Crooks look for mom's silver

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Of The Pampa News

The first month of the new decade saw gold prices rise to above $850, the price of silver soaring higher than $500 and a "rush" of gold and silver buyers flooding the media with advertising.

The surge in gold prices has also prompted an increase in jewelry and silver burglaries. law enforcement officials say, as burglars are by passing the standard burglary items like televisions. CB's and stereos for Mom's sterling silver, gold rings and bracelets.

Police Chief J. J. Ryzman attributes the increase in burglaries to inflation and the rising gold and silver prices.

"When an item becomes more valuable," he said, we have more problems with it." An increase in gasoline thefts resulted from the high gasoline prices and the same thing is happening with the gold and silver, he said.

An estimate has not been officially made on the value of the gold and silver property taken in Pampa burglaries, but Amarillo authorities have estimated more than $125,000 in gold and silver has been taken. Pampa police has had six burglaries reported to them in January which involved precious metal items, while Amarillo has reported 10 such burglaries.

Amarillo authorities recently recovered $80,000 of the stolen items, when a suspicious bank teller in Hereford told of an unusually large check, a juvenile attempted to cash. The tip led to charges being filed against two juveniles, 17 - and 18 - years old. Has the increase in burglaries caused citizens to ask for more protection for their homes?

"Yes." said Tom Forbes, of Amarillo Security and Burglar Alarms. The demand has not risen for security patrol, he said, except by some professional people.

However, he reports more burglar alarms have been sold this month. "There's an increased interest in intrusion devices," he said.

Most of the advertisers for gold and silver have quit buying since the price has recently dropped drastically.

"We've quit buying silver," Sharon McCormick of Pampa said. She and her husband, Jeff, began buying it about the middle of the month, she said, but have discontinued it since the prices have gone down.

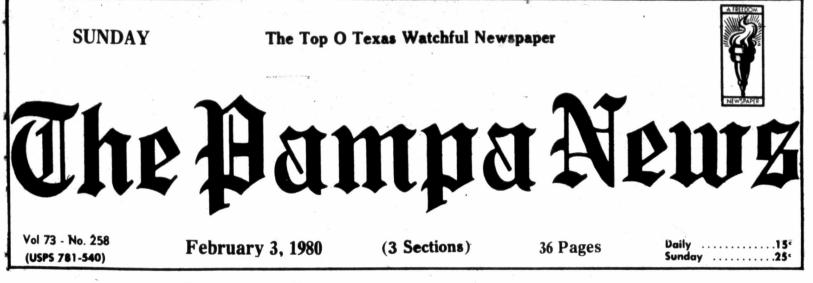

"We had at least three calls on it a day." she said, but many times, prospective sellers brought in silver plated items which are not as valuable.

"We're not going to do it anymore," she said. A Borger dealer. Frankie Hill, said he had been buying and silver as a hobby for almost 20 years. He noticed an increase in people trying to sell silver items.

"I got a lot of telephone calls," he said, "but not that many good buys."

Kirk Duncan, a self - described collector - investor in coins, said. "The market has been absolutely flooded."

He said he has received calls on people asking about selling their sterling silver but he only deals in coins.

10 dead in prison riot

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Rioting prisoners seized the New Mexico State Penitentiary on Saturday, #threatening to "snuff out" the lives of 11 guards being held hostage and authorities feared 10 or more people may have been killed.

Gov. Bruce King, who talked with leaders of the revolt by telephone earlier, said reports that "10 or more" inmates had been killed came from among 175 prisoners who were released.

"I think some of those. I'm sure, were murdered." King said. State Police Chief Martin Vigil agreed.

"I'm fairly certain we haven't lost any guards." King said, but he added that one guard being held hostage was "badly in need of medical attention."

The prisoners who were released apparently "wanted no part of" the takeover, authorities said. There were 1,136 inmates in the prison as of Friday, authorities said. Leaders of the uprising wore bandanas over their faces and were "armed with pipes, wrenches and guns." said a fireman who went inside the compound to retrieve two injured guards and two injured inmates who were released.

Also injured were two inmates and four other guards, still inside.

The governor said any decision to storm the prison would be left up to law enforcement officials.

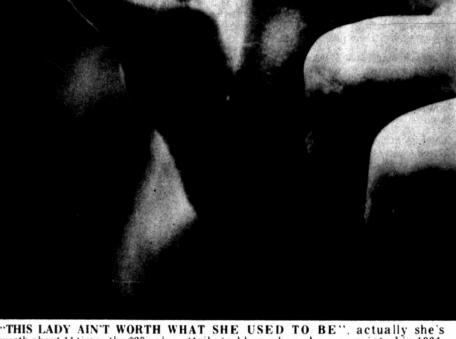

The inmates had threatened to kill their hostages unless allowed to talk to the governor and a reporter, or if police tried to storm the prison. Authorities at first thought 13 hostages were being held.

A negotiator for the inmates, who identified himself as "Chopper One." told authorities by two-way radio that the remaining hostages would be "snuffed out" if police tried to penetrate the fence, said State Police Capt. Bob Carroll. "Chopper One" warned that Capt. Greg Royball, a guard being held captive in the prison control center, would be the first to die.

In the hours following the takeover, thick, black smoke billowed from some buildings on the grounds of the prison, which houses 1.136 inmates, including eight women. Warden Jerry Griffin said he thought the fires had been set in administration offices and the psychiatric ward and that some records probably had been destroyed. By late morning it appeared the fires had been extinguished.

About 130 policemen and National Guardsmen surrounded the penitentiary. Two helicopters circled overhead and dogs prowled the prison fence.

In 1971. inmates took over part of New York's Attica prison and held it four days until state police stormed the yards. Forty-three men died in the uprising — 39 in the final assault.

State team to hunt bad water; Pampa's water supply is safe

By DEBORAH BRIDGES Of The Pampa News Pampa drinking water is tested several times weekly. Edmondson said.

THIS WATER IS SAFE so say city experts who looked over Pampa's supply after an announcement was made this past week that a state team will hit the road soon to inspect city water supplies throughout the state to see if they conform to regulations and standards. (Staff Photo by Jim Willeford) Of The Pampa News Water supplies of several small Texas communities will be tested beginning this month by a mobile research facility designed to search for and remove four inorganic contaminants, officials from the University of Houston have announced.

Environmental engineers traveling with a 40 foot by 10 foot trailer facility will test the water supplies of selected towns for flouride. nitrate, selenium, and arsenic.

Tough restrictions — stipulated in a federal law on drinking water adopted in 1974 — on these substances have been set to go into effect in 1981.

Pampa authorities doubt the city will be one of those visited by the mobile research unit because of the high quality water treatment facility located west of the city.

The city water treatment plant is one of three in the Panhandle which has a state - authorized laboratory able to conduct bacteriological analysis on the water. City Manager Mack Wofford said.

The laboratory was officially approved Oct. 18, 1979 by the Health Department in Austin, he said, after all tools, techniques and procedures were checked by the state officals.

Eugene Edmondson, production superintendent for the city water department said the plant had no problem with the four inorganic contaminants the state is concerned about.

"Our flouride is real normal," he said. "The state requirement says a 1.0 level, and we usually run from a .8 to a 1.0."

The nitrates, selenium and arsenic are also found in low quanties – below recommended level, he said.

Officials explained samples were taken from taps in different areas of the city then taken to the laboratory and tested for bacteriological infestation.

A culture is prepared by the chemical engineer and is placed in an incubator for 24 - hours. Should a culture appear, water department employees begin looking for the point of contamination in the system. If the water does not meet government standards for some reason, Wofford said, the health department and the press have to be notified. The fact is printed on the monthly water bill, also, he said. Pampa's water is high in chlorides and salt, Wofford said, however, there is not much that can be done about the inorganic makeup of the water.

"From what I've heard." Edmondson said. "the lake water has enough lithium in it to push off whatever salt the water might contain."

"This water is just high in dissolved solids," he said.

The three main chemicals the city plant uses to sterilize the water is chlorine, aluminum sulphate and carbon gas, Edmondson said.

Lime is also available if it is needed to stabilize the alkalinity of the water. he said.

Describing the process to clean and sterilize the water, he said it is first piped in from Lake Meredith.

The water then flows into an open tank where it is mixed with chemicals to bring the solid particles to the bottom of the tank.

Next, the water is baffled (stirred with paddles like one might see in a home - made ice cream machine) allowing the chemicals to continue interacting with the solid elements.

The Rock Island Line: Does anyone want it?

By SHEILA ECCLES Of The Pampa News Staff

Gray County Commissioners discussed the bankrupt Rock Island Railroad and the impact of its posible demise on the area at a meeting this past week after learning the Interstate Commerce Commission has cancelled an emergency service that has kept the railroad running for several months. The railroad, hit hard by a strike months ago, was ordered back into service by presidential order until March 2.

A federal judge Friday refused to extend the emergency service which, apparently, means that Rock Island will have to take over operation of its some 7.000 miles of track in several states, including Texas.

Commissioner Ted Simmons, precinct 4. who has attended meetings concerning the continuance of rail service, told the other commissioners during the meeting that "four ton of goods shipped by rail costs the same as one ton of trucked materials."

Just the savings in energy should make the government aware of rail importance, he said.

O.L. Presley, precinct 1 commissioner, said, "We should do all we can to keep the rail line."

The PRPC has taken the lead in saving the rail service. "The line running east to west from Glen Rio through Amarillo to Texola is the one of major concern," said David DeGrassi of the PRPC.

"We are hoping that a national railroad company will take the line under operation but so far there has been no interest expressed by any of them." DeGrassi said.

He also said the problems of taking over the Rock Island at this time are many.

"Any large railroad company would be purchasing not only the line, but Rock Island employees, back pay deficits, and company tensions." he said.

One alternative solution to the Rock Island problem. DeGrassi said, is the purchase of small segments of the line by the independent shippers.

According to DeGrassi. "there are grants and subsidies available to potential independent purchase, but the amount of a purchase price is very high. This would be a last resort action."

Just how high the cost can be seen by figures released by the Kansas City Rail Terminal Co., the firm ordered to operate the Rock Island by President Carter.

For 7200 miles of rail, the monthly bill is over 13 million dollars, much of which has been subsidized by the government, the commissioners were told.

Meanwhile, John Ladd, an expert in running independent short line rail service, has invited by the PRPC to investigate the possible purchase of at least a portion of the railroad's line in the Panhandle.

Ladd is considered an expert in short lines.

What's Inside

He operates lines 16, 19, and 22 miles long known as the Cooperstown and Charlotte Valley Railway in upper New York. These short runs have proved to be profitable. Ladd has told the PRPC.

"What will happen, remains to be seen, but there are only 30 days left to make some sort of decision." DeGrassi said

Meanwhile, still another railroad, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad (Katy), has told the Federal Railroad Administration that it intends to make an offer for 650 miles of main line Rock Island track between Herington, Kan., and Dallas.

The raiload said Friday that it also plans to make offers on several other segments of the bankrupt Rock Island.

H.L. Gastler, president and chief operating officer of the Katy, said the intent offer also wtuld cover trackage rights between Oklahoma City and El Reno, Okla., and between Salina and Herington, Kan.

Trackage rights also would be involved between Herington and Topeka, Kan. In addition, the Katy intends to offer to operate a branch line between St. Joseph, Mo., and Atchison, Kan., known as the Ponca City. Okla., branch, and another in Oklahoma, known as the Anadarko branch.

Gastler stressed that the Katy's action involved an intent to make an offer on the bankrupt mileage and that no offer to purchase is involved at this point.

The Katy's move came on the final day of the deadline set by the Federal Railroad Administration, which has solicited expressions of interest from railroads in parts of the Rock Island system. The Rock Island is under an Interstate Commerce Commission order to end service by March 2.

In other matters, the county commissioners voted to pay $1,077 for membership in the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. Further payments to the PRPC will be discussed with a representative from the planning commission at the next regualar commission meeting, Feb. 15.

A part time secretarial position for the County Extension Office was approved as of Jan. 1, 1980. The amount of $268.66 was appropriated for the secretarial monthly salary. The amount was based on a 20 hour work week at minimum wage.

Motion was made to renew county membership in the Panhandle Alcoholic Recovery Center. The yearly dues amount to $2,694.90, based on .10 per capita ratio.

Tax hike in budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's budget for fiscal 1981 contains a hidden federal income tax increase of more than $18 billion on Americans with growing incomes

This tax hike, which might be called the "inflation tax," will hit all Americans whose income goes up: the more their income goes up, the harder it will hit them.

Thanks to the structure of the federal income tax code, Carter will be able to count on more tax revenue from individual Americans without proposing an income tax increase to Congress. At the same time, he can increase spending and decrease the deficit.

The government windfall is a major factor in a series of seemingly contradictory elements in Carter's budget proposal:

 He proposes no tax cut or increase.
 He predicts that the federal deficit will drop from $40 billion this year to $16 billion in 1981.

- Yet, he expands defense spending and keeps most domestic programs even or virtually even with inflation.

- And he is able to preserve the $2.3 billion state share of general revenue sharing, which he had promised to end, add a $1 billion special aid program for state and local government and expand spending on youth unemployment and housing subsidies.

Those last four decisions help win him friends with the liberal labor, black and urban groups which remain crucial to winning the Democratic party's presidential nomination. They were considered the mostly likely. Democrats to desert Carter this year for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his chief rival for the party 1980 nomination.

In deferring a tax cut despite predictions of a sagging economy. Carter has departed from past custom. Since 1948. Congress has increased taxes significantly six times, but it has made 11 major cuts - with the majority of the reductions coming in election years. Still, thanks to growth in the economy and factors like the inflation tax, federal revenues have grown without stop in that period. Carter proposes to spend $616 billion in 1981 and take in $600 billion. That's a $76 billion increase in revenues. Since 45 cents out of every dollar of federal income comes from individual income taxes, they will rise $34.2 billion from 1980 to 1981.

Of that $34.2 billion increase in tax payments by individual Americans, congressional tax experts estimate that more than half, $18.72 billion, will result from the "inflation tax."

This is based on their estimate that each percentage point of inflation. which Carter predicts will perk along at 10.4 percent in 1960. brings the federal government an additional $1.8 billion in individual income tax revenue.

Everyone knows by now that you lose buying power if your income and tax payments remain the same over two years while inflation continue

dwindles to nothing

Texas is in trouble, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock. The state government has spent its way down to its last $124 million. That, according to Bullock, is the amount of "surplus" the Legislature will have to start with in 1981 and it's a pity.

Such a meager sum, said Bullock, constitutes a real crisis because, as he was quoted by The Associated Press, "$124 million is nothing." You read it right. "Nothing."

Now some of you may remember when an eighth of a billion dollars was considered a pretty good hunk of change, even in state government

It's still a huge fortune if you happen to be out there struggling to get home from work with enough money for the mortgage company, the grocer, a down payment on a gasoline refinery every time you fill up the old jalopy, and the corps of tax collectors stretching from Pampa to Austin to Washington.

But in Austin, where they see piles of the stuff come and go every day, it's peanuts. In Washington, where government spending has gone out of sight, it's hardly worth mentioning. So it's really what you're accustomed to.

To meet the looming crisis, Bullock recommends increasing the oil production tax and the natural gas production tax. He said those increases could be "passed on up East." Since he mentioned only the "East", maybe he will propose that Texans be exempted from paying taxes on oil and gas. Don't count on it, though, unless you hear it from him

- One thing he said made sense to us. He criticized the Texas Municipal League for recommending a 3-cent increase in the city sales tax which is now 1 cent on the dollar
- The Texas Municipal League is a registered lobbyist in Austin representing city government officials around the state.

Bullock, in his criticism of the cities organization (TML), said the

Refurbishing the louseworts: economics and the environment

by John Willson

A few years ago my family decided to repair the seawall at our summer home on Canandaigua Lake in New York's beautiful Finger Lakes country. We went ahead, and later found that we were afoul a New York law against altering the shoreline of any lake in the state. Even after the fact, a team from the State Conservation Commission came to do an environmental impact study on our wall. It seemed to matter not at all that we added nothing by our repairs; we merely replaced rotted railroad ties in a wall that had existed for over twenty years. We were lucky: they did not make us tear it down.

I cite this personal example as a way of economics and the environment at introducing a dilemma posed by being both Hillsdale College), we DON'T know what Evironmentalism IS a legitimate subject of public policy. The conservative columnist M. Stanton Evans has said. rightly, that "No one has a 'right' either constitutional or otherwise to befoul the atmosphere or common waterways used by other people ... " The problem comes when we react too quickly to smelly air or sudsy water. One example is the rush to ban the insecticide DDT (incidentally, most of my . college students do not remember DDT. showing that unless we develop clear thinking on these issues soon, they will cease to be issues). It may be possible to find an effective substitute, but in the meantime hundreds of thousands of people will die of malaria, which in most areas of the world had been almost wiped out in 1971. What is the value of human life, compared with, say, danger to the brown pelican? We don't know that either, but at the very least we should learn to consider MAN as part of the natural environment. On balance, DDT probably helps man, and we were probably too quick to ban its use. Which brings us back to Canandaigua Lake. Because I love it. I want to protect it-which is the nature of man's relation to a his property. It is altogether unclear whether New York State is helping me to do that when it examines seawalls. One thing. however, is clear: our approach to environmental problems has up to now been almost completely regulatory. Don't befoul the air: don't pollute the stream; don't endanger a species. Mr. Buckley points out that at the very least we should change to a system of incentives. which would make us feel good about protecting the environment. It would also save us money, and leave us in control of our property, and thus enhance our liberty. When New York State demands that shorelines remain "natural." it approaches what Mr. Buckley calls the problem of environmental holy writ." which must clash with what I call the "holy writ of property." Man's relation to his environment is, however, too important to abandon to any single-minded notion of what is holy. In this, as in all things, prudence is the highest political virtue

Today is Sunday, Feb. 3, the 34th day of 1980. There are 332 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 3, 1913, the federal income tax was established, as the 13th Amendment was ratified On this date:

In 1894, Norman Rockwell was born.

In 1917, the United States broke relations with Germany, which had just announced it would use unrestricted submarine tactics in World War I.

In 1962, President John Kennedy ordered an almost complete trade embargo against communist Cuba

In 1973, fighting in Vietnam came to a virtual halt after the formal cease-fire went into effect.

Industry, foe or friend

Any political campaign time is open season on the "whipping boys." The safest target for any politician's boot is the backside of "big business."

It's a cheap shot. 1980

Who's going to talk back?

The crowd-rouser can blame high prices, pollution, shoddy merchandise and cancer--on "big business."

And anybody who ever suffered from any of those evils is eager to blame somebody. And, as I say, who's to refute this libel?' Do you realize that an industry cannot even purchase time on radio or television to respond to such indictments?

cities are "greedy, greedy, greedy.

One reason the comptroller is opposed to an increase in city sales taxes in Texas is because he wants to reserve the realm of the sales tax for another greedy group, the state government. The state now collects 4 cents on the dollar, and Bullock seems to feel that he taxpayers would tolerate an increase. He just doesn't want the cities stirring up the taxpayers until the state has had a chance to move.

In case the Legislature fails to enact a tax bill to remedy the crisis Bullock foresees, he said he doesn't know of any state services that could be cut.

He admitted, however, that "every agency, mine included, could operate with less money and do just as good a job.

Such a candid response is rare among politicians, but it does indicate that many of them realize they could get by on smaller budgets.

They just need someone to make them do it, and that someone, dear, taxpayer, is you.

Such wishful thinking

Surprisingly, there was good news for the American taxpayer from the nation's capital. At least it will be good news if Rep. Ron Paul, R-Tex., can convince his colleagues to go along with his proposal

What Paul wants to do is freeze the salaries of congressmen and reduce them each month by the increase of the cost of living. Such a concept warms the hearts of all taxpayers. But even more noteworthy is the language Paul used in announcing his bill. Said the Solon

"Congress causes inflation, but it insulates itself from the effects with big salaries, lush fringe benefits and generous cost-of-living raises. The American people, who pay the bills, are left to suffer.

In an effort to remedy that situation, the federal Home Care Financing Administration is launching a nationwide campaign to alert the public to the importance of second opinions and how to go about getting same.

The goal, of course, is to reduce unnecessary surgery, which evidence suggests accounts for a sizable and costly proportion of the more than 20 million operations performed annually on in-patients in U.S. hospitals.

A touch of success

And speaking of good news, of which there isn't too much around these days, the American economy appears to be doing something right after all.

Contrary to a general impression that lagging marketing savvy along with productivity is a major factor in the economic sag, a current survey spotlights marketing of new products as a notable success area.

The study by the Conference Board, a New York based economic research organization, covered items introduced to the market during the past five years by 148 medium-to-large manufacturers. Both consumer- and industrial-oriented products were included.

The success rate was two out of three, countering the common conception that most new products fail.

Even more encouraging, some of the notable successes were in product lines and areas of advanced technology where economists believe the future of the American economy lies. One metal components and equipment firm had a perfect batting record with more than 100 successful new products and an electric components company scored with 25.

These successes by themselves will not turn the economy around. Much more of the same is needed. But it is at least encouraging to have evidence that at a time when so much attention is being paid to shoring up aging traditional industries of questionable economic future, successful innovation has not gone out of style.

an life, e brown Progress made in the medical profession may soon be able to protect patients from almost all illnesses. A major question remains. Will there be nurses available to administer the care?

The nursing profession recently has not been able to supply trained personnel for the needs of local hospitals. Amarillo hospital officials have gone to foreign countries, trying to recruit registered nurses for job placement in Amarillo, according to officials there. Pampa's Highland General Hospital, although feeling the crunch, has not had to employ vigorous recruiting methods as yet, according to Geneva Gobin. Director of Nurses.

Gobin said. "In this location it is hard to attract single people, and at times there is a large turn over of nurses. When the work at Brown & Root Construction site was completed. several of our nurses had to leave to be with their husbands. Nursing school enrollment is down, and in two years we will be in even shorter supply. The younger generation will not always take up the challenges of the nursing profession." Not too many years ago, hospital officials saw the nationwide nursing shortage start. Several programs were implemented to attract new students to the profession and to prepare retired nurses to return to active practice. One such program is being offered at the University of Texas School of Nursing. The school is offering a refresher course designed to update clinical skills.

Nancy Kotara. Director of Volunteers at Highland General, explained. "Nursing scholarships have been available to high school students and there was not one single senior in Pampa who wanted to go into nursing." The scholarships did not go unused. They were eventually given to nurses aides and to Licensed Vocational Nurses. Kotara feels that many women are going into related medical fields and many are entering medical school to become doctors instead of nurses. "It takes special poeple to staff a hospital, the atmosphere and the illness can cause depression and a feeling of summed up her feelings on the nursing shortage, "We just can't find any."

I've been through years of this mess. So I'm here to help by reviewing some of the elective clubs and organizations for you before pre-enrollment catches you off guard.

As I said a couple of weeks ago in My Prerogative, DECA is a great chance for those interested in marketing and business, because it gives you on the job training in this field.

Drama is good if your into stage work and learning more about theatre, while the other arts, such as band and choir give students a taste of music throughout their high school years. Art I, II, and Crafts I and II are also good for those having an interest in that form of elective or for those not knowing what to take, I strongly recommend trying the hand craft courses.

Business courses are a tremendous help in everyday life. Those courses such as Business Math. Business Law, Typing, Shorthand and Accounting will assist you in many areas as you go on through school and after you graduate. Even though you may think you may not be very good at a business education class, you never know until youtry Athletics are good for the athletically inclined. However, as I do know, us uncoordinated souls should stick with Art. However, if you can't be an athlete -- you should be an athletic supporter. (No pun intended.

Foreign languages are always a good choice. I have never had any myself, however, at times, I wish I had. Those who are extremely good at the English language and enjoy this type of course should definately at least try the class. And if you really like it, you can always join the club that goes hand in hand with the course. And if you want to become better at the using and interpreting the English language, you might try Speech. However, none of these are blow off courses, as most people have suprising discovered this past year.

Those who enjoy working may choose to talk to ITC (Industrial Cooperative Training) counselors about a half day work program through this group. This, like DECA, is an excellent chance for those who are work - oriented to get on the job training and credits towards graduation at the same time.

Last but not least, for anyone absolutely not knowing what to take, I want to go into great detail on an organization in which I am extremely partial to,_

The P.H.S. Publications program can fill the need of practically anyone not knowing what to take. There is something for everyone to

If you're exceptionatley good in English and enjoy writing, you could learn the trade of news media writing in Journalism I, followed by Journalism II for those who excell in the first course. If you're not much for English but enjoy meeting people, you might attempt selling ads to fund the newspaper and yearbook. And if you're just not sure what you want to do, give yearbook a try. You'll find yourself involved in a "family" - not just a class. You'll also discover that the instructor is one who can help you in more ways than one

I know that most of you have heard comments about our publications department and one man even attempted to slaughter it with malicious editorials (sorry, Greg), but I want you all to know that most of the time I was in Publications, it was great. And if anyone is unsure of what to take next year -- give Publications a try.

Well. I've given you all a review of the choices you have. If I left any alternatives unmentioned, please bring it to my attention and I will take it up next week with my apologies.

School and work keep young model on the go

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) - Five years ago, Lisanne Falk sent a 99-cent "supermarket special" photo to Ford Models of New York City. Ford signed her on. Lisanne was 9 years old.

When Lisanne was 12, she and another 12-year-old model named Brooke Shields did test shots for Betsy Cameron, a young Ford model who was trying her hand at photography.

One of Betsy's photographs of Lisanne and Brooke was published in October 1978 in the first issue of the revived "Life" magazine. A four-page spread was featured in the first issue of the revived "Look" in February 1979.

Now Betsy, along with writer Diana Lewis Jewell, has published a book, "Lisanne, a Young Model." The book, which follows Lisanne as she goes from home to school to work, includes 150 pictures, 50 of them in color.

Today, Lisanne is an active 14-year-old who rises at 7 a.m. to attend public school in Long Island before catching the commuter train for an afternoon of modeling in New York City.

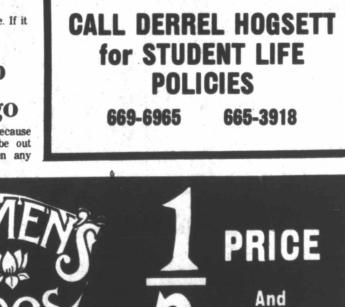

She hasn't had much trouble juggling school and work. She's an A student, loves sports, go-ing to concerts, and playing the piano and the flute

"So far I haven't had any problems," Lisanne said. "Now I'm in high school so I guess it's harder, but it's not that much trouble because my teachers give me the work be-

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Basketball Association's Board of Governors reached agreement Saturday with the executive committee of the Players Association on a new three-year contract.

The Board also voted to accept the expansion committee's recommendation to place a franchise in Dallas, but under significantly different terms. The new working agreement.

which will be voted on Monday by the Players Association. will extend through the 1981-82 season.

Commissioner Larry O'Brien said the new contract would resolve a dispute over cable television revenues: provide for increases in minimum salary. per diem expenses and playoff money; limit the extent of deferred compensations which may be included in contracts. and in the final year raise the size of rosters from 11 men to 12 and prohibit no-trade clauses in contracts.

O'Brien and Players Association director Larry Fleisher declined to give details on the contract until Monday's players meeting. but both expressed satisfaction with the agreement.

The NBA's contract with the Players Association expired last summer, and the players competed this season without a contract.

The proposal to place the NBA's 23rd franchise in Dallas was accepted by an 18-3-1 vote following lengthy debate that produced some new conditions for the prospective owners.

The proposed purchase price remains $12 million, but the Dallas group headed by Norm Sonju, former president of the NBA Buffalo Braves, has been asked to come up with a down payment of $6 million, instead of $3.5 million. The other change would allow the 22 existing clubs to protect eight players each from the draft, instead of seven, and Dallas would pick one player from each. followed by Lubbock Coronado and Tascosa. Midland Lee captured the boys crown while Amarillo High took second and Abilene Cooper third.

"It was very good, very stiff competition, but I was super proud of the kids." Eckhart said. "We had some cold water problems Friday which made the performances not quite up to standard, but my Pampa swimmers started to really shine in the finals."

Pampa returns to Maverick Pool Feb. 12 for the district meet.

"I feel we'll have a good group of boys and girls to qualify for the regionals." Eckhart added.

Morgan signs contract with Houston Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Morgan says if he stays healthy he can be a better second baseman than when he won five Gold Gloves awards, and the Houston Astros, with their pitching staff, are capable of winning the National League pennant.

That was the picture Morgan painted recently after he had signed ε one-year contract with the Astros for an estimated $225,000, plus various incentive clauses.

"If pitching is 80 percent of the game as some people say, then the Astros have a good chance," the 36-year-old eight-time All-Star said. The Astros earlier signed Nolan Ryan to a $1 million per year contract.

. Morgan, suffering through frustrating injuries the past three years, played out his contract with the Cincinnati Reds last season and went on the free agent market.

. Morgan, who started his career with the Astros, said he still had a desire to play baseball and felt he could contribute to the Astros success

'I'm probably a better second baseman now than when the guy wor. those five Gold Gloves," Morgan said. "I've got a stronger arm and I know more about the game."

After leading the Reds to consecutive World Series championships in 1975 and 1976, Morgan's batting average dwindled but he blamed much of the problem on injuries.

Morgan went through a series of ankle, hand and hip injuries last son with the Reds, when he batted .250 and drove in 3

Softball association may be formed soon

A citywide softball association is expected to be organized in the near future involving church and industrial leagues after a meeting was held Thursday night at Pioneer Natural Gas to discuss the possibilities.

Coordinator Jay Trosper said another meeting is tentatively scheduled for Feb. 12 at an undetermined location to discuss association guidelines and to make committee assignments.

"We had about 60 people show up for the meeting and the general consensus was to have an association with separate entities under it, Trosper added. For instance, the association would adjust a fee structure under a pay for what you get plan where the church league, for example, would pay X amount of money for field rental. Nothing is definite yet. We'll be working out more of the details later on Trosper said he would be running more newspaper advertisements and radio spots to keep the public informed about the next meeting.

Kite moves into tie with Edwards for Crosby Pro-Am lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - Tom Kite has had a highly productive pro golf career, but in some ways it has also been puzzling and frustrating.

In the last six years he's won $738,732 as one of the most consistent players on the PGA tour, but he's won only two tournaments

"It grates me no end that I haven't won more," Kite said after moving into a tie with David Edwards for the lead after the second round Friday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament

"I know my game is of the caliber to win more than two tournaments. I had three excellent opportunities to win last year and didn't get any of them, he said. "I can't explain it. I don't understand it. I've wracked my brains trying to figure it out." He paused for a moment, then continued

"I've played very aggressively this week. I know I'm playing well, and I've been a little more aggressive than usual, taken a few chances I might not take ordinarily.

"Maybe," he said, and winked, "that's the answer.

I feel good about the next two days. I feel I'm playing well enough to be leading. I feel I'm playing well enough to continue to

Kite holed a sand shot for a birdie on his way to a 70 on the intimidating Spyglass Hill course, while the 24-year-old Edwards. a former national collegiate champion now in his second year of tour activity, had a 69 on the same layout. They had matching 36-hole totals of 136, eight under par

A single shot back at 137 were Jerry Pate and Steve Melnyk. Pate dropped a 50-foot birdie putt on the last hole for a 71 at Spyglass and Melnyk shot 68 at Cypress Point.

Australian David Graham. the current PGA champion, had a 70 at Pebble Beach for a 138 total, and Dr. Gil Morgan shot 69, also at Pebble Beach, for 139.

Johnny Miller, who won this tournament five years ago, shot 68 at Pebble Beach and was tied at 140 with Ed Fiori, George Burns and Larry Nelson. Fiori and Burns had 69s at Pebble Beach. Nelson 70 at Cypress Point.

Tom Watson, a winner last week and seeking a fourth Player of the Year title, slipped to a 74 at Spyglass and was at 142.

The format calls for the pros and their amateur partners many of them show business celebrities - to play one round on each of the three courses before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach.

Holmes puts crown on line today

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Two world championship fights are on the card at Caesars Palace on Sunday, yet the best fight might well be between Thomas Hearns and Jim Richards. Hearns is the No. 2 World Boxing Council welterweight contender, and Richards is No. 4. The headlined bouts have WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes going against Italy's Lorenzo 'Zanon' and super bantamweight king Wilfredo Gomez meeting the No. 2 contender

Ruben Valdez. Holmes hails from Easton, Pa., Gomez from Puerto Rico and Valdez from Colombia.

Hearns fights out of Detroit as an undefeated welterweight aiming at the crown of either Sugar Ray Leonard or Pipino Cuevas.

Both Holmes and Gomez are considered outstanding favorites for their Sunday bouts, which will be nationally televised by ABC in a card that starts at Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion at 12:15 p.m. PST.

St. John's 64-63 triumph over Rhode Island Friday night fell into the latter category. according to Redmen Coach Lou Carnesecca.

We were very, very fortunate to come out with a win tonight. said Carnesecca. whose rolling, ninth-ranked Redmen won their 17th straight game and improved their record to a stately 19-1. "In all respects, this was a game that should have gone the other way.

We didn't play particularly well. We didn't box out. And Rhode Island's a heck of a team. They have some great athletes.

The Rams led the Redmen by as many as six points in the late stages before St. John's rallied. Rhode Island had a chance to tie near the end. but Marc Upshaw missed the second of two foul shots with six seconds remaining.

They did take us out of our offense early." said Rhode Island Coach Jack Kraft. "and we were taking some unnatural-type shots. Holy Ghosters, some long shots. But once we settled down we started to attack things pretty well. We were getting much better shots.

guys who are still going strong," said big Ed Kranepool, the last of the original Amazin' Mets. "I could do a creditable front office job - that's what I've always aspired to. But all I can do now is wait.' It was diamond castoffs such as Kranepool that Lou Brock had in mind recently when, discussing the insensitivity of baseball, he said: "When you leave a big company, you get a ring or a watch. When baseball is through with you, you get a telephone call."

hurt, disillusioned, unsure of his future.

Kranepool wasn't even accorded that courtesy when the crumbling Mets decided they had no further use for the 35-year-old outfielder-first baseman who had been with the team from its inception in 1962 and set many of the club's all-time records.

"I got a terse notice in the mail that I no longer figured in their plans," he said. "It was a carbon copy at that. The original went to my agent, Dick Moss.' Kranepool placed himself on the free agent market but neither he nor Moss has pushed for employment with another club. They chose to wait out the impending sale of the New York National League club.

purchased a week ago by book publisher Nelson Doubleday and friends for $21.1 million.

Kranepool sent packing by Mets

"I had a good life with the Mets," the 6-foot-3. 215-pound New York native said, managing to blot out the misery of the last couple of years. "I love the organization. I love New York. Sure, I would like to remain in some capacity, but it would depend on who is making the evaluation

Embittered as he is after being treated like a frayed dish cloth, Kranepool refuses to make charges and name names

His loyalty to a tradition, however tarnished, runs so swells in his soul. He did his bit when the Mets were the buffoons of baseball. He refused to join the internal bickering when the club's model to join the internal deep that it drowns out all the justified venom that swells in his soul. He did his bit when the Mets were the bickering when the club's morale disintegrated and the Mets fell back into the catycombs.

As late as the spring of 1978, when the Mets had shuffled away Tom Seaver's lightning fast ball and Dave Kingman's home run bat and when discontent seethed in the locker room, only Kranepool's voice was raised in defense of the club.

"What kind of gripe do these guys have?" he said of the complainers. "We have a lot of young talent. We're a building club. We'll win again just as we did in 1969. Wait and see."

Kranepool maintains a stiff upper lip. He lives in suburban Hicksville, N.Y., and commutes daily to an interim job with a Long Island collection agency. He has other irons in the fire but he is not ready to abandon baseball

"I should be good for at least two more years of playing," he said. "Then move into the front office. I have the qualifications."

NEW YORK (AP) - Public support for a United States withdrawal from the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow has jumped dramatically in the past two weeks, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

The continuing Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan has hardened American attitudes and intensified the sentiment for withdrawing from the games in retaliation for the Soviet move.

Seventy-three percent of those who know of the Afghanistan situation said the U.S. team should not go to the Games if they are held in Moscow, because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. That is 24 percentage points higher than the support for withdrawal found in the AP-NBC News poll taken Jan. 17-18.

Nineteen percent are now opposed to withdrawal. and 8 percent of those interviewed Tuesday and Wednesday were not sure.

The previous poll found sentiment only narrowly in favor of withdrawal. with 49 percent favoring a boycott and 41 percent opposed. Ten percent were undecided.

This shift in public opinion has cut across every major group. Backing for U.S. withdrawal is strong among liberals and conservatives, young and old, wealthy and poor. Democrats and Republicans.

Right after the previous survey. President Carter announed he had asked the U.S. Olympic Committee to get the Summer Games moved out of Moscow, postponed or canceled. Failing any such action, Carter said he would back a U.S. boycott of the Summer Games if the Soviet troops remained in Afghanistan after Feb 20

Also since the previous poll, both the U.S. House and the Senate have voted for a boycott of the Moscow Games

American sentiment for the lesser step of moving the Games out of Moscow also has risen, the latest survey found

Eighty-two percent now think the Games should be moved if possible, while 13 percent opposed a shift. Five percent of the 1.600 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure

In the AP-NBC News poll taken Jan. 17-18, 66 percent favored moving the Games. 26 were opposed and 8 percent were not sure.

NHL officials to discuss free agents

DETROIT (AP) - National Hockey League players and team owners will try once again to reach some agreement on the issue of free agency in meetings prior to the 32nd All-Star Game Tuesday night

The league's Board of Governors and the NHL Players Association will meet individually Monday, then hold a face-to-face negotiation session Tuesday on the controversial topic.

That will be virtually all the business transacted at these sessions with other matters. including a return to imbalanced scheduling and the institution of overtime to decide tie games, to be discussed in meetings at New York in March.

"The players are seeking some modification in the present system of equalization." said NHL President John Ziegler, speaking of the format that gives cash. players, draft choices - or a combination - to teams losing free agents who sign with other clubs.

"It has been suggested the players would like to see compensation in the form of cash and-or draft choices instead of players." Ziegler continued. "We also have talked about keeping the present form of compensation for certain categories of players - the stars and superstars. as determined by their salaries - and modifying the system for other players."

Progress on the matter does not seem likely at this conclave, as the players are expected to devote much of their meeting Monday to the status of Alan Eagleson, the executive director of their association

Defenseman Mike Milbury of the Boston Bruins has sent ballots to each player, asking whether the NHLPA should name a search committee to find a "new, full-time" replacement for Eagleson. The key words are "new" and "full-time." for players and owners have cited a conflict of interest in the fact that Eagleson serves a dual role as NHLPA director and negotiator of contracts from some 100 NHL players

A positive vote for a "full-time" director could lead to Eagleson being required to drop his other business involvements to retain his NHLPA position. A positive vote for a "new, full-time" director would indicate a climate in favor of dropping Eagleson.

Eagleson has indicated he would resign in 1982, when the current collective bargaining agreement is likely to be terminated. The vote Milbury instituted is, in itself, a straw poll to gauge opinion.

Certain opinions have been made clear. The Philadelphia Flyers voted unanimously in favor of Eagleson and center Phil Esposito of the New York Rangers - acting president of the NHLPA -added his support.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE Blend yours, mate's careers

By Louise Pierce

Do you believe that the separate careers of older husbands and wives can cause bickering and jealousy and eventual separation? I have watched it happen a few times. And I've deplored it as I'm sure the sputtering, suffering couples have after it was too late.

I've even had people tell me that a 60-plus man and his wife cannot live happily if they divide their affection between mate and job. They say tension invariably mounts over different work schedules. over who makes more money and thus dictates the spending of it, over household chores and the choice of friends and even the hours for rising in the morning and retiring at night

These skeptics insist that after we pass the years of slaving to get the kids through college and make the house payments and give the family a vacation once a year, everything changes. We no longer have to scrape and scrounge to pay the bills yet we both want to keep working. And that, they say, poses a problem.

One man said, "You've got to work side by side or else one of you has to quit the diverse job. Retirement can't stand two different careers."

Well. I hope that man, and all those who share his views, will read my account of a happy middle-aged couple that completely disproves such statements.

Last week Otis and I shared a cafe dinner with friends we'd known a long time but about whose life style we knew little. They showed pride and pleasure in each other plus enthusiasm for their separate occupations. Their happy attitudes were a revelation to both of us.

He has a good job in a leading corporation here. She is successful in the sales field. Their hours are different. So are their business friends and job interests.

How, then, are they able to achieve and continue their beautiful compatibility? I analyzed their situation the next day and decided that their dual appreciation of their happy marriage included everything that each other did.

To begin with, they brag on each other. She is proud of his accomplishments and he praises her work. When she has a sales meeting at night, he is busy with projects that will have lasting value in their later years. Each spoke of the other's ability but never his own.

When I raised my eyebrows at his account of the many times she gave customers more kindnesses in favors and finances that custom demanded, he said, "She tells me that life is more than money. And I agree with her.

LORETTA BRITTEN

Further, this couple strives constantly to excel, which allows them to be truthfully proud of each other. They don't have to lie about the spouse's excellence or personality or integrity. It's there, to be enjoyed and assisted by the other. And they did not say a word about who made more money. Apparently, their incomes cause no friction

In addition, they keep too busy to have any time for grumbling and growling at each other, even if they were so minded. He said, "We eat out almost every day so we'll have time for talking. At home we'd cook and clean up and get tired. So eating out gives us the time to relax and be together. We get to see our friends this way

He beamed on his wife. "Look at all the people stopping to talk to her. Isn't she wonderful?' I nodded. I knew they both were.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband spends all histime in his basement workshop. He makes flower boxes and trellises and sells them for good prices. He says he's got to stay busy to keep from being bored and mean. But he leaves me sitting upstairs alone. Shouldn't he quit puttering and keep me from being lonesome? K.Y

DEAR K.Y.: No, he should not. He's completely right about older people's need to stay busy. You should keep yourself from being lonesome by getting busy too. Join him downstairs and appreciate his woodworking projects, maybe even help him with them if he'll let you. Or find yourself a time-consuming occupation that/will keep you content - a career in sewing or painting, perhaps in watching TV soap operas or writing slogans for contests or even reading the many good books you can get at your library. If you each have a pleasurable interest in some kind of work, your own and each other's, you should be able to regain your togetherness

I'm so tired of being sick and in the hospital Will this ever go away and can I get off medication? My doctor also told me not to drive a car for a year. Do you agree? DEAR READER - People can have convulsions from a variety of causes, for example from inadequate circulation to the brain, heat stroke, severe fevers and even severe low blood sugar.

Sometimes it's hard to pinpoint exactly what causes convulsions, but with the minimal information provided in your letter there's a strong probability that you do have epilespy. That's probably what your doctor thinks too, and the medicines he has given you are those intended to be used to control or prevent convulsions. Some doctors shy away from telling their patients they have epilepsy. I suppose that's important in some instances but the truth is there should be no social stigma to saying a per-son has epilepsy. Some of the best minds in history have been people who have been epileptics. Two classic examoles are Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great. There are also important musicians, philosophers and outstanding people from all walks of life who have lived with epilepsy. I'm sending you The Health letter number 10-8, Epilespy: You Can Have It Too. It will give you a better appreciation for the problem. Other read-ers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped self-addressed enve-

Fortunately, in almost all cas-és the convulsions can be con-trolled or newspace. trolled or prevented. This doesn't always happen over-night and determining the best combination of medicines for a patient sometimes requires a period of trial and error. The result is that almost all individuals who have epilepsy can expect to lead as normal and as happy a life as if they didn't have it at

Yes, your doctor is wise in asking you not to drive a car for a year. This period of time is needed to make sure that your medicines are control-ling the seizures and to pro-tect you from having one while you're driving.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm astonished that you and your other readers seem to be so completely uninformed on why women knit, crochet and do needlepoint.

The reason is obvious. It gives them something to think about while they're talking.

Our family and most of our friends are aware that this will be our 40th wedding anniversary, but we positively do not want any gifts!

You once stated in your column that it was improper to indicate, "No gifts, please," on an invitation. Later you not only reversed yourself but offered some excellent alternatives. What were they?

KANSAS CITY INQUIRY

DEAR K.C.: I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.

Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below are two that changed my mind:

- "Mary and John Jones invite you to dine with us on the evening of June 1 at our home at 7:30 p.m.
- "It is in celebration of our 20th wedding anniversary

It works this way: the parent reads problem-related books to the child. Then the parent and child discuss the story in the

Your friendship is a cherished gift. We respectfully request no other.'

"The children of Alice and Donald Brown invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 20, 5 p.m. at Hillcrest Country Club.

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or event that you have shared with them, and return it to us by April 25. We believe that loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument. Where I work, there is this woman who has silver-gray hair but a young face and a good figure. She must be about 50 but looks younger. She has 12 grandchildren, but she swims with them, rides a bicycle with them and belongs to three bowl-, ing teams.

She says she never babysits with her grandchildren unless there is an emergency. Everyone says I am all wet with my ideas but I think a grandmother should act like a grandmother and should be more proud of her grandchildren than her bowling score.

A MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: This grandmother is acting like a grandmother. A modern one. Nowadays you can't tell a grandmother by looking at her, and I say more power to her!

Get the facts about love, sex, drugs and growing up in Abby's new booklet: "What Teenagers Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212

SOUND COUNTRY

The Ernest Tubb Legend and the Legacy album is still one of country music's hottest items and is still one of the most confused items on the market. Our readers keep asking where to buy the Waylon Jennings singles of When the World Has Turned You Down' and 'You Nearly Lose Your Mind.' Waylon has both a solo part and harmony with Ernest and Vern Gosdin plus a guitar solo on 'When the World Has Turned You Down.' And on 'You Nearly Lose Your Mind, there's a million bucks worth of country talent on the one track with Ernest, Waylon and Willie Nelson on

Grave mover disregards threats in strange duties

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — D.J. Skeans says he has been threatened with hellfire and damnation because of the work he does.

Skeans works for the West Virginia Department of Highways, but his specific task — the one that so offends some people — is to relocate graves, usually whole cemeteries, that lie in the paths of state highway projects.

In 10 years as cemetery relocation coordinator for the highway department. Skeans estimates he's supervised the digging up and reburial of 100 cemeteries and 5.000 bodies. The work is done by contractors under state supervision.

"There's not anything that the state of West Virginia tackles that is a more delicate task." said Skeans, a soft-spoken, heavyset man. "It has to be done in a reverent and dignified manner."

Obviously, it is not a job for the squeamish.

"Graves with water are not nice graves." Skeans said. "The wood boxes have usually decayed, but the entire corpse generally has not decomposed.... Some workers quit after the first day."

Gravemoving is done mostly by hand with the help of shovels. Skeans said. Machinery is used only to lift and lower remains that have been buried in heavy concrete vaults.

In exhuming remains from old graves, workers sometimes dig just five feet deep when they "notice a sudden discoloration in the dirt," Skeans said. "The black dirt has been packed together ... about an inch or so thick. There might even be parts of rusted nails and pieces of wood. That's all that's left." he said.

Well preserved metal and concrete vaults are not opened, but in other cases the body is placed in a new coffin, usually a plain pine box, he explained.

In the spring, Skeans will supervise the $189.000 relocation of the Old Baptist Church Cemetery, which lies in the path of Appalachian Corridor H near Buckhannon. The cemetery opened in the late 1700s. and Skeans said many of the graves could be those of slaves.

The cemetery has 647 known graves, but Skeans said as many as 400 unmarked graves may be found before the job is completed. Part of Skeans' job is detective work.

"We really pull at every straw we can to find some relative of the deceased." Skeans said. "But we most always find that there are more graves than have been located. Unfortunately, we have to move quite a few unknowns."

Respect for the dead is an important part of the job.

"The deceased still has rights." he said. "Anything that was buried at the original interment will be placed in the new box. If your mother was buried with a brooch, a family heirloom, and you stood by as we removed her remains, you could not take the brooch unless you had a court order."

Skeans said it's hard to be surprised any more by what he finds buried.

"We've found a lot of things in graves: radios. watches, toy guns.

"Outside of one vault we found a gallon jug. Our information sheet told us that it contained the blood of the deceased. When we moved the remains, the gallon jug was put in at the head of the grave. "Everything is put in the new box," he said.

Despite occasional threats that he "will go to hell for desecrating the dead." Skeans said his own religious faith has helped him deal with the job.

"This is a shell that the soul has left. It's not holding anything. ... As the Bible tells us, this is the ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

That perspective also enables him to convince reluctant relatives that moving the remains of their kin is not bad — "talking them into believing their relatives are going to be better off in the new cemetery." as he put it.

"I move a lot of graves that are covered with briars, grass and even trees growing in them. I go out with the attitude that I'm doing these families a favor." source of budget-keeping through ads and money-saving tips in The Pampa News.
