WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry (R-Amarillo) reminds area high school students that entries for "Artistic Discovery," the 1996 Congressional Art Competition, should be submitted no later than Friday, Feb. 2, at 4:30 p.m.

Thornberry is sponsoring this year's Congressional Art Competition in conjunction with Midwestern State University's third annual high school art competition. All entries for the Congressional Art Competition should be submitted directly to the Midwestern State University Art Department, located in the Fain Fine Arts Building, 3410 Taft, Wichita Falls, TX 76308.

The Congressional Art Competition is open to all high school students in the 13th District. The winning entry will be displayed for one year on Capitol Hill in Washington, while the second and third place entries will be on display in Thornberry's 13th District office.

The winners will be announced at an award presentation scheduled to take place at Midwestern Feb. 10.

PAMPA — An Arizona man convicted in 1994 of possession of methamphetamine will get a new trial following an appeals court decision handed down Jan. 23.

A jury found William Howard Elder, Glendale, Ariz., guilty of the first degree felony charge in April, 1994 and assessed 30 years in prison and a $75,000 fine. It was alleged he and traveling companion John Thomas White, Mesa, Ariz., were transporting methamphetamine to Indiana for sale when they were arrested near McLean on Interstate 40 on Nov. 10, 1993.

The Seventh Court of Appeals judgment reversed the trial court and sent the case back to the 223rd District Court for a new trial.

White entered a plea bargain agreement which netted him up to six months in Gray County jail, 10 years probation and a $10,000 fine.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Two pen-and-ink drawings by Pablo Picasso and Henry Moore were recovered in a private collection 28 years after being stolen from a University of Michigan traveling exhibit.

No arrests were made in the thefts.

The FBI was trying to trace the chain of possession since the sketches disappeared from Delta College near Saginaw in 1967, authorities said. The drawings are estimated to be worth at least $100,000 each.

Clinton waits for action on spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a midnight deadline looming, a White House spokesman said today President Clinton is willing to sign a bill approved by the Republican-led House that would keep the government running through March 15.

The Senate today was taking up the measure, which would extend federal spending authority another seven weeks while cutting back funds for dozens of federal agencies.

In a telephone call today to radio station KGOR-FM in Omaha, Neb., Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the Senate would pass the measure today and ship it immediately to the president.

"He'll sign it tonight, and the government will stay open until March 15," Dole said.

Without the bill, thousands of federal civil servants face a third partial government shutdown beginning Saturday. But the White House said Clinton would sign it before the current temporary spending bill expires at midnight tonight.

"We fully expect Congress to take care of that today," press secretary Mike McCurry told reporters. Earlier, he said, "We're satisfied that a lot of give-and-take has produced an agreement the president can live with."

However, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said today Democrats would offer two amendments to the temporary spending bill. One would raise the nation's $4.9 trillion debt limit by $185 billion, enough to last until March 1997. The other would restore federal education spending to last year's levels, up from the 75 percent level in the bill.

Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer, who appeared with Daschle at a news conference, said without the restoration Detroit schools would suffer a $16.1 million cut and could have to lay off 419 teachers.

The House on Thursday passed the temporary spending measure, 371-42, marking the first fruit of the new mood of detente between Congress and the White House.

Having abandoned any hope of reaching a balanced budget agreement soon, Republicans and the administration have agreed to seek more modest goals, seeking smaller spending and tax cuts while keeping the government open and raising the federal debt ceiling.

"This has been an incredibly tense negotiation," said Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. But "both sides have come together and crafted a compromise that keeps the government open for the next 45 days."

Stung by public criticism of the budget impasse that led to two shutdowns keeping federal workers home for nearly a month, House Republicans agreed that another shutdown wasn't politically feasible.

"We've got to be patient, you don't always get what you want," said Rep. Mark Foley, R-Fla., whose freshman class has been among the most outspoken hard-liners on a budget deal.

But they also exacted a price for keeping the government running. Ten small programs were terminated and several programs disliked by Republicans but favored by the administration — such as the AmeriCorps national service program, the Ounce of Prevention Council and Cops on the Beat — are to be funded at only 75 percent of 1995 levels.

The bill applies to those programs that have no 1996 budget, either because Clinton vetoed their spending bills or Congress has yet to finish work on them. They include education, crime, labor, international, health and housing programs.

The bill freezes new grant activities at a level not to exceed 75 percent of the prior monthly rate for several dozen programs such as the National AIDS Program Office, Youth Gang Substance Abuse, the Federal Council on Aging and Bilingual Education Support Services. It allows some agencies that face lower spending levels to furlough or fire employees.

Anti-abortion lawmakers insisted on seeing some of their agenda in the bill, creating a problem that nearly disrupted the negotiations.

City parks advisory board seeks to fill two vacancies

Parks and Recreation Department Advisory Board members are seeking new candidates to serve on the board, hoping to fill two current vacancies and at least one upcoming one.

Terry Ledbetter and James Kane recently left the board, and Robert Ellis indicated he would leave at the end of his term in April.

The terms of Rodney Springer and Judy Elliott will also expire in April, but they indicated they would be willing to serve again, with city commission approval.

The board is allowed seven members. Anyone interested in serving can contact Mayor Robert Neslage, City Manager Bob Eskridge, City Secretary

Phyllis Jeffers or any city commissioner, Parks Director Reed Kirkpatrick said.

In other business, the board discussed their plans to attend the Texas Recreation and Park Society annual institute and trade show in Lubbock March 2-5. They also discussed ways to inform the community that people can choose to donate $1 with their water bill to be used for the Parks Department and Clean Pampa Inc.

Board members also learned that the city commission was expected to soon review their needs assessment survey that should be mailed to residents in late February or early March.

The board also voted to keep their meeting time at 6 p.m.

Bosnia leaders call for release of POWs, agree to work together

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Leaders of the two halves of postwar Bosnia called today for the immediate release of prisoners of war and agreed to work together to ease Serb fears about a reunified Sarajevo.

The meeting itself was significant. It was the first time top rival leaders met on Serb turf since war broke out in April 1992, and it marked another step in efforts to translate a paper peace deal into reality.

A U.S. official, meanwhile, accused the Croatian government of bargaining for favorable trial conditions before handing over seven indicted Bosnian Croats to the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal.

The official, speaking in Croatia on condition of anonymity, said Croatia insists that the suspects remain free before or during trial and that, if convicted, serve prison sentences in Croatia.

Christian Chartier, a spokesman for the tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, said the court "cannot bargain with anyone."

Kresimir Zubak, a Bosnian Croat, heads the federation that is to govern half of Bosnia after the peace plan is implemented. In Pale today, he met with Momcilo Krajisnik, a hard-line leader of the Bosnian Serbs, who are to govern Bosnia's other half.

"We agreed to issue orders for the release of the remaining prisoners as soon as possible," Krajisnik said after 2 1/2 hours of talks.

A statement from the office of Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said he would order the unilateral release of Muslim and Croat POWs. It did not say when the release would take place, but Bosnian Serb sources in Pale said it would occur in the next couple of days.

The POW release is key to building confidence and fostering goodwill among Bosnia's enemy factions.

The rivals' failure to release all POWs by Jan. 19 was the first significant violation of Bosnia's Dec. 14 peace accord. Only about a third of the approximately 900 registered prisoners were freed.

Zubak, an ethnic Croat, and Krajisnik, a hard-line Serb leader, also agreed to work together to ease tensions around Sarajevo. An estimated 70,000

Serbs have threatened to flee the capital after the federation takes control of Serb-held sections in March.

"Personally, I am calling on Serbs to stay," Zubak said. "They'll have full equality with all other peoples."

Krajisnik said Bosnian Serbs wanted an agreement with the federation on co-existence in Sarajevo.

"Serbs want to have their own authority and want compromise," he said. "The message to the Serbs and all other people in Sarajevo is that joint life in Sarajevo can be established only if there is mutual respect and if minimum interests and rights and authority of all three nations is respected."

Though qualified, it was the strongest statement of support for a united Sarajevo from a senior Bosnian Serb official.

The smooth reunification of Sarajevo is considered a litmus test of the peace deal.

Tentative meetings about reunifying the capital began at the municipal level. On Wednesday, the Bosnian Serbs' premier, Rajko Kasagic, met with Bosnia's Muslim prime minister, Haris Silajdzic, in the government-held part of Sarajevo. It was the first time since war began that a top Serb official had entered government territory for talks.

Just hours after the Wednesday meeting ended, two Portuguese soldiers and an Italian were killed accidentally in an explosion in a NATO compound. It was the most serious military accident since troops began to arrive in December to enforce the peace plan.

Federal judge nixes buffalo hunt plans

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A federal judge today prohibited state-sponsored buffalo hunts at Fort Wingate Army Depot until the Army completes an environmental assessment on the impact of the hunt.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Martha Vazquez is a victory for Indian and animal rights groups who sued the Army to halt the hunts, planned for three successive weekends this month at the closed Army installation near Gallup.

The losers were the nine hunters who were chosen in a lottery to participate in the hunts and the state Game and Fish Department which planned the hunts.

The Game and Fish Department scheduled the hunts in an effort to eliminate nine aging bulls from a state-owned herd of 60.

The department said it needed to cull the herd to stabilize breeding and prevent overgrazing at Fort Wingate. Department officials also have said the older animals could no longer chew their food with their worn-out teeth.

The first two hunts were postponed when Vazquez issued a temporary restraining order on Jan. 12. The third hunt had been set for this weekend.

Vazquez said she would retain jurisdiction over the case until the Army complied with environmental law.

The Army's main argument was that it didn't have any jurisdiction over the hunt because it had signed a contract with the state, allowing the state to hold the hunt unless the hunt posed a security risk at Fort Wingate.

Christopher to meet with Russia's leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) - Eager to confirm Russia remains on a path to free enterprise and democracy, Secretary of State Warren Christopher today set up two meetings with Kremlin leaders - one next month in Helsinki, Finland, and the other in March in Moscow.

The first meeting will be with Yevgeny Primakov, the new foreign minister, in Helsinki Feb. 10-11. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns called it a chance "to get better acquainted and to establish a working relationship."

The second meeting will take Christopher to Moscow sometime in March. Responding to an invitation from President Boris N. Yeltsin, he will meet there again with Primakov as well as with Yeltsin and other leaders in a government undergoing significant personnel changes as Yeltsin seeks to deflect criticism of his reform policies.

Christopher will go to Helsinki from the Middle East, where he has scheduled five or six days of shuttling between Jerusalem and Damascus in an effort to pep up negotiations now under way in eastern Maryland between Israel and Syria. His plan to fly to Helsinki Feb. 9 means he could not have an open-ended shuttle unless he postponed the meeting with Primakov he is eager to hold quickly.

In April, President Clinton is due to go to Moscow for talks with Yeltsin. Christopher's two meetings are designed to gauge the extent the Russian president remains committed to reformist policies.

On Thursday, the administration welcomed new pledges of continued reform from Russian leaders, but reserved judgment on Yeltsin's selection of Vladimir Kadannikov, an old-style Soviet bureaucrat, to succeed Anatoly Chubais, an economic reformer forced out after communists and extreme nationalists made sizable gains in the election of a new Russian parliament.

Earlier, Primakov succeeded reform-minded Andrei V. Kozyrev as foreign minister.

These and other changes prompted administration officials to question Yeltsin's commitment to political and economic reform. On Thursday, spokesman Burns expressed satisfaction with Moscow's responses.

"Recent statements by President Yeltsin and others made publicly, but also a number of statements made to us privately in Moscow over the last couple of days, have encouraged us to believe that the Russian government will meet its commitments and will continue its general reform orientation," Burns said.

Asked about Kadannikov's appointment, the U.S. spokesman was guarded.

"He's in a critical position because the (International Monetary Fund), among others, is now negotiating a $9 billion credit line with the Russian government," Burns said.

Bosnia

An Italian military source in Sarajevo, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday that the blast was caused by a small grenade-type bomb carried by a Portuguese soldier, not by a land mine as previously reported. A memorial service for the dead soldiers was to be held at Sarajevo airport today.

Also on Wednesday, three French legionnaires were injured during a grenade-throwing exercise. The accident happened outside Sarajevo, according to a French military statement released Thursday.

The most seriously injured soldier suffered serious hand injuries and was to be flown to Paris for treatment.

Kasagic returned to Sarajevo today to give an interview to Bosnian government television, in an apparent further bid to reassure Sarajevans.

About 300 people gathered today in the Serb-held sector of Ilidza to light candles for the dead and protest the peace accord. But the organized gathering was a far cry from the protests that thousands of Serbs staged shortly after the peace deal was signed.

No date was given for the prisoners releases, but Red Cross officials were on standby.

The Bosnian Serb in charge of POWs, Dragan Bulajic, said he would release the remaining 180 prisoners as soon as the Red Cross could take them.

President Alija Izetbegovic said his government "will most probably bring such a decision during the day."

According to the Red Cross, the Bosnian government still holds 318 prisoners and Bosnian Croats 177.

Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader, also said he would cooperate with international war crimes investigators.

But Karadzic, himself indicted for genocide, ruled out extraditing suspects to the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

"All those who committed crimes will be tried in the (Bosnian) Serb republic," Karadzic said.

Only one of the 52 people indicted by the tribunal, a Bosnian Serb, is in custody in The Hague.

The West has been pressuring all sides to comply fully with the U.S.-brokered peace deal, threatening to withhold promised aid otherwise.

Counseling association schedules workshop

AMARILLO - High Plains Counseling Association will have its Spring Workshop on Feb. 2 at St. Stephens Methodist Church at 4600 S. Western, Amarillo. Registration will start at 8 a.m.

Dr. Jim Sell will present "Methods for Ethical Decision Making." Six hours of LPC credit or 6 hours CEU may be obtained for the workshop.

High Plains Counseling Association is an area chapter of Texas Counseling Association. HPCA covers 26 counties, and is an organization for Licensed Professional Counselors and Certified School Counselors. Counselors are required to continue their education each year to retain their license, and to stay up to date on the new laws and research concerning the counseling profession.

Formulating a decision when faced with ethical/legal conflict is usually more complicated than reading what someone else did in an ethical dilemma casebook. An ethical dilemma is having to make a choice between two possible alternatives, both of which are undesirable. Dr. Sells' presentation will focus on ways to determine a course of action when following the ethical guidelines appears insufficient in defining a proper course of action.

Sells is an assistant professor of counseling at West Texas A&M University. His doctorate is in counseling psychology from the University of Southern California. His specializations during his doctoral studies were counselor supervision, family therapy and adolescent development. He has master's degrees in education and counseling from Wheaton Graduate School and Northern Illinois University.

Sells is also involved in private practice as a partner at the Amarillo Family Institute. He is married to Heather Sells, and they have an infant daughter.

The seminar, made possible by volunteers of the American Cancer Society, will present straightforward information on cancer, address cancer facts, provide practical hints and include presentations and class discussions in helping people to become informed of cancer, make informed decisions with their doctors and become partners in the treatment team.

Included in the seminar sessions will be information about human anatomy, how cancer develops, diagnosis and treatment, side effects of treatment, new research and clinical trials, communication skills, emotions, self-esteem, cancer and intimacy, and community resources.

Organizers say the information and insights offered in the "I Can Cope" seminar classes help patients, families and friends with the day-to-day issues of living with a chronic disease like cancer.

Survey shows Gramm's support is fading

HOUSTON (AP) - Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm still holds a big lead over his potential Democratic opponents but a poll released Friday shows his base support fading.

Thirty-seven percent of those surveyed in the poll taken for the Houston Chronicle and Houston television station KPRC said they definitely would vote for Gramm's re-election. That's down, however, from about 46 percent in a similar survey last July.

Despite the erosion, his edge still is at least 16 percentage points over potential Democratic opponents in November.

The survey by Mason-Dixon Political-Media Research of Columbia, Md., included 819 registered voters questioned Jan. 20-22. The margin of error in the survey is plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

"Gramm certainly has to still be considered the favorite in his reelection bid, but his support in Texas has been falling," Del Ali, vice president of the polling firm, said.

Ali said voters are unhappy with Gramm running for both reelection and for the Republican presidential nomination.

Gramm spokesman Larry Neal downplayed the slide.

"There is simply no bad face you can put on this poll," Neal said. "Phil Gramm is the commanding front-runner in the Senate race and is clearly bound for victory. The Democratic field is as weak as you can get."

Among Democrats, U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Dallas led with 24 percent, but 41 percent of those surveyed said they didn't know who he was.

Another congressman, Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, was second with 17 percent.

Copeland seeking GOP nod for Gray County sheriff post

Retired Department of Public Safety trooper Don Copeland has announced his candidacy for Gray County sheriff.

Copeland, a newcomer to partisan politics, will face Sheriff Randy Stubblefield in the Republican primary March 12. Copeland, a Republican, was born in Shamrock in 1938 and is a graduate of Shamrock High School. He is married to Marilyn Copeland; they are the parents of Randy Copeland, San Diego; Suzann Shaull, Bristow, Okla.; and Ed Copeland, Pampa.

Copeland joined Department of Public Safety in 1968 after a stint with the Shamrock Police Department and Wheeler County Sheriff's Office.

He moved to Pampa 1980 after working in Wichita Falls, Electra and Shamrock. Copeland retired Aug. 31, 1995. He holds a commission as a Special Texas Ranger as an honorably retired member of DPS. Copeland earned 2,061 hours of training through the Texas Commission of Law Enforcement Officers Standards and Education and holds a master peace officers license.

"I plan on working with every law enforcement agency I need to," said Copeland.

Don Copeland

Copeland said if elected he will see that employees exceed state mandated training levels.

"As your sheriff, I will take an aggressive stand on narcotics trafficking and enforcement. I will expand drug awareness programs to all areas of Gray County with emphasis on youth and civic organizations. ... I will also strive to increase the efficiency of the Sheriff's Department by maximum utilization of all available resources," he said.

State briefs

Charges filed against teen in death of his niece

MIDLAND (AP) — A 19-year-old Midland man has been charged with capital murder in the death earlier this month of his 9-month-old niece, who suffered fatal head injuries while he was babysitting her.

Abel David Alarcan was arrested Thursday at his Midland residence. Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bail at $100,000.

Emily Carter was injured while Alarcan babysat her and his 13-month-old daughter on Jan. 9, officials said. An autopsy determined that the child died from a "blunt-force trauma to the head."

Alarcan said the girl suffered her injuries in a fall from her bed at his mother's house. The child was declared clinically brain dead the next day at University Medical Center in Lubbock, and her parents authorized recovery of her organs for use by other children.

Dallas teacher fired for alleged racist remarks

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas teacher accused by her black fifth-grade students of telling them they should go back to Africa has been fired.

A three-member administrative panel, which earlier conducted a three-day hearing in which it heard from 16 witnesses, found Thursday that she was quoting someone else and did not express a personal view.

But Deen Williamson showed gross errors in judgment in making the comments, the panel found, and "is no longer fit or qualified to work in a multi-cultural environment such as the Dallas public schools."

The school district suspended Ms. Williamson with pay on Oct. 18, two days after a classroom discussion concerning the Million Man March on Washington on Oct. 15.

The action came after students and parents complained that she told fifth-grade students at Umphrey Lee Elementary School that black students were inferior and should go back to Africa.

The panel found she should have more accurately gauged her students' anticipated response to the statement and, therefore, showed poor judgment.

Plan will notify stalking victims of attackers' release

FORT WORTH (AP) — In September, a state law took effect requiring that counties notify victims of family violence and stalking whenever the aggressor posts bail or is otherwise released.

Tarrant County officials called a news conference for today to announce that in March the county will become the first in the state to use an automated calling system to notify victims.

A high-tech computer system will attempt to bridge the information gap between victims of crime and the criminal justice system, Tarrant County Sheriff David Williams said Thursday.

The automated monitoring system will initially be limited to county jail inmates, providing around-the-clock access to county inmate information and keeping victims apprised of significant status changes as cases move through the judicial process.

40,000 acres donated to state

AUSTIN (AP) — Approximately 40,000 acres of land in the Chinati Mountains in West Texas have been donated to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the largest such donation in the agency's history.

The land, adjacent to the Rio Grande in Presidio County, was donated by the Richard King Mellon Foundation.

The site features stunning scenery and a wide array of wildlife. It includes diverse terrain, ranging from dramatic granite bluffs to spring-filled, woodland canyons and grass plateaus.

Mauro vows to appeal jury verdict on Canadian River

WELLINGTON (AP) — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro vows to appeal a jury decision directing the state to pay $514,000 to landowners entangled in a six-year lawsuit over Canadian River land boundaries.

Mauro said the "outrageous" decision Tuesday in Collingsworth County sets a precedent for other raids on riverbeds and mineral rights the state claims as Permanent School Fund land.

Attorney fees and survey costs were awarded to plaintiffs, including gas tycoon Boone Pickens, the Morrison Cattle Co. and the Catharine C. Whittenberg Trusts.

"I don't care how rich or powerful they are," Mauro said in a prepared statement. "I will continue to fight for the rights of the schoolchildren of Texas in this case."

A jury in Wellington, about 100 miles southeast of Amarillo, directed that the state pay the plaintiffs and intervenors $350,000 in attorneys' fees; $144,000 for the services of land surveyors; $15,000 for any appeal to the Court of Appeals; and $5,000 for responding to any appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

Dallas attorney Mike Powell said the plaintiffs had sought about $800,000 in expenses.

"We're very pleased with the outcome of the case," Powell said Thursday. "Our position — that the landowners owned the land down to the flowing water — was found to be correct ... and the state's position had been unreasonable."

The lawsuit against the Texas General Land Office had originated in 1989 with several landowners with holdings along a 37-mile strip of the Canadian River in Hutchinson and Roberts counties.

The landowners agree that the state owns the riverbed. The dispute: How wide is the riverbed?

Landowners claimed they were entitled to the property where the river used to flow before the 1965 completion of the Sanford Dam narrowed the watercourse downstream.

The state argued, meanwhile, that the riverbed boundaries are not determined by flowing water alone and that the are not affected by artificial changes.

Ron Calhoun, spokesman for the land office, said state District Judge Kent Sims has ruled that the landowners were entitled to surface and mineral rights along the disputed stretch.

"This case, if allowed to stand, would set an awful precedent, prompting dozens of similar, costly raids on school land in riverbeds in other parts of the state," Mauro said.

Mauro said his office will appeal to the Texas Court of Appeals in Amarillo and the Texas Supreme Court, if necessary, to protect the Permanent School Fund, which provides money for public education in the state.

Sims "had the gall" to rule that the state was frivolous in defending its boundary claims, he said.

"That's outrageous," Mauro said. "This has got to be the first time that the state, or any defendant for that matter, was ruled to be frivolous just because it defended itself against being sued. What were we supposed to do, lay down and give them title to 13,000 acres of Permanent School Fund land and mineral rights without a court fight?"

Case of runaway pregnant girl raises more questions

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — It turns out Cindy Garcia wasn't 10, wasn't from Houston and wasn't even Cindy Garcia.

The case of the young pregnant girl whose flight from social services authorities prompted a wide search because of fears for her safety and the safety of her unborn child took an even stranger twist Thursday.

The girl was carrying a bogus birth certificate that had been obtained by her mother, police said.

What authorities now believe is that Cindy really is Adella Quintana, probably about 14, born in Mexico and is about eight months pregnant. Officials earlier feared she could deliver her child any day, but doctors who examined her Thursday said she had about a month to go.

The man accused of impregnating her, Pedro Sotelo, 22, a Mexican national, was set for a court appearance later today on charges of aggravated sexual assault. He's been held on $200,000 bond since Wednesday night when both he and Miss Quintana were found hiding in a Houston apartment.

"The mother did admit she provided the juvenile division with a fraudulent birth certificate in order to enroll her in school," Houston police Capt. George Buenik said.

He said police were consulting authorities in Mexico to try to better pin down the girl's precise age. The girl's mother, Francesca Quintana, provided a written statement acknowledging the discrepancy, Buenik said.

The girl herself had given police and social services officials various ages although the certificate that turned out to be bogus was the only documentation.

"Of course, we began asking questions ... after she was picked up," Linda Edwards, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, said.

Police said it was not immediately known where in Mexico the family lived or when they moved to Houston.

Authorities complained earlier Thursday their investigation of the entire affair had been slow because the girl's family was uncooperative and the boyfriend was mum.

"This family has not been forthcoming with information," Judy Hay of Harris County Children's Protective Services said. "There's been a lot of misleading information. Nobody in this family has given helpful, consistent information."

Police said the girl's mother remained under investigation and faced possible charges of child neglect.

The girl was taken to LBJ Hospital in Houston where obstetricians said she was in good condition.

"We do feel we should observe her for a little while," Dr. Jude Crino said.

Her age was questioned because she gave various answers when asked about it by social services officials who discovered her a week ago when she tried to apply for welfare benefits.

A copy of a birth certificate distributed to reporters Thursday showed her birth date and place as Sept. 13, 1985 in Houston, although the certificate was not issued until July 31, 1989.

"Whether she's 10 or 14, she's been sexually abused and we will protect her," Ms. Hay said.

Airman charged with raping girl in Okinawa

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. Air Force confirmed today that another American serviceman on Okinawa has been charged with rape, and that the victim is a 14-year-old American girl.

Three other U.S. servicemen are on trial in a Japanese court in the rape of a 12-year-old Okinawa girl. That crime has led to widespread calls in Japan for the withdrawal of American troops from the southern island.

In a full-page ad in today's New York Times, a Japanese women's group appealed to the United States to remove military bases from the island, saying that is the only way to prevent rapes.

The latest charge, confirmed in an Air Force statement after repeated media inquiries, is the third report of rape involving American servicemen since the September assault on the Okinawa schoolgirl.

All three took place on Okinawa, where more than half of the 47,000 American troops in Japan are based. No charges have been filed in two of the cases.

One case involves a Marine who allegedly raped another Marine. In another, a suspect has not been identified, but the victim claims a Marine raped her at knifepoint.

In the latest case, Senior Airman Anthony T. Williams Jr., 24, faces charges of rape and indecent acts with a female under the age of 16, adultery and providing alcohol to minors, according to Kadena Air Base spokeswoman Lt. Tania Dutko.

Williams, a heavy-machinery operator assigned to a civil engineering unit, has been ordered not to leave the base and to stay away from the victim. He has not been placed in custody.

Dutko said the rape was first reported by the victim's school counselor on Dec. 12, and charges were filed Wednesday. A hearing has been scheduled for Feb. 7 to determine whether a court-martial will be convened.

Dutko said the victim is the daughter of an Air Force serviceman stationed on Okinawa. Another U.S. spokesman, Maj. Kevin Krejcarek, said Williams is from San Antonio.

Unlike the three charged in the September rape, if Williams goes to court he will be tried under the U.S. military system because the rape allegedly occurred on base and involved an American victim. If convicted, he would go to an American prison.

Morales ponders suing tobacco industry

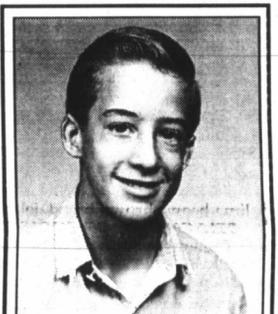

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas may be drawing a legal bead on the tobacco industry in what could become the most complex legal claim the state has ever pursued.

Attorney General Dan Morales says he will decide in the coming weeks whether to file a lawsuit against the industry for reimbursement of millions of dollars the state has spent for treatment of tobacco-related diseases.

Five states — Florida, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi and West Virginia — have filed similar lawsuits.

"There is no more complex litigation that I can think of than what we are contemplating doing here," Morales said in an interview published Thursday by the Austin American-Statesman.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on POW-MIA disclosures:

Just once, it would be nice for the U.S. government not to beat former wartime adversaries to the punch with denials that those countries may still be holding American servicemen as prisoners of war.

This time it was a South Korean newspaper that reported that "up to 10" American POWs are still captive in North Korea — an assertion that the Defense Department immediately, and without elaboration, dismissed as "totally false."

After two days, the Pentagon issued a report indicating that four of six deserters remain in North Korea after slipping across from U.S. duty stations in the south in the 1960s. One of the deserters, officials said, is probably the man appearing in a photograph in the South Korean paper.

According to the National Alliance of Families, representing families of missing servicemen, a Pentagon official told the group in 1994 that his office knew of no deserters in North Korea. Yet within 48 hours of last week's news report, the Pentagon produced an impressive amount of information to the contrary.

Just as with the volatile issue of Vietnam POWs, the Defense Department has aggressively sought to discredit any reports of live prisoners, despite massive documentation from files declassified in the last five years that raise more questions than they answer.

Yet much information remains classified, and reflexive denials from those who control the secrets only arouse suspicion that they have something sinister to hide. President Clinton should clear the air by, finally, allowing the truth to come out. After nearly 43 years in the case of Korea and 23 years in the case of Vietnam, what is there to hide?

Austin American-Statesman on campaign finance reform:

A bit of optimism is creeping into the debate over efforts to reform the way political campaigns for Congress are financed.

After decades of stalled and failed reform efforts, this year holds the very real possibility that a campaign finance bill will pass both the House and the Senate. This follows a year in which lobby reform — long dismissed as a political impossibility — succeeded.

One of the bills under discussion and very much alive calls for voluntary spending limits by House and Senate candidates, limits on self-financing and on raising funds outside the actual district. Those candidates abiding by the limits would receive lower mailing rates and free time on television and radio.

Bills also would ban contributions from political action committees and the so-called "soft money" — contributions to candidates from state parties, dollars that are exempt from federal limits on money from single sources.

The cost of political campaigns has become astronomical in recent years. Only those candidates with access to millions of dollars have much of a chance to win a seat.

Reform to bring down the cost is imperative. Running for a congressional seat should not be like polo or yacht racing, only for the very rich or those with access to them.

Landry would've nipped a few buds

Two post-game, nationally televised expletives from Dallas Cowboy players. Two from the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Super Bowl isn't likely to remind us of a Jane Austen movie. But, oh, how the obscenity flap reminds us of life as it used to be.

Does that sound weepy, nostalgic, arthritic? I am #!%&* sorry about that. In certain urgent respects, life was better in the old days. Football players, for one thing, didn't drag out their locker-room vocabularies to entertain old ladies and preschoolers.

Had the Cowboys of Tom Landry's day talked publicly in the manner of Michael Irvin and Nate Newton, would you care to guess their fates? Deacon Tom would have come down on the offenders like an avenging angel. The anatomical features they used for sitting would have been sore for weeks. Note, please, that Jerry, ringmaster of the Cowboy circus, kissed off the whole furor with "No action is warranted." What a class act is our Jerry!

True, in other, more civilized quarters, outrage and derision are aimed at the perpetrators. William Bennett, our leading cultural critic, told USA Today that the episodes demonstrate how locker-room language has gone mainstream. It isn't "the end of the world," Bennett said. "It's one more notch ... Civilizations don't collapse all at once, they do it one degree at a time."

If the offending cretins didn't resemble Sherman tanks, one would enjoy taking them by the shoulders and shaking them - and Jerry, their enabler-in-chief, with them. But alas! - if you'll pardon a passe interjection - shaking them wouldn't do all that much good. Where do football players get the idea they can turn the air blue with expletives? Why, they get it from society at large. Alas! Alack! Jerry isn't their only enabler.

Yes, I know all too well - this sounds like tear-stained 20th century liberalism. "We're all!!!!!! guilty! Sob! Choke!"

In a way, maybe we are all guilty. Society as a whole has raised the linguistic portcullis, admitting to ordinary discourse expressions that 30 years ago would have been firmly barred.

Thirty years ago! My moss-encrusted memory calls up the early '60s flap over the Jimmy Dean song "Big John." Jimmy had employed in his lyrics a four-letter word signifying the place of eternal torment. The hand of censorship descended. Jimmy dubbed in More Suitable Language. There were things one could say in private but not public, and "hell" was one of them. Earlier, David O. Selznick had had to obtain special permission for Clark Gable, in Gone With the Wind, to tell Scarlett, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn." In the '60s, that line still brought titillated murmurs from the audience.

Modern vocabularies are, you might say, less refined. We are into self-expression these days. Norms and standards are for old movies and old minds. Irvin-Newton-like language saturates television, which may be one reason the players feel free to indulge in such language while performing for the cameras. How much worse do they talk on NYPD Blue? You can sit in nice restaurants and hear fellow diners say things for which Gary Cooper would have called them to account but that now you let go because - who'd understand? Bennett is right: Civilizationally, we're collapsing by degrees.

One hates to reinvent the wheel, but the case against bad language in public clearly needs restating. The case is that such language embarrasses and degrades. The embarrassed are those who, if they enjoyed the atmosphere of a locker room, would take up permanent residence in one. The degraded are those who see the language of the locker room as normal, everyday, no big deal at all.

What are we anyway, a bunch of apes? One hopes that isn't our destiny, but one never knows. Act like an ape, with disdain for others and with unabashed joy in the more squalid features of life, and pretty soon, you turn into an ape.

Where's Tom Landry now that we need him? I know - he's covering his ears.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 1996. There are 340 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 26, 1788, the first European settlers in Australia, led by Captain Arthur Phillip, landed in present-day Sydney. (The party included 700 convicts from England.)

On this date:

In 1784, in a letter to his daughter, Benjamin Franklin expressed unhappiness over the choice of the eagle as the symbol of America, and expressed his own preference: the turkey.

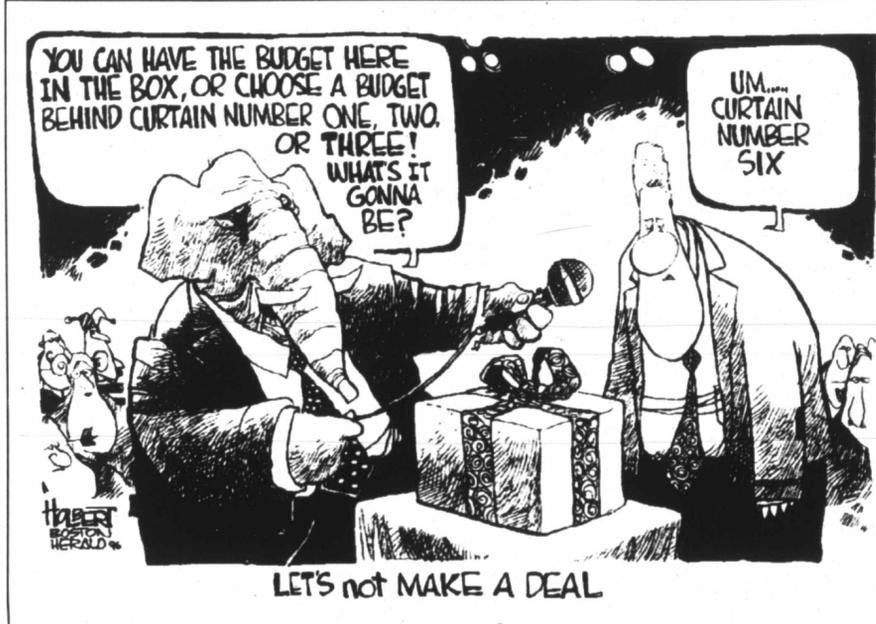

In 1802, Congress passed an act calling for a library to be established within the U.S. Capitol.

In 1837, Michigan became the 26th state with the signing of a statehood bill by President Jackson.

In 1841, Britain formally occupied Hong Kong, which the Chinese had ceded to the British.

In 1861, Louisiana seceded from the Union.

In 1870, Virginia rejoined the Union.

Baby boomers demand their afterlife

January 2056 - Once upon a time, a dead person was just that: dead. The certificate was drawn, the obituary published, the ceremony held. Friends and family would gather to honor the deceased and to comfort the survivors. And afterward, though loved ones would hold the departed in their hearts for decades to come, attention pretty much shifted back to the living.

But that was before the baby boomers died. Now the generation that brought us rock 'n' roll, peace and love, and the "Contract With America" has forever changed the way the nation looks at death.

"Being dead isn't what it used to be," says Connie Sumer, formerly of Fort Lee, N.J. "It used to be so creepy, so dated and cobwebby. My generation has changed all that."

Sumer speaks to us from the great hereafter via Madam Opportunista, one of a growing number of professional mediums - the hottest career of the decade, according to a recent Standard & Poor's analysis.

"People miss the baby boomers," explains S&P analyst Ina Kidd Nough. "They want the boomers to tell them what sneakers to wear and what TV shows to watch."

Nough says that the retail business suffered a terrible slump shortly after the boomers died. "We had racks of merchandise languishing in stores because no one knew what was cool," she says. "Should we be wearing ripped jeans and sandals, or cardigans and Hush Puppies? None of us had a clue."

Sara Eckel

A Washington policy maker, who asked not to be identified, agrees. "Washington these days is like Russia after the Cold War. The boomers had been dictating national priorities for so long - you know, student loans when they were students, tax breaks when they were making money - that we've realized we don't know how to make decisions anymore."

Fortunately, the opinion-makers need not be left in the dark, thanks to the rapid advances in after-death communications technology. Once the domain of carnival vendors and late-night advertisements, communication with the dead is now a $5 trillion industry, and mediums - or post-life facilitators, as they prefer to be called - like Opportunista are getting the respect and financial rewards that had long been denied them. At Harvard University alone, more than one-quarter of the freshman class expressed an interest in the After-Death Studies major.

"I definitely want a link with the baby boomers," says Justin Gleem, a sophomore. "No one will ever compare to them. And no one should ever try."

Post-life chic has also hit the social scene. Seances, once confined to little girls' slumber parties, are now all the rage in New York and Los Angeles. Tiffany Trump, Alexa Brinkley, Joel and Satchel Allen are just a few of the celebs who can be heard saying, "Light as a feather, stiff as a board." The Ouija board, the classic spirit-contacting game, is also enjoying a revival. "We're expecting a brisk Christmas season," says a Parker Brothers source. And Disney's Boomer World has parkgoers lined up to the gates, waiting for a turn on the new Virtual Afterlife ride.

Indeed, with so much great publicity it seems the boomers have mastered the ultimate public-relations challenge: putting a positive spin on death.

"When you're dead, things are more focused," explains Seth Absorbid, the former psychologist and best-selling author. "You don't have all those silly earthy desires nagging you. I've never felt more alive than when I was dead." Absorbid's latest book, You Guys Don't Know What You're Missing, is scheduled for a spring release.

"We're redefining the afterlife," says Mark Aforce, a former Columbus, Ohio, insurance executive. "There used to be a stigma attached to being dead. Your voice wasn't heard; you were somehow considered 'out of it.' Once we started dying ourselves, we realized that wasn't right."

The baby boomers: They may be gone, but they're not forgotten.

Claiming the middle from both ends

On tour for Republican conservatism, the first-term GOP senator said that while it's difficult to say no to things people want, it has to be done to move America "back toward the middle of the road."

It's an example of the way politicians use their own terms to define the middle, which is where voters tend to see themselves.

That philosophical territory has been called the mainstream, the middle way, the vital center, compassionate conservatism, the sensible center, or even the radical center.

Charting it depends upon who is drawing the map. Conservatives are now, and their dominance in the Republican Congress probably will be heightened by the record-rate retirements depleting the roster of moderates after this year.

The people who define the debate are effectively writing the rules of the process, as Ronald Reagan did when he came to the White House 15 years ago. In this sequence, since the Republican takeover of Congress, President Clinton has accentuated the centrist Democratic tenets of his campaign. He had shifted to what seemed to be old-style liberal answers earlier in his administration.

His four-draft transition to a balanced budget proposal displays that turn.

He won the White House as a New Democrat, promising a more conservative approach than had marked the party's past. "As Bill Clinton proved in 1992, albeit dishonestly, many Americans are open to a progressive message that combines concern for the poor with a strong advocacy of limited, responsive, and efficient government," Joel Kotkin of the Pacific Research Institute writes in The American Enterprise.

The emphasis is on the latter as he seeks a second term while accusing Republicans of extremist answers.

They insist not. It is a tag no politician wants, none, at least, since Barry Goldwater defiantly declared in accepting the 1964 GOP presidential nomination that extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice.

He was swamped. Lyndon Johnson's landslide swept Democrats to total congressional dominance and they defined the middle of the road the liberal way.

Later on, Richard Nixon said the working formula for a Republican in a presidential bid was to cater to the right to win the nomination, then move back to the center because that's where the voters are. In 1988, Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis tried to avoid "the L word," for liberal, although he finally accepted the label.

Those efforts to define and claim the middle echo now, with a record 13 Senate retirements and with 35 in the House eroding the moderate to progressive wings of both parties, particularly among GOP senators.

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

"The center is depleted," said Sen. John Chafee, the fourth-term Rhode Island Republican whose relatively liberal philosophy once prompted activists on the right to say he ought to leave the party.

Democrat Paul Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator and presidential candidate, had lamented a vacuum in the center of national politics. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, a former GOP senator, said that some people now identified with the conservative wing probably will move toward the middle "because that's where the country is."

Republicans in power insist that despite the labeling, their version of conservatism is headed there now.

When the touring GOP Senate freshmen held a televised forum in Knoxville recently, Sen. Fred Thompson of Tennessee said that saying no to well-meaning people is the hard part of the job.

"But we have really gotten out of kilter in this country, and what we are about is trying to move things back toward the middle of the road," he said.

That's the mainstream map Republicans want, and it is not a new one.

"There is in our affairs at home a middle way between untrammelled freedom of the individual and the demands for the welfare of the whole nation, Dwight D. Eisenhower said in his first State of the Union address in 1953. "This way must avoid government by bureaucracy as carefully as it avoids neglect of the helpless."

Another hepatitis virus — hepatitis G — identified, new study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers are uncertain whether a newly discovered hepatitis virus poses a public health threat or even if it causes symptoms of liver disease. Scientists announced today in the journal Science that they had isolated a virus identified as hepatitis G, or HGV, from the blood of patients with chronic hepatitis. "We have shown some association of this virus with chronic hepatitis," said Patrice Yarbough, director of research at Genelabs Technologies in Redwood City, Calif., where much of the work was done. "The implication of this finding is still not known." Dr. Harvey Alter of the National Institutes of Health, a coauthor of the study, said it is not known if HGV poses a public health problem or even if infection by the virus should be worrisome to patients. He said more studies are needed. Although the virus is newly discovered, Alter said "it probably has been around a long time."

Sophisticated laboratory techniques capable of detecting the virus are only now becoming available, he said. No antibody test of the type used to identify other hepatitis viruses has been developed for HGV, said Alter. The researchers showed that HGV is present in 10 percent to 20 percent of people who have chronic hepatitis that cannot be attributed to other causes. At least 14 other viruses have been linked, directly or indirectly, to hepatitis, an inflammation of the liver. The disease also has been associated with some types of bacteria, fungi and protozoa, and to alcoholism. Five viruses — hepatitis A through E — have been identified as causing acute viral hepatitis. The seriousness of infection varies from virus to virus, and from patient to patient, but many chronic carriers never experience serious disease. The research showed that HGV can be transmitted through blood transfusions, but Alter said "the odds of getting a case of this virus are very low."

Nation briefs

Utah executes man by firing squad

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN. Utah (AP) — A child killer who chose bullets instead of a lethal injection became the nation's first inmate executed by a firing squad in 19 years early today.

The white cloth target pinned over John Albert Taylor's heart appeared to disintegrate as the four slugs fired by anonymous marksmen struck him just after midnight. The front of his blue jumpsuit quickly turned dark with blood.

"I guess that answers that, don't it," Taylor's uncle, Gordon Lee, one of three witnesses invited by Taylor, said through tears moments later. "Johnny was lucky. It went quicker than lethal injection, but seven years is a long time to die."

Taylor, 36, had been on death row at Utah State Prison since his 1989 conviction for the rape and strangulation of an 11-year-old girl. In December, he fired his lawyers and dropped all appeals, saying he preferred death to life in prison.

Mrs. Clinton says will cooperate with grand jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — Her veracity under attack in the Whitewater affair, Hillary Rodham Clinton says her unprecedented grand jury appearance is not a first she's particularly pleased about.

Nonetheless, the first lady says "it will be a relief" to answer prosecutors' questions stemming from the mysterious reappearance of long-sought billing records that outline her work for the failed Arkansas savings and loan at the center of the Whitewater criminal investigation.

Today's grilling by Whitewater prosecutors before 23 grand jurors is "not a first that I'm particularly pleased about, but I think that it's a necessary part of this investigation, and I intend to cooperate," she declared Thursday during a political trip to New Hampshire.

In a newspaper interview Thursday, Mrs. Clinton said if she knew how much trouble her "limited amount of legal work" would cause her years later she wouldn't have represented the savings and loan.

Attorneys grill Simpson on domestic violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson was grilled about domestic violence and the 1989 beating of his ex-wife during the fourth day of his grueling deposition, lawyers said.

Simpson's testimony Thursday followed his first post-acquittal TV interview the night before on Black Entertainment Television, and heightened tension in the already pressure-filled room, said lawyer John Q. Kelly, who represents Nicole Brown Simpson's estate.

Fred Goldman, Ronald Goldman's father, characterized the day's session as "very good for us," but once again declined to give details.

Goldman's parents and Ms. Simpson's estate have filed a wrongful-death lawsuit against Simpson, who was acquitted Oct. 3 of the 1994 killings of Ms. Simpson and Goldman.

Michael Brewer, attorney for Ronald Goldman's mother, Sharon Rufo, said Simpson was questioned at length about domestic violence, including the 1989 beating of Ms. Simpson. Simpson pleaded no contest to a battery charge.

"All of the events surrounding domestic violence were explored at some length and that would include such issues as stalking, following, and having information relative to her schedule," Brewer said.

Jurors in Simpson's criminal trial saw items from Ms. Simpson's safe-deposit box in which she documented her beating through photos, newspaper clippings and letters from Simpson.

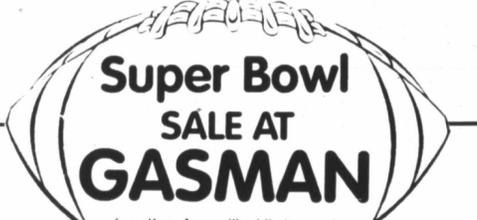

Appeals court overturns conviction

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An appeals court has overturned the conviction of a woman who paid two hit men $3,000 to kill the boy who jilted her teen-age daughter.

The 13th Court of Appeals in Corpus Christi reversed the murder conviction of Dora Garcia Cisneros, saying the evidence was insufficient.

Mrs. Cisneros of Brownsville was convicted in 1994 of hiring two hit men to kill 18-year-old honor student Joey Fischer in March 1993. She was sentenced to life in prison.

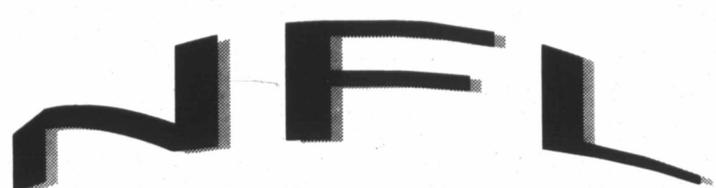

Prosecutors had argued that Mrs. Cisneros was so upset over Fischer's breakup with her 17-year-old daughter that she plotted for months to find someone to kill him.

Church withdraws concert site for gay choral groups

DALLAS (AP) - After learning that two gay singing groups would perform, the First Baptist Church of Dallas has denied the use of its sanctuary for a concert in March of the American Choral Directors Association.

"We have a longstanding practice that we do not turn our facility over to groups that advocate or represent lifestyles contrary to the teaching of God. ... They obviously are a symbol of that (homosexual) lifestyle," church administrator Tim Hedquist said Thursday.

The 250-voice, all-gay, all-male Turtle Creek Chorale and the 125-voice, predominantly lesbian Women's Chorus of Dallas were scheduled to sing March 21 during the American Choral Directors Association's Southwestern convention.

The convention's opening-night concert was scheduled at First Baptist Church before the choruses were selected. The church is one of four sites that will be used for the association's meeting.

"We were told that the groups would be from schools and churches," Hedquist said.

About two weeks ago, when officials at First Baptist Church learned that the Turtle Creek

Chorale was one of the choruses selected to perform at the church, they notified the association that the concert could not be held there.

The concert will be held instead at nearby First United Methodist Church of Dallas.

"We're providing concert space for the American Choral Directors Association," said Dana Effler, director of music and arts ministries at First United Methodist Church. "We're happy to provide that performance space," she said, adding that the Turtle Creek Chorale and the Women's Chorus are "fine performing groups."

Both groups are directed by Timothy Seelig. He said that the Turtle Creek Chorale is made up entirely of gay men and that the membership of the Women's Chorus is about 75 percent lesbian. However, neither group discriminates or admits members on the basis of sexual orientation, he said.

Seelig was born in Fort Worth and grew up in close association with Baptist churches. He is a graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University and was associate music director of First Baptist Church in Houston, before he was fired after church officials learned that he is gay.

NAACP-led protest breaks up Dallas school board meeting

DALLAS (AP) - As black protesters stood and chanted, Dallas school trustees passed the entire evening's agenda in one vote, and about a dozen security officers escorted them from the school administration building's auditorium.

Pandemonium broke out Thursday night immediately after the meeting was called to order. Lee Alcorn, president of the Dallas NAACP, stepped to the lectern and told trustees the meeting could not proceed.

"We're going to ask you to adjourn this meeting until you can find a way to include the African-Americans on this board," said Alcorn, who had linked arms with about a dozen other protesters.

When an audience member called for the meeting to start, Alcorn, along with members of the New Black Panther Party and others, broke into a chant of "No justice, no peace." The chant was quickly picked up by many in the standing-room-only audience.

As the shouting grew louder, trustees passed the entire evening's agenda by a 5-0 vote of the board's four white members and one Hispanic member. The three black trustees did not vote.

The agenda included new school construction projects and the purchase of more than $1 million worth of computers for teachers.

Trustees Yvonne Ewell and Kathlyn Gilliam - two of the board's three black members - remained seated. The other black trustee, Hollis Brashear, left the meeting.

The chanting lasted for nearly 30 minutes, finally quieting down when Ms. Gilliam addressed the remaining audience. She thanked the crowd for attending the meeting and then blasted the board for making decisions in a manner that she said has segregated the trustees.

Tension flared further after the meeting adjourned when school officials turned off the auditorium lights, apparently in an attempt to encourage the remaining protesters to leave.

As protesters yelled for the lights to be turned back on, a confrontation ensued between school district spokesman Robert Hinkle and Najee Mtume, Black Panther deputy minister of defense.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WAYS OF WAR

THE BIBLICAL KINGS AND THEIR ARMIES OPERATED ACCORDING TO WELL LAID PLANS! HIGH ON THEIR PRIORITIES WAS THE SURPRISE TACTIC. AMBUSH WAS ALWAYS A DECIDED FAVORITE OF THESE ANCIENT TACTICIANS. IF THEY COULD GET THE OPPOSING ARMY TO FALL INTO A TRAP THIS WAS MORE TO BE DESIRED THAN A HUGE FRONTAL ASSAULT WITH ITS POSSIBILITY OF FAILURE. A VERY POPULAR MANEUVER WAS TO HIDE A LINE OF TROOPS BEHIND A HILL AS AN OPPOSING ARMY WAS ADVANCING, THEN, AT THE PROPER TIME, THE TROOPS HIDDEN BEHIND THE HILL WOULD SPRING UP AND SHOWER THE ADVANCING ENEMY WITH DEADLY FLIGHTS OF ARROWS! MORE TIMES THAN NOT THE RESULT WAS A THOROUGHLY EFFECTIVE ACTION!

Members of Abilene sect change names to 'Hawkins'

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A divorce between the leader of an obscure Texas religious sect and his wife has confused the tax status of properties owned by sect members.

The significance of the Abilene-based House of Yahweh and its leader, Yisrayl Hawkins, is growing with its membership — an expansion signaled by a surge in the number of name-change petitions in Texas' Rolling Plains.

More than 100 Abilene-area residents have changed their last names to Hawkins in the past six months to show "glory to our heavenly father Yahweh."

A number of sect members have obtained passports and Texas driver's licenses and changed their car titles to reflect their new identities.

They now share the surname of their leader and are moving to the sect's compound in Callahan County near Clyde, about 10 miles southeast of Abilene.

Keeping up with who owns what at the House of Yahweh compound near Clyde, about 12 miles east of Abilene, is difficult, said Callahan County Chief Appraiser Rod Lewallen. Because the property is either exempt for religious purposes or declared for agricultural use, taxes are minimal, he said.

"They're not paying much in the way of taxes, period," he said.

Tax matters were complicated when Yisrayl Hawkins and Phyllis Kay Hawkins were granted a divorce in 1994.

According to a bill of sale, 19 items of personal property were conveyed to Yisrayl Hawkins as a part of the divorce settlement, Lewallen said.

Those items included a number of trailers and mobile homes.

The members had applied for exempt status on all their mobile homes, claiming they were parsonages, or dwellings provided by the church for its ministers, Lewallen said. He denied the request and the House of Yahweh threatened a lawsuit.

Lewallen finally allowed the exemptions if the members would allow Lewallen's people on their property, he said.

"We had an arrangement whereby we would call Kay Hawkins and tell her we were coming," Lewallen said. "She would escort us on the property."

Now that the couple are divorced, Lewallen isn't sure what will happen.

"I don't know where we stand with the House of Yahweh," he said.

But even if some individual members own property and all members change their names to Hawkins, there's no escaping the tax man.

Since the church property is taxed, not the owner, "it's not going to keep us from levying taxes and collecting them," Lewallen said.

Callahan County officials who have had contact with sect members describe them in similar terms: intelligent, polite, reserved, "look like the Amish without the hats" and speak in unrecognizable accents.

They are unmistakable in their appearance and demeanor. "It's almost an aura," an unidentified Callahan County official told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Yisrayl Hawkins did not return telephone messages left at his compound Sunday by The Associated Press, and sect members contacted by the Reporter-News were reluctant to speak.

But one follower, Banahyah Hawkins, said "Hawkins" means prophet or priest to members of the faith.

Each name change petition is similar, and each is notarized by the same man — Bruce Bowler. Each lists the chosen name and a reason identical or similar to the following:

"The petitioners feel these names are more befitting as reverent servants of the Creator, in showing true appreciation, recognition, honor and glory to the Creator and our Heavenly Father Yahweh, to whom all reverence, glory and honor is due."

Some beliefs and practices of the House of Yahweh

- Abilene is the "gathering place" for those who will spread the news of the Messiah's Second Coming.
- Yahweh is the only true name of the Creator. Lord and God are translations for the Creator, which are also applied to objects of false worship, and are not used in the House of Yahweh.
- Yashua is the name of the Saviour.
- Yashua died for one's past sins, a sacrifice that cannot be repeated for one's sins. He did not die so that people who lived after him could continue to sin and ask forgiveness.
- The most sacred holidays are the Passover, Pentecost and Feast of Tabernacles, each observed with a seven-day feast. Holidays like Easter and Christmas are considered pagan.
- "The Book of Yahweh," a translation of the Bible by Yahweh scholars, contains the Holy Scriptures. It was printed in Abilene in 1984.

Religion briefs

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The city of Farmington Hills cannot force a local church to close its homeless shelter without first trying to find ways the church can address residents' concerns, the Michigan Court of Appeals ruled.

In a recent 3-0 ruling, the court held that the way the city used its zoning ordinance in the case violated federal law. The 1993 Religious Freedom Restoration Act allows governments to limit the exercise of religion only if there is no less restrictive way of furthering the "compelling government interest."

The Jesus Center began operating a homeless shelter in its Farmington Hills building in 1991. Nearby residents of the wealthy Detroit suburb said they feared for their safety and complained about people from the shelter trespassing and loitering in the area.

The church was told by the city it must apply for zoning approval to operate the shelter, and was turned down. The circuit court reversed the zoning board's decision and ordered the city to negotiate with The Jesus Center to address residents' concerns.

The appeals court upheld the trial court's decision.

"The Jesus Center has contended that its provision of shelter services flows from its religious beliefs and is an exercise of those beliefs," the ruling said.

"The zoning board's decision to apply the ordinance to completely prohibit the shelter service program went too far," the ruling continued.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church leaders will resign from the boards of numerous business corporations to devote all their attention to attend to the faith's spiraling growth.

The recent surprise announcement by the governing First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles applies to the nearly 100 men known as "general authorities" who govern the affairs of the 9.3 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"The primary call of a general authority is his ecclesiastical responsibility. Except for family responsibilities, all others are secondary to this," said the statement, perhaps the most significant of the 10-month presidency of Gordon B. Hinckley.

Spirit Wind reunion set

The 1996 Spirit Wind choir will host a reunion weekend June 14 through June 16 in Midland. The alumni will rehearse with the 1996 choir on Friday and Saturday then participate in the 8:30 a.m. and 10:50 a.m. worship services on Sunday.

A social event will be planned for Saturday evening.

Organizers need addresses of former members of Spirit Wind. Mail or fax information to Bert W. Bostic, St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas, Midland, 79701. The fax number is (915) 694-9608.

"In view of this situation the First Presidency has suggested that general authorities withdraw from membership on the boards of directors of business corporations. This will include membership on boards of church-owned corporations, as well as those of a public and private nature."

Those church-owned corporations include media conglomerate Bonneville International; Deseret News Publishing Co., which publishes Salt Lake City's afternoon newspaper; publisher Deseret Book and retailer ZCMI.

In citing the faith's rapid growth, the Mormon leadership pointed out the 166-year-old faith is established in more than 150 nations and political entities.

Family Planning Gives Parents More Time With Fewer Kids

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years. I'm often surprised, moved, outraged or entertained by the foibles of those who write to you. You answer each letter with such courtesy, kindness and wisdom that I often wonder how you can be so objective and nonjudgmental.

Take, for instance, "Stressed at Home in Pa.," the mother of four children — all under the age of 5 — who needed a "sanity day." Abby, why did she have four children under the age of 5? Hasn't she heard of cause and effect? Whether it's because of religious, social, ethnic or familial brainwashing, too many couples (and single women) make decisions that create heavy burdens they end up carrying far longer than nine months.

We no longer live in a world where the support mechanisms necessary for the successful rearing of large families exist for low- and middle-income families. If they had been available to "Stressed," she would have been receiving her sanity day from her church, or from the children's grandparents, or even from the sisters who remember the "fun and funny" sibling who is now stressed.

Parents today (if children are fortunate enough to have two) must make conscious choices between quantity or quality. Fewer children means more time for Mom to enjoy the few that she does have, more time with hubby doing the fun things that brought them together, more time to volunteer to help children less fortunate than her own, and more time to grow spiritually and mentally so she can guide her fewer children toward paths that will enrich the world.

Abigail Van Buren

Decisions must be made with awareness of the realities that exist today. Children should be taught the concept of cause and effect. As a society, we can no longer afford to act without considering the consequences and then complain about the responsibilities we must shoulder. Without a long-term perspective, we will continue to have rampant divorce, welfare mothers, gender conflict and escalating crime thanks to children who grow up in combat zones.

Before we accept the responsibility of bringing more children into this world, we should stop and smell the diapers.

REALISTIC READER IN ISSAQUAH, WASH.

DEAR REALISTIC READER: Thank you for an intelligent letter. Of course, you are correct. However, in the case of the stressed-out mother who wrote to me, it was a little late to discuss family planning or the economic realities of life in the '90s. I'm printing your letter in the hope that its plain-spoken message will reach anyone who is undecided before she decides to take the plunge.

DEAR ABBY: My name is "William Wagner." I married a woman named "Mary Ann" in 1985. It was not a happy union, and we have been divorced for five years.

I have recently remarried, but Mary Ann continues to call herself "Mrs. Wagner." Her name appears on charitable committees and donor lists as "Mrs. Mary Ann Wagner." And on occasion, her name is printed next to my wife's name — which creates the impression that there are two Mrs. Wagners.

Is this correct?
CONFUSED IN DELAWARE

DEAR CONFUSED: Your former wife is still "Mrs. Wagner," but only your present wife is entitled to call herself "Mrs. William Wagner." Your former wife is "Mrs. Mary Ann Wagner," indicating that she is divorced, not that she's still married to you.

PHOENIX (AP) — In distinct contrast to the college marching bands that performed at the first Super Bowl halftime 30 years ago, fans on Sunday will be entertained by Diana Ross singing atop a revolving stage lit by liquid Nitrogen mist and fireworks.

Details of the 10-minute performance are being kept under wraps, and even Ross was hushed when she began describing the show being produced by Radio City Music Hall.

"We've never played anything this big. Nobody will go away to get a beer," she said.

The show extends beyond the stage, including synchronized explosions around the stadium, card stunts involving 75,000 cards and 1,500 singers and dancers accompanying Ross.

While the list of songs she will sing was highly confidential information, Ross promised it would be sheer Diana.

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Even if they don't win the Super Bowl, the Pittsburgh Steelers are the NFL's runaway leader in fines.

The Steelers' failure to send nearly half their team to a mandatory Super Bowl news conference led the NFL to impose a $25,000 fine Thursday.

The Steelers are only the second team to be fined during Super Bowl week. The Buffalo Bills were fined a reported $5,000 four years ago following Thurman Thomas' failure to show up at a news conference.

The latest fine is at least the fifth imposed on the Steelers this season. Greg Lloyd and Chad Brown each drew $12,000 penalties for striking quarterbacks with their helmets. Coach Bill Cowher was fined $7,500 for stuffing a photograph in an official's shirt pocket.

PHOENIX (AP) — It takes something extraordinary to make Ray Rhodes smile.

It may have happened Thursday when he was selected the NFL's Coach of the Year.

In his first season, Rhodes guided the rebuilt Philadelphia Eagles to a surprising 10-6 record and an opening-round playoff win over Detroit.

Although it was hard to tell if Rhodes, a no-nonsense type, was grinning or just grimacing from the glare of television lights, he said he was truly moved by "the magnitude of the award."

"Believe me, this is probably the biggest honor I've ever gotten in my life," said Rhodes, who thanked his staff and players for their dedication and Eagles owner Jeff Lurie for hiring him last Feb. 2.

Rhodes also won Associated Press NFL Coach of the Year designation last month in a vote of a panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interleague play in 1997 moved a step closer to certainty when owners and the players' union met for the first time to talk about the issue.

Owners unanimously voted last week in favor of teams playing 15 or 16 interleague games starting in 1997. The union still must give its approval.

Union head Donald Fehr and Randy Levine, the owners' chief negotiator, talked about a one-year agreement on interleague play. Continuing the concept past 1997 will likely be linked to a new labor agreement between the sides.

Pittsburgh's Nasty Boys are getting ready for Aikman

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The story said Troy Aikman and Barry Switzer "are barely speaking."

Neither quarterback nor coach went out of his way to deny that.

"Coach Switzer and I are after just one thing and that's winning football games. That's about as far as our relationship goes," Aikman said several times this season.

What really got some attention at Thursday's interviews with the Dallas Cowboys — the last before Sunday's Super Bowl — was the sixth paragraph of the story, a column by Fort Worth Star-Telegram writer Jim Reeves.

It said former defensive line coach John Blake, "complained to Switzer that Aikman seemed to regularly single out black players as targets for his occasional angry outbursts. The quarterback was furious and took pains to ask other players and coaches whether they had a problem with his approach."

Reeves noted several paragraphs later that players said "there is absolutely no black-white problem on the team."

And that's what players heartily reinforced, especially in their defense of Aikman.

"Aikman is no racist. He's a good guy and I respect him," defensive end Charles Haley said.

He said if Aikman had a fault, it was being so competitive he couldn't tolerate mistakes.

"I've seen him kick a football 100 yards at practice if someone fouls up," Haley said. "Troy is Troy. He doesn't single out black players. If he decides to chew somebody out on offense, the odds are it will be somebody black, because 90 percent of the players on offense are black. There's only three white guys."

"If I thought Troy was racist I'd tell him."

Added wide receiver Michael Irvin: "I don't know what John Blake said, but let me tell you this: I have had plenty of friends and I have been around plenty of people and I know the relationship I have with Troy and what a great friend he is. And I will take that to my grave."

"I am as black as anybody you could ever see. I am a black man with a black scarf on and I'm wearing black shades. I'm wearing all black. I'm as black as they come. And, I know this man loves me."

Blake was on a recruiting trip to California and could not be reached for comment.

Fullback Daryl Johnston said the internal problems on the team "are nothing any team hasn't had."

"The media in Dallas sometimes makes things out more than what they are," he said. "This has been a very special year and we're all together."

Regarding his alleged feud with Switzer, Aikman said:

"I don't think it's going to affect the Cowboys. Believe me there's nothing that's been written that hasn't been discussed.... It's been resolved and that's all that matters. There has been a number of things written about this week, aside from Barry and my relationship. I don't think anybody will pay a whole lot of attention to it within our organization or within the locker room."

He added: "I have no concern with my relationship with any player on this team."

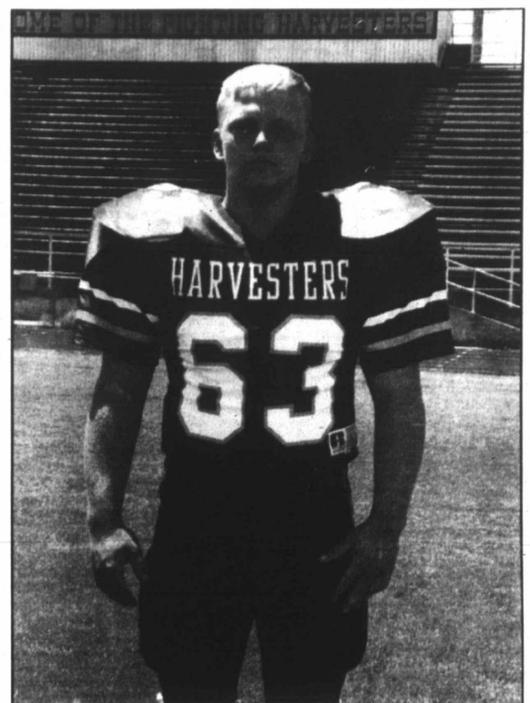

The column also said Aikman "will seek an audience" with owner Jerry Jones after the Super Bowl to discuss his relationship with Switzer.

Aikman played under Switzer for two years at Oklahoma before transferring to UCLA. Aikman decided to leave after he broke a leg and saw that Switzer was going to stick with the Wishbone offense.

"Most coaches would have kept him because I know how most of them are," Switzer said. "But I care because I was a father and had children of my own, and I wanted this kid to be successful. I think Troy and I get along fine. I want to win and he wants to win."

Switzer said Thursday he didn't know what problems existed between Aikman and Blake.

"I know John Blake is a great coach and a great person," he said. "Things happen sometime, like a player in the heat of a game saying something that is taken out of context by some people outside. I don't know what their (Aikman and Blake) problems are."

Texas tries to grab share of SWC lead against Texas Tech

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

It may be Super Bowl Sunday everywhere else but it will be Southwest Conference showdown No. 2 for No. 22 ranked Texas Tech on Sunday.

The Red Raiders (5-0, 15-1) beat back the challenge of the Houston Cougars last week and at noon Sunday they'll host the Texas Longhorns (11-4, 4-1), trying to grab a share of the SWC lead that the Raiders have held all season.

The Raiders defeated Southern Methodist 72-60 on Tuesday night and have had the rest of the week to get ready for the invading Longhorns.

In Saturday games, Houston (9-7, 4-1) plays at Baylor (6-10, 1-3) and Texas Christian (10-9, 1-3) plays at Southern Methodist (5-11, 1-4).

But those games will just be a prelude to Sunday's noon tip off at Municipal Coliseum where the Red Raiders have a 25-game home winning streak, the third longest in the nation behind Coppin State (35) and Memphis (27).

"Tech is definitely the heavy in the league," Texas coach Tom Penders said. "They lost two of their 10 players (from last year) we lost six of seven."

"They are playing awfully well out there and playing like a top 20 team. We are capable of beating or losing to anybody."

Tech's 15-1 start is the best in school history and the best in the SWC since Texas started the 1933 season 16-0. The Raiders' sudden prominence is certainly drawing attention.

"I'm sure that (home streak) becomes a target along with being picked to win the league and being ranked in the top 25," Texas Tech coach James Dickey said. "All that comes with the territory."

"We try not to think about any of that and focus on the next opponent whether it's home or on the road."

Balance has made the Red Raiders consistent all season.

"That's something that's been our goal, to be a top 25 program and to do it consistently," Dickey said.

The Longhorns (11-4, 4-1) got a surprise at on Wednesday when Reggie Freeman refused to stay out of the lineup because of a shoulder injury. Trainers thought Freeman would be sidelined several days but he scored 29 points and played 40 minutes in a 90-81 victory over Southern Methodist.

It was a good performance for a young team to see.

"He really lifted the team," Penders said. "Everybody plays us like it's their holy war. Baylor shot 58 percent (10-of-17 3-pointers) and we really needed him."

"Our kids saw what a dedicated guy who wants to play could do. A high school kid might sprain an ankle and be out a week but he showed you can play hurt."

NIT finalists have subpar games

By The Associated Press

Virginia Tech and Marquette, the two teams that played for last season's NIT championship, picked the same time to have subpar games.

The eighth-ranked Hokies dropped a 64-47 Atlantic 10 Conference game at George Washington and the 24th-ranked Golden Eagles lost 79-69 at North Carolina-Charlotte in a Conference USA game Thursday night.

In other Top 25 games, No. 4 Connecticut beat Pittsburgh 69-63, No. 5 Cincinnati got past DePaul 71-61, No. 10 Utah defeated Texas-El Paso 68-54, No. 13 Arizona edged Oregon State 66-59 and No. 25 California downed Washington State 87-79.

Virginia Tech (12-2, 5-1), ranked all season long, struggled all night with its shooting. The Hokies hit just 37 percent (18-for-49) from the field and only 58 percent (11-for-19) from the free-throw line.

George Washington (10-4, 4-1) scored the final basket of the first half to lead 29-25, then began the second half with a 10-2 run, the lead reaching 39-27 on a 3-pointer by Kwame Evans with 17:17 to play.

The Hokies never came closer than nine points after that, and fell behind by as many as 16 in the final four minutes.

"I'm not taking anything away from them, because they played well and they played hard, but I'm not so sure it was as much their defense as it was our inability to run our offense," Virginia Tech coach Bill Foster said.

Marquette (12-4, 3-2), which broke into the Top 25 this week, had its own shooting problems against UNC-Charlotte. The Golden Eagles scored only 18 points in the first half and got no closer than eight in the second half.

"There is no excuse for shooting 16 percent (in the first half)," Marquette coach Mike Deane said. "We didn't make anything. We did a decent enough job defensively. We just didn't execute on offense."

DeMarco Johnson scored 22 points and Shanderic Downs 18 for the 49ers (10-6, 4-1), who led by as many as 24 points and made 16 of their final 18 free throws.

DePaul (7-10, 0-6) lost its seventh straight.

At El Paso, the Miners weren't able to win one for their hospitalized coach.

Brandon Jessie scored 18 points and Mark Wydalch had 17 to lead Utah (15-3, 7-1 Western Athletic Conference) to its sixth straight win.

It was the first game for UTEP since coach Don Haskins suffered a heart attack Saturday. The 35-year coaching veteran is not expected back on the sidelines this season.

No. 13 Arizona 66, Oregon State 59

At Corvallis, Ore., Ben Davis scored 18 points and Joe McLean added 16 as the Wildcats (14-3, 4-2 Pac-10) held on for a surprisingly tough victory over the outmanned Beavers (3-12, 1-5).

Arizona led by as many as 20 points early in the second half, but Oregon State rallied to get within five with 2:19 remaining. The game wasn't decided until Davis sank two free throws with 11.2 seconds to play.

No. 25 California 87, Washington State 79

At Pullman, Wash., freshman Shareef Abdur-Rahim had 32 points and 18 rebounds and Tremaine Fowlkes had 12 points in his season debut for the Golden Bears (11-4, 6-4 Pac 10).

Fortson had a three-point play, another free throw and two putbacks in a 16-6 run that put Cincinnati in front 66-57 with 3:19 left. He finished with 17 points, 10 of them in the final minutes.

Competition is set to start at 3 p.m. today with the first-round matches. Three more rounds, including the championship quarterfinals, are scheduled to be completed today.

The tournament continues at 10:30 a.m. Saturday with the championship semifinals to begin at 11:30 a.m. Third and fifth-place matches begin at 5:30 p.m. with the championship matches at 7 p.m.

Admission to the tournament is three dollars for adults and one dollar for students for each of the three sessions. Tournament passes are available for seven dollars and day passes for Saturday are five dollars.

Spying charges create crisis in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity opposition asked the president today to form a national unity government to settle a political crisis triggered by spy charges that forced the prime minister to resign.

"The president asked for real possibilities of forming such a government and said he will be in touch with the Freedom Union and will consult with it," President Aleksander Kwasniewski's spokesman, Antoni Styrzula, told The Associated Press today. The Freedom Union is a Solidarity-based party.

Styrzula also confirmed that Prime Minister Jozef Oleksy had submitted his resignation today. Kwasniewski accepted it, but asked Oleksy to remain as interim prime minister until a new government is formed.

An ally of former President Lech Walesa, the Solidarity hero, accused Oleksy last month of spying for Moscow from 1982 to 1995.

Oleksy, 49, announced on national television Wednesday that he would step down so he could fight to clear his name. The announcement came hours after the Warsaw military prosecutor's office opened an investigation into the spying allegations against Oleksy, a former Communist.

Kwasniewski, another former Communist, has two weeks to name a new prime minister.

The Freedom Union party suggested that former Foreign Minister Wladyslaw Bartoszewski should head a new, nonpartisan government. Kwasniewski agreed to discuss the proposal with the leftist parties that now form Oleksy's coalition.

Bartoszewski, an independent, was Poland's foreign minister until last month. Appointed by Walesa to the Cabinet, he resigned after Walesa lost his presidential re-election bid to Kwasniewski.

There was no immediate explanation for Kwasniewski's willingness to consider a nonpartisan government. In the past he has expressed a desire to preserve the current leftist government.

On Thursday, he consulted with leaders of the two parties that make up the current government, Oleksy's Democratic Left Alliance of former communists, and the Peasants Party. Several possible replacements for Oleksy were proposed, but the sides failed to agree on a successor.

Oleksy has said a desire for political revenge motivated Walesa's supporters to spread the allegations against him.

Walesa's Nov. 19 election loss to Kwasniewski dealt a severe blow to the political heirs of Solidarity, which guided Poland to a peaceful democratic revolution in the 1980s. Poland's communist regime fell in 1989.

The charges that Oleksy passed classified documents and other information to Moscow were first made last month by the interior minister Walesa appointed to Oleksy's Cabinet. The minister resigned after making the allegations in Parliament.

Report: Some infants can shake off HIV virus

LONDON (AP) — Some infants who acquire the HIV virus from their mothers at birth apparently are able to rid themselves of the infection or neutralize it before it causes AIDS, according to a study released today.

European researchers studied 264 young children who tested positive for HIV and found that nine of them later seemed to have freed themselves of the virus.

In two of these children, the HIV virus later turned up again, even though normal antibody tests for the HIV virus had been negative. That suggests the two children may have developed an ability to "tolerate" the virus, the researchers wrote in Saturday's issue of The Lancet, a weekly medical journal.

The other seven children appear to have shaken the HIV virus, or possibly "sequestered" the virus, perhaps in lymph nodes.

If scientists can determine how the children processed the HIV virus, it might help the search for a cure for the virus. AIDS kills people by destroying their immune systems and thus their ability to fight off other diseases.

Philippines navy boat in battle with ships

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines confirmed today that a naval patrol boat engaged in a heavy gun battle this week with two foreign ships that intruded into its waters.

Defense Secretary Renato de Villa described the vessels as pirate ships that target boats between China and Subic Bay, a former U.S. naval base in the Philippines.

Initial unconfirmed reports said the clash involved ships flying Chinese flags, but Rodolfo Severino, a foreign ministry undersecretary, said "there were no signs" the ships were from China.

In Beijing, China's Foreign Ministry also denied Chinese involvement.

"As we have learned, that has nothing to do with the Chinese side," the ministry said.

Panel recommends date to destroy smallpox virus

GENEVA (AP) — A key U.N. panel has recommended destroying the world's last laboratory stocks of smallpox — a virus declared eradicated in the wild in 1980.

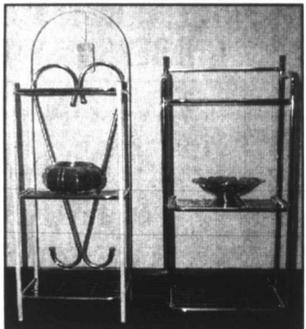

For years, health experts who have worried the virus could escape have urged eliminating the stocks, which exist only in the United States and Russia. But fears that this might undermine future research delayed the decision.

Researchers now say they no longer need the stocks, the World Health Organization said Thursday. Scientists have produced harmless clones of DNA fragments of the virus and are satisfied they have the full genetic blueprint for further tests, WHO officials said.

WHO's governing board agreed late Wednesday to set June 30, 1999 as the destruction date, pending approval by the 190-nation World Health Assembly, WHO spokesman Philippe Stroot said Thursday.
