Anti-Klan rally erupts in gunfire, 4 dead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Gunfire erupted at a "Death to the Klan" march organized by a leftist group Saturday, leaving four people dead and five wounded, police said.

"We have dead and wounded scattered around at all the hospitals in the city. It is going to take some time to coordinate it," said Capt. Bob Steele.

A television newsman said two car loads of whites had opened fire on the rally with automatic weapons, and that blacks in the crowd had returned fire with handguns.

Several people were taken into custody when officers stopped one car leaving the area, police said.

Riot-helmeted police with shotguns quickly moved in and cordoned off the area as about 300 onlookers and demonstrators, some with faces streaked with tears and blood, stood by.

Police identified three of the dead as Jim Waller, Sandy Smith and William Sampson, all of Greensboro. Steele said the fourth had not been identified. Police said all were participants in the rally.

Officials at three hospitals said they were treating a total of five people for gunshot wounds. Two were reported in serious condition and one in stable condition. Condition reports were not immediately available on the others.

The violence erupted as about 100 people, black and white, were gathering for a rally and march in the Morningside Manor housing project, a primarily black area of town. The rally was being organized by Workers Viewpoint, which is described by members as a Marxist, anti-capitalist organization.

Witnesses said two cars loaded with white men drove and began shouting racial epithets. The whites began shooting after demonstrators shouted back and some hit the cars, witnesses said.

"The first thing that happened, I saw this Klansman waving his gun. The next thing we knew there was shooting all over the place," said Clair Burton, who said a woman died in her arms. Ms. Burton's face was caked with blood.

Charles Travis, of WGHP television station in High Point, said his cameras were rolling when the whites drove up and some demonstrators struck the cars.

"Two cars pulled up and about 12 white males emerged brandishing automatic weapons," Travis said.

He said the whites began shooting and "blacks (marchers) returned the gunfire" with handguns.

The shooting lasted about two minutes, he said. "It sounded like firecrackers at first."

The rally was organized last month as a confrontation to protest the Klan's activities.

In announcing the rally, a Viewpoint organizer called Klansmen cowards.

"We invite you (Klansmen) and your two-bit punks to come out and face the wrath of the people," said Paul Bernanzohn of Durham last month.

Remains found on freighter

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The burned remains of a body were found Saturday in a stateroom of the freighter Mimosa by a survey party that went aboard to check the structural soundness of the ship.

The Mimosa and the Burmah Agate, a 772-foot tanker carrying 400,000 barrels of light crude oil, were involved in a fiery collision early Thursday morning near this Gulf Coast shipping port.

The discovery by the boarding party raised the total number of bodies recovered to five, but the Coast Guard said there still are 27 tanker crewmen missing.

The helicopter crews said they removed 26 people from the Mimosa Thursday, and the owners told us then that was the number of men aboard," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Richard Griggs.

See related story on page 15

"We received an indication from the owners Friday that there might be another crewman aboard and there was," he said. "Either there was an extra man on the Mimosa, or the count was just wrong. Things were pretty hectic Thursday."

Griggs said the body would be left on the charred hulk of the freighter, which is anchored about six miles off the coast, until the medical examiner could be brought aboard, probably sometime Monday.

The Coast Guard had ceased active air and sea search operations for the missing crewmen earlier Saturday, saying there was little hope that any of them are alive.

"We will continue to have overflights of the ships and along the length of the oil spill and we will be looking for possible survivors at those times," Griggs said. "But we are no longer plotting an organized search operation."

Meanwhile, preparations continued to extinguish the still-burning tanker and contain an oil slick that stretched back from the stern of the ship in a thin ribbon about two miles long.

Griggs said the slick posed no threat to the Texas coast, but the Coast Guard was going ahead with clean-up operations.

Accident leaves three hurt

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

A Pampa man is in the intensive care unit of Highland General Hospital as the result of a spectacular five vehicle accident at the intersection of Alcock and Dwight, Friday night.

According to a hospital spokesperson, Earl Collins, 39, of 325 N. Dwight is listed in stable condition with chest injuries. Also injured in the mishap were Charles Snider, 16, of 1608 Grape and 15-year-old Lynn Diane Knutson of 417 Tignor.

Police reports state Collins was driving a 1973 GMC pickup traveling north across Alcock from Dwight into the path of a 1979 Pontiac driven by Snider. The Pontiac was traveling west on Alcock when it was in collision with the Collins vehicle.

Officer John Bennett of the Pampa Police Department said it appeared that after the initial impact, Collins' pickup spun, striking the Snider vehicle again.

This caused Snider's TransAm to veer across the roadway into Jack's Used Cars located at 1500 Alcock, striking a third vehicle. A chain reaction collision followed with the third vehicle hitting a fourth auto, causing it to hit a fifth one.

The vehicles from the used car lot which were damaged in the accident included a 1976 Ford, a 1975 Pontiac TransAm and a 1974 Ford Pinto station wagon.

Due to the accident, Bennett said, the intersection was closed to traffic for about an hour.

Arriving at the scene of the mishap were three police units, two fire engines and a rescue unit, two ambulances and a Department of Public Safety unit.

According to Bennett, Collins was believed to have suffered an epileptic-type seizure which may have caused the incident.

Collins, suffering from a crushed rib cage and punctured lung, was not breathing when Bennett first arrived on the scene. Bennett said the man began breathing shortly after Bennett checked him for injuries.

The three injured persons were taken to the Highland General Hospital Emergency Room where Collins was treated and admitted to the intensive care unit of the hospital.

Knutson and Snider were treated for facial injuries and released.

Bankruptcy sign of times for many Americans

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

After a going on a buy now - pay later binge, people and small businesses are experiencing the "morning after" feeling and the "hair of the dog" is bankruptcy.

The number of personal bankruptcies for the month of July has increased 33 percent over a year ago. August's early figures show bankruptcies are up 20 percent over 1978.

Albert H. Cox, Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics, Inc., a business analysis firm fears if the recession worsens and inflation stays at its present high rate, loan losses could reach levels that equal those of the 1930s.

Several businessmen in the Pampa area do not feel Pampa is experiencing the bankruptcy and delinquent loan problems that other areas seem to have.

"We don't have too many people in the Panhandle who will go bankrupt," Luther Robinson, senior vice-president of the First National Bank of Pampa said. He believe the people work their problems out with the banks and business when they are in financial trouble. He felt bankruptcy was more prevalent on the east and west coasts.

Wayne Cox, manager for SIC Credit Company said he had been in the Pampa office for two years and have had no problem with personal bankruptcies. He attributed this to the lack of garnishment laws — a judicial order which directs a debtor's employer to retain a portion of his wages in order to satisfy a judgement. Cox said of the eleven years he has worked in the loan business, "I could count on one hand the amount of bankruptcies I have encountered."

In northern United States, however, bankruptcy is becoming more of a problem. For example, a credit counseling center in Omaha says it's seeing 50 percent more debt-ridden people than last year.

A weak economy is considered to be a major reason for the increase in bankruptcies and loan delinquencies. Personal reasons are another factor. These include sickness, divorce, mishandled personal finances and unsuccessful small business ventures.

The law for bankruptcy provides a financially troubled person with a way to relieve themselves from an unbearable debt burden and get a fresh start.

There is concern, however, that the law is too lenient to the debtor. For example, a federal bankruptcy law allows a debtor to shield a lot of his property from seizure, deters lenders from using repossession as a way to recover loan losses and limits the power of the lender to convince the bankrupt person to repay old debts.

A spokesman for the finance industry said, "This act goes beyond what is necessary for consumer protection."

Judges, financial counselors and lenders say bankruptcy is rarely used as an intentional attempt to cheat lenders.

"Most persons go bankrupt not to avoid debt, but because they feel it's the only avenue left open," comments Vernon Evans, an attorney at the National Consumer Finance Association.

Jurors may receive Davis case for deliberation

Editor's Note: Monday marks the 15th and perhaps final week of the Cullen Davis murder-for-hire trial. A jury will be asked Tuesday to decide the millionaire defendant's guilt or innocence. This article touches on the facts and figures of the long-playing drama and the issues before the jury. It is a cooperative effort of The Associated Press and Fort Worth Star-Telegram writers Carolyn Ondrejas and Michelle Scott.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Somebody's lying, of course. But who?

Did Cullen Davis really intend to kill his divorcee, his ex-wife and two young witnesses who once accused him of murder?

Had he in fact, as his chief accuser contends, killed before?

Or is David McCrory lying? Is he, as the defense maintains, a pathological liar who would not recognize the truth if it arrived astride a pink-and-purple pig?

"Hell," a defense lawyer grumbled once, "you can't even believe McCrory when he admitted he's lying."

Did he then, as Davis claims, conspire with his former wife, Priscilla, and others to frame the multimillionaire industrialist in a bizarre and diabolical scheme?

That's what a jury will be asked to decide.

Eleven of the original 12 members survived the three-month ordeal — one broke a leg — and most likely will begin deliberations Tuesday afternoon.

State District Judge Gordon Gray agreed to spread closing arguments over two days, beginning Monday.

The high point is expected Tuesday in a final showdown between lead defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes and chief prosecutor Jack Strickland.

"Closing arguments are fun to give, and lawyers like to hear themselves talk," quipped Strickland, 36, an outrageously irreverent and delightfully droll prosecutor.

But he, like Haynes, 52, is deadly serious about the farewell impression left with the jury.

And the charismatic Haynes, at the pinnacle of a brilliant career, is the crown prince of legal eloquence.

They clashed once before, in Houston, but Strickland was not then the chief prosecutor. And the trial itself was inconclusive, ending with the jury deadlocked 8-4 in favor of convicting Davis.

"They didn't get us, did they?" Haynes grinned after the non-verdict.

And then, perhaps thinking that remark might be misinterpreted, he added:

"They didn't convict an innocent man."

At the time, Strickland declared:

"They set out to confuse and complicate and obfuscate in hopes of hanging the jury up. They succeeded in doing that ... but this has done nothing to shake my faith in the integrity of the state's case."

"They may have worn down some members of the jury, but they sure as hell aren't going to wear us down."

And so it is that, 10 months later, Davis faces again what Haynes calls the "excruciating agony" of a jury's deliberations.

Asked last week to discuss the defense case, Haynes declined, saying it would be improper. Besides, he complained, the trial reporters have been too quick to print the "potpourri of pros."

Strickland was less reticent.

"I think the biggest difference in the case here and in Houston is that we weren't trying to prosecute in the dark this time," he said.

"We knew essentially what their story would be, who their witnesses would be and what their testimony would be."

"That enabled us to prepare ahead of time rather than in the frantic few minutes after the testimony was given."

"It's really horrible to have to counter testimony you could not anticipate from witnesses you did not know existed concerning facts you had not even contemplated."

"That's trial by ambush."

The heart of the state's case remains the August 1978 tape recordings of the furtive meetings between Davis and McCrory. Prosecutors will argue that the FBI recordings and videotape permit jurors to see and hear the alleged crime being committed.

"It is essentially a crime of words ... conspiracy," Strickland said.

The jury can convict Davis either for solicitation of capital murder or conspiracy to commit capital murder.

Either offense is punishable by five years to life in prison.

Davis does not deny discussing mass murder with McCrory, but he does deny intent to actually kill any of the 15 persons on an alleged "hit list."

He said he thought he was cooperating with the FBI when he met with McCrory and that these discussions with his friend-turned-informant were designed to head off a plot on his own life.

Only five names surfaced on the two tapes as potential targets of a phantom assassin, including Joe Eldson, the person named in the indictment against Davis.

The others were Priscilla, Beverly Bass, Bubba Gavrel and Bubba's father, Gus Gavrel Sr.

Will Rogers - still loved at 100

COLOGAH, Okla. (AP) — Will Rogers, born in Oklahoma Territory 100 years ago Sunday, saw the frailties in life and made the world laugh about them.

It was 44 years ago that Rogers died in an Alaska plane crash, but his memory is still bright, particularly around this northeastern Oklahoma area where he was born and buried.

A few people still personally remember the cowboy humorist, movie actor and writer. But thousands visit the Rogers Memorial on a hill at Claremore and the house where he was born, 13 miles from here.

His humor, a half-century old, still wears well. Although it was topical — "I only know what I read in the newspapers," he often said — much of it could be written today.

"I do not belong to any organized political party — I'm a Democrat," he once quipped.

Rogers' birthday events are held annually, but this year there was more interest in the humorist than usual. He was inducted into the Oklahoma Aviation Hall of Fame; actor James Whitmore continued a one-man tour, "Will Rogers USA"; a mobile museum of Rogers history went on display and an air show at Claremore was dedicated to him.

Commemorative events in Oklahoma occurred not on his birthday but on Aug. 15, the anniversary of the 1935 plane crash that took the lives of Rogers and his close friend, pilot Wiley Post.

Rogers was born Nov. 4, 1879, the son of a comfortably fixed rancher, businessman and political leader. He grew up on a 60,000-acre ranch in the sparsely settled territory that later became Oklahoma. As a boy, he learned to ride and spin a rope, a skill that later helped make him famous.

He attended a variety of schools in the territory and a couple in Missouri but did not shine as a student, preferring to practice his roping and tell jokes.

It was when he combined the two, adding conversation to his rope spinning act, that he hit the Ziegfeld Follies bigtime and was invited to perform for royalty in England and Europe.

Among his fans was President Franklin Roosevelt, who admired Rogers' intelligence as well as his wit. "Will Rogers' analysis of affairs abroad was not only more interesting but proved to be more accurate than any other I had heard," Roosevelt wrote.

Rogers looked anything but intelligent when making his savvy observations of the world. He slouched. He scratched his head. He gave a loop of rope a desultory twirl from time to time. He always chewed gum.

Rogers had not set out to be an entertainer. He was a cowboy, but he was restless on the ranch even with gifts from his father of land and a herd of cattle. He wandered through the Southwest, working as a cowhand for the customary $30 a month. He went to Argentina but wasn't able to get a ranch started.

There, he got a job tending cattle on a boat to Africa and soon afterwards joined a wild west show as "The Cherokee Kid," a reference to his Cherokee Indian ancestry. He traveled with the show to Australia and New Zealand and finally back to the United States.

By 1915, he had joined a Florenz Ziegfeld production at the New Amsterdam Theater in New York. The Follies followed, along with movies, newspaper interviews, lecture tours, radio broadcasts, goodwill tours and books.

Rogers insisted on keeping his humor timely. "A joke don't have to be near as funny if it's up-to-date," he said. "So that's how I learned that my own stuff — serving only strictly fresh-laid jokes, as you might say — goes better than anything else."

He was best known for his common-man reactions to world leaders. Rogers razzed Congress and twitted presidents and kings.

"He was a hero during the Depression," says Clem McSpadden, a former Oklahoma congressman and grandnephew of Rogers. "He said things the average man thought but couldn't express himself."

In a typical remark, Rogers said: "My little jokes don't hurt nobody, but when Congress makes a joke it's a law. When they make a law, it's a joke."

Of the Republican Party, he said: "If the good Lord can find his way clear to blessing the Republican Party the way it's been carrying on lately, I don't think the rest of us is going to have to ask for it."

On living, his advice was simple. "Don't fret too much. Try to get a few laughs and just live your life so you wouldn't be ashamed to sell the family parrot to the town gossip."

Clements may try to stop renovation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If you are driving around San Antonio this weekend, Gov. Bill Clements would like for you to look over the Perry Shankle building in the inner city.

The Texas Legislature voted $3.1 million to renovate the 1912 building into modern office space for state agencies. Clements hinted broadly Friday he would try to stop the project.

"You look at it and we'll talk about next time we meet," he told his weekly Capitol news conference.

"I have all the authority I need to investigate the use of taxpayers' money."

He was asked what he could do stop the renovation.

"I didn't say I was going to stop it. I'm just studying it," he answered.

Associates said Clements became aroused over the renovation project after visiting the building in downtown San Antonio about two weeks ago.

The Perry Shankle building was purchased by the 1975 Legislature amid considerable controversy and claims by some that the old building could never be made into a presentable office building.

The 1979 Legislature voted $3.1 million to renovate the building.

Klan marches through Dallas streets

DALLAS (AP) — A robed group of more than 30 members of the Ku Klux Klan paraded through downtown streets for the first time in almost 60 years Saturday, jeered by spectators and protected by helmeted police.

Three young men, disgruntled by Klan chants of "White Power," were arrested.

The Klansmen, calling for "The Right to Bear Arms" and "No More Boat People," encountered a hostile crowd along the 1 1/2-mile parade route.

About three dozen police, wearing riot helmets and wielding billy clubs, quickly surrounded the group as hundreds of blacks walked beside the KKK, shouting "Blacks are here to stay" and "Go back to Germany."

Two men were arrested for disorderly conduct, and one heckler was charged with inciting a crowd, according to Chief John Driscoll.

A counter-demonstration by several anti-KKK groups which merged to form the Coalition for Human Equality was staged shortly after the KKK march ended abruptly. Klansmen also were scheduled to rally tonight, and according to police, members of the coalition planned to picket.

The KKK parade, billed as "The March of the Christian Soldiers," was staged to "save an endangered species — the white race" and to demonstrate opposition to "Communist race mixing."

"We're getting up the white Christian army to fight the Communist devils," said Addie Barlow Frazier, 73.

Alligators may mingle with skinny dippers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lake Travis and Lake Austin may have hundreds of baby alligators to mingle with the water skiers, skinny dippers and weekend sailors, if an anonymous University of Texas student's claim is correct.

The student identified only by the fictitious name, "John," told the Austin American-Statesman he put 316 baby alligators in the two lakes in September.

"What I'm doing is basically extending their range," he said of the alligators, which are native to coastal areas and parts of East Texas but occur in only isolated cases this far west.

How many of the alligators will survive the alligator gars, herons, raccoons and the Central Texas winter is subject to debate. Floyd Potter, a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist, predicted not enough will survive to start a stable population or cause problems for people.

"John" expects 150 to 200 to survive and establish a permanent population of alligators in the lakes.

"John" insisted on the fictitious name because what he did is illegal. His deed first was revealed in the November issue of "UTmost," the UT-Austin student magazine.

He said he was unworried by the possibility the reptiles might injure or kill people when they grow to their mature size of as much as 10 feet for a 10-year-old alligator.

"That only happens when the alligators so outstrip the resources of an area that they begin moving into populated areas and start getting lame. That's not going to happen — at least not for several years," the American-Statesman quoted "John" as saying.

The student said reptiles have been his hobby for years. He said he sought a baby alligator to keep and observe and found one on an oil company reserve on the Texas Coast last spring. He also learned the oil company planned to rid the three lakes on its property of alligators. He said he "kidnapped" about 400 alligator eggs in July and hatched them in a sand box in a closet.

Potter said there have been no recorded deaths in Texas from attacks by alligators but there have been some in Florida and Louisiana.

He said most of the injuries were caused when people fed or provoked alligators.

The official said "John," if caught, could get a maximum sentence of about six years in jail and several thousand dollars in fines for violating state and federal endangered species acts.

Investment suggestions as varied as personalities of those questioned

DALLAS (AP) — In these troubled financial times, people are looking for profitable places to put their money.

And several prominent Texans have varied ideas of just what they would do if given $1,000 to invest.

Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis recommends, "Land, rare stamps and coins."

Evangelist Lester Roloff says, "I'd invest in people that everybody else has failed with. My savings are in Heaven."

Gov. Bill Clements says, "Government paper issued through banks."

Two-time gubernatorial candidate Frances "Sissy" Farenthold says, "I've been flying on an airline called Republic, and they really care. I'd buy stock in the airline."

Killer Bee Lloyd Doggett, a Democratic state senator from Austin, recommends "honey and tennis shoes."

San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell says, "I would try to find $9,000 more and put it in a money market certificate."

Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach says he'd invest that problematical $1,000 in "real estate."

Ruben Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, says he would "establish a $1,000 award in memory of my father, then award that to a migrant student."

Despite those diverse suggestions, financial experts say the trend seems to be toward investments in tangible assets, such as gold and silver bullion, rare coins, money market certificates and stocks and bonds.

Davis, on trial for the second time for the alleged attempted contract slaying of his divorcee, says several things appreciate faster than inflation.

"Land will do that, as well as rare stamps and coins that collectors are interested in. Those things don't ever go down, contrary to the stock market and gold. Land doesn't normally fluctuate, if you don't pay too much for it. If all I had was $1,000, I wouldn't put it into anything that would fluctuate."

Davis adds that he doesn't "fool around with the stock market or those securities that the public is permitted to get involved in."

Clements, who made his fortune in the oil business, says that if he had $1,000 to invest he would put it in commercial paper.

"Right now, with the general economic uncertainty, that's as safe an investment with as high a yield as you can get," the governor said.

Clements is right, according to Bill Gall, senior vice president for marketing and public affairs for Dallas' Republic National Bank.

Gall says 30-day commercial paper is paying about 13 percent interest. Commercial paper, Gall says, is a short-term negotiable promissory note issued in fairly large denominations by businesses.

"It represents a major short-term investment alternative that competes with CDs (certificates of deposit), short-term bonds and this type of thing," Gall says.

He added that businesses buy money through a bank as an investor. The businesses pay the banks 11 percent interest. "They will make more on an investment than they will pay us," he said.

Another popular type of investment is a money market certificate. Mrs. Cockrell would make this type of investment with her $1,000.

Money market certificates cost a minimum of $10,000. Interest on a six-month certificate is in excess of 12 percent.

Mike Simons, manager of the Dallas Gold and Silver Exchange, says transactions in gold and silver "definitely" have gone up, especially with the skyrocketing price of gold on the world market. "We are doing a lot of business," Simons said. "We are awfully busy, probably because of inflation."

But Harry Denson, an employee of Merrill Lynch in Dallas, says some stocks continue to sell well.

"Oil, energy, chemical and drug stocks have been the groups that have performed the best. People are very sensitive to energy. They see gasoline going up and have a personal involvement with everyday stocks. And people feel like the drug business is growing."

IN AGRICULTURE

By Joe VanZandt

The rain and other forms of moisture were a welcome sight for most people. However, some farmers were unfortunate recipients of weather damage to sorghum and cotton crops that were almost ready for harvest. Scattered hail and the very high winds have certainly resulted in some crop loss, but the full extent will not be known until the harvest is completed.

CONTROL CATTLE LICE

Lice cost U.S. cattlemen about $67 million last year, so it's important to control them.

Lice begin to reproduce rapidly with the onset of cool weather, so peak populations on cattle occur in late winter and early spring. Uncontrolled lice can soon infest a whole herd because with cold weather, cattle tend to bunch up more so that the pests can move easily from one animal to another. Heavy hair coats on animals during cold weather also afford protection for the parasites and allow for increased reproduction.

Both types of lice — bloodsucking and biting — infest cattle. Sucking lice pierce the animal's skin and suck blood while biting lice feed on particles of hair, scale, scab and skin exudation.

Lice infestations irritate animals, causing itching, scratching and rubbing on fences or anything else available. This produces denuded areas, bruises and lacerations on the affected animal. Heavily infested animals will have an unthrifty appearance and will suffer weight reduction, decreased milk production, anemia or even death. Lice infested animals may also be more subject to infectious diseases. Heavy lice infestations often stunt calves.

Spraying or dipping infested animals with the proper insecticide is the most effective means of controlling lice. However, properly placed and maintained dust bags offer effective control and save both time and labor. Position dust bags prior to lice buildup so that cattle can become accustomed to using the bags. A dust bag station should serve about 30 head. Depending on cattle size, place the bags so that they hang 18-24 inches above the ground. Forced-use of dust bags, where they are placed so that cattle must pass under them to get feed or water, begin to control lice sooner than those used free-choice. By allowing a two-to-three week adjustment period, free-choice bags can be about as effective as forced-use bags.

In spraying or dipping programs an animal must receive a thorough soaking in each of two applications 14-18 days apart to effectively control lice. The second spray or dip will kill any lice hatching from eggs that were laid prior to the first spraying. When spraying, use a high pressure (250 pounds per square inch) and thoroughly wet animals to the skin.

For a list of effective insecticides for controlling lice, cattlemen can obtain a copy of "Suggestions for Controlling External Parasites on Livestock and Poultry" at the County Extension Office.

Check the label on the insecticide container and pay particular attention to warnings, restrictions and waiting periods, especially if some of the cattle are being prepared for slaughter.

STOP WINTER LAWN WEEDS

Remember those unsightly weeds and grasses that emerged in your lawn last winter? Weed seedlings emerge from November through January, but remain small and often don't become obvious until January or February.

A number of herbicides will control winter weeds in bermudagrass if applied before weed seeds begin to germinate.

Benfin (Balan), bensulide (Betasan, Pre-San) and DCPA (Dacthal) are all available in granular formulations and will give good weed control if properly applied. Granular materials are easier to apply than sprays because calibration is more simple. Drop type applicators are better than spinner type distributors because of uniformity of coverage and ease of calibration.

All these herbicides are available mixed with fertilizer (weed and feed products), but these mixtures must be used with care. Areas that need fertilization, such as flower beds and gardens could be damaged by the herbicide, depending on what is growing there or what will be planted later. Proper application rates are more important when applying a herbicide than when fertilizer only is applied.

Two other effective pre-emergence herbicides are atrazine and simazine, but these are labelled for use only in fertilizer mixtures. Never apply fertilizers containing atrazine or simazine near young trees or ornamentals or injury may occur.

Unless there is rain soon after herbicide application, the lawn should be watered thoroughly to carry the herbicide down into the soil to contact weed seeds.

Before buying and using a herbicide, check the label for the exact rate and specific weeds and grasses to be controlled as well as precautions for use.

People smugglers sneak illegal aliens into country

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The tractor-trailer sped along the moonlit highway carrying its secret load from the Mexican border.

It was dark in the beef trailer. It smelled. A handsome young Mexican-American sat twisted and tucked in a meat rack. It was confusing, he says, to sit for hours unable to see even his nose while the truck rushed on at 85 miles per hour.

Sixty-eight humans were crammed into the same metal box.

They were illegal aliens — the contraband in a people-smuggling operation.

The young man was a U.S. Border Patrol undercover agent working on a 8-year-old government program designed to halt large, conspiracy-related alien smuggling rings.

The agent, who agreed to tell his story with the condition that he not be named, melted into the group of undocumented workers when they gathered at an El Paso drop house.

He sweated with the others waiting in the shack's 8-by-12-foot room. The windows were boarded to prevent detection by agents cruising past in their light green patrol cars.

Smugglers, the people who were arranging the trip from this border city to the interior of the United States, screened the prospective travelers. They collected fares and asked trick questions to weed out agents.

The patrolman passed the tests. After a nine-hour wait, the human cargo boarded the 18-wheeled rig at midnight. There was no food and no restroom.

The truck driver told the aliens to keep quiet and not smoke when the big rig stopped at checkpoints.

The agent described the discomfort of the 10-hour trip to Amarillo, saying, "I was sick to my stomach for about a month afterward."

On this case last spring, the undercover man's colleagues were close. The backup team used sophisticated electronic tracking equipment to follow the rig. The agent said he would have been frightened if he had known that the truck was racing down the highway at nearly 90 mph.

Authorities made five arrests and closed down this smuggling ring when the truck stopped at the Amarillo transfer point.

Had the smugglers not been stopped, the aliens would have been moved to Chicago, Denver, Oklahoma City or Albuquerque, N.M. In this case, the aliens were returned to Mexico and the smugglers were convicted.

People smugglers don't need the hefty bankroll drug smugglers use to get into the business — just enough to buy a tankful of gasoline, according to Raymond E. Reaves, who heads the Border Patrol anti-smuggling unit here.

Reaves, who has been with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service for 24 years, calls the smugglers "greedy and barbaric."

On the long hauls to Chicago, smugglers "might throw a few loaves of bread to the aliens," Reaves says. In one case, he says, two undocumented workers died in the freezing air and fumes in the trunk of a smuggler's car.

"The smugglers could care less about the human suffering that goes on," the agent adds.

The patrol officer says, "Prior to 1977 alien smuggling was not a concern of the government. Consequently, it was running quite rampant."

Reaves was one of four agents who started a program and training school designed to penetrate and infiltrate large, people smuggling conspiracies. Reaves says manpower and equipment have been increased to help fight the smuggling rings, proudly pointing to his unit's new helicopter.

"We're after the big conspirators involved for commercial purposes," he says, "not the guy who's bringing two or three workers or his aunts and cousins across."

Undercover agents, informants, aircraft, cars and electronic equipment are used in the chase.

Prospective smuggling candidates usually start in Mexico's interior and are headed for higher-paying jobs in the United States.

"The word travels on the grapevine through Mexico better than on TV and teletype in the United States," Reaves says.

"They know through this grapevine that in certain hotels in Juarez, Mexico (El Paso's border city) there will be arrangers and transporters called 'Coyotes'."

"We know just where those hotels are and there are a lot of them."

"Some exist only on prospective illegal aliens housed there for a few days waiting for contact who will smuggle them across."

"So, a professional alien smuggler from Denver or Albuquerque or Chicago, who has just been in the racket for a little while, will know right where to go."

Reaves says many conspirators in the United States never have to go near the border, and plenty of the Mexican contacts never see the United States.

Once across the border, the undocumented workers go to the drop house, a cheap motel room or shack. Next, they may be "packed like sardines" into a truck or car, or leave by train or plane.

Smugglers buy tickets and sell them to the aliens for much more than the original cost, according to Reaves. The border patrol maintains a 24-hour watch at El Paso International Airport, about three miles north of the border at Juarez.

Reaves says smugglers charge aliens $250 for highway transportation to Albuquerque, $350 to Denver or Oklahoma City, and $500 to Chicago.

Everyone makes some money on the deal, he says, including the contacts in Juarez, the Coyote who brings them across, the drop house proprietor, the truck driver and the contacts at the destination.

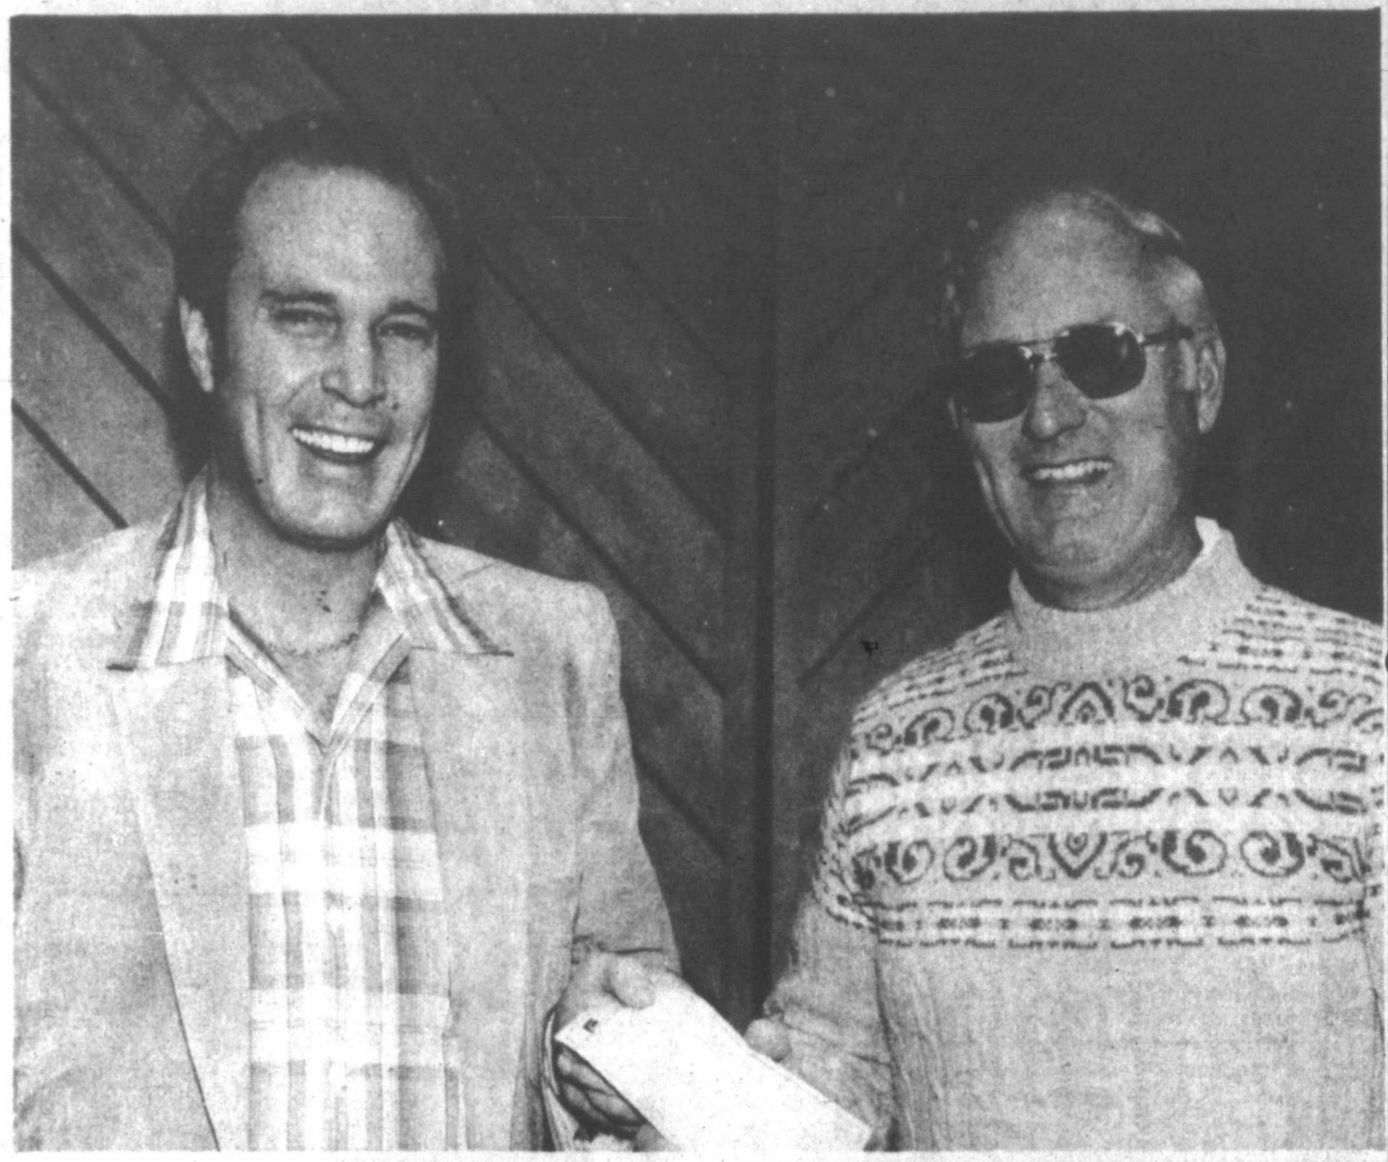

The officer says about 1,000 aliens would have to be moved to reap the same profit gained smuggling a briefcase of heroin.

Most aliens headed for an interior city have jobs or contacts waiting for them.

Choirs in concert Monday night

A special fall concert for all supporters and friends of the Pampa High School Choral Department is scheduled for Monday night in the Middle School Auditorium. Performances by the Freshman Chorus, Treble Choir, and the "Golden Voices" of the Concert Choir will highlight the evening of music.

Musical selections will include a hodge-podge of melodies from popular to religious. The freshmen will perform renditions of "Anytime of the Year," "Rollin'," "I Know Where I'm Goin'," "O Ochi Manza Mia," and a spiritual entitled "Ride On Moses."

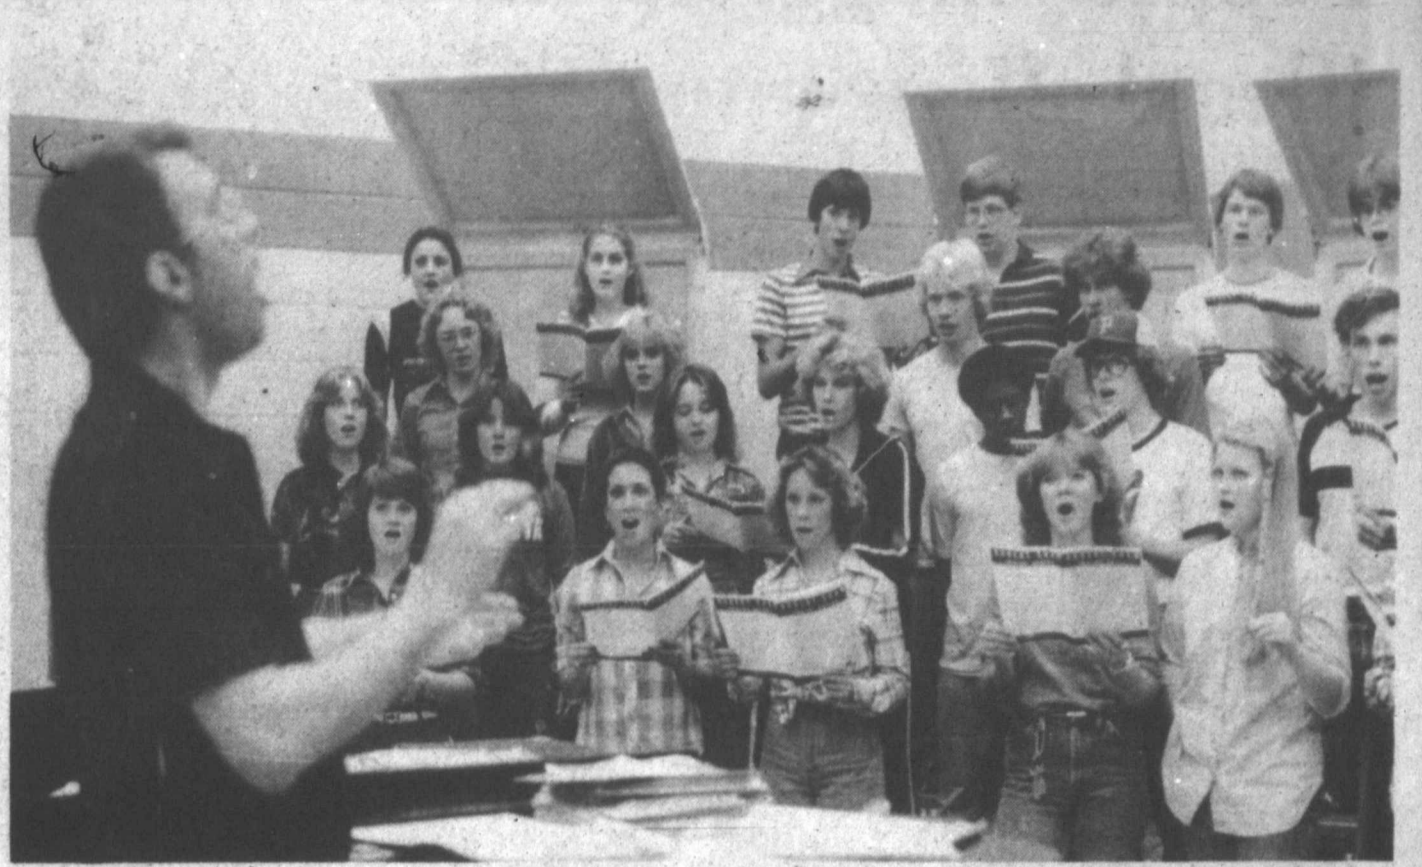

After the freshmen conclude the Treble Choir will do two numbers from the hit Broadway musical, "Annie," "Tomorrow" and "Maybe," plus a Johannes Brahms selection entitled "As the Clouds with Longing Wander."

The Concert Choir will perform a variety of music ranging from "Neighbors' Chorus," a comic operetta piece to Joseph Haydn's "Awake the Harp." As a special treat, the Concert Choir will present selections from their upcoming musical, Rogers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma," to be presented Nov. 19th and 20th at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

"I feel the musical is going well," said John Woickowski, choir director. "We've always been told that we do an extremely professional job," Woickowski reflected, noting that this is the third time he has directed the show.

Pistols, wooden butter churns, and chaps are needed for the production. If anyone would like to loan or donate any of these goods to the choir, please call the choir room at 669-2681.

The Monday-night concert is free of charge and will begin at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited.

JOHN WOICKOWSKI directs the "Golden Voices" of the Pampa Concert Choir in preparation for Monday night's concert at the Middle School Auditorium. Some songs from the choir's upcoming presentation of "Oklahoma" will be included in the program.

Educators see trouble in the future

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Educators have portrayed the 1980s as possibly a troubled decade for education, with "gifted" individuals shying away from teaching careers and some small colleges closing.

Superintendent Billy Reagan of the Houston Independent School District said Thursday the time and energy devoted to urban education "will make us or break us in the years ahead."

"The whole future of our society is tied to education," said Reagan. "If we do not deal with the problems of urban education, I see no great promise for the year 1990 or the year 1995 or the year 2000."

Reagan, Dean Lorrin Kenemer of the College of Education at the University of Texas; and Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, state higher education commissioner, testified before the House Select Committee on Urban Issues.

"The 1980s loom as a critical period for public education," said Rep. Bill Caraway, committee chairman.

Caraway, D-Houston, said his committee will focus on education, natural resources and local government. The House Committee on Urban Needs will concentrate on crime, health care, energy and transportation.

"The teacher shortage is not coming — it is here," said Reagan. He said the Houston ISD, which is the most populous in Texas, has more than 200 teacher vacancies. More than 5,000 of the district's 201,960 students have "no certified math or science teacher at a time when we are emphasizing those subjects," Reagan said.

"Our crisis is becoming acute," he said.

He said traditionally 80 percent of the teaching profession has been made up of women, but many "gifted" women are "no longer choosing education" as a career.

What Reagan called "devastating" statistics showed only 5.3 percent of 3,541 Houston high school seniors last year said they wanted to teach. The scholastic aptitude test scores of the future teachers "were among the lowest," he said.

Ashworth said superintendents have told him "many teachers... are not prepared to teach in the inner cities, and the classroom experience drives them out after a year or less because they find it so traumatic."

Kenemer predicted as a result of rising costs "many families will feel they are being priced out of college."

A survey of 11 Texas colleges showed a 5.3 percent drop in the number of education degrees awarded in 1977 and 7.8 percent decline in 1978, with the University of Houston posting decreases of 27.6 percent and 39.7 percent.

"As bad as the market was in the 1970s" for those with doctorate degrees seeking teaching jobs, said Kenemer, "the worst may be yet to come."

"Non-tenured faculty members in the 1980s face extreme tension and pressure," Kenemer said.

He said "some consider it quite possible" that 200-300 small colleges may close in the 1980s.

"The next decade will be difficult for anyone whose career is entwined with higher education," he said.

My Prerogative

By DEBBIE DUKE

Usually, my column is "high-school oriented." However, this week, I want to write about something that has been bothering me for the past couple of years — and especially this year.

Recently something caught my eye as I was shopping in our Pampa stores. Bright red and green decorations and snow-covered artificial Christmas trees stared at me from every store I entered. Advertisements and other goodies were bathed in the essence of December 25th. WHY???

It's November, not December. When I noticed the Christmas spirit, it wasn't even Halloween yet. Why do all of the merchants rush Christmas? I used to look forward to December when all the decorations would be out, but now I can't even enjoy the goblins and spooks of Halloween or the turkeys at Thanksgiving because everything is overshadowed by the "commercial" Christmas tree.

What is bad is the fact that the main spirit of Christmas isn't even the cause of the December madness. It's totally commercialized. I'm not saying this is true of only Pampa merchants because I've seen it in many cities lately. All the stores are out to make money on the holiday, and worse yet, beginning it early.

—DD—

On behalf of the Pampa High School Choral Department, I want to invite everyone out to hear their fall concert tomorrow night. I can assure everyone it will be an enjoyable concert and those who attend will get a "sneak preview" of "Oklahoma."

—DD—

Congratulations to the Harvesters on their win of KPUR "Team of the Week." That's an honor, considering that we're the only out of town school who has won it so far.

—DD—

THE THOUGHT FOR TODAY: Friendship is like a delicate crystal glass. It holds so much yet is so easily broken — shattered — forever.

HARVESTER END Steve McDougall reaches over his shoulder to grab a conversion pass from quarterback Sam Edwards in fourth-quarter action of the Pampa-Plainview game Friday night. Despite a fourth-quarter rally, Pampa was edged by Plainview, 25-23. (Photo by Larry Cross)

Rally comes too late Pampa falls, 25-23

Danny Palmer may have had an inkling of disaster before sending his Pampa Harvesters into battle against Plainview Friday night.

"It's been a hard year for Plainview, but they're a big, physical team and they may take their frustrations out on us," Palmer said Friday morning. "Besides this is their homecoming and they should be fired up."

Plainview did vent its frustrations out on Pampa, for three quarters anyway, but it was enough to eke out a 25-23 win in a Class AAAA non-district contest.

Pampa dropped its overall record to 5-3, but kept its district mark intact at 2-0. The Bulldogs leveled their record at 4-4.

An early indication of just how fired up Plainview was came on the opening kickoff when Pat Brown sped 90 yards for a TD. Stan Sherwood booted the extra point to make it 7-0.

Pampa bounced right back though, and drove 64 yards to score on a 19-yard option keeper by quarterback Greg Quarles. Billy Grimes tied things at 7-7, but Plainview jumped back in control of the game in the second quarter with a solid running and passing attack while costly mistakes hampered the Harvesters offense.

The Bulldogs turned a couple of Pampa mistakes into two quick touchdowns just before halftime for a 19-7 advantage.

With 4:15 to go in the second quarter, Plainview moved deep into Pampa territory on a face-mask penalty and scored two plays later on a two-yard blast by Ervin Davis.

Plainview added another score 0:25 before intermission after Michael Mosley picked off a Quarles aerial to put the Bulldogs in business on their own 35. Plainview signal-caller Jeff Gould hooked up with D.C. Coleman on a 43-yard pass to the Pampa seven, and four plays later Davis went over from the one.

Plainview chalked up one more tally by taking the opening kickoff of the third quarter and marching 77 yards to score on Gould's 27-yard pass to Davis. The fourth quarter belonged to Pampa, but the rally was too little, too late.

The Harvesters took a Bulldog punt at the Plainview 49 and marched 51 yards with Doug Kennedy crashing over from one yard out. Reserve quarterback Sam Edwards hit Steve McDougall for the conversion to pull the Harvesters within 10, at 25-15 with 5:27 to go.

An outstanding grab by Keenan Henderson, coupled with a 15-yard pass interference call, placed Pampa at the Bulldog seven. It appeared the Pampa scoring drive might stall on the Plainview 33 when Edwards was sacked for a one-yard loss, but he came back and fired a 21-yard pass to Henderson, who bounced off two defenders to make the catch.

The Bulldogs attempted to keep the ball on the ground to run out the time, but Bobby Dorsey fell on an Oscar Mosley fumble at the Plainview 18. On the next play, Kennedy bucked over right guard to score. Edwards found McDougall again for the conversion to melt Plainview's lead to two points, 25-23.

With only 34 seconds showing on the clock, Pampa tried to regain the ball on an on-side kick, but Grimes' line drive was smothered by Plainview's Kevin Igo on the Bulldog 48.

Kennedy led Pampa ballcarriers with 99 yards on the ground while Brown paced the winners with 90 yards on 19 carries.

Edwards, who replaced Quarles in the last period, connected on six of eight passes for 89 yards.

Pampa returns to District 3-AAAA action this week, hosting Palo Duro Friday night.

Houston stops TCU

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fourth-ranked Houston exploded behind the passing of Delrick Brown and the running of Terald Clark for two fourth-quarter touchdowns and a 21-10 victory over stubborn Texas Christian Saturday afternoon.

The victory kept the Cougars unbeaten, raising their record to 8-0 for the year and 5-0 in the Southwest Conference. TCU fell to 2-6 and 1-4.

Clark got over 100 yards for the third time this season, picking up 103 yards in 16 carries, and scored Houston's first two touchdowns on runs of 11 and 14 yards.

Leading only 7-3 at intermission, Brown hit eight straight passes in the second half, including a 7-yard touchdown shot to flanker Leon Felder with 8:59 remaining for Houston's third score.

Quarterback Kevin Haney hit flanker Stanley Washington on a 34-yard pass with 1:34 left in the game for TCU's only touchdown.

Greg Porter kicked a 33-yard field goal for the Horned Frogs in the second quarter.

Brown, stifled through the first half by a stingy TDU defense, directed to the Cougars on a 7-play, 65-yard drive early in the fourth quarter. He hit Clark on a 29-yard pass down the sidelines to the TCU 30 as the third quarter ended.

It was Houston's first game of the year in which it committed no turnovers.

Canadian blasts Spearman

CANADIAN-Canadian erupted for 532 yards total offense in blasting Spearman, 46-0. Friday night to improve its record to 6-1-1 for the season.

Craig Young, who scored three touchdowns, one on a crowd-pleasing 83-yard pass from quarterback Bear Schafer, led a balanced rushing attack with 131 yards. Ray Lee Price added 93 yards on eight attempts.

Schafer displayed pinpoint passing accuracy, hitting 7 of 10 passes for 253 yards.

Price scored the game's first TD on a 20-yard sprint, then Doug Wheeler blocked a punt on the Spearman five that was recovered in the end zone by Donnie Rex.

Canadian's final scores came in the fourth quarter on a 7-yard run by Mike Thompson and an 18-yard jaunt by Terrel Hardin. Meanwhile, the Wildcat defense, led by guard Ronnie Hill, Wheeler, Schafer, and Young, held the visitors to 162 yards total offense.

Canadian is now 2-1 in District 1-AA and a victory at Dalhart Friday night would give the Wildcats an excellent chance at the playoffs.

Spearman is still looking for its first win after eight outings. The Wildcats are coached by Charles Russell.

Irish blanks Navy

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Vagas Ferguson smashed across from the 3-yard line in the fourth quarter Saturday and led 13th-ranked Notre Dame to a 14-0 victory over Navy.

Ferguson, Notre Dame's all-time rushing leader, gained 155 yards in 34 carries and posted his 11th career 100-yard game as the Irish posted its sixth victory against two losses.

The defeat was the second straight for the injury-riddled Middies and dropped them to 6-2 for the season.

Notre Dame took the opening kickoff and drove 73 yards in 16 plays with quarterback Rusty Lisch sneaking over for the touchdown. The Irish didn't score again until Ferguson's touchdown midway in the final period following a fumble by Eddie Meyers which was recovered by Tom Gibbons.

John Hankerd made the hit on Meyers and Gibbons recovered on the Navy 30. Ferguson then carried six straight times and gained all 30 yards in the scoring drive.

Sooners romp

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Billy Sims scored four touchdowns but was held to 69 yards rushing as the seventh-ranked Oklahoma Sooners registered a lopsided 38-7 Big Eight Conference football win over Oklahoma State here Saturday.

Linebacker George Cumby was tough on the Cowboys' two quarterbacks, intercepting a pass from starter John Doerner and returning it 37 yards and then picking off a Harold Bailey toss and returning it seven.

The Sooners' offensive charge was led by Heisman Trophy winner Sims, who scored four times and crossed the goal line two other times to no avail because of penalties. Sims' play was erratic after last week's 202-yard outburst over Iowa State, however, as he picked up only 69 yards. He left the game in the fourth quarter with a minor injury.

Sims began the scoring in the opening minutes with a 4-yard plunge, followed by a dive from the one. The first-quarter effort also included a 72-yard scoring pass play.

Texas Tech

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Reserve freshman quarterback Rick McIvor's first collegiate touchdown pass and sophomore Brad Beck's 11-yard, fourth-quarter touchdown run carried hard-pressed, No. 8 ranked Texas to a 14-6 Southwest Conference victory Saturday over the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Texas is now 6-1 overall and 3-1 in the SWC race with a key game coming up next week against Houston. Tech is 3-4-1 and 2-3 in league play.

The 14-point favorite Longhorns used three different quarterbacks trying to get their offense on track and it was McIvor, a heavily recruited blue chip from Fort Stockton who had only thrown one pass all year, who moved them.

With Tech ahead 3-0 on Bill Adams 35-yard first-quarter field goal, McIvor came into the game after Donnie Little and Herkie Walls failed to move the team, and stunned the Red Raiders with his rifle passing arm.

McIvor whipped a 51-yard pass to Les Koenning to the Red Raider nine.

Three plays later after losing yardage, McIvor drilled an 11-yard scoring pass to Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones.

McIvor took the Longhorns 96 yards in 13 plays and Tech went to the dressing room at halftime trailing 7-3.

The rugged Red Raider defense held Texas to only 20 yards in the third quarter and Adam's 45-yard field goal pulled them to a 7-6 deficit.

Ninth grade edged

DUMAS - Pampa ninth graders were nipped by Dumas, 24-22, Thursday night in freshmen football action.

Pampa led 22-16 for three quarters, but Dumas rallied in the final stanza to score the winning TD.

Bill Carter scored twice for Pampa and Jesus Santaruz added the other score on a 50-yard run.

Cody Allison kicked two extra points and passed to Randy Skaggs for a two-point conversion.

Darryl Caldwell and Devin Moore played outstanding defense, according to Pampa coach Dickie Crockett.

Pampa gained revenge in the junior varsity contest when Darren Rice caught a 40-yard touchdown pass from Don Willis in the first quarter for a 6-0 win.

The only other offensive spark came from Mark Lamb, who broke loose on two long runs. Pampa's defense never allowed Dumas good field position.

Pampa travels to Borger for a 4:30 p.m. game Thursday night.

Jvs defeat Dumas

Mark Kotara scored two touchdowns as Pampa defeated Dumas, 15-6, Thursday night in a junior varsity game at Dumas.

Kotara scored on runs of 12 and 65 yards. The Shockers pulled off some unplanned razzle-dazzle for the last conversion when holder Derrick Bingham fumbled the center snap and kicker James Borchardt picked the ball up and threw to Bingham for two points.

Defensive standouts were Harold Landers, Robbie Leffel, John Kadingo, and Borchardt.

The Shockers, 5-3, host Caprock JVs at 7 p.m. Thursday night.

McLean 6, Lefors 0

McLEAN - Lefors fell to McLean, 6-0, Thursday in the final junior high game of the season.

The only score came in the opening quarter when McLean ran back a punt 60 yards. Then it was a hard-hitting defensive struggle the rest of the way.

Lefors defense, led by Ricky Withers, held the hosts to only 47 yards rushing, but Lefors could pick up only 49 yards on the ground. Withers had 12 tackles while Tracy Jennings had 11, Chris McMinn and John Winegeart, 9 each. McMinn also blocked two punts.

"I credit the entire defense with lots of good hitting," Lefors coach Don Parsons said. "All of them had three or four tackles apiece."

Shepard injured

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Guard Dave Shepard has broken a bone in his foot and will be lost to the University of Texas basketball team for four to six weeks — including the first few games of the regular season.

Shepard, a 6-foot-4 junior from Los Angeles, is competing for a starting berth.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Coach Tom Wilson of Texas A&M said Saturday, after quarterback Mike Mosley had run and passed for 230 yards, that Mosley is showing All-Southwest Conference skills.

Mosley, a 191-pound junior who runs hurdles in track, ran for two touchdowns and threw for another as A&M walloped Southern Methodist 47-14 in a regionally-televised game.

"Mike Mosley was outstanding," said Wilson, who set SWC records for passing and total offense at Texas Tech in the mid-1960s.

Asked if Mosley should be considered for All-SWC, Wilson replied, "Very definitely. I have not seen anyone play any better than Mike Mosley."

A&M won decisively, even though star tailback Curtis Dickey suffered a back bruise and missed three quarters. Wilson said Dickey could have returned to the game but would have been in pain. Dickey's sub, freshman Johnny Hector, scampered for 64 yards and touchdowns of nine and two yards on 11 carries.

HOUSTON (AP) — Arkansas quarterback Kevin Scanlon ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more, and Ish Ordonez started another field goal string with boots of 50 and 32 yards Saturday as the 9th-ranked Razorbacks defeated Rice 34-7 in Southwest Conference football.

Arkansas, rebounding from a narrow 13-10 loss to 4th-ranked Houston last week, took a 14-0 lead on its first two possessions of the game with Scanlon running 8 and 1 yard for the touchdowns.

Ordonez, who had his NCAA-record of 16 consecutive field goals snapped last week against UH, missed his first two attempts of the game but converted his next two kicks in the third quarter. The 50-yarder was the longest of Ordonez' career.

Rice, the only remaining team without a SWC victory at 0-6, rallied briefly behind running back Earl Cooper in the second quarter and trailed 14-7 at halftime. Quarterback Randy Hertel hit Cooper over the middle on a 39-yard pass-run play for a touchdown in the second quarter.

After Ordonez ended Arkansas' first two drives of the third quarter with field goals,

Cowboys may not be giant-killers this season

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It used to be that the only thing that would keep the Dallas Cowboys awake while watching films of the New York Giants was their raucous laughter.

That's all changed now. New York, riding a four-game winning streak that has inched them back towards playoff contention, is no longer a joke. The laughs have been on Tampa Bay, San Francisco, Kansas City and Los Angeles the last four weeks. The Giants, 4-5, host the 7-2 Cowboys Sunday in their biggest game in seven years. It was seven years ago that the Giants last had a winning record.

The Cowboys have beat the Giants in their last nine meetings and quarterback Roger Staubach has won 14 of his last 15 meetings with New York. Dallas, however, is coming off a disappointing 14-3, to Pittsburgh.

"The Giants have done a tremendous job, it's good to see since they're my old team," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "They're at a high spirit level and playing with a lot of emotion. They're at the point where they think they can do anything."

Landry said he's been particularly impressed with the Giants rookie whiz, quarterback Phil Simms, who is ranked fourth in the conference in passing. Simms' first start came against Tampa Bay, which launched the Giants on their current streak. The Giants also started playing a 3-4 defense in that game and have stuck with it.

"Simms is an unusual rookie, he has a great touch with the ball and has a knack for seeing things," Landry said. "Simms has the making of a Bradshaw-type quarterback. He's big and strong and can run. I hope he progresses to that point one day."

Simms has completed 52 of 111 passes for 776 yards with six touchdowns and four interceptions. Just as important, he has earned the respect of his teammates and has taken command of the offense.

Giants Coach Ray Perkins likes to compare Simms to New England's Steve Grogan, who he got to know very well as the Patriots offensive coordinator.

"I think a lot of Grogan, but there's no comparison between the two in their first year," Perkins said. "I think Simms is far ahead."

Staubach, meanwhile, suffered a slight concussion to go along with a sore knee against the Steelers. Landry said the 11-year veteran will start against the Giants.

"This will in every way have to be our best effort," Perkins said. "I don't believe in turning points in games, but I think there can be turning points in a season. Our turning point was the first win. We'd gone five weeks and hadn't won anything."

"I admit, I thought the players were going to look at me like I was crazy," he said. "I thought they were going to say, 'When's it going to happen coach?' I knew it would, but I was hoping not too late."

A diamond is forever.

Diamonds are the hardest substances known to man. Thousands of diamonds have weathered centuries without damage. Diamonds are of crystal construction and as such have a cleavage plane (which is how diamonds are cut originally).

It is possible for a diamond to be chipped or broken if it is struck at a particular angle and cannot be guaranteed against such happening. It is not a matter of quality but rather a matter of care. We advise you to treat your diamond gently, remove it when working and clean it often. That way it will last you a lifetime.

Jewelcrest Diamonds have built one of the finest reputations of quality and integrity. An integrity we maintain with the following policy on guarantee of value. ### PAMPA MALL 2545 PERRYTON PARKWAY

Pumpkins linger on

The "trick and treaters" are gone but the pumpkins linger on.
Frost on your pumpkin may look good, however that frost can really damage the orange beauties.
Pumpkins and winter squash are usually killed by just a few hours' exposure to temperatures below 32 degrees Fahrenheit.
Pumpkin seller, Bob Weldon of Pampa sold the halloween vegetable on Hobart St. this year, as he has for many years, 25 to be exact.
His pumpkins were raised on 174 acres near Binger, Oklahoma, he buys from the farmer then hauls, and sells the produce himself.
There were one pound to one hundred pound pumpkins in his stand, and all but three sold. "Now days people buy mainly for decoration and centerpiece," Bob Weldon said, but there are those few left who remember how, and still do their own canning.
From the time a pumpkin is picked, if the skin is cured right, the vegetable can last all winter.

Dedication set for depot plaque

MIAMI - Dedication ceremonies for the old Santa Fe Railroad Depot now located at the Miami Museum will be held this afternoon at 2:30 p.m.
Master of Ceremonies for the dedication will be Museum commissioner, Charles Bailey. The honorable Granger McIlhenny, 31st District Judge, will give the address. The historical marker will be unveiled by G. T. Jackson, one of Miami's oldest citizens.
The Southern Kansas Railway Company of Texas railroad was first established in 1879 as a main line from Fort Elliott to Las Vegas, N. M.
Located on North Main and Birge streets, the original depot was built in 1888 much larger than it is today.
Used as a military station railroad for Fort Elliott, the line was eventually purchased in 1899 by the Santa Fe Railroad.
The depot now being dedicated was reduced to its present size in 1942. It was moved to the corner of Commercial and Mobeetie streets of Miami where it now stands.
The Miami Museum will open today at 1:00 and will remain open until 5:00 p.m.

Tourism development has potential

Wildlife, fisheries, recreation and tourism are all resources of Texas with great potential for further expansion.
Research to aid faster development of these areas is supported by the Texas Agriculture Experiment Station with results frequently reported by TAES and other publications.
An example is a new approach to the assessment of tourism in the State. Scientists say the current hit-or-miss method can be vastly improved with great benefit to both business and public agencies.
Locations with the greatest potential for success should be studied and mapped with several land resource factors considered.
These include: water and aquatic life, vegetative cover and wildlife, topography and soils, climate, history and ethnicity, existing attractions and institutions, service centers and transportation.
Using computer mapping techniques, scientists developed a test region of Texas from the Gulf Coast at Port Lavaca to Sam Sava in Central Texas.
This approach and the results are described in detail in the publication MP-1416. Source: Clare A. Gunn, College Station, Tel. 713-845-5411.

DPS director says wiretaps needed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - James Adams, the former FBI official picked to head the Texas Department of Public Safety, says the state police agency needs wiretaps to trap big time drug dealers.
"I anticipate we're talking about 10-15 wiretaps a year in Texas," Adams said. "Why should law enforcement people in Texas be denied a tool that has been constitutionally upheld?"
Gov. Bill Clements bought Adams home to Texas in April to head the governor's criminal justice division. Clements endorsed Adams' candidacy as a replacement for DPS director Col. William Speir, who is retiring Dec. 31 after 1 year as director.
Clements says he will ask legislators at a special session next year to pass a law authorizing wiretapping and imposing limitations on its use.
Adams said "top echelon" drug dealers manage to stay clear of marcoetics trafficking. Listening to their phones, Adams said, is the only way to catch them.
"But obviously this is not going to end drugs in Texas," he said. "The drug problem is almost bigger than the world."
The former FBI No. 2 man said he knows the man he beat out for the Texas Department of Public Safety director's post was the favorite of DPS personnel.

Active rescue operations end

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - The Coast Guard ceased active sea and air rescue operations Saturday for 27 crewmen missing from the tanker Burmah Agate, still burning and pouring oil into the water near the entrance to the Galveston Ship Channel.
The Burmah Agate, a 772-foot Liberian tanker carrying 400,000 barrels of light crude oil, and another Liberian vessel, the freighter Mimosa, collided in the pre-dawn hours Thursday near this Gulf Coast shipping port.
While hope of finding any of the 27 missing crewmen alive dwindled, the Coast Guard and ship owners increased their efforts to extinguish the fire still burning about the tanker and to contain the oil slick.
The slick remained about six miles offshore and stretched almost 10 miles long early Saturday. Coast Guard Chief Richard Griggs said the slick posed no immediate threat to the Texas Coast.

All 26 crewmen aboard the Mimosa were rescued but the bodies of four tanker crewmen have been recovered. Four others survived the fiery collision and fire and 27 remained missing despite intensive search operations over a 36-hour period.
"We will continue to have overflights of the ships and along the length of the oil spill and we will be looking for possible survivors at those times," said Coast Guard Chief Richard Griggs. "But we are no longer plotting an organized search operation."
Meanwhile, the Coast Guard began deploying its pollution-fighting equipment to start cleanup operations.
Griggs said the heaviest concentration of oil trailed two to three miles behind the disabled tanker and a thin sheen of oil extended another five to six miles.

Griggs said on Friday the Coast Guard would use its equipment only if the owners of the ships involved "declined to take responsibility for cleanup or if they didn't do it quickly."
"We are not getting involved because we don't think the owners aren't taking appropriate action," Griggs said Saturday. "Our only concern is that no other equipment is presently on scene and we feel it necessary to go ahead and start cleaning up."
"There are all kinds of logistics problems in getting equipment here so until the owners' equipment arrives, we will go ahead with the cleanup."
Members of the Coast Guard's Pollution Strike Team from Bay St. Louis, Miss., was to concentrate first on the two to three mile area where the oil was heaviest and posed the most serious threat to the Texas coast.

The pungent-smelling fingers of lighter oil streaming farther out from the vessel pose less of a threat, Griggs said.
"You'd have some beach contamination, if it got the shore," Griggs said. "But it is so thin and tends to break up and evaporate, that most of it likely wouldn't make it to the beach."
Coast Guard Lt. Gabriel Kinney said owners of the freighter planned to board the vessel, still at anchor about two miles away from the tanker, on Saturday to see if the ship could be moved.
Griggs said two representatives of the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration scientists also were here to assist in monitoring the spill.
Griggs said NOAA scientists Bob Pavia and Nancy Maynard would work with Port of Galveston Capt. Robert Ingraham.

A TUGBOAT pours streams of water on the still-burning tanker Burma Agate Saturday about four miles from the Galveston Bay entrance. The tanker and the freighter Mimosa collided early Thursday morning with both ships burning. Four persons were killed in the collision and 27 persons are still missing. (AP Wirephoto)

Where have our farm lands gone?

Where have all the farm lands gone?
How have we let them get away?
The National Agricultural Lands Study has something to tell us: ten years from now, Americans could be as concerned over the loss of the nation's prime and important farm lands as they are today over shortages of oil and gasoline.
Every day in the United States, four square miles of our nation's prime farm lands are shifted to uses other than agriculture. The thief is urban sprawl.
Today there are highways and houses, airports and shopping centers on land that once produced an abundance of grain and timber, forage, vegetables and fruits. There are motels and reservoirs, industrial parks and power plants on land where farmers once grazed their cattle and harvested cotton and flax.
American agriculture is hailed as the most productive in the world. In 1978, the value of our agriculture exports exceeded 27 billion dollars. American farm products feed our own population, they mean the difference between life and death to millions of less fortunate people whose lives are marred by chronic hunger, and they are essential to a favorable balance of trade.

But as populations expand and the need for food increases at home and abroad, one wonders: What does the continuing loss of our best farm lands mean for the future? How long will it be before the farm land loss severely cripples farm land production?
As prime farm land disappears food is not only lost. The quality of our lives is diminished. There are garish signs and glaring storefronts where leaves once caught the rain and filtered the sunlight. There is asphalt where fields and woods once beckoned and refreshed the spirit.
There is the loss, also, of farm family life, and the values that spring from living close to the land.
Clearly, then the farm land loss demands our immediate attention.
As this century nears its end, as demands for food and competition for land accelerate, the most important question to face our nation may well be: How can we direct urban development to less productive areas, and thereby protect our irreplaceable prime farm land acres from further encroachment?

Judge remembers Miami in days of yesteryear

He remembers Miami, Texas with livery stables, wind mills and very few houses. He had looked forward to ranching and farming in the area, however life has a way of changing your mind, said Judge Newton Cox of Miami.
Born 1915, and raised in the Miami area, Newton Cox spent two and a half years in the Air Force, where he taught the Morse Code system to many of the military personnel.
In 1945 he returned to Miami and started a service station business. 1961 found him on the County Commission where he served for ten years. That experience has led Judge Cox to serving his third term in the Miami court.
With two years more to serve he still finds the work challenging, however a decision will have to be made before running again.
"The paper work has increased 300 percent and there are 300 miles of dirt roads to be responsible for," said Judge Cox.

We were put here to help our fellow man," added the Judge, and he has a special way to carry this philosophy through.
Along with Judges from 25 local areas, the Panhandle Alcoholics Recovery Center was started.
It is located in Amarillo, using the former Air Base facilities, with room to house approximately 30 men and 20 women.
Judge Cox stated that the program can be voluntary and payment is expected "if they are able, if not the services are free."
People often stop back in to see the Judge, admitting that you have to help yourself, but extremely grateful for the Panhandle Alcoholics Recovery Program.
Judge Newton finds his court calendar quiet this week, but Nov. 1, brings a lady Assistant District Attorney to Miami, and that will be "just fine" with the Judge.

Fresh vegetables available through winter months

Home gardeners who find themselves with fresh vegetables on their hands can keep certain types of those vegetables fresh right through winter.
"Many people have an abundant harvest from their home gardens, which can be a valuable food source throughout the winter if they are stored properly now," says County Extension Agent, Joe VandZant.
Fresh vegetables are a valuable source of vitamins, minerals, and food enjoyment. They're expensive, and their cost will probably go higher during the winter.
The objective in storing vegetables is to maintain the highest possible food value and to maintain eating quality by slowing the life processes of the vegetable to as low a point as possible. This is accomplished by careful curing and then keeping vegetables at the proper temperature and relative humidity.
"Winter squash and pumpkins will last in good condition for several months if the skin is hardened by exposure to the sun and dry air for about a week to 10 days after the vines are killed," he said. "Then the squash should be stored on benches or racks in the dark where cool, dry air can circulate freely around them."

"Optimum conditions for squash storage are 55 to 60 degrees Fahrenheit and 70 to 75 percent relative humidity. If the stem of the fruit has been cracked at its attachment to the fruit, it should be completely removed to prevent rot at this point."
"In West Texas, root crops such as carrots, parsnips, beets, radishes, rutabagas, and turnips can be stored right in the garden soil," he said. "Simply draw the soil up around the base of the petioles to cover the shoulder of the root. A light mulch of straw or dry grass clippings applied to a depth of two or three inches will keep the soil firm drying around the roots and will prevent the crowns from freezing. These root crops can then be dug and brought to the house as they are needed."
VandZant said that Irish potatoes will keep for five to six months when placed in 38 to 40 degree storage at 90 to 95 percent humidity. Tubers do not need to be cleaned. Merely remove the excess soil before storing them.
Frost hardy vegetables such as collards, buttercrunch lettuce, Brussels sprouts, mustard, endive, and parsley can be left in the garden until very cold weather. Even after the night temperatures drop below 25 degrees these crops can be protected from harm by covering with a tarpaulin, sheet, or plastic cover. The cover must be removed during the day to prevent overheating of these plants.

Sweet potatoes can be enjoyed throughout the winter, but they are a special case when it comes to handling and storage. The Extension agent explained that immediately after harvest the sweet potato must be cured. The curing process simply allows a thick secondary skin known as periderm to form beneath the thin, outer skin.
The most rapid curing takes place at 85 degrees and 85 percent humidity. This curing process should continue for about a week. The curing process is completed when the skin no longer slips under finger pressure to expose the wet raw interior of the potato.
After the curing period is finished the sweet potato should be stored at 60 degrees Fahrenheit with a relative humidity of 75 to 80 percent.
There is danger in allowing the sweet potato to stay in the soil during the fall.
When the soil temperature drops below 55 degrees, the sweet potato roots will be chilled and the surface skin will begin to break down and become more susceptible to rot.

DEAR ABBY: About four months ago I met a very pretty Christian girl. She's 26 and claims to be a virgin. I am 32, and divorced. (No children.)

I told this lovely girl all about myself, explaining to her that I had accepted Jesus Christ as my personal savior two years ago, but before then I could have said with the Apostle Paul that I was the "Chief Sinner."

I asked her to marry me; she said she would think it over. The next day she handed me a piece of paper that looked like an application for a job with the CIA! She asked me to fill it out right then and there. There were questions like, "Where have you been employed for the past 10 years? Have you ever been fired? If so, state reasons. Where did you obtain your divorce? Have you ever had any communicable diseases? Do you have a police record? List your assets. Liabilities. Give three character references."

I felt like telling her to take her questionnaire and get lost, but I really wanted to marry her, so I filled it out. What is your opinion of this girl? Do you think she'd make a good wife?

Electric street lights patented 100 years ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — Electric street lighting celebrated its 100th anniversary this year.

On Sept. 2, 1879, Charles F. Brush of Cleveland was granted a patent for arc lamps that could be used for street lights. Brush, who became known as the "father of electric street lighting," according to IPO Inc., a non-profit, public, educational group dedicated to preserving the patent system, successfully demonstrated his invention in Cleveland with the result that the city became the first municipality to use arc lighting for thoroughfares. His system soon spread around the world.

Brush was awarded more than 50 patents, most of them in the electrical field.

DEAR NEEDS: She's gutsy, realistic, careful and thorough. And one thing is certain, she's taking no chances. Your confession of having been the "Chief Sinner" no doubt prompted the inquisition. She may make a good wife, but I think she'd make a better probation officer.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and have a problem I can't solve. I asked my mother and she said to ask you.

About three months ago my best girlfriend (I'll call her Jill) introduced me to her steady, Scott. He goes to a different school. I liked him, but considered him unavailable, so I did nothing to encourage him. Scott started calling me. Since then we've been seeing each other. He never told Jill that he was seeing me, but Jill started telling me that she is worried about losing Scott because he hasn't been calling her lately. Naturally, I didn't think it was my place to tell Jill why.

I asked Scott to tell Jill that he's been seeing me, but he says he just can't hurt her that way. I don't feel guilty because I didn't try to get him away from Jill.

I don't want to lose Jill's friendship since we've been close friends for years. But I really like Scott and don't want to lose him, either. What should I do?

LITTLE ME IN NEWARK

DEAR ME: Make up your mind whether you want Jill's friendship or Scott, because as I size it up, you can't keep both. Since you knew Scott was Jill's steady, you should have refused to date him until he leveled with Jill. As for his reluctance to "hurt" Jill by telling her the truth—horseradish! He'll hurt her more by NOT telling her. And you'll have been a party to it.

FATHER JAMES GURZYNSKI

Father Gurzynski in papal audience with Polish pope

By Sheila Eccles
Of The Pampa News

Father James Gurzynski, the Polish pastor of the Sacred Heart Church in White Deer, recently returned from a pilgrimage to Rome, where he had an audience with the Polish Pope.

This certainly creates a special bond between the pastor, his predominately Polish congregation and the Catholic leader. The pilgrimage group attended the Papal Audience of Pope John Paul II, which was his last appearance before leaving for his American tour. Through a long time friend, Cardinal Rubin, Father Gurzynski was able to meet with the pope and extend to him the greetings of the Diocese of Amarillo.

The popularity of the pope has caused the Audiences to be held in St. Peter's Square where 80,000 were accommodated comfortably. "It was thrilling to see the Pontiff," said Father Gurzynski.

Pope John II spoke to the group on one of his favorite subjects, the dignity of the Christian marriage. Trying to keep families together is a simple, but powerful message, he said.

This visit to Rome was one of several for Father Gurzynski, who first went there as a young seminarian. A native of Toledo, Ohio, he has been in the Amarillo district since 1963.

He came to this area by choice, wanting a small rural parish, and since 1963 White Deer has felt like home, he said, partly because there are 180 parishioners and about one-half of those are of Polish descent.

The people of the White Deer parish had been without a pastor for at least a year, he said, realizing an opportunity to bring the parish to terms with new Vatican decrees.

Among Father Gurzynski's top priorities is religious education for children and adults. Weekly participation for pre-schoolers to teens has been at 90 percent.

He also is working with the liturgical growth of the parish, getting more active participation in the Mass and the sacraments. Sacred Heart now holds its baptismal services at Sunday Mass, to introduce new members to the congregation.

Winterize your swimming pool now to ensure fun for next summer

Swimming pools, often one of the consumer's most expensive investments, are not always properly "winterized;" this can often lead to costly cold-weather damage.

To help protect swimming pools during the winter season, Johns-Manville—a major producer of swimming pool filtration aids—suggests owners follow this checklist at pool closing time:

- Remove all bulbs and glass components from pool fixtures.
- Turn off main switches for all electrically powered pool equipment, and remove the fuses to prevent accidental starting or storm damage.

- Cover the pool with canvas or plastic covering to keep debris out of the pool, but be sure it's strong enough to support anyone who might fall or walk onto it.

- Protect any exposed metal by shutting off all supply valves and completely draining all pipes and equipment.

- Oil moving parts, and give all exposed metal a light coat of grease or oil to protect it from rust.

- Clean diatomite filters, the type used in most modern pools, either by sluicing or backwashing the filter elements.

This will remove most accumulations that would otherwise dry and harden during winter.

A final note, draining the pool is not necessary. Many owners empty their swimming pools only once every few years to inspect walls and floor for damage.

Diving boards and accessories such as chrome ladders and hand rails should be cleaned and wrapped before storing.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

We older people need believable, acceptable reasons for staying together. Every business and professional person gives you valid arguments for supporting his cause. Your grocer says, "Buy your husband the best food available and keep him healthy." The dentist says, "Come to me twice a year so you won't ever have to hunt your false teeth." The adult education teacher urges, "Keep studying so your mind will be active and up-to-date." And my beloved Otis, the underwriter, says, "If you have a money-making machine like a husband, love him, take care of him, and insure him to the hilt!"

We've learned, through the years, that everything we do should be so well motivated that we're sure, at least for the moment, that we are following the best course we can devise. We're not like the irresponsible young marchers and singers and fist-shakers who want to do away with the status quo, in industry or government or personal project—but have not the least suggestion of what should take its place. And that makes no sense. Every objection should include a correction if it is to deserve any kind of consideration.

That brings us back to an appreciation of our older (and, we hope, wiser) minds. Couples married 26 to 60 years have been taught to be motivated, give reasons for their actions and offer believable substitutes for any changes they demand. Yet the percentage of divorce among couples our age is so appalling that I can't believe all the separating couples have valid reasons for leaving each other—nor any surety that change will result in pure paradise.

The only way to know a mate's personal habits (which can be annoying) and the special needs (which can differ greatly between two people) is to live with that person over a long period of time. You may fuss at your spouse, argue a little, even resort to planned compromise in your shared life. But you know that person—and the knowledge makes you feel comfortable even if you're not completely happy.

Suppose you left your wife for a prettier, and perhaps younger, one. What could you and Mate Number 2 possibly know about keeping each other content in your new relationship? She wouldn't have the birthday dates of any of your relatives, not even your children or your grandchildren. She could cook food you disliked, put your socks in the wrong drawer of the wrong dresser or starch your shorts. You could tire quickly of the kind of entertainment she insisted upon, her friends who ignored you as they trailed through the house, her remodeling plans for your home and your life.

If you contemplate switching mates, shouldn't you give extensive consideration to the life you know, including its foibles—and the one you're planning to leap into without any real knowledge of what you'd find there? Wouldn't it be wise to list, either mentally or on paper, the possible arguments for staying with the wife of long standing as opposed to your reasons for a proposed break up?

You and your mate of many years had a past together that was at least partly happy or it wouldn't have lasted into the present. Remember when you scrimped to buy each new possession and how you held hands as you gloated over it? Recall the nights you prayed together as you sat beside a sick child or parent. Go back to the funny times, too, the family foolishness, the jokes nobody would understand but the two of you, the weekends you took the kids fishing or went to a carnival. Shiver as you remember the night the car conked out in zero weather and you wrapped up in shared blankets to keep each other warm all night, breakfasting on the crackers and peanut butter you'd brought along for emergencies. Nothing can equal happy memories.

You also have a present. And it can't be all bad, not if you'll sit down together and try to resolve your differences. You could decide that a hot frying pan is better than a fire that could burn your heart to death.

Audit offers home - energy inspection

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you can tell how hard the wind is blowing before you step out of your own front door, you are a prime candidate for one of the newest tools in the arsenal against costly fuel bills. It's a home energy audit.

The phrase is up-to-date terminology for a thorough inspection by qualified individuals of the efficiency of your home in terms of its use of energy.

A qualified professional who checks the heating system, the amount and condition of insulation in floors, walls and ceiling, the condition of windows and doors and the location and setting of the thermostat will probably be able to spot potential trouble spots and methods of saving energy.

New York utility companies, as a result of a law which went into effect last summer, are making home energy inspections for the nominal sum of $10. The companies follow up with a written report estimating the cost and probable savings to be realized by making the suggested improvements.

Utility companies are not the only ones in the business. A growing number of private firms also makes audits for varying fees. In some cases the estimates are free. The companies which do not charge for the survey, however, usually earn their money by doing the repairs they recommend. Consumers can protect themselves from possible conflicts of interest in such situations by obtaining a second audit as a comparison.

According to Mark Bruce, an energy specialist in a New York suburb, homes built less than 10 years ago probably do not require an energy audit. Owners of older, drafty homes can profit by having an expert in to evaluate their heating and insulation.

"People should realize, however, that energy surveys are exercises in statistics. It's very difficult to predict exact savings and I'd be suspicious if someone made extravagant claims for specific savings," said Bruce.

Before hiring someone, he suggests, consumers should ask for references and make sure to check those references.

"If in doubt, get another estimate," he said.

Among typical problems in homes is the absence of insulation where the frame of the house meets the foundation. A homeowner can correct this by blocking off the drafts with fiberglass blanket insulation. Cracks and chinks on the outside of the house should be caulked as well.

Leaving the fireplace chimney flue open is a sure way to raise heat bills. The heat produced by the heating system goes right up the chimney. Fires built in fireplaces, it has been shown, take more warm air out of circulation than they bring in by drawing the heated air out of the room to feed the fire.

To convert a fireplace to a heating plant, it's necessary to capture and recirculate the heat. Glass doors help. So do a variety of devices on the market which regulate fireplace heat.

Rooms with cathedral ceilings are energy wasters, too. The heat rises to the top of the room where it doesn't do anybody any good. A partial solution is to install a fan to provide a downdraft to circulate the heat downward.

Although new energy-conservation products are coming on the market at the rate of at least five or six a week, the best way to start saving energy is by changing personal habits.

Lowering the thermostat an average of 1 degree produces a saving of about 3 percent on the utility bill. Switching to fluorescent lighting could save 25 percent of the electric-lighting bill. Installing thermostat setback devices, and devices which turn off the hot-water heater at night, also produce savings.

Besides welcome reductions in energy bills, homeowners improving household energy efficiency between now and 1986 may gain some tax benefits.

A 15 percent tax credit on a maximum expenditure of $2,000 may be allowed by the Internal Revenue Service for a large variety of energy improvements such as insulation, adding storm or thermal windows, weatherstripping or installation of a variety of heat-saving devices.

Consult your local IRS office for details.

Designer says glamour is charisma

Hundreds of letters arrive every week for Bob Mackie, the man who dresses such glamour pussies as Cher, Diana Ross, Raquel Welch and Ann-Margret. The letter writers want fashion tips, evaluations of their portfolios or the inside dope on the stars he works with.

Except Carol Burnett, that is. "People never ask me about Carol," says Mackie, "because everyone thinks they know her already. They want to know about people like Cher, who are more enigmatic."

He's addressed himself to those letters in "Dressing for Glamour" (A&W, $14.95), a do-and-don't book for women and design students who admire his work. It's full of sketches and photographs for stargazers.

Although he creates those elegant or preposterous (depending on your taste) costumes, he doesn't necessarily advocate them for anything except as an entertainment device. "Women who buy a $6000 dress and wear it once to a party and hang it away, I think it's sinful. Those days should be over.

"Most glamour clothes make me laugh. You can't take all that stuff seriously, or it gets dull. It's all for effect. I certainly think Marlene Dietrich was funny. Gorgeous, but funny."

Check out plumbing in home

Chicago (NFS) - Are you in the market for a new home? If you're planning to build one, make sure its plumbing is properly designed and installed.

This advice comes from the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. And, the Bureau adds, if you're looking at older houses, the same advice prevails.

Consider a new home first. Once the home is completed, many vital parts of the plumbing system are concealed behind walls and under the floors and they're not readily accessible. The time to assure that the home will have a durable, trouble-free system is while the house is still in the planning stage.

THE WISE THING to do, the Bureau says, is to talk things over with a qualified plumbing contractor before final plans are drawn, so that his valuable ideas can be included.

He can tell you, for example, what diameter pipe you should have to assure a plentiful supply of water at every point of use at all times. Too-small pipe can mean not only a lack of water at some fixtures but noisy plumbing as well.

The plumbing contractor can also advise you on the advantages of various types of pipe, your choice of plumbing fixtures, the best arrangement of the fixtures, and so on. He knows water conditions in your locality and will advise you on the advantages of installing water treatment equipment, if needed. Such equipment in problem-water areas can prolong the life of your pipe and of your water-using appliances.

EVEN IF you're selecting a home from a builder's models, desired improvements can be made in the plumbing. Taking a little extra trouble and perhaps adding a little to your cost are worth while when you consider that, in buying a home, you are making the investment of a lifetime. Around 15 percent of that investment is in the home's plumbing. And a great deal of your family's future convenience depends on its quality.

If you're looking at older homes, it will be worth the small investment to have the plumbing checked by an expert. Many prospective buyers look at the landscaping, the size of the living room, the home's nearness to schools, churches, stores and public transportation, and so on, and forget to have the plumbing checked out.

THESE ARE all vital to a good family life, but so is the efficiency and safety of the plumbing system. When it comes to plumbing, it's better to be safe than to be sorry.

Thanks to you
it works...

Bo Derek got role in '10' by admitting she was only a 9

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Do you mind if I turn this on?" Bo Derek asked as she slipped a cassette into a tiny tape recorder. "I'm new at interviews, and I might be able to study the tape and see how I can improve."

Besides, she added, two of John Derek's previous wives, Ursula Andress and Linda Evans, had been misquoted and misinterpreted by the press. Bo wanted to have the evidence if that happened to her.

Well! That does place a reporter on a spot. But Bo Derek is so refreshingly candid, not to mention astonishingly beautiful, that an interview with her is worth the risk.

She plays the title role in "10." Blake Edwards' new release for Warner Brothers-Orion. She is the result of a middle-aged songwriter's (Dudley Moore) search for a bedmate with attributes hitting the top of a scale of from 1 to 10. (He considers her 11).

Bo competed for the role against scores of other beauties.

"Blake asked the same question of all the girls: 'Do you think you're a 10?'" she said. "All the others said, 'Oh yes!' When he asked me, I said, 'Definitely not; I've got this problem here. I've got scars. I've got to work at it to keep the illusion going."

"He gave me the job right away. No reading, no test. That was it."

The Bo Derek saga seems destined to become part of the Hollywood folklore. How she grew up as Mary Cathleen Collins on the beaches of Southern California. How at 16 she went to Greece to act in a movie made by John Derek, actor-turned-maker of low-budget films. How she moved in with him, married him two years later, worked as producer of his erotic film, "Love You."

The story is that she turned down the lead in "King Kong" because she didn't like the script. She also declined Dino DeLaurentiis' offer of "Drum," but accepted a role as victim of the omnivorous whale "Orca." Then came "10."

Certain to be part of the Bo Derek story is the Professor Higgins-like influence of her husband. He named her, convinced her to drop a few pounds and discipline her body, photographs her — often in the nude — seems to make her professional decisions.

"John has been in movies since he was 16 or 17," Bo explained. "He is 30 years older than I am (she is 22, he is 53) and he has been through the business. So have two of his wives. He's not a Svengali, not a dictator. But when situations arise that he realizes can cause pain, he can suggest how to avoid them."

'Grease' casts will celebrate new record

NEW YORK (AP) — Next month a Pan Am 747 marked "Grease One" will fly here from Hollywood with a load of stars. John Travolta among them, who've been in the rock musical, "Grease."

The idea is to make whoopee, go bozo and otherwise celebrate the musical's claim that on Dec. 8 it becomes the longest-running show in the history of Broadway theater, with 3,243 performances logged.

The current champ is "Fiddler on the Roof," with 3,242 performances. Theater purists may contend "Grease" actually needs several more months on Broadway to exceed the "Fiddler" record.

Not so, claim "Grease" producers Ken Weissman and Maxin Fox, whose longest-run claim includes the Feb. 14, 1972, debut of the show and its three-month run at the old Eden Theater in downtown New York.

They say even then it was classified as a Broadway show by trade unions, including Actors' Equity, based on the Eden's size.

Whether Broadway historians uphold the claim remains to be seen. But "Grease," a rock-n-roll tale of high school life in 1959, sure remains a sturdy attraction, loudly defying time.

It was written by Warren Casey and Jim Jacobs, two theater pros who at the time were laboring in non-theater jobs. Their original version was just a play with music, not a musical. But the authors went along with Weissman's suggested change, and production began.

While they worked, Weissman and Fox, a husband-wife team since 1973, lined up investors, auditioned actors and hired a choreographer, Pat Birch, and a director, Tom Moore.

The budget was modest — $150,000. Today, says Weissman, he'd have to shell out $750,000 to open the same show on Broadway.

Of course, he decided to open downtown at the Eden — now called the Entermedia — because costs were far less there than uptown.

Weissman estimates that so far, "Grease" has grossed $8 million from Broadway, touring companies, a cast album and the 1978 movie starring John Travolta — a supporting player in the show in 1973 but the leather-jacket lead in the film.

Hedva Amrani first Israeli to record in Cairo studio

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — You won't hear Hedva Amrani's latest recording on Top 40 radio. Even if you did, she admits readily, its 17-minute length, Arabic lyrics and wailing, quarter-tone harmonies probably would put you off.

But if "Dove of Peace" isn't exactly music to western ears, the circumstances of its recording are historic. Miss Amrani taped it last spring in Cairo, becoming the first Israeli performer ever to record in Egypt.

Actually, there's a bit of public relations hyperbole in that statement. Miss Amrani is Israeli-born, but she probably wouldn't have been able to get to Cairo in the first place if it weren't for the fact that she's been living here eight years and holds American citizenship because of her marriage to physician Dudley Danoff.

Although the Camp David accords made the entire project feasible, Israeli passports still are not accepted in Egypt.

Still, she is one of Israel's top singing stars, not to mention a longtime goodwill as well as fund-raising ambassador. An ad she recorded for the Israeli Tourist Office is credited with increasing tourism by 20 percent.

And, as she puts it, "Once you are an Israeli, you have to understand, you're always an Israeli."

Miss Amrani was interviewed in her sumptuous, modern home high atop Beverly Hills. Dark hair and complexion set off by a frilly white dress, she chatted animatedly about her experience in Egypt and its aftermath.

"I must say, I was very surprised by the reception. People were very friendly to me, they really were always ready to help and were very excited," she says.

Many of them didn't know she was an Israeli, however. Even the song's composer, Egyptian songwriter Shaker Shayisha, didn't know her nationality until the recording was almost complete. He found out inadvertently, and, after recovering from the shock, told her he was delighted.

Miss Amrani hopes to make her first performance in Egypt next month in the Sinai to the El Arish, where French film director Roger Vadim is organizing a concert to celebrate the first anniversary of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's initial visit to Israel.

Meanwhile, with large followings in Europe and Japan, she's hoping to become a truly international star by wangling an American record deal.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals next week will hear appeals outside of Austin for the first time.

A three-judge panel will convene hearings Tuesday at the South Texas College of Law. Another panel will hear cases Nov. 13 at the Bates College of Law at the University of Houston.

A third panel will listen to appeals on Dec. 11 at the School of Law at Texas Southern University.

Legislation approved in 1977 enlarged the court from five to nine judges and allowed them to form panels to hear appeals anywhere in the state. The full court must be present, however, for death penalty cases.

Presiding Judge John F. Onion Jr. said travel money was not allocated until this year.

Houston was selected for the first out-of-Austin hearings because the area provides more than 25 percent of the appeals. The court also plans to listen to appeals in Dallas early next year.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Highway and Public Transportation Commission has approved a $197 million program to rebuild and improve U.S. and Texas highways and farm-to-market roads in Texas.

The commission said Friday the special rehabilitation program will provide projects for 1,040 miles of U.S. and state-numbered highways and 260.5 miles of farm roads that are most affected by age, weather and traffic.

A total of 210 separate projects are involved in the statewide program.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — About 150 state legislators and legislative staff from throughout the nation meet in Austin Nov. 8-9 to discuss the internal workings of legislatures.

The assembly is sponsored by the National Conference of State Legislatures and the Texas Legislature.

The assembly consists of five committees and meets quarterly in state capitals to evaluate legislative needs and make suggestions for improvements.

The chairmen of the five committees include Ethics, Elections and Reapportionment Committee, New Mexico State Sen. Gladys Hansen; Fiscal Affairs and Oversight Committee, Utah State Rep. LeRay McAllister; Legislative Information Needs Committee, Colorado State Rep. Ron Strahl; Legislative Management Committee, Missouri State Rep. Joe Holt, and Science and Technology Committee, Texas State Rep., Bill Presnal.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Maj. Gen. Delmer Nichols of Taylor will pass command of the 49th Armored Division of the Texas National Guard to Maj. Gen. John Garrett of Fort Worth at ceremonies Saturday.

The division is the largest national guard unit in Texas. Nichols, an insurance representative, will retire from the guard after nearly 40 years of military service that include overseas duty during World War II.

Garrett is a lawyer.

Brig Gen. Harry V. Steel of San Antonio will be promoted to major general and assume the Directorship of the State Area Command vacated by Garrett's promotion.

Brother Fox case brings up Quinlan questions again

NEW YORK (AP) — Brother Joseph Charles Fox often spoke of Karen Anne Quinlan, his religious superior recalls, always firm in his belief that the comatose woman's parents had the right to let her die.

Now the 83-year-old Fox is himself lying in a coma, and his superior and longtime friend, the Rev. Philip Eichner, is asking a court to allow him to exercise that same right.

But the action steps beyond the Quinlan case, says the priest. The belief of Brother Fox is the teaching of the Roman Catholic church. Eichner views the request for permission to unplug Fox's respirator as an opportunity for a "clarification of church teachings."

Eichner is head of the 40-member Marianist community that runs Chaminade High School in Mineola on Long Island. Marianists, members of the Society of Mary, are a Catholic teaching order numbering 2,200 world-wide.

Illuminating the moral and ethical principals of the church is a natural outgrowth of the order's role as educators, said Eichner.

"This is a very real question and it touches almost every family in the United States," he said of Fox's situation.

Families daily are facing life and death issues and the church's position — that persons are not held to extraordinary, heroic means to prolong life — applies to countless medical situations including treatment for diseases such as cancer, he said.

"This is called the positive aspect of the Fifth Commandment, Thou Shalt Not Kill, involving the reasonable care of your life," said Eichner. A person is not obligated to take measures to prolong life that would present a grave burden on himself or others, he explained.

For example, he said, a patient needn't undergo a prohibitively expensive cancer operation that would briefly extend his or her life.

"This is not mercy killing," Eichner stressed. He said the distinction is that mercy killing is a direct act to end a life; the other is an indirect act or decision not to prolong life.

But the priest said making such decisions often is complicated in a society that attaches more importance to life on earth than an afterlife and surrounds death with a sense of guilt.

As a religious community, the Marianists decided to confront the issue when Fox slipped into a coma on Oct. 2 at Nassau Hospital. Fox suffered cardiac arrest while undergoing a hernia operation.

"He was a marvelous image for the community of how to grow old gracefully," said Eichner of his friend.

The two men had met decades before when Eichner was just entering the order and Fox was his prefect. When Fox retired to Chaminade in 1970 after teaching at Marianist schools around the world, the roles were reversed — Eichner was the superior at Chaminade.

Fox became the community's patriarch and, despite an eye ailment that left him nearly blind, he cooked the brothers' meals and raised flowers in a roof garden.

When doctors told Eichner the comatose Fox was in a "permanent vegetative state," Eichner asked hospital authorities to remove the respirator. They refused to do so without a court order.

The Rev. Richard McCormick contends such cases should never have to go to court. McCormick directs the Kennedy Center of Ethics at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and advised the Quinlans' lawyers.

In the 1976 landmark Quinlan decision, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that life support systems could be removed from comatose patients who had no reasonable chance of recovering to a cognitive or sapient state.

McCormick maintains that hundreds of life-support systems are removed daily across the country without publicity or court action.

Eichner attributed the hospital's decision to New York state's lack of a definition of death and a fear of legal repercussions.

Such fear stems from an inability to adapt moral standards to advances in medical technology, according to Alice Mehling, director of the Society For the Right to Die. The national organization has become increasingly involved in legislation addressing some of the dilemmas raised by life support systems.

Ms. Mehling said that since 1970, 25 states have enacted laws defining death as "brain death" — irreversible, total end to brain function — and expanding the common law definition of death to cessation of breathing and heartbeat.

Texas voters may change state's constitution Tuesday

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — About half a million Texans are expected to vote Tuesday on three more proposed changes in the state's much-amended constitution.

Turnouts in big cities for local elections and bond issues likely will decide:

—Whether the state should help preserve the family farm through a $10 million bond program.

—Whether the Legislature should have more control over state bureaucrats.

—Whether public notaries should be appointed statewide instead of county by county.

If approved, the three proposals would make 236 amendments to the state's constitution since it was adopted by voters in 1876.

Another eight proposed amendments, also approved by the 1979 Legislature, will be on the 1980 general election ballot.

There has been little statewide attention paid to the three proposals. As a result, election forecasters in the Secretary of State's office predict a turnout of no more than 500,000 voters, or only 9 percent of the 5.75 million registered.

Most votes likely will come from the Houston area where there will be a hot city council and school board election Tuesday.

Brownsville and Cameron County also have local elections.

In Fort Worth, there is a referendum to place a ceiling on property tax increases.

In Dallas, Austin and Jefferson County there are bond issues on the Tuesday ballot.

More has been said about Proposition No. 3 than the others.

Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, formed a small support group, then piloted his own plane over the state seeking backers. Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong added their endorsements.

If approved by voters, the proposition would authorize the commissioner of agriculture to create a Farm and Ranch Loan Security Fund and issue up to $10 million in general obligation bonds.

Under the program, the state would guarantee 90 percent of the amount due on family farm and ranch loans. The loans would be made by private lenders, but the state could help some farmers pay back their loans, charging 6 percent interest.

An applicant must have lived in Texas at least five years, must have had experience and education in the farm and ranch business and have a total net worth of less than $100,000 in the immediate family, excluding his residence.

If family farmers are pushed off the land, said Jones, corporations and foreign investors can be expected to buy the land.

Those against it generally argue that the state should not be in the business of guaranteeing loans for anyone, even farmers, who are no worse off than other small business owners.

Proposition No. 2 would authorize legislative review of rules and regulations made by state agencies. It passed the House and Senate in 1979 with little opposition. However, in recent weeks the Texas League of Women Voters and Gov. Bill Clements spoke out against it.

The proposal would let the Legislature pass a law allowing itself — or one of its chambers or even a committee — to suspend or repeal a rule adopted by an administrative agency.

Clements told a news conference the proposal was "clearly an encroachment on the separation-of-powers principle" that divides the legislature from the executive branch, which includes most state agencies.

The Republican governor said the proposal would allow a single legislative committee to veto agency regulations and "make it easier for special interest groups" to influence agency rule-making.

League President Diana Clark said the proposed change "might allow a small group of legislators to block administrative action because of opposition to a governor or his appointees on state boards, regardless of the merits of the rule in question."

Backers of the proposal point out that 34 states now have some sort of legislative review of agency rules. They say the rules of government are too important to be left entirely to bureaucrats who answer only indirectly, if at all, to the people.

Proposition No. 1 would allow notaries public to be named for the entire state rather than for a particular county. Now, when notaries move from one county to another they lose their official positions.

All record-keeping would be centralized in the secretary of state instead of county clerks' offices.

It also would let the secretary of state appoint notaries for four, not two-year terms.
