

In the free society government keeps the peace, protects private property, and enforces contracts. Government must do these things effectively and it must do nothing else otherwise the conditions absolutely necessary to genuine personal freedom in society are absent.

BILL CLAYTON

Clayton: Special session to be called

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Speaker of the House Bill Clayton, in Pampa for an appreciation dinner and reception honoring State Representative Foster Whaley Saturday, said the State Legislature will be called into special session "sometime after the first of the year."

Clayton said he had recently talked to Gov. Bill Clements and the governor wants the special session to consider three items: initiative and referendum, wiretaps for drug traffic, and tax relief.

"I'm not sure exactly when it will be, but there will definitely be a special session called and it will be after the first of the year," Clayton said. "The governor wants to fulfill some of his campaign promises and he feels this is the way to do it."

He added that the special session will cost between $1.5 and 3 million. Such sessions are convened for 30 days. Clayton also said that Clements could bring in another item if he wanted, such as an increase in the state sales tax.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said last week that a two cent increase in the tax is "nothing short of greed." Clayton agreed, saying it is "certainly a terrific increase."

He added that in the July, 1978 special session of the Legislature, taxes were the main concern.

"You draw up a gamut like that — tax relief — and it's hard to deal with," Clayton said. "If you bring up the sales tax, we might be able to broaden the base in the Legislature enough for the governor to deal with it."

State sales taxes last year produced about $2.5 billion in income, nearly 42 percent of taxes collected to pay for state government.

Before the appreciation reception honoring Whaley, the House Agriculture Commodities subcommittee of the Agriculture and Livestock committee met in a public meeting at the Gray County Courthouse.

The six-member committee heard testimony from area farmers concerning discussion of a federal grain insurance corporation to guarantee farmers a place for their grain in elevators.

J.E. Crabtree, manager of the Conlen Grain and Mercantile, testified that federal or state warehouse acts that were meant to "protect depositors who deposit grain in the warehouses" don't protect the depositors.

He added that if the government agrees to license warehouses, they should agree to "pay them the market price" for their grain.

Crabtree said if the elevator does not pay the farmer that price for his grain, he should be punished.

Mrs. Leo Moore, business manager for Dalhart's 5M Farm and Ranch, testified "there hasn't been anything done that matters."

She added that farmers "earn every dollar they earn" but if a grain operator loses money somewhere, the farmer loses money because he is paid less by the operator. She said farmers are supposedly insured on the warehouse certificates they receive, but "you don't really get your money."

"These people should be punished and it needs to be severe," Mrs. Moore said.

Bill Nelson, representative of the Texas Wheat Producers, said a state licensing authority needs to be established to authorize bonding companies which bond grain warehouses.

At the reception honoring Whaley were Clayton, representatives Bob Simpson of Arhario, Susan McBeck of Del Rio, Pete Patterson of Brookston, Forrest Green of Corsicana, and Bob Close of Perryton.

A chili supper was held at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion Saturday night to conclude the festivities.

Finding purchase money tough for house hunters

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer

Real estate agents often say house-hunting can be an "adventure," but the real adventure these days is not finding a house — it's finding the money to buy it.

That's the word from Texas bankers, savings and loan officers, real estate salesmen and would-be homebuyers. They say mortgage money has dried up in Texas, and few of them think it will improve any time soon.

In El Paso: "It is dismal."

In Lubbock: "(Lending) is relatively at a stop."

In Longview: "You are hurting either buying or selling."

In Corpus Christi: "We have a market crying out for money and we have no money in the city (to lend)."

"We're unable to serve 75 percent of the people who come into this office," said Abilene real estate agent Jimmy Partin, "people we could have helped just six or eight months ago."

The problem, the money men say, is simple to explain but hard to solve.

"The cost of our money coming in is higher than what we can lend it out for," said Jerry Phillips, a loan officer in Wichita Falls.

"I don't think there's any question whose fault it is," said

Longview savings and loan president Irving McCracken. "The problem is caused by inflation."

"In economics we learn that inflation, by definition, is too many dollars chasing too few goods. We very simply have too many dollars in our economy. The Federal Reserve Board is tightening the money supply and that's driving up interest rates."

In addition, the men who decide whether to make home loans are, instead, investing their money elsewhere. The state-imposed ceiling on home loan interest rates is 12 percent. The lenders can do better than that in other markets.

"The rate in California has gone to 14 percent," said Lubbock savings association president Charles Perry. "If I could charge that, I might be in the (home loan) market. But Lubbock is relatively at a stop on home loans."

Many lending institutions are taking a wait-and-see attitude.

"We're not putting out any mortgage money now," said loan manager Eleanor Eyring in Corpus Christi. "If we take your application it would be December at the earliest before we could grant a loan, and we won't quote a rate for December right now. They'd have to be willing to wait."

"We have a big potential right now and we don't have any money," she said.

"We're a little bit different egg," said Phillips in Wichita Falls, "because we had a tornado and a third of our town disappeared, so there's a high demand for funds. But if we make any more commitments we might not have any money to meet them. We'd have to borrow, and it would cost us more than we'd be earning. It just doesn't fit."

And the solution?

"I don't know what the answer is," said Partin in Abilene.

"I really don't know the answers an. I'm not sure anyone does," said Perry in Lubbock.

Tom Utter is working on a temporary answer. He is Corpus Christi's Neighborhood Development director, and he said the city is considering a city-backed bond election that would put money in the housing market.

"In Texas, Gov. Clements signed a bill to let the city create a non-profit corporation which issues tax-exempt bonds. The proceeds are placed with local financial institutions, below market rate."

Utter said that money would be made available to low- and middle-income homebuyers. He said the program also is under study in Baytown, Orange, Midland, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Midland.

Martial law imposed in wake of president's slaying

Appeal for calm broadcast by Korean officials

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean government appealed for calm Saturday and stationed more than 12,000 soldiers at key points throughout Seoul to guard a capital shaken by the slaying of President Park Chung-hee and uncertain of the immediate future.

As officials paid their respects at the closed coffin holding Park's bullet-riddled body, the Korean people were still unsure of just how or why their 62-year-old strongman president was shot to death Friday night.

The government said he was shot by Korean Central Intelligence Agency chief Kim Jae-kyu when Kim began firing a pistol during a heated argument at dinner. Park's chief bodyguard and four other security men were also killed.

The government said the president's death was an accident, but rumors and speculation were rampant Saturday that the killings were part of an assassination plot. In Washington, U.S. officials said privately they doubted it was accidental.

Martial law was in effect, schools were closed and tanks surrounded the capitol building as officials grappled with a crisis that has left South Korea without an obvious successor to the man who ruled with an iron fist for more than 18 years.

An estimated full division of 12,000 to 15,000 soldiers guarded the capital and thousands of troops were posted in other major cities across the country.

Prime Minister Choi Kyu-hah, 60, named acting president in an emergency Cabinet session four hours after Park's death, went on nationwide radio Saturday morning to ask for calm.

Carter administration officials said they had been told by South Korean government sources recently that there was growing dissatisfaction with Park's regime. Park had recently imposed martial law in two southern cities to subdue anti-government riots.

South Korean forces were on emergency alert Saturday against any attempt by communist North Korea to take advantage of the confused situation, but U.S. officials said there was no indication of military activity north of the demilitarized zone. The 38,000 U.S. troops here were ordered into the lowest stage of alert, just one step up from normal status.

The government made no comment on the shooting incident beyond a brief description. According to that report and information from other sources, the shooting is believed to have happened this way:

Park went to the KCIA building for a dinner given by Kim, a close adviser and friend since their youth. Park, Kim, the president's chief bodyguard Cha Chi-chul and the secretary-general of Park's staff, Kim Ke-won, were present.

Four presidential security guards, armed with pistols, were near the dining room door. During the dinner, sources said, Kim Jae-kyu left the table and the room three times. Upon his return the third time, about 7:30, he got into a heated argument with Cha over politics.

According to the reports, Cha criticized the intelligence chief for being too liberal, and Kim Jae-kyu accused Cha of being too tough on dissent. Park tried to intervene and Kim pulled a gun and began firing. Park was fatally wounded and Cha and four guards were killed.

Secretary-General Kim put Park in his car and rushed him to a nearby military hospital, but the president died before they got there, officials said.

The government mentioned only one shot from Kim's gun that hit Park. A Seoul radio station said Park was shot twice — once in the back of head, and once through the chest from the front. Officials refused to comment on that report.

Korean sources said KCIA chief Kim was not detained at the dining hall, but drove alone to army headquarters, where he was later arrested.

The first day of Choi's acting presidency went smoothly, with no disturbances or challenges to his authority. The country's top military leaders issued a pledge of support for him.

Citizens in Seoul appeared shocked, somber and calm. Most went about their business normally, with no interference from soldiers. Small groups gathered in front of public bulletin boards.

Halloween on Tuesday

Due to the conflict between Halloween "trick or treating" and many of the city's church services, Mayor H. R. Thompson has issued a proclamation making Tuesday, Oct. 30, the date for the celebration of Halloween.

The proclamation states: "WHEREAS, the celebration of Halloween is of interest to all the young people of our community; and

"WHEREAS, the traditional celebration occurs on Wednesday, October 31st; and

"WHEREAS, some conflict may arise between "Trick and Treat" Activities and the scheduled evening services of some Pampa churches;

"NOW, THEREFORE, I, H. R. Thompson, Jr., Mayor of the City of Pampa, do declare Tuesday, October 30th, as "Trick or Treat Night" in the City of Pampa, and encourage all citizens to participate and enjoy the spirit of the day.

"IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of Pampa, Texas to be affixed, this 26th day of October, 1979.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

What stop sign

Pampa drivers are crazzzzzzy!

Those people who get behind the wheel of a car in this city simply go nuts.

They run red lights, fail to stop for stop signs, try to race across intersection before the light turns red and never give other drivers any indication what lane they want to travel in.

This is one of the few towns in the country where the drivers received their drivers license from a box of cracker jacks.

Not all drivers live by these rules of reckless and careless driving habits but those who do are noticed a lot more than drivers who drive with a little sanity.

That old saying "there is never a cop around when you need one," applies here.

The police department can not be every place all the time but when you see a traffic violation you can write down the license number and phone police a description of the vehicle committing the offense.

A call to police might save someone's life even your own.

Off duty officers no longer participate in the STEP program for Pampa so why don't you try to help your friends and relatives live a safe life by helping to crack down on traffic violators.

Keeping the lines open

For 30 years now, the private organization Freedom House has been keeping watch over the state of political and civil liberties around the world. Freedom House has recently announced a new project. It's begun to publish a bimonthly magazine called "Freedom Appeals" featuring writings by dissidents living under oppressive regimes of both left and right around the world. The first issue shows that if we can put up with the depressing experience of reading these documents, we can learn a good deal about the concrete details of life outside the political democracies.

The magazine's lead article is a translation of an essay by the Soviet writer Viktor Nekipelov describing what it's actually like to have your living quarters searched over and over again—seven times over a five-year period, to be exact—by the KGB. Mr. Nekipelov has developed enough aplomb to be able to review his experiences and pass on some "inviolable laws" of the search. First, "no matter how you expect it, a search will always catch you unawares." Second, "no matter how you've cleaned up" the house, they'll find something. And vice versa, no matter how clearly something is lying out in plain sight, it will be left behind."

From these first principles Mr. Nekipelov derives operational corollaries: Do not make secret hiding places in bathrooms or door panels. Be sure to keep something "impermissible" around the house; if it's picked clean, the police will think it a bad sign, and they'll feel forced to confiscate "your old letters or your class notes on philosophy." Take care to keep your suspicious materials in plain sight, "right on your desk."

The rules are funny. Some of the other details are not—accounts of the stress of actual searches, or of how the police during one invasion "ripped off the wall paper and plaster in 'suspicious places' and with an especially sharp spike pierced the walls, the chairs, and the children's toys," "pulled off the kitchen molding, dismantled the gas pipe and took off the door."

Stories of experiences like this, produced in primitive fashion and smuggled out of various dictatorships, may not seem like much against the weight of the illiberal trends of current history. But for their writers it is a godsend to know that they will be published; for their readers they give a sense of the value and fragility of liberalism in a way that generalities alone cannot. We hope Freedom House will keep producing them.

Looking back at Pampa

A near freezing nip was in the air late today as temperatures continued to drop. Today's high was 53 degrees, however, the thermometer registered 41 at 6 p.m., before the sun went down.

Aubrey Jones, city tax assessor-collector, was named to two committees at the recent convention of the League of Texas Municipalities.

Pampans are being asked to join the Red Cross Chapter in sending gifts to servicemen on the high seas for Christmas. United Fund contributions went to $35,573 today, officials reported. This was an increase of some $300 over yesterday's figure.

Students at Pampa High School will go through the mechanics of voting tomorrow during a mock election throughout the school.

United States Senator John Tower will arrive in Pampa late tomorrow night in preparation for a one-day campaign swing through the Panhandle for GOP candidates on Friday.

The 1964 Traffic Count stood at a whopping 496 accidents today, according to traffic officials. Out of that amount, there had been 107 injuries and only one death.

The Pampa Shockers, seeking to even their 3-4 record, take to the road tomorrow to visit the Caprock Shorthorns at 4:00 p.m.

Steps were taken by the Pampa City Council today to protect the city's interests in the request by Pioneer Natural Gas Company for a gate rate increase covering 60 towns and cities in its West Texas distribution system.

Pampa United Fund officials, confident the 1969-70 goal of $90,200 will be reached, have announced a "Splash Down Breakfast" set for 7 a.m. Monday in the Coronado Inn.

Pampa's City Hall was minus 11 city officials today. The mayor, city manager, city attorney, city secretary, public works director, police chief and Ward 4 city commissioner were all in Fort Worth attending the annual conference of the Texas Municipal League.

J.J. Ryzman, liaison officer for Pampa's effort in "Operation Identification," said today engravers for marking possessions have been made available at both Pampa banks.

Veterans of Foreign Wars and its Auxiliary were in charge of flag ceremonies conducted at Memory Gardens today. Flags were placed on veteran's graves at both Fairview and Memory Gardens Cemeteries by service organizations to mark Veteran's Day.

The luck of the Democrats is running out on Jimmy Carter

Ever since 1932 when the Great Depression swept Franklin Delano Roosevelt into the White House and in the process turned the modern Democratic Party from a Southern-based also-ran into the national political establishment, economic trends have worked in their favor.

The recovery of the Thirties (although the extent to which New Deal programs actually contributed remains a point for some debate) helped keep them in office through the next four elections. And then it took an authentic war here to dislodge them.

But not for long. The second Eisenhower administration's decline into recession gave John F. Kennedy a party-perfect issue for rallying the troops. And the post-election upturn that followed application of some of the Keynesian remedies beloved by Democrats imparted momentum through the Johnson administration.

But after almost half a century of Democrats riding the crests of the economic waves, the tide may now be running out. The economy is slipping into recession not under a Republican administration, but as the election races up on Jimmy Carter. More than slipping — it is being nudged along by agencies and policies of the very Democratic administration he heads.

The high-interest, tight-money measures invoked by the Federal Reserve are, of course, directed toward returning the economy to health by curbing it of its inflationary fever. But no economist worth his statistics would bet a Susan B. Anthony dollar on chances of substantial beneficial effects becoming apparent during the year remaining before election day. Long in developing, economic trends are not quickly reversed. Instead of recovery, the worst symptoms of recession may be most apparent just as the voters go to the polls.

If the economy is THE issue today, it will be more so as the election approaches. As far as the public is concerned, spell that "inflation."

In a recent Gallup Poll, the soaring cost of living was cited by 50 percent of respondents as the foremost national problem. Despite recent memories of gas lines and approaching winter fuel bills, the issue that has so preoccupied Carter — energy — ran a very poor second as a cause of public concern.

Energy is unquestionably a problem and a primary contributor to inflation. But it is essentially one within the larger problem of the economy, which the Carter administration is belatedly recognizing.

Its response to date is uneven and often contradictory, however. As are Carter's own statements on the subject. He assured a recent press conference that he backed the Fed's tight-money policy even if it should hurt him in the primaries.

But within days, he was also assuring labor that he would not fight inflation with measures that cost jobs. If he manages to keep that promise, he may very well add an important chapter to the textbook on practical application of economic theory.

What is more likely as the effects of credit restriction and reduced monetary growth are felt is a general business retrenchment. At best, this means no growth and no new jobs. At worst, it means layoffs and more unemployment.

If it's any consolation to him, this inflationary dilemma is not of Carter's making. Its origins are in the Sixties when, after decades of price increases in the gradual and acceptable 2-3 percent annual range, an administration made two far-reaching decisions. It opted to fight a war without paying for it at the time, but at the same time implementing an ambitious and inadequately funded domestic welfare program. An unenthusiastic experiment with controls early in the Nixon administration briefly contained but provided no cure for an inflation that was by then building itself into the economy.

What we are experiencing now, in fact, might well be called the Lyndon Baines Johnson Memorial Inflation. Just Jimmy Carter's luck that it should be the legacy of a Democratic predecessor. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

This old editor would like to say that he is happy at recently being elected to the State Board of Directors for the Easter Seal Foundation.

I consider the election an honor and hope I may offer some slight help in some way during the next two years to the foundation. I will certainly try to do some small thing to aid the Easter Seals program.

The News will be making a special effort in the coming weeks to report more farm and area news for our readers.

Shelia Eccels has joined the staff and will assume duties as our area farm reporter.

Does anyone know the average age of Pampa residents? Vic Raymond and I have a small discussion going about this and if anyone does know the average age I would appreciate a call.

The News is running a reader survey on leisure activities today and will do so for the next two weeks. Here is your chance to list what activities you would like to see in Pampa. So don't say you weren't asked.

Today is the best day to start regular attendance at the church of your choice.

The chamber is currently working on a promotional idea to have shoppers stay at home when they need to buy something and spend their money with local merchants. This is something I am all for. In the past people have said they couldn't find what they wanted in Pampa stores but I don't believe that is true. I am that if shoppers looked in the stores around Pampa they could find anything they were looking for. Spend your money with your friends and neighbors not with strangers is probably the best way to put that.

We took a look at the progress Pampa has made during the past several years and compiled what we think is a pretty interesting look at our town. It is included in today's News and we hope it makes interesting reading.

If you missed the Chamber of Commerce banquet Thursday night then you really missed an amusing time.

Danny if you keep the teams spirit as high as it has been then we are certainly going to have district champions in Pampa this year. Best of luck for the rest of the season.

The trouble with democracy

by Paul Harvey

Instead, what often happens, is that we elect men who promise the most "something for nothing." Thus, in effect, we abdicate leadership to the indigent and the ignorant, to those least qualified for leadership.

The newest Ford Foundation study on the subject concludes that 64 million adult Americans are more-or-less illiterate. That would mean that one-third of adult Americans lack the language skills to address an envelope.

The federal government sought to improve our nation's literacy rate with "adult basic education programs" in 1971. Fewer than two million enrolled—most dropped out and most of the rest attended only sometimes.

Yet each of them has a vote as big as yours.

Philosophers since Socrates and politicians since Jefferson have sought to alert us to the weaknesses inherent in "democracy."

They missed one. Carefully, our nation's founders avoided designating our country as a "democracy." Democracy, they knew, is where everybody votes on everything—mob rule.

The word "democracy" is not to be found in our nation's Constitution nor in our Declaration of Independence nor in any of our several state constitutions.

Ours was intended to be a political Republic—and to the Republic for which it stands—where we would elect our best men to make decisions in our behalf.

Presumably we would always elect our most qualified men.

Our family of nations—the United Nations—is similarly hamstrung by Lilliputians. Half of the nations in the U.N. General Assembly have a lesser population than North Carolina yet each has a vote as big as ours.

More than 100 new nations have emerged in one generation and it is reasonable to expect 50 to 100 more within our lifetime.

The situation is similar, in the World Bank and other international institutions.

One already obvious disadvantage to us—the United States—is that these micro-states, combined, contribute only one-sixteenth of the total U.N. budget.

The United States alone pays 25 percent of the bill.

Perhaps we can afford to waste the money. But the more ominous imbalance, which we cannot afford, is that these diminutive countries control a decisive two-thirds vote.

It is fashionable to refer to backward people and backward nations as something other than backward.

We are supposed to consider them "underdeveloped" or "disadvantaged."

Most of these people had a long head start on us but failed, for whatever reasons, to improve themselves.

Professor of government Elmer Plischke of the University of Maryland says, "The central question is not whether people are entitled to manage their own affairs and enjoy political independence but whether, irrespective of their size and ability to fulfill their responsibilities, they should be entitled to sovereignty equality in the affairs of nations."

When small men cast long shadows the sun is about to set.

Letters

Dear Editor

In Friday's editorial I feel you were in the wrong to place the blame on our local police.

You mentioned that "teachers" phoned the police - WHERE WAS THE PRINCIPAL??? Why didn't HE make an effort to detain or follow the man involved?

Our police get little thanks for helping out in situations that could have been prevented with a little caution or forethought from home owners, schools and businesses. Let's put the blame where it really belongs. If the principal was not on the job, that's not the fault of the police.

Thank you,
Local Citizens

Editor's note: We've read and reread the definition of principal and nowhere does it say police. Another point is that a principal has no authority off of his particular grounds, he becomes an ordinary citizen just like anybody else.

Our original question was and still is why did it take the police an hour to call back and ask what the first call was about.

Incidentally, Mr. Jones is the principal of both Horace Mann and Austin and must share his time between the two schools.

With one-third of retail sales in hand, franchises still growing

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

"Franchisors and franchisees are partners in one of the most dynamic and successful methods of distributing goods and services the world has ever known," says Joseph L. Koach, Executive Vice President of the International Franchise Association.

Franchising is a large and highly visible business. The names of the most successful companies in franchising are known around the world.

But while most everyone has heard the word franchising, few know what it means.

Franchising is simply a method of doing business, a way of distributing a product or service used by a variety of industries. It involves an agreement between two parties, by which a franchisee is granted the right to distribute goods or services under a marketing plan or system set up by the franchisor — all for a fee. Included in this agreement is a trademark or servicemark.

A business format franchisor provides such services and assistance as site selection, building design and construction, operating procedures, production promotion training, and research and development.

Under a business format franchise, the franchisee becomes a part of a system that is dependent on standardization for its success. A franchised business is frequented by consumers who expect a certain degree of standardization, quality and service.

Jack Ward of Ward's, Inc. of Pampa, franchisee for 13 years of Pampa's Kentucky Fried Chicken Restaurant, explained, "In the case of a food franchise such as Kentucky Fried Chicken, you first contact the company, saying you are interested in a franchise and telling them of the location you have in mind."

"Company representatives will survey the city and if they approve of the location, you pay a franchise fee."

The franchisor, Ward said, will buy the property and the building, while the franchisee buys the equipment.

Ward also said a franchisee will pay a royalty to the parent corporation based on sales. An advantage of the franchise system, Ward feels, is the national advertising a franchisee receives.

The success of franchising is shown in the annual report of the U. S. Department of Commerce which predicts franchising will exceed $300 billion in retail sales — more than a third of all retail sales in the country.

Koach said on the basis of expansion plans and annual reports he received from member companies, he believes there will be a 15 percent sales growth in franchising in 1979. He termed franchising "a major force in the U. S. economy," providing employment for about four million people.

"Despite inflation and unemployment rising each month, there is a noticeable trend that certain segments of the franchising economy are showing healthy growth," Koach reports.

"The reason for this" he said, "is that the public is becoming more prudent in its spending practices. They are taking care of their cars, their homes, their lawns — this means that automotive after-market, home care and similar conservation segments of franchising are booming." This is also true of the fast food market.

Hoping for a future of expansion, the franchising market already boasts of a twenty year history of uninterrupted growth.

Franchising's future will hold a greater importance of the franchisee-franchisor relationships as owners become more affluent and expert in their operations.

A change in lifestyle patterns all point to future success for the franchise business. This change includes a growth in the affluent 25-45 age group, the increasing number of women in business, the rising household incomes, and double income households with fewer children.

Existing in a scientific world, franchising hopes to introduce more technical goods and services, such as energy conservation, home security, home computers, leisure goods and even medical services.

Liaison officer keeps in contact with kids

Pampa Middle School students may have been surprised to see a policeman sitting in the hall of their school this week.

He is not a "narc" — narcotics detective — and he is not there to see if children are speeding down the hall. There has not been any violence in the school.

It is Lt. Charles Morris of the Pampa Police Department and he is going to Pampa schools to talk with the students.

Do your children believe policemen shoot people everyday? Do they believe they are super heroes — or villains?

These are some of the myths the Pampa PD is trying to clear up concerning police officers.

Three years ago, Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman first read about putting police officers in the school to provide information, talk with the children and dispel twisted ideas about the profession. He sent for the case history of the innovative idea from the Baltimore school system which first used the concept.

Lt. Morris began the program the first of this school year with in-class appearances at the grade schools and the middle school.

"I try to hit several of each grade," Morris said. He said he was pleased with the good response he received from the students.

Chief Ryzman listed the goals of the project as: (1) to improve the attitude towards law enforcement and authority figures, (2) to give the students an opportunity to have non-adversary contact with officers, (3) teach students about the required training skills needed by police, (4) to develop appreciation of officers as human beings rather than media stereotypes.

The ultimate goal, Ryzman said, is to reduce delinquency through the modification of negative student attitudes toward the police department, school and authority.

"I'm very optimistic about this," Morris said. "That's why I'm doing it."

Morris wants to be personally involved with the program, but intends to use other officers.

Friday afternoon, while in the Middle School, many of the students shook Morris' hand as they walked by.

"They've touched me now... they know me now," Morris said. He said the physical contact helps students understand policemen are just people, after all.

"We are striving for a better relationship between us and the community," Morris commented. "We want to make the students aware of their obligations as citizens and of our responsibilities to protect them."

Morris intends to go to the grade schools, middle school and high school every week to discuss whatever the students want to share with him. He has pamphlets about drugs, crime prevention, and safety.

Morris feels his main goal is to create a rapport between younger citizens and the police department.

"I want to make the first contact with the police department a pleasant and positive one."

LT. CHARLES MORRIS of the Pampa Police Department talks with Pampa Middle School students about many of the misconceptions youth have concerning police officers and their role in today's society. These discussions are part of the city police department's liaison officer program in Pampa schools.

which police officers visit the various schools every week to answer questions and give students the opportunity to learn more about the police force.

Book has Baptists upset

DALLAS (AP) — A Baylor University professor's textbook that portrays Adam and Eve as symbols instead of real people has touched off a "book hunt" by ultraconservative Baptists concerned with the direction their faith is taking.

Dr. H. J. Flanders' "People of the Covenant" also present the story of Jonah being swallowed by a whale as allegory instead of fact.

Such interpretations caught the eye of the Rev. Jimmy Draper of Euless, who met last week with Baylor trustees.

"The meeting... was most rewarding," Draper said. "The religion department unanimously approved a statement inviting trustees to study the department and give recommendations about its future, its directions and its textbooks."

Draper said Flanders' book "is not anywhere close to the historic Baptist tradition." He said, "I'd like to see it removed from the classrooms" of Baptist schools like Baylor.

Draper is representative of the ultraconservative Baptists who believe every word in their Bible is the literal word of God and not subject to interpretation.

Other biblical scholars, including Baptists, believe that the Bible was written by men over hundreds of years and was not delivered by God.

The fight between factions surfaced at the annual convention of the Southern Baptist Convention last June in Houston. Ultraconservatives staged an unprecedented political campaign and succeeded in electing Dr. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., as president of the 13.2 million-member church.

Draper and others have criticized seminars for what they call a liberal trend among professors.

Family searches area lakes for girl

DALLAS (AP) — The family of a 7-year-old girl missing since Tuesday night searched the areas around two lakes Saturday after they said an informant reported the girl was released unharmed.

Elizabeth Barclay was abducted as she walked with two young friends to a neighborhood store to buy ice cream.

The friends told police that the man who took Elizabeth said, "I'm going to... throw her in the water."

David Barclay, the girl's father, called a news conference Friday to ask the public's help in the search.

"We have had certain information as to the possible whereabouts of my daughter," Barclay said. He asked "anybody out this weekend in the vicinity of White Rock and Lake Dallas to please be especially watchful, because it has been reported she is out there." He said family members would search the areas Saturday.

White Rock is in the city limits on the east side of town, and Lake Dallas, also known as Garza-Little Elm Reservoir, is about 30 miles north of town.

The Barclays declined to reveal their source, saying they had agreed to keep the informant's identity secret. They said they had not even told police the source of the information.

"The latest report we have is that... she was released. We assume she has been mistreated and has not been fed, so I would assume she is going to be lying somewhere and not walking," Barclay said.

At one point during the news conference he wept.

Relatives of the missing child have posted a $5,000 reward for information in the case.

FAYE W. MCGEE

BORGER — Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Faye Withers McGee, 61, of Borger, are pending with Minton-Chatwell Funeral Directors. She died Friday night at North Plains Hospital.

Mrs. McGee had been a resident of Borger since July of this year and was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, Bill of Plainview; one daughter, Mrs. Durlene Phillips of Borger, one son, Dow Withers of Wahiawa, Hawaii; three brothers, five sisters and four grandchildren.

BILL WILSON

BORGER — Funeral services for Bill Wilson, 53, will be at 2 p.m. today in Spearman United Methodist Church with Rev. Mike O'Conner officiating. Burial will be in Hansford Cemetery in Spearman by Ed Brown & Sons Funeral Directors.

Mr. Wilson was born in Humble and was a resident of Gruver and Spearman before moving to Fritch about five years ago. He was a welder with Fish Engineering and Construction Company Co-Polymer Plant. He was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his wife, Lorene; two sons, Bill Wilson Jr. of Fritch and Ronald Leroy Wilson of El Paso; a brother, Dorman Barrick of Littlefield; four sisters, Mrs. Velma Terry of Ropesville, Mrs. Ona Flemming of Brownfield, Mrs. Stinah Blackwell of Idaloua and Mrs. Nettie Sue Groves of Littlefield; and two grandchildren.

MARtha E. ARMSTRONG

Funeral services for Martha Ethel Armstrong, 81, of Henrietta, Texas, were held at 2 p.m. yesterday in Hawkins - Hilliard Funeral Chapel in Henrietta with Rev. Gerold Neugebauer officiating. Burial was in Deer Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Armstrong was a former Pampa resident. She lived in Clay County for 73 years.

Survivors include two sons, Ira of Henrietta and B.V. of Grayford; three daughters, Juanita Woods and Laverne Warren of Amarillo and Luvenia Stephenson of Wichita Falls; one sister, Ruth Staats, Fort Worth; one brother, Wilson Watson of Henrietta, 19 grandchildren, 42 great-grandchildren and 1 great-grandchild.

police report

Scott Coates, 18, of 1109 Juniper was arrested for driving while intoxicated and unsafe change of direction of travel. Coates was booked and placed in city jail.

After observing a man believed to be in an intoxicated condition, Pampa police arrested 31-year-old Charles Mathis Ashley of 705 E. Frederic. Ashley was searched during the arrest and found to be in possession of a prohibited weapon. He was charged with public intoxication and possession of a prohibited weapon and placed in city jail.

An air compressor and motor was reported taken by Walter Shed of 2413 Mary Ellen. The compressor and motor were on an air tank in a lot behind 806 W. Foster. The compressor was valued at $800 and the motor at $100.

Linda Davis of 1006 Fisher reported a girls bicycle stolen from her residence. After speaking with two juvenile witnesses and eventually to the juvenile who took the bicycle, officer located the bicycle and returned it to its owner.

The city animal control officer, Kenneth Dean, reported the theft of two yellow 10-speed bicycles, three regular bicycle frames, four dogs and two puppies from the dog pound. Value of the stolen articles is not known.

Debbie Harris of 1069 Varnon Dr. advised police someone had taken a diamond ring valued at $125 from the jewelry box in her bedroom. Also taken was a Texas title to a 1973 Riviera from her purse.

Pampa police officers responded to 39 calls in the 36-hour period ending at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Fields ready to assume active role on School Board

"I was surprised," Kenneth W. Fields said when the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees contacted him regarding a possible appointment as a new board member.

"I told them I was willing to devote the time it takes to be on the board and I would be honored to serve," he added.

Fields impressed the members enough to be appointed by the board as a new member in last Tuesday's meeting.

Now that he has become a school board member, Fields wants to try to learn all he can about the job.

Fields said of his fellow school board members: "I've been very impressed with the present members. They are men of good will with the best interests of the community at heart."

"To me," Fields commented, "education of children is the highest function a community performs." He feels a child's education "in the long run has the greatest impact on the community and our society."

The quality of Pampa's educational system is of special interest to Fields and his wife, Carol, because of their 2-year-old girl, Kate. He wants his daughter's education to be the best available.

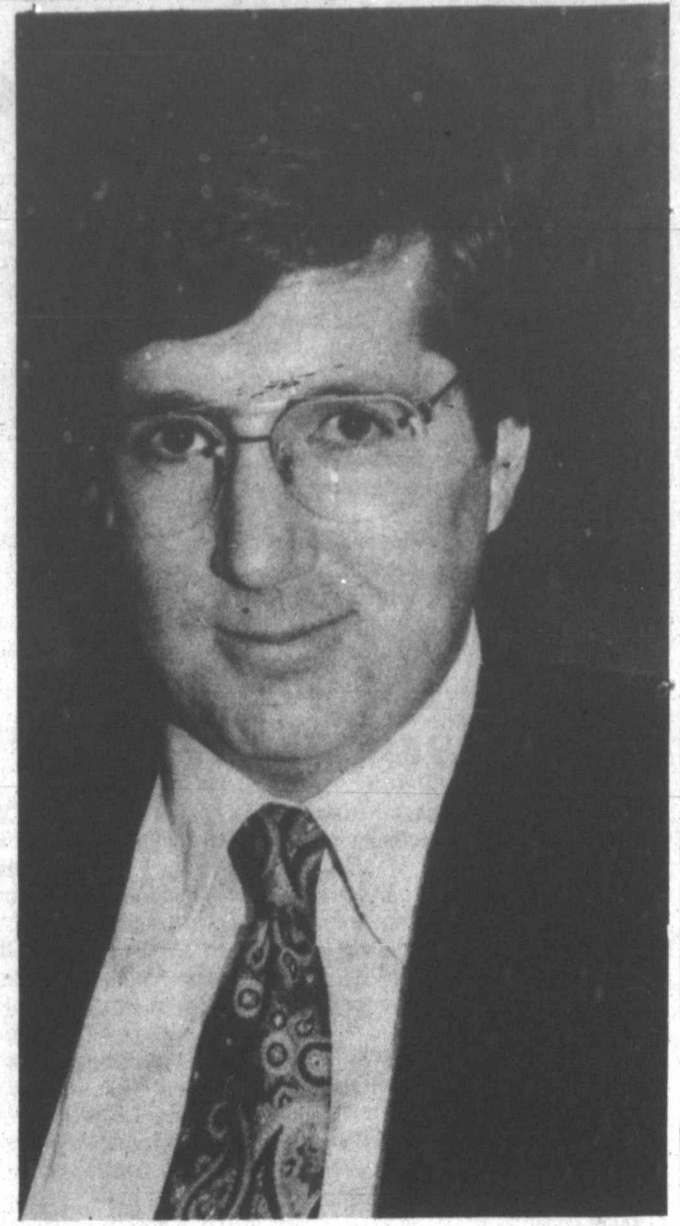

Fields moved to Pampa with his wife soon after graduating from Texas Tech University Law School in 1975. He is presently associated with the law firm of Waters, Holt, Fields and Waters.

"It was pure accident," Fields said of his decision to move to Pampa. He was contacted through the Tech law school about an opening at the firm in Pampa.

Other community activities involving Fields include being chairman of the board of the Community Day Care Center, a member of the Lions Club and the Community Concert Association and being on the Lovett Memorial Library board. He and his family are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

"Will he run in April's school board election?"

"I probably will stay in for the election in April," he said.

Panel suggests taxing Social Security funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent panel responsible for recommending changes to Congress in the Social Security system thinks that half the benefit payments should be subject to federal income tax.

Social Security payments are entirely tax-free now.

The Advisory Council on Social Security also is recommending that retirees get cost-of-living increases twice a year — in March and September — when the Consumer Price Index rises at least 3 percent in six months. Currently, cost-of-living increases are passed along only once, in July.

The council, which embarked on the study 18 months ago, has held its final meeting, but is still putting the finishing touches on the report it will send to Congress next month.

Council chairman Henry Aaron, a Brookings Institution economist, already has told a congressional panel that the council favors rescinding most or all of the big increase in the payroll tax scheduled for 1981.

Councils are formed every four years to review the Social Security system. Recommendations from past councils have paved the way for most of the major changes that Congress has adopted in Social Security.

The draft summary of the 13-member council's report concludes that Social Security "is the government's most successful social program." After reviewing the evidence, the council is unanimously convinced that all current and future Social Security beneficiaries can count on receiving all the benefits to which they are entitled.

But it says, "the time has come to finance some part of Social Security with non-payroll tax revenues."

State, local elections look important

WASHINGTON (AP) — In politics, 1979 is considered an off year, but the upcoming races for key mayoral spots and several governorships could signal the political climate that will face White House and congressional candidates on Election Day 1980.

Mayors are being elected on Nov. 6 in half the nation's 20 largest cities, including Cleveland, Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco. Governors will be elected in Mississippi and Kentucky, and on Dec. 8 in Louisiana.

In Cleveland, Mayor Dennis Kucinich is fighting for his life. The Philadelphia race is to succeed Frank Rizzo. San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein is trying to hold the job she inherited when her predecessor was assassinated, and Boston's Kevin White is seeking a fourth term.

In Minneapolis, former Rep. Donald Fraser is trying to bring Minnesota Democrats a victory after Republicans won both Senate seats in 1978.

Saturday's primary in Louisiana was to choose nominees for the Dec. 8 election of a governor in that swing state.

The governor's elections in that state and in Mississippi and Kentucky may have strong implications for President Carter's future.

Carter carried all three states in his winning race for the White House in 1976, when they were headed by Democratic governors. But Republicans are within winning range in each state this year.

These three states, plus the traditional off-year bellwethers, New Jersey and Virginia, are also electing all or parts of their legislatures.

Other big cities electing mayors in November include Houston, Baltimore, Indianapolis, Phoenix, Memphis, Columbus, Toledo and Miami.

Republicans stand their best chance since Reconstruction of electing a Mississippi governor in the person of Gil Carmichael, a millionaire auto dealer from Meridian, who lost his first bid in 1972. The Democratic nominee is William Winter, a political veteran who has served three terms in the Mississippi House.

And fried chicken king John Y. Brown Jr., is trying to hold the Kentucky governor's chair for the Democrats on the retirement of incumbent Julian Carroll. His opponent is former Republican Gov. Louie Nunn. Brown is considered ahead, but Nunn says he's gaining.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press
A dry cold front slipped into the West Texas Plains Saturday, slightly lowering temperatures.

Skies remained sunny statewide, except for scattered patches of clouds over parts of the Hill Country and Southeast Texas.

Temperatures ranged from 53 behind the front at Dalhart and Amarillo to 79 at Brownsville.

FORECAST

North Texas: Fair and cooler in the northwest and partly cloudy in the southeast through Sunday. A few thunderstorms east portion Sunday. Increasing cloudiness Sunday night and Monday. Lows Sunday night 48 northwest to 58 southeast. Highs Sunday and Monday 74 to 82.

West Texas: Fair through Monday. Cooler tonight most sections. Cooler south Sunday. Lows Sunday night mid 30s mountains and north to mid 50s south. Highs Sunday and Monday mid 60s north to near 90 along the Rio Grande.

South Texas: Partly cloudy through Monday.

RAIN TAPERING INTO SNOW is forecast in the Northeast Sunday. It will be generally cool in the North and warm elsewhere. (AP Laserphoto Map)

IN AGRICULTURE

It is wise to "clean up" herds by culling open cows and give more attention to a controlled breeding program by culling late-calving cows.

There's no need to put expensive winter feed into unproductive cows. Culling the cow herd now will also help you plan on hay and feed supplies for the winter months.

Also, pregnancy testing cows this fall may be more profitable management tool than ever before.

Since it's difficult for a cow to produce a calf large enough to pay her annual maintenance bill and leave some profit for the producer, we know an open cow is surely 90 pounds lighter than their herd mates which calve at other times. For this reason, it's advisable to cull cows which will calve late next year and buy a replacement which will calve early.

Whoever does the pregnancy diagnosis (usually veterinarian) will be able to estimate the calving date on each animal and make it easy to identify next year's late calving cows. Your definition of a late-calving cow should change every year until your calving season has been reduced to 60 days preferably, and certainly no longer than 90 days.

Removing barren and late-calving cows from the herd will increase both the herd's reproductive potential and pounds of calf weaned.

COTTON MARKET INFORMATION

The Altus Cotton Marketing Services Office has arranged for a local service telephone tape of their cotton marketing reports for the 1979 cotton harvesting season.

This telephone tape is now in operation. The information is available by dialing (Area Code 405) 482-1024.

It will be up-dated on a daily basis at about 3:30 p.m. The information will include local market activity, cotton prices, Futures market close, Dallas and Lubbock Spot Market close, volume of classing, and quality information concerning grade, staple, micronaire, and Fiber Strength readings.

WINDBREAKS CONSERVE ENERGY

Rising energy costs have made windbreak plantings real assets to homeowners.

Fringe benefits of windbreaks can be protection for cattle and a refuge for birds and other wildlife.

A well-designed windbreak will reduce wind speed, prevent drifting snow and lower heating bills. Even a small windbreak can make outdoor living and working conditions more enjoyable during the winter. Plant screens also help reduce noise pollution from busy thoroughfares.

The location of the windbreaks is the key to their effectiveness. Evergreen windbarriers on the north and west sides of the house can cut 10 to 40 percent off winter fuel bills. Junipers and pines provide the most protection.

Windbreaks should be planted four to six times the height of the windbreak away from the house. We recommend growing species that will mature to about one to one-and-one-half times the height of the house. Large trees should be located 100 to 150 feet from the north or west side of the house and roads to prevent snow drifts.

Trees for windbreaks are available from the Texas Forest Service and should be planted in late winter or in early spring.

For information on ordering tree seedlings and on transplanting and fertilizing woody plants, contact the County Extension Office at 669-7429.

WINTER PROTECTION FROM RABBITS AND DEER?

The following is quoted from the Long Island Horticultural News, November, 1978. Maybe it will work for Texas rabbits and deer. The treatment is experimental and is not yet registered by the EPA. So far, no plant poison has been reported on any tested plants from winter treatments.

The effect on actively growing plants in summer is not given.

In Maryland, where pests are available in epidemic proportions, hot sauces sprayed on the plants are providing good control. The mixture is as follows: For winter deer control: Fill tank part way. Add 2 oz. Vapor Gard per gallon. Mix thoroughly. Add hot sauce -- 2 to 4 oz. per gallon. Mix thoroughly.

For rabbit control: Fill tank part way, add 2 oz. Vapor Gard per gallon. Mix thoroughly. Add hot sauce -- 6 to 8 oz. per gallon. Mix thoroughly.

These solutions MUST be mixed in this order. If not, the hot part of the sauce does not emulsify properly and it may wash off the plant. If this occurs, what is left behind may act as an attractant rather than a repellent. Vapor Gard is used as an emulsifying agent that also has excellent sticking properties. Use only Vapor Gard. If mixed thoroughly, it should stay in solution for approximately two hours. Sprays should be applied when temperatures are above 40 degrees F.

Louisiana hot sauce should be available through local food distributors.

4-H CORNER

The third open playday sponsored by members of the Gray County 4-H Horse project in Pampa will be held at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena, October 28th at 1:30 p.m.

Events include pilons, barrel racing, pole bending, flag race, and golfette. Boys and girls high point awards will be given in each of four age groups. Entry fees will be 75 cents per event.

A one day riding clinic will be held at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena on November 3rd at 10 a.m. Cost will be $5 per person and participants should bring a sack lunch.

Orin Barnes of Canyon will be the instructor. The basics of horsemanship, leads, passing, patterns, and showing at halter will be taught.

Gray County 4-H members who have a horse project are encouraged to attend.

4-H honors were given Saturday night to outstanding 4-H members and leaders in Gray County. Top honors went to Beth Smitherman of McLean and Keith Courtney of Pampa, who were named Gold Star winners for 1979. The Gold Star Award is presented annually to two 4-H members who have achieved high standards of excellence in 4-H work and leadership. Beth has completed many projects, including home improvement, beef, food preservation, electricity, clothing, and citizenship. She has served as aw McLean 4-H club officer and junior leader for several years, and was among the Texas delegation to attend the National 4-H Citizenship Shortcourse and Heritage Tour in 1978.

Courtney has been an active 4-H member in Gray County for seven years and has completed project work in swine, foods and nutrition, rifle and shotgun. He has served as officer and junior leader of the Rifle Club and is currently second vice president of the Gray County 4-H Council. He has attended the Texas 4-H Congress and Texas 4-H Roundup and has been named the high individual shooter in district shooting sports.

Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Lowrey and Mr. and Mrs. Mack Courtney were honored as Outstanding Leaders and Mrs. Janice Carter received the "Friend of 4-H" Award.

Awards were given to 4-H members for outstanding project work. Winners this year

Ronda Woods - Achievement
Lance Gabel, Elson Rice - Agriculture
Mark Tate - Jem Ann Rice - Beef

Shelly Cochran, Sondra Rogers - Bread

Amy Brainard - Citizenship

Tennessee Valley Authority energy testing ground

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority, monument to the era of low-cost power, is being transformed into a proving ground for new energy technologies and attitudes in a time of scarcity and soaring fuel prices.

As Congress weighs proposals to set up energy corporations, TVA offers a treasure of experience.

"We are the closest thing in the nation to a public energy corporation," says TVA Chairman S. David Freeman. "I like to think that we've proved that public energy can make a contribution."

Freeman worries over the possibility of another petroleum cutoff. "Who's in charge of oil supply in the United States?" he asks rhetorically. "The oil companies? The government? The man who wears the star?"

"I'll tell you who's in charge. Nobody. I consider it a serious situation, and I'd like to see the government step in."

The effort involves many measures: cleaning up coal with smokestack scrubbers, giant "baghouses" to capture harmful particulates, and advanced coal-burning technologies.

The effort also involves financing and supervising the installation of storm windows and insulation. Tying with electric cars. Providing low-cost loans for solar water heaters or wood-burning stoves. And more esoteric pursuits: fuel-cell development, co-generation, recycling the massive waste heat from nuclear power plants.

"TVA is not a think tank or a laboratory; we serve seven states and 25-million people, so this is the real world. But our federal charter gives us broader responsibilities than just to produce electricity and make money for the shareholders," says J. Frederick Weinhold, TVA's director of energy demonstrations and technology.

"TVA was a model for President Carter's proposal to form an Energy Security Corporation to oversee the synthetic fuel program, and it is the model for proposals for a separate American Energy Corporation that would develop energy resources on federal lands."

The Tennessee Valley Authority was created in 1933; its founders — especially Sen. George Norris of Nebraska and President Franklin Roosevelt, and David Lilienthal, one of the original board members — had a vision of taming the mighty Tennessee to bring cheap electricity to the underdeveloped valley.

TVA succeeded beyond anyone's imagination. Most Tennessee Valley farms got electric power in TVA's first decade. By 1951, the number of "electrified" households in TVA's service area had risen from 225,000 in 1933 to 1,065,000.

But TVA's long march to eminence was often attended by controversy. Conservative businessmen have deplored the agency as an experiment in socialism. More recently, environmentalists indicted TVA as a reckless polluter, with its many massive coal plants.

TVA pumped 2.1 million tons of sulphur dioxide into the air in 1975 and was dragged through court to clean up its act.

It went in heavily for nuclear power, despite muted objections from consumer and environmental groups. TVA now runs three atomic reactors, and has 14 more under construction that would eventually provide 46 percent of the agency's power requirements.

And TVA pushed electricity so much so that 45 percent of the homes in the Tennessee Valley (double the national average) have electric heat, far more costly than gas or oil heat.

"These policies may have been okay in the days of penny-per-kilowatt electricity, but they don't stand up today," says Robert Hemphill Jr., TVA's director of energy conservation and rates. TVA electricity rates have burped to about three pennies per kilowatt, but they are still well below the national average ($3.12 against $4.40 per kilowatt hour).

Enter Dave Freeman, energy strategist who began his career as a TVA engineer, served in the Nixon and Carter administrations, then returned to Tennessee as chairman of TVA.

Carter appointed him and he has the president's ear on energy matters that range far from the day-to-day concerns of the Tennessee Valley. Freeman's hand could be seen in Carter's decision to clamp a ceiling on the amount of oil the United States will import.

As chief author of a 1974 Ford Foundation report extolling the need and virtues of energy conservation, Freeman is a controversial figure in the energy community, where industry leaders feel his is a "no-growth attitude." His tinkering with the TVA is closely watched.

Freeman joined the TVA board in 1977, a junior member to longtime Chairman Aubrey "Red" Wagner, whose rule lasted from 1962 to his retirement in 1978.

When Wagner stepped down, Freeman stepped in. Soon he was joined on the three-member TVA board by Richard Freeman, a former railroad executive. (Though they are not related, at TVA they are called the Freeman Brothers.) The third is Robert N. Clement, son of a former Tennessee governor.

By most accounts, the "Freeman Brothers" have been good for TVA. "Dave Freeman has ideas and Richard can figure out which ones will work, which ones won't and why," says a TVA executive.

In their short tenure at TVA, the Freemans have:

- Reached a settlement with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on an 11-year, $5.1 million plan to clean up the coal plants (although a $300 million miscalculation is forcing TVA to rework the agreement).

- Pushed conservation programs, inaugurated by Red Wagner, so relentlessly that Bob Hemphill believes the installation of storm windows, insulation and the like will displace 1,000 megawatts of electricity by 1990, eliminating the need for a nuclear plant that otherwise would be built in the 1990s.

- Conducted more than 134,000 free "home energy audits" for its homeowner customers, as of Aug. 1. The audits pinpoint what's needed, then TVA finances the work through interest-free loans repaid in utility bills.

- Delayed construction on four new nuclear power plants and placed plans for several other new atomic plants "on hold."

- Put into effect a nuclear-operations strategy that goes beyond federal safety requirements. It involves improved training for reactor operators and plans to limit any future reactor construction to TVA's present reactor sites.

—Planned for an industrial park alongside the Watts Bar Nuclear Plant in order to make use of the immense amounts of waste heat generated by the atomic facility.

—Filed suit to break up the international "uranium cartel," companies mostly owned by large oil concerns. TVA contends they are illegally jacking up prices nuclear operators pay for uranium.

—TVA has a rate reform study underway that will probably turn present procedures on their head: instead of lower rates for large consumers, it may reward energy misers.

The agency also has its finger in the synthetic-fuel pie. It is building a coal-gasification pilot plant, and hopes to have a commercial operation by 1985 that would use the gas to make ammonia fertilizer. From gas, TVA could make synthetic crude.

Freeman doesn't believe expanded energy production is the entire answer. He seems a little uneasy with the tens of billions of dollars earmarked for processes that can make only a small dent in the nation's petroleum needs. But he thinks the nation must press ahead.

Freeman has long advocated a greater public role in energy supply, and now he is using TVA's success to argue the case.

The TVA chairman favors formation of a public corporation that could import and develop petroleum resources in the event private suppliers fail to obtain enough supplies or build enough refineries. "It's time to recognize that energy supply is so vital that the nation simply cannot rely on private companies that have a profit motive," he says.

The oil industry doesn't relish this kind of talk.

"We're against government interference in any guise or government operations in the petroleum industry because their record hasn't been too good in fields like Amtrak or the Post Office," says Jim Dailey, spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute.

"The Post Office connection intrigues me," counters Freeman. "We've got the only full-fledged government energy corporation here, and we've got a financial record that's hard to beat."

"All our decisions are hard-nosed, no-nonsense business decisions. We serve our shareholders."

Don Knotts joins 'Three's Company'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Knotts cheerfully admits he has only one characterization for television.

It doesn't matter whether he's on "The Andy Griffith Show," where he won five Emmys as Deputy Barney Fife, or "Three's Company," where he's Ralph Furley, the new apartment-house manager. He's always that cocky bantam rooster scratching and crowing his way from one rebuff to the next.

Knotts joins ABC's "Three's Company" after Norman Fell and Audra Lindley were spun off into their own new series, "The Ropers."

He moves into the Santa Monica apartment house, where John Ritter, Suzanne Somers and Joyce DeWitt have lived together the past two years. He immediately takes off after another new tenant, played by Ann Wedgeworth, and her rejections only egg him on.

"He thinks he knows it all and he keeps getting rebuffed," says Knotts. "He comes right back. He's a cocky guy. It seems to be the characterization that people like to see me do on television."

Norman Fell's Stanley Roper was prudish, staid and stuffy. He was a good backdrop for the antics of his three tenants. The casting of Knotts changes the tenor of the show. He is, if any, king, oversexed, and as wacky as the other three.

"Well, I don't play at the same energy level as they do," Knotts. He holds his hand up. "Because they're up here all the time. I keep mine a little more — I don't play as staid or placid as Norman did. I have a different kind of character. Not too far from Barney Fife. A little older Barney."

Knotts says it all started with Barney.

"I had done the nervous character on 'The Steve Allen Show,'" he says. "That was a pretty one-dimensional, just shaky guy. Whereas Barney Fife was more of a little bantam rooster. It was sort of written into the first script. But I think as we went along I'd say within the first 10 shows I had developed the pattern of the character. It took that long for me to really know where I wanted to take him."

His role on Griffith's show grew out of a friendship developed on Broadway in "No Time for Sergeants" and then in the film.

"A few years after that he did a pilot as a spinoff from 'The Danny Thomas Show' and I saw it on the air," Knotts recalls.

Area news briefs

UF schedules 'Big Push'

A "big push" to conclude the 1979-80 Pampa United Fund campaign will be conducted Monday through Thursday in order to wrap up the month long effort and bring the additional $58,381 to reach the goal of $182,537.

With the potential for a successful drive in the cards, volunteers will double their efforts to complete the 296 contacts remaining for victory. When the campaign started, more than 900 individuals, corporations and employee groups were to be contacted.

General Campaign Chairman R.W. "Dick" Stowers said that this week's report was ahead of the same time last year, when approximately $105,000 was raised. The last report meeting showed the Pampa total at $124,156.

The final report, and what leaders hope will be a victory meeting, will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday at the Citizen's Bank and Trust Company.

Hardin on Easter Seal Board

Gregory C. Hardin, managing editor of the Pampa News, was elected to a two-year term on the state board of directors of the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas at the society's annual convention in Houston.

Hardin, an active civic leader, is also a board member for the Community Concert Association and Director for the Gray County Red Cross. He and his wife, Judy, have been residents of Pampa since 1978.

My Prerogative

By DEBBIE DUKE

I think I talked about the new found school spirit in one of my earlier columns, but it's still so great. I feel it's worth talking about again.

Not only are the students at Pampa High School getting into everything, so are the teachers. Recently, about ten teachers showed their Harvester spirit at a pep rally by dressing up and cheering the team to victory while they played a brand new rendition of the fight song — on kazoo.

Friday other teachers got together to do a short skit, featuring teacher Kim Hammond in Ruth Buzzi's role of the "old lady in the hair net," and Coach David Martin as a Tascosa fan trying to find peace while sitting in the middle of the Harvester section. Students laughed and cheered for the heroine Hammond as she beat the poor Martin with her well-known ugly black purse.

It was a spirited idea and Hammond and Martin received a well deserved standing ovation for their performances. It's good to see the instructors get as involved with the school spirit as the students.

Once again a big congratulations goes to the Harvesters for their win over Tascosa Friday night. All the guys played superb and the team and spectator spirit was great. Keep it up, guys!

The Pampa High School Concert Choir is once again preparing a fine musical for Pampa. This year's production, Roger's and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma," will be presented Nov. 19th and 20th at M.K. Brown Auditorium. I hope everyone will look forward to see this performance.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY — "The sunrise never finds us where the sunset left us."

Americans making trek south to work

SAN MIGUEL DE ALLENDE, Mexico (AP)—They cross the 2,000-mile border in the thousands and head for localities where their own kind have gathered and where they know they'll be welcome.

Those who possess skills unmarketable in their own countries find they can take jobs nobody wants or is able to fill, and can make a satisfactory living — even though many have to work illegally.

The new arrivals don't generally speak the language of the host country and avoid socializing with the local people. Consequently they are sometimes seen as a threat to local traditions, but often they are tolerated as a necessary evil.

And, anyway, when discovered breaking the law they are eventually put on a bus to the border and sent back home.

These are Mexicans who continue to surge into the United States. Right?

Wrong.

They are the Americans who stream south into Mexico determined to live there.

So many Americans are making the trip that Mexican officials are grumbling about a gringo invasion, and are noticeably less free with visa extensions.

Nearly one-third of the 6,000 population of this beautiful 16th-century town of San Miguel de Allende is American, and many others reside here temporarily as students attending the famous art schools. The great Mexican comedian Cantinflas owns the Posada la Ermita, the poshest hotel in town, but never visits, he tells friends, "because I don't speak English well enough."

As many as 30,000 Americans are said to live in Guadalajara, the mile-high, second largest city of Mexico.

As many are thought to live in Mexico City, with a sizable colony in flower-splashed Cuernavaca, but statistics are not readily available. Many Americans are simply extending their tourist visas every six months.

Many are drawn south for the same reasons Mexicans were tempted north: a convenient common border, and opportunity. For the Mexican bracero, one of the 40 percent chronically unemployed or underemployed, it would provide seasonal work in Southern California, or laboring or domestic duties at a border city.

For American businessman McNeil Stringer, it was an executive post at the Mexican headquarters of the 3M Company, one of a thousand companies wholly or partially American-owned in Mexico, all taking advantage of the geographical convenience and the opportunity to exploit the Mexican market.

Stringer rose to head 3M in Mexico, then retired to run his own public-relations firm. The tall, gray-haired executive says, "I was 65 the other day. I could go back to the United States and buy a house, but I feel the opportunity here in the next decade will be incredible."

While some Americans like Stringer are in Mexico to make money, many are there to conserve it. They are retired civil servants, military men, businessmen and executives whose pensions go further here.

The factors that drive Mexican workers north to the U.S. — vast unemployment, low wages — are part of what makes this country so attractive to the retired. The cost of living is low.

A dozen elderly Americans meet daily at three benches on the tree-shaded Plaza San Miguel to chat and wait for the English-language News from Mexico

City. One of them, Willis Conner, a retired art director from New York and Hollywood, mentions that small apartments rent for $100 a month in San Miguel, large houses with pools, around $500.

Produce is cheap, meats about the same as in the United States.

Conner complains that "this is a famous artists' colony, but it's becoming more and more a social place for rich Texans escaping the summer heat. I was at a party the other night and there wasn't an artist in the place."

Conner adds sadly, "Unfortunately, this thing too popular. The average Mexican was already priced out of the market, now us regular Americans will be priced out."

None of the retired Americans sitting at the Plaza San Miguel speaks much Spanish. "Language is no problem. The Mexicans try to learn a little English to help us," says Gardner Williams, of Los Angeles, who summers at San Miguel.

Their main concern is extending their tourist visas, which requires driving to the U.S. border at Laredo about 800 miles away. "Everyone has a tough time these days," says Conner. "We are supposed to get 180-day extensions. But now they are reluctant to give 90 days, and sometimes give only 30."

Exhibiting more fortitude are American expatriates who long ago made Mexico their home and blended into the local scene.

Rosind Beimler took the job of principal of the American School in Mexico City 30 years ago. She stayed on to gain a degree in psychiatry, which she now practices, and to build a handsome house in Cuernavaca, an hour's drive from Mexico City.

Marathon winners announced

CANADIAN — Alicia Hobby and Pete Cooper were the winners of the combined 28 to 44 age group of Canadian's first Fall Foliage Frolic. Terry and Maryann Whitten were second in the five-mile event.

In the couples combined age group 45-61, the first place honor was taken by Jerry Whitten and Roxann Whitten. The team of Larry Guffey and Cassandra Wells captured the second place honors.

George Herring and Patty Aaron were first in the couples, ages 62 to 78, and Tommy Sue Hobby won first in the 79 and up group.

In the 10 mile men's run for the 30 to 39 age group, Lewis Holland was the winner, with Mike Alerandez in second place.

First in the 40 - 49 year old men's run was Leo Karlin. Second was taken by Dick Waterfield.

R. L. Hart was first in the 54 and over group.

Texas teacher convention set for February

The 1980 Convention of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association will be held at the Dallas Convention Center February 14-16, 1980.

John W. King, president of the association, will preside over this 25th Annual Representative Assembly with approximately 1200 visitors and delegates in attendance.

Representatives of the 40,000 member organization, the largest independent organization of classroom teachers in the country, will be facing many crucial issues concerning the future of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association. The most critical of these will be the decision of the delegates to vote on a consolidation plan between the Texas Classroom Teachers Association and the Texas State Teachers Association — affiliated with the National Education Association.

The vote on the consolidation of the two organizations will occur during the convention, by the House of Delegates of TSTA in March and by both organizations' memberships, if needed. A two-thirds vote will be required to pass the resolution for consolidation.

Other highlights of the Convention will focus on the issues facing educators in the State of Texas and in the area of legislation and professional excellence. Delegates will be electing statewide officers to the TCTA Board of Directors and Executive Committee. A vote will be held on amendments to the TCTA Bylaws and Standing Rules. Delegates will be attending the mini-conferences on Professional Excellence, the Candidates' Reception and the TCTA Annual Banquet.

Three outstanding administrators from the state will be honored with "TCTA Administrator of the Year" awards.

PAMPA'S ARTHUR Williams rolls around right end on a 36-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. The Harvesters went on to crush Tascosa, 32-7, Friday night to take command of first place in District 3-AAAA.

Pampa rolls over Tascosa

The Pampa Harvesters have emerged as the team to beat in District 3-AAAA after posting an easy 32-7 win over Amarillo Tascosa Friday night at Harvester Field.

The Harvesters take over the loop lead with a 2-0 record while extending their seasonal mark to 5-2.

Senior running back Doug Kennedy spelled trouble for the visiting Rebels all night long as he rushed for 115 yards on 12 carries and scored two touchdowns. The Harvester defense, spearheaded by Clyde Coffee, Mark Jennings, and Monte Covatt, dropped opposing ballcarriers behind the scrimmage line nine times. Jennings, Covatt, and Clifford Anderson each recovered fumbles while Andy Richardson intercepted a pass on Tascosa's last possession of the game.

Pampa wasted little time in getting on the scoreboard. Kennedy broke loose on a 66-yard touchdown jaunt just three plays into Pampa's first possession of the game. Kennedy sprinted down the right sideline and received some good blocking enroute to the end zone. Billy Grimes booted the extra point to make it 7-0.

However, Pampa wasn't going to turn it into a rout until the second half.

Tascosa countered with 7:10 left in the second quarter on a record-breaking run by Wade Hunt, who rambled 98 yards for the score after a 64-yard punt by Bryan Williams left the Rebels on their own two. Moving behind a block thrown by Kelly Gutierrez, Hunt slipped into the open and raced untouched down the right side. It was the longest scoring run in Rebel history, snapping the previous record of 97 yards set by Tommy Gergeni against Palo Duro in 1964. Mark Romero converted to knot the score at 7-7.

But that's when good things stopped happening for the Rebels and Pampa started using them as a springboard to the No. 1 spot in the district standings.

Four minutes later the Rebels jumped on top to stay when Bobby Dorsey took a wide pitchout from quarterback Greg Quarles and skirted 33 yards around right end to score.

Leading 13-7 at intermission, Pampa closed out Tascosa with a 19-point barrage in the third quarter on a 36-yard run by Arthur Williams, a 15-yard scamper by Kennedy and a three-yard sneak by Quarles. All three scores were set up on a pair of Tascosa fumbles and a short punt.

Statistics were fairly even despite the one-sided score. The Harvesters rushed for 262 yards compared to 246 for Tascosa. Pampa had the edge in passing, 75-50, and had only one more first down, 13-12.

A trio of Pampa backs rushed for 40 yards or more. Dorsey picked up 45 yards in three tries. Leroy Kuhn accounted for 40 yards in seven steps, and Arthur Williams gained 42 yards in three carries.

Quarles tossed 12 passes and completed five for 74 yards. His favorite receiver was Arthur Williams, who snagged three for 43 yards. Steve McDougall caught one for 22 yards and Dorsey, one for 10.

Pampa travels to Plainview Friday night for a non-district encounter.

PRO CONWAY

By D'ANNA CONWAY

Volleyball.

It's the type of game that few people take as serious sport. Most everyone has played it at one time, and most would agree, standing there in their swimsuits and cut-offs, that it's not one of your rough, macho sports. How can anyone get excited about volleyball (especially girls volleyball) when there's football, basketball, baseball, mom and apple pie?

For an answer to that question, just take a gander at the Pampa Harvester volleyball team. When these women play together, they dispel any notion that the sport is an after church social to be likened to that of touch football and frisbee.

How do you take it seriously? Just watch the Harvesters do double gainers into three rows of seats trying to retrieve a ball. Just watch them chase a bad set or volley into the next county. Just watch them them spike—you thought it was the ball hitting the floor that made that loud booming noise? Wrong. It was the breaking of the sound barrier.

Just watch, and it becomes increasingly easier after every bump, set, and spike to catch the intensity and the spirit of the game.

But if you really want an idea of the finer points, look again to the Pampa Harvesters and see the team's number one attribute: attitude.

It's a rare treat to watch so much support transmitting from one player to another. Whether a play was made or whether it was bombed, it's gather-thee-around-me time as five other players rally to their teammate to console, exhort, praise, and urge on. It's a touching sight actually, one that has all the makings of a tear jerker if you happen to be any kind of a romantic at all.

Every one of Pampa's players could qualify for all-school favorite, and they are the kind of people to whom you'd imagine Bert Parks singing "There she is, Miss America."

These are not loose compliments thrown about by an admiring sportswriter. Rather, they are made in all respect for a team that is the epitome of what a team really should be—you're Webster's definition of teamwork and togetherness.

It would be one of my greatest thrills to see you Pampa Harvesters go all the way, and to use a cliché, winning District 3-AAAA couldn't happen to a nicer bunch of women.

Houston butchers Hogs

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.

(AP) — Kenny Hatfield kicked a pair of field goals in the final period Saturday, including a 19-yarder with 1:12 remaining, that gave sixth-ranked Houston a 13-10 victory over Arkansas and put the Cougars in undisputed possession of first place in the Southwest Conference.

However, the triumph was not secured until the final play, when Ish Ordonez, Arkansas' record-setting placekicker, had a 42-yard field goal attempt blocked by the middle of the Houston defense. The miss ended an NCAA record string of 16 successive field goals by Ordonez, who booted a 35-yarder just 2½ minutes into the game for a 3-0 Arkansas lead. It was his first miss in 11 attempts this season.

Wheeler crushes Follett, 57-19

Bennie Baker rushed for 236 yards and scored four touchdowns as top-ranked Wheeler crushed Follett, 57-19, in District 1-B activity Friday night.

Baker scored three of his touchdowns in the second period as the Mustangs led 36-13 at halftime.

"It was a better game than the score says it was," Wheeler coach Joe Allen said. "It was 7-7 at the end of the first quarter and 14-13 in the second quarter before we started pulling away. "We had a strong wind facing us the first quarter and it made it pretty tough for us."

Paul Bentley nabbed a one-yard touchdown pass from Rich Brown early in the third period to give the unbeaten Mustangs, now 8-0, a 43-13 advantage.

Baker's 38-yard jaunt in the final minutes finished the TD parade.

Arthur Cepeda and Bentley led the Mustang defense with 7 tackles apiece.

Ducks unlimited banquet scheduled for Thursday

Top of Texas Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its second annual banquet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Starlight room of the Coronado Inn in Pampa.

Co-chairman Ken Fields said besides the banquet, there will be an auction of numbered wildlife prints by noted artists and a Weatherby-Patricia pump shotgun. Banquet activities will also be filmed he added.

Fields said Ducks Unlimited is a nationwide conservationists group which preserves Canadian wetlands for the purpose of breeding and hatching ducks. He pointed out that Ducks Unlimited is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing a bountiful duck supply.

"Last year the local chapter raised over $2,300 to help in this effort," Fields added.

According to Ducks Unlimited literature, long term leases are obtained on existing wetlands from landowners. Then water control structures are established to keep proper and constant levels. This long-range program now has over 1,500 Ducks Unlimited project areas.

Since Ducks Unlimited was founded in 1937, it has constructed over 1,500 water control project, provided more than 2.7 million acres for hundreds of species of wildlife, raised more than $58 million on behalf of waterfowl conservation in the United States, and has organized waterfowl conservation and management projects in Mexico for the benefit of wintering waterfowl.

Golfers win VB champions

Pampa High golfers, led by Paul Beck, defeated Amarillo Caprock, 326-363, in a dual Saturday at Borger.

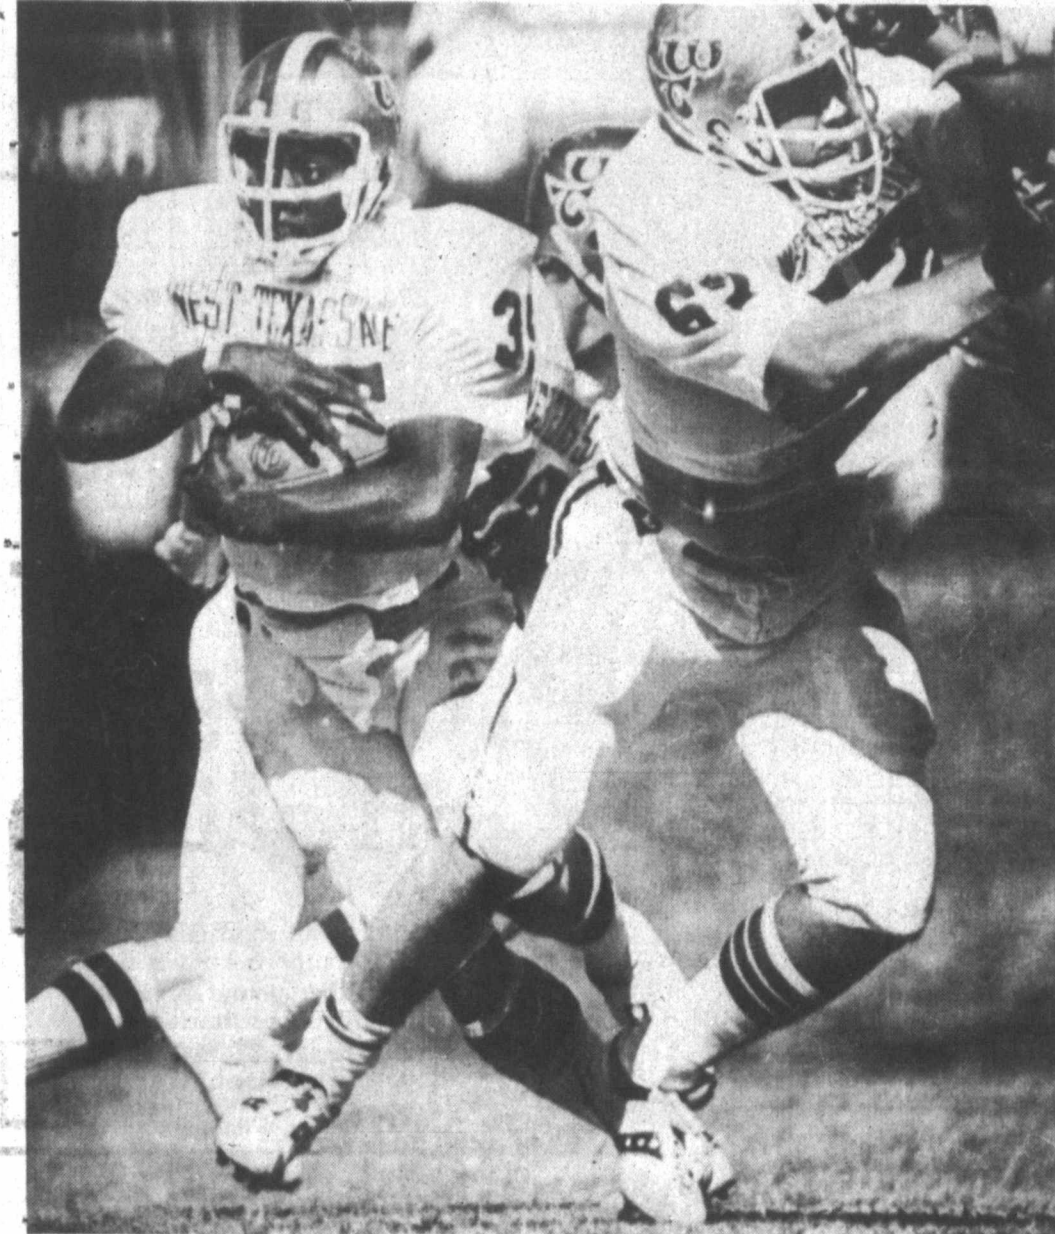

Beck shot a 76 to finish third in the medalist race. Gary Raye, Borger, shot 74 to claim top honors while John Dougerty, Tascosa, fired a 75 for runnerup.

Barry Terrell was next in line for Pampa behind Beck with an 80. Gary Cudney had an 82, Jeff Hansen, 88, and James White, 89.

In a junior varsity match, Pampa fell to Borger, 324-388. Bob Brandt led the Pampa with a 90, followed by Cliff Kelly, 99; Steve Shepherd, 99; Lance Defever, 100, and Kenneth Martin, 105.

Borger defeated Tascosa, 313-319, in other varsity match.

Sui Ross women's volleyball team defeated McMurry, 15-8, 15-4, and 15-5, Friday to win the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association title.

Bufs smash Wichita

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — West Texas State, led by the passing of Larry Thompson and the rushing of Danny Clark and Jackie Compton, ran over Wichita State 58-0, to capture its third Missouri Valley Conference football victory Saturday.

Thompson completed three of only four passes in the first half, connecting on two for 11 and nine-yard touchdowns as the Buffaloes rolled to an overwhelming 28-0 halftime lead.

The Buffaloes, now 3-5-1 and leading the conference with a 3-0 mark, scored on their first possession when they went 54 yards in 13 plays on the ground. Compton plunged in from the one for the score.

Thompson then went to work with his aerial game. He connected with tight end Milton Bauer on a 62-yard pass play that carried to the Wichita State 12. Two plays later, Thompson hit Rickey Collingsworth with an 11-yard pass in the end zone to make it 14-0 in the first period.

West Texas added two more touchdowns in the second quarter against the hapless Shockers, now 1-7 and 1-4 in league play. West Texas' third score came after the Buffaloes' Larry Moore recovered Shocker quarterback Prince McJunkins' fumble on the Wichita State six.

Clark, who scored twice, carried it from the three for a 21-0 lead with 8:29 left before the half. On the Buffaloes' next possession, Thompson hit Baker in the end zone for a nine-yard touchdown and the 28-0 lead.

6-man football

HIGGINS-North Side jumped out to a 22-0 first-period advantage and was never headed in a 74-38 win over Higgins in Texas six-man grid action Friday night.

As I recall, those 1939 model cars were something else. First ones out with the shifting levers on the steering column were Chevrolet, Buick and Plymouth. Buick had a novel gadget called a directional signal located on the shift lever. It told people behind you if you were turning left or right. Most folks said it was unnecessary, 'cause if you got to lazy to put your arm out the window to signal, you shouldn't drive.

From baseball to blackjack

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays is set to go to work for a gaming-machine firm, but Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has told him if he does so he will have to sever his ties with baseball. Mays, currently under contract to the New York Mets as a public relations representative and part-time coach, is scheduled to announce at a news conference here Monday that he has signed a 10-year agreement to do public relations work for Bally Manufacturing Corp., a game-machine maker. Kuhn sent the Hall of Fame player a telegram Friday telling him he would have to cut his ties to the Mets, and Saturday the commissioner issued a statement saying, "I think there is a clear conflict of interest between working for baseball and working for an organization that operates gambling casinos."

"I would be extremely sorry if Willie Mays chooses to go to work for Bally, but the choice would be completely his, and he would make it with advance knowledge of my position on the conflict."

"There is no implication intended that he has been guilty of any wrongdoing. On the contrary, he has always been a great asset to our game. Nor am I saying he would not be welcome at such events as old timers games. Obviously he would," Kuhn said, adding, "I would personally be very distressed if he made the choice to join Bally and would still be hopeful that even now he would elect to remain in baseball."

Mays was reported to be traveling to his New York home Saturday from his Atherton, Calif., residence.

"I don't think I have done anything wrong," the 48-year-old Mays said Friday. Mays starred for the New York and San Francisco Giants before ending his playing career with the Mets six years ago. He has served recently as a part-time coach and public relations representative for the Mets and has two years to go on a contract with the ballclub.

"I would never do anything to hurt baseball."

Lamar pushes past ASU

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Quarterback Larry Haynes connected with Howard Robinson for two scoring passes in the second quarter as Lamar University defeated Arkansas State University, 20-10, here Saturday.

Haynes' touchdown passes to Robinson were for 16 and 3 yards. The second scoring pass proved decisive as the Indians were unable to produce any kind of offensive thrust afterward. ASU had led 10-0 at the end of the first quarter of the Southland conference contest.

The Indians scored early in the first period on a 1-yard run by tailback Bobby Young. On the Tribe's second possession, kicker Doug Dobbs added a 20-yard field goal with the wind at his back and ASU took the lead.

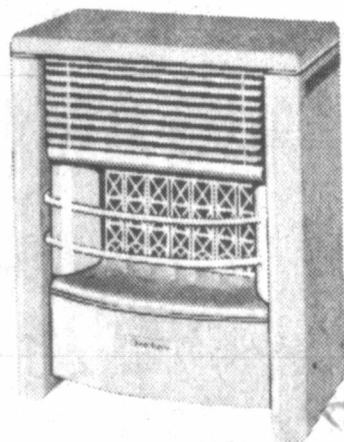

Lamar took advantage of the 25 mph. wind in the second period to score its 17 first-half points.

Clarendon trips Bucks

WHITE DEER—Clarendon took advantage of White Deer turnovers for a 63-10 District 2-A victory here Friday night.

White Deer took the lead when Rickey Swaney went 4 yards and David Gallett kicked the PAT to make it 7-0 in the first period.

However, Clarendon's Bobby Weatherston ran 55 yards and Lynn Thompson 45 yards for scores in the same period to open the floodgates.

White Deer's only other score came on a 37-yard field goal by Gallett in the second quarter.

NEBRASKA QUARTERBACK Tim Hager finds it difficult to get off a pass on third down as Colorado defensemen Bob Humble (40), Kevin Szam (72) and Charles Scott (66) swarm in for the kill in second-quarter action. Nebraska won 38-10.

Texas wallops SMU

IRVING, Texas (AP) — John Goodson kicked three field goals and Texas turned a fumble and an interception into touchdowns as the ninth-ranked Longhorns defeated Southern Methodist 30-6 Saturday in a Southwest Conference game.

Rodney Tate gave Texas a 16-0 halftime lead with a 5-yard touchdown run with 20 seconds left in the second quarter. Brad Beck went three yards for a score on the third play after the Longhorns recovered a fumble at the Mustang 13, and Herkie Walls sprinted 30 yards in the final three minutes to round out Texas' scoring.

SMU's only score came with 3:48 to play on a 3-yard halfback pass from Charles Wagoner to Robert Fisher.

Texas raised its record to 5-1 for the year and 2-1 in SWC play. SMU fell to 3-4 and 2-3.

Goodson, the nation's leading field goal kicker, was true from 38, 31, and 37 yards, all in the first half, to give him 15 field goals for the year. His performance broke the record of 14 previously held by Russell Erxleben.

Linebacker Chuck Holloway recovered a fumble at the Texas 39 on SMU's first possession, and the running of Beck and Tate carried the Longhorns to the 14 where Texas' barefooted, soccer-style kicker connected with his second field goal of the day.

Brigham Young routs New Mexico

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Marc Wilson passed for four touchdowns and ran for another score as 11th-ranked Brigham Young demolished New Mexico 59-7 in Western Athletic Conference football Saturday.

The unbeaten Cougars spotted New Mexico a brief 7-0 lead before Wilson cranked up his arm.

The nation's total offense leader tied the score on a 45-yard pass play to Homer Jones. Wilson added touchdown passes of 7, 6 and 3 yards and had a 4-yard scoring run.

New Mexico, after playing BYU to a 7-7 standoff in the first quarter, fell victim to turnovers that BYU turned into four touchdowns.

UNM's lone score came on the Lobos' first possession as Jimmy Sayers' 1-yard run capped an 83-yard drive. But things then turned sour for the Lobos. After a 50-yard field goal by BYU's Brent Johnson early in the second quarter, BYU recovered a Lobo fumble on the 20-yard line and after three plays, Jones scored from the three.

Steinbrenner has eye on Billy again

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner is taking a hard look at Billy Martin — again.

"We just can't have him getting into these things every two months," says the owner of the New York Yankees. "It's not good for organized baseball."

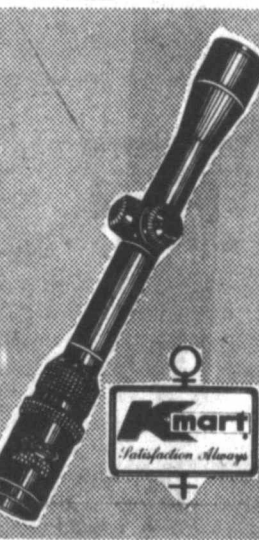

Steinbrenner is investigating reports that his controversial manager was involved in another of his well publicized fights.

Police in Bloomington, Minn., reported that Martin was involved in a fight in a hotel lobby Wednesday night and split open the lip of an Illinois man, sending him to a hospital.

WANDALISM

'Wreckreation' on the rise

Vandalism is on the increase in Pampa and almost every other city in the nation, regardless of population, racial structure, or economic level.

"There's a slight increase over the same period last year, but it's not real big," said Chief J.J. Ryzman of the Pampa Police Department.

From January to September 1979, city police received reports of 315 cases of vandalism, which by definition means monetary damage to property done by someone other than the owner.

Of those 315 cases, only 25 percent have been cleared, said Ryzman. "Sometimes the larger the case, the easier it is to investigate," he added, citing as reasons the awareness of neighbors and more clues. "Of course, some cases have very limited evidence."

Most reports of vandalism involve property damage caused by BB guns and rock-throwing; also common are antenna breaking and tire-slashing on automobiles.

Pampa police even receive reports of vandalism to passing trains — usually complaints of broken windows caused by rock throwers.

Law officials learn — usually by experience — to expect an increase in vandalism at certain times, such as after this year's emotional Pampa-Borger football game.

The Halloween season, too, usually brings an increase in "mischievous acts" — some which rank as vandalism, some which cause no monetary loss. For example, "wrapping" a house in toilet paper is irritating but usually causes no monetary damage, so it doesn't rank as vandalism.

The causes of vandalism — or criminal mischief, as the Texas Penal Code identifies that destruction of that nature — are probably just as baffling as they are varied.

"Vandalism is predominately a young person's type offense, but it goes all the way up," explained Ryzman, who said vandalism sometimes is caused by domestic spats.

"Quite often we'll find an ex-spouse to be vindictive to the ex and take it out on the automobile — cuts the tires, knocks out windows," he said.

Most of the destructive acts are committed on the spur of the moment, said Ryzman, and most often a vandal works by himself. But some groups, usually made up of the younger generation, also perform impromptu acts of vandalism.

Boredom is cited by many law officers and sociologists as the probable cause for many acts of vandalism. A study of school vandalism, conducted by the Center for Juvenile Delinquency Prevention, also cites hostility, pent-up energy, alienation, failure and the need for attention as other reasons.

According to the study, a "typical vandal" differs dramatically from a "typical juvenile delinquent."

Vandals fall into a well-defined and fairly narrow age group: the usual situation involves an early-adolescent male highly subject to group pressures and transitory impulses.

"Vandalism isn't really a racial-type crime," said Ryzman. The center's study supports him and also contends that vandalism cuts across all strata of society and all geographic regions.

What youngsters may see as an impromptu thrill or an outlet for their emotions may, if they're caught and charged, affect their futures for quite some time.

Depending on the monetary loss incurred, a vandal may have to pay for his action through a term in the county jail, a fine, and — or a stay in the Texas Department of Corrections.

A Class C misdemeanor, with a damage estimate of less than $5, is subject to a $200 fine. A Class B misdemeanor, with damages between $5 and $19, is subject to 180 days in county jail or a fine up to $1,000; for damages between $20 and $199 — a Class A misdemeanor — the vandal could spend up to a year in county jail or be fined up to $2,000.

Criminal mischief may be classified as a third degree felony for cases with damages ranging from more than $200 to less than $10,000. The vandal could receive from two to 10 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and could receive an additional fine up to $5,000.

A second degree felony involves monetary loss of more than $10,000; the offender could spend two to 20 years in prison and could be fined up to $10,000.

If the incidence involves juveniles, the parents are notified and the police may refer it to the juvenile probation officer. Although a few parents are irate, most of them cooperate in an effort to get their youngsters back on the right track, said Ryzman.

If the case goes to the juvenile officer, the situation leaves the hands of the police, as is the case if the vandal or the parents are required to make restitution for the monetary loss of the property owner.

One of the best deterrents to would-be vandals is adequate lighting around a home or business.

Homeowners probably report more cases of vandalism than businesses, he said. He explained that many business simply repair the damage without reporting the incident.

By TINA McCLOY

With the help of the Kiwanis Club, the Pampa Police Department has begun a crime prevention information program, with the school system playing a vital role.

Police officers recently visited fourth graders in the elementary schools; an anti-vandalism slogan competition resulted in this first-place verse by Jerri Ellison:

Be wise
Don't vandalize.
You're not funny.
Save us all money.

The slogan will head a year-long effort. The campaign also includes informational talks and films for kindergarten through eighth grade students. Next month officers will start an effort in Pampa High School, where students will visit with them and discuss problems such as traffic violations or pressures at home.

"The places that have tried programs like this on a bigger scale have found it's increasing respect for teachers and officers in general," said Ryzman, who added, "Of course, it's going to be a real slow process."

MRS. CASEY ROBERTSON

Harris - Robertson vows read Saturday

Miss Kimbra Renee Harris became the bride of Casey Lee Robertson in a ceremony Saturday evening in Central Baptist Church. The Rev. Dr. Alvin Hiltbrunner, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Harris, 1336 N. Russell. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Cora Lee Robertson of Plainview.

The bride's formal gown was of ivory sheer knit, fashioned with a high Victorian neckline edged in scalloped silk venise lace and seed pearls. The empire bodice was designed with a V-neck and sheer yoke, encrusted with matching lace and pearls. Full bishop sleeves were banded in lace and seed pearls.

The full A-line skirt featured a deep flounce at the hemline and fell to a chapel length train. Her waltz-length veil of imported English illusion was edged with silk venise lace and seed pearls and was attached to a lace-covered Camelot headpiece.

Serving as maid of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Debbie Francis of Plainview. Neysa Copeland of Amarillo was bridesmaid.

Attending the bridegroom was Kim Pesson of Pampa as best man and Bobby Ward, also of Pampa, as groomsmen.

Registering guests was Mrs. Brenda Davis of Wewoka, Okla. Ushers were John Davis and Kirt Cotham of Pampa and Shane Dyer and David Baker of Lubbock. Dyer and Baker lighted candles before the ceremony.

Providing wedding music were Jerry Whitten, organist, and Miss Diane McNeely, soloist.

The couple lighted a memory candle before the recessional. Assisting at a reception in the church parlor were Jana Walton of Amarillo, Darla Robertson, Doris Johnston, Mrs. W.H. Earp, Mrs. John Ward and Mrs. Thurston Ring.

The couple will live in Nacogdoches, where the bridegroom is employed by Haney's Plumbing Co. They are both graduates of Pampa High School.

DEAR ABBY

Mom's reaction hurts daughter

DEAR ABBY: I am a young married woman with a child. My mother has always been my best friend, and I felt I could bring any kind of problem to her and get some good sound advice.

My husband and I have been having sexual problems for about a year. (He is always "too tired.") I still have normal sexual desires that need fulfilling. Believe me, I have never been a cheating woman, but a very attractive divorced friend of my husband's propositioned me recently, and for the first time in my life I was actually tempted.

I tried to tell my Mom about my frustrations and feelings and she walked out of the room saying, "I don't think this is something you should be talking to ME about."

Abby, I felt so totally let down and rejected. Are there things daughters shouldn't discuss with their mothers? For example, the above?

TROUBLED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Two mature people should be able to discuss anything. By attempting to discuss a delicate problem openly and honestly, you showed more maturity than your mother, who refused to listen. You need some expert advice from someone who can be completely objective and non-judgmental. Your mother obviously can't. A psychologist or psychiatric social worker can help you.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a member of the women's work force for 35 years, and I believe in equal pay for equal work. However, I think the demands for "sick pay" for pregnant women, and special privileges for nursing mothers on the job, are out of line.

I feel strongly that pregnancy should NOT be classed as a "sickness." Motherhood is the fulfillment of a natural urge, and unless she is raped, the woman enters this role willingly, knowing that eventually she will be temporarily incapacitated. I think a leave of absence without pay in order to have a child would add dignity to the working woman, and would encourage employers to hire more women.

What are your views on this subject?

T.F. IN REGO PARK, N.Y.

DEAR T.F.: I agree that motherhood should NOT be called a "sickness," but I see nothing undignified in accepting a paid leave of absence to have a baby. Some families need two incomes.

DEAR ABBY: Well, it happened again! Abby, please give all those inconsiderate idiots who call and hang up the phone after three or four rings a well-deserved word or two. Don't they realize that not everyone has a telephone at her elbow? I have one in the hall by the kitchen, but sometimes my hands are in bread dough, or I'm in the middle of something and can't just stop and grab the phone.

I also carry out the trash once in a while, and sometimes I work in my garden.

I also take a bath and don't object to getting out of the tub to answer the phone, but I do mind when I take my time so as not to slip on the wet tile floor, and pick up the phone in time to hear my party hang up!

I want to say to those who call me, "If it's important enough to call about, please give me a chance to answer you! I can't afford an answering service, and after today I want you to know that I am not running anymore. If you are so rude and inconsiderate as to hang up after three rings, or so stupid that you don't realize that I'll get there more safely and in a better mood if I don't have to run, then YOU can jolly well be the frustrated one!

"Any calls I miss because you are too important to give me an extra minute to answer, I will live without!"

REFORMED RUNNER IN TUCSON

DEAR REFORMED: I hope your letter reforms some of those impatient dingalings who hang up after the third ring. I learned something today. Thanks for writing.

THERESA HON AND TOMMY BRUCE

Theresa Hon, Tommy Bruce to be married in December

Mr. and Mrs. Cloyd Hon, 1329 E. Foster, announce the engagement of their daughter, Theresa Lynn, to Thomas Wesley Bruce.

The bride-elect, a 1979 graduate of Pampa High School, is employed at Citizens Bank & Trust Co. Bruce, also a 1979 PHS graduate, is self-employed with Bruce Moving & Storage in Amarillo.

The couple will be married Dec. 1 at Hobart Baptist Church.

Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Bruce, 1200 Williston.

Groom will be stranger to bride

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Hardeep Singh attends college, works part time and wears jeans just like many other 18-year-old American women.

Ms. Singh also plans to be married later this year, but her marriage will be far different from what is customary in the United States.

She has never met her bridegroom and can't even pronounce his name.

Ms. Singh's parents arranged her marriage five years ago in the custom of upper-caste Sikhs, a monotheistic offshoot of Hinduism. (She will be married in her native Fiji Islands to a 22-year-old college student who will emigrate to America after the ceremony.)

The young couple will be able to communicate because she can speak Indian and "he probably speaks English," Ms. Singh said.

Even though she has lived in this central California city for 13 years and wants to be a lawyer, Ms. Singh is willing to go through with the arranged marriage for her parents' sake.

"I love my parents and do to the best of my ability to please them," she said in an interview. "They care for us. I could still be in the Fiji Islands where the life is hard. My parents brought us here so we could have a good education."

Her parents would become social outcasts among other Sikhs if she failed to accept the arranged marriage, Ms. Singh said.

"If I ran away, if I went against my parents' wishes, they would probably never be socially accepted again," she added. "It would be such a disgrace."

"If I married an American, my father would never talk to me. I can't imagine not spending Christmas at home, not seeing my parents. I'm financially dependent. I would have no way to go to school."

Ms. Singh has never dated American boys because her parents were "afraid it would corrupt me."

Her parents sold a sugarcane plantation in the Fijis 13 years ago and bought farm land here. They returned to Fiji five years ago to arrange traditional marriages for their two oldest daughters.

Cultural differences have caused some problems in her older sister's marriage because in Fiji, "the men make the rules," Ms. Singh said. "My parents have let us be very independent."

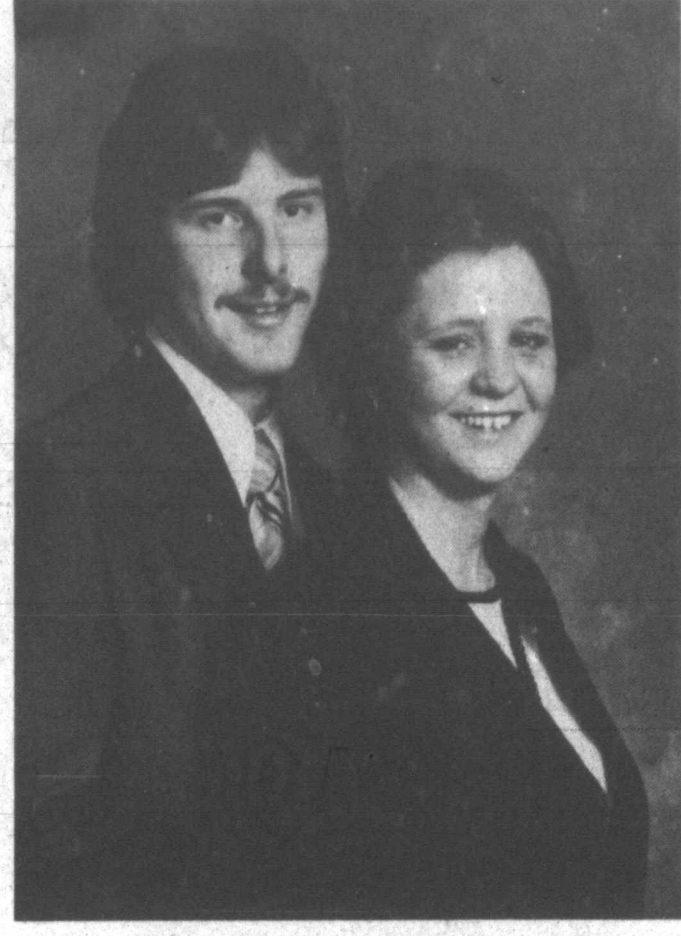

She doesn't expect to lose her independence after marriage, though, because her husband will be a stranger in this country.

"I know what's going on here," Ms. Singh said. "He's going to be dependent on me."

Ms. Singh termed the divorce of a cousin "a disgrace" but then vowed of her own arranged marriage: "I'm not going to stay with it if it doesn't work."

She is satisfied with the arrangement, however, because "I like my life to be planned. If it doesn't work out, you can always blame your parents. After all, they got you into it. It's their fault."

When her parents went to Fiji to arrange the marriage, Ms. Singh told them "I didn't want a smoker, a drinker, an old man."

CASSANDRA HOOPER AND TIMOTHY DEAN HASTINGS

Miss Hooper to wed Timothy Dean Hastings

Miss Cassandra Jo Hooper will be wed to Timothy Dean Hastings on Dec. 15 in the First Baptist Church of White Deer.

Parents of the bride-elect are Mrs. Vera Rogers of Amarillo and Jack Hooper of Washington.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A.H. Robertson of White Deer and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hastings of Amarillo.

The bride is a 1979 graduate of White Deer High School and is a student at Amarillo College. She is employed by State Farm Insurance.

Her fiancé is also a 1979 graduate of WDHS and is employed by United of Amarillo.

JO JOHNSON

Jo Johnson, Kevin George plan Dec. 22 wedding vows

Mr. and Mrs. W.M. Johnson, northwest of Pampa, announce the engagement of their daughter, Jennifer Jo, to Kevin Jay George, son of Mr. and Mrs. Callens George of Pampa.

The couple will exchange vows Dec. 22 in the First Christian Church of Pampa.

The bride-elect is a 1979 graduate of Pampa High School and is a student at Frank Phillips College in Borger, where she is a member of Phi Beta Lambda business organization.

The prospective bridegroom is a 1978 PHS graduate and is employed by L and R Machine Shop in Pampa.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

As brides, more years ago than we care to count, we all had "good" things we brought out for guests and "everyday" possessions that we insisted we and our husbands use. But, if you're like me, you know that one of the joys of middle- and older marriage is the realization that now, with less than a hundred (all right, sixty or even thirty) years left to us, we might as well start wearing out our best sheets and eating our meals with our wedding dishes and silver. The quilts that great-grandmother pieced, the heirloom china that has never been chipped because it has so seldom been used, Auntie's antique rocker that still has its original upholstery because we never sat in it and frowned at guests who dared to — all these lovely hand-me-downs can now be brought into sight and use and enjoyment. It's a comfortable feeling. We're not likely to break or tear anything, so the beautiful things can be passed on to another generation. But if we do damage some prized article, so what? Nobody can scold us. Our treasures are ours alone.

I started using our good things a while back when Otis said, "The company's gone. I'll help you jerk off Aunt Ella's crocheted covers and the monogrammed towels and the satin pillows on the divan. I'll put the sterling in the cases until Christmas." He wasn't kidding or complaining. He was just stating a fact of our way of life. The next day I let him eat with our best silverware and on our good crystal and china. He sat on the divan that was right down to the unblemished white- and- gold upholstery that came on it. He even used our "company" towels, white with gold monograms. He's been revelling in all these luxuries ever since. I said it was about time. And he agreed with me. So do some of your letters.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife has made me wipe on thread-bare, skimpy towels when I take a shower, all these 40 years. She says the only decent towels we own have to be saved for company. But nobody comes to see us anymore except our kids, and they're here just once or twice a year. I don't think they'd mind using the kind of old towels they grew up with. But me, just once I'd like to dry myself on one of those great big fluffy towels I can't see through when I hold it up to the light. I'm always offering to buy the wife some new towels, man-sized, if she'll let me start wearing out the ones that have been our "best" for all these years. But she says not to waste money at our age, just go on using the old thin ones with the ragged edges. What would you do if you were me? BURT.

DEAR BURT: I'd rush to the nearest linen store, without telling her, and lay in a supply of as many of the biggest, fluffiest towels I could afford. I'd take them home and tell her they were last year's, or next year's, birthday present. I'd tell her I loved her so much that I wanted her to have the best of towels, not just for company but for herself too. And I'd tell her I'd be happy to help her enjoy them. She couldn't very well refuse the love of the gift. And she might have been only half dried by the old towels for 40 years, the same as you have been. She may enjoy the change so much that she'll let you both start using anything else in the house that you want to. If she doesn't offer to, suggest it. Older age deserves special enjoyments that have been too long postponed.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband says we've bought our last furniture so we've got to take care of it. We've been retired for six years and are in our seventies. We don't entertain much any more — and when we do, our guests are always people our age who never spill anything. We don't have any children to leave our good things to. Don't you think I should be able to enjoy my flowered chairs and divan and cushions without covers, during our golden years? H's WIFE.

DEAR H's WIFE: Yes, I do. And if you are diplomatic enough, I believe you can. Your husband obviously treasures your beautiful furniture and loves you enough to want you to live in a nice home and have lovely furnishings to enjoy. But he doesn't realize that if you can't see a chair in its "best dress", you can't enjoy it to the fullest. Tell him you'd rather share your best with him than with any guests any time — and try to get him to agree that you owe it to yourselves to use your "best foot forward" for each other instead of saving it for guests who may never arrive.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

LOOKING OVER the Michigan State University campus from Hubbard Hall, a 12-story student dormitory. Mission Service Corps volunteer Brenda Moyer of Pampa shares her vision of building a Baptist Student Union center that can help reach 42,000 Michigan State students.

Miss Moyer directs Michigan State BSU

Editor's note: Brenda Moyer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Moyer, 1518 N. Nelson. She recently was interviewed by Erich Bridges of the Mission Service Corps Communication Team, a mission ministry of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — On a clear day, you can see the entire Michigan State University campus, if you stand on a hill and strain your eyes.

The campus looks more like a good-sized city than a school. The university runs its own bus system, and even operates an elementary school for the children of married students. Some 42,000 students walk, ride bikes and buses, or cross country ski around the gargantuan complex, rubbing shoulders with several thousand faculty members and staffers.

Local Baptist leaders estimate that more than a thousand Baptist students attend Michigan State, yet until recently, the campus Baptist Student Union had no full-time director.

Last August, however, Brenda Moyer came to the rescue.

A vivacious, 23-year-old native of Pampa, Texas, Brenda graduated from Michigan State last spring with a criminal justice degree. Past student president of both the campus and statewide Baptist Student Unions, she lobbied two years for a full-time director for Michigan State.

"I yelled for a full-time director for Michigan State without ceasing," remembers Brenda. "and just as I was getting ready to go home after graduation, they turned the tables and challenged me to stay and be director myself."

"They" were the 11 churches of the Central Baptist Association of Lansing, all of whom agreed to financially support Brenda through Mission Service Corps, the Southern Baptist Convention plan to place 5,000 volunteers on foreign and domestic mission fields for one or two years of service.

State student work director Jack Elliott also agreed to help fund Brenda, as well as the National Student Ministries Department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, and several Texas churches.

In spite of homesickness, Brenda seized the opportunity and took over campus Baptist leadership in early September. She also agreed to lead Baptist students at the 18,000 student Lansing Community College nearby.

At fall registration, Brenda and several compatriots passed out free bubble gum and "dum-dum" suckers to hundreds of foot-sore, red-tape-weary freshmen. The first BSU-sponsored Bible study, taught by Brenda, attracted 14 students, a 75 percent increase over last year's average attendance.

Bible studies, Christian fellowships and social get-togethers are staples of Baptist Student Union campus outreach.

Brenda envisions involving at least 50 students in those activities this year. "That may not sound like a big goal," she says, "but it's realistic."

She's also determined to involve more international students in the action. Why? On returning from a visit home to Texas last winter, Brenda spotted Austin, a newly arrived Jamaican doctoral student, standing in the middle of Lansing's airport with no luggage and a bewildered look on his face.

Inquiring about his situation, Brenda discovered that Austin's luggage, caught in a snowstorm tie-up in Chicago, was coming in on a later plane. Unfortunately, his contact number and address was in one of his suitcases.

She took him to Owen Hall at Michigan State, obtained temporary lodging for him with another Jamaican student, and took him back to the airport the next day to pick up his luggage.

Later, Austin asked Brenda if she was a Christian. "Yes," she replied. "I thought so," he said. "You act like one."

Not one to be without a cause, Brenda is now pushing for funds to build a much-needed Baptist Student Union center, where students can meet together.

How does she feel about being the first full-time BSU director for such a huge body of students? "I'm scared to death," Brenda admits, "but the Lord wants me here, doing this, so I'm going to do it."

Local Baptist churches, eager to minister to students, are backing her enthusiastically.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

*DEAR DR. LAMB — I am the mother of a normal, healthy 2-year-old daughter. I buy her vitamins and I notice that some contain a substance called folic acid and some do not. This is listed as a necessary nutrient. What is folic acid? Is it necessary to buy vitamins that supply it? If not, what foods contain it?

DEAR READER — Folic acid is so named because it's found in foliage such as spinach. It's present in abundant amounts in fresh, leafy vegetables and other fresh vegetables and fruits.

It is easily destroyed with cooking. That's why fresh leafy, salads are important in your diet.

Folic acid has some of the same functions in your body as vitamin B-12. As you may know, a deficiency in vitamin B-12 can cause pernicious anemia. The anemia usually occurs because a person has a fundamental disturbance in his digestive tract and cannot properly absorb vitamin B-12. That, incidentally, is why vitamin B-12 is usually given in shots rather than as pills. That way it does get into the circulation.

Both folic acid and vitamin B-12 will correct certain anemias. But both substances have a generalized effect on the body.

If you're consuming a lot of folic acid and happen to have a vitamin B-12 deficiency, the folic acid will mask the B-12 deficiency. While everything looks proper and an anemia may be corrected, there may be degeneration of the spinal cord, associated with B-12 deficiency. This can become permanent.

Whether your daughter needs folic acid at all depends a lot upon the rest of her diet and you should talk to your pediatrician about this.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm so concerned about my eyes. I didn't go to the eye doctor because I was so scared. What do you think about my case? I have developed a white ring around the brown of my eyes. I've had it for two or more years. When I first noticed it, it scared me so bad I'd wake up at night fearing blindness, yet nothing happened. My father used to have the same thing and nothing happened to him either. I've seen several people with this ring. I'm 64 years old. Could this occur in older people?

DEAR READER — I suspect that you're describing what we call the arcus senilis. It is a change in the eye that's noted in some people as they get older. It does not have a good correlation with aging or any diseases we associate with aging or diseases of the eye so you've worried a lot about nothing. Of course, you should have regular eye examinations at your age anyway, but I wouldn't become frightened because of the arcus senilis ring that you have observed.

From Prague to Paris

A startling difference in foreign fashion outlooks is noted in these winter and spring outfits recently modeled for buyers.

A broad-shouldered coat, right, tops a belted tartan dress; the outfit is accented by a classy slouch hat. The styles are from the winter collection of EVA, Prague's leading fashion house.

French designer Muriel Grateau recently presented his 1980 spring-summer ready-to-wear collection, which included outfits with Oriental inspiration, below. Indian silk skirts in pastel stripes of yellow and orange are enhanced by body suits with low necklines. Skinny, tasseled belts accent the waistline; the shoes sport skinny straps to lace up and tie around the ankles. A scarf, rolled tightly and secured around the head, finishes the French look.

Art workshop set

By Elaine Houston
County Extension Agent

CULTURAL ARTS WORKSHOP:

The Gray County Extension Homemakers Council - Cultural Arts Committee will sponsor a Cultural Arts Workshop Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room. Lil Hall from the Hobby Shop will show how to make a "kitchen witch". Cost will be minimal. The public is invited to attend and participate in this workshop.

HOMEMAKER CLUB ORGANIZATION:

We are in the process of organizing new homemaker clubs. Homemakers clubs meet twice a month to improve the quality of living in homes and communities and develop leadership. Extension homemaker clubs respond to changing needs of families — needs related to family living, consumer information, family resource management, family clothing, housing and health.

Anyone may join a homemaker club. All homemakers, regardless of sex, age, race, socio-economic level, religion or national origin are encouraged to join homemaker groups.

The homemaker clubs are formed by groups of about 8 - 15 homemakers who want to learn together. They meet in homes or community meeting places. Everyone is involved. Club members teach, take part in discussions, plan recreation and participate in community projects sponsored by clubs.

If you want to learn more about family living, clothing, nutrition, housing, health and managing family resources, contact the County Extension office at 669-7429. If you are working, we have a night club or could organize a lunch and learn group to meet during the noon hour. If you don't feel you have the time and yet you want to attend activities and educational programs, contact the Extension office to have your name added to the Homemakers Mailing List. For further information, contact the Extension Office.

BUYING BLANKETS:

Shop now for new blankets — November sales offer the best prices. Comparison shop for blankets at two or three stores to determine the best value for the price you want to pay. As you shop, check the fiber content, construction, care instructions and warranty.

Wool is an excellent insulator and is naturally flame and static resistant. Acrylic, polyester and nylon blankets generally wash well and are non-allergenic. Rayon blankets usually cost less than orlon or wool but may not wear as well. Fibers are also blended for strength and fluffiness.

Hold a blanket up to examine the weave — it should be close and even. Look for a nap evenly distributed over the surface. Pull gently on the nap to see if it pulls out easily.

Choose a blanket that recommends an energy-saving care method. Be sure to follow manufacturer's directions for machine washing or dry-cleaning. Does it mention the number of years under warranty, not pilling and limited shrinkage?

For energy savings, consider buying an electric blanket. It costs approximately 4 1/2 cents per night to use an electric blanket. Lower your household thermostat five degrees at night with the use of an electric blanket, and you can save 11 cents on your monthly heating bill.

Marsha Ellis wed in Austin

Miss Marsha Lynn Ellis and Michael Wayne Lermom recently were married in a double ring ceremony in Austin. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Velda Ellis of Pampa and the late Ernest Ellis. Parents of the bridegroom are G.W. Lermom of Stinnett and Mrs. Janice Tucker of Houston.

A 1975 graduate of Pampa High School, the bride attended Amarillo College. The bridegroom, a veteran of the United States Marine Corps, attended Stinnett High School and Amarillo College. The couple is at home in Stinnett, where he is employed by Diamond Well Service.

Rumsey-Darce vows repeated

Miss Sharee Rumsey became the bride of Phillip Anthony Darce Saturday in an afternoon ceremony at the Laguna Gloria Art Museum in Austin.

Officiating was the Rev. George Sullivan.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rumsey of Dallas. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Darce, 1110 Christine.

The bride wore a floor-length ivory gown.

Maid of honor was Rhonda Rumsey of Arlington. John Davis of Austin was best man.

After a honeymoon to Port Isabel and other points on the Texas coast, the couple will live in Austin, where both are employed at the Texas School for the Deaf.

The bride is a University of Texas graduate with a degree in speech. The bridegroom has a degree in psychology from Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

Extensive research leads to cookbook 'Better Than Store - Bought'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

About a dozen years ago I began including in my columns an occasional feature on "Copycat Cooking."

Each such column offered a homemade version of a food usually bought in markets. Sometimes I duplicated a packaged food that could be improved in a home kitchen by including the highest quality ingredients and by excluding artificial flavors and coloring. Occasionally I featured packaged foods — such as English Mint Caramels — that were excellent but unavailable in the United States.

Now comes good news for cookbook collectors. Helen Witty and Elizabeth Schneider Colchic, two superlative cooks, have written a book on "making at home — and making better — some of the mass-produced foods that seem to have been born on market shelves." Both women have done extensive and authoritative work in the field of food writing, editing and researching, and their book "Better Than Store-Bought" (Harper & Row) reflects their experience.

The two met when they were working on the innovative "The Cook's Catalogue." Discovering that they were both fascinated by the idea of developing home recipes for foods usually purchased, they decided to write "Better Than Store-Bought." They worked on their cookbook for three years — testing alone, tasting together, then cross-testing.

And discussing their results endlessly, determined to make their recipes extra-special.

When I asked Helen Witty about the problems of collaboration, she said "Nit picking! One day Elizabeth and I sat in my kitchen facing four different batches of bagels we had baked. While we eyed them, broke off pieces to taste and generally made a mess, a visiting artist friend quietly sketched us. When we saw how he pictured us we broke up laughing — we couldn't have looked more solemn had we been discussing a world-shaking event."

To give you a taste of "Better Than Store-Bought," here's Helen and Elizabeth's recipe for Marinated Artichoke Hearts. Compared to the bought product, it's thrifty to make at home.

MARINATED ARTICHOKE HEARTS

- 1 package (10 ounces) frozen artichoke hearts, thawed
- 5 cups boiling water
- 1/4 cup white wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 clove garlic, peeled but left whole
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1 1/2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
- 1/4 cup olive oil, or as needed
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil, or as needed

Drop the artichoke hearts into the boiling water. Boil them gently for 5 minutes, then drain them and dry them well on paper towels. Pack them into a pint jar.

In an enameled or stainless-steel saucepan, bring to a boil the vinegar, water, garlic, sugar, thyme, salt, basil, oregano, and pepper flakes. Pour the hot mixture over the artichokes, then add the olive and vegetable oils, pouring in enough to come almost to the rim of the jar. Seal tightly. Refrigerate the artichokes for 1 week before serving, turning the jar upside down occasionally to mix the seasonings. The artichokes will keep for about 2 weeks longer. Makes 1 pint.

OCT 28 79

The high cost of living space, whether rented or owned, has prompted renewed interest in space planning. Economic necessity, family upheaval, or the simple wish to consolidate lifestyles is making the "great room" increasingly practical.

Planning such a space, however, isn't easy. It's a challenge to make one open area look spacious yet feel intimate.

Two talented designers — "McCall's" Nathan Mandelbaum and Thomas Hills Cook of Armstrong's Interior Design Center — collaborated recently to create such an inner sanctuary. The result is featured in the October issue of "McCall's" in a full-color editorial entitled "A Divided Room that Adds Up Beautifully".

The floor plan is a single room divided into separate areas for eating, entertaining and working. Tying it all together is a minimum of furniture with walls stretched by strong architectural shapes such as built-in bookshelves.

Furnishings were selected from Armstrong's Indoor World and include the newest of easy-care no-wax floors. "Classic Quarters" — from the TRUSTMARK Collection of carpet — defines the conversation area, and a beamed ceiling incorporating Chandelier tiles adds elegance and interesting texture overhead.

Much of the design statement comes from the dramatic use of coordinated fabrics and wallpapers from Charterhouse. Four distinct patterns in soft shades of cream and blue articulate the divided space.

The large-scale floral print on the Chippendale sofa and upper wall is in harmonious proportion to the fine-line herringbone fabric spotlighted over the mantel and used elsewhere as an accent (layered window shades and toss pillows).

Creamy, velvety carpeting has a wide border insert of lapis blue. The "banding" effect is repeated in the round table cover treatment.

Contrasts — in strength and softness, darks and lights, curves and right angles, velvetiness and coarse basket textures, matte finishes and shiny brass and lacquer — are responsible for the sophisticated balance.

Big boxy city apartments with more walls than windows can be decorating disasters without smart furniture arrangements. By working out from the center of the room, the designers centered a sofa, coffee table and arm chairs grouped around the fireplace to help divide the space into useful activity areas. It also made sense to be symmetrical when a room like this had a center focal-point wall; the opposite wall holds a Hunt Sideboard from Thomasville's Four Corners Collection topped by a large fan light mirror.

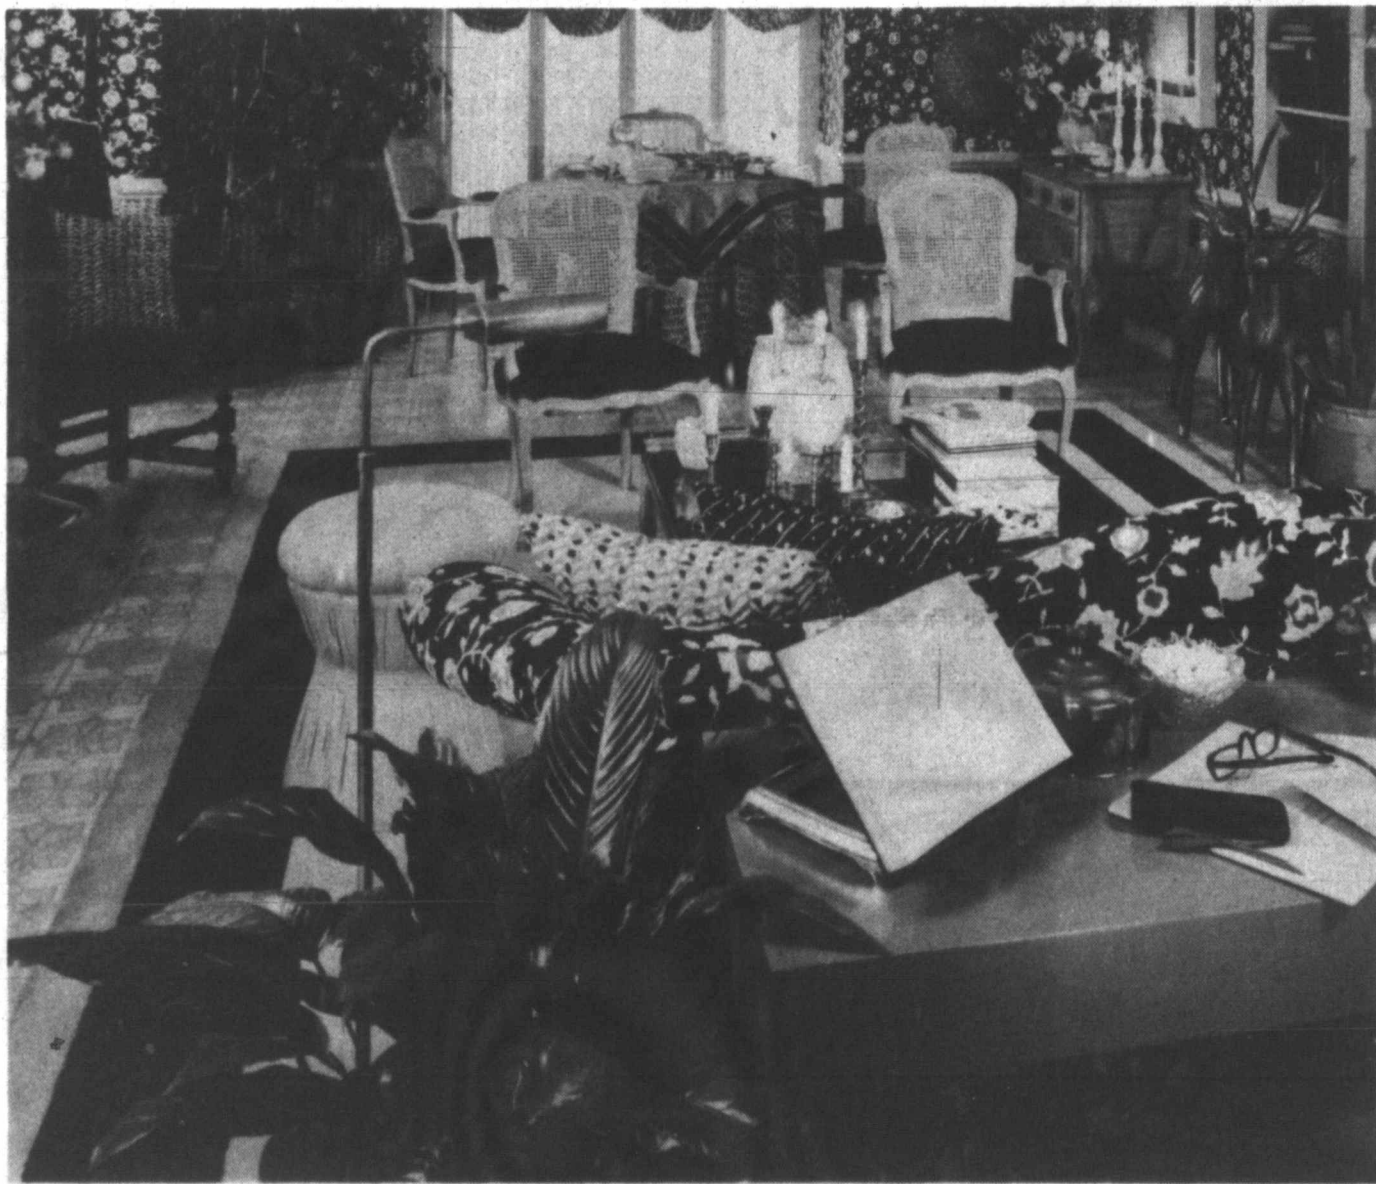

Woods in the room harmonize with the creamy painted woodwork; they have a light, airy "bleached" or blonde finish. Chairs are cane backed with suede-covered cushions of deep, chocolatey brown.

The total effect of the room is graceful. Long narrow windows are softened by gauzy sheers and billowy balloon shades. A profusion of greenery and fresh cut flowers, together with stunning accessories — both antique and from Decorator's Guild Showcase — animate the setting.

Long-term Dividends From One-room Investment

A CLOSE-UP of the dining area, above, reveals in detail how four coordinated fabric and wallpaper patterns relate proportionately to each other. The Georgian chest from Thomasville is finished in a light bleached wood as are the Louis XV chairs. A Solarian Supreme no-wax floor in white "Norwalk Marble" provides the light ceramic-tile look in easy-to-care-for vinyl. Orderly one-room space is best handled by keeping a room open — divided, but related. The total living-area, at left, is a handsome room that provides for both comfort and diverse activities.

Halloween candy still for sale

Kidney Foundation of Gray County still has about a thousand bags of Halloween candy to sell before next Wednesday, according to Georgia Mack, county chairman.

Each bag has 25 pieces of individually wrapped candy in assorted flavors. The foundation requests a $1 donation from buyers.

Proceeds from the sale stay in Gray County, benefiting the seven kidney patients in Pampa and others throughout the county.

More than 2,000 bags have already been sold, says Mrs. Mack. Persons interested in the candy may contact her at 665-216 or 665-6360 or at 700 E. 16th. Ruth Osborne also may be contacted at 669-7834.

Sorority makes plans for Halloween

Phi Epsilon Beta met last week at the home of Cathy Scribner, 1928 N. Zimmers. Mrs. Lucy Lowe presented the program.

Sorority members made plans to visit Pampa Nursing Home with youngsters dressed in their Halloween costumes.

The chapter has reserved Panhandle as their "friendly venture", in an attempt to start a sorority chapter there.

A pre-party is planned for Cathy Scribner, Girl-of-the-

Year, before the Fall Fling dance Nov. 3.

Jana Whaley was elected Valentine Sweetheart.

Refreshments were served by Cathy Scribner and Phyllis Akins.

The next meeting will be Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Reddy Room.

Model meeting demonstrated by Rho Eta officers

Rho Eta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Monday in the home of Kay Newman for a model meeting.
President Lisa Crossman conducted the meeting, designed to give potential rushees a view of sorority life.
Introduced as potential members were Terry Gambin, Robbin Beck, Tamara Brantley, Marti Houseman, Debbie Mason, Debbie McCullough, and Theresa Neal. Sharon Plumlee was welcomed as a new member by transfer.

Darla Pulse was reinstated to active status. Janet Bilyeu was granted a leave of absence.
Corresponding secretary Lizann Gattis presented a gift from the chapter to sponsor Georgia Mack in honor of her birthday.
Zindi Richardson, Starla Tracy, Brenda Bruton, Joyce Pulse, Lisa Crossman, Tanga Hood and Debbie Callison were chapter members attending area convention in Wichita Falls last weekend.

Rho Eta took top honors in both scrapbook and yearbook competition at the convention. Starla Tracy was presented a gift of appreciation by chapter members since she was chairman of both the award-winning committees. The chapter received two $50 checks for both first place ribbons.
As a part of the model meeting, all officers and committee chairmen reported the duties and requirements of their individual office or committee.

Library Family of the Year will be honored

A reception honoring the 1979 Library Family of the Year will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Lovett Memorial Library.
The Michael Bingham family will be honored at the reception, hosted by the Friends of the Pampa Library.
The family was selected by the library staff in recognition of their regular patronage of the library during the year. The Bingham will receive a commemorative award from Earl Davis, president of the Friends.

Also on the evening's agenda will be a lecture presented by Ed Myatt on "Inflation and Coins". Myatt, a Pampa coin collector, will illuminate the public on the interesting and potentially profitable hobby.
The public is invited to attend.

Atrusa Club of Pampa will have a make-up meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Celanese, where members will see the film, "You Are What You Were Then". Members will meet at the parking lot across from Highland General Hospital and travel together to the meeting.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Case of the gorgeous twin

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Dr. Wallace: I'm a 14-year-old twin and I wish I wasn't. We are both girls but we don't look anything alike. My sister used to be the ugly twin but now she is gorgeous and she knows it.
We never talk to each other in a nice manner. When we do communicate, we yell and fight.
I have heard that twins are real close but don't believe it. I'm closer to my stepbrother than my twin sister. Just thought you would like to know. — Denise, Wheeling, W.Va.
Denise: Would you and your sister be closer if she weren't so gorgeous?
Dr. Wallace: I'm a 15-year-old girl and I smoke and have been smoking for four years.
When I first got caught, I was grounded but that didn't stop me. Finally my mom said, please don't smoke in the house or in front of me since I can't stop you from smoking.
My dad knows that I am a regular smoker. In fact, one day on the way to the doctor's office, he gave me a cigarette but told me not to tell my mother.

Mom said she would give me permission to smoke in the house and in front of her when I am 16, but I think it's ridiculous to wait a year since I'm almost a chain smoker now. Don't you agree? — Glenda, Newton, N.J.
Glenda: Why should I agree? Smoking is harmful to one's health, expensive, dirty, messy, smelly, and a dangerous fire hazard.
If I were your parent, you would never be allowed to smoke in the house!
Dr. Wallace: I got a portable black and white television for Christmas and our family has a color television in the living room.
When I'm watching a program in the living room, my mom always walks in and changes the channel. She tells me she has worked hard all day and wants to relax.
When I argue with her, her boyfriend, who lives with us, comes in and tells me to watch my program on the black and white set.
This really bugs me and I need your advice. — Bryan, La Habra, Calif.

Bryan: I'm sorry, but my advice won't be to your liking. You are fortunate that you have a personal television. Stop arguing with your mother. Either watch the program she prefers or go to your room and watch what you want.
Better yet, get out of the "always watching television" habit and do something athletic.
For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

Mountain marriages survive

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
COVE GAP, W.Va. (AP) - In our anxious age of fragile relationships and fleeting marriages, Isaac and Ella Collins stand together like a pair of patient oaks.
And they've stood that way for 75 years. The southern West Virginia couple recently celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary.

"It was the last day of August," says Mrs. Collins, 95.
Ellie and Ike, as they call each other, can well remember their wedding day, back in 1904. Collins came to the wedding, with his father, a sister and a brother, in a horse-drawn buggy. When he went home, he took his bride with him.
"My mother stayed home to cook supper," he recalls.

Ellie Collins was 21 when she was married. At that time, the limits of her world — and her husband's — extended no further than a couple of miles in any direction.
"Ike's mother gave us a feather bed," she says. "My mother gave us some pillows and some quilts she had made."

"And don't forget the geese," reminds her husband. "Your mother also gave us a bunch of geese."
He shook his head as he remembered the geese.
"They strayed off the next day and we never saw them again. We always thought a peddler got them."

Pipe smoke curled around Ike's huge, white, handlebar mustache as he reflected on the years.
"I've had a mustache since I was a young man," says Collins, who is 97. "Always hated to shave my upper lip."
But Ellie can remember Ike when his upper lip was as bare as a newly-mowed hayfield.

"He was 13 when we met," she says. "I was struck on him from the first."
"Me, too," Ike says. "Ellie was the only sweetheart I ever had. Our parents owned adjoining farms and we went to school together in a one-room school."

Ike and Ellie Collins have stayed put during their lives together. They live in a small mobile home in Cove Gap, about 40 miles south of Huntington on the northern edge of the southern West Virginia coalfields. They live next to their son, Burl, who is in his 70s. They were born right nearby.

"Where we live now is in Wayne County," says the elder Collins. "We were born just over the hill, in Lincoln County. Until eight years ago, Ellie and me lived up on top of the hill, just a couple of miles from here."

At the beginning of their marriage, Ike and Ellie Collins lived with his parents in a log cabin built by Collins' grandfather.
"My parents moved out after a few months," he says. "They went over to Big Creek to set up a store."
Shortly after his parents departed, Collins built a new home for himself and his bride. By then, she was pregnant.

"I cut the logs and hauled them down to the sawmill," he recalls. "Then I brought them back up the hill and planed them by hand. When I was finished, we had the first frame home in these parts."

Collins took over his grandfather's 190-acre farm, a rugged expanse of hills and hollows. He raised cows, corn, wheat, sheep and pigs, among other things. He also cut plenty of timber.

"I went timbering the day after we were married," he recalls. "Didn't believe in honeymoons. Still don't."

Ellie, meanwhile, raised a vegetable garden, cooked and canned. She also made quilts and blankets, carding the wool from the sheep.

And she had five children, four of whom survived. Each child received a feather bed made by his mother, who had gotten another flock of geese and had plucked their soft, downy underfeathers.

"We never had electricity or running water until we moved down off the hill," says Ike Collins. "And I never owned an automobile or any other motor vehicle. But I drove plenty of teams of horses, and oxen and mules."

In the past few years, however, Ike and Ellie have slowed down. Ike Collins now spends a lot of time napping in a bedroom that contains a large picture of a handsome, brown-haired young couple.

"That was taken a few months after we were married," says Ellie Collins. "We had gone to Huntington to buy some furniture."

Asked how their marriage withstood the years, Ike Collins replied: "We got along good all the time. We got attached to one another and we never quarreled."

BOOKS

THE ESTABLISHMENT. By Howard Fast. Houghton Mifflin. 367 Pages. $11.95.

"The Establishment" is the third volume in Howard Fast's saga of the Dan Lavette family. The chronicle opened with "The Immigrants," moved on to "Second Generation," and since most of the characters are alive and well at the end of "The Establishment" it's probably safe to assume that Fast will continue their story in another volume.

This story opens in the late 1940s. Dan Lavette, nearing 60, has been reconciled with his first wife and they are living together. His son, Tom, is moving higher and higher in the corridors of power. Another son, Joe, is a brilliant doctor whose devotion to running a clinic for the poor estranges him from his wife who becomes — in the most unbelievable portion of the book — a movie star.

The focus of the book, however, is upon Dan's daughter, Barbara. Barbara is married to Bernie Cohen, a former soldier of fortune who now runs an auto repair shop and hates it. When Bernie gets a chance to run guns to the new state of Israel, he immediately goes. Not long after that he is killed, and Barbara, a successful writer, finds herself alone and with a young son to care for.

But she doesn't have time to mourn for long because she is soon embroiled with a communist-hunting Congressional committee. When Barbara refuses to answer a committee question she is cited for contempt and the question becomes one of whether she will or won't go to jail.

Fast has a lot of plots bouncing around at the same time, but he is a professional and manages to juggle everything deftly without dropping a story. The book is well-written and many will find it entertaining.

SWEET ANARCHY. By Nathaniel Benchley. Doubleday. 319 Pages. $10.

"Taxation without representation" becomes the battle cry of a new American rebellion, that of an island off the coast of the United States. The island ponders secession and, in a confused burst of historic enthusiasm, succeeds in its democratic struggle for independence.

But all things — especially people — considered, secession does not transform the island into an idyllic paradise of self-rule. In fact, secession brings out the worst in some people and sacred sovereignty turns into disgruntled despair.

The state from which the island has seceded and the U.S. government are not amused by the incident. They unwittingly join forces with the local malcontents to restore the status quo in a riotous portrait of American ingenuity.

In the midst of all this is Sam, a would-be playwright turned reporter for the local newspaper. Sam's discovery of a hu nan foot (which the police chief insists belonged to a bear — even though there are no bears on the island) leads to the unraveling of a few old mysteries and a deafening rattle of closet skeletons that aid in the toppling of the island's new government.

Nathaniel Benchley's "Sweet Anarchy" is a marvelously funny book about a situation that is not as far-fetched as it may seem. Benchley's book should be required reading for any place thinking about going out on its own.

JACQUES COUSTEAU: The Ocean World. By Jacques Cousteau. Abrams. 446 Pages. $45.

Anyone who is a fan of underwater explorer Jacques Cousteau and has followed his amazing adventures aboard his ship, Calypso, will revel in this beautiful volume.

Harry N. Abrams, Inc., noted for its exquisitely produced art books, has gone a long measure in creating an exciting coffee-table-sized volume which tells the story of the seas — and their secrets.

The text is based on a previous 20-volume series written by Cousteau. This latest volume features 385 illustrations, including 361 full color plates.

The cost is high: $45.00, but worth every penny for the sheer beauty and magnitude presented within its pages.

Not only are the text and photographs fascinating, but the message Cousteau was able to plumb from the ocean depths was quite clear:

"The sea actually conditions all human activities, generating rain, floods, or droughts, bringing about constant changes, slow or abrupt, gentle or catastrophic," writes Cousteau.

"Our 'liquid future' depends on the foresight, the care, and the love with which we will manage our only water supply: the oceans."

DESTINIES. By Peter Bart & Denne Bart Peitler. Simon & Schuster. 560 Pages. $12.95.

"Destinies," by Peter Bart and Denne Bart Peitler, is one of several books published recently that deal with the events surrounding the Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba in the early 1960s.

This is a fictional work — quite well-written. It is the story of a rich and powerful Cuban, Gustavo Carta, and his family. It is also a story involving the CIA, a plot to kill Cuba's Fidel Castro; the early days of the Kennedy administration in America; and the involvement of big business and big crime in Latin America.

Scare words from history?

NEW YORK (AP) — Sinister echoes from our sickly past: plague, smallpox, tuberculosis, diphtheria, whooping cough, polio.

Scare words from history? Not entirely. Even plague, a disease now far from people's minds, crops up each year in the southwestern and western United States. Thirteen have been stricken this year by what used to be called the Black Death: 20 in 1976.

Small reminders of the pestilence that wiped out 25 million people — a quarter of Europe's population — in the 14th century. Heart disease and cancer are this century's epidemics, because people live long enough to encounter them, spared the terrible toll that kept the average lifespan to the thirties in earlier centuries.

But the old devils still leave their calling cards. Little is heard of tuberculosis anymore, and it's wholly curable now. In 1965, about 50,000 cases were reported in the United States, down to 28,521 last year.

Far from the scourge it used to be, tuberculosis nevertheless keeps cropping up "every day," says Dr. Lawrence Farer of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. There are still pockets with high case rates in areas with new immigrants from Asia, Africa and Latin America, and TB remains a health problem with American Indians.

But drug treatment today is so effective that "there's no reason that anyone should die of TB," says Dr. Farer. Still, as late as 1976, there were 3,130 deaths.

TB has a long incubation period and some cases occurring now result from infection as long as 30 years ago, when it was still rampant.

Plague is less significant, with only about 1,000 to 1,500 cases worldwide each year; in the United States, the plague seems to peak in five-year cycles, for no obvious reason, according to Dr. Arnold Kaufman of the CDC. "In 1980 and 1981 there should be another peak and then slide off again," he says.

The plague bacillus is spread by fleas that live on rodents, causing an inflammation of the lymph nodes — the classic bubonic plague. Pneumonic or pulmonary plague is more dangerous, because it is more contagious. Patients are isolated at the first sign of infection and treated with tetracycline, streptomycin and sulpha drugs.

Cases in the United States are concentrated in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Utah and in California and Oregon. Prairie dogs can transmit plague via their fleas, posing a threat to campers who place their sleeping bags on old rodent burrows. Hunters also should exercise care, avoiding dead animals and those that appear sluggish.

Polio is as nearly extinct as the plague, though a reminder of the days when it was a fearsome thing came recently with an outbreak among unvaccinated Amish in Pennsylvania, Iowa, and Wisconsin. The numbers are small, though, 15 cases in the United States and Canada this year. In 1952, the United States had 20,000 cases.

Also at an all-time low is measles, with fewer than 12,000 cases up to August. As with polio, the decline is the result of vaccination, and Dr. Alan Hinman, director of CDC's immunization division, says he thinks the October, 1982, target for complete eradication will be met.

Other diseases that nowadays are mostly reminders: Whooping cough, with 250,000 patients in the late 1930s, is now down to 2,000 a year. Diphtheria, from 200,000 in the 1920s to fewer than 100 now. Mumps, from 152,000 cases in 1968 to 16,600 in 1978.

German measles — rubella — dropped from 57,000 in 1969 to 17,000 last year.

Worldwide, the most dramatic achievement in relegating a scourge to history involved smallpox, now virtually eradicated. The United States hasn't reported a case since 1949.

These advances in public health are reflected in the CDC itself. It began in 1942 as the Office of Malaria Control in War Areas. Then in 1946 became the Communicable Disease Center. In the 1960s, the center became involved in international, as well as domestic, infectious disease control. The name change to the Center for Disease Control reflects its change in direction to prevention of disease.

"Much of the improvement in life expectancy in the 20th century can be attributed to the prevention of communicable disease," says Dr. William H. Foege, center director. Now the center is focusing more on chronic rather than infectious diseases.

For example, the CDC contracted in late 1977 with 10 states — Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Nebraska, New York, Rhode Island and South Carolina — to conduct community diabetes demonstration projects.

"If we look to the century's final two decades," Dr. Foege says, "it appears obvious that further improvements in life expectancy and reduced morbidity will result from the prevention of the chronic diseases."

The old devils are mostly gone.

IN REVIEW

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Garland Jeffreys continues to be caught up by the plight of young people who've dissociated themselves from home and family and are "exiled on the streets."

"His new album, "American Boy and Girl," which he wrote, all the songs, sings and plays some acoustic guitar and percussion, has several songs about these "urban throwaways."

"It's my muse this year," he says. "It was my muse before; I've been talking about this stuff before. Still, it's not the only thing on the record."

"Matador," which I call a song of hope, which ends side one, and "If Mao Could See Me Now," which is a song of liberation and ends side two, are key songs on the record.

"My song, "Wild in the Streets," is the mother and father of songs like "American Boy and Girl" and "City Kids" on the new album. They continue in a tradition of part of the work I do which is involved with what I see in the streets.

"Sometimes I'm very premeditated in writing songs and set my themes up in a careful way. Other times I look back at my work and see what a thread there is. Your brain works in a way that will cough up similar things. This time I didn't say I was going to write another "Wild in the Streets."

"That song was released on its own in 1973 by Atlantic. I was never happy with the promotion or distribution. I bought the master back from Atlantic and kept it in my drawer. When I signed with A and M Records I decided I would put it on my first album there, "Ghost Writer," in 1977. It had never been on an album."

Jeffreys is interested in Covenant House, a "crisis protection center" at Times Square in New York City. He has "clear, vague plans" to do some benefit concerts for Covenant House this fall.

"Runaway kids are finding solace, respect, attention and care there. They get kids from all over the country. They're for kids under 21; they have kids as young as 8 come in off the street.

"I want to show in these songs that these American boys and girls aren't minority people, necessarily. They're not just black or Puerto Rican or poor. That's a real important point.

"Like many of us, I don't have any solutions. I do believe that one important thing is consciousness. Instead of pretending that all family life is wonderful, let's take a look at what the situation really is. I guess one of my primary concerns is awareness.

"If you think it is happening now, wait until the next five years. I think it is going to get more intense.

"But when some of these kids find inspiration, I'm hopeful for them. Inspiration and hope are cliché words; people don't like to say those words any more."

The back of the "American Boy and Girl" album has school pictures of Chino, age 7, in 1970, and Lorri, age 6, in 1970. The front cover has a picture of them taken in May this year. Jeffreys has written on the album cover, "To Chino and Lorri, please don't you let me down," as an example of his hope for worthwhile adult lives for teenagers.

His first A and M album, "Ghost Writer," which has sold the best of his career so far, was heavily autobiographical in its lyrics. It was followed by "One-Eyed Jack" in 1978. He says, "When you're listening to a song of mine and you wonder if I'm talking about myself or what I see on the streets, you can be sure it's a combination."

Thinking of reasons why young people leave home, Jeffreys mentions the fact that fathers under economic pressure aren't always good fathers and parents frustrated by lack of education and painfully trying to deal with the world may take their frustrations out on their children. "Sometimes they don't have any idea how to bring up kids in the first place. Some girls have babies at 13 or 14.

"I'm 34 and I see myself as more patient now than I've ever been. I'm not married but I'm looking forward to being married and having children. I feel I'm a man of the world and I can pass on some information to them. I'm going to be ready for this."

Jeffreys, who says his mother got his first name off a box of stationery, spent much of the summer in Italy, which he loves.

He went to Syracuse University and then took Syracuse University courses in Florence, Italy. "I come from a lower-middle to lower-class family in Brooklyn. They know as much about the Renaissance as about French cooking. I chanced upon the Renaissance in my teens. When I left school and pursued my musical career, it wasn't something that left me. It's nothing I want to do professionally."

SOUND COUNTRY

"I might go out there and have more fun than the people in the theatre," was Roger Miller's quip before a recent appearance on The Jamboree West Virginia U.S.A.

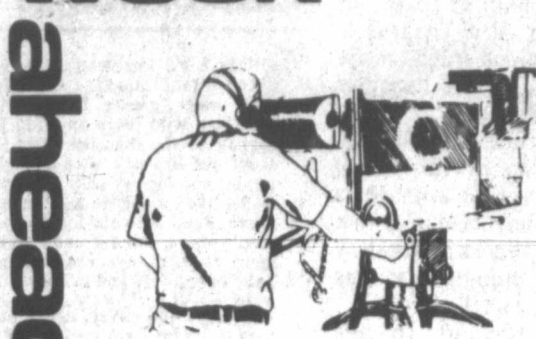

warm-up of sorts for Roger Miller, one of country music's more creative artists for over 20 years. The following night, he was honored at the Smithsonian Institute in the nation's capital.

"I've reached the top of another mountain in my life, from the Jamboree to the Smithsonian, where I'll be honored with a plaque during my concert there," Miller said, prior to the first of his two performances in Wheeling.

To those who know Roger Miller, it may come as a surprise that there are serious nerves in his system, but he said "I cried when I read the letter telling me of this great honor."

'Freedom Road' From slavery to Senate: Ali stars in two-part movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The appearance of Muhammad Ali as an ex-slave who rises to the U.S. Senate makes NBC's "Freedom Road" something of an event.

It's the first dramatic television appearance of the former heavyweight boxing champion, one of the most popular men in the world. It's a safe bet that his presence will insure a large audience for this four-hour, two-part movie which airs Monday and Tuesday.

Ali plays Gideon Jackson, an illiterate man in the days after the Civil War who forges a coalition between former slaves and white sharecroppers to buy land seized for nonpayment of taxes.

His struggle leads him into conflict with white landowners, local lawmen and the Ku Klux Klan. "He learns to read and write and his leadership eventually leads him to the Senate."

Kris Kristofferson also stars as sharecropper who forms a reluctant alliance with Jackson. "Freedom Road" is adapted from Howard Fast's best seller, which has never been out of print since it was published 37 years ago.

It is a splendid production, but unfortunately it does not reach its potential because of Ali's performance. But he's still a great personality, but he's still a novice as an actor — and this role cries out for an actor. His performance is wooden and one dimensional.

Ali does endow the role with simplicity and honesty, and he's even touching in scenes in which his character admits his ignorance and reveals his eagerness to learn. The trouble is Ali's emotional range never varies, whether he's happy or angry or whatever.

"I was surprised all the way down the line by this," said Fast. "My record with films made from my novels is that they take my books and destroy them. 'The Immigrants' was sheer garbage on the screen."

"When I went to see 'Freedom Road,' I didn't know what to expect. But I was delighted. I think it's the best thing ever done on the screen about the black experience."

Fast has written 52 novels since he turned out his first at the age of 18 in 1932.

CARD OF THANKS

A MOTHER'S Farewell to her children: When I must leave you for a little while, please do not grieve and shed wild tears and hug your sorrow to you thru the years, but start out bravely with a gallant smile, and for my sake and in my name live on and do all things the same. Feed not your loneliness on empty days, but fill each waking hour in useful ways, reach out your hand in comfort and in cheer and I in turn will comfort you and help you near. And never, never be afraid to die for I am waiting for you in the sky!

The Family of Marie Holmes
We want to express our deepest gratitude to our friends, Bro. Allen and members of Lamar Full Gospel Assembly for the words of comfort, prayers, flowers and food given to us during our loss of beloved Mother and Grammie.
May God Bless You

Those were the days

The beginning of Pampa dates from the building of the Santa Fe Railway, which was completed in 1888. Pampa is located in a territory that was once known as the White Deer Lands, which to was owned by an English syndicate and was controlled mainly by Frederic de P. Foster and Cornelius C. Cuyler of New York. Three of Pampa's main streets are named for these two gentlemen. Mr. George Tyng, who also has a Pampa street named in his honor, managed the White Deer Lands from 1888 to 1903.

Mr. Tyng, after the building of the railroad, laid out the townsite of what is now Pampa. The newly began city was first known as Ontario, later Sutton, then Glasgow. Mr. Tyng had been in South America, where he noted the similarity of the grass on the Argentine "pampas" to that in his own region. He suggested that Pampa, from the Spanish word "Pampas" meaning plains, be the new town name, and it was accepted.

Looking briefly back to Pampa around 1902, we see a small village with very few houses on what is now Cuyler Street. Early prominent citizens were Dr. E. von Brunow, the first physician; Mr. Charles Cook, the first lawyer; Mr. J.N. Duncan, the first mayor; and others already mentioned. By 1910 there were 500 inhabitants and the first schoolhouse was a red brick building located on north Cuyler Street which staffed six regular teachers. A small dugout in the middle of Cuyler became the first post office, while a Board of City Development began planning to progress the small city.

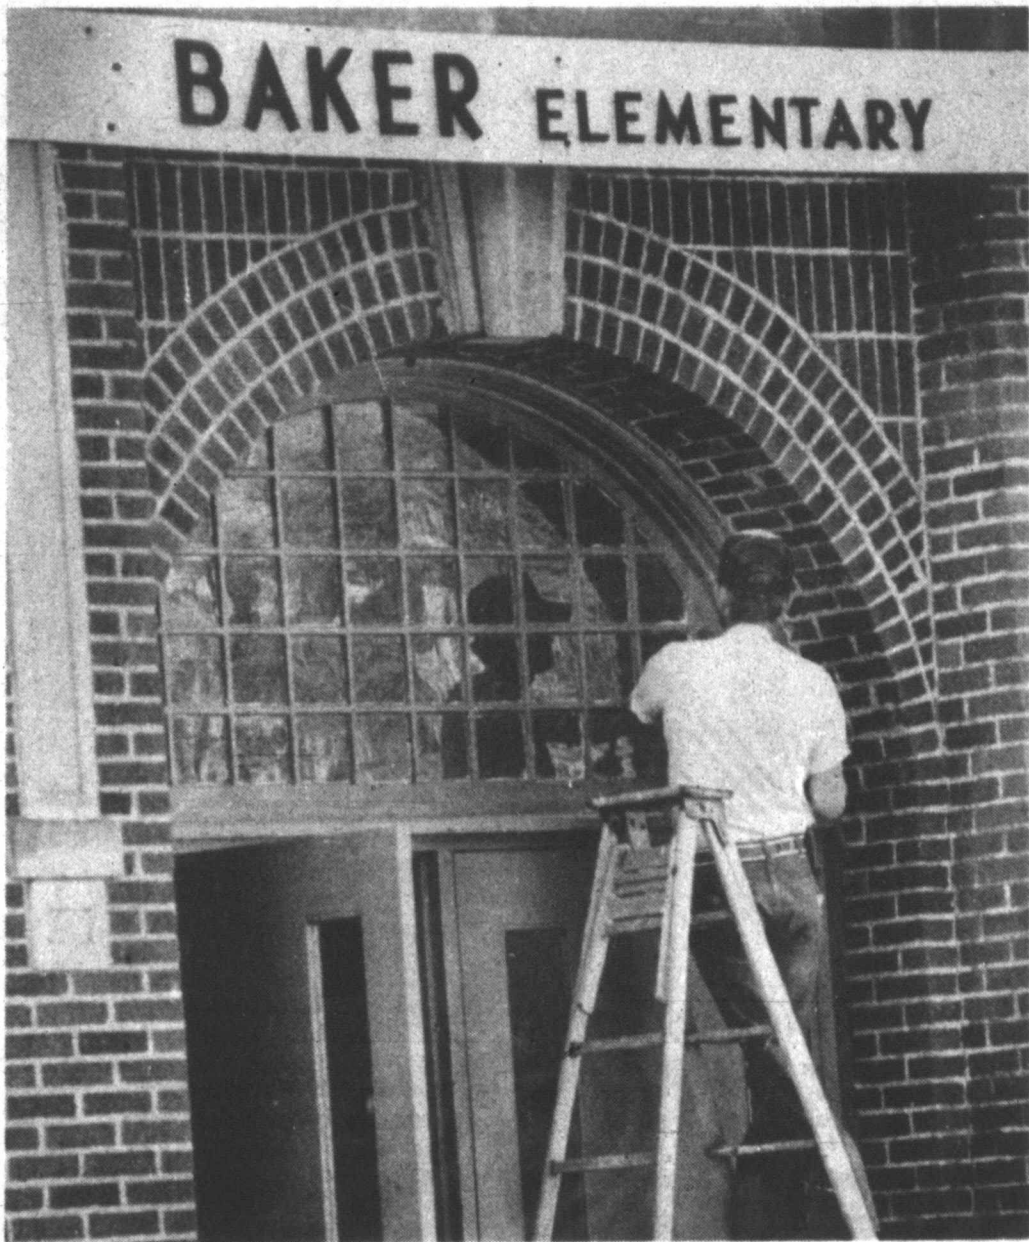

The result of the long - range planning was realized in the ten - year period from 1920 to 1930 when Pampa ranked third in the United States in percentage of gain in population, having reached the 10,470 mark, according to federal census.

Development in Gray County was slow and steady until 1926. Oil discovery created an overwhelming growth in wealth, population and institutions to the position which the city enjoys now. Yet Pampa and Gray County does not owe all of its success to oil. It was and still is a ranching and agricultural area of great importance.

The boom which struck Pampa in 1926 did not harm her, as has been the case of many areas possessed with oil wealth; it has given her strength to grow continuously into a city of fine homes, churches and schools.

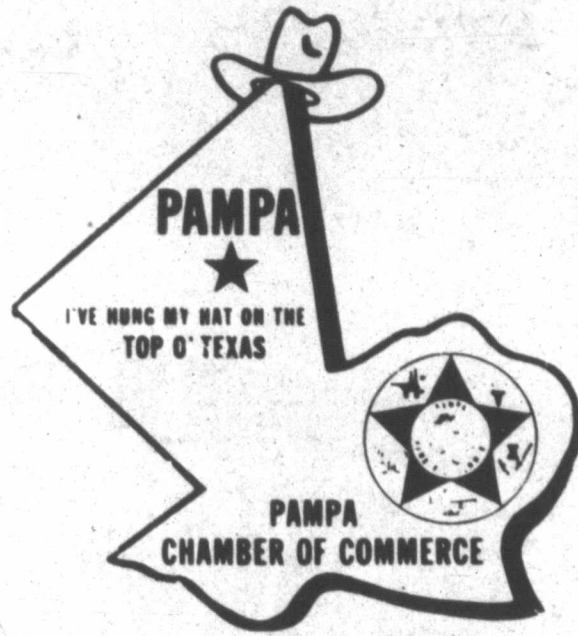

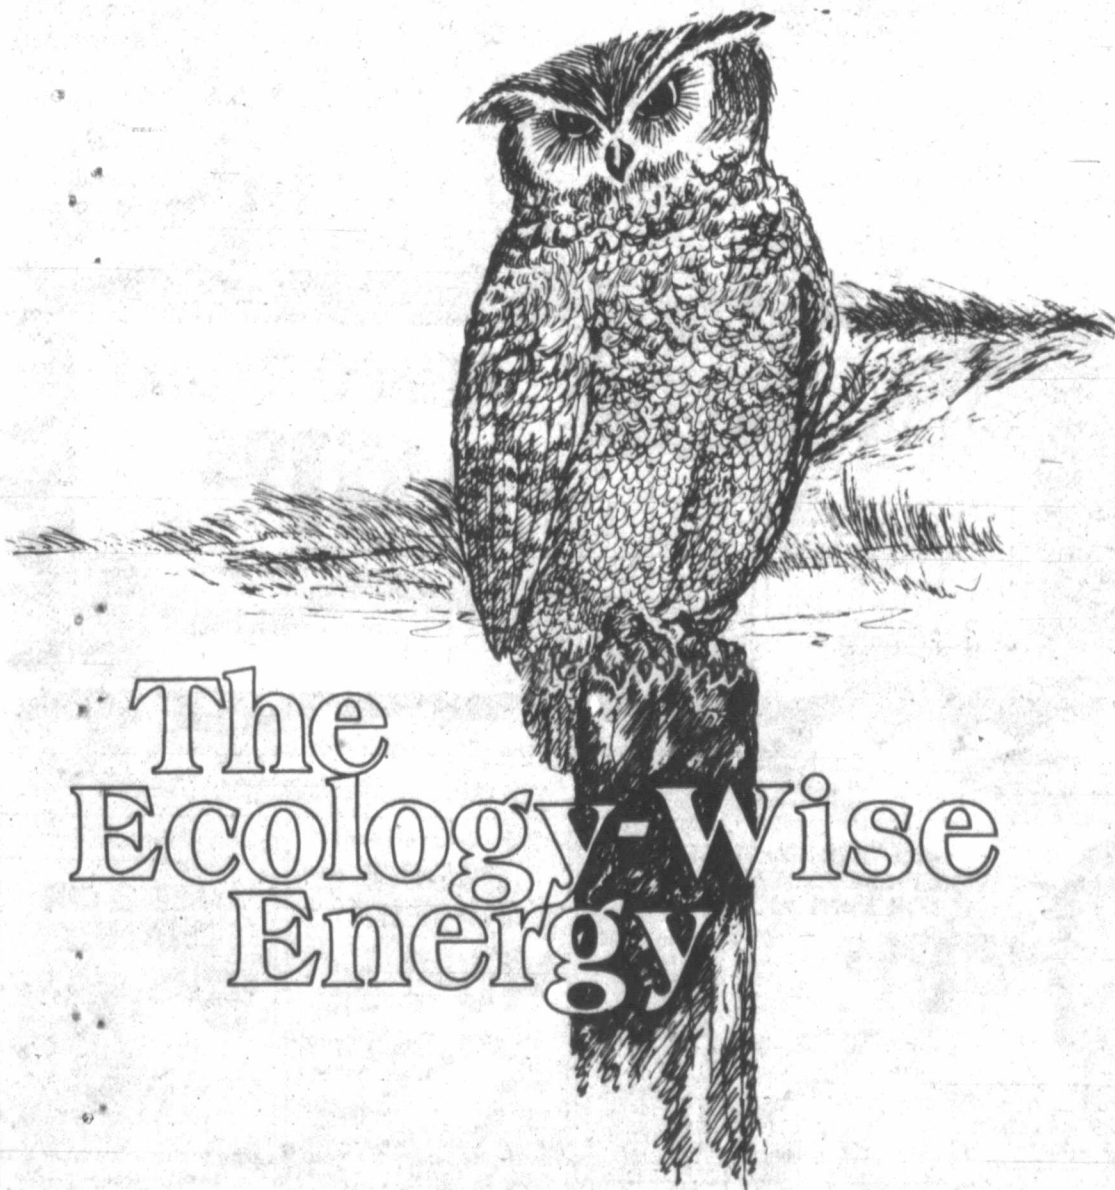

THE PAMPA INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT received a face lift during the summer as thousands of dollars and man hours were spent on remodeling Pampa's schools.

Complex will be completed soon in Pampa

A once-vacant lot behind the Coronado Shopping Center is now being filled with silver-sided buildings, soon to become the PAM Apartments. Construction teams labor all day long, erecting the lumber skeletons which are beginning to take on the shape of houses.

The PAM apartment complex designed for the elderly and handicapped is "Well on its way, as far as construction goes", said Ron Friedman, developer for the project.

Friedman, president of Friedman and Associates of Houston, said construction is going well and added, "The apartments are scheduled to open in January or February."

The 96-unit housing complex is being built near the intersection of Kentucky Avenue and Sumner Street.

Ten of the apartments are being designed specifically for the handicapped. The remaining units are for persons 62 or older.

Each of the one-story apartments has 525 square feet of floor space. They will surround several courtyards. A community building of 2100 square feet will hold a general purpose room, the office, laundry and mail facilities.

The one-bedroom units, designed to be energy-efficient, offer individually controlled heating and air conditioning, smoke detectors, dead bolt locks and peep holes in the entry doors.

Emergency call buttons will be installed in the bedrooms and bathrooms of the apartments. These buttons, if pushed, will turn on a light in the main office, the front porch light and sound a buzzer. If no one is in the office, the tenants can hear the buzzer and see which porch light is on.

Panhandle Elderly Apartments Corporation, a non-profit housing corporation formed in 1978 by the Pampa city commission, is financing the buildings with $2.3 million in revenue bonds.

The apartments will be subsidized by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) under its Section 8 program. The residents will pay no more than 25 percent of their income and the difference will be made up by HUD.

Earlier, Friedman had said, "Everyone will be paying from $240 on down, depending on their income." He added this will include utilities.

Preliminary applications are presently being taken by Joyce Puckett, director of the Pampa Senior Citizens Center at 500 W. Francis during her office hours of 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Eligible applicants must make no more than $8,000 per year.

A copy of the plans for the apartment complex can be seen at the senior citizens center.

"If everything keeps going the way it is now," Friedman commented, "We should be taking formal applications some time in November."

Hoping for an opening date in January or February, Friedman said, "We're as anxious as anyone else to finish it."

Southwestern Bell tower to fill Pampa's needs

The new 264-foot Southwestern Bell tower at the corner of Browning Avenue and Yeager Street should take care of Pampa's long-distance telephone needs for years, predicts Gary Stevens, local Bell manager.

And although area residents may not notice any particular improvements, Stevens said, the tower probably will give them better quality service.

The local version of the Eiffel Tower cost about $1.5 million to erect, and is officially known as a "digital microwave tower." The need for it and a similar model situated west of Panhandle became obvious more than a year ago, Stevens said, when long-distance service in this area began overloading.

"With predictions of future use and growth patterns, we knew we had to augment our existing facilities," he said. "The tower gives us an additional 1,300-voice capacity that should serve us for years."

The "existing facilities" are in the form of underground cables of copper wire. Before the towers were built, all long-distance calls were sent via cable to Amarillo, where they were dispatched to their ultimate destinations.

Now many of the calls are transmitted through the air from Pampa to Panhandle and from Panhandle to Amarillo. In addition, a cable has been laid from the Pampa tower to Allison, which picks up long-distance calls from points east of Pampa - Canadian, Miami, Lefors and so forth.

Each long distance radio wave doesn't travel in a straight path or beam, but floats in several paths so that it isn't easily obstructed by any one object, such as a tall building.

The underground cables are still in use, he said, and customers won't know if they are hooked up to the cables or to the tower.

Comparing the two systems, Stevens said the tower requires less maintenance than the cables.

"It's more efficient and less costly to maintain than having to put in a cable, and there was less work involved," he noted.

"Sometimes you might have a little interference with atmospheric conditions," Stevens said of the tower, but he added that crossed wires in the cables also "cause interference."

The distinctive pillar is "supposed to be the Cadillac of towers, so to speak," he said. "I think it's about the second one of that type in the state."

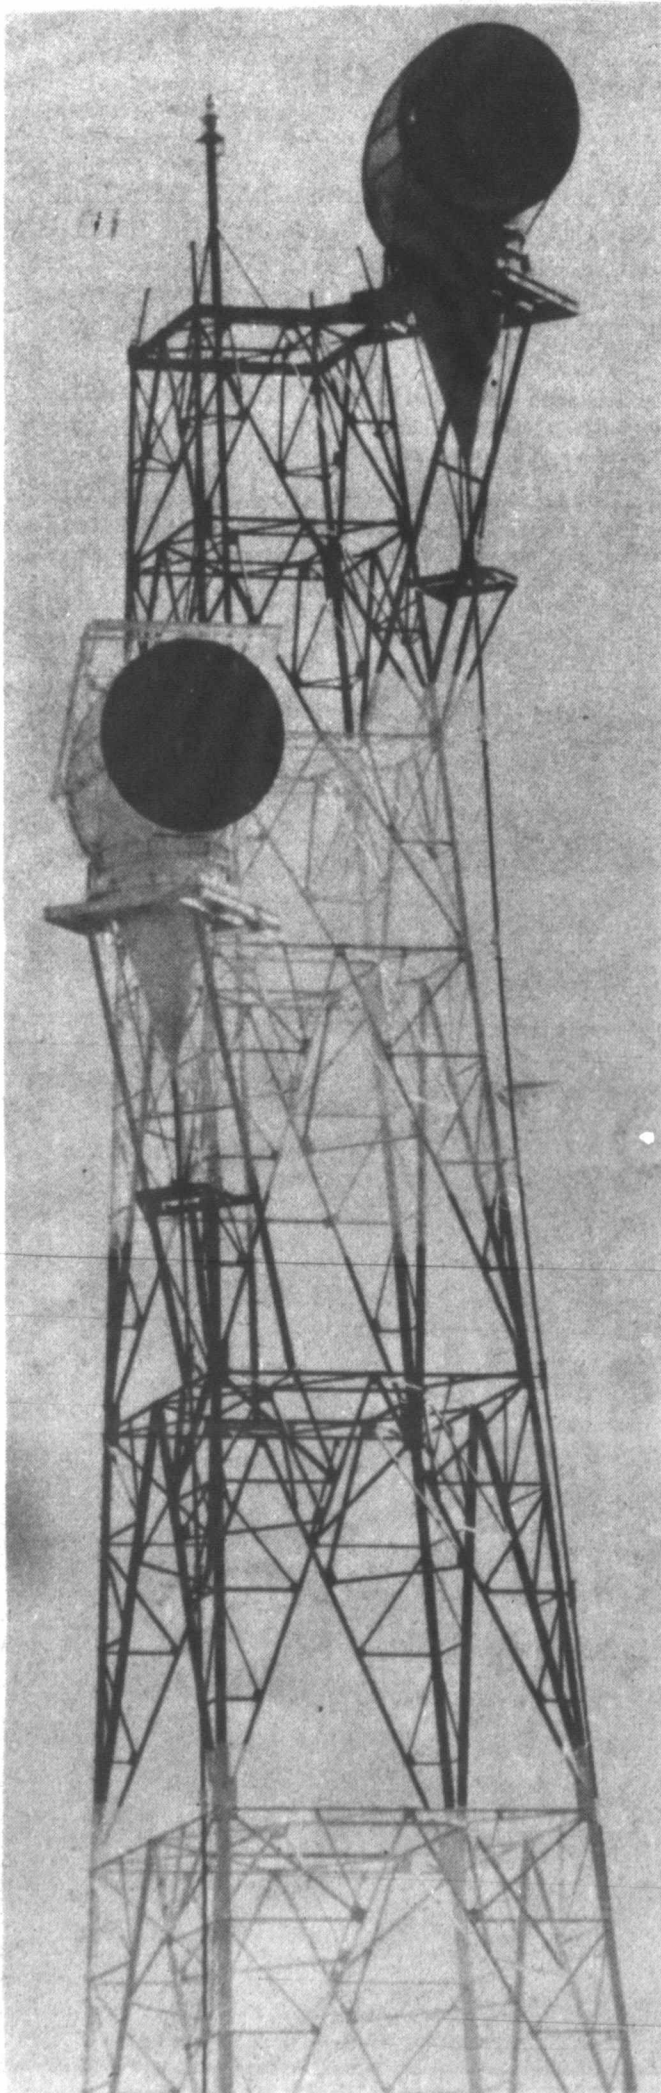

Stevens admitted that the tower, jutting above the Pampa skyline, "may be a sore thumb, as far as appearance goes. There are pros and cons. But the base of the thing is really going to look nice."

A large brick wall has been built around the base. The grounds are being landscaped with trees and bushes.

Asked about the tower's durability, Stevens said it was sunk in the ground with concrete and is constructed of steel beams.

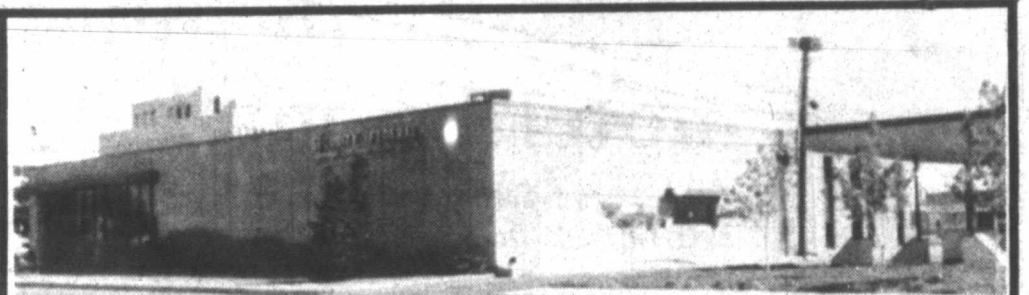

"As far as I know we've never had one fall down," he said. "It could happen with a tornado, but as far as strength goes we wouldn't have put it there if we were concerned."

"I guess you could have the same problem with water towers and large buildings, really."

SOUTHWESTERN BELL'S new microwave tower will aid Pampa for several years by filling the communication needs of area residents.

Pampa Cabot machinery division turns fifty

With 50 years under its belt in 1979, Cabot Corporation, Machinery Division continues slow expansion at its Pampa plant. And because of selective methods, Cabot is keeping once-common layoffs at a minimum.

The Division is located five miles west of the city where the company owns 725 acres of land.

Due to a declining dependence on military-related sales and an increase in commercial contracts, Cabot is facing a bright future with over $1 billion in sales for the entire corporation in 1979 alone.

Vic Raymond, corporation vice president in charge of the Machinery Division, says less than ten percent of the division's sales now come from military sales. That number will probably decrease to five percent for the fiscal year, 1980, which began Oct. 1.

"It's diminished from being a dominant part of our business to being a minor part," Raymond said. "Our previous dependence on military contracts caused layoffs when sales were low."

Ray F. Hupp, Sr., personnel manager for Cabot, believes layoffs have been kept low through "very slowly and selectively" expanding the operation at the plant.

Cabot currently employs 750 people, up from 548 in 1971. In the eight years since 1971, no one has been laid off, Hupp said.

"Cabot is by far the largest employer in Gray County," he said. The Machinery Division is the biggest division at the Pampa plant, Hupp added. In the last five years, personnel has increased 50 percent.

During the last year or so, Cabot has expanded its Machinery Division facilities to include a new central warehouse as well as additions to its fabricating and assembly buildings. The addition of the 100,000 square feet of space cost almost $6 million and are nearing completion now, Hupp said.

"We're basically contained out here," he added. "We've got the whole ball game."

Cabot is the largest producer in the world of mobile oil field drilling equipment. It will introduce a new drilling rig soon with a drilling capacity of 16,000 feet. Pampa's facility develops, engineers and builds, among other things, the oilfield rigs, one of which is the 1200 series. The rig drills to 13,000 feet and has a 660,000 pound pulling capacity. It is 143 feet tall and breaks into four units for moving. The price tag is big, too--$700,000 a piece.

"We produce everything but the tires and transmission here," Hupp said of the rig. He added that most of the rigs go to other areas than the Panhandle.

Raymond said the rigs go deeper in the land than the wells are deep in this area of the country. How many are manufactured by the company per year vary, he said.

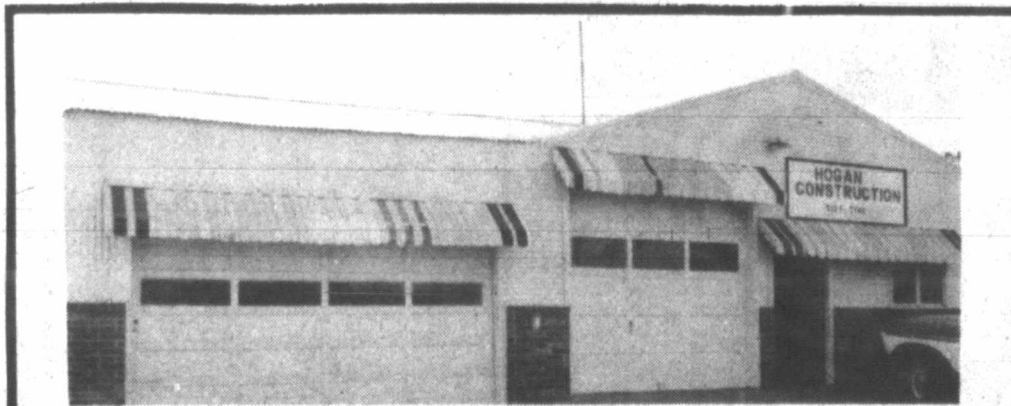

"I'd say our average capacity is about 150 to 200 per year --it depends on the size of the rigs contracted," Raymond said. "We can make a lot of smaller rigs and fewer big rigs --it just depends."

Cabot's rig building capacity has quadrupled in the last five years, he added.

CABOT people celebrated their fiftieth year in Pampa with music, balloons and good fun during a special day at the machinery division here.

Kennedy has seen few surprises in Pampa

Surprises have been few but the challenges have been many for Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy during his first year in office.

Elected last November over incumbent Don Hinton, Kennedy sees the opportunity to "help people in the community and county, whether it be administrative or judicial help" as the most satisfying and rewarding aspect of his job.

"Being county judge is a very challenging job," he says. "There are a number of things involved in the job that I wasn't aware of before I got elected and it can get pretty daily, but that's part of any job."

Kennedy's biggest achievement thus far has been the leasing of the Highland General and McLean Hospitals, but he is quick to add that he wasn't the only one doing the negotiating for the contract.

"The whole Gray County Commissioner's Court is responsible for getting that," he says. "But that (the leasing of the hospital) is the most significant thing we've accomplished."

He praises the four-member court for its "good" working relationship, lack of personality conflicts and congenial attitude.

"All the members are working in the best interests of the county—they're really concerned about that," Kennedy said. "We're very fortunate—most commissioner's courts don't get along as well as ours does."

The judge has worked in business and industry in addition to his family's ranching and farming business. He believes that experience has helped him in his new role.

"My prior training has been invaluable to me," Kennedy says. "I'm not a lawyer but I've had quite a bit of legal training in contract law and other areas of the law."

As county judge, he oversees not only mental health and narcotics commitments but also juvenile cases. He is also the chief budget officer of the county.

"I'm very comfortable when it comes to dealing with large figures in the billions of dollars," Kennedy said. "Our family business prepared me for that."

He holds a business administration degree from Texas Tech. He is a native Pampan and graduated from high school here where he was student body president. Kennedy also played football for the Harvesters in 1948 through 1950.

"It's been 30 years since I played and my oldest son Doug is playing for them now and wears no. 30," he said, laughing. "He teases me about it being 30 years since I played."

He and his wife, the former Patricia Reynolds, were married in 1959 and have five children, including 13-year-old twin boys.

Kennedy would like to see more help for the county attorney's office in order to reduce the number of cases now facing the county court.

"We need to reduce the period of prosecution it takes to get a case heard," he said. "We have a large backlog of cases. The period of time it takes a judge to hear a case is much less than it takes for the prosecution to prepare one."

He added that when he began as judge in January, there were 437 cases on the criminal docket; at the end of September, there were 502.

"We've heard 600 cases, but we aren't gaining on it," Kennedy said. "We're staying on top of marijuana and D.W.I. cases, but we're getting behind on the worthless checks."

However, he added that the newly-formed policy on bad checks, announced in September by County Attorney David Martindale, will help cut down on the number of such

"We've got a great location both geographically and agriculturally," Kennedy said. "And if the oil does run out, we're a good place to start producing gasohol."

"Besides, we're strong financially—we've got a strong tax base, a diversified economy and skilled employees."

Celanese goes coal

It's taken over two years, but Celanese is finally ready to put their energy conservation measures in full swing, via a recently completed coal-firing boiler system.

Costing an estimated $70 million, the new system, the first industrial fuel conversion project in the nation, will replace the existing steam-generating gas-fired boilers. It will save approximately ten billion cubic feet of natural gas per year.

The conversion to coal also involves a joint venture between Celanese and Southwestern Public Service Company of Amarillo to co-generate 30 megawatts of electricity using the new coal boiler system. The $15 million facility will supply all the electrical requirements for the Pampa plant and enough excess electricity for approximately 5,000 homes. Excess electricity will be delivered to other customers of Southwestern Public Service.

The systems will create 35 permanent jobs as well as reduce fuel costs for electrical generation by up to 50 percent.

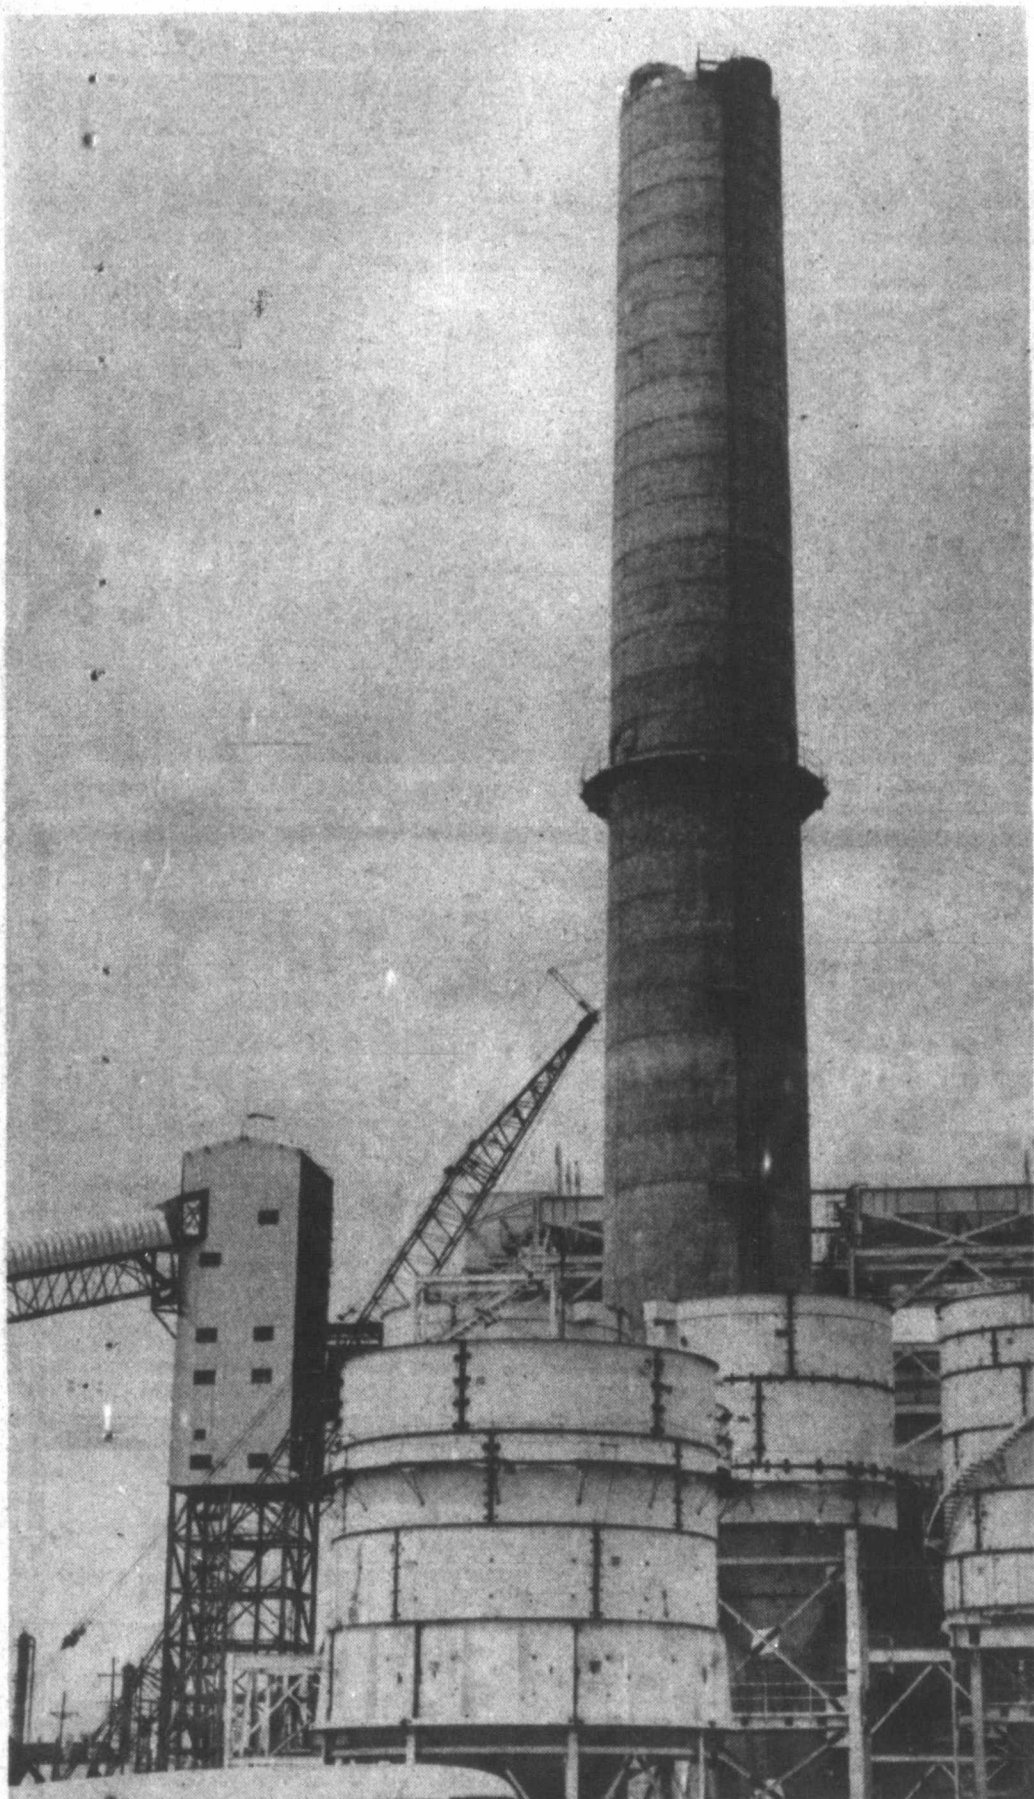

Coal— 600,000 tons will be needed yearly— will be shipped to the plant from Hayden, Col. where it is mined by Morrison-Knudsen, Co., Inc. of Boise, Idaho. Celanese is under contract with W.R. Grace and Co. for coal from the Hayden mine.

An estimated 1600 tons of coal will be needed daily. It will be stored underground in a massive pit after being delivered by train from Colorado in 7,000 ton units.

Coal will be moved by conveyor and crushed to three-fourths inch size before being placed in surge bins which will crush the coal into a fine dust to be fed into boilers.

Celanese will continue to purchase natural gas for non-substitutable uses, such as process gas and livestock, from Pioneer Natural Gas Company in Amarillo, its current supplier.

Since 1972, Celanese has reduced its energy consumption by nearly 35 percent against a federal goal of 14 percent for the petrochemical industry.

Soil conservation helps in area growth

Why have two thirds of Pampa area farmers consulted the local Soil Conservation Agency?

The services of this Department of Agriculture agency are more varied and beneficial to farmers than is usually realized.

A cost share program can finance up to 80 percent of conservation improvements, with individual compliance totally voluntary.

During the last 20 years, 45 percent of Gray County has enlisted the aid of such agency programs.

Engineering, irrigation, range, wildlife, and recreation planning are some of the areas covered by the experts in the local office.

The total acreage surveyed by the office amounts to almost 600,000 acres, and their main concern in 1979 is to promote soil conservation through planting of grasses, suited to the land in the Panhandle.

Weeping Love Grass has been one of the best answers to providing more production, holding soil, and saving marginal cropland.

The technical aim for planting grasses, benefits the urban dweller as well as rural.

Conservation keeps the wandering soil off city and county roads, out of homes, and provides more efficient land use for the growth of crops.

The Pampa Soil Conservation Agency welcomes any questions and will aid any member of the community.

Pampa schools receive face lift

The 1978 - 79 school year produced many changes in the school building of the Pampa Independent School District.

According to the construction - renovation status sheet completed in August of 1979, the largest expenditure by the Pampa ISD was spent on renovation — wainscoting, painting and floor - covering — for Pampa High School, Horace Mann Elementary, Baker Elementary and Woodrow Wilson Elementary. The total amount spent on the renovation program was $297,000.

Another large project, costing $262,000, provided the four schools with new windows. These schools also received new ceilings and insulation work which amounted to $30,474.41 for 1978 - 79.

An addition to the vocational department was constructed for $166,300.00

New concession stands costing $64,029.91 were built for the high school. The track field was also re - surfaced and converted to metric. These renovations cost $16,988.

Stephen F. Austin Elementary School received portable classrooms amounting to an expenditure of $44,426.02.

For $34,371.00 the art rooms were all renovated.

Architectural fees — equaling seven percent of some projects — came to $71,737.25 for the 1978 - 79 school year.

Other high school renovations include a stadium safety fence - $3,995.00, a public address system - $2,435.00, a new gym floor - 4,752.00 and brick work costing $20,050.00.

For the school year 1978 - 79, the Pampa ISD received a total of $1,541,499.01 in bids and estimates. A total of $1,035,403.41 was paid for the construction - renovations. The balance due for the year amounted to $587,296.45.

United Way Agencies Work For You.

Sivalls Inc. is beginning construction on a new processing plant which will produce tanks, treaters, seperators, and other items used in oil and gas production and refineries. The 25,000 sq. ft. plant will be located approximately three miles west of the city limits.

Sivalls, an Odessa based company is transferring Joe Brown to be the chief executive of the plant.

Opening Ceremonies are set for February of 1980.

Years Progress in Pampa

The Cabot 1200 Series Drilling Rig brings to the drilling industry a new concept of agile mobility and faster, simpler rig up and rig down. This rig will drill to a depth of 13,500 feet with 4½" drill pipe.

The Machinery Division complex has added a new fabrication building, warehouse, and other components totalling approximately 100,000 sq. ft. as a part of a $6,000,000 expansion begun in 1978 and nearing completion.

Mall welcome addition for Pampa shoppers

The Pampa Mall, soon to be two months old, is a welcome addition to Pampa's growing retail trade.

Although the facility is not yet completed, Mall manager, Cheryl Every says, "We hope to have two new stores by Nov. 1, Vance Hall Sporting Goods and Pants West." Every added, "Hopefully before Christmas, we will have a Sound West store." The Bathtique just opened last week, with a beautiful line of bathroom accessories, featuring towels and shower curtains with matching toilet seat covers.

Future additions to the Mall include a Safeway grocery store, Revco Drug and Bresler's 33 Flavors Ice Cream store.

"We're getting good response from out-of-town people, Every said of progress the Mall has made. "We have brought new customers to Pampa."

One goal of the Mall's, Every stated, was to get the community involved with the mall and the mall involved with the community. To help this along, the mall has been allowing local organizations hold demonstrations of talent or displays in the mall area.

Recently a local gymnastic group had its members exhibit their abilities to customers in the mall, and presently the 4-H club has several displays for shoppers to see.

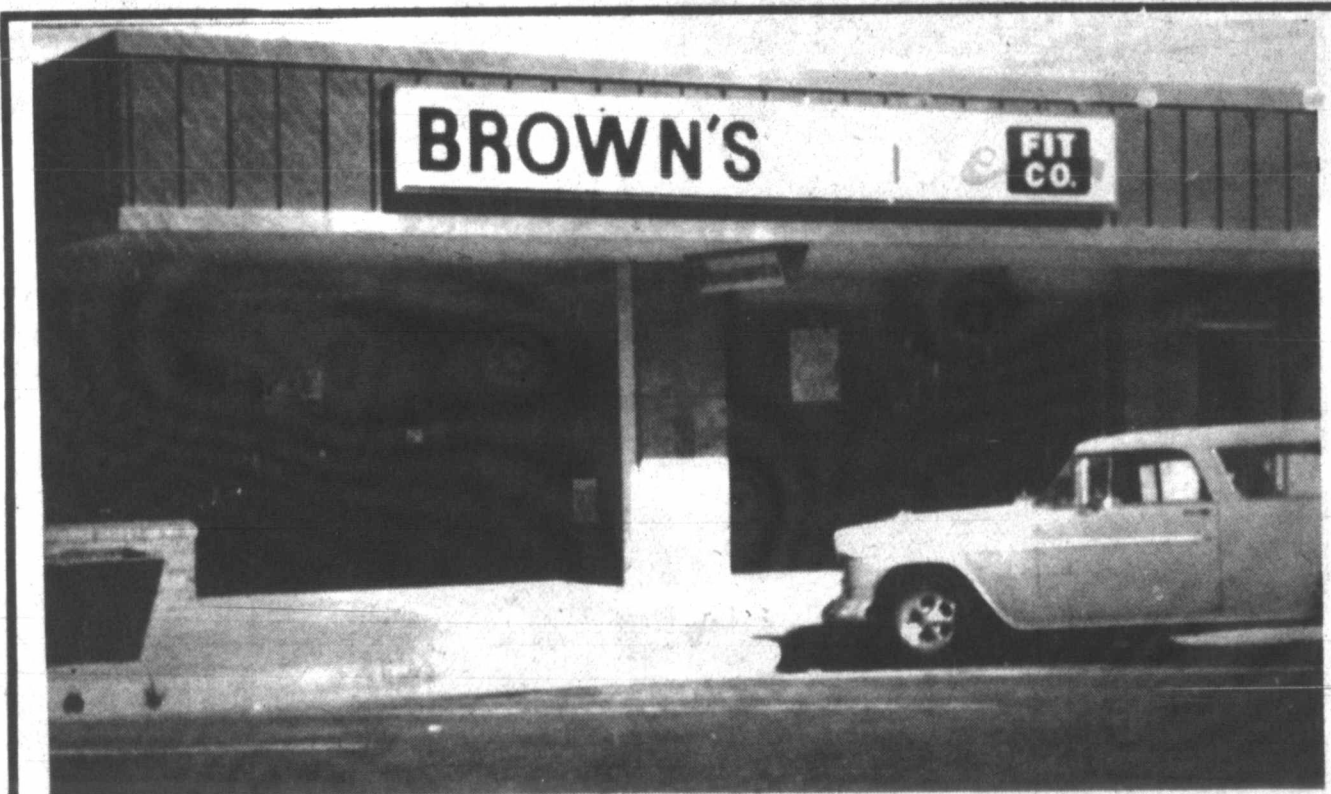

Lined up for future exhibits are boy and girl scouts displays, a fine arts and photography exhibition, car and recreational vehicle shows. According to Every, these are all local people. Especially for the Christmas season, local church choruses are scheduled to sing, as well as handbell choirs.

Located in the mall are three major department stores, J. C. Penney's, Beall's and K Mart, a discount store.

For those who love to eat, the Karmelkorn Popcorn and Kandy Shop offers such delectables as their famous Karmelkorn, and in honor of the Halloween season, there are caramelized apples and Popcorn balls. Or if you want something more filling, have a "good ol'" hotdog from the Carousel Snak Bar. General Nutrition Center features vitamins, minerals, and a variety of health foods.

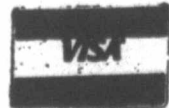

Diamonds are glittering in the Mall. Jewelry for any discriminating taste can be found in Gordon Jewelers or Zales Jewelry stores. A dazzling selection of diamonds, chains and bracelets abound in the two stores located in the center of the mall, catty-cornered from each other.

Kinney's and Upstage display a wonderful array of shoes for prospective customers. Kinney's selection includes the entire family, while Upstage is exclusively a women's shoe store.

Ray Thompson leads Pampa

"Pampa has its growing pains right now," Mayor Ray Thompson said recently, speaking of the spurt of growth the city has experienced in the last year.

Pampa's top official sees a future of growth and expansion in the years to come, but allows for the problems that have arisen due to the rapid increase in the city's size.

"We could spend a lot of money real fast," the mayor said, "if we had the money to spend." He added the lights on Hobart Street appear to be the most urgent requirement on the city's list of things to do. "There's just too much traffic for the way it's set up." Thompson feels the new motel and hospital that will be built on the north side of Pampa will add to the problem. He added, "We need to work on our streets."

Speaking of the new mall, Thompson said, "It's really a good thing for Pampa. It has not only brought in business out there, but to the downtown area, too."

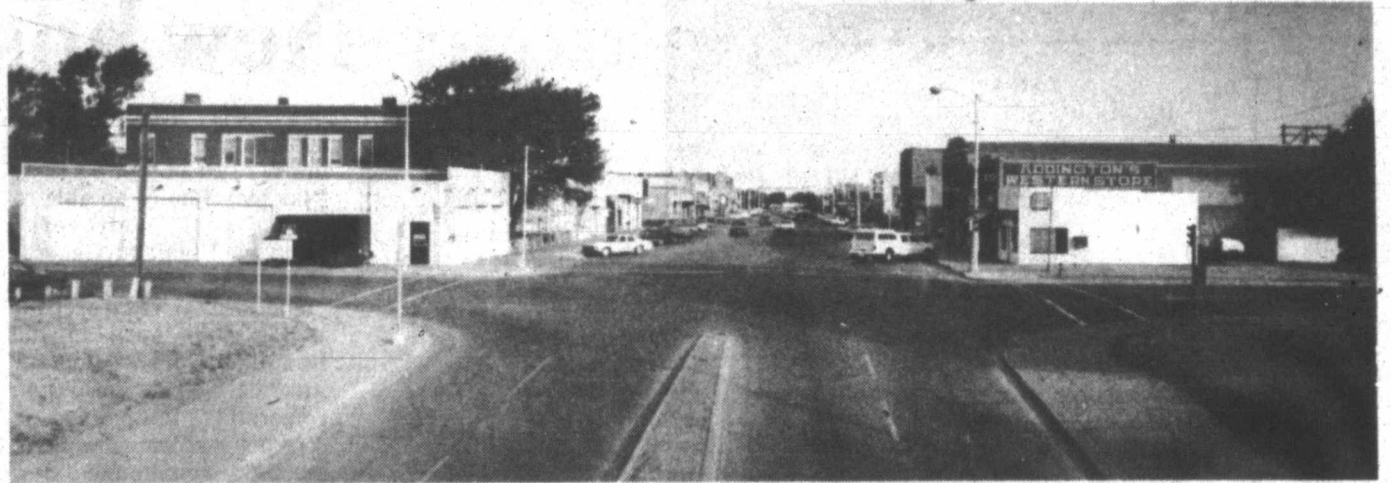

The mayor is pleased to see an increase in the industrial growth of the city. "We need a few more basic industry jobs. Jobs that deal with production of merchandise."

Ray Thompson, a Pampa resident for 50 years, became mayor of the city last April. The job was not too much of a surprise to him, he said, since he had served on the city commission for four years.

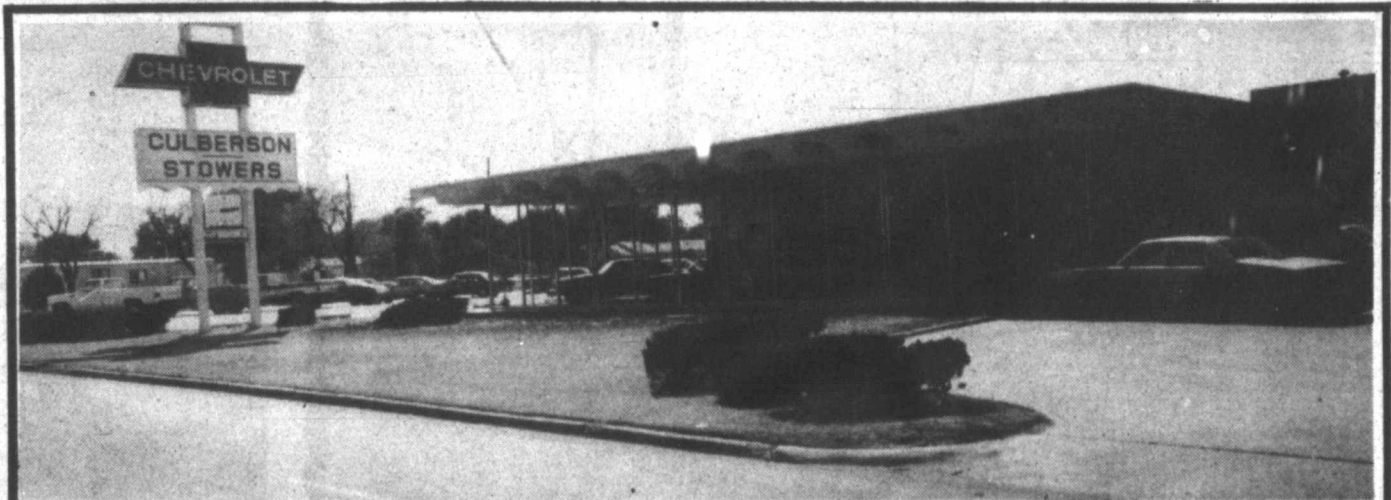

"You have to be on top of everything," Thompson commented about his job, explaining the main duty of the mayor was presiding over the city commission and often acting as a liaison between the commission and the city manager.

"Things in government don't go as fast as you'd like them to," Thompson said of his work. Still, he hopes to accomplish many things during his tenure as Pampa's mayor.

When asked if he was going to run for re-election, Thompson smiled. "I'll tell you in about a year and a half," he said.

Caprice Classic 4-Door Sedan

Highest EPA mileage estimates ever in a full-size Chevrolet.

Exciting things have happened to The New Chevrolet Caprice for 1980. America's favorite full-size car features:

- New aerodynamic styling
- Newly standard 3.8 Liter V6 engine
- New standard high-pressure tires that roll easier than last year's tires.
- New anti-corrosion measures.

Even though Caprice has been redesigned to improve its fuel economy and driving range, it still maintains six-passenger roominess and comfort. Chevrolets are equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. Ask a salesperson for details on this and on Chevrolet's new three-year limited warranty against perforation (rust-through) due to corrosion.

New hospital may erase

With a new 126-bed hospital due for completion by Nov. 1981 in Pampa, area folks may finally be able to forget past controversy involving Highland General Hospital.

The hospital was leased for $2,275,000 in April to the Hospital Corporation of America, a Nashville, Tenn., corporation. In the leasing contract was an agreement that HCA would build a new hospital within 30 months to replace the existing facility.

Guy Hazlett, Highland General administrator, recently unveiled architect's plans for the new facility, tentatively named Coronado Community Hospital. It will cost $13,239,000 and will be located on a 50-acre tract of land north of the city and west of the intersection of Duncan St. and Highway 70.

Holdings up groundbreaking ceremonies is the needed approval of the certificate of need application, which was submitted Oct. 1. The Texas Health Facilities Commission and the Panhandle Health Systems Agency have approximately five months to approve the agreement which places the beginning construction date around March, 1980, if such approval is granted on time.

Until the new hospital is completed, HCA will lease Highland General and the McLean Hospital. The lease contains option renewals for each month after Sept. 30, 1981, when the 30-month lease expires, until the hospital is finished. This option applies only to Highland General.

Coronado Community will be smaller than Highland General by over 10,000 gross square feet but Hazlett says the existing hospital has "a lot of wasted space." He adds that the new building can be added on to if necessary, both in the administration area as well as in the patient area.

Eight more private rooms will be added and an alcohol-drug isolation room will be added to special services rooms.

Other unique features of the new hospital are special energy conservation measures, which will save about $25,000 annually

(according to 1978 energy prices.) These measures include low pressure sodium lighting in parking areas instead of mercury vapor lighting, which will cut the outside electricity bill by 60 percent, Hazlett said.

Also, there will be double pane, reflective windows and insulated walls and roofs; interior fluorescent lighting instead of incandescent; air conditioning systems utilizing outside air for cooling; power factor improvement capacitors; heat recovery systems; and variable lighting patterns.

Hazlett explained that renovation of Highland General would cost more and take more time than replacement of it will. Renovation would cost about $3 million more and take two more months in comparison to the 18-month construction period and $13 million for complete replacement of Highland General.

Forty percent of the facility's construction cost will be paid directly by HCA through an equity contribution. The balance — $7,943,400 — will be paid via a 20-year mortgage with a 10.5 percent interest rate.

The agreement ended approximately two years of discussion and debate on the advantages and disadvantages of a county-owned versus a privately-owned hospital. Public opinion favored leasing by 83.5 percent at one time but it took about a year to negotiate an agreement.

HCA agreed to purchase both Highland's and McLean's current assets, including cash, accounts receivable, and hospital inventory. The company also agreed to pay the balance of a 1969 federal loan to the hospitals of about $450,000.

The county was left responsible for hospital payrolls beginning before the signing of the lease-purchase agreement.

Hazlett sees the free enterprise system as the main benefit of a private corporation owning a hospital.

He says a group purchasing hospital like

HCA, which owns or manages approximately 100 hospitals in the U.S. and overseas, has a "greater purchasing capacity."

"They can reinvest their money in better equipment, higher wages and still have money left over," he said. "They return their savings back to the hospital."

He adds HCA as a private company can do things that a county hospital is legally forbidden to do and says a private hospital can offer more services.

"Private hospitals are less burdensome," Hazlett said. "The board of trustees is pretty much removed from the day-to-day operation of a private hospital but with a county hospital, they have to handle a lot of day-to-day decisions."

Three firms submitted bids for lease agreements beginning as far back as mid-1977, but it was HCA with its plans for a new hospital that won out.

New garbage collection system

It began with a city commission meeting in which local taxpayers were obligated to pay almost $1 million to renovate Pampa's garbage collection system.

During the meeting, commissioners adopted an ordinance authorizing the issuance of $956,000 in certificates of obligation to pay for six trucks, 3,400 three - cubic - yard containers and 100 1½ - cubic - yard containers purchased from EMCO Manufacturing in Plainview. Attorney fees, printing and issuance costs were included in the total.

City Manager Mack Wofford stated earlier the certificates of obligation will be paid off in seven years at $161 - $168,000 per year with sanitation fees and reduced labor costs.

The Director of Public Works, R. B. "Jiggs" Cooke described the new system as having five routes throughout the city. The containers would be shared between four houses, he said. One box will serve two houses on the left side and two houses on the right side of the alleys. Pickups will be made once a week in the beginning, Cooke added, with increased pickups if necessary.

Presently, Cooke said, two sanitation department crews are employed in changing over to the new system. One crew is assembling the boxes and another crew is setting the containers in the alleys behind the residences to be served.

When the new system is fully implemented, the city will need only 16 sanitation employees. The department is attempting to eliminate 14 jobs by attrition.

City Manager, Mack Wofford said recently, over 800 boxes have been placed all over the southeast portion of Pampa. Everything south of the railroad tracks are in operation, he added.

Few problems have arisen concerning the tan metal boxes. The main concern of sanitation workers is finding the boxes being used for large items, which are often too heavy or bulky for the pick up trucks to handle. Some residents are leaving the lids up on the containers, making it easier for dogs or other unwanted elements to scatter the trash and encouraging flies.

Pampa now has two 25 - yard capacity trucks with compactor and lifting equipment to be used in the pickup of waste material and are waiting on the arrival of four more of the vehicles.

Wofford hopes to have the entire system in service by the first of 1980. First predictions would have had the transitions completed by October or November, but due to the late truck deliveries, the waiting period has been lengthened.

Kmart
THE SAVING PLACE

K-Mart filled with history

K mart Corp. management, led by Harry B Cunningham, who rose from store manager to chairman of the board, gambled $80,000,000 on its beliefs about the modern shopper when K mart was initiated in 1962.

The corporation, formerly known as the S.S. Kresge Co., was founded in 1899. By 1912, the firm was operating the second largest group of variety stores in the world. For nearly half a century, it was one of the most successful retail businesses.

But retailing in America was changing. Kresge's management was aware of this when it initiated a study of consumer needs for the future and an investigation into methods of retailing.

In 1959, the management team started laying the groundwork for the corporation's entry into a new field of retailing — discount department stores — an unproven business that was not highly regarded by most observers of general merchandise retailing.

But, management reasoned, its approach would be different. "Discounting will succeed," it said, "if someone does it with top quality merchandise, real discount prices and eliminates the shopper's risk with a 'satisfaction always policy.'"

A vital element in management's strategy was the complete involvement of its entire organization in the new venture. Management was confident that the long-range future of the corporation depended on total commitment to K mart, and key executive decisions reflected that assurance.

The first step involved a restructuring of the executive organization with top priority given to a stepped-up recruiting and training program at the store level.

A high-ranking executive was appointed to head the development of the K mart concept with understanding throughout the corporation that every department would be expected to participate.

The real estate department's initial assignment was the acquisition of 60 K mart sites. When the first K mart was opened on March 1, 1962, there were firm commitments for 32 others involving a financial obligation totaling over $80 million.

The real estate department was then instructed to bring in sufficient deals to assure a minimum of 50 new K marts each year through the decade ahead.

More than 1,500 K mart discount department stores are now in operation in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada. The corporation is continuing the rapid expansion of K mart stores this year.

Oil fields change Pampa's future

At the turn of the century and into the 1920s, Pampa was a small, quiet Panhandle town settled primarily by cattlemen and farmers. Agriculture was big and easterners moved to the Panhandle to make their wealth from wheat and grain crops.

But, then came a gas well, the Masterson No. 4, followed by an oil well, the Burnett No. 2, and in 1926, the infamous oil boom unofficially began.

Pampa -- and the Texas Panhandle-- would never be the same.

Now in 1979, over fifty years later, that oil boom seems to have faded. The glories of newly-won fortunes and the helter-skelter years of hastily-formed towns are but mere memories for those men who seek oil.

Today oil is sought at deeper levels than ever before because prices have boomed, thus making it worth the expensive effort to find the black crude. But the times have changed.

Men do not drill for oil with the same reckless abandon that the early roughnecks did. It has become a seriously thought out and examined process to find oil; it is no longer a matter of getting rich quick; it is a matter of keeping the money gained from earlier discoveries.

Bill Arrington, an independent oil operator, says that with oil going anywhere from $6.30 to $28.50 per barrel, more drilling is taking place.

"The price has caused more drilling," Arrington said. "More people are willing to spend more time and more money drilling at deeper levels than before."

Current technology has limited drilling to 25,000 feet, but he says in the early days, drillers only went to 4,000 feet.

"When the oil was first coming in, it was 35 cents a barrel and it slowly rose to 85 cents," he said. "At today's prices, you can go deeper and get reserves that a lot of people thought weren't there."

Pampa is the geographical center for the old Panhandle Oil and Gas Field, which is considered the largest gas field in the world. It averages 20 miles wide and stretches 115 miles through Gray, Wheeler, Carson, Hutchinson, Potter and Moore Counties.

Arrington says the Anadarko Basin, part of which is in the Texas Panhandle, has reserves in its deeper zones from 1800 feet to 25,000 feet. The deepest well is in Beckham Co., Okla., which extends 24,800 feet.

There is more oil, a lot more, to be found, Arrington says. Secondary recovery, along with the new technology, results in more oil being found. And despite recent energy crunches, experts say two-thirds of all the oil ever discovered in the U.S. is still in the ground.

Arrington sees a major problem facing those in the oil business --government intervention.

"Most all of our energy problems have been because of a lack of understanding of the industry by federal bureaucrats," he said. "Politics have entered into it, too. Plus all the paperwork we have to fill out is nearly unbearable."

He believes the oil and gas industry has become the "scapegoat" for government's mistakes. He adds that the recently passed Natural Gas Policy Act has left many in the business confused.

"The act is so complicated, you can't interpret it," Arrington said. He added that until the courts handle it, no one will know what does and does not affect them.

Pampa rich in football history

Football has been a part of Pampa almost from the city's beginning.

Although the sport may have started earlier, the first recorded game was in 1909 when Pampa played Miami and lost, 20-13.

The next published account wasn't until 1920, when the two teams met again, but this time the score was much more embarrassing, listed as "approximately 100-0" in Miami's favor.

Things did get better for Pampa teams. In an unusually long season, the 1930 club won 12 of 13 games while running up 636 points.

Playing the same team three times in a single season can either promote a rivalry or kill it, but that's just what Pampa and Amarillo High did in 1922. Ironically, the first two games ended in 3-3 and 9-9 ties with Amarillo coming back and winning the tiebreaker, 38-6.

The gas shortage must not have existed in 1939 when Pampa traveled as far as Casper, Wyo., and Van Buren, Ark., looking for opponents. Pampa lost the Casper game, 18-6, but defeated Van Buren, 30-6.

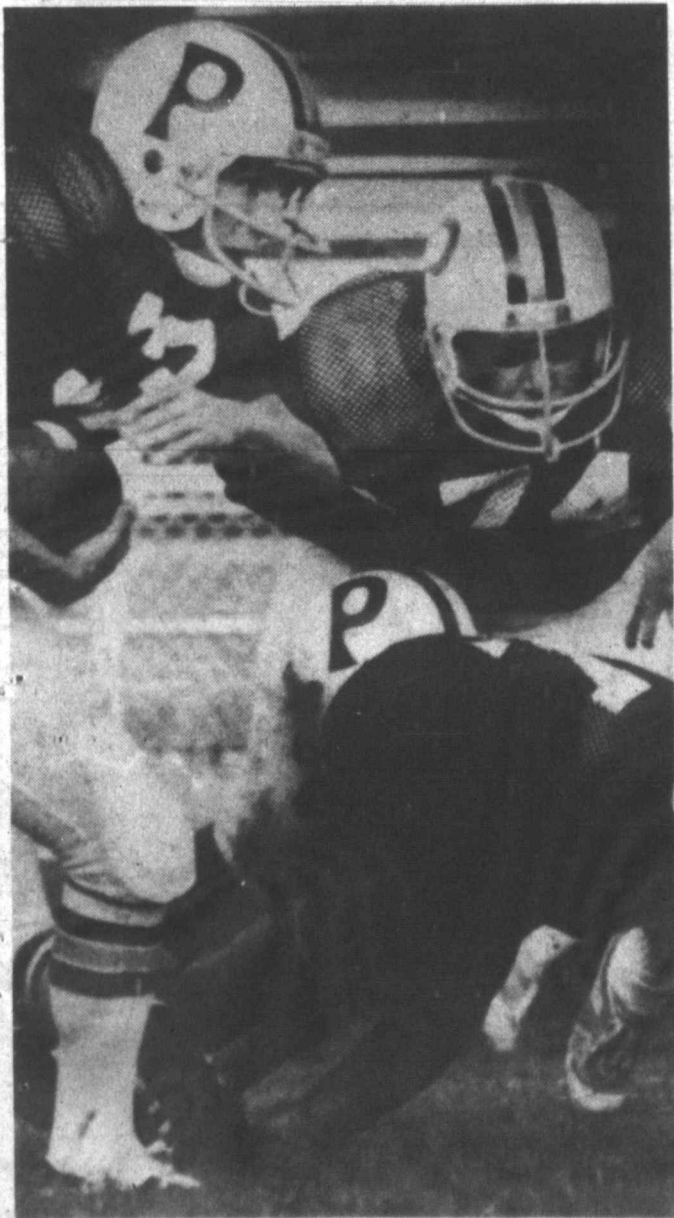

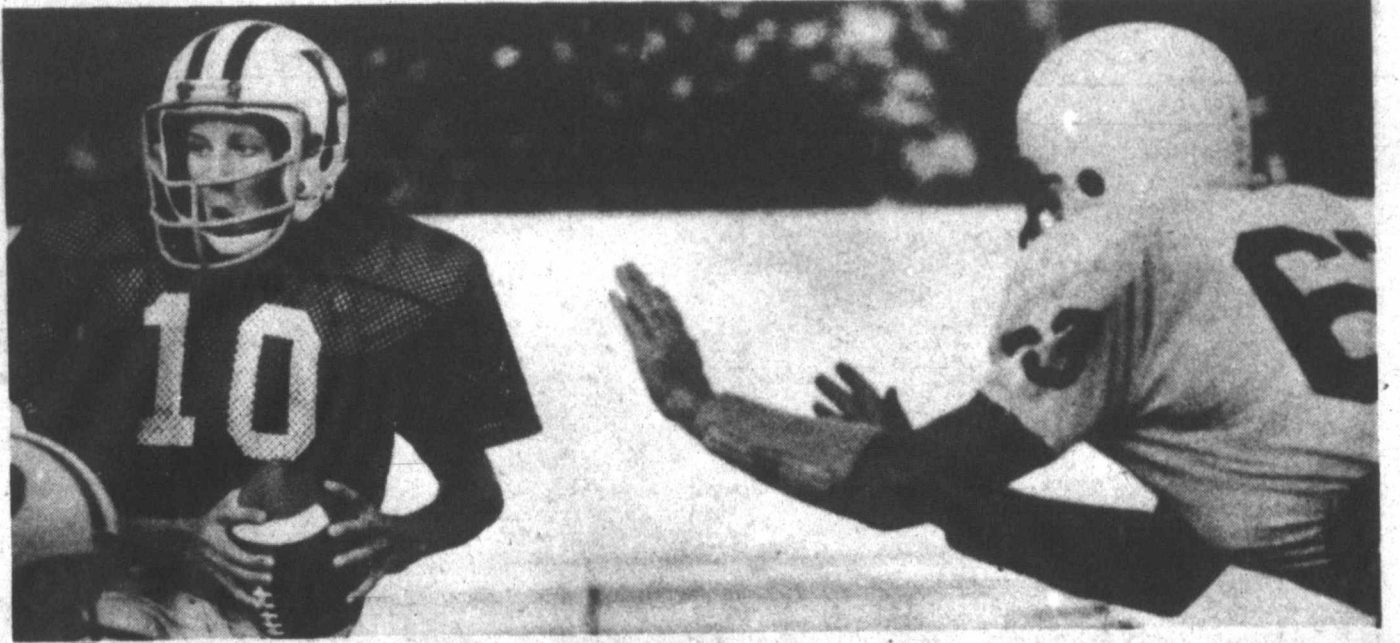

The last time Pampa won a district title outright was in 1971. The Harvesters lost to Hereford, 28-20, in bi-district to finish with an 8-3 record.

There have been those comeback thrillers that makes football such a fascinating sport.

Take for instance Pampa's 1968 finale with Lubbock. Trailing 6-0 with 1:68 to go in the contest, Pampa lineman Dan Craig picked up a Lubbock fumble and raced 34 yards for the touchdown to tie the score. Johnny Stokes split the uprights to give the Harvesters a one-point victory.

On a cold Thanksgiving day in 1952, Pampa trailed Borger 34-26 going into the waning minutes when the Harvesters struck like lightning on TDs by Ed Dudley and J.D. Whisenhunt to pull out the win.

Pampa's football teams down through the years have made a habit of providing their fans with last-second heroics, but even in defeat the Harvesters have displayed the sportsmanship that any progressive community would be proud of.

Palmer brings winner to PHS

The man in charge of Pampa High's winning football program this year is accustomed to being a winner.

In his initial year at the Harvester helm, 30-year-old Danny Palmer has guided his charges to a respectable 4-2 record and an excellent chance of winning the District 3-AAAA crown.

Palmer's reputation as a winner preceded him. During the past two seasons as head coach at Waco's Richmond High, Palmer was named district coach of the year in 1978 and led a team that was picked to finish last in the district standings to a second-place finish in 1977. His 1977 squad was actually rated to finish last out of 246 teams in a pre-season Harris poll.

Overall as both a head coach and assistant, Palmer has compiled an outstanding 82-34-1 record.

His first year as an assistant at Nathez, Miss., set the pace for his coaching career when the team won the state championship with a 13-0 record. As the interim head coach at Nathez in 1974, he logged a 10-1 record.

Palmer also distinguished himself as an athlete in both high school and college.

He received the outstanding athlete award at John Tyler, Texas High School and was also named to the all-state baseball team as a senior.

As a sophomore quarterback, he guided the University of Southern Mississippi to an 8-2 record and was named to the All-South Independent team.

Palmer's coaching philosophy, which he explained in a pamphlet released to the news media prior to the football season, extends beyond the football field where he believes a real winner should reflect high moral character, integrity and honesty. He feels a coach that reflects these Christian ideals is better equipped to lead young men.

Palmer doesn't feel that progress is reflected in a won-loss column, but in the amount of maturity an athlete gains both on and off the playing field. He wants each ballplayer to graduate from high school and leave the program with the confidence that he can handle any encounter that may challenge him in the future, with the help of Jesus Christ.

Roots of daily newspaper in Pampa go back to early part of century

The Pampa News had its beginning in the early 1900s, although the circulation date of the first issue is not known.

The first paper, The Crony, was published and edited by L.L. Ladd, founder, owner and publisher of the Miami Chief, founded about 1901. Ladd carried the Pampa weeklies to Pampa to sell them.

The Pampa paper definitely was in circulation by 1906, when it was housed by Ladd in the back of the Lard and Wynne Land Office building, located on Atchison.

About April 1907, a four - page weekly succeeded The Crony, purchased by J.M. Smith. He published it with the assistance of his son.

Their print shop was located in one of the rooms at the back of the First National Bank building on the corner of Cuyler and Foster streets.

By 1925 the Pampa paper was a daily. In March 1926, J.L. Nunn and Dr. J.E. Nunn bought the paper from the H.M. Smith and Joe M. Smith. The publisher was David Warren and the paper was known as the Pampa Daily News.

R.C. Hoiles and others — a group known as Freedom Newspapers, Inc. — bought the Pampa Daily News from the Nunn's in June 1936. The Pampa paper was one of the chain's first purchases.

The newspaper, one of 29 Freedom dailies with a combined circulation of 740,800, is still owned by Hoiles family members.

The paper, which moved to a new building on West Atchison in 1951, now is known as the Pampa News.

During the 70s the News made several technological changes in its operation. In the fall of 1970 an offset press replaced the letter press previously used.

The six - unit offset prints 20,000 papers per hour and has the capacity to print 24 different pages at the same time. It also is capable of running multi - color issues.

An Associated Press Laserphoto wire service, installed Sept. 1, 1978, allows world - wide illustration of the news with up - to - date photography. The signals are transmitted over telephone wires.

In February 1979, video display terminals were installed in the newsroom, replacing the familiar old typewriters. Reporters compose and file stories in a typewriter - like computer terminal; by punching a series of keys, the editors call up the stories for final changes before the copy is set in the backshop.

The Pampa News presently has 32 full - time employees and about 15 part - time workers. About 60 carriers deliver newspapers within Pampa and seven make area deliveries.

CITY EDITOR Joe Blobaum edits all the local copy written by reporters at The Pampa News. He also does page layout, deciding where each story and photograph should be placed on the page. Formerly sports editor at the News, he still covers some sports events in Pampa and the area.
