Pampa, Texas

50c DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Low tonight in upper 20s, high tomorrow near 40. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA — Testimony was expected to begin this afternoon in the trial of a Pampa woman accused of injuring a six-month-old baby boy.

Pamela Gail Dunham, 31, is charged with injury to a child. She was indicted for knowingly and recklessly injuring Jacob Tyler Brown, for whom she was caring, in late January 1994.

Jury selection began this morning in 223rd District Court before Judge Lee Waters as District Attorney John Mann and defense attorney Harold Comer questioned a panel of 56 potential jurors.

The Brown baby was taken to Coronado Hospital, then rushed to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo on the afternoon of Jan. 28, 1994, suffering injuries the state claims were caused by violent shaking.

Dunham has been free on $10,000 bond.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $8 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 8, 10, 12, 13, 25 and 28.

There were 208 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $887. There were 9,611 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $69. And there were 161,257 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $12 million.

HOUSTON (AP) — Men and women who grew up with Barbara Jordan, worked on her campaigns for state Senate and Congress or sought her inspiration while embarking on public service careers honored her at a Sunday memorial service.

Hundreds gathered to remember the former congresswoman at her alma mater, Texas Southern University, from where she developed her skills as a brilliant orator and launched an extraordinary career in public service.

"She was like a David with her golden oratory, like a David next to a Goliath," said Marion G. Ford Jr., a Houston dentist and childhood friend of Ms. Jordan's.

"She took a sling and felled (President) Nixon," said Ford, referring to Ms. Jordan's eloquent defense of the Constitution when she sat on the House Judiciary Committee during the Watergate hearings.

Ms. Jordan, 59, died Wednesday of pneumonia and other complications from leukemia.

Hillary offers written answers to senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hoping to dispel doubts about her integrity, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton offered today to answer senators in writing concerning several new questions in the Whitewater affair.

Chief among them is how Mrs. Clinton's law firm billing records suddenly appeared inside the White House residence — two years after investigators subpoenaed them and the White House claimed they could not be found.

In a five-sentence letter today to the Republican-led Senate Whitewater Committee, the first lady's private lawyer David Kendall noted Mrs. Clinton has answered written question from the panel in the past.

"I invite you to proceed," Kendall wrote committee chairman Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who suggested the idea last week. "She is certainly willing to do so again in an effort to bring your inquiry to a conclusion."

The offer breaks an impasse that began last week when both the committee and first lady acknowledged that new evidence emerging in the Whitewater investigation warranted new answers from Mrs. Clinton, but neither side offered to go first.

Written answers provide the politically safest format for both sides.

There will be no follow-up questions or political drama in an open hearing room that could further damage Mrs. Clinton's declining popularity or leave Republicans looking like they were trying to dragoon the first lady.

The chairman of the House committee investigating the White House travel office already has said he will submit written questions to the first lady concerning her role in the 1993 firings.

The first lady's offer follows a week of politically damaging revelations in both the Whitewater and travel office investigations.

Last Thursday, a longtime Clinton aide testified how Mrs. Clinton's long-sought billing records abruptly showed up on a table in the White House third-floor living quarters last August.

The aide, Carolyn Huber, testified she believed someone had deliberately put the records there. She moved them into a box without looking at them and rediscovered them this month, when the White House finally turned over the records to investigators.

Republicans charge the billing records contradict some of Mrs. Clinton's earlier answers in the Whitewater affair, including that she did just minimal legal work for the failed Arkansas savings and loan owned by her Whitewater business partner.

Mrs. Clinton says the records, which show she worked for the thrift about 60 hours over 15 months, are consistent with her version of events.

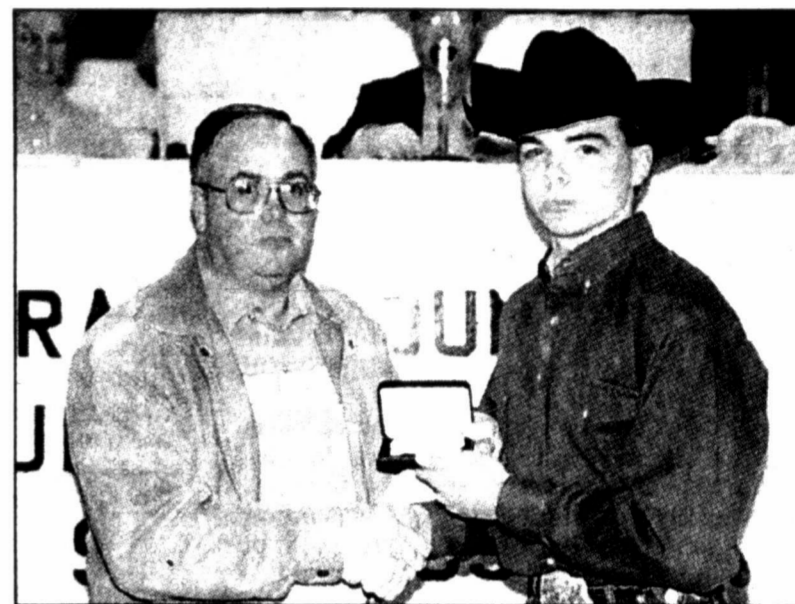

The manner in which the records were found surprised even White House lawyers, who had claimed for months the records could not be found. They turned up in a secure room frequented only by the president, Mrs. Clinton and their closest friends.

Republicans now are probing whether someone tried to obstruct the Whitewater investigation by withholding the records even after they were subpoenaed. Both the president and first lady deny doing so, saying they wished the records had been found earlier.

The day before Huber's testimony, a former presidential aide who handled the bungled White House travel office firings testified he believed Mrs. Clinton was pressing for the dismissals although he did not hear that directly from the first lady.

Mrs. Clinton has denied exerting any pressure, saying she only expressed concern about possible financial mismanagement in the office.

White House claims GOP courts disaster

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress returning to work this week, the White House urged top Republican leaders today to repudiate a threat to block raising the debt limit unless President Clinton compromises on the budget.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said the threat — by House Majority Leader Dick Armev, R-Texas — was dangerous, irresponsible and jeopardized the economic security of the United States.

In a televised interview Sunday, Armev said efforts by Republicans to downsize government "will have to be attached to the debt-ceiling increase or it won't go through."

McCurry said, "I would, on behalf of the White House, call upon Speaker (Newt) Gingrich and Majority Leader (Bob) Dole to immediately repudiate Mr. Armev's remarks. His remarks are dangerous."

Armev's comments on NBC's Meet the Press drew an immediate response from White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, who said Republicans were courting disaster by pushing the federal government toward its first default ever.

That could happen on Feb. 15 when interest payments push spending past the debt ceiling and Panetta urged GOP leaders to "not play games with the full faith and credit of this country."

The firestorm over the debt came a week after another prominent Republican, House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich of Ohio, predicted his party wouldn't stand in the way of an extension of government borrowing and a day before lawmakers begin returning after a two-week break to a deeply divided capital.

On Tuesday night Clinton takes his case to the nation in the annual State of the Union address to Congress.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said Friday that the president will challenge the Republican Congress to come to terms with him on an agreement to balance the budget by 2002, but will concentrate more on broader issues facing the nation rather than the minutiae of the budget dispute.

"Don't expect the president to don a green eyeshade and stand up there and attempt to negotiate the budget with the Congress in front of him," he said.

Talks broke down last week with the White House saying the Republican tax cuts and proposed savings from Medicare and Medicaid were too large, and Republicans insisting that Clinton's plan did nothing to address fundamental problems in entitlement programs.

Prospects for an agreement were "quite doubtful," Senate Majority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley.

Abortion opponents mark anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — As they have every year since, thousands of abortion opponents gathered in Washington today for impassioned demonstrations against the Supreme Court ruling that made most abortions legal 23 years ago.

The mix of celebration and sorrow surrounding the anniversary in this presidential election year came as President Clinton, an abortion rights supporter, has threatened to veto Congress' first attempt to prohibit a specific abortion procedure since the Supreme Court's 1973 decision.

But despite the fact that budget and tax matters have dominated much of the campaign-trail debate these past few weeks, abortion remains one of the most deeply emotional and divisive public and political issues.

"Preborn children are not sub-human," said Nellie Gray, president of the March for Life fund, which organizes the annual rally and walk from the White House past the Capitol to the Supreme Court for a protest.

Carol Long, director of the National Right to Life Political Action Committee, said the group's top priority "is to replace Bill Clinton with a pro-life president."

"For three years Bill Clinton has used his position as president to dramatically advance the pro-abortion and pro-euthanasia agenda," Long said.

At the White House, spokesman Mike McCurry said, "The president is confident they know his views on the importance of choice for women. They also know that he hopes that very divisive issues such as choice can be addressed by the American people in a way that minimizes hostility and violence and maximizes understanding and common ground."

Abortion opponents want the procedure outlawed. They believe life begins at conception and equate abortion with murder.

But abortion rights advocates are equally united in the belief that the Roe vs. Wade decision is one of the most important on behalf of women.

The high court, ruling in the case of a Texas woman, declared a constitutional right to abortion based on a woman's privacy. The decision legalized abortion nationwide.

"The 22nd of January is an opportunity to celebrate nearly a quarter of a century of American women's freedom from the deaths associated with illegal abortions," said Jane Johnson, interim president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

In a related action today, the Supreme Court refused to let Pennsylvania set strict reporting rules for all Medicaid-funded abortions sought by women who were victims of rape or incest or whose life is endangered by giving birth.

Arafat ready to build Palestinian state

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) - Yasser Arafat, elected Palestinian president by a landslide, now must strive to fulfill his ambitious campaign pledge: a full Palestinian state with its capital in east Jerusalem.

Israel has emphasized that before expanding the Palestinians' limited autonomy in parts of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, it expects Arafat to annul clauses in the PLO charter calling for the destruction of the Jewish state.

This weekend, Palestinians delivered a clear message that they want expansion to continue, ignoring calls by Arafat's Islamic militant and leftist opposition to boycott the first Palestinian election. More than 80 percent of the 1 million registered voters cast ballots for president and the first Palestinian parliament.

"I am very proud of this very important historic democratic election," Arafat said early today after final results showed him overwhelmingly winning the race for president. "We hope that (it) will be one of the most important efforts on the way to an independent Palestinian state."

Mahmoud Abbas, a senior Palestine Liberation Organization official close to Arafat, said the Palestinian parliament would declare independence within three years. The period of Palestinian self-rule, as negotiated with Israel, ends in May 1999. Negotiations on the final status of the autonomous areas and Jerusalem are to begin by May.

Saturday's elections cemented the 65-year-old Arafat's transformation from guerrilla chief to leader of a state-in-the-making and created a new cadre of elected Palestinian leaders with a stake in peace.

Final results of the balloting gave Arafat 88.1 percent to challenger Samiha Khalil's 9.3 percent in the presidential vote, with 2.6 percent of the ballot slips ruled invalid.

At least 50 of the 88 legislators in the new parliament are loyalists from Arafat's moderate Fatah faction, including 10 who had served in his appointed interim Cabinet, according to partial results.

The specific vote count was not yet available. The mood in the Palestinian areas was subdued Sunday as Muslims began observing the holy month of Ramadan with dawn-to-dusk fasting. But as results of the council elections started coming in that night, joyous celebrations erupted.

In Ramallah, armed PLO officers fired in the air outside the house of Jamil Tarifi, Arafat's outgoing civilian affairs minister who won a council seat.

Among other new legislators were five women, including Hanan Ashrawi, a former Arafat spokeswoman.

Arafat will convene the legislature for the first time after Ramadan, spokesman Nabil Abu Irdeineh said.

The council will meet in the "White House," a whitewashed one-story mansion in Gaza City that served as Israeli headquarters.

Crucial decisions await Arafat and his legislature in the coming months.

Talks on a final settlement with Israel will tackle the explosive issues that until now had been pushed to the side: the future of Jerusalem, the holy city both sides claim as a capital; Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza; and the PLO's demand for statehood.

Court rejects attack on 'motor voter' law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected California Gov. Pete Wilson's challenge to the federal "motor voter" law, which lets people register to vote while getting a driver's license.

The justices, without comment, let stand rulings that said the law does not unduly tread on states' rights even though it requires them to pick up most of the costs.

In other action, the court: — Unanimously ruled that defendants convicted of drug crimes involving LSD cannot be sentenced under a standard generally more lenient than the one required by federal law.

The decision in an Illinois case said when federal judges impose sentences they must calculate the amount of LSD involved by weighing the drug and whatever substance was used to carry it.

— Refused to let Pennsylvania set strict reporting rules for all Medicaid-funded abortions sought by women who were victims of rape or incest or whose life is endangered by giving birth.

— Let stand a $1.5 million award against four Christian Scientists, including the mother of a Minnesota boy who died after his diabetes was treated with prayer instead of medical care.

The motor voter law took effect last year and has been extremely successful. More than 5 million people were added to registration rolls in the first eight months, what some experts called the most massive short-term registration surge in the country's political history.

Seven states challenged the law, none successfully so far. California's appeal was the first to reach the nation's highest court.

California's high court appeal said the law is unconstitutional because it lets Congress "commandeer state employees" who previously had no voter-registration responsibilities.

Wilson's appeal said the state's Department of Motor Vehicles will have to hire 58 new employees "to provide the voter registration services required by the act and maintain existing levels of service."

Wilson, as required by the law, designated various state agencies as federal voter registration agencies but directed them to register voters only if federal funding was received.

That sparked a lawsuit by various individuals and groups, including the state's League of Women Voters. Wilson then filed his own lawsuit against the federal government. His lawsuit said the law violates the Constitution's 10th Amendment, which ensures state sovereignty.

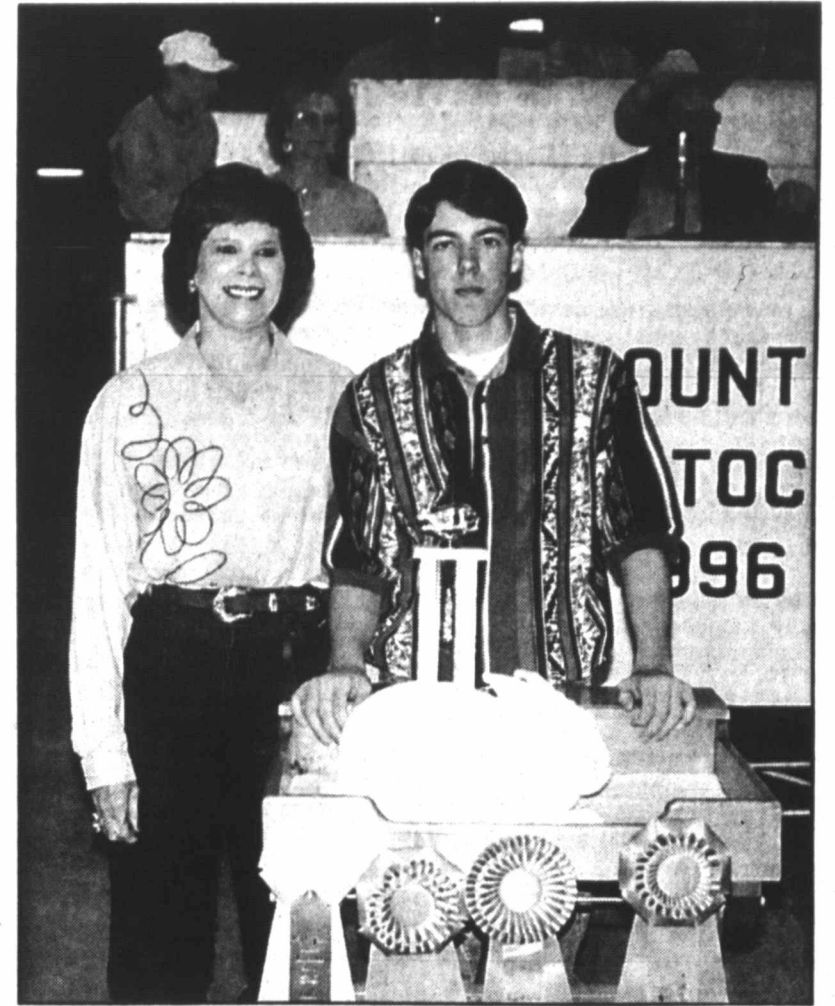

A federal judge and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled against Wilson.

"Congress may conscript state agencies to carry out voter registration for the election of representatives and senators," the appeals court ruled. "The exercise of that power by Congress is by its terms intended to be borne by the state without compensation."

The appeals court relied on Section 4 of the Constitution's Article I. It says: "The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature...but Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations."

The six other states that have attacked the law in lower courts are Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia.

Yeltsin says he will be candidate for re-election

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin reportedly said today that he likely will be a candidate in elections in June. It was the strongest indication yet he would seek re-election.

Yeltsin, who has acted like a candidate since returning to the Kremlin following a two-month absence caused by heart trouble, said he will announce a final decision next month on seeking a second five-year term.

"Probably, I will agree to run in the presidential elections. I am saying probably because I am going to announce my final decision Feb. 13-15," Yeltsin said, according to the Interfax news agency.

He acknowledged that winning a second term would not be easy.

"I realize if I agree the struggle will be tough, not simple," he reportedly said during a meeting with foreign investors in the Kremlin.

New Greek Cabinet sworn in today

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Costas Simitis and his streamlined center-left Cabinet were sworn in today, pledging to accelerate efforts to align the lagging Greek economy with its European Union partners.

Simitis, 60, a former economics professor and veteran politician, replaced the 76-year-old Andreas Papandreou, who resigned last week because of ill health. Lawmakers from the ruling Panhellenic Socialist Movement party elected Simitis on Thursday over two Papandreou loyalists.

The new prime minister pared the Cabinet from 52 members to 40 and shut out all but two of Papandreou's close aides, Interior Minister Akis Tsochadzopoulos, and Health and Welfare Minister Anastasios Peponis.

Simitis has pledged to shrink Papandreou's bloated welfare state and fully implement a strict economic stabilization plan designed to bring Greece in line with the rest of the European Union by the year 2000.

Military helicopter missing in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — An air force helicopter with 39 people aboard disappeared off the northern coast of Sri Lanka today, and the military said Tamil rebels claimed they shot it down.

The military sent planes to search the rebel-held region where the Ukrainian-built MI-17 vanished. It had sent no radio message suggesting trouble.

The helicopter was flying the 40 miles from Palali air force base to Vettalaikerni army base with 33 soldiers, two sailors, two air force personnel and a two-man crew aboard.

Rebels firing machine guns from boats in the Indian Ocean may have hit the helicopter, said a military official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Wheeler coat drive a success

WHEELER — The Wheeler Care Center has reported a successful drive for donated coats for The Salvation Army.

Staff members and residents expressed thanks to those who helped make the first coat drive a success, noting the response was "overwhelming," according to Robert Smith, Wheeler Care Center administrator.

More than 150 coats were donated from surrounding towns, including Wheeler, Pampa, Shamrock, Allison and Mobeetie.

"Our residents were overjoyed to have the opportunity to contribute to the community and be a part of such a successful community project," Smith said. "In addition to collecting the coats, the residents helped sort, size and load the coats to be delivered to The Salvation Army."

The Salvation Army of Pampa serves all of the eastern side of the Texas Panhandle.

Salvation Army commander

Lt. Anthony Housley said, "We were surprised and happy to have the coats, particularly at this time of year when the weather is so cold and the need is great."

The Center plans to make the collection of coats an annual drive.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveeting commandment.

Opinion

You can't fool the free market

Government can be pushed back from its excessive control of our lives.

Proof: After an enormous outcry against it, the California Air Resources Board has decided to delay, from 1998 to 2003, the date of its mandate that auto companies begin offering electric cars. By then, Republicans in Congress - and perhaps in the White House - probably will have canceled the national program that began an experiment in misgovernment that must have been designed by crash-test dummies.

Electric cars are a "Not Ready for Prime Time" technology. Although some day they might take over from gas-powered cars, for now the technology just isn't ready.

Firemen and rescue workers have warned that batteries still are too dangerous. Firms nationwide already running fleets of electric trucks complain that the vehicles ran out of juice as quickly as 50 miles from home.

The auto companies pointed out that these "zero emission vehicles" (ZEVs) cost twice as much to produce as regular sedans.

And responsible environmentalists noted that only minor reductions in emissions would result, something more easily obtainable by such more mundane actions as making it easier to purchase new cars (and so retire old polluting clunkers). Even without the ZEVs, infamous Southern California air is the cleanest it's been in 40 years and getting cleaner. Air pollution, and not only in California, is a problem that's already under control.

Only environmentalist extremists, government bureaucrats and executives building the new battery technologies favor mandating the ZEVs.

The entire ZEV episode shows precisely why government cannot manipulate free markets, only crimp them. All markets operate under the laws of supply and demand.

As 70 years of experimentation with socialism has demonstrated to the world, these laws are as inexorable as the law of gravity. Demand can be natural, as in the need for food; or it can be created, as in the demand for personal computers spawned by their invention just 20 years ago. But without demand, there is no market.

Although wealthy Sierra Clubbers and other people would buy today's primitive electric cars, there's nowhere near the demand even in densely populated Southern California for 20,000 of the sparking flivvers that the CARB had mandated by the year 1998. To move the merchandise, the auto companies would have had to cut prices and take losses, hurting each company's financial position, or raise prices on gasoline-powered cars to cover the electric-car subsidies. In the end, consumers would have paid - in jobs lost or higher car prices - a human toll neither the CARB or the environmental extremists never seem to have cared much about.

"But a real demand for these cars exists!" huff ZEV proponents. If so, then why hasn't that demand been met voluntarily? The first popular, efficient electric car would become as profitable as old Henry Ford's Model T wonder. If the technology were ready, automakers would be scrambling to use it to make cars and profits. But the technology isn't ready.

Maybe new battery technologies will be ready in 2003, and maybe they won't. In the meantime, the internal combustion engine, whose technology is proven and which has met market demands for a century of literally billions of cars and trucks sold, will continue getting cleaner and more efficient.

You can't fool the market.

The Mellon's Dutch masterstroke

Quiz time: In the debate over the partial shutdown of the federal government, which of the following persons did not have an impact? A. President Bill Clinton; B. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole; C. Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich; or D. 17th-century Dutch painter Johannes Vermeer

The correct answer is "none of the above." The shutdown forced the temporary closing of the wildly popular Vermeer exhibition at Washington's National Gallery of Art. Said closing in turn provoked an outcry that ended early this month that, shutdown or no shutdown, it would supply the funding needed to keep the exhibition open until Feb. 11, its last scheduled day at the National Gallery.

Concerning the Vermeer hubbub, a few observations:

1. Praise is owed the Mellon Foundation for doing the philanthropically responsible thing. But, in a better world, the exhibition never would have closed in the first place because the government would not be in the business of funding art galleries. Museums would be strictly private ventures, like the National Football League, and you didn't see any playoff games shut down because the government didn't appropriate money for them, although the Kansas City Chiefs probably wish theirs had been.

2. Proponents of government cultural funding - for the arts, public television and so on - assert that if such funding is cut off, there will be no venue for many wonderful sculptures, documentaries and the like. That's the sub text of the advertising slogan, "If PBS Doesn't Do It, Who Will?" There's some truth to that claim if you think we are still in 1968, when there were only three networks to choose from. Today, there are dozens of networks; many, like A&E, the Discovery Channel and others, are dedicated to cultural and educational programming. Not one of these networks relies on government funding.

3. Nor do these public-funding proponents believe the private sector would replace the funding now provided by the government. But these naysayers to private philanthropy ignore that the United States is the most charitable society in the history of man. How would the public react to a cessation of government funding? Again, PBS offers a clue. When public TV stations held their spring 1995 pledge drives, they screamed that congressional "extremists" were going to cut off their funds. On average, viewer contributions during the drives increased 15% to 40% over '94. Reports from summer fundraising campaigns were similarly encouraging.

Many stations said that the increase in contributions was a result of the debate on Capitol Hill over funding for public broadcasting. Apparently, just the slim possibility that the funding would end or be reduced spurred more and bigger donations. As it turned out, not only did PBS and National Public Radio escape the congressional budgetary process largely unscathed but they also managed to secure their funding through 1998.

What happened in the pledge drives, and the reaction to the closing of the Vermeer exhibition, indicates that if federal funding ever were drastically reduced or eliminated altogether, private contributors would rescue many - but not all - government-supported cultural projects.

The Vermeer collection is a case in point. Art aficionados were and are traveling long distances for the exhibition. If their time in Washington coincided with the shutdown, their disappointment was acute: After the show makes its second and final stop in the Netherlands, these 20 paintings will almost certainly never be in one place again. There was a strong demand for the chance to see so much of Vermeers brilliance firsthand. Had there not been such a demand, it's doubtful that the Mellon Foundation would have stepped in.

4. Now, say the shutdown had caused the closing of an Andres Serrano exhibition. Would the public - not elitists in the press but the public - have voiced displeasure? Not on your life. Would some private organization have intervened anyway to reopen such a show? Probably not, but if one had, at least taxpayer money would not have been used to maintain access to vulgar and offensive trash.

5. The brouhaha over Vermeer inspired one noteworthy media tantrum. Lawrence Weschler, a staff writer at The New Yorker, penned a Dec. 22 New York Times op-ed piece that read: "At root, the (federal) government seems confused over what constitutes an 'essential service.' ... These days, the CIA hardly seems all that essential. Vermeer, on the other hand, is essential." As superbly talented as Vermeer was, his ability to gather intelligence against Saddam Hussein and the rest of our very real, modern-day enemies is, shall we say, limited.

Withdrawing federal arts funding would mean that the private sector would fund art exhibitions, the government would fund the CIA and Weschler would have to find something else over which to go ballistic.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Jan. 22, the 22nd day of 1996. There are 344 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 22, 1917, President Wilson pleaded for an end to war in Europe, calling for "peace without victory."

(By April, however, America also was at war.)

On this date:
In 1901, Britain's Queen Victoria died at age 82.

In 1905, thousands of demonstrating Russian workers were fired on by Imperial army troops in St. Petersburg on what became known as "Red Sunday" or "Bloody Sunday."

In 1922, Pope Benedict XV died; he was succeeded by Pius XI.

In 1938, Thornton Wilder's play "Our Town" was performed publicly for the first time, in Princeton, N.J.

In 1953, the Arthur Miller drama "The Crucible" opened on Broadway.

In 1961, a Portuguese ocean liner, Santa Maria, was hijacked in the Caribbean with some 600 passengers aboard; the drama ended 11 days later when the ship docked in Brazil.

In 1970, the first regularly scheduled commercial flight of the Boeing 747 began in New York and ended in London 6 1/2 hours later.

In 1973, in its Roe vs. Wade decision, the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortions for the first six months of pregnancy, using a trimester approach.

In 1973, former President Johnson died at age 64.

In 1987, Pennsylvania treasurer R. Budd Dwyer, convicted of defrauding the state, proclaimed his innocence at a news conference before shooting himself to death in front of horrified spectators.

Ten years ago: A judge in New Delhi, India, found a Sikh defendant guilty of murder and conspiracy and two other Sikhs guilty of conspiracy in the 1984 assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. (Two were executed; the third had his conspiracy conviction overturned.)

What the Watkins memo really shows

The question defenders of the Clintons keep asking is: Why are you harping on some obscure financial transaction from the 1980s on which the couple lost money?

It's a question that deserves an answer. In the first place, the term "Whitewater" has come to cover a series of shady practices and possibly illegal doings in Little Rock, not just one land deal. Because the culture of that city (like some other state capitals) seems to have been one of the wealthy stroking the powerful and vice versa, it is useful to know whether the president who promised the "most ethical administration in history" was actually engaged in illegal or unethical conduct.

As for the loss of money, that is a red herring. As my colleague James Glassman succinctly put it, "If someone gives me 50,000 shares of GE for nothing and GE subsequently goes broke - that doesn't mean I have not received a gift."

The Clinton version of the Whitewater land deal is quite like their version of the cattle futures deal - nice wealthy people simply gave the Clintons valuable assets out of the goodness of their hearts.

But the ethical cloud enveloping the Clinton administration now is based not just on questions about the sleazy practices common in Little Rock. It is based also on the behavior of the first couple in the White House.

That is the true significance of the David Watkins memo, released last week. That memo, combined with the lightning acquittal of Billy R. Dale, former chief of the White House travel office, reveal an administration that is willing to abuse power quite shamelessly - and possibly illegally.

Yes, the Watkins memo reveals Mrs. Clinton to have lied when she claimed, through her lawyers, that "she had no role in the decision to terminate the employees." But it reveals something else as well.

The official White House story on the travel office has always rested upon the claim that all seven of the employees were terminated because the accounting firm of Peat Marwick had found financial irregularities (the White House later backtracked somewhat, finding other government jobs for five of the seven, one retired). But as the Watkins memo makes clear, pressure was applied by the first lady to put "our people" in "those slots" long before Peat Marwick was called in.

The White House did not anticipate the severe press reaction that would follow the firings of people they had known and liked for many years. And so, in the days following the firings, the White House announced that an FBI investigation was afoot into the actions of Billy Dale, the office's director. He was taking kickbacks, it was said.

Who said it? It appears no one except Clinton friend Harry Thomasson, who had been poking around the travel office from the beginning, hoping to get a piece of the action (the office does about $10 million in ticket sales yearly) for his charter broker company and a crony's travel agency.

Billy Dale had joined the White House staff during the Kennedy administration. Several prominent journalists including ABC's Sam Donaldson and the Los Angeles Times' Jack Nelson testified for him at his trial. Three days before he was fired by the Clintons, he offered to take early retirement. He was told that would not be necessary. The next thing he knew, the White House announced that the FBI was investigating him.

As it happened, there never was any evidence that Dale had been taking kickbacks. But the FBI did find that he had deposited some travel office money into his personal account, and he was prosecuted for that. In the end, the jury simply did not believe there was any evidence to show that Dale had used the money for himself. They believed him when he said he disbursed it for travel office functions. And they perhaps also believed his further claim that he had kept a log at the White House of every expenditure - a log the White House said they could not find.

If the first lady leaned on the FBI to railroad an innocent man to cover up for her desire to reward friends with patronage, she may be guilty of several crimes including obstruction of justice. This isn't a decade-old land deal - this is abuse of power in the White House.

The budget mess: It's more than money

"I'm telling you," President Bill Clinton said at a recently press conference, "we are not that far apart."

But that's not so. The president and Congress are whole philosophies apart. That's much more than billions of dollars.

In wrangling about the federal budget, the two departments of government are actually wrangling about the mission and size and scope and purpose of government itself. Each department has a different philosophy. Both are old, but the Republicans' is older.

The Democratic assumption is that government is a benevolent instrument for the amelioration of social and economic problems. Government, on this view, is another word for the concerted good will of the American people - coupled with their economic power. Is there a daunting problem that confronts us? Government will address it. The idea took hold of the American fancy during the New Deal and has persisted since then.

The Republicans have another idea entirely - one grounded in the theories of the founding fathers as well as in the bleak experience of the Democrats' way. The Republican idea is that government, though sometimes a useful tool for meeting challenges of national scope, creates a new set of problems. Government action diminishes human freedom and stifles creativity and flexibility. And it costs a bundle.

Cost is the issue on which the budget talks are focused, but the other issues deserve to be front and center. The Republican critique of government is that for varied reasons, money being just one of them, we need less government. The Democratic reply is: No, that's not right; what we need isn't significantly less government but, rather, government more finely tuned to our national needs.

So the land lies in this debate. Newt Gingrich and the Republicans (with a few exceptions) want less, and less-intrusive, government, whereas Bill Clinton sees no special harm in the present level thereof.

Escalating talk about employing the 1996 elections as a referendum on the two kinds of government makes more and more sense. The people have to decide what philosophy they prefer.

Wait a second, even so. The voters have been picking and choosing philosophies for 28 years - ever since Richard Nixon, boosted by the "Silent Majority," defeated Hubert Humphrey. The two Reagan elections amounted to even a more decisive turning away from government solutions. Remember Reagan's credo - "Government isn't the solution - it's the problem?"

The revolution against government proceeds by fits and starts and with varying degrees of commitment on the part of the revolutionaries themselves. But the direction is consistent - away from unvarnished faith in government if not always away from the practice of that faith.

There is after all, in most human-beings, something that likes being taken care of, something that shrinks from that fierce independence to which the ambitious and creative are given. Inside the welfare state, it's warm and cozy - for some at least. The glare of the outside sun can be unforgiving. Still, the sunshine is where new plants grow. The Republicans want as few bureaucratic structures as possible blocking the sunlight, choking back the new growth.

How are the budget conferees to reconcile these competing desires - for coziness on the one hand, for sunshine on the other? Plain and plainer it seems that we will need another election. Nor will one more election likely solve the difficulty. The welfare state is so massive, so sprawling, so enticing to so many that it is unlikely ever to be disassembled completely.

We're not going back to 1933 because 1933 is gone. But the spirit of pre-New Deal days - there is refreshment in it. The Newtites, having sniffed it, hope to disperse it as widely as possible. The president, big-government lover as he is, hopes to keep it bottled up.

On to November! At which juncture we will not know everything worth knowing about America in the '90s. We'll just know a lot more than we know right now.

Nation briefs

Who likes orphanages? Orphans according to survey
 NEW YORK (AP) — It's not only Newt Gingrich who remembers orphanages like the movie "Boys Town." A survey of people who grew up in them found most had happy memories, and their lives since haven't been so bad either.

"The conventional wisdom — that orphanages ruin kids — is off base," said Richard McKenzie, an economist at the University of California at Irvine.

McKenzie, who grew up in an orphanage himself, surveyed 600 alumni of three homes. He found more than 24 percent had college degrees, compared to 22 percent of Americans. The orphans had an unemployment rate of 1 percent, compared to a national figure of around 6 percent. And they had a median income 20 percent higher than people in the general population.

Electric football makes comeback with super bowl

CHICAGO (AP) — You could almost hear a roar from the cardboard stadium as the metal field began its vibrations and the plastic players began buzzing for greatness in the Super Bowl — of electric football.

Electric football, an American classic which saw its popularity wane with the advent of video games, is making a such a comeback that it has even inspired its own convention and Super Sunday.

Where else could you see the Atlanta Falcons beat the Houston Oilers for the championship?

"The video games think for you. With electric football, you have to think for yourself," said Chuck Jones, 33, who received his first game for Christmas when he was 5 and now customizes his players with paint down to the logos on their shoes.

'Kato' Kaelin back where he started - unemployed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Brian "Kato" Kaelin is back where he started: He's unemployed.

Kaelin parlayed his celebrity from testifying at the O.J. Simpson murder trial into a job as a talk show host on KLSX-FM, but now his agent says he's quit to pursue acting offers.

"A window opened up as far as Kato's contract with KLSX and we decided to take advantage of it," said agent Raphael Berko. "This being pilot season, we wanted to look at the TV and film opportunities he was forced to turn down because of the radio show."

Rumors of massacres haunt Bosnia's past and its future

GLOGOVA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — When spring thaws this frozen field, digging will begin in hopes of reaping a terrible harvest: the bodies of scores of Muslims allegedly massacred by Bosnian Serb militiamen in July.

"We are on a field which we believe is a mass grave," John Shattuck, the assistant secretary of state for human rights, said Sunday as he stood amid snowy hills and gutted houses.

Shattuck, who spent the day touring parts of eastern Bosnia that Bosnian Serb authorities had previously barred from war crimes investigators, said he would pass on to the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal new evidence of the massacre of up to 7,000 Muslims.

One of the 3 1/2-year war's worst crimes occurred in Kravice, survivors told Shattuck.

"Up to 2,000 people were herded into a warehouse and then fired upon by grenades and other weapons, and anyone who was left was shot when they left" Kravice, Shattuck said.

"We could see blood spatters and massive holes in the warehouse where the heavy weapons had been fired and grenades had come in," he said.

The bodies are believed buried at two sites in Glogova, just down the road from Kravice, he said.

Shattuck said he hoped investigators would be in place in the "very, very, near-future," and that he expected digging in Glogova to start this spring.

Kravice was part of the eastern Muslim enclave of Srebrenica, a U.N.-designated "safe haven" that was overrun by Bosnian Serb forces on July 11. Shattuck did not explain how or why the bodies were moved from Kravice to Glogova.

In a four-car convoy, accompanied by U.S. bodyguards and Serb police, Shattuck was in eastern Bosnia collecting evidence, interviewing survivors and investigating conditions that war crimes investigators will face in coming weeks.

In addition to Kravice, the gruesome itinerary included: —Nova Kasaba, site of another reputed mass grave.

—Konjevic Polje, where witnesses reported about 200 people were shot as they tried to flee along the road.

—Karakaj, a town where "we looked at a school house and gymnasium where many people were held and taken out in small groups of 30 and shot before open pits," Shattuck said. "This is the evidence many eyewitnesses have provided."

Other alleged massacre sites are at nearby Bratunac and an abandoned mine near Prijedor in the northwest.

The war crimes tribunal, a

U.N.-appointed court based in The Hague, the Netherlands, was assured Sunday that NATO forces would do their best to protect investigators at alleged mass graves around Bosnia and watch for any attempts to tamper with the sites.

U.S. Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of the NATO troops enforcing the Bosnian peace plan, did not say how much military muscle would be used at the sites, but noted NATO soldiers would "provide an environment in which (investigators) can accomplish their missions."

Until now, Bosnian Serbs had blocked outsiders from visiting sites where they are accused of burying thousands of bodies.

But on Sunday, Shattuck commended his Bosnian Serb hosts as a "model of cooperation."

"I have had no restrictions on the places I've gone," he said.

The tribunal has so far indicted 52 people — 45 Serbs and seven Bosnian Croats. They include Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and army commander Gen. Ratko Mladic. But only one Bosnian Serb, arrested in Germany, has been brought before the court.

Another Bosnian Serb leader, Rajko Kasagic, said investigators would face no obstacles. But he told Serbian radio that reports of massacres were "disinformation ... without any proof."

Unclaimed college financial aid options available

With confusion over federal student grant approvals, direct government student loans and changes in college financial aid guidelines, many students are finding it difficult to identify and understand their financial aid options and are missing out on receiving assistance that could be available to them.

Students taking the traditional path of relying on federal, state and college financial aid and loans are becoming frustrated as they discover they can't afford to pay the increasing dollars they are asked to contribute each year. These extra payments are straining family budgets and assets as many families try to fund schooling through burdensome debt.

Yet unknown to most people, there are over 375,000 scholarship and grant sources available which do not have to be paid back. More than 80 percent of these scholarships do not depend on family need or exceptional grades but are awarded based on factors such as the student's interests, hobbies, academic focus, age heritage or parent's work or military service.

Remarkably, according to the National Commission on Student Financial Aid, over $6 billion of funding goes uncollected each year simply because students are not aware of it and do not apply for it. Now, through the resources of the National Academic Funding Administration (NAFA), an updated publication for 1996 is available which provides important information that will help all students seeking financial assistance.

For information on how to receive academic funding and scholarships send a No. 10 self-addressed, double-stamped business envelope plus $2 to cover handling to NAFA, 815 Middle Street, Suite 1400, Portsmouth, NH 03801.

One Woman's Pain Inspires Another Woman's Triumph

DEAR ABBY: You published a letter from Tara Esther Labbens in which she described her 49-year-old mother's death from lung cancer — just 34 days after her diagnosis. She told how her mother had tried for years to quit smoking, but was so hooked she smoked until the day she died.

I am a 25-year-old, happily married mother of two wonderful daughters, ages 3 and 5. I have been smoking for 13 years. A year ago, my husband also started smoking. I guess he figured if he couldn't beat me, he might as well join me.

After reading Tara's letter, I felt guilty around my kids. I showed the article to my husband and told him that I was considering quitting. He offered to quit with me to help me get through it.

As of Dec. 5, we have had a smoke-free house. Tara's letter saved our family's lives. I now have it framed and sitting on my dresser as a reminder. I hope to live a long, healthy life — and become my daughters' best friend.

At Christmas, we gave our families the good news. I want to thank Tara for extending my life and the lives of those around me. Her message really got through and was worth the pain it must have caused her to write it.

If this doesn't get printed, Abby, would you please pass it on to Tara? She may feel a little better knowing that her letter did some good. You may use my name.

LAURA GLEASH, PHOENIX

DEAR LAURA: I'm printing your letter in its entirety — I know Tara will be overjoyed when she sees it. Congratulations on your victory over the addiction. I'm sure the news that you and your husband have quit smoking was the best news your families have ever received.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to Helen Bierstein regarding retirement facilities in Europe was 100 percent correct. My husband and I are originally from the Netherlands, but our parents remained there. My mother spent her last seven years in such a home. The treatment that the elderly get there is excellent. The cost is very reasonable for both the elderly and for the family who visits and needs to stay overnight. (I traveled twice a year from Florida to see her.)

Prior to my mother's death, I spent three weeks at the retirement home to be with her during her last days. My two brothers and their wives stayed at the home off and on for the same period of time. This included meals and accommodations.

After Mother's funeral, I went to the office to pay whatever expenses we had incurred, but I was told there was no charge! They said it had been a pleasure to have had my mother for those seven years.

Abby, with all the talk in Washington, D.C., about cutting Medicare and Medicaid, one wonders, "Do we respect our senior citizens like they do in Holland?"

Thank you for mentioning this in your column.

RUURTJE VEIGHT-VAN DER KOOY, LAKE LAND, FLA.

DEAR RUURTJE: The treatment of senior citizens in some European countries is admirable. However, working people in those countries pay for this care with taxes far higher than those in the United States.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

PAMPA — Despite hurricane-like weather, the Hidden Hills Senior Association held an alternate shot scramble last Wednesday at Hidden Hills.

Results are listed below:
First place — Bill Washington, Everett Butler, Paul Buchanan and Louis Haydon and Glenn Downs, 142.

Second place — Ralph Wilson, Howard Musgrave, Ken Reeves and Troy Bennett, 145.

Third place — Oscar Sargent, Larry Kilbreath, Bob Brandon and Tom Hoxie, 147.
Paul Buchanan won closest to the pin honors.

"We had 39 brave seniors who fought those 50 mile per hour winds. You have to be pretty tough to do that, said Hidden Hills club pro David Teichmann.

TRACK &amp; FIELD

NEW YORK (AP) — Sprint sensation Michael Johnson, the world 200-meter and 400-meter champion last year, has been voted winner of the 1996 Jesse Owens International Trophy Award.

In balloting announced today, Johnson received 84 votes from a worldwide panel of electors, beating two other track and field stars.

Haile Gebrselassie of Ethiopia, who set world records in the 5,000 and 10,000 meters last year, finished second with 71 points, and Britain's Jonathan Edwards, who became the first triple jumper to surpass 60 feet, was third with 68 points.

Johnson set the stage for his unprecedented sprint sweep at the World Championships at Goteborg, Sweden, last August by winning both events at the USA Championships at Sacramento, Calif., in June. No other sprinter this century has won both sprints at the nationals.

BASKETBALL

SEATTLE (AP) — George Karl didn't care how many points Gary Payton scored or how many points and rebounds Shawn Kemp had.

"No one should be happy with the way we played and the responsibility falls on Shawn's and Gary's lap," the Seattle coach said Sunday night after the SuperSonics' 108-101 victory over Dallas.

"There is no questions that let-downs occur. We think we're better than we are. Any time that occurs in basketball, you get slapped. Fortunately, we didn't get slapped tonight."

Payton had a season-high 29 points and Kemp had 26 points and 13 rebounds as the Sonics improved to 16-2 at home and 27-11 overall.

But Karl, who is in the last year of his contract, was quick to note that three of the Sonics' losses have come to sub-500 teams.

"We've been spanked by Vancouver and Dallas. We've lost to lesser teams too often this year not to be aware of it. We've done it year in and year out — let down," Karl said.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Albert Belle was beaten out by Mo Vaughn in MVP balloting because several writers didn't like the way Belle treated them during the season.

"It was a question of character, they reasoned, and Vaughn reminded them Sunday night just how much of that quality he possesses.

Vaughn gave the longest and best-received acceptance speech of the night at the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America awards dinner, where he picked up his AL Most Valuable Player award.

In a 12-minute talk about tradition and respect in baseball, the Boston Red Sox star invoked such names as Jackie Robinson, Joe Black, Phil Rizzuto and Joe Garagiola and praised their work ethic and their accomplishments after leaving the game.

Cowboys cheered on arrival in Tempe

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Hundreds cheer their arrival in a city they don't call home. Dozens more try to sneak into their luxury hotel for a peek, an autograph, and who knows what else?

The "Boys are back in town." "That was about as rewarding and exciting as getting off any plane anywhere," Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Sunday night after the rousing reception his NFC champions received from the folks in Arizona, where the Super Bowl will be played next Sunday. "I was reminded of the great fans we have out here."

The Cowboys seemingly have them everywhere. It didn't seem to matter to anyone that the AFC champion Pittsburgh Steelers weren't around yet; they arrive today. Some people, particularly the oddsmakers who have the Steelers as 13-point underdogs, apparently wonder if they should show up at all.

For one day, at least, the Cowboys certainly were enough. Security was tight and few fans slipped through into the mountainside hotel housing America's Team. Still, the airport greeting made it clear this also is Arizona's Team — at least in this Super Bowl.

"Until we arrived, it hadn't even hit me that the Super Bowl is in Phoenix, where we have such a great group of fans," Jones said. "Before the Cardinals were here, this was Cowboys territory, and we've kept a lot of those fans."

The players also noticed and weren't surprised.

All-Pro safety Darren Woodson, who grew up in the Phoenix area and played at Arizona State — in the very stadium where the 30th Super Bowl will take place — hardly looks at this as a road trip.

"When I heard Phoenix got a Super Bowl, I knew I'd have a chance to be in it with this team," Woodson said. "It's almost like a homecoming for us when we play the Cardinals and hear our fans.

It's almost a homefield edge, and our fans make a lot of noise.

"We know this stadium. We've been here every year and we're 6-2 here."

Not that returning home for a Super Bowl is easy for Woodson, who has been bombarded by ticket requests.

"It's a good feeling," he admitted. "There is more pressure, with my family and friends ... I'm hearing from cousins from way, way back."

Getting here early might be a wise move. While the Steelers check in and then almost immediately have to meet the media, the Cowboys get a chance to kick back, do a little socializing and, well, play the role of rock star. Which, at least in the cases of Troy, Emmitt, Michael and Deion — do we really need surnames? — seems apropos.

"I think the Super Bowl is always a new experience, no matter where or where or who you play," said fullback Daryl Johnston, hardly a media megastar but one of the best players at his position in the game. "Because of what we get in Dallas, all the attention there and everywhere we go, we might be more used to it.

"But we all realize the main purpose of being here, and I don't think any of the players will be distracted or misled. They know we have a lot of unfinished work. I don't think we have to worry about our guys being in awe or thinking this is a big party."

The Super Bowl has been a blast for the NFC since 1984. Eleven straight victories and counting. It's a legacy the Steelers aren't a part of — they're 4-0 in the title game, but haven't gotten this far since the 1979 season.

That AFC slide is another burden the Steelers carry with them when they get off the plane today. And when they are queried about it all week. And, of course, when they take the field at Sun Devil Stadium.

"We realize at some point the AFC is going to win them," Troy Aikman said. "We just hope it's not this year. We're here to make sure it isn't this year."

Power move

Harvesters' football player Ryan Bruce placed second in the 181-pound division at a Pampa power lifting meet over the weekend at the high school athletic building. Eleven schools were entered in the meet.

Pampa boys shut out Caprock to capture Amarillo soccer tourney

AMARILLO — Pampa shut out Caprock, 1-0, to win the Division Two, Class 4A championship over the weekend at the Amarillo Tournament.

After winning three of five matches Friday, Pampa came back Saturday to win two more matches. Randal Odom hit the game-winning goal for the Harvesters in the finals against Caprock.

"Friday was a bad day, but Saturday we dominated everybody," Caprock had about 4 shots at the goal and we had around 50," said Pampa coach Warren Cottle.

Trey McCavit, Matt Brown and Justin Molitor were among the defensive standouts for Pampa, Cottle said.

"I believe our defense was the key," Cottle said. "The kids really needed this one after a tough loss to San Angelo Central earlier in the week. The training they're going through is really starting to show up."

Georgia challenging for No. 1 in women's poll

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer

Surging Georgia became Louisiana Tech's top challenger today for the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press women's basketball poll.

While Tech remained the overwhelming choice as the nation's No. 1 team, Georgia continued its climb in the poll by replacing Vanderbilt at No. 2. That's an improvement of two spots for the Lady Bulldogs, who have won 12 straight since a 2-2 start.

Vanderbilt dropped to fifth after its first loss of the season, 85-82 at Tennessee. Tennessee advanced two places to fourth and Connecticut remained third.

Vanderbilt's loss left Louisiana Tech (16-0) as the nation's only unbeaten Division I team, but the Lady Techsters face a tough game tonight at Tennessee.

Louisiana Tech received 38 of 39 first-place votes from a national media panel and had 974 points. It was the first time in six weeks that Tech was not a unanimous No. 1. The other first-place vote went to Georgia (14-2), which had 929 points.

Connecticut (16-3) had 846 points in the voting, Tennessee (15-3) 835 and Vanderbilt (14-1) 828.

Stanford, Virginia, Iowa, Texas Tech and Penn State rounded out the Top Ten. Stanford slipped one spot, while Iowa and Texas Tech traded places.

Old Dominion jumped four places to head the Second Ten and was followed by Duke, Wisconsin, North Carolina State, Oregon State, Colorado, Alabama, Clemson, Northwestern and Florida. The last five were Purdue, Arkansas, Mississippi, Oklahoma State and Auburn.

There were no newcomers. Notre Dame came the closest to breaking into the Top 25, finishing 10 points behind Auburn.

Tennessee should give Louisiana Tech the type of challenge it isn't getting in its Sun Belt Conference games. The Lady Techsters won three games last week — one by 38 points and two by 45. They've been No. 1 since the first regular-season poll.

Georgia began its winning streak after getting blown out by Virginia 94-65 on Dec. 2. The last four victories have been against Top 25 teams — Tennessee, Auburn, Connecticut and Penn State. The Lady Bulldogs won at Connecticut last Monday and at Penn State on Saturday.

The No. 2 ranking matches Georgia's highest of the season. The Lady Bulldogs also held that spot in the preseason poll and in the first regular-season poll. They dropped to sixth after losing to Old Dominion in their second game and fell to 12th after the loss to Virginia.

Clemson (13-1) made the biggest advance this week, going from 24th to 18th after knocking off North Carolina State. Oklahoma State (13-3) had the biggest fall, slipping from 19th to 24th after losses at Kansas State and Kansas.

Close finish kept Brooks on his toes

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Mark Brooks, able to keep a close eye on his top rivals, knew he couldn't let up in the final round.

Steady under pressure, Brooks fired his second consecutive 5-under-par 67 Sunday to finish one shot ahead of John Huston in the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

Brooks, Huston, Payne Stewart and Jeff Maggert were tied for the lead heading into the last day of the five-day, 90-hole tournament, and the final round was tight all the way.

A first-round co-leader and at or near the top of the leader board the entire tournament, Brooks birdied No. 15 Sunday to move two strokes ahead, then parred out. Huston birdied the final hole for a 68 that lifted him out of a second-place tie with Scott Hoch.

"What was going on in our group sort of told me what I needed to do," said Brooks, in the last threesome with Huston and Stewart. "I like to know what's going on. I check the leader board if I have to.

"I think it was good for me that it was close. I felt like I needed to make birdies."

Brooks, winning for the fifth time in his 12 years on the tour, piled up the birdies all week. He finished the Hope, traditionally won by very low scores, at 23-under and his "worst" round was a 69.

"My target score was a 24- or 25-under," he said. "I was lucky a bunch of guys didn't shoot real low. The greens weren't pristine and Payne and John weren't able to make a number of putts that were in birdie range."

Brooks sealed the win when, hitting from the rough off the 18th fairway, he knocked a 6-iron within 12 feet of the pin. Trying to play it safe and lag the ball near the cup on his putt, he almost rolled it in, leaving the ball near the lip for a tap-in.

"I think the turning point was at No. 15, the par-5," Brooks said. "John should have made a 4; Payne could have. Instead, they made 5s and I made the 4 (with a 6-foot putt)."

Huston said: "Anytime you have that good a chance to win and you don't, I think it's a little disappointing. But I'm pleased with the way I played overall. I concentrated well.

"If I had been able to hit it close, with the way I was putting, I would have had a good chance. Mark played well. He was very solid."

Brooks, who last won in 1994, earned $234,000. Huston got $140,400 for finishing second.

Hoch, in a group ahead of the final threesome, closed within one shot of the lead before paring the final four holes for a 65.

Stewart had a 70 to wind up three shots behind. Also at 20-under were third-round leader Brad Bryant (68) and Nolan Henke (69).

Fred Couples shot a 70 to finish in a four-way tie at 19-under. Also in the group was defending champion Kenny Perry, who could never completely recover from an opening 75, second-round leader Paul Goydos and Maggert. Perry closed with a 65, Goydos 69 and Maggert 71.

The golfers rotated on four different courses, playing program, for the first four days of the Hope. Then the field was cut to the low 70 scorers and ties, and the pros played the final round at the host course, Indian Ridge Country Club this year.

Hula Bowl MVPs out to impress scouts

HONOLULU (AP) — Winslow Oliver had a one-track sense of direction: toward the end zone. And he had only one goal in mind at the Hula Bowl: impress the NFL scouts.

Although the 5-foot-8, 175-pound running back from New Mexico was put on the East squad, he was impressive as he scored two touchdowns — one on a record 53-yard jaunt — in leading the East to a 17-10 victory over the West.

After the game, Oliver made it clear that he wasn't planning on wasting the trip just to frolic in the sun and surf.

"I'll tell you straight out: All I wanted to do was come here and play football," he said after being named the East's most valuable player. "It didn't matter who I played for. I just wanted to play and show everyone what I could do. It ended up perfect."

He wound up with 88 yards on 10 carries, with his long TD run erasing the mark of 49 yards set by Clinton Jones of Michigan State 29 years ago.

The West quickly discovered Oliver's skills as he scooted around right end from 10 yards out for a touchdown in the first quarter. His second score, in the third period, put the East out of reach.

In between, Neil Voskeritchian of Colorado kicked a 24-yard field goal.

On his game-winning score, Oliver said, "I was looking outside, but they had it covered. A small crease in the center opened and I took it."

Mike Gottfried, who coached the East, said Oliver's MVP award was well-deserved.

"When he made that run in the end, that was the ball game right there because we were struggling offensively," said the ESPN football commentator who bested fellow college football host Lee Corso for the second straight year.

Another player who had the same game philosophy as Olier was Regan Upshaw, a junior defensive lineman from California who has filed for the draft.

"I was really serious about coming here and showing what I could do," said Upshaw, who was voted the West's MVP. "A lot of people come here just to have fun, but I sat in my room and tried to be real serious about what I was here for."

Upshaw didn't have to convince Gottfried, who said: "We just couldn't run against him. We just couldn't control him."

Teen-age sensation ousted from Australian Tennis Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Teen-age sensation Mark Philippoussis, the conqueror of Pete Sampras, was ousted from the Australian Open today by the slicing and softballing of veteran Mark Woodforde.

Philippoussis, who never dropped service in knocking Sampras out of the No. 1 ranking Saturday, was broken seven times in his 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 loss.

It also was a bad day for another power server, women's No. 11 Brenda Schultz-McCarthy. She lost 6-1, 6-4 to the tournament's youngest player, 15-year-old Martina Hingis of Switzerland.

Hingis provided a light moment, after serving a blistering 100 mph ace while leading 5-1 in the first set. After the two women joked over that, and Schultz-McCarthy backed up to receive the next serve, Hingis tried an underhand serve.

She lost that point, but made it difficult for the Dutch player by giving her only four unforced errors. Schultz-McCarthy had 34.

Of the underhand serve, Schultz-McCarthy, who served at speeds up to 123 mph — a record for a woman — said: "For her, it's just a game, which is great, I think. I wish I could see it like that. I'm 25. You fight for every point, and then this little girl just hits an underhand serve."

Michelle Kogler and Stacie Carter fill their plates with Middle Ages-inspired food Friday afternoon at the close of two weeks of study of the medieval period in Sharon Jett's sixth grade history class at Pampa Middle School. Each class crowned a king and queen, as well as selecting a knight and lady-in-waiting.

Evacuated residents return to flood ravaged homes, shattered lives

(AP) — After the worst flooding to hit the East in years, swollen waterways slowly receded and thousands of evacuated residents returned home to find floors caked with mud and basements turned into icy swimming pools.

Melting blizzard snow combined with heavy rain turned once-placid waterways into raging torrents, forcing weekend evacuations in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey and New York. At least 27 deaths, mostly from drowning, were blamed on heavy flooding.

"We had eight feet of water in the cellar. It was filled right to the top," said Barbara Meuller, from her home along the Delaware River in Harmony Township, N.J. "We have seen the water come up to the banks many times, but never anything like this."

Normally smooth as a lake, the Delaware's cocoa-brown water on Sunday raged under a bridge crossing to New Hope, Pa., showing off the bits and pieces of the lives it touched.

"There were hot tubs floating down there, people's shacks, tires, barrels, you name it," said

Mike Smith, one of many who jammed the bridge to watch, some videotaping the spectacle.

President Clinton on Sunday declared six Pennsylvania counties, covering the towns of Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Bloomsburg, a disaster area, and Gov. Tom Ridge said he was pressing for federal help for 52 more.

"We've got people dead and missing. We've got families walking around in shelters with only the clothes on their backs. We have roads under water and ice," Ridge said. "We have lost bridges ... but according to them, we've got flooding in basements and that's about it."

Governors in New Jersey, New York and Ohio also said they were seeking federal disaster relief.

In many areas, families huddled at shelters waiting for waterways to abate so they could return home. Susan Parker, her husband, Robert, and their five children waited Sunday at an American Red Cross shelter in Harrisburg, Pa. "I can't wait," she said.

In nearby Bloomsburg, where the hum of heavy duty vacuums and water pumps sucking the water from basements filled the air, some residents allowed to return home on Sunday seemed nonchalant.

"We're used to it," Collins Long said. "Anybody who lives on the banks of a river knows that it's going to flood sometimes."

Unseasonably warm temperatures last week and heavy rain broke up ice jams along streams and creeks and melted mounds of snow on riverbanks — in some areas up to 40 inches — that had fallen during the region's record-breaking blizzard two weeks ago.

In Bucks County, Pa., Robert Eyre fled with his family to New Jersey on Saturday after an 18-foot ice dam shattered, releasing a wall of water.

"There was a rumbling sound from the (Delaware) river — huge chunks of ice moving very fast," Eyre said. "We heard about the ice dam breaking, and no one knew what to expect."

In central Pennsylvania, some bridges remained closed and railroad tracks east of Harrisburg were covered, forcing Amtrak to reroute passengers onto buses between the city and Lancaster.
