THIS POSTER SAYS it all. Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union members at Getty's Schafer plant near Skellytown have joined 60,000 members on national strike against oil companies for better wages, more health insurance and increased vacation time. Five groups in the Pampa and Borger area have joined the strike.

Wholesale prices boost inflation nearly 13 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose 12.5 percent in 1979, the highest inflation at the wholesale level in five years, the Labor Department reported today.

The Producer Price Index stood at 227.8 in December. This means that goods that cost $100 in the 1967 base period cost $227.80 last month.

The index measures price changes at three levels. Finished goods are those one step short of retail outlets. Intermediate materials have had some processing. Crude goods have had no processing.

The 12.5 percent increase in finished goods prices from December 1978 to December 1979 was outpaced by a 15.9 percent rise at the intermediate level and 17.5 percent increase in crude prices at wholesale.

Intermediate prices in December rose 1.2 percent, compared with 0.9 percent in the previous month. Crude goods were up 1.1 percent, against 2 percent in November.

There have been very high rates of increase in the intermediate and crude indexes in recent months. Early said, suggesting that these would put pressure on prices in coming months.

He added, however, that there was some evidence in December that non-energy crude prices were moderating, a situation that often occurs when the economy is heading into a recession.

The Producer Price Index is watched closely because price increases at the wholesale level often show up in a month or two in higher prices at groceries, drug stores and other retail outlets.

Consumer prices have been rising slightly faster than wholesale prices and could show a 1979 increase in excess of 13 percent, or the worst inflation rate since World War II price controls were lifted in 1946.

Conditions in 1974 and 1979 were not dissimilar. An embargo by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, followed by price increases, greatly affected the price of energy products in the United States in 1974.

All's quiet on the OCAW union strike front

From staff and wire reports

After the second day of a national strike by the 60,000 member Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union for higher wages and better health insurance, operations at affected plants in the Texas Panhandle have remained quiet.

No other areas across the nation have reported problems except for isolated rock throwing incidents on the Texas Gulf Coast Tuesday night.

The strike began Tuesday at 4 p.m. after talks between OCAW officials and Gulf Oil Co. representatives failed. The last OCAW national strike was in 1969.

Over 600 workers at local plants of Phillips Petroleum Co., Texaco, Getty Oil Co. and Cities Service Gas Co. have silently set up picket lines at the fronts of those plants and there have been no incidents of violence reported.

Jerry Dennis, on strike at Getty's Schafer plant west of Pampa, said so far truck drivers have been honoring the picket lines.

R.A. Churchwell, a Big Spring truck driver, was stopped outside the gates of Phillips Copolymer plant in Borger with his load of styrene.

"We honor these picket lines — we're union, too," Churchwell said. "So we're waiting out here for someone inside to unload this."

Dennis added that if the strike continues, bad weather could adversely affect Getty.

"Most of our products are outgoing, so it doesn't affect us that much at first," Dennis said. "But if the strike draws on, bad weather could hurt Getty."

However, Maggie Jewell of Getty's Tulsa office said the company won't be affected, even though over 70 employees just in the Pampa area are on strike.

"We have professional people in there operating things," Jewell said. "We're automated so we can run the plants with them — besides, they're well-qualified."

OCAW is seeking health care benefits for union members. The industry has offered to donate only a portion of health care costs each month.

Gary McFall, head of OCAW local 4235 in Pampa, said negotiations opened approximately three weeks ago.

"We knew there were problems beforehand with the negotiations — we had seen small problems coming," McFall said. "The holdup is the companies refusal to pay health insurance — that's our top priority."

"The trend of the companies is to offer more money in wages and less insurance," he explained. "So far that is the opposite of what we're wanting."

Production levels in the Texas coast refineries, which employ about 250,000 union members, have not been affected, according to oil company spokesmen.

"Everything was normal last night (Wednesday)," said Dean Baxter, spokesman for Atlantic Richfield and Arco Pipeline companies. "Things are pretty calm, pretty quiet and pretty normal everywhere."

Baxter said the Arco refinery, now being manned by supervisory personnel, was "at full capacity. We don't foresee any interruptions at all to refinery production or delivery service."

Baxter's sentiments were echoed by Bill Gibson, spokesman for a Shell Oil refinery east of Houston, who praised union employees for their cooperation in turning over plant operations.

Spokesman for other plants said supervisory personnel were having few problems in taking over plant operations from union personnel.

But OCAW spokesman Jerry Archuleta predicted that problems would soon arise because of the walkout.

"They're (the supervisors) sleeping on cots and working seven-day weeks," he said. "That gets awfully tiring. When they're tired, that can mean they can start making mistakes."

City, school will attempt tax board settlement

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

A letter has been co-written between the City of Pampa and the Pampa Independent School District outlining their views and describing their intentions on the controversial district tax appraisal board and sent it to officials of the Grandview-Hopkins ISD.

Copies of the missive are being hand-delivered to the over five entities involved in the tax appraisal board dispute. Bob Phillips, superintendent of Pampa schools said this morning.

These other taxing bodies include City of McLean and McLean ISD, City of Lefors and Lefors ISD and Alanreed ISD.

City and school officials outlined in the letter — signed by Darville Orr, president of the school board; Bob Phillips, superintendent of schools for Pampa ISD; H. Ray Thompson, mayor and Mack Wofford, city manager — that the six smaller entities passed resolutions calling for a seven-person board without consulting or meeting with the City of Pampa or Pampa ISD.

One paragraph elaborates on this, saying, "No attempt was made to change the cost allocation for the operation of the board by these six entities. Under the proposal made by you (Grandview-Hopkins) and the other five entities, the City of Pampa and the Pampa ISD would have only 43 percent of the representation on the board and would have to bear almost 80 percent of the cost of the operation of the board."

The letter goes on to say the Pampa officials feel this is unfair to the taxpayers. School board members and commissioners feel the massive states, "the citizens whom they represent should have a voice on the board at least equal to the cost which they will be required to pay."

While Grandview-Hopkins' declaratory judgement suit against Wanda Carter was pending, the letter says, their counsel suggested the "difficulty" might be resolved by a nine-member board giving the Pampa entities five members and the other entities four members. This suggestion, the Pampa officials believed, indicated the entities were interested in a "mutual solution."

Then on Jan. 7, officials report the Grandview-Hopkins' counsel said the proposal was not "feasible" and informed them of the Jan. 10 organization meeting.

Due to the three law suits pending in Texas on the three-fourths rule, Pampa officials say in the letter, they feel it would be best to elect five members as provided in the statute, Senate Bill 621, until the litigation is resolved.

Should Grandview-Hopkins and the other taxing bodies not wish to reach a solution without going to court, the letter states, the two Pampa tax entities will be forced to "go forward with the litigation and seek judicial determination of the validity of the seven-member board as provided by the taxing entities."

Informed sources from both the city and the school district believe at this time there will be no representatives from the Pampa taxing bodies present at tonight's organizational meeting of the Gray County tax appraisal board.

This is the latest development in the dispute over the formation of a county tax appraisal board as outlined by Senate Bill 621 which was passed last April by the 66th Texas State Legislature.

The dispute began in the middle of October when County Clerk Wanda Carter, under the advice of the State Property Tax Board of Austin, declared the three-fourths resolutions submitted by the six smaller entities were not timely filed.

The three-fourths rule was originally included in the senate bill in order to provide smaller entities to get a more equal representation on the board. They could do this by three-quarters of a county's taxing entities passing a resolution changing the size or the method of selection of the board.

A spokesperson from the state tax board in Austin said it was the opinion of the board that resolutions using the three-fourths rule should submit them to the county clerk before Oct. 1 since voting for the board members was to begin at that time.

History marker may force Hemphill to build jail

By SHEILA ECCLES
Of The Pampa News

Hemphill County Commissioners met Wednesday in a called session to discuss the feasibility of renovating the county's 90-year-old jail and to talk over the possibility of constructing a new facility.

Although Hemphill County is not under any pressure from the state at this time, County Attorney, W.J. Jackson, said the Texas Jail Standards Commission has listed 40 standards the commissioners must comply with to bring the jail up to state qualifications.

"A new jail is the only answer," Jackson said. Bob Frisby, partner in a construction and consulting firm, told the commissioners in a two-hour presentation, "There is no way to make the existing jail up to standards." Part of the county's problem in meeting state standards is not deterioration but the fact that in 1967 the building was awarded its Historical Marker.

Once on the Historical list a building cannot be changed, and must maintain the outside appearance of the old building, Frisby said.

After listening to the presentations, the commissioners requested a preliminary report and proposal from Frisby to establish Hemphill County's future correction facility needs.

Recommendations on a location for a new facility were discussed and the commissioners agreed the courthouse square considered the best location available.

Further discussion of the jail facility will take place at the regular Hemphill County Commissioners meeting, Monday, January 14.

The original jail saw much of the Panhandle history being made and housed several desperados from the Borger oilfields during the early 1900's. Borger was then known as the toughest town in the world.

Tom T. McGee, the first county sheriff, was murdered, and the gunman escaped, never to be seen again. Criminals in the jail had to be watched at all times, as they were especially adept at picking locks.

One of the best known criminals of the times, Pete Traxler, always wearing his bullet proof vest, was several times marked for the jail. Traxler, however, preferred to shoot it out with lawmen.

Those who could be caught were put in two separate cell blocks, made of hard tempered steel, and still standing.

Hemphill County residents were so against building the jail in 1887, that they fought all the way to the Supreme Court. The jail construction was wrought with fraudulent contracts. Supreme Court officials eventually realized the need, and in 1889 ordered the jail built. Entire cost of the 1890 facility was $13,000.

To date a porch has been added, the latch bars are slightly worn, from years of use, and the faded red bricks stand slightly askew.

In related Texas jail facility construction, Hutchinson county will go to the polls, January 15, to decide whether a new county jail should and will be constructed and where.

Hutchinson County voters have many questions concerning the bond issue. Cost is among the highest priorities, with voters wanting to know if it will cause taxes to be higher.

The Hutchinson County seat is in Stinnett, questions as to why the Stinnett jail can't be renovated, plague officials. Logistics place the jail facility in Borger "as the most economical way to go," according to County Judge, Gene Schneider.

Disadvantages to a Borger facility are mainly the fact that a lack of courtroom facilities would require transportation of prisoners to and from Stinnett for all judicial proceedings.

Fort Worth crash kills 2

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A safety investigator says a missing part in the left engine may have caused a twin-engine plane to crash into a Fort Worth home, killing the student pilot and his flight instructor.

Armond Edwards, an investigator for the National Safety Transportation Board, said Wednesday he could not locate a one-half inch "u-shaped" metal part when he dismantled the left engine. The part connects to the accelerator pump, he said.

Edwards said the right engine should have kept the plane in flight even if the left engine failed. He said he will examine that engine today. Witnesses said the right engine appeared to be spluttering minutes before the crash.

Ernest Dullea, 58, of Fort Worth, and Peter Witchi, 32, a student pilot from Switzerland, had just completed a touch-and-go landing at Meacham Field Tuesday when their Piper Apache clipped the roof of the house and careened into the back yard. The plane exploded on impact and set fire to the house. Three persons in the house escaped serious injury.

Witnesses said the plane appeared to be losing power moments before it began to lose altitude at 200 feet.

Edwards said the plane could have been operating "for months" without the part. Without the part, the engine would either quit or hesitate during rapid acceleration, such as the type needed to take off during a touch-and-go landing.

"I don't think the part fell out," Edwards said. "I think at some point, and there's no telling when, there was some work in that part of the engine and the part was simply not reinstalled."

"It's not the type of material that would have melted, and it wouldn't have fallen out if it was in properly."

Two officers no-billed in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County grand jury has no-billed two officers charged with shooting a man they say they stopped for a traffic violation, but a federal panel said it would continue its investigation into the incident.

"On the basis of what we have heard, on the basis of evidence, we have no-billed the officers," said county jury foreman Roy Nelson on Wednesday.

R.W. Robinson, 24, and J.C. Valentino, 31, claimed Reggie Lee Jackson ran from and pointed a pistol at them Sept. 26 after they stopped him for a traffic violation. The police opened fire and killed Jackson, but witnesses said they heard Jackson plead for his life before he was shot.

Nelson said the panel asked for help from U.S. Attorney General Tony Canales, but Canales provided no aid. Canales refused comment.

The jury foreman discussed no testimony, but said "sometimes what people tell you on television and what they say under oath are two different things."

Deathbed clue leads to arrest

TROUP, Texas (AP) — A name scrawled on blood-stained paper by a mortally-wounded man gave sheriff's deputies a deathbed clue that led to the arrest of two men in connection with the slaying of an elderly Troup couple, authorities say.

James Sessions, 22, of Jacksonville has been charged with two counts of murder in the deaths of Clifford and Belle McDougal, both 72. A second man was arrested Wednesday night in connection with the slayings.

Larry Charles Franklin, also of Jacksonville, was arraigned this morning on two charges of murder. Justice of the Peace Mrs. Leon Hicks set bond at $100,000.

The couple died Tuesday of wounds sustained during an apparent robbery attempt at their home a mile southwest of this small East Texas town.

Mrs. McDougal, stabbed once in the back of the neck, died in her bed. But Smith County authorities said her husband, stabbed in the back and hit in the face by a shotgun blast, walked across the road to his son's house for help.

McDougal died at a Tyler hospital after he printed a man's name on a piece of paper, Smith County Sheriff's deputies said.

Sessions, 22, was arrested Tuesday and arraigned on two counts of murder before Justice of the Peace Mrs. Leon Hicks, who set bond at $100,000.

Investigators speculated robbery was the motive because McDougal was known to keep money at his home. They said a telephone line to the house was cut and the house was ransacked.

Deputies said McDougal was stabbed in the upper back by one man and then hit in the face with a shotgun blast fired by another man as he ran out the back door.

Oil spill hearings set for May

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a May 15 hearing to start untangling the snarl of damage suits from the Mexican oil spill. U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor said he will hear arguments concerning his jurisdiction in the matter.

The oil spill, from a runaway well in the southern Gulf of Mexico, stained 140 miles of Texas resort beaches in August and September. It brought damage claims from the State of Texas, the U.S. government, South Texas fishermen and area businessmen.

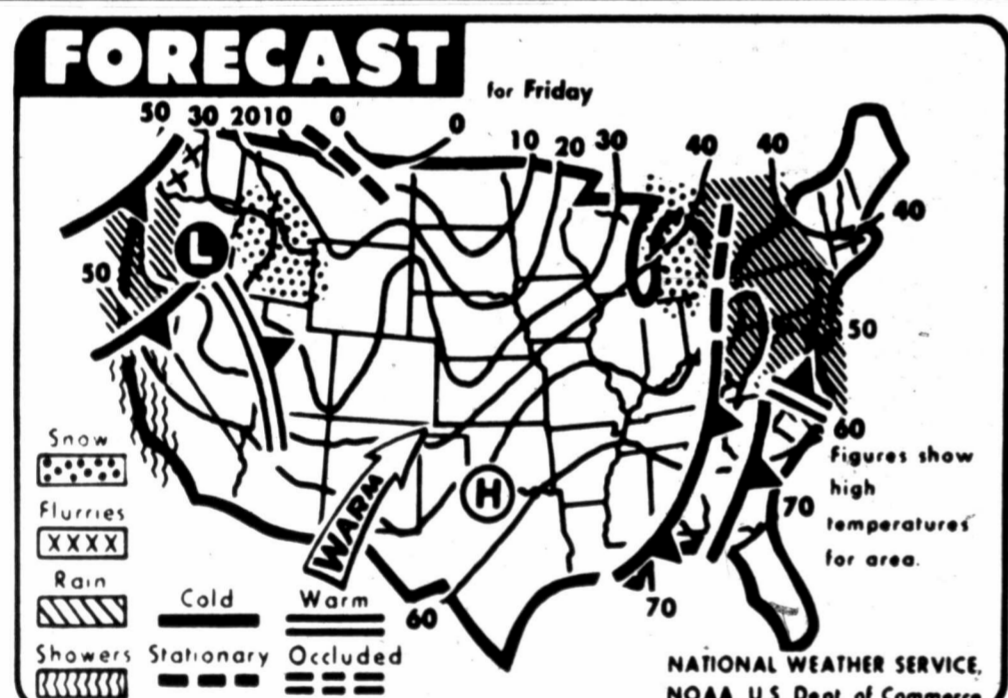

Most of the suits claim damages from Dallas-based SEDCO, which leased equipment to drill the well, and Pemex, the Mexican national oil monopoly.

In reply, SEDCO has filed a two-pronged suit claiming it should be declared free from liability, and that its liability should be limited under maritime law.

The suit claims the drilling rig it leased to Pemex was a seagoing vessel which it floated on a pontoon-supported platform.

O'Connor said he will write a lengthy opinion on his jurisdiction in the suit, including the question of his jurisdiction over Pemex and its drilling subsidiary, Permco, after the May arguments.

Pemex owns the Elk 1 well, and SEDCO leased the rig to Permargo.

Shipping, market backlash targets

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials, saying the president should set U.S. foreign policy, are talking to the International Longshoremen's Association about its boycott of Soviet shipping.

The ILA action would expand on the trade limitations and partial embargo of Soviet-ordered grain announced by President Carter in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. It also would affect cargo destined for other countries aboard Soviet ships.

The administration has made it clear that we hope foreign policy decisions will be left to the chief executive and his branch of government, and not be made outside of it," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Wednesday.

"We can't say that someone has no right to express himself," spokesman Carter said of the union's action. "But we hope that the steps would be those arrived at by the democratic — with a small 'd' — leadership of this country."

The ILA had no advance discussion with the administration on its Wednesday decision to refuse to work on Soviet ships after those already in port are cleared, said ILA president Thomas "Teddy" Gleason.

He indicated the union would go along with the president if there were questions about the boycott, adding that he did not want to "embarrass or second-guess" Carter.

In announcing the action, Gleason called the Soviets "bully boys" for their intervention in Afghanistan and said dockworkers were "showing the farmers they're not the only ones making sacrifices."

The New York-based ILA represents 116,000 port workers on the East and Gulf coasts and at major inland ports on the Great Lakes and along the Mississippi River.

West Coast dockworkers, represented by the 12,000-member International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, said they did not plan to support the boycott.

The ILA action could disrupt transport of the 3 million metric tons of grain that reportedly have not yet been delivered to the Soviets under terms of a five-year trade agreement.

Carter's embargo, which affects 17 million metric tons of grain, did not apply to the minimum annual U.S. commitment to the Soviets of 8 million tons. This grain, the president said, is intended for human consumption in the Soviet Union.

The boycott also could affect cargo headed for non-Soviet ports aboard Russian ships. In the first half of 1979, Soviet vessels reportedly handled 1.2 million tons of the foreign cargo at U.S. ports. Less than 25 percent of that total involved U.S.-Soviet trade.

The ILA boycott, which Gleason said would affect trade worth "hundreds of millions of dollars," was winning broad support at ILA ports.

A 19-man ILA crew in Philadelphia forfeited a night's pay — at $15.60 an hour — and refused Wednesday to unload the Soviet container ship Khudozhnik Pakhomov. The ship had come into port before the ILA deadline.

For the second day in a row, wheat, corn and oats futures plunged today to the lowest price trading regulations allow as traders continued to worry about the impact of a partial grain embargo against the Soviets.

"No one on the floor is going to rest until the markets are moving freely," said veteran trader Sam Roller of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., a major brokerage firm.

"When corn moves (from off the lowest price limit) the markets will start operating again," he added.

Traders are worried that the glut of corn in the domestic market because of the embargo will keep prices depressed for some time. Instead of trading in the grains, brokerage firms began buying soybeans today, with prices for future delivery contracts remaining unchanged from Wednesday to 9 cents lower at the beginning of trade.

Once the trading limit was reached in corn, wheat and oats, trading came to a virtual standstill. "Needless to say, it kills business," said another veteran trader.

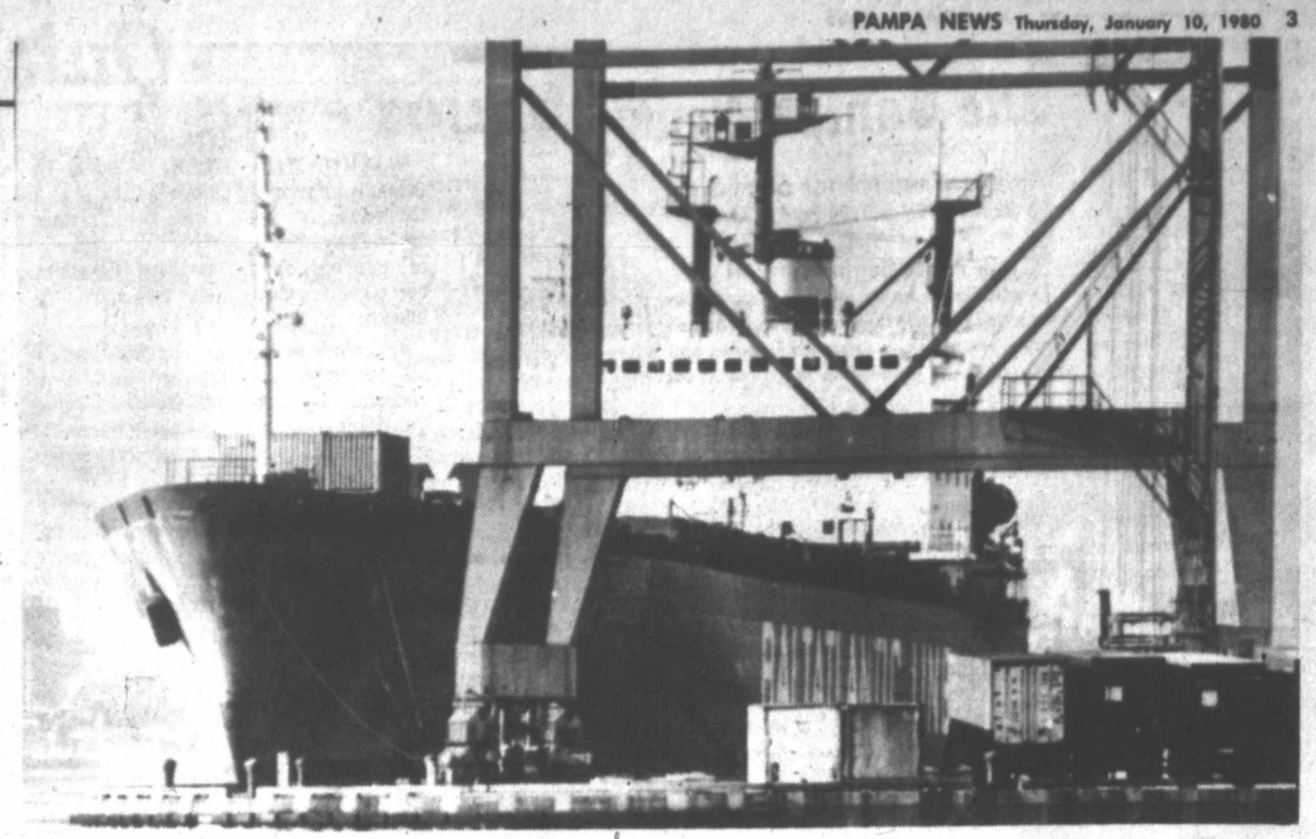

Today was the second day grain markets had a chance to react to the government's embargo of 17 million metric tons of grain destined for the Soviet Union.

Less than half a minute after trading opened Wednesday, wheat, corn and soybeans dropped by the daily limit permitted on exchanges in Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City, Mo.

The limit in Chicago allows daily prices to fluctuate up or down to a maximum of 20 cents a bushel for wheat, 10 cents for corn and 30 cents for soybeans and March wheat closed at $4.25 1/2 a bushel, corn at $2.74 1/2 and soybeans at $6.13.

President Carter on Tuesday tried to minimize the impact of his action on grain prices by raising federal price supports. But the sharp drop in prices indicated that traders didn't believe that was sufficient, according to Chicago Board of Trade President Robert K. Wilmouth.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP-O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covington Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

'Going along' ethics

By Robert Walters

(Last of two related columns)

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The words of the late Sam Rayburn, the legendary Speaker of the House, are not carved in stone anywhere on Capitol Hill but they will echo forever through the halls of Congress: "If you want to get along, go along."

Nowhere has that terse homily about securing and retaining friendship, power and influence been taken more seriously than in the ethics committees of the House and Senate.

Throughout the 1960s and 1970s, "going along" in dealing with allegations of colleagues' ethical, moral and legal transgressions has meant ignoring, rejecting or minimizing any suggestion that lawmakers, like other mortals, might have character flaws.

The Senate Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, formed in the spring of 1968, spent most of the first decade of its existence drafting sympathetic legal opinions endorsing various schemes devised by legislators to circumvent the law.

The House committee's first publicized cases were hardly models of zealous reform. They involved allegations that Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., and journalist Daniel Schorr breached House security guidelines when they disclosed information that the public had a right to know.

The committee finally undertook a legitimate investigation, involving alleged misconduct by Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., but it opened that probe only after Common Cause found an obscure legal provision that allowed it to force the investigation.

Throughout that period, Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., was a leader in the campaign for tough ethical standards — but when it came time to designate the committee chairman he inevitably was passed over in favor of someone more sympathetic to Sam Rayburn's credo. "The authoritative Almanac of American Politics describes Bennett as a man who 'enjoys a reputation for probity and attention to duty which is second to none in the House,'" then explains why his colleagues were nervous about the prospect of Bennett as chairman. "There was a feeling that he was too much of a stickler for propriety. He opposes unofficial office accounts, outside income for members and congressional pay raises, which led one colleague to call him 'a bit too pious.'"

But Bennett continued to accumulate seniority during a period when a series of scandals involving House members led to heightened public cynicism about the congressional tradition of soul-cleansing exercises that were long on ritual but short on substance.

When the 96th Congress convened early this year, Bennett no longer could be denied the committee chairmanship. During his first year in that position, he has provided the integrity, dignity and independence that the committee long has lacked.

On the other side of the Capitol, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., has been only slightly less successful in establishing meaningful peer review under his chairmanship of the Select Committee on Ethics.

Stevenson's greatest success undoubtedly was forcing a full-scale investigation into certain improper financial transactions of Sen. Herman W. Talmadge, D-Ga.

Talmadge is a certified member of the Senate's "club," an unofficial but powerful group of shrewd veterans whose influence seldom is subject to successful challenge. Not many years ago, filing formal charges of misconduct against one of those lawmakers would have been unthinkable.

Talmadge eventually received a slap on the wrist so gentle that he was able to brazenly suggest he actually had been vindicated, but his inability to "cut a deal" to avoid even being brought before the Senate's bar of justice was a momentous event.

Neither the House nor the Senate committee is in danger of being mistaken for an unleashed tiger. But fresh leadership and growing public intolerance of congressional hanky-panky have produced dramatic improvements this year.

Quit warming up spilled milk

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - John B. Connally apparently enjoys his image as a tough-as-nails Texan who doesn't want anyone's sympathy. But even the tough guy of contemporary politics deserves compassion when he's being unfairly attacked.

An ambitious, hard-driving businessman and politician, Connally never will be a candidate for sainthood. He undoubtedly qualifies for the "wheeler-dealer" millstone that's been hung irrevocably around his neck.

But he doesn't deserve to be victimized by critics who have allowed hunches, intuition and "gut feelings" about Connally's character to substitute for the facts in their determined efforts to demonstrate that he's guilty of immoral — if not illegal — activities.

Since the mid-1950s, Connally has been pursued by critics convinced that behind the facade of a shrewd, slick lawyer-businessman lies a cunning practitioner of white-collar crime.

But after a quarter century of investigation, including a major criminal probe conducted by the Justice Department, there still is no proof of illegal activity by Connally.

Undaunted by that record of failure, the news media continues to purvey unflattering reports about Connally that substitute a melange of insinuation, implication and innuendo for the facts.

Three such articles have appeared in recent weeks — in the American Lawyer, The New York Times Magazine and New York Magazine.

Those accounts use different techniques to rehash Connally's widely publicized 1974 "milk fund" trial, although author Joe Klein's account in New York Magazine includes only passing references to the episode.

That's logical, since Connally was found not guilty of charges that he accepted a $10,000 illegal payment from a lawyer representing the dairy industry. But that acquittal didn't deter the magazine's editors from using several gimmicks to remind the public about the only time Connally ever was formally accused of a crime.

The "tease" headline on the magazine cover asks: "Can John Connally Milk the Electorate?" Inside, there's a full-page illustration of a Connally photo stuffed inside a milk bottle.

After acknowledging that "no one has ever been able to prove anything against him," author Klein breaks no new ground but strings together a series of old newspaper clippings that give Connally's dealings "the appearance of improbity."

The American Lawyer story, an expanded version of an account that appeared simultaneously in The New York Times Magazine, was written by Steven Brill, one of the country's best investigative reporters.

Notwithstanding those credentials, Brill also was unable to develop any new information about Connally's real or imagined misbehavior. He did, however, devote an inordinate amount of space to a detailed recounting of the "milk fund" charges, including an analysis of the trial record apparently designed to suggest that Connally may indeed have been guilty.

Like his fellow citizens, John Connally enjoys certain rights enumerated in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. That includes the prohibition against being tried twice for the same crime.

If the courts can't abrogate the double-jeopardy provision, journalists ought to tread cautiously on that ground. The same care ought to be observed before accusing Connally of wrongdoing "without due process of law."

There's no reason to abandon any investigation, journalistic or otherwise, of Connally's activities, especially since his conduct in recent decades suggests that he's hardly a paradigm of integrity.

But if those probes aren't fruitful, there's no reason to disseminate warmed-over accounts of stale charges that were never proved or were rejected by a jury. Connally deserves to be accorded the same fundamental civil liberty guaranteed to all other Americans — presumed innocent until proved guilty.

The Pakistan connection

The Soviet move into Afghanistan has already had one significant consequence. It has initiated a thaw in the deeply chilled relations between the United States and Pakistan.

President Carter has indicated there will be a resumption of at least some military assistance, largely suspended since the 1971 war with India and cut off completely last April in a dispute over Pakistan's suspected development of nuclear weapons capability.

The nuclear controversy has been only part of the problem. A long and once very close relationship — Pakistan was a charter and enthusiastic member of the U.S. sponsored Central Treaty Organization — had been deteriorating for some time.

Pakistan has resented what it regards as inadequate U.S. support in its 1965 and 1971 clashes with India. The United States has been repelled by the increasingly repressive regime of President Zia ul-Haq, an authoritarianism steeped in Islamic fanaticism that is far closer to the spirit of Ayatollah Khomeini's anarchic Iran than it is to the human rights-committed Carter administration.

Afghanistan may go far to heal the rift, however, since other than Pakistan there is only India in the path of the Soviet southward advance. And India is a cipher, unable to act in the midst of a bitter national election and, should the victor be Indira Gandhi, quite possibly uninterested in doing so.

Under the circumstances, a resumption of the Pakistani connection may be understandable. But considering the unchanged nature of the Zia regime, that doesn't make it any more desirable in the long run.

DAUGHTERS OF ISLAM, IT IS WRITTEN THAT THE FACE SHOULD BE COVERED...

Too much on my plate

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON - Rowly, the columnist who works across the hall from me, came into my office the other day and said, "What are we going to do about Afghanistan?"

I was still trying to recover from the holidays, so I told him frankly, "I'm not ready for Afghanistan. I still haven't figured out what I'm going to do in Iran."

"But Afghanistan is more serious than Iran. There are 50,000 Soviet troops there. It's the first mass movement of the Kremlin's military might since Czechoslovakia."

"I'm aware of that," I told him. "But I'm not up to dealing with Afghanistan until I find out where the hell it is."

"So you're not going to take it seriously?"

"I didn't say I wasn't going to take it seriously. I said I wasn't going to take it all. No one told me to keep an eye on Afghanistan. I need time for these things. Give me another month and then I might tilt one way or the other."

"A month could be too late. We have to do something about it now!"

"President Carter has warned Leonid Brezhnev in the strongest terms that the United States takes the dimmest view of the Soviet troops being sent there. I should think that would take care of the matter."

"Words aren't enough. We're going to have to take some sort of action."

"I'm not ready to take any action, Rowly. There is just so much a person in my position can do."

"Don't you realize that the invasion of Afghanistan by the Soviets is a dagger thrusting at the heart of Iran?"

"The way I feel about Iran these days, I wish someone would stab it."

Winner and still champ

By Don Graft

In 1900, the Times of London recently observed editorially, the average earnings of an English worker were the equivalent in purchasing power of a half an ounce of gold.

In 1979 — two world wars, the Great Depression and a worldwide inflation later — the average British wage still works out in real value to approximately half an ounce of gold per week.

So what is new about gold in the intervening four-fifths of a century? Essentially only the price tag placed on it as figured in terms of the pound and, to varying degrees determined by relative economic health, all other national currencies.

What the steadily rising price of gold in recent years basically means is not that the metal itself has become intrinsically more valuable in terms of purchasing power, but that the currencies with which it is bought and sold have become steadily less so. Most dramatically the U.S. dollar, in terms of which the monetary value of gold has been determined, officially or otherwise, throughout most of this century.

Several factors have contributed historically to gold's staying power — the beauty which initially attracted man's interest, its durability and above all limited supply.

There is only so much of the metal on earth, and by some industry estimates most that is economically recoverable probably has already been mined. And most of that is still around. Gold of the Pharaohs and Incas that is not in museums may now, having progressed through numerous meltings and remoldings, be a constituent of anything from the bridgework of ordinary citizens to bars stashed away in the vaults of Swiss banks.

New gold these days comes from a handful of sources. South Africa is the major producer, followed by the Soviet Union with the United States and Canada very distant also-rans.

South African production during 1979 is in the range of 22 to 23 million ounces, about the same as the previous year. Soviet output can only be guessed at. Official figures have not been released since 1935.

but informed industry estimates put it at about 14 million ounces. Most of this eventually reaches Western markets. But not as produced, only as the Soviets feel the need to exchange it for hard currencies.

There is little prospect of relieving gold price pressures through increased production. Even in South Africa, the most efficient producer, it takes five years and up to a billion or more dollars to bring a new mine into production, and the promising sites are already being worked. The Soviets until recent market surges may have been producing at a loss, their need for foreign exchange making it necessary.

And although there has been talk of revitalizing American mining, it is notable that in 1978, up to then the best market year ever with an average price of $193 an ounce, U.S. production actually declined.

The price has now surged beyond the $500-per-ounce level, powered by heavy buying from the Mideast, the flight from the dollar spurred by the foundering U.S. economy and the rise of oil as a new value-determining commodity. Oil shares an attribute with gold — finite supply — and interestingly, its price has been keeping rough pace with that of gold, at something just under 20 barrels to the ounce.

There is, clearly, more than coincidence involved. But nothing that the industrial world is capable of doing much more about than it has been able to do respecting the upward march of the monetary price of gold.

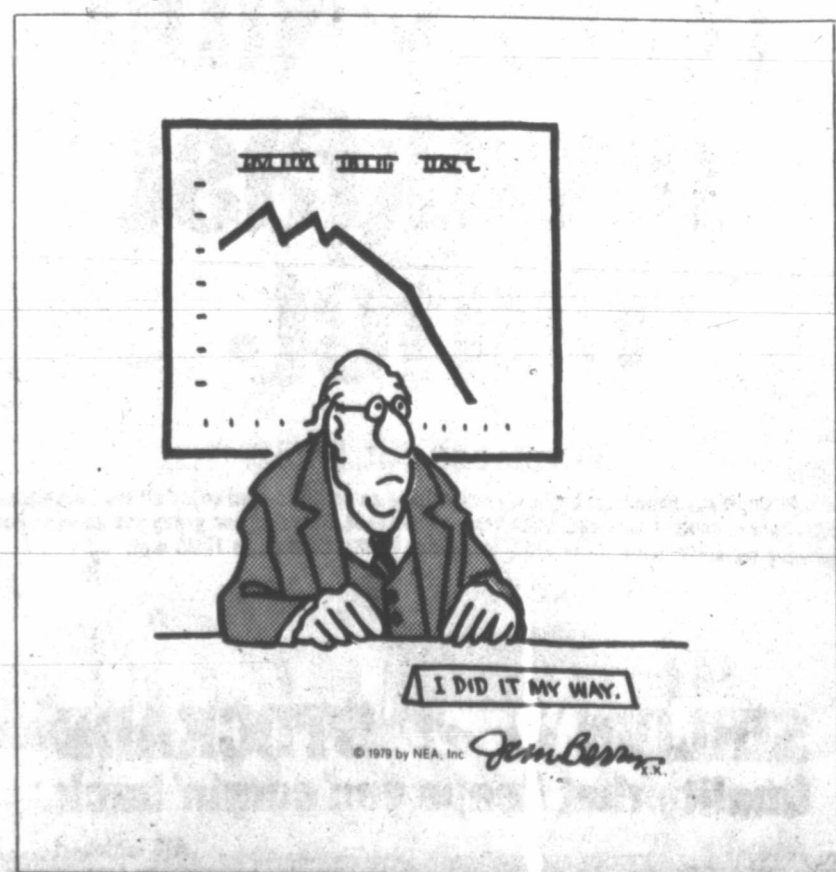

That price in dollars is now 15 times what it was in 1968 when the United States severed the official link between gold and the dollar, ending one of history's few successful if brief efforts to control gold.

The Treasury has of late attempted to deflate prices through periodic sales from the Fort Knox hoard, but this has had little effect other than to induce temporary fluctuations in the gold markets.

Gold would appear at this point to be beyond controls in resuming its role as the ultimate, the most dependable and the universally accepted standard of value. It has a powerful ally on its side — history.

International news roundup

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States was successful in its drive to arraign the Soviet Union before the General Assembly for its military intervention in Afghanistan, but the Russians announced that they would veto any resolution in the Security Council calling for sanctions against Iran. With Security Council action on Afghanistan blocked by the Soviet veto, the council adopted a resolution Wednesday night asking for an emergency session of the 152-nation assembly to deal with the situation in the Central Asian nation.

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Reinforced Soviet troops are reported being deployed in southern Afghanistan to take over posts abandoned by Afghan army defectors. Three foreigners who asked not to be identified reported seeing about 20 large Russian transports landing Soviet reinforcements in Kandahar, 300 miles south of Kabul and capital of a province where Moslem rebels have been reported active.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indira Gandhi takes control of the Indian Parliament in triumph today after a landslide election victory that swept her back to power as dramatically as she left it 34 months ago.

The last time the 62-year-old stateswoman appeared in Parliament was December 1978, when she went to the lower house to answer contempt charges involving harassment of officials during the 19-month emergency she declared as prime minister. After that last appearance she spent a week in jail.

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials, saying the president should set U.S. foreign policy, are talking to the International Longshoremen's Association about its boycott of Soviet shipping.

The boycott announced Wednesday would expand the trade limitations announced by President Carter in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. It also would affect non-Soviet cargo carried by Russian ships.

Pacific storms have whipped up wind and rain in Hawaii and Southern California and stunned the Northwest with enough snow and freezing rain to sink more than 100 boats.

At least 12 persons were killed and two others missing in weather-related accidents over two days. Tens of thousands were without power as ice and snow downed lines.

CHICAGO (AP) — Traders were trying again to do business at Midwest grain exchanges today after worries over the effects of a partial grain embargo against the Soviets sent wheat and corn prices plummeting in frantic selling.

But veteran traders said they see no quick change in the pattern that emerged Wednesday when the government lifted a two-day trading freeze imposed to allow the market to react to President Carter's embargo of 17 million metric tons of grain.

Southwest Airline strike threatened

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airline and union negotiators will try to avert a threatened walkout Sunday by mechanics, cleaners and stock clerks when they meet today in another attempt to reach agreement on a new contract.

However, airline officials said if the negotiations fail there is a strong possibility the workers will strike at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

The airline is negotiating with the International Association of Machinist and Aerospace Workers, which represents 106 Airline employees. The Airline employs about 1,600 persons.

Airline officials hinted any decision to continue limited operations if a strike is called could depend on how many non-IAM workers honor the picket lines.

Southwest President Howard Putnam, in a Jan 5 letter to employees, said the airline has a contingency plan calling for the operation of "at least 12 planes, all of them 737s."

He said if the plan was implemented nonstriking employees reporting to their normal shifts would be guaranteed their salaries through Feb. 1.

"What happens after that will depend on our loads, the success of our operation and the ability to maintain our aircraft with our smaller staff of management and maintenance people," Putnam said.

He said if the airline was forced to shutdown "nearly all employees will go off the payroll withing 48 to 72 hours."

The airline and the union have been negotiating since July to replace the three-year pact that expired Aug. 16.

The negotiations were suspended in mid-December by a federal mediator and a 30-day cooling period went into effect.

Airline officials said they would not try to block the strike in the courts because under provisions of the National Railway Labor Act the union becomes eligible for a work stoppage on Sunday.

Union negotiators have rejected three offers by the company. Southwest's final offer called for hikes in the base pay scales of the three job classifications as additional compensation and benefits. Putnam said the package was worth nearly $1.6 million over three years.

Default shocks Maine residents

SACO, Maine (AP) — On the 16th day of 1979, voters in this little Maine city eagerly passed a property tax limit styled after California's Proposition 13.

On the last day of 1979, Saco defaulted on a $2.1 million tax anticipation loan.

Residents were shocked. Officials scrambled to pay the bills. Few argue that the tax limitation directly caused the default. But one year later, residents are sharply divided over the merits of the referendum and the direction their city should take.

The municipal default climaxed a troubled year for Saco: Scores of public employees were fired, city and school programs suffered deep cuts and the City Council weathered almost a complete turnover of members. Over it all rang unending, often bitter public debate.

Former City Councilor Robert Cassette, who led the tax revolt, blames past "mismanagement" for Saco's default.

"It was certainly not the tax limitation," Cassette said. "Thank God we had put a limit on what they (City Hall) can do to us."

School Committee Chairwoman Glen Roth felt differently. "By clamping that tax cap on, it brought all the underlying problems — mismanagement and lack of revenue — to the surface" more quickly.

And, she added, the prohibition on raising taxes will make it harder now for this town of 13,000 to solve its financial problems.

City Administrator Curtis Tripp, the third person to hold that job in little more than a year, had no blame to assign.

"It's done, and my objective now is to cure the problem," said Tripp, who on Tuesday signed an emergency $200,000 loan agreement to tide Saco over for two weeks and allow the city to pay its employees.

As for whether the tax ceiling should be lifted, Tripp said, "It depends on the level of services the city wants."

The tax limitation, which stemmed from a controversial re-evaluation in 1978 in which some property doubled or tripled in assessed valuation, limited local property tax revenue last year to $3 million. In 1978, it had been $3.6 million.

The ceiling, which can be lifted only through another referendum, allowed for an inflation increase of just 2 percent in 1980 and each succeeding year.

Shortly after the referendum was passed, city and school officials began cutting their combined budgets.

Police Chief Alberick Martin lost four members of his 28-person department.

Three Pampans charged

Three Pampa residents were arrested by city police and placed in city jail on two separate charges of burglary and possession of a controlled substance.

Dwayne Lee Russell, 17, of 730 Locust was arrested in connection with a burglary of a residence at 511 Carr Street.

The forced entry of her residence was reported to police by Mary Hathaway. She believed the incident occurred some time Jan. 2. Reported taken in the break-in were two strong boxes and a gallon jar half full of pennies.

According to police reports, Russell was arrested by detectives Randall Nichols and Mike Hartssock after their investigation into the burglary. Also arrested by a Pampa detective were Wallace Charles Bradshaw, 29, and 20-year-old Ozell Holloway, both of 532 1/2 Harlem.

The pair were arrested by Det. L. A. Brown for felony possession of a controlled substance.

The arrests were made, reports say, after a recent undercover investigation by Brown.

All three suspects were arraigned and bond was set at $2,000 each by Gray Judge Carl Kennedy. They were transferred to Gray County.

A spokesperson for the sheriff's office said today that the three were presently out on bond.

'Gilligan's Mary beats out Raquel

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dawn Wells must have known she was in for a successful show business career when she was chosen for her first television role over a youngster named Raquel Welch. The role was that of the scatter-brained Mary Ann in "Gilligan's Island."

"I auditioned for it and they liked me... and they told me I had the role," Miss Wells recalled in a recent interview. "But in this business you never take anything for granted until the contracts are signed."

And one day Raquel Welch came in and tested for Mary Ann. Here was this gorgeous girl with this gorgeous body. Of course, she was too pretty and too sexy to play Mary Ann. "Still, that's the only time I could beat Raquel Welch out of anything," she added with a laugh.

Miss Wells played Mary Ann for the three years "Gilligan's Island" was on the air, 1964-67, and found the experience rewarding. But she's also found it difficult to avoid typecasting.

"We did 96 segments, and everywhere I've been, it's still on the air," she said, adding there is "more to me than just Mary Ann. That's one of the reasons I started right out to do stage" after the show left the air.

"The next two or three roles, I was very specific about trying to break the image," she said. "It was kind of fun to have someone come to the theater and think they were going to see Mary Ann; and then have them say, 'Well, she can do more things than I thought.'"

Her escape strategy apparently worked, because she's always been able to work.

"I've not been out of work, except by choice, since I decided to become an actress," she said. "I don't believe you grow unless you're working."

Since "Gilligan's Island," she has played in such stage productions as "Barefoot in the Park," "The Star-Spangled Girl," "Mary, Mary," "Vanities," and "The Owl and the Pussycat," and has made about 100 television appearances in series like "Fantasy Island," "Streets of San Francisco," "Vegas" and "Hawaii Five-O."

She was here while on a seven-month tour as Jennie in Neil Simon's "Chapter Two," and nurturing a dream of taking a play to Broadway.

ZUBIN MEHTA, conductor of the New York Philharmonic, is pictured in rehearsal shortly before the concert presentation of a nationwide televised program through NBC's system. Mehta, who earlier stated he hoped the concert was "successful from the spiritual viewpoint," is awaiting reviews today.

Woman's family awarded $2 million

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today ruled the Alamo National Bank in San Antonio and a demolition company owe more than $2 million to the family of a woman who died when a building wall collapsed on her as she drove on a downtown street.

Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld a decision of the Waco Court of Civil Appeals.

John W. Kraus Jr. sued the bank and Kelly Salvage Co. following the death of his wife, Nancy, 32, and the injury of his son, John L. Kraus, 8, in the Sept. 14, 1976, collapse.

Mrs. Kraus' parents, Fred and Letty Petty, also were plaintiffs in the suit.

A San Antonio district court awarded Kraus, his son and the Pettrys a total of $1.26 million — including $1 million in punitive damages — against the demolition company.

But the court of civil appeals added $1 million in punitive damages against the bank and said Alamo National also must share in payment of actual damages, including $226,000 for Mrs. Kraus' injured son.

The total: $2,261,803.

Mrs. Kraus was killed when the last remaining three-story wall of the Old Home Furniture Co. building, owned by the bank, collapsed onto St. Mary's Street between Commerce and Market Streets at about 5 p.m.

The appeals court said the wall was free-standing and unbraced. It said Kelly Salvage had "willfully ignored" four U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) rules for demolishing multi-story buildings. One violation, it said, was the failure to brace the wall from the side. The court said it was "grossly reckless" to remove all supports from a free-standing three-story wall.

Alamo National also took on responsibility for the public's safety, it said, when it employed an independent contractor to "undertake an inherently dangerous task."

The court said there had been television reports of public complaints that the wall was leaning.

Five hours before the accident, the court said, the bank vice-president responsible for dealing with the demolition project was told the wall was leaning. But no action was taken, it said.

"The bank did absolutely nothing to protect the safety of the travelers on the street or to block off the street," the appeals court said.

A THUNDERBIRD painting by Miguel Martinez symbolizes the sacred nature of many Indian paintings. Here, the bird clutches the Avanyu, or serpent of the underworld. The painting, done around the turn of the century, belongs to White Deer cattleman Dare Locke, who will display part of his native American Indian collection Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa. The show is sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Display to feature Indian paintings

Native American art fascinates rancher

By TINA McCLOY
Of The Pampa News

Heirlooms ... just about everyone these days is interested in valuables from the past — jewelry, paintings, tools, keepsakes from long ago.

A description of prized family possessions? To many collectors, yes, but to Dare Locke of White Deer, those same things are included in his private collection of native American art.

Fascinated with the heritage of the American Indian, in recent years Locke has narrowed his interest to native artwork. A selection of paintings and other Indian artifacts from his private collection will go on display Saturday at Lovett Memorial Library.

Also a collector of arrowhead points, beadwork, blankets, tapestries, pipes, tools and other Indian artifacts, Locke says: "After a while, you get into a specialization, and the Indian art is what I'm getting into more and more."

A cattleman from White Deer, Locke is focusing his collecting energies on locating and buying pictures done in the late 1800s. He places special emphasis on paintings by the self-trained Indian artist.

"I strictly am collecting the early art," he says, emphasizing his fascination with the self-trained artist, such as Carl Sweezy, an Arapaho.

Recognized as one of 12 Plains Indian artists, Sweezy

Collector's enthusiasm began as family hobby

Dare Locke of White Deer has bargained and traded to acquire his impressive collection of Indian paintings, but he has an assortment of other Indian artifacts which he and his family began collecting some years back.

"My three boys, my daughter and my wife and I started about 20 years ago, hunting arrowheads and digging in the country," says Locke, who will display part of his paintings and frames of artifacts Saturday, Sunday and Monday from 2 to 5 p.m. at Lovett Memorial Library.

Among his artifacts are innumerable arrowheads, including paleo points which he says are priceless. He also has a chief's blanket, a yei, or wall tapestry, jewelry and beadwork, ceremonial pipes, tools and pottery.

Locke has found many of the items on area ranches, where he walks creek beds to look for Indian artifacts that wash out of the overburden, soil layers covering original Indian campsites.

His first love, he says, is the paleo point, usually from 4,000 to 20,000 years old.

"I've seen some pretty fine collections with 5-10,000 pieces that wouldn't have more than one paleo point in them," says Locke, who's found the Panhandle to be a rich paleo area. He studies books to identify the items he discovers on his digs.

"When you pick up a paleo point, it's almost like you've touched a man's hand who lived 4,000 to 10,000 to 20,000 years ago," says the rancher, who has given several frames of points away.

"Our Alibates is, in my opinion, about the second most beautiful flint," says Locke, who adds that the most beautiful is found around the Columbia River in Washington and Oregon.

had no opportunity for training and like other early-day Indians, was fortunate if he could acquire pencils, crayon, watercolor, ink and paper to paint on.

"I call Sweezy the Charlie Russell of the native American artists," says Locke. "I compare him for a lot of reasons. He was very early and experimental in his art. He used oil and different mediums."

"Charlie Russell and Remington (Frederic) had encouragement," adds Locke, "but this fellow had no encouragement at all."

The earliest Indian artwork in Locke's collection includes a petroglyph or petrograph — a scene pecked out of stone — and pictographs, paintings done on stone.

"The Indian did this sort of art way back," says Locke. "Some have been identified back 15,000 years ago."

"Then about 1860-70," he says, "they started putting the Indians on reservations. From then on, the art that was done — they quit putting it on rock — was by pencil and crayola."

"The first Indian artists were thrown into jail — the blockade — after the battles, and a little bit of the art was done while the Indians drew pictures on ledgers," says Locke. Paper from accounting ledger books, either confiscated or traded for, was used by the Indians for their artwork.

Before the Indians were forced to live on reservations, their paintings reflected a people secure in their identity. The subjects of their art ranged from nature and ceremonial scenes to childhood reflections.

After the Indians were forced onto reservations, their paintings became an ideological concern, portraying a threatened way of life.

Locke has rare examples of the works of two Kiowa Indians: a vegetable-dyed painting on doeskin done by James Auchiah, and a tempera done by Monroe Tsatoke on a piece of cardboard.

Both artists were in a group of Kiowa painters who in the mid-1920s were given the opportunity and materials to put their creativity to work when an Oklahoma schoolteacher recognized their talent. She arranged for them to paint undisturbed at the University of Oklahoma at Norman. The other Kiowa artists were Stephen Mopope, Spencer Asah, and Jack Hokeah.

These and several other Indian artists received encouragement and support from the art departments at OU and the U.S. Indian School in Santa Fe. They were allowed to paint in privacy, without formal training, at these schools, and later at Bacone College in Muskogee.

Locke has acquired most of his paintings through private sales. "Most of my art's come out of people's homes," he says. "You talk them out of it when they really don't want to sell it."

Q How effective are antihistamines for relieving cold symptoms? My pharmacist told me not to waste my money on remedies that contain these ingredients. He said they're only effective if you have an allergy. But I recently read in a magazine that they can help dry up a runny nose. What's the story?

A You raise a particularly interesting question. Until recently the collected wisdom had it that antihistamines were not very helpful in relieving the sniffles and sneezes of the common cold. Even the Food and Drug Administration wasn't sure the drugs were effective.

But research that has just been published in the Journal of the American Medical Association reopens debate on this subject. Doctors at three different medical centers compared the antihistamine Chlor-Trimeton (chlorpheniramine) with a placebo (sugar pill).

When used in a dose of 4 mg, four times a day, there was some relief of runny nose and sneezing. But overall, the benefits of the antihistamine were not impressive and the response to the sugar pill was surprisingly high. In fact, one group of patients obtained greater relief from the placebo (76 percent) than they did from the active drug (59 percent).

So who's right — you or your pharmacist? Well, I would have to conclude that a 4 mg dose of chlorpheniramine such as that recommended in products like Chlor-Trimeton, Coricidin, CoTylenol and Novahistine may provide some slight improvement in cold symptoms.

But the smaller dose that is recommended in drugs like Contac, Comtrex, Traminicin and Viromed probably won't do very much to silence those sneezes.

Antihistamines can cause side effects in susceptible individuals, even in low doses. Always be wary of drowsiness and blurred vision. Driving can be dangerous, especially if you simultaneously take prescription drugs like Valium or Dalmane. Older men who suffer from an enlarged prostate should avoid these products since they make urination difficult.

Overall I would have to conclude that antihistamines are at best only slightly helpful in relieving symptoms of the common cold and then only in a fairly high dose (4 mg). If I were you I would stick with my pharmacist's recommendation and not waste my money.

Q I am taking a drug called Triavil for psychological depression. It dries out my mouth something terrible. I wear dentures and since I've started with this medicine my gums get so painful that I can hardly bear it. Isn't there something I can do to stop this awful dry mouth?

A We received a similar inquiry a few months ago from another reader who also experienced an unpleasant dry mouth from her antidepressant medication. At that time we didn't have much to offer. But a doctor from Houston sent in an article with a helpful hint and maybe his suggestion will provide relief.

A saliva substitute solution called VA-OraLube was developed for patients who had to undergo radiation therapy for head and neck cancer. After treatment they too develop symptoms of dry mouth.

A few drops of the liquid are placed in the mouth, swished around and then expectorated. According to doctors at the Houston VA Hospital who tested VA-OraLube on patients receiving antidepressant medications, "Relief of symptoms of dryness was immediate and complete. The duration of lubricant effect varied among patients but generally ranged from one to three hours. No adverse reactions were noted."

While we can't vouch for this product it does seem worth a try. VA-OraLube is only available from Veterans Administration hospitals, but a commercial product called Xero-Lube is quite similar and your pharmacist can order it from First Texas Pharmaceuticals in Dallas.

DR. LAMB Memory problem

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a healthy woman of 57 and have lived a normal life. I take no pills but my mind is slipping fast and my memory is nil. I do everyday things by habit — read the paper, have conversations (short ones) and the next day or the same evening I have forgotten what I read and what was said. My husband is ready to divorce me and tells me I have the memory of a 3 year old.

I went to a well-known clinic and they could find nothing or so they said. I am sick with worry. I try not to let on and sometimes even forget how dumb I am until my husband reminds me.

What is the matter? Is there anything I can do? I need your help.

DEAR READER — You were wise in seeking medical consultation. Many people who start having memory problems and short attention spans, sometimes associated with additional symptoms, have changes that are related to the aging mind. Some of these same symptoms, including poor memory, can occur in young people and have nothing whatever to do with an aging mind, so one has to use a little discretion in deciding what's going on.

In any case, about one out of five people with these changes that are commonly called senility really have an underlying medical problem which should be treated. Intermittent periods of confusion may be associated with low blood sugar. An inability to provide adequate oxygenation to the brain can be the problem. That can result from a variety of circulatory diseases involving the heart itself or from a plug of arteries going to the brain that interfere with blood flow.

There is such a long list of things that can cause this problem that I'm convinced that a person who has such symptoms needs to be seen by at least three different specialists. These include a specialist in internal medicine to look for such problems as low blood sugar or other metabolism defects, a neurologist who will look for problems related to poor circulation to the brain and various diseases of the brain. And, finally and quite important, a psychiatrist who will be able to pick up such things as a depression.

Many middle-aged people have a change in mental function because they're really depressed.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 14-2, The Aging Mind. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Work isn't harmful if not a burden

Can hard work, either physical or mental, kill you? Some people think so. But I've never believed it. I knew plenty of hard-working farmers, back in Kansas, who tilled their land and planted their crops and had good harvest when they were in their seventies or even their eighties. And it didn't seem to endanger their health at all.

For the most part, these were good-natured, easy-going men who did not resent their life styles, who loved their land and relished the labor connected with it. I've known businessmen, doctors, teachers, ministers and others who worked at their professions long past retirement time. They too seemed to love their work and not let it upset them. That's the secret, I believe. If work is not a burden but a pleasure, it can't harm your disposition or your health.

A friend told me, not long ago, "We're over 60 and have enough to live on. But W's work is killing him. He thinks he should work until 69 or 70, but I say he should stop and rest. He's slaved at that job since he was 20. I say that's too long. What do you say?"

I told her it probably wasn't the job that was ruining his happiness and her disposition. Apparently it was the fact that he didn't like his job. Since he wanted to continue working, I suggested that he find work he could enjoy, without worrying either her or himself. Another thing I often tell readers is that they try to avoid overworking. Too much concentration, even on projects we love, can sap our energy and sometimes affect our well-being. We need to adjust our work to our interest, our age and our capabilities.

I have several writer friends who have had nervous breakdowns or heart attacks because they wrote day and night without sleep, for too long. Consequently they had to give up writing for a while. They should have taken it a little easier.

My beloved husband, Otis, has a system which I recommend to all of you. He tackles only one problem at a time. He works on it as long as there are paths to pursue with it; if it requires postponement because of needed correspondence or other considerations, he puts it away, carefully marked for resumption as soon as possible.

He takes up the next problem when the first one is completed or put on hold. Keeping the work in order that way, he is able to deal with each problem adequately, on time and without getting upset over anything. The amazing thing is how much he gets done in a day.

He's a list maker. Every Sunday afternoon he makes a list of the week's planned pursuits. And he follows the list as closely as he can.

He never gets uptight about anything. I wish I could be like that. But I stew up a brew of possibilities that usually don't happen, sometimes working myself into a screaming meemie (or is it "meanie"?) to no gain. I'm trying to learn to do one thing at a time.

It's also important to allow time to catch up once in a while. If work, even labor you love, just plain gets you down, take off a day or however long you need to, in order to tend the details that are heckling you to be accomplished.

With me, it's neglected housework—the cleaning, ironing, mending, etc. While I'm writing, I let them pile up in a far closet with a closed door. But the time usually comes when I have to get those little things done. Usually I can do them in the evenings instead of watching TV (I even skip some of my favorites then), thus leaving my daytime free for writing.

Often Otis joins me in the effort. He runs the sweeper, mops the floor, cleans the bathrooms and generally serves as a marvelous maid along with me. (You other husbands take note, please. Your wives will express new adoration for you if you give them a hand this way.) And working together makes mental tasks shorter and easier, even pleasurable.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Bitter reader held out; was left out

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on your CONFIDENTIAL TO "SHOULD I GIVE IN?" You responded with this sad refrain:

"When I met him, I liked him.
When I liked him, I loved him.
When I loved him, I let him.
When I let him, I lost him."

(Author Unknown)

That might have been true once, Abby, but not today. I know many girls (now women) who "held out," and were left out. I am a living example—and a very bitter one. I believed that holding out was the way to get a man, but I lost a number of good men to other women who met their needs for a "total relationship." (Sex.) Now these women are happily married and are righteous pillars of our community, while I spend nights and weekends alone. Now I'm too scared to try a sexual relationship; all I can do is fantasize about one. (I only wish I had some real memories.)

I know this has no chance of being printed since you need to protect your point of view. Why do you perpetuate such nonsense?

DEAR HELD OUT: "Letting" a man is vastly different from being a party to a mature love relationship—one in which each gives equally. To "let" someone is to allow yourself to be used.

Have no regrets for not "letting" yourself be used. Regret only having passed up a mature love relationship, playing instead that childish game of holding out, thinking that was the way to get a man.

DEAR ABBY: I am part of a triangle. All three of us are in our 60s.

I have been in love with this man for nearly 30 years. He loves me, but his wife will not give him a divorce—or at least that is what I have been told all these years.

I have no social life, and very little family life because I've wanted to be available when my sweetheart found an hour for me.

Although legally I have no man of my own, I have no regrets.

HALF A LOAF IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR HALF: It's your life, and I'm glad you're happy. Not everyone can make a banquet out of somebody else's crumbs.

Accept height; may be advantage

Dr. Wallace: I'm writing this in reference to Gayle who felt that she can't get dates because she is too short.

Well, I'm 18 and I'm only 4-foot-11. I once felt the same way, but discovered it wasn't because of my height. It was because I couldn't accept myself being short. Now I can.

Many guys think short girls are more feminine than taller girls.

I have dated many guys who are over 6 feet and they like me for the person I am. Actually, in some ways being short is an advantage. (I always got into the movies for half-price.)

Besides, "The best things come in small packages." — Karen, Tacoma, Wash.

Karen: You said it all when you wrote "Now I can." Thanks for taking time to share your experience. My 5-foot-1 daughter totally agrees with you.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and really love a 30-year-old guy. He said if I love him that I should prove it by making love with him. I did and he told me to never tell anyone what we did.

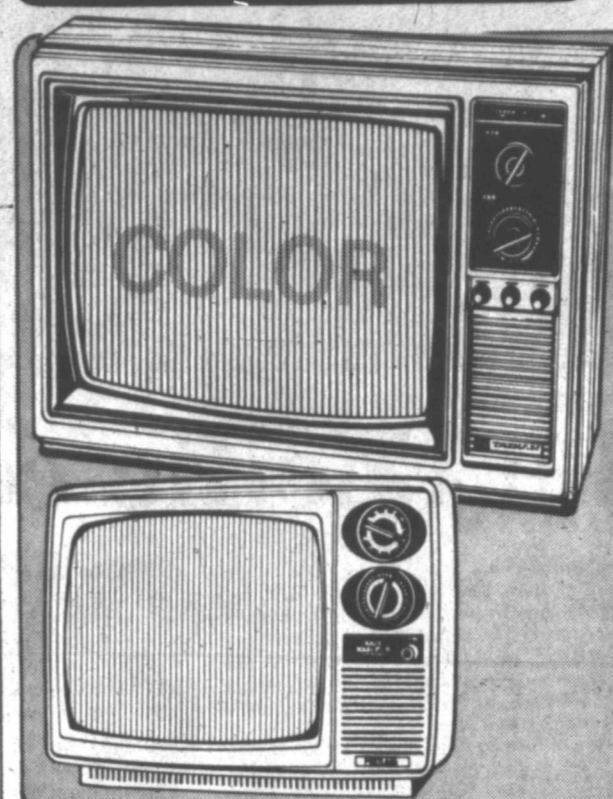

I know nothing about birth control so it could be that I'm pregnant. If I am my parents will kill me. Please help. — Nameless, Windsor, Ontario, Canada

Nameless: First things first. I'd be remiss if I didn't tell you that this guy is only using you. Stop seeing him. If you're not pregnant now, it would only be a matter of time if you were to continue seeing him.

Visit the school nurse and tell her what took place. She will be able to give the guidance you need.

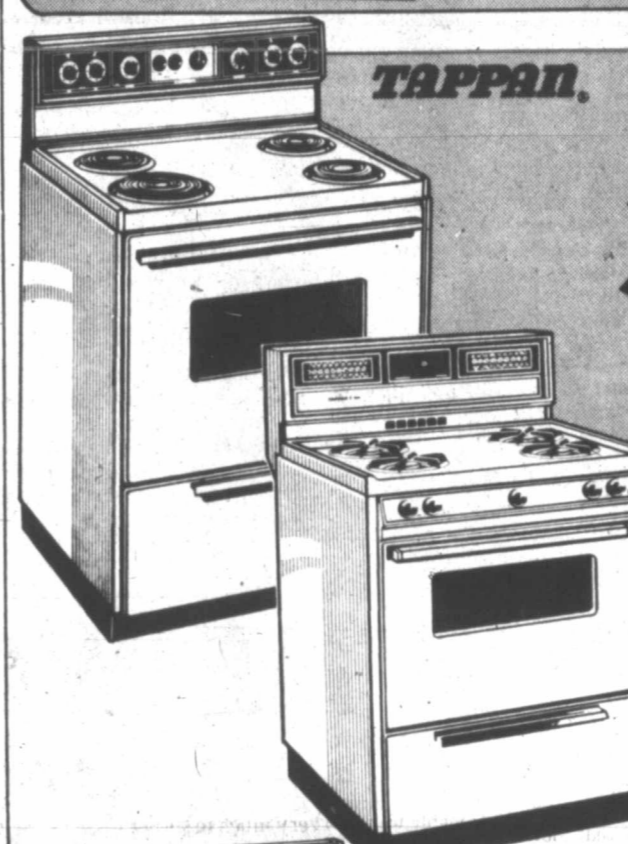

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FREAK STORMS have spread havoc over the Pacific coastal area from Portland Ore., to Los Angeles as tons of snow have fallen in the northern areas and record rainfall amounts are being recorded in the southern boundaries of the storms. Portland reports a record 9 inch snowfall for a 24-hour period. Officials there say the city and area are not prepared for such snowfall, thus traffic problems are adding to those created by power outages. Mudslides have been triggered by rain in much of southern California where rain continues to batter already flooded streets in the LA area. Los Angeles streets (left photo) were flooded, causing more problems in an already congested traffic area. While motorists battled rain to get home from work Wednesday, Portland (right photo) area residents were bracing for the aftermath of ice and snow which was causing power failure over most of the area.

Storms rake Pacific coast

(AP) Pacific storms have whipped up wind and rain in Hawaii and Southern California and stunned the Northwest with enough snow and freezing rain to sink more than 100 boats.

At least 12 persons were killed and two others missing in weather-related accidents over two days. Tens of thousands were without power as ice and snow downed lines.

Some 125 boats sank and numerous roofs collapsed under the weight of the snow in Oregon and Washington state, where many schools, businesses and highways were closed Wednesday.

Stranded motorists jammed hotels and motels throughout the Northwest. In Boardman, Ore., the Dodge City Inn was full but offered adults sleeping-bag lodging for the night for $1 a head.

Deputies in a four-wheel-drive vehicle said it took them 4 1/2 hours to travel from Portland to Multnomah Falls, about 25 miles away.

Up to a foot of snow also fell in western Montana, where two cross-country skiers stranded for two days in a cabin were rescued by helicopter late Wednesday.

In the Portland area, the storm knocked out electrical service to at least 85,000 homes. At Ventura in Southern California, at least 2,000 customers were without power due to the heavy rains.

In Southern California, more than 3 inches of rain were blamed for mudslides and creek flooding that closed several roads and highways and caused some drowning deaths.

Hurricane force winds and nearly 6 inches of rain lashed the Hawaiian Islands on Tuesday and Wednesday in what one resident described as the worst storm since World War II.

Trees were uprooted, electrical and telephone service was interrupted and damage from winds of up to 75 mph was expected to reach into the millions of dollars.

Portland Mayor Connie McCreedy declared a limited state of emergency as schools were closed and 9 inches of snow forced the closing of most of Portland International Airport, leaving only one runway open.

More than 4 feet of snow was reported at Hood River, Ore., 60 miles east of Portland, with accumulations of up to 2 feet at nearby towns.

Along the Oregon-Washington border, blizzard conditions with drifts up to 14 feet brought travel to a halt in the Columbia River Gorge. Three persons stranded in snowbound vehicles in the gorge were rescued by an Amtrak train crew. Another 15 were rescued by deputies.

Drifts of up to 4 feet were reported at Stevenson, Wash., where officials said it was the worst storm since 34 inches fell in 1969.

In Seattle, 7 inches of snow covered downtown streets and few businesses were open.

Mexican well still threat

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Mexican crews have seven weeks to stop the runaway Ixtoc 1 well before it may be too late to avoid a repeat of last summer's oil spill along Texas beaches, say U.S. Coast Guard officials and scientists.

And if the oil starts washing ashore this summer, it could plague the entire Texas coast through mid-September, experts said Wednesday.

"If we get beyond March 1 and the well is not capped, there's a reasonable possibility of oil," Dr. John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration told a news conference.

"By May or June (with the well uncapped) it's almost certain to return," he said.

Robinson and other members of an interagency team met to discuss strategy and compare notes on when to expect more oil from the cantankerous well in the Bay of Campeche.

Since the well blew out June 3, at least 100 million gallons of thick crude oil have poured into the Gulf of Mexico. Some 140 miles of Texas beaches between Brownsville and Corpus Christi caught were stained by oil in August and September.

U.S. Coast Guard Capt. Gerald Hinson, head of the anti-spill team, said he is planning for the worst.

"We're re-establishing a command post in Corpus Christi, beefing up staff, preparing to enlist contractors for clean up work and will be staging Navy equipment used last summer against the spill at four locations," Hinson said.

DPS Expands

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety says it will add six to 10 highway patrol units to six counties in an effort to get better compliance with the 55 mph speed limit.

Bell, Bexar, Ector, Smith, Williamson and Wise counties are targets of the stepped-up enforcement effort.

All but Wise are on interstate highways. Col. Jim Adams, DPS director, said highway patrolmen will work approximately 37,000 hours of overtime through Sept. 30, when the program expires. He said there will be no reduction in normal patrolling of the highways.

Adams said a typical task force will consist of six to 10 additional patrol units on duty in each target county.

Cost of the overtime will be paid by a $700,000 contract with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Adams said target counties were chosen on the basis of data showing above average speeds, high accident rates and a high volume of traffic.

He said 4,069 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents in Texas last year, based on incomplete data.

"This is the third consecutive year that traffic fatalities in Texas have reached record highs. We are doing everything possible to bring about a reduction in this tragic loss of human lives and urge all drivers to heed posted speed limits and exercise safe driving skills," Adams said.

League of Nations

Sixty years ago today, representatives of 42 countries established the League of Nations. The League met for the next 26 years at its headquarters in the Palace of Nations in Geneva, Switzerland. The main goal of the League was to maintain world peace. In the League's covenant, or constitution, each member nation promised to protect the territory and independence of each other member against attack. But the League could not force its members to help an attacked nation, and its attempts to prevent such attacks during the 1920s and 1930s failed. The United States never joined the League of Nations, which dissolved in 1946, with the founding of the United Nations.

Youth unemployment program earns 50% boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, grappling with the stubborn youth unemployment problem, is mounting a frontal assault on functional illiteracy and bankrolling the campaign with a 50 percent boost in spending.

Informed administration sources said President Carter will unveil a new approach to youth joblessness Thursday based on attacking functional illiteracy — the inability to read, write or do simple math. Coupled with this will be a broad effort to bring the nation's schools into a battle that has been waged largely through Labor Department job training programs.

The proposal will contain the only major new program and one of the largest spending increases in the budget Carter submits to Congress Jan. 28.

The proposal results from a nine-month study of the $4-billion-a-year youth employment programs by a task force under the direction of Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the president will call for additional spending of $1.2 billion in fiscal 1981 and $2 billion in fiscal 1982. If Congress approves, that will bring total spending to $6 billion in the 12 months beginning Oct. 1, 1981.

An unstated side benefit for a president challenged for renomination is that the proposal may shore up his support among labor, urban, civil rights and other Democratic Party constituencies.

The target is four million youths, aged 14 to 21, who face serious employment problems in the 1980s. Half have already dropped out of school and are unemployed; of those, 40 percent are minorities. The other two million are still in school, but in the poorest districts and in the bottom third of their class. Carter's planners hope the new program will reach three million of these youths.

Administration sources said the task force made three discoveries about the seemingly intractable problem of joblessness among the young: it will be worse in the 1980s for some youths and some communities; employers say their biggest problem is finding youths who have mastered the three R's; and they base their hiring of such youths mostly on a record of reliability in a previous job.

The shift of the economy from blue-to white-collar jobs has been dramatic. In 1950, 34 percent of all jobs were open to workers without a high school diploma. By 1970, only 9 percent were, but the high school dropout rate has remained at 13 percent.

"Once there were more such jobs than dropouts; now there are increasingly more dropouts than jobs for them," one source said.

The problem for business was illustrated by a telephone company that told the task force it has to interview 12 to 15 persons to find one qualified to take orders for telephones.

The task force found the heavy emphasis on previous job experience left youths who had never had a job in a Catch-22 situation, but almost as bad off were those who had worked only in government-financed job programs.

As a result, the Carter program will add a Basic Employability-Skills Training program in the new Department of Education. Of the new money, Education will get $900 million in 1981 and $1 billion in 1982; Labor will get the remainder.

Carter's planners hope the Education segment will reach one million youths in junior highs and high schools through these five components:

—It will finance the teaching of basic reading, writing and mathematical skills. The task force found that federal aid to education has left a big gap between the pre-school Head Start and elementary school Title I programs, on the one hand, and a series of college aid programs, on the other.

—It will provide money for school systems to hire employment counselors to set up part-time school, part-time work programs. The task force found such programs are attractive to youths and can provide private job experience.

—It will pay for school systems to develop classes and information about local labor markets. "Everybody's out there telling kids to become key punch operators, but those jobs will decline in the 1980s," one source said. "We hope schools will bring in local personnel managers to talk about their needs."

—It will pay for training teachers in literacy instruction. "More than one teacher told us something like, 'I'm a biology teacher and I don't know how to teach reading,'" one source said.

—It will provide money to expand and integrate existing vocational education throughout local school districts. "Public vocational education has a good track record with kids and private industry," a source said.

National Farm briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capping a series of actions intended to protect farmers after canceling grain sales to the Soviet Union, the Carter administration has boosted basic price supports for wheat and corn.

It also announced Tuesday changes in price formulas aimed at attracting more farmer participation in the government's grain reserve program.

Eligible wheat farmers had their supports raised to $2.50 a bushel for their 1979 crop from $2.35 previously in effect. Corn supports were boosted to $2.10 from $2 a bushel.

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said the increases, which were announced by the Agriculture Department, are "totally inadequate to offer farmers reasonable protection" from market price declines.

Foley said he applauded the administration's effort to help protect farmers from the effects of President Carter action suspending huge sales of grain to the Soviets but that the effort "does not go far enough."

The National Association of Wheat Growers called the actions "inadequate" and said the remedies "fail to match the gravity" of President Carter's suspension of grain shipments.

The price support rates reflect the amount of money farmers can borrow from the government by using their crops as collateral. They have the option of repaying the loans later and selling their grain or, if prices are severely depressed, letting the government assume ownership of the commodities in lieu of repayment.

At USDA, Deputy Secretary Jim Williams told a news conference the price support increases and a series of adjustments related to a grain reserve program completed all the actions planned now by the administration to help farmers recover from the cancellation of the grain sales.

Earlier this week, it was announced the government would buy nearly 14 million metric tons of grain once destined for sale to the Soviet Union.

The total cost of the grain purchases plus the higher support prices would mean a net cost to the taxpayer of $2.5 billion to $3 billion, Williams said. About $2 billion of that is expected to be in this fiscal year that began on Oct. 1.

Howard W. Hjort, the department's chief economist, said the package of actions was "designed to offset" any losses in the marketplace that farmers might see because of a loss in sales to the Soviets.

"There is a possibility that this will create a significant incentive for the market to move up (in price)," Hjort said, adding that he was "quite amazed" at talk that prices would be depressed.

But Hjort stressed that he was not predicting that market prices of grain would go up right away.

"There's a certain psychology ... in the market and at the present time it's a bear (downward) market," he said.

Hjort later amended his earlier remarks, saying that weather will be a big factor, as always, in this year's grain prices and that farmer participation in the reserve program will also be important.

Under the reserve program, farmers who participated in federal acreage programs can store grain, receiving government storage payments, to keep it off the market to help boost prices.

The reserve grain can be "released" for sale, if the farmer chooses, after prices rise to specified levels.

As part of the action, USDA officials said, the new release level for wheat — effective immediately — is $3.75 a bushel, up from $3.29 previously. Wheat recently has sold for about $3.85 a bushel at the farm, meaning it has been in release status.

But under the higher formula level, wheat would be priced under the release level, meaning it would be held in storage if average prices drop below the new $3.75 trigger level.

Corn's new release level was pegged at $2.63 a bushel, up from $2.50 previously. It lately has averaged about $2.37 a bushel and has not been available for release to farmers.

Hjort said there "may not be a significant increase" in the amount of wheat that will be added to the reserve because most last year's crop already has moved into the market and also because the government plans to buy substantial amounts as a result of the Soviet sale cancellations.

But Hjort said about 1.7 billion bushels of 1979-crop corn is eligible for the reserve and that the changes in the program seem "sufficiently attractive" to prompt farmers to place "at least one-third" of that amount into the reserve.

As a further inducement, the department boosted the storage payments to farmers who participate in the reserve to 26.5 cents a bushel annually from 25 cents for wheat, corn and other commodities except oats, which was raised to 20 cents from 19 cents a bushel per year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Agriculture Movement says it doesn't think much of President Carter's plan to help farmers recover from lost grain sales to the Soviet Union and once again will take its complaints to Congress in a parade of trucks and other vehicles.

Marvin Meek, national chairman of the AAM, said Tuesday he wanted "all farmers, whether they belong" to the group or not, to meet here Feb. 16. He said no massive display of tractors is planned, but farmers do intend to parade in pickup trucks and other vehicles.

Last winter farmers drove hundreds of tractors here to seek higher government supports for crops and other goals.

Meek told a reporter that the administration's plan to buy grain that had been scheduled for the Soviet Union but canceled by President Carter would "benefit only the big grain companies" that had made the deals.

Thus, he said, the AAM will seek "some type of congressional pressure" on the administration for improved assistance.

Warrant names Hustler head

CINCINNATI (AP) — An arrest warrant has been issued for Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, who a spokesman says is hospitalized at an undisclosed location for chronic pain and drug addiction.

Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Robert Kraft issued the warrant and revoked a $27,000 bond Tuesday after Flynt and his attorneys failed to appear for a hearing to determine the status of various pornography-related charges pending against Flynt.

A lawyer came to the hearing to ask for a continuance, but said he did not represent Flynt or the magazine.

Flynt is charged with disseminating material harmful to juveniles in connection with the distribution of a 1977 pamphlet on war and a 1978 pamphlet on child abuse. An additional charge of pandering obscenity is also pending from his sale in 1978 of Hustler in Hamilton County.

Flynt was paralyzed from a gunshot wound received March 8, 1978, during his pornography trial in Georgia.

In Los Angeles, Jan Rogers, spokeswoman for Flynt, said he was in a hospital for treatment of chronic pain and drug addiction. She declined to disclose the name of the hospital.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joining the FBI is becoming somewhat a tradition for the Arnold C. Larson family.

Larson, a retired FBI agent, posed for a photograph Tuesday with his daughter, Cynthia, 26, who was graduating today from the FBI's training academy at Quantico, Va. She is one of eight women in the class of 31 to complete 15 weeks of physical and academic training. Ms. Larson will be an agent assigned to the FBI office in Los Angeles where her family lives. Her mother, Mabel, was a fingerprint analyst for the agency.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bolivia wants the Organization of American States to hold an emergency meeting over the United States' decision to sell 35,000 tons of tin reserves.

Gonzalo Romera, Bolivia's ambassador to the OAS, asked Tuesday for the meeting to deal with what he termed American "economic aggression." He said the action will cost his country some $60 million to $100 million in export earnings. On Jan. 2, President Carter signed legislation authorizing the domestic sale of the tin in an effort to eliminate a surplus in U.S. strategic reserves. Officials here said the sale will occur over three years in an effort to maintain stable prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil companies are pushing the price of oil produced from the government's petroleum reserves close to $40 a barrel, the Energy Department says.

The price has gone up in a sudden surge of bidding for the oil from the Elk Hills Petroleum Reserve in California, according to department official Dobie Langencamp. He said Tuesday the government is required by law to sell oil from the reserve to the highest bidder. At last month's auction, Phillips Petroleum Co. bid $11.12 above the commercial price for California crude, averaging $28.50 per barrel. Usually, the bidding brings prices equivalent to, or slightly below, commercial prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department says its "strike force" teams are trying to fight companies that not only hire illegal aliens but also subject those workers to inhumane treatment.

Assistant Labor Secretary Donald Elisburg said Tuesday foreigners living here illegally are often forced to work "unreasonably long and backbreaking hours" and live in poor conditions. The strike force teams, started last February, already have gotten back pay for some of those workers, Elisburg said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. William S. Moorhead, a senior member of the House Banking Committee, says he won't seek another term in Congress because, in part, he needs to earn more money.

The 56-year-old Pennsylvania Democrat announced Tuesday he will retire at the end of this term, after more than 20 years in Congress. "This job in Congress is not a very good money-making proposition," he said. "If I don't get out now, I'm going to be unemployed. Congressmen earn $60,700 annually. Moorhead also complained that it's not as much fun being in Congress now as it once was. "There's more pressure and less pleasure," he said.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Singers Frank Sinatra Jr., B.J. Thomas and Fabian are being sued by Harrah's for allegedly not paying their bills while entertaining at the hotel's two clubs in Lake Tahoe and Reno.

The suit said Sinatra owes $4,556 in hotel, restaurant and telephone bills charged in 1976 and 1977. It said he has paid only $691.

Harrah's says Thomas owes $3,982 from 1977 and Fabian, $2,858 for the same year.

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet ballet star Alexander Godunov defected in the United States, where he said he would be free to express his artistic talents, but his post-defection debut came some 2 miles from the Berlin Wall in a city ringed by Russian troops.

Godunov, who left the Bolshoi Ballet last August in New York, received a 15-minute standing ovation Monday night from the sell-out crowd at the Deutsche Oper.

BASEBALL COMMISSIONER Bowie Kuhn poses in New York with two new inductees into baseball's Hall of Fame, Duke Snider, center, and Al Kaline, right. Snider played for the Dodgers in the 40's and 50's as an outfielder, while Kaline was an outfielder with an outstanding batting record for the Detroit Tigers.

(AP Laserphoto)

Snider, Kaline: baseball's underpaid super stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Based on today's baseball economy, Duke Snider and Al Kaline, the newest members of the Hall of Fame, were bargain basement performers.

The two brilliant outfielders of the 1950s reminisced about their best salaries Wednesday after being voted into the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine.

"My highest salary was $46,000 and a Cadillac when I played in Brooklyn," said Snider. "And I was happy to get it."

Why didn't he make any more than that? "The Dodgers told us they didn't have that kind of money," he said.

Kaline said he made just over $100,000 in each of his last three years in Detroit and at one point resisted a raise.

"I was just under $100,000 and the media was pointing out how every club in the league had one guy over that figure," he said. "The Tigers wanted to give me the difference but I had an offer... I only batted about .280... and I told them I didn't want it that way. I said I'd come back and have a better season and then they could give it to me." There weren't many off years for either Snider or Kaline, who won decisive election to the Hall of Fame in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Kaline received 340 of the 385 votes cast and Snider, who missed by 13 votes a year ago, got 333 this time. Both were well beyond the 289, or 75 percent, required for election. Don Drysdale finished third with 238 votes, 51 short of election. Gil Hodges was fourth for the second straight year with 233, followed by Hoyt Wilhelm with 209.

Snider said salaries never were a subject of discussion among the Dodger teams that dominated the National League in the 1950s.

"Nobody cared what the other guy was making," he said. "Pee Wee (Reese) didn't care what Jackie (Robinson) got and Jackie didn't care what (Carl) Furillo got."

Both Kaline and Snider endorsed the high salaries that have swept baseball since the free agent revolution.

"I'm not against anybody making as much as he can," said Kaline. "But I am against taking the money and running. If you take, you should give something back, too."

Snider said if he made $1 million a year, he'd sweep the stands, wash the uniforms, manage the team and play, too. "If the owners want to give that kind of money out, I don't blame the players for taking it," he said. "But I don't think it's healthy for the game."

Kaline became the 10th man in history elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. His credentials included a .297 batting average in 22 seasons with the Tigers, 3,007 hits and 399 home runs. Signed off the sandlots of Baltimore in 1953, he never played a game in the minors and became the youngest batting champion in American league history when he won the crown with a .340 average in 1955 at the age of 21.

Snider batted .295 in 18 major league seasons, most of them with the Dodgers in Brooklyn and Los Angeles. He tagged 407 home runs and for five straight seasons from 1952-1957, he hit 40 or more homers. His 11 World Series homers remain the record for a National Leaguer.

AP votes Austin as top female athlete

NEW YORK (AP) — Tracy Austin, the youngest person ever to win the U.S. tennis championship, has been voted The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year for 1979.

She is a junior in high school in Rolling Hills, Calif., and with her mother as chaperone and companion, she tours the world playing tennis.

At age 16, Austin won the U.S. Open last September, beating long-reigning champion Chris Evert Lloyd in straight sets in the final.

Now 17, Austin is ranked third in the world by the Women's Tennis Association, behind Martina Navratilova and Lloyd — a very close grouping according to the computer points used to make the ratings.

In the nationwide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters, Austin received 72 of 205 votes. The next highest total was the 50 for golfer Nancy Lopez Melton. The AP's Female Athlete of the Year in 1978.

Navratilova, the two-time Wimbledon winner, was third with 33, followed by Old Dominion basketball star Nancy Lieberman with 13 and marathon swimmer Diana Nyad with 5.

Lloyd, who has been chosen AP Athlete of the Year three times (1974, 1975 and 1977), received four votes.

This is the 50th year The AP has chosen Athletes of the Year.

Austin first commanded notice at Wimbledon in 1977 when, at age 14, she reached the third round, then lost to Lloyd. In those days, the sub 5-footer wailed away at the ball with pigtails, and pinafores flying. She was big news at that tender age, but she was so shy she could barely conduct an interview.

A player most distinguished by her steadiness, Austin has steadily improved — both on the court and in the interview room. Last winter, having grown to 5-foot-4, she beat Lloyd for the first time, and in the Italian championships last spring, she decimated Lloyd's 125-match clay-court winning streak.

She was 4-2 over Lloyd for 1979 and has beaten her twice already this year. Austin was 5-6 against Navratilova.

Austin earned $501,676 last year on the tennis court. Avon, the cosmetic company that sponsors a women's tour, made her an official spokeswoman, and she has other endorsement contracts.

Austin is a tour veteran now. She jokes and talks a mile a minute when she's pleased with the questions, is careful and businesslike when she'd rather be doing something else.

She is a remarkable teen-ager in that she is so sure of her ability. Last week after the U.S. Tennis Association named her the third-ranking American player behind Navratilova and Lloyd, she said simply:

"I think I should be No. 1."

The team consisted of members of the Pampa Gym Club and Madeline Graves School of Dance.

Pampa's top performances came from Mandie Morehead, first, beam, bars, floor, and all-around, and second, vault; Andrea Adcock, first, beam, second, all-around and floor exercises, and fifth, uneven bars; Jennifer Graves, first, floor exercises, and sixth, vault.

Others placing were Dori Kidwell, second, beam and floor; third, bars, and second, all-around; Alyn Shaub, fourth, beam, floor, and all-around, and fifth, bars and vault; Kambra Winningham, fifth, vault, and sixth, floor exercises; Casey Rice, sixth, floor exercises.

Madella Harmon and Kim Kaddatz also participated in the Class 3 meet for beginners.

Pampa gymnasts travel to Amarillo Saturday for a sectional qualifying meet in the first step toward the state meet.

JV's sweep Borger

Pampa junior varsity teams traveled in opposite directions of their varsity counterparts in Tuesday night's basketball clashes with Borger.

While both varsity boys and girls went down a dead-end street against Borger, the B teams detoured to victory.

In the boys tilt, Ray Condo's ball theft preserved Pampa's 54-53 win over Borger JV's. With one second to go, Condo swiped the ball to prevent Borger from taking a possible game-winning shot.

Terry Faggins led Pampa in scoring with 11 points, followed by Grady Norris with 9, Condo, 8; Ed Gara, 7; Curt Crouch and Rick Smith, 6 apiece; Kevin Slaybaugh, 4; Kevin Coleman, 2; and Jimmy Parker, 1.

Lillie Martin's 12 points helped Pampa JV girls get past Borger, 30-27. Amy Wheeler and Kim Alvin added 8 and 7 points respectively.

The local JV girls are now 5-12 for the season.

Rockets edge Denver

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston forward Rick Barry apparently was as surprised as the Denver Nuggets Wednesday night when he got the call to take the final shot that lifted the Rockets to a 114-112 National Basketball Association victory.

"I've never refused an opportunity to take a shot," Barry laughed. "I was surprised when Del (Harris) called the play in the huddle. I thought it would be (Calvin) Murphy or Mo (Malone)."

Barry's jump shot with three seconds finally ended a wild fourth quarter and allowed the Rockets to win their third straight game.

"I thought we could get Rick open and I thought he could make the basket," Harris explained. "I wanted to do something that would take five or six seconds and give us time to rebound if we missed."

But Barry didn't miss and the Nuggets trudged to the dressing room with a narrow loss for the second consecutive night.

"It's frustrating to play well two straight nights and still lose," said George McGinnis, who scored a game-high 43 points. "It almost makes it more frustrating to come so close and still come up short."

The Rockets fought from behind most of the game but tied the score at 97-97 with 6:18 to play on a free throw by Moses Malone, who scored 28 points and grabbed 14 rebounds.

Denver, which lost to San Antonio Tuesday night, tied the score three more times but never led the Rockets again.

McGinnis scored 18 first half points to lead the Nuggets to a run-and-shoot 59-50 halftime lead.

"We wanted to make them run in the first half," Harris said. "I knew they had played their guys (starters) a lot last night and we thought we could tire them out."

"We hoped our bench could beat their bench and our bench did the job for us in the second half."

Denver Coach Donnie Walsh acknowledged the Nuggets slacked off in the second half.

Malone, who missed six of eight free throws in the closing minutes, nonetheless, made the play that set up the winning basket when he blocked a shot by McGinnis with 23 seconds to play.

Houston fans file lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) — If you're looking for die-hard football fans, look no farther than Houston.

Case in point: William R. Pabst — who says he is a minister and a "consumer advocate" — and his friend Diane Simons are hopping mad about the Pittsburgh Steelers' 27-13 victory Sunday in the National Football League's American Conference title tilt.

So mad, in fact, they filed a $6 million lawsuit in federal court Wednesday and asked for a federal injunction to halt the Super Bowl.

Pabst, who names the NFL, commissioner Pete Rozelle and official Donald Orr, is irked by a third-quarter call that cancelled an apparent Oiler touchdown.

On the play, wide receiver Mel Renfro hauled in a Dan Pastorini pass deep in the corner of the end zone that would have tied the score 17-17. But Orr ruled the pass incomplete, torpedoing the six-pointer.

On Tuesday, Rozelle said NFL films showed Renfro bobbled the ball momentarily as he crossed the end stripe, but Pabst says it was a bad call and terms it "consumer fraud."

"I noticed several bad calls last year in the Super Bowl," Pabst said. "and then this one came closer to home and I went to the courts."

Pabst's suit asks for $2 million in damages each from the NFL, Rozelle and Orr.

The suit alleges Orr "stood there in a state of bewilderment, appeared confused and disoriented. It appeared to be an act of cheating."

Bike rider guilty

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver, Colo., upheld the conviction of a Madill motorcycle club leader of federal charges he operated an interstate prostitution ring, an Oklahoma City newspaper reported.

The Thursday edition of the Daily Oklahoman reported that the court issued the opinion upholding the May 1978 conviction of Carl Eugene "Gino" Hines and John Ahern.

Hines, the leader of the "Death Barons" motorcycle club, is in the Carter County Jail in Ardmore. He will stand trial on Feb. 14 on felony assault charges for allegedly attacking

Roger S. Taylor, 21, Madill, at the Madill City Hall on July 3, 1979.

The alleged assault on Taylor was cited as an argument to revoke bond during a hearing for Hines in Muskogee last August.

He was denied an appeal bond after he was declared a threat to the community.

In revoking his $50,000 appeal bond, U.S. District Judge Fred Daugherty said Hines "poses a threat to the community."

Ahern, who is free in lieu of bond pending the outcome of the appeal, is believed to be living in the Dallas, Texas, area.

Area towns set meetings

Miami City Commissioners will meet in regular session today at 7:30 p.m. in city hall.

Subjects to be discussed on the tentative agenda include: members decision on sending the water superintendent to water treatment school. Previous city employees involved with the water department, have been sent to the school.

A change of the city office secretary's salary will take place.

Any new items to be discussed will be presented at the meeting.

The Canadian School Board was assembled Tuesday in Regular Session.

In executive session, the board moved to extend the contract of Mr. Pollard, Assistant Superintendent, for three years from July 1, 1980 to June 30, 1983.

Board members were informed that the Hempill County Tax Appraisal Board of Directors met of Monday, and elected Tom Abraham as chairman with Tom Link as secretary.

A summary of the Self-Study reports was given, with items needing School Board attention including: recommendation of building a band hall and auditorium with additional construction of handball, racketball courts. These items were put under further consideration. Next fall a five year plan will be developed by the Steering Committee and submitted to the Board for approval.

Lefors Independent School District will hold their regular meeting tonight, in the Superintendent's office, at Lefors.

Discussion will include, a further review of the "Single Appraisal Office" and its future in Gray County. "No new information is expected", said to Superintendent Jerrel Julian, and the action taken by the Pampa office will be the topic.

'Rockford Files' ends 6-year run

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucius couldn't believe his eyes. He threw down the newspaper in disgust and whined. "Did you read that? Did you?"

The offending story began: "TV Private Eye Jim Rockford solves his last case as NBC's 'The Rockford Files' ends its six-year run."

My pal Lucius, television connoisseur. "Rockford" fan and loafer of the first degree, fairly trembled at the news. "This is too much," he said, turning away, mumbling.

For a fellow whose steadiest job has been parking cars at the Rose Bowl, Lucius takes life very seriously. He was shaken by the ayatollah's outrages and frightened by the Russian intervention in Afghanistan. But "Rockford" leaving the air, this was a frontal assault on the Lucius soul.

I can sympathize with Lucius on this one. "Rockford's" last night, tonight, is one to be grieved. Television loses a lot in Jim Rockford.

Rockford was one of TV's last adults, a man possessed of self-assurance and an abiding instinct for survival. He lived by his wits. He could take care of himself. He was a grown-up in an era when most TV characters serve as doltish straight men for adolescent stand-up comics.
