.

But why discriminate against loyal customers? The Pfalzer man didn't explain. Nor did he explain why, for a limited time and perhaps a limited quantity, the discount couldn't apply to everyone?

—What is it that E. F. Hutton says?
An informal survey of less than a dozen people revealed all familiar with the E. F. Hutton advertisements, but no one who was immediately familiar with the big broker's advice.

They had heard and seen the well known words of the TV commercial, "When E. F. Hutton talks, people listen." But after that just silence, and a picture of people listening. But to what?

—Automobile rental rates have risen, in part because of higher fuel prices. Most rates quoted today are dry rates, meaning you pay extra for whatever gasoline you use. And sometimes you pay extra, extra.

New York-area customers of Avis, for example, have been startled to find how much they are charged for gasoline, especially when they stop to examine their computer-calculated bill, which estimates consumption.

Some customers have defied the ire of impatient customers behind them in line and asked that the car's gasoline tank be measured in order to determine real as opposed to estimated consumption.

One such customer has found invariably that the more time-consuming procedure resulted in substantially lower bills. In a typical instance, a mileage charge of just under $7 was corrected to less than $4.

The attendant explained: "We use the official miles per gallon estimates for city and country driving in calculating the charge. When most of the driving is in the country, however, less fuel is used."

Abortion backers oppose legislation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislation limiting the use of federal funds for abortions will lead to a return to "back alley abortions," according to leaders of the Texas branch of National Abortion Rights Action Week.

Peggy Romberg, director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, said the week was designated to "affirming a woman's right to reproductive freedom at a time when the right to safe, legal abortion is under attack."

"If we could state a theme for this week of varied activities sponsored by many pro-choice groups, it would be translating majority opinion into reality," Ms. Romberg told a Capitol news conference Monday marking the start of the week.

She was joined by officials from the National Organization of Women, Texas Women's Political Caucus and the Texas Branch of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Ms. Romberg said several polls show a majority of Americans support "a woman's right to have an abortion." She said lawmakers who placed the limit on federally funded abortions have ignored the polls.

"They treat it as ice cream that women are being denied because they were sexually active... like it's a luxury item to be sought after like a fur coat or ice cream," said Ms. Romberg.

The federal legislation limits the use of federal money to cases where the pregnancy was caused by incest or rape and cases where the pregnancy could endanger the mother. Ms. Romberg complained the legislation has endangered the lives of poor women who cannot afford abortions by qualified persons.

She said the law changes the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision that abortion is legal.

"The Congress has, in effect, said the 1973 decision does not apply to the poor, and current restrictions mean that only 1 percent of the women who previously received aid can get it now," she stated.

Vicky Worsham, coordinator of the Austin Now chapter, said: "NOW believes reproductive rights are essential to women's equality."

FOCUS

President Houston

You won't find Sam Houston's name on any list of the 39 U.S. presidents. But on this day in 1836, Houston became president of Texas, which was then an independent country. Houston, who spent much of his early life in Tennessee, became governor of that state in 1827. Later he moved to Texas, where he led the Texan army that defeated the Mexican General Santa Anna. His victory forced Mexico to recognize Texan independence. As president, Houston worked to have Texas admitted to the United States. After Texas joined the union in 1845, Houston served as a U.S. senator and later governor. He was forced out of the governor's office in 1861, for opposing his state's decision to join the Confederacy.

DO YOU KNOW — Which two U.S. presidents were born in Texas?

History of primaries a key to understanding

WASHINGTON (AP) — To understand the 1980 presidential primaries, it helps to remember the year a Massachusetts senator named Kennedy outpolled everyone and a California governor named Brown had the second highest vote total.

Or recall the year Sen. Barry Goldwater was the man to beat for the Republican nomination and in the early primaries nearly everyone did.

And don't forget Sen. George McGovern, who lost most of the early primaries, while he was winning delegates in non-primary states, and then won a couple of important tests at the end.

It was a big year for the primary system in 1960. Sixteen states held presidential primaries and Sen. John F. Kennedy knew that his only chance for the Democratic nomination lay in demonstrating his appeal by winning most of them.

Kennedy entered 10 and won 10. He didn't go to California where Gov. Edmund G. Brown ran as a favorite son. In those days the governor commonly was referred to as Pat Brown. Now he's often identified as the father of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., commonly referred to as Jerry Brown.

Four years later, Goldwater had rough going in the early primaries. Henry Cabot Lodge, running as a write-in, outpolled Goldwater in New Hampshire by more than 12,000 votes. The Arizona senator won the Illinois primary a month later and then lost to Lodge in New Jersey and Massachusetts and to William W. Scranton in Pennsylvania. Despite his losses in primaries, Goldwater was the favorite of a lot of Republicans and when he defeated Nelson Rockefeller in the California primary June 2, that nailed down the nomination. Those were simpler times with fewer primaries.

In 1972, a year in which the number of primaries increased to 21, McGovern lost a lot of the early big ones — New Hampshire, Florida, Pennsylvania and Ohio — but went on to win the Democratic nomination.

Jimmy Carter made the most of early primaries in 1976, winning most of them, so that by April 27, when he finished first in Pennsylvania, the race was over.

PBS happy with proposals for network's Program Fair

NEW YORK (AP) — The deadline for submitting series proposals for public television's first Program Fair was Monday, and the project's sponsors said they were pleased with the response to their call for innovative new material.

"We made a very concentrated effort to get independent producers on our bandwagon," said Ron Devilier, a vice president for programming for the Public Broadcasting Service, "and we're feeling very good about the response."

"Last year, we had one series proposal from an independent producer," Devilier said, "and this year, with the Program Fair, we have 35. Not all of those will get on the air, but we're excited about the number of proposals."

Independent producers have long complained that the PBS programming system does not welcome their work. In fact, the recent Carnegie Commission on the Future of Public Broadcasting acknowledged "complaints by independent producers about lack of access and attention."

The commission, reporting in January, suggested creation of a Center for Independent Television, "whose job would be to develop broadcast formats that can take advantage of the range of talent among independent producers."

There have been modest attempts to expand the market for independents. PBS circulated an Independent Producers Handbook about 18 months ago, and some stations, like New York's WNET, sponsor projects to encourage work by independent filmmakers.

Nonetheless, one method PBS uses to select programs, the Station Program Cooperative, has in a sense been counter-productive to the development of independent sources of programs.

"The SPC has developed a fairly predictable pattern, with most of the available funds being committed to series the stations are most familiar with," PBS said in announcing the Program Fair project last August.

Most of the proposals for series will be reviewed, Devilier said, during the Program Fair, to be held during PBS' annual programming conference in San Francisco Jan. 13-17.

The selected programs will be screened by station officials as a step in the normal SPC bidding process. In SPC, stations bid on programs submitted by stations and groups of stations, as well as outside sources.

Sells' win national sailboat race title

Tommy Sells of Pampa doesn't know how to swim, but he sure knows how to sail.

Last week Sells and his crewmate, wife Jean, won the Bluewater National Sailboat Racing Championship at Lake Meredith, beating out seven other competitors for the coveted silver cup.

"It was quite a thrill for us," said the lifelong Pampa resident. "It's the first time we've ever won anything like that before."

Sells dominated the event, winning six first places, two third places and one fifth place in the ten heat race. Entrants are allowed to scratch one race.

Randy Webb Amarillo, was runnerup, Kathy Davis, also of Amarillo, but a former Pampan, was third, and Mark Warner, Pampa, was fourth.

Although Sells steered the 14-foot craft to victory in the choppy waters, he dishes out a lot of credit to his wife.

"Jean acts as a lookout and gives us extra weight," Sells said. "The water was rough that day with three foot sholls and a 25 mile an hour wind behind it."

The Sells won another trophy in July, taking second in the first annual Bluewater Cup race John Calis, who won a silver medal in the Winter Olympics last year, was first-place winner.

"He made it look so easy it was unreal," Sells said. "The man is a real sport. He took time to give me some pointers. He helped everyone out there in some way."

Sells appears to be an easy learner because he didn't learn how to race a sailboat until last March.

"We powerboated and water skied for 17 years mainly for the benefit of our kids, but when they graduated we decided to try sailing. I had my eye on a sailboat for quite sometime and I just had to buy it."

Sells considers a sailboat the safest vessel afloat, but he believes in safety first.

"Always wear a lifejacket," Sells urged. "I can't swim, but even if I could I would never be in a boat without one."

The Nationals will be held in Dallas next year and the Sells plan to be there.

Steelers look like NFL champs again

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Denver Broncos' timing was off. They met the wrong team at the wrong time.

"The real Pittsburgh Steelers showed up tonight," quarterback Terry Bradshaw said after a revitalized Pittsburgh crushed Denver 42-7 Monday night in a National Football League game.

"They kicked our fannies. We got humiliated," said Denver quarterback Craig Morton.

The week before, the Steelers fumbled nine times in a 34-10 loss in Cincinnati. It was the worst Pittsburgh defeat in nine seasons, dating back to a 29-3 loss to Houston in 1971.

But Bradshaw passed for 267 yards and two touchdowns in the nationally televised game and Franco Harris rushed for 121 yards and two more scores as the Steelers dealt the Broncos their worst loss since 1968, when they were thumped 43-7 by Oakland.

"That's the Steeler team I know," said Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll. "We were better in all departments. We got after it much better than we did last week. I think to a man we had everyone functioning the way we have to for us to win in this league."

The Steelers had been limited in practice in previous weeks by injuries. But last week, Noll had a virtual return to training camp, complete with conditioning runs and no-fumble drills.

It paid off as the Steelers climbed to 6-2 and into sole possession of first place in the AFC Central Division.

The Broncos, meanwhile, slipped to 5-3 and into second place behind San Diego in the AFC West. And Denver Coach "Red" Miller was downright displeased.

"We were outplayed, outcoached and very embarrassed in front of a lot of people," Miller said. "Not just here, across the country."

"This was the worst, most humiliating defeat in the 30 years I've been associated with football. And I don't like it. I don't know how anybody could stomach that and live with themselves."

By halftime, the Steelers held a 28-7 lead.

In the first quarter, a 56-yard run by Harris set up an 11-yard touchdown pass from Bradshaw to Lynn Swann, back in the lineup after missing two games with a hamstring pull.

In the second quarter, Bradshaw's passing set up a pair of short touchdown runs by Harris and another by Sidney Thornton.

"Ever since the league went to a 16-game schedule, every team has a lot of ups and downs," said Denver linebacker Bob Swenson. "Last week, Pittsburgh was down. This time we were."

Bradshaw, who hit 18 of 24 passes, added a 17-yard scoring pass in the final quarter to Thornton. And Steeler rookie Anthony Anderson booted 10 yards for his first pro touchdown with 26 seconds left in the game.

"We moved the ball well, but we didn't get many points," Morton said. "That's very discouraging. There's not much you can say except they really beat us. They scored a lot. We didn't."

The Steelers finished with 530 offensive yards compared to 329 by Denver. On the ground, Pittsburgh netted 236 yards, compared to Denver's 53, and the Steelers did it without their usual trap blocking.

"Most games, we'd trap our grandmother if she was there," said Bradshaw. "But not tonight. We went straight at them. We went back to basics, big men against big men. And I think that surprised them."

Meanwhile, the Broncos left here sounding like the Steelers did the week before.

The Steelers figure to stick to basics this week as they prepare to meet Dallas here Sunday.

"We played fundamental football tonight, Steeler football," said linebacker Jack Ham. "Before, we had guys banged up and we were practicing half-speed, and all of a sudden we were playing half-speed."

Spikers meet Sandies tonight in showdown

Pampa's spikers visit Amarillo tonight for a District 3-AAAA showdown in the Sandie fieldhouse.

Pampa got in shape for tonight's key loop clash with a 14-9, 14-1 victory over Dumas in Dumas last night. That win made Pampa 19-1 on the year.

The Harvesters, 3-0 in district action, could win the first-half title outright with a victory over the Sandies, 2-0. For Amarillo to win the title, the Sandies must beat Pampa and Palo Duro Thursday night. If Palo Duro beats the Sandies, a victory over Pampa would mean Amarillo High and Pampa would be deadlocked for the first-half crown.

The contest begins at 6:30 p.m. tonight with the junior varsity game.

The Sandies, 21-1, downed Pampa in the championship match of the West Texas State tournament, the two teams only meeting this fall. Amarillo High won, 13-11, 15-9.

Amarillo High defeated Pampa last year in the teams' first district matchup, and went on to win the first-half title. Pampa forced a playoff by defeating Amarillo High in the second-half and winning that crown. The Sandies came out on top in the playoff.

Pampa's JV also won last night in Dumas, taking a 15-11, 15-17, 15-8 decision.

Faculty says Kush treated unfairly

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — An Arizona State University faculty group says Frank Kush was treated unfairly in the way he was ousted as head football coach.

The ASU Faculty Association, in a statement Monday, also charged that Kush was denied due process by not being allowed to face his accusers or provide a defense before he was relieved by Athletic Director Fred Miller on Oct. 13.

"All members of the university community are accountable for their actions," the group said. "But there are, or ought to be, appropriate methods for judging whether an individual's actions are so seriously in conflict with the standards of the university that dismissal from one's post is in order."

The association also proposed that eight full-time faculty members comprise a majority of the university's Intercollegiate Athletic Board, instead of the present five. The association also asked for a full report from the present 15-member board on the Kush matter, "including all aspects of the board's involvement in the decision."

Miller accused Kush of lying about punching former ASU punter Kevin Rutledge and trying to force others to cover it up. Rutledge's $1.1 million lawsuit against Kush, Miller and the university is pending.

Soviets urge children not to attend Olympics

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities, faced with an expected influx of 220,000 tourists for the 1980 Moscow Olympics, are attempting to reduce the city's population by urging children — and many adults — to make plans to leave the city.

Officials of the Ministry of Education and the Olympic Organizing Committee distributed appeals at Moscow elementary schools urging parents to send their children to visit relatives outside the city, or to the network of "pioneer camps," during July and August. The camps, subsidized by trade unions, hosted over 600,000 Moscow children last year.

"Of course, there can be no compulsion in this matter," conceded an educational ministry official Monday. "This is not an order, just a suggestion to parents."

There are about a million children of elementary school age in Moscow, a city of eight million residents.

Officials said the main reasons for getting a large number of children out of the city was a fear that they would get in the way of the massive Olympic operation, or that the influx of tourists might affect their health.

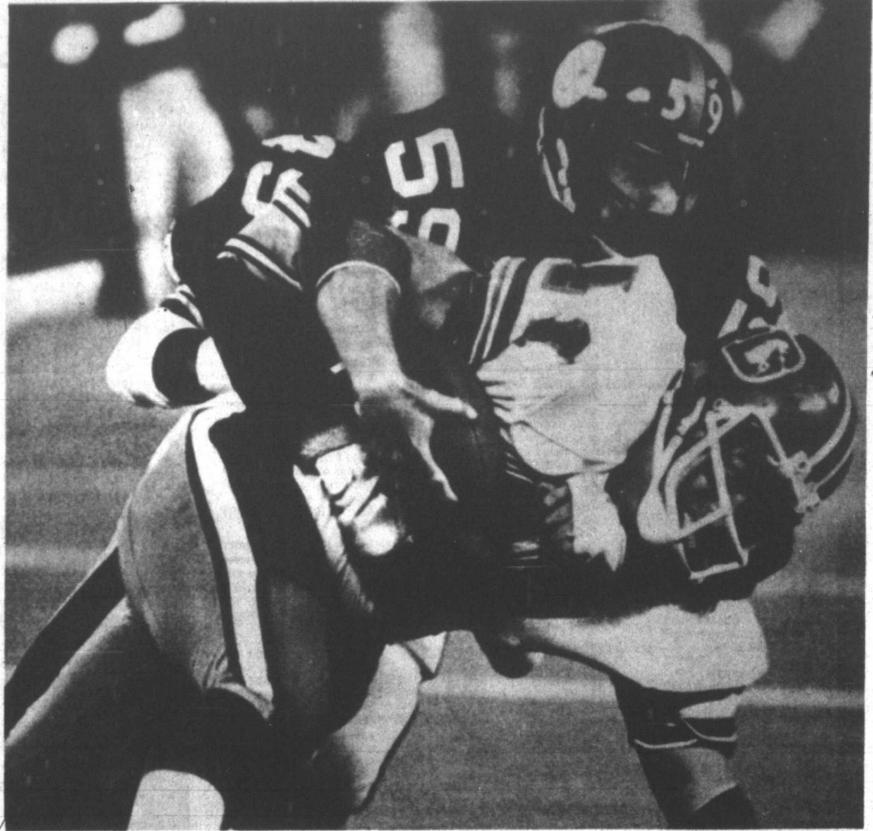

Privately, however, Soviet officials have expressed irritation at children who pester tourists with appeals for chewing gum, and at the alleged spreading of "ideological propaganda" by foreign visitors to impressionable Soviet youths.

Williams named top manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Seasoned Dick Williams, who led the expansionist Montreal Expos to their best baseball year ever, Tuesday was named The Associated Press' National League Manager of the Year for 1979.

It is the second such award for Williams, who was selected as the American League Manager of the Year after winning a division title with the Oakland A's in 1971.

Williams won the NL award in a relatively close battle with Houston's Bill Virdon, who had the Astros in the thick of the Western Division race until the last few days of the season.

A nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters gave Williams 113 votes to 95 for Virdon.

Under Williams, the Expos came the closest they ever did to winning the NL Eastern Division championship. They finished with a 95-65 record, two games behind the Pittsburgh Pirates, who went on to win the World Series.

Until this season, the Expos had never finished over .500 in their previous 10 years in the league.

This is Williams' third year in Montreal. His previous experience as a manager was all in the American League, where he managed the Boston Red Sox, Oakland and the California Angels over a span of nine seasons.

Williams managed Oakland to World Series victories in 1972 and 1973, becoming the first non-New York Yankee field boss to win consecutive world championships since Connie Mack. He also guided the Red Sox to the AL pennant in 1967 in his first year as a major league manager. He has 941 major league victories thus far.

As a player, the California-born Williams spent 14 years in the majors as an outfielder and utility infielder with Brooklyn, Baltimore, Cleveland, Kansas City and Boston.

Jennings named player of week

Senior linebacker Mark Jennings of Pampa was named this week as District AAAA defensive player of the week.

Jennings ran two interceptions back for touchdowns against Amarillo Caprock in a 34-13 Harvesters victory last Friday night.

In addition, the 190-pounder was in on 15 tackles.

Jennings, who didn't play varsity ball as a junior, reacted to Caprock's pass patterns quickly and was able to get in front of the ball, according to Harvester coach Danny Palmer.

Palmer said Jennings also has deceptive speed, running a 4.94.

Booster club meets tonight

Harvesters Booster Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the high school cafeteria to show a film of Pampa's 34-13 victory over Amarillo Caprock last week.

The public is invited to attend.

Sheriff faces town's ire after exposing payoff ring

WEIRTON, W. Va. (AP) — Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Donnell shares a grim joke with his friend, Bob Leach. When Donnell turns the ignition key in his cruiser, Leach steps back, plugs his ears and grimaces.

He looks as if he expects the car to explode. The macabre ritual was born of the fear that has gripped Donnell and his family since last January, when he blew the whistle on county Prosecutor Robert Altomare and a score of gamblers who paid Altomare to escape prosecution.

The indictments made Donnell an unpopular figure in Weirton, his hometown of about 25,000 people. Many considered him a turncoat who'd sold out his friends.

Since the indictments and through the months of trials, rumors circulated that Donnell would be killed, that his house would be firebombed. Rumors twice prompted police to send the family away and shake out the home.

The sheriff said he has heard a tape recording in which a local hoodlum tells friends the way to get Donnell is with a high-powered rifle.

Guns are now part of the Donells' daily life. Alice Donnell, the sheriff's wife, was taught how to shoot by a policeman who sometimes stayed with the family. Nearly every room in the ranch-style house has a loaded weapon within easy reach.

"You're not going to catch me going out of the house without a pistol," Donnell, 34, said as he carefully tucked a shiny silver revolver into his trousers.

Donnell's daughters, Alison, 8, and Aimee, 6, have been escorted to school each day by state troopers. Metal plates were installed in the windows of the girls' bedrooms.

Donnell consented to be interviewed only after the last of the trials was completed, that of Weirton attorney Emmanuel Loucas. Donnell was the government's key witness in the trial.

Last Thursday night, Loucas was found guilty in U.S. District Court in Wheeling on one count of traveling in interstate commerce to promote and manage unlawful activities.

Altomare was earlier sentenced to 10 years in prison on federal convictions of racketeering, conspiracy, obstruction of justice and obstructing the enforcement of state law. He is appealing.

Of 25 persons indicted, 20 were convicted or pleaded guilty, four were acquitted and two had trials delayed because of illness.

By appearance, Donnell would have to be considered an unlikely hero. He is baby-faced and soft-spoken. At the trials, his glasses kept slipping down his nose; he repeatedly shoved them back up with a finger.

Donnell grew up in Weirton. He was president of his high school student body and graduated from Alderson-Broadus College with a psychology degree. After a hitch in the Army, he returned home to work in a steel mill and as a probation officer.

He was elected sheriff on the Republican ticket in 1976. During his campaign, Donnell said, he was approached by a known gambler who said a good sheriff could make $100,000 a year — tax-free — by taking payoffs.

The gambler gave him a signed card for free meals at a Pittsburgh restaurant and sent him two cases of whiskey and five cases of beer, Donnell testified.

Donnell said he was not surprised that people thought he could be bought.

"I was no different than any other sheriff that walked in there — I had a price tag," he said. "They figured I was young. I was naive, we don't really have to offer him that much."

The indictments and convictions were obtained on the strength of tape recordings of telephone calls and personal conversations involving Altomare and the others.

All taping was done with the help of state police and the FBI, who often monitored the conversations from nearby vans.

During one conversation between the sheriff and the prosecutor, during which they were emptying a confiscated slot machine, Altomare pulled the last tissue from a tissue box and almost discovered the tape recorder concealed inside.

When the grand jury indictments came down in January, many in the community rallied to Altomare's defense and turned against Donnell.

"There's a lot of family ties involved in something like this," Donnell said. "It's not as if I was a stranger. It became very personal with a lot of people. It wasn't whether they were doing right or wrong — or I was doing right or wrong."

SHERIFF RONALD DONELL of Hancock County, W. Va., sits at home with his wife Alice and daughters Aimee (left) and Alison. Sheriff Donnell is deciding about running for public office despite the emotional trauma he and his family have gone through.

Parents key to fighting drug abuse

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — If parents will channel their children's interests to sports and will admit alcohol and tobacco are drugs, they will have made a great stride toward solving juvenile drug abuse problems, according to speakers at an international conference.

Parents who prefer a pre-supper martini to conversations with their kids ought to admit they are using the liquor as a sedative, according to Karst Besteman in remarks to more than 250 delegates from 17 Latin American countries.

Besteman, deputy director of the National Institute of Drug Abuse, told the 4th Border Conference on Prevention of Drug Abuse "parents must explain their own drug-taking behavior openly and honestly."

"Try to encourage parents to realize that some of the behaviors we talk about are natural," said Besteman, a 20-year veteran in drug abuse work. "Parents can help children develop healthy alternatives to drug abuse."

Speaking of alcohol and tobacco, Besteman said, "These are our drugs, these are the drugs we grew up with, feel comfortable with and believe are part of our cultural heritage. But let's label them for what they are. They're all drugs, it's just how you use them."

Besteman said use of legal drugs usually precedes use of illegal drugs.

Another speaker, Dr. Ramiro Ramirez Perez, of the Mexican drug abuse organization, reported on a sports program in Piedras Negras, Mexico.

Ramirez Perez, with Centros de Integración Juvenil, explained how the sports programs involves the athletes, their parents and other children in the family. He urged organized sports activities as an alternative to drug use.

Mrs. William P. Clements, wife of the Texas governor, spoke to a conference luncheon.

"We must treat and hope to rehabilitate (children) who are victimized," she said, "but we must also prevent it in those who face the temptation."

CARD OF THANKS

WE WISH to thank our neighbors, friends and anyone who in any way acted in love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved husband and father.
He would not want the ones he loves to grieve for him today.
We must not say that he is dead, for he is just away.
Away upon a journey to a land that is bright and fair.
And though we will miss him here, we know he's happy there.
And memories of him will bring new comfort, every day.
As we recall, he is not dead, for he is just away.
Thank you
The Whitson, The Graham and the Horton families.

Many variables can affect results of public polls

Second in a series
By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

Does the American public support or oppose the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty?
Yes. And no.

It depends upon the poll — for the percentage in favor has been reported at anywhere from 26 to 87 percent.

The wide variation in results doesn't mean the polls are wrong. It does show, though, that polls on complex issues must be read warily if mistaken conclusions are to be avoided.

Key to the big swing on SALT was the way the question was asked. But a poll's results can be swayed in other ways.

These include the order of the questions, whether the interview was done in person or over the phone, the date of the interview and the skill of the pollster in analyzing the results.

And sometimes a poll tries to define public opinion before the public has made up its mind.

"Because there's a percentage there, it doesn't mean the public opinion is there," says Albert H. Cantril, president of the National Council on Public Polling.

Political polls present their own problems. It's easy for people to "vote" in the polls for any imagined ideal. But on election day, they face imperfect candidates and compromise, deciding perhaps that the candidate who once looked so unattractive is the best of the lot.

Professor Philip E. Converse of the University of Michigan mentions yet another problem with political polls.

"The fuzziest part of these predictions is who is actually going to vote," says Converse, who characterizes attempts to compensate for it as "the kinds of games that pollsters get into — a real art."

And when pollsters try to make up for flaws in their sample — a disproportionate number of, say, Democrats on an election question — they veer farthest from the science of polling toward its art.

On the very eve of an election, however, the art has been sufficiently refined so that pollsters can come quite close to the ultimate result. The electorate has by then made final decisions, and pollsters can also get a pretty good idea by then who will vote.

Normally, the only clue to the soundness of a poll is sampling error. But this just recognizes that pollsters can't count on exactly matching the group interviewed with the whole population.

Pollsters acknowledge that sampling error may be far less important than question wording. Yet it is the exact wording that pollsters often fail to provide or that the media leave out of poll results.

In the case of the SALT question — which embraces concern about communism, national security and pacifism, among other things — what the pollster asked was crucial.

Two of the major polls last spring showed about the same opposition to the treaty. But another four had exactly opposite results.

According to Converse's analysis, the main difference was whether the poll measured support for an arms limitation treaty in principle or for the actual treaty before the Senate.

He says that the contrasting results seem to mirror the sentiment of those U.S. senators who say they favor a limit on the arms race — but not this SALT treaty.

Last April, The Associated Press-NBC News poll asked, "Do you favor or oppose a new agreement between the United States and Russia which would limit nuclear weapons?" Sixty-eight percent said they favored it.

A Harris question for ABC News subsequently asked, "Would you favor or oppose the U.S. and Russia coming to a new SALT arms agreement?" The percentage in favor was 72 percent.

In June, a CBS-New York Times poll came to a similar result on a question of support in principle for an agreement to limit nuclear weapons. Asked whether "you favor or oppose the United States and Russia coming to an agreement to limit nuclear weapons," 77 percent replied that they favored it.

Responses were strikingly different in the same poll to a later question that specifically referred to the upcoming debate on the "U.S. treaty with the Soviet Union which limits strategic nuclear weapons — called SALT." Only 27 percent of the whole sample said they thought the Senate should vote for it.

The AP-NBC poll also sought to filter out the uninformed public but did so by asking respondents whether they had heard or read enough about the proposed treaty to have an opinion. It found that 36 percent of the sample put themselves in this category and that 26 percent of this group said they favored it.

Roper came up with a number in the same range, 33 percent in favor. His question was especially specific. Note that it includes a reference to controversy.

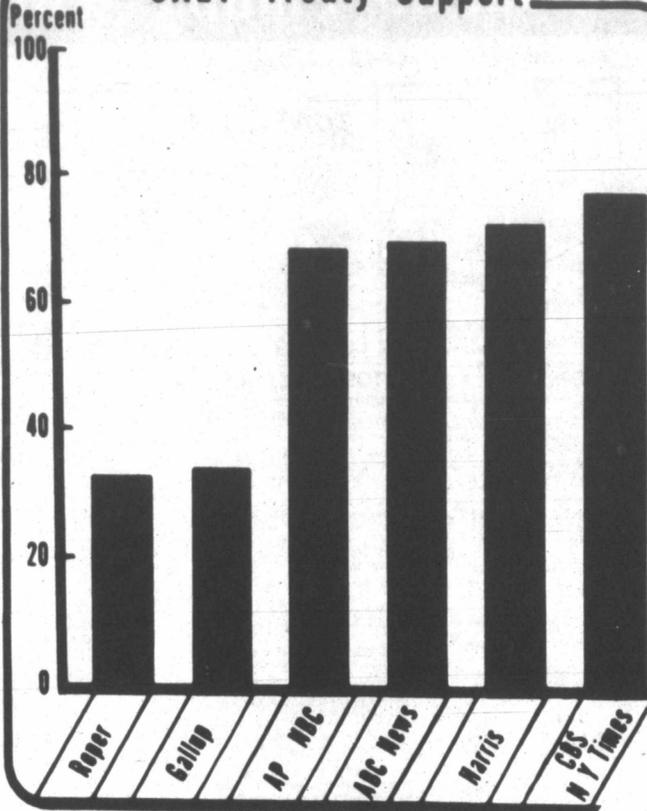

"The U.S. and Russian negotiators have about reached agreement on a SALT treaty. The treaty, which would last until 1985, limits each country to a maximum of 2,250 long-range nuclear missiles and bombers. As you know, there's a good deal of controversy about this proposed treaty. Do you think the U.S. Senate should vote for this new SALT treaty or against it?"

If the sample is told that an issue is controversial, Converse says, "the chances of it going negative are greatly increased."

When Gallup posed the question in June, it asked this question of those respondents who could volunteer an advantage or disadvantage of the treaty: "Everything considered, would you like to see the U.S. Senate ratify (vote in favor of) this proposed treaty, or not?"

On this basis, Gallup said 34 percent of Americans favored it.

SALT Treaty Support

POLL PERCENTAGES concerning support for the SALT Treaty are shown based on six different pollings. The wide variation doesn't mean the polls are wrong. The key to the big swing on SALT was the way the question was asked. Other variables can influence the results of such polls.

Clements to wait on naming new DA

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements says the governor will not name a new Hidalgo County district attorney until Oscar McInnis completes his appeal of a disbarment ruling.

A state judge last week told McInnis to give up his law license. The ruling came after the State Bar of Texas convinced a civil court jury McInnis had lied to a federal grand jury and planned a murder.

The disbarment suit was filed after McInnis was named in a June 1978 federal indictment charging he plotted to have a friend's ex-husband lured into Mexico and killed. The man was not killed. The longtime prosecutor also was named in perjury indictments charging he lied to a federal grand jury when asked about the purported plot.

The murder conspiracy charge was thrown out by a federal judge, but McInnis will be tried on the perjury counts.

Jon Ford, a Clements spokesman, said Monday the governor was told by his general counsel that the disbarment is not final until the appeals are completed. McInnis' lawyers have said they will appeal.
