.Zbigniew Brzezinski, looking for international partners in an American aid program for Pakistan, flew in to Saudi Arabia today for meetings with leaders of this wealthy and staunchly anti-communist kingdom.

The United States has offered Pakistan $400 million in military and economic assistance over two years because of the Soviet intervention in neighboring Afghanistan. In the Pakistani capital of Islamabad over the weekend, Brzezinski told officials this was "only the beginning of the United States response to the threat."

He did not indicate how much more the Pakistanis might get. but added. "We hope that other countries also will indicate what they wish to contribute.

After the flight from Islamabad, Brzezinski was met at Riyadh airport by the Saudi foreign minister. Prince Saud al-Faisal, Riyadh state radio reported.

Before leaving Islamabad, Brzezinski told reporters he had been asked by President Carter to "lay the foundations for an invigorated friendship between our two countries. We have done

Brzezinski, who is traveling with Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, left a Pentagon team in Pakistan to assess the nation's military requirements.

Zia had earlier shrugged off the U.S. aid offer as "peanuts," and there was no indication whether he and Brzezinski had reached agreement on the size of an aid package. A joint statement said they had a "full exchange of views."

New Mexico riot death toll mounts

State Prison today as hundreds of prisoners huddled in tents outside the compound and stories unfolded of hellish murder, torture and mutilations that left at least 32 inmates dead and scores wounded.

Officials said they expected to find more bodies - perhaps as many as nine - when they were able to get inside the prison gymnasium which was still burning. "I would say we are anticipating as many as 41 total," said Sgt.

George Ulibarri of the New Mexico State Police. "I would expect there are a number of bodies in the gymnasium."

The 36 hours of carnage at the prison, recaptured by National Guard and state police Sunday afternoon, was the most serious since the 1971 Attica riot in New York state left 43 persons dead.

State officials said it may cost as much was $50 million to replace the state's only maximum-security prison which was built to house 850 and was holding 1.136 when the riot erupted early Saturday. In the meantime. Gov. Bruce King appealed today to neighboring states to take some of the prisoners, who spent the night in tentsguarded by 250 National Guardsmen and about 30 policemen

Nine firms settle with OCAW

Combined from staff and wire reports

Nine independent oil companies have settled and met the Oil. Chemical and Atomic Workers Union's (OCAW) counter proposal. Ray Taylor, international representative for the union said today

Of those who settled with the strikers in negotiations last week, were Quaker State Oil Company. Oklahoma Refining Company, Anderson - Prichard Pipeline and Asamara Oil U.S., Inc. according to Taylor.

He also said. San Joaquin Refining Company. Gary Western Company, Asamara Marketing Truck Drivers. Pster Refining Company and Quad Refining .Company joined with the four other independents in meeting the union's proposals.

Taylor said it was "incredible" how the larger oil companies will not provide the full cost of adequate health care benefits for its wager earners.

"Each of us has experienced the constant increases in the price of gasoline and heating fuel," he said, explaining this has caused oil profits to rise into the triple digit percentage in 1979.

He pointed out the newpaper has run an article titled "Refiners blamed for price increases", in which it states, he said, "Congressional investigators say U.S. Refiners took more than $3 billion in unwarreanted profits last year through unjustified price increases for heating oil and diwsel fuel.

"Isn't this exploiting the consumer, wage earning workers striving for food, shelter, clothing and medical care while U.S. oil companies continue their greed for astronomical profits?" he said. Taylor said that approximately 550 workers are now

More than 60,000 refinery workers across the country went out after Jan. 8 in support of demands for higher wages and improved health benefits. More than 500 employees in other states were scheduled to return to work Monday after their employers reached weekend settlements with the OCAW.

"I believe all our represented employees are out, but I don't have a count," said Bob Wilburn, district superintendent at the Amoco plant in Levelland. "I don't know how many of my non-union members will Wilburn said there are about 100 employees - less than half members of the union - at five sites in his district. He said pickets were up at two of sites.

Pickets were reported up at some of the 23 sites in Levelland, Andrews, Brownfield and Hobbs, N.M. But. only one of more than 200 employees at Amoco's seven Odessa-area sites was unaccounted for, said superintendent Jim York.

Youth Center plans

Today marked ground breaking ceremonies for the $375,000 expansion that will add 25,000 sq. ft. to the facilities of the Pampa Youth and Community Center.

Ground breaking ceremonies were dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Inez Carter who played a major role in making the dream of a Youth and Community Center in Pampa come true. Mrs. Carter, a longtime philanthropist, bought and donated ten acres of land to the Youth Center.

Fred Neslage, presdient of the board of directors of the Youth Center, opened the ceremonies and introduced Frank Carter son of Mrs. Inez Carter and her benefactor.

Neslage told of Pampa's appreciation to the M. K. Brown Foundation for the $250,000 donation used to start expansion of the center. In December, 1979, Neslage accepted the donation from Bill Walters, chairman of the M.K. Brown Foundation. Walters said at the time "There was considerable search by the board members as to what we could best do. The Pampa Youth and Community Center is the best and most worthy project to which we could contribute."

The M.K. Brown Foundation has been instrumental in improvements to the community. Neslage said, "The M.K. Brown and is a continuing memorial to Mr. Brown."

Plans for community donations were started immediately, and it was estimated that $100,000 to $125,000 would be needed in addition to the M.K. Brown contribution to complete construction. Kirk Duncan and David Fatheree have volunteered to chair the fund raising. They are working to reach all those in Pampa and local areas who are willing to contribute. Bill Walters was on hand today to see the $250,000 donation put to active use. The Youth Center was built in 1961 and since that time three additions have been constructed The center hosts 125,000 persons a year to participate in the various activities offered.

The Ritter Company was in charge of the original building and will now be in charge of constructing the addition. Allen Ritter was present for the latest ground breaking Mayor Ray Thompson offered thanks to another organization. 'The Pampa Chamber of Commerce is dedicated to the growth and development of our community. Our chamber is always involved in events and projects that make Pampa a better place to live.

Khomeini supports rebs

By The Associated Press Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini

today strongly condemned the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and pledged "unconditional" support for the Moslem rebels in Iran's eastern neighbor.

In his first comment on the Soviet move into Afghanistan in late December, Khomeini said it is the duty of Moslems everywhere to oppose aggression around the world.

We strongly condemn the military invasion of Afghanistan," the 79-year-old religious leader said in a message delivered by his son to tens of thousands of Iranians gathered to celebrate the birthday of the Prophet

"We are Moslems and for Moslems there is no East or West, it is our duty to condemn any aggression, that is an Islamic ritual," the ailing head of Iran's revolutionary government said.

Khomeini remained in a Tehran hospital where he is recovering from a mild heart attack while a huge throng met at Tehran's main cemetery to listen to his message as well as a speech from President-elect Abolhassan Bani Sadr Bani Sadr. who already has pledged Iranian aid to the Afghan Moslems, delivered a similar message pledging support for "our Moslem. brothers in Afghanistan, Palestine and the Philippines. Bani Sadr is to be sworn in before Khomeini today.

Meanwhile, the Iranian government agreed to an international commission to consider its charges against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and said it "will be effective in solving the hostage crisis."

"The international investigation commission will consider the shah's crimes, his violation of human rights and the return of his wealth to Iran." Khomeini's ruling Revolutionary Council announced over the weekend.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Nassirosadat Salami said the commission "will be effective in solving the hostage crisis." However, Bani Sadr in an interview with ABC-TV indicated that the U.S. government must help Iran get the shah back for trial before the hostages will be freed.

Why water problems are very complex

When a bureaucrat recognizes the bureaucracy as being a ball-and-chain on the leg of progress, it is worthy of some comment.

A short time ago Charles E. Nemir, assistant executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, spoke during the annual convention of the National Water Resources Association in Denver. His topic was "An Overview of Current Water Issues and Concerns."

He said water problems, which have grown incredibly complex with the increase in governmental entities, plus laws, rules, guidelines and regulations, really are "quite simple." All it takes, he added, to simplify a water problem is four things: (1) raise all the money that is needed; (2) get all the politicians in favor of it; (3) get the environmentalists off our backs, and (4) keep the federal government out of it — "and I can assure that all of the water that is needed will be available." But, he added, "each of these factors is, of course, quite complicated in itself." He pointed out that in Texas, in addition to the Department of Water Resources, there are a number of other state agencies that have some involvement and interest in water, including the Health Department, General Land Office, State Soil and Water Conservation Board, Parks and Wildlife Department, Railroad Commission and State Universities. There are 15 major river authorities, too, Nemir said, and a number of major municipal water supply districts, each with water development and management responsibilities in their river basins and areas of jurisdiction.

Also, he said, there are more than 900 other specially created water districts, five specially created underground water management districts, five interstate compacts and an International Treaty with

One may wonder that there is a drop of water at all in Texas to drink or to use otherwise, with all these hands dabbling in it. But there are others: the Department of Agriculture (Soil Conservation Service). Farmers Home Administration, Department of Defense (Corps of Engineers), Department of Interior-Water and Power Resources Service, U.S. Geological Survey, Fish and Wildlife, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, Department of Commerce - National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, National Weather Service, Bureau of Sports Fisheries, Economic Development Administration, Environmental Protection Agency, U.S. Water Resources Council.

Also there are various private sector groups strongly influential in what action is taken in water development and the solving of water problems, and, of course, one must remember the various association. Too, one can't overlook other dabblers in the water hole, among them being the League of Women Voters, the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth and the Save the Animals organization.

To top all this off, there are so many Acts of Congress related to water that they squeezed the alphabet dry naming them.

Water may turn out to be the American's most pressing problem, but it need not be that way if the four things (above) Nemir, himself a bureaucrat, listed as the curative actions. One feels there may be some hope for a fresh drink of water vet in the Lone Star State when a bureaucrat faces up to the facts at the edge of the diminishing water

Drinkable dollars

The Federal Reserve system annually wastes $15 billion That's waste in the contemporary sense of destroying. These are worn-out greenbacks withdrawn from circulation and shredded, much of the result being sold for such prosaic uses as landfill and insulation

We are indebted to Omni Magazine for word of a new use for old money. A federally funded project has come up with a way to convert tattered bills into sugar. Enzymes break down the cellulose and turn it into sucrose

That is not, however, the end of the process. The sugar can then be fermented to produce drinkable alcohol That certainly sounds like an innovation. But in a way it's another example of the more things change, the more they are just the same. By some standards, the booze might be considered just another form of highly individualized insulation.

Liberty is founded on private property

Our village council is about to buy five acres of land for $13,500, or $2,700 an acre. Some Midwest farmers are selling land for as much as $3,500 an acre, which may be in the area of 700 percent more than they paid for it years ago. Is it immoral to make a 700 percent profit?

Of course it is not. When one offers his property, be it land or corn or oil or labor, for sale, he is right to offer it for all he can get. This is his right as an owner of Property, sad to say, is a dirty word nowadays. People apologize for it, excuse it. condemn it, but seldom extol it. To many it signifies something they do not have much of (but want greatly). Those who do have a great deal of it must have stolen it, so they are crooks, while we poor folks are angels. Property, like a woman's beauty, arouses jealousy.

The fact is that property is a natural right. Every free person owns his own body. He is born with that right, and no one can legitimately take it away from him. To do so would be to enslave him, and slavery is evil if anything is.

Every person also owns things which have been freely willed, given, or sold to him, such as his clothes, his car, his tools and diverse belongings. These are private, personal property, that is, they belong to him and him alone. They enable him to live and to live better. He may also have land, called "real" property. — though all property is real — which society under its accepted rules recognizes as his and which he uses to produce more goods with which to live better

If these things that we call property were not recognized as belonging to anybody in particular, they would be subject to raids by all. No one would take care of them. No productive uses. All would exploit and waste them. The struggle to get them would entail constant warfare.

Private property is simply a universal understanding that what is mine is mine and what is thine is thine. It is an agreement that such a mutual understanding makes for order and serves the good of all. A crying need today is that people understand and respect this institution better, become more conscious of its importance, and speak out more frankly and forcefully in its defense.

Our cities are racked by crime and violence. We set up police forces to protect our lives against marauders, but the protection is only partial. Local governments are falling short of providing security for human life. Can it be because of the dwindling, respect for human property?

people's homes, cars and businesses is hardly likely to be zealous to protect their lives. Life and property rise and fall: together. Respect for one breeds respect for the other.

I am suggesting there is a close relation between the crime wave of which we have become as conscious in recent years and the belittling-of-property wave which has been flooding us for the last generation. Until we make the world safe for property. it will not be safe for people.

What we call capitalism is founded on private property. To be of value, property must be reasonably secure from both human marauders and natural forces that might destroy it. To achieve such security, capitalists teach respect for property rights and establish institutions and forces for their protection.

Human beings, too, need protection from the same kinds of perils. The institutions police and fire departments, for example which are set up to protect property also protect people. Security for inert things becomes security for living beings, also. A property-owning society is also a human

To get property, people ecnomize, save and accumulate. This means they sacrifice present consumption in order that more may be consumed in future. Often it means a giving up by the present generation for the sake of future generations.

Early American capitalists were dubbed "robber barons," but we today enjoy the use of capital which they saved in the form of structures, highways, bridges, railroads, churches, universities, museums, inventions, reservoirs, etc., etc.

Today's capitalists, too, are producing and saving wealth in durable forms nuclear power plants for one - which will not yield its whole product until far in the future. In a property-owning, property-respecting society, a vast amount of this planning and producing for future

Most damning aspect

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If there is any recent event more curious than Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's 1969 auto accident on Chappaquiddick Island, it surely is the bizarre 1980 debate over the tidal current on the night of the accident.

Two influential publications, the Reader's Digest and The Washington Star. inexplicably decided late last year to launch major investigations into one of the most obscure and inconsequential elements of the Chappaquiddick controversy

Both publications committed considerable resources to detailed probes of the direction and velocity of the tide in Katama Bay, which separates Chappaquiddick Island from the larger island of Martha's Vineyard, in the hours immediately following the infamous

Kennedy responded in kind, spending at least $10,000 for legal fees and expenses incurred by a pair of $80-an-hour admiralty lawyers and enlisting the services of a professor of ocean engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Depending upon which of the three accounts (Kennedy's, the Digest's or the Star's) is to be believed. Katama Bay was either open to the sea at its south end or closed at the time of the accident, the tide in the bay was flowing from either the north or the south and the current was either weak and slack or so swift it almost swept Kennedy out to sea.

But all of that conflicting information concerns a single event that is only marginally relevant to the accident itself the senator's middle-of-the-night swim from Chappaquiddick to Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard, where his hotel room was located.

Moreover. Kennedy's successful navigation of the 500-foot channel in Edgartown harbor never has been disputed. Indeed, it's one of the few universally accepted elements of his otherwise dubious account of the events on the night of July 18-19, 1969.

At issue only is the senator's claim that he was "absolutely exhausted" by the swim because of a strong tidal flow from the south and "a current pulling me out oward the sea.

But even if it could be proven that he overdramatized, exaggerated or lied about the tide, far more fundamental questions would remain unresolved. Among them: -What were Kennedy's motives.

intentions and proposed destination when he drove from a party with a young woman? -Why did he wait 10 hours before reporting the accident to local law enforcement authorities? -Was Kennedy-inspired political influence responsible for the failure of those authorities to ever conduct an open hearing or a full investigation into the accident If the news media have failed to advance the state of the art while concocting a tempest in a teapot, Kennedy and his aides once again have displayed the contempt for the public's intelligence that has become the hallmark of the senator's facile post-accident explanations. For more than 101/2 years, neither

Kennedy nor anyone representing him ever scheduled a press conference specifically to discuss the incident. But Stephen E. Smith, the senator's brother-in-law and campaign manager, finally did so on the day the story in the Digest's February issue was to be released.

We were not given an opportunity to review these allegations in advance of publication," an indignant Smith complained. "Basic standards of fairness require a chance to respond to allegations before they are published." But the Digest claimed that it repeatedly asked Senator Kennedy for an interview so that he could respond to the deeply troubling question" while the story was being prepared. "He would not agree to meet with us," the magazine said.

When Kennedy's press secretary was questioned about those conflicting claims, he admitted that the magazine's request indeed had been received - but was rejected because it came "at a point where the senator was extraordinarily busy.'

That episode typifies the most damning evidence against Kennedy with regard to Chappaquiddick. For more than a decade, he has played fast and loose with the facts, offering only lame excuses when pressed for specific explanations.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Pill celebrates 20th birthday

This is the 20th anniversary of the Pill. In 1960. Americans were introduced to a new birth control method which was radically different from any which had gone before. It was love at first sight. Oral contraceptives rapidly gained immense popularity because they were easy to use and highly effective.

Side effects were considered rare and at worst a minor inconvenience. Many women wht experienced nausea, weight gai, fluid retention, or breast tenderness were willing to trade off a little discomfort for the security of a "sure

Today, however, the love affair is showing signs of cooling. Prescriptions for birth control pills have dropped by nearly 25 percent since 1975, while sales of diaphragms and condoms have jumped dramatically.

Countless articles in medical journals as well as popular press have raised serious questions about the safety of oral contraceptives. Although adverse reactions were not frequently reported in the early years we are now aware of many problems which weren't even suspected when the Pill was introduced. Each serious side effect may be relatively uncommon, but sheer numbers make them important. A British study of 46,000 women discovered that the most common risk was death from heart attack, stroke or other circulatory system diseases. One extra death per 5,000 users may not sound like much, but with close to eight million women in this country on birth control pills, that could amount to as many as 1,600 deaths every year in the U.S. alone.

Until this study was published, most proponents of the Pill claimed that risks from oral contraceptives themselves were lower than the risks involved in pregnancy and childbirth. But the British investigators found that deaths from complications of pregnancy and even accidents were less common than deaths which could be attributed directly to oral contraceptive

The risk of heart attack, brain hemorrhage or other diseases is not identical for every woman Those in their late 30s or older are more susceptible to such a fate, and women who smoke and also take birth control pills are asking for big trouble

The combination of cigarettes and these drugs increases the chance of death dramatically. A study at Kaiser-Permanente in Walnut Creek. Calif., found that smokers who used oral contraceptives were almost 22 times more likely to suffer strokes than nonsmokers who did not

There are other risks associated with oral contraceptive use, too, although all are less common than the blood clotting disorders.

Some women on the Pill - about six out of 10,000 - develop gallbladder disease. Women who have taken birth control pills for seven years or longer are also more likely to develop a rare. "benign" but serious, liver tumor which may rupture and cause death from internal bleeding.

Both these and the malignant liver tumors which have been reported in oral contraceptive users are so infrequent that scientists have not yet calculated incidence rates, but they are certainly alarming.

Just where, you may be asking, does all this leave a couple trying to decide on a contraceptive method? None of the complications mentioned is very common, and a woman who is young, healthy and a nonsmoker might well opt for the convenience and effectiveness of the Pill.

However, women who have already used oral contraceptives for five years or longer and those over 35 are taking a greater risk. And any woman who smokes while on these drugs should have her head examined

After 20 years, we still haven't discovered a more effective contraceptive than the Pill. But the evidence continues to mount that it's not nearly as safe as we'd like it to be. The final chapter has yet to be written.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman (22) and Mike is wonderful, healthy, robust, masculine man of 25. We've been married a little over a year, and I have a problem I can't ask anyone else about. It has to do with sex. Mike has a big appetite for sex, but I am not complaining. It's his timing that bothers me. He always wants to make love on Sunday morning before mass. Abby, I know that love within marriage is not a sin, but for some silly reason I just hate to go to mass right after having had sex. Lately I have been putting my husband off. But I feel guilty about

Do you think I should postpone the lovemaking until after mass? Or keep telling myself I have no reason to feel guilty about it, and just try to get over that feeling. What's wrong with me?

DEAR MAGGIE: Your problem is rooted in the notion that sex is sinful. You grew up believing it, and even though you're married and there is nothing to feel guilty about, you're still programmed to equate sex with sin. Talk to a priest, or a psychiatrist. (Try the priest first. It's cheaper.)

DEAR ABBY: I have been considering donating my organs for possible transplant at the time of my death. However, I have heard that the family of the deceased is charged for transportation to the special hospital where the organs are removed, and also for the surgery to remove the ns. Is this true?

If it is, I would rather not donate my organs since I do not wish to add to the expense of my funeral. Thank you.

CONSIDERATE DEAR CONSIDERATE: There is no charge for transportation to hospitals for the removal of organs. Time is so important in the removal of organs that a donor almost always has to be in the hospital at the time of death. (Corneas must be removed within four hours after death; kidneys within 20 minutes!) There is no cost to the donor or the donor's family for the removal of organs. However, when one donates his entire body to a medical school, in some states the medical school bears the cost of transportation. In other states, the estate of the donor must pay for it. Check with your local medical school. DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and son-in-law smoke pot, and readily admit to smoking it in the presence of their 4-yearold son. This has me terribly upset. I've talked to my daughter about it and her attitude is "Why hide it from him? It's healthier not to do things on the sly. Besides, we want him to grow up knowing what it's all about."

I just can't believe her attitude, Abby! When my little grandson told me that his mother smoked "joints," I was shocked that he even knew what it meant. Wouldn't you think 30-year-old parents would know better? Am I not

DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You are, indeed, justified. Unfortunately, the long-term effects of habitual pot smoking are not yet known, but recent studies reveal that marijuana is far from the "harmless" drug many thought it was. Tell your daughter this, and tell her, too, that while it is "healthier" to be totally aboveboard with her son, he will grow up thinking pot is OK, and no doubt will imitate his parents and smoke it. Your daughter and her husband are guilty of child abuse. Please try to educate her.

As a general rule, I tell women that if they're past 50 and have apparently gone through the menopause and haven't had any periods for more than two years, they can be relatively certain that there's no danger of getting pregnant. If they want to shorten that period of time, then I insist that they have a medical examination before abandoning birth control.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My husband has an ear infection. He claims and thinks I cause it. During our lovemaking, I often lick his ear and run my tongue along the inside. I have been doing this for over a year but this is the first time he has complained of an infection. However, he's had an infection in both his molars this past week and although his teeth no longer bother him, I think the infection could have spread to his ears. Is it possible for me to give him an ear infection in the way he

DEAR READER - The first question is whether he really has an infection or not. He may have referred pain from your habit other than those associated with moisture in the ears. This is not greatly different from what happens with swimmer's ear or a person who traps water in his ears from a shower. In that case, the retained moisture might allow an infection, particularly a fungus infection, to develop.

I would suggest that if he's having an ear problem he should see an ear, nose and throat doctor and let him see if he really has an infection there. If he does, it can be treated with drying agents and other measures. He may have an excess amount of ear wax that causes him to trap moisture in the ear. And, of course, if he resorts to using ear drops, you may want to change your habits.

Small flower arrangements can brighten any room, home

Everyone knows the decorating wonders that are performed when flowers enter a room. But what many people don't realize is that small arrangements can make a big impact.

Flowers don't have to be formally arranged to be good accents There's a wealth of decorating potential waiting at the local florist

Here are some tips on how to be your own decorator with small groups of flowers. The container is as important as what goes into it. If possible, incorporate an element of the room as the container. For example, if a room contains wicker furniture, a basket would be a well chosen container. Secondly, consider color. Flowers are excellent for bringing out hidden colors in a room. If your room is predominantly brown, but there's a yellow chair you like, yellow flowers will make the chair A few more hints on color: avoid using colors in equal amounts. A good ratio is one-third bold colored flowers and two-thirds subdued. More than four colors in an arrangement look confusing.

How about hanging flowers the way you hang plants? Insert a plastic bowl into a basket suspended from the ceiling over a table or in a corner over some foliage plants. When flowers and mirrors team up, magical things happen. Round arrangements set on a counter in front of a mirror can brighten up a Decorating with small bunches of flowers allows you the joy of creating your own arrangements.

Cut stems to varying lengths to give the arrangements dimension Always insert the tallest flower first. Cut off all leaves from the part of the stems that will be under water. Place flowers in tepid water mixed with floral preservative solution to prolong their lives. Stems criss-crossed under water will hold each other in place. Criss-crossed lilies. mums or gladioluses in a clear bowl are very modern, airy and natural looking.

Farm prices at best, and worst, in past decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking back at crop prices in the 1970s, the decade was some of the best and worst of times for producers,

The Agriculture Department's monthly price report issued last week provides plenty of raw material for anyone interested in hashing over what happened the last 10 years or so.

Mainly, however, the report regularly shows what happened to commodity prices at the farm from one month to another, including comparisons with a year earlier.

But once a year it also includes prices going back for some time. sort of a track record that can illustrate trends in prices for key commodities.

Taking four as examples, the report showed that in 1979 farmers saw wheat prices nationally average $3.51 a bushel; corn. $2.36 a bushel; soybeans. $6.86 a bushel; and cotton, 58 cents a pound.

That does not mean all producers got those prices last year for what they sold. Prices vary regionally and seasonally. It simply illustrates, for comparison purposes, how price averages in one calendar year stack up against other years.

On that basis, here is how some of those looked: Wheat - farm prices in the 10-year period, 1970-79, averaged $2.74

a bushel, with the lowest prices coming in the earliest years prior to the huge world demand for grain, including opening of the Soviet Union's market, in 1972-73.

In 1970, the farm price of wheat averaged $1.33 a bushel and then edged to $1.36 in 1971. In the following year, as the export boom was in its infancy, wheat prices rose to $1.57 Subsequently, wheat prices averaged $3.16 in 1973, a record annual level of $4.48 in 1974, $3.68 in 1975, $3.15 in 1976, $2.29 in 1977, and $2.82

Corn — the 10-year average was $2.02. Beginning with an average of $1.23 a bushel in 1970, the annual prices followed at $1.27 in 1971. $1.17 in 1972, $1.89 in 1973, a record of $2.92 in 1974, $2.70 in 1975, $2.49 in 1976, $2.03 in 1977, and $2.10 in 1978.

Soybeans - the 10-year average was $5.25 a bushel, including $2.60 in 1970. $2.94 in 1971, $3.30 in 1972. $6.50 in 1973, $6.42 in 1974, $5.24 in 1975. $5.58 in 1976, $6.82 in 1977, and $6.28 in 1978. The record was last year's average of $6.86 a bushel.

Cotton — the 10-year average was 43.3 cents a pound, including 21.6 cents in 1970; 24.4 in 1971; 29.0 in 1972; 32.5 in 1973; 51.3 in 1974; 41.2 in 1975: 59.7 in 1976: 60.5 in 1977, which probably was a record, at least

As any farmer knows and most economists agree, prices alone do not mean much. Obviously, a farmer whose crop was wiped out does not benefit from high prices or suffer from low prices.

Also, increasingly important over the last 10 years, rising production costs have leaned heavily on farmers and have put big dents in net incomes.

An annual report by the Agriculture Department shows egg production last year increased by 3 per cent to 69.1 billion eggs. The department's egg year runs from Dec. 1 through the following

Last year, the report said, producers had an average of nearly 288.2 million hens in laying flocks, an increase from 281.5 million in 1978-79.

Not only that, officials said, the annual average production per hen was 240 eggs, compared to 239 the previous year.

California was the leading producer with more than 8.7 billion eggs last year, followed by Georgia, 6.1 billion; and Arkansas, 4.1 billion.

The number of dairy farms declined about 6 percent last year according to the Agriculture Department.

In 1979, officials said, farms having "milk cow operations" totaled 351.970 units, compared to 375,110 in 1978. An "operation" is any place having one or more head of cows on hand at any time during the year, the report explained. Looking at the report from another perspective, today's Farm Paper Letter — published weekly by the department — noted that the five states with the most dairy operations "now have 37.5 percent of the total, compared to only 36 percent a year ago."

The leaders, it said, are: Wisconsin, 45,000 milk cow operations; Minnesota, 28,000; Pennsylvania, 22,000; New York, 19,500; and Iowa, 15,000

Also, the Farm Paper Letter said, a survey shows that 63.2 percent of the dairy operations still have fewer than 30 cows each and account for only 14.8 percent of the total number of dairy cows in the United States.

This compares to 64.8 percent of the operations with less than 30 cows a year ago," it said. "They accounted for 15.9 percent of the dairy cows.

Nurse still claims Jones raped her

DALLAS (AP) - It's not enough that a 25-year-old nurse has dropped rape charges against boxer Ed "Too Tall" Jones - she also must stop saying the rape took place, says an attorney for the former defensive end for the Dallas Cowboys.

"Nobody wants to harm this woman," said Dallas lawyer Fred Time. "But she keeps saying, 'I dropped charges, but he still raped

"The only way we would not do anything is if she comes out and says she was not raped. At this point, we will leave it up to her.' However, Time refused to confirm reports that a libel suit is being considered against the

"That would be something that is up to Too Tall. He's the one making those decisions. You could go in and win a suit like that, but do you think that erases it from the public mind? "There will always be a question."

Jones was arrested early Thursday after the woman told police he raped her in her apartment several hours earlier. Jones denied the accusation. He was released

Thursday on $2,500 bond and late Friday, the woman signed a document saying she did not wish to press the charges.

"It did happen," the woman said this weekend But I just want to forget the whole thing.

Police investigators and county prosecutors had expressed reservations about the complaint. A source at Parkland Memorial Hospital said tests taken there indicated there was no evidence of rape. The woman also told police she had cleansed herself twice with a vinegar and water solution before calling officers. In the original complaint, she said she woke to find Jones on top of her in bed. The woman said she and her roommate had met Jones and a Dallas physician at a northside disco earlier in the evening

Time said he has "conclusive proof" that the incident did not occur and that proof would be released soon, probably Friday.

"We have virtually wrapped up our case and have conclusive evidence that there was no rape," he said. "And next week, we'll be holding a press conference in which we'll be able to show everyone that Ed was innocent.

"We have spoken to more than a dozen witnesses - all the evidence will be presented this week." he said.

Time said the former National Football League star has been besieged with calls of support from all over the country.

"I've talked to people that have called from Canada, Baltimore, Los Angeles, San Fransisco and Dallas saying they are behind him." Time said of his 6-foot-9, 255-pound client.

"And he wants to keep their faith."

Lumberjacks in first place

By the Associated Press For the first time in eight years, the Stephen F. Austin Lumber jacks are in first-place in the Lone Star Conference basketball race.

Picked no better than seventh in a pre-season poll. SFA benefited from a split between Howard Payne and Abilene Christian last week that left it with a 7-1 record, while Abilene Christian fell to 6-2 and Howard Payne to 5-2.

Harry Miller's Lumberjacks defeated Texas A&I twice, by 86-71 in Nacogdoches and then by 60-58 in Kingsville Saturday.

Howard Payne and Abilene Christian each won on the road in their head-up matches. That was unexpected. Howard Payne nipped Abilene Christian 56-54 in Abilene on Monday o Marshall Davis' 12-foot jumper 8 seconds left.

East Africa's biggest newspaper said President Carter made a mistake in picking the former world heavyweight champion for the mission. It accused the president of bidding for the black vote in the United States.

Arriving in Dar es Salaam Sunday for the first stop on his five-nation tour. Ali was asked by local reporters why Africans should boycott the Moscow Games since the Soviets provide aid to black liberation movements and black African countries

"They didn't tell me in America that Russia supports these countries." Ali replied as U.S. Embassy officials squirmed. "Maybe I'm being used to do something that ain't right. You all have given me some questions which are good and which are making me look at this thing different.

"To me, Russia's a bad country, but I don't know what Russia did for you. You tell me that the Russians are more your friends than the Americans. We're all brothers, and I'm closer to you than I am to white Americans or white Russians.

"They want us to stop," Ali continued as the Embassy officials tried to cut the news conference short. "But I'm learning. ... I'm no traitor to black people...I'm not here to do nothing against Africa. I'm not here to promote no role for America. ring gold prices fail to affect miners' pay

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - The soaring price of gold is making South Africa richer than ever, but the bonanza isn't raising the pay yet of the black miners who dig most of it.

South Africa is the world's biggest gold producer, and the price rise has boosted the country's official reserves from $2.5 billion to $7 billion in the last year.

The government is considering a tax cut, and Finance Minister Owen Horwood has predicted an improvement in the standard of living. But the average pay of black miners is about $180 a month. less than a third of the price of an ounce of gold, and mining officials say there won't be immediate pay hikes.

"We cannot tie the wages of our labor force to the price of gold because that would mean cutting wages when the price went down," said Dennis Etheredge, head of the gold division of the country's biggest mining company. Anglo-American.

However, a publication of the Chamber of Mines, an association of mining companies, notes that between 1972 and 1978 black wages rose more than 600 percent. "The rise in the gold price...provided the means for increase in black wages."

Many mining companies have adopted a policy of increasing black wages at a higher rate than white pay, recognizing what the chamber called "the moral requirement to move away from an unacceptably low wage structure forced on the industry by the economics of a fixed

Winter boosts winter fire hazards

An unattended fireplace. A carelessly placed electric heater. An oven door left open for heat. These are the things that tragedy is made of during " the winter months. More than 6,000 persons died in fires in 1978, according to the National Safety Council. More than · four out of five were killed in residential fires. Fire prevention officials say there is a definite increase in the number of fires in the winter. People spend more time indoors and turn to makeshift sources of heat to keep warm.

According to statistics collected by the U.S. Fire Administration, more than 10 percent of all residential fires are associated with heating devices.

The National Bureau of Standards says that many people also underestimate the time it takes a fire to spread. According to the bureau, you may have only two minutes from the time a fire begins until the room is engulfed by what's known as the "flashover." If you. have any doubt about your ability to put out a fire quickly and easily, leave the house immediately. Don't wait to call the fire department. Use a neighbor's telephone.

Here are some of the things you can do to avoid trouble: PORTABLE ELECTRIC HEATERS

Look for a model with a broad, solid base and an automatic cut-off switch that will turn the heater off if it tips over accidentally. Check to see if the heater has been tested by one of the major laboratories and make sure the test applies to the entire unit - not just to the cord.

Find out if your heater needs a separate electric circuit. Don't try to take shortcuts and assume you will be safe. Have an electrician install proper wiring before you use the heater and always follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Keep heaters away from curtains, furniture and walkways and do not use them to dry clothing. As a general rule, if a wall or nearby object feels hot to the touch, it is too close to the heater. Warn children not to poke fingers or toys through protective guards and keep a close eye on toddlers whenever they are in the same room with heaters. Avoid using electric space heaters in bathrooms. Never touch one with wet hands. KITCHEN STOVES

Never use a gas range or oven to heat your kitchen. It could produce potentially dangerous levels of carbon

Do not leave oven doors on any kind of stove open. Children can burn themselves on heating elements. NON-ELECTRIC SPACE HEATERS

Make sure there is proper ventilation. Many fuels, including kerosene, propane and coal, produce deadly fumes. You also need to get fresh air to prevent suffocation that can be caused by a heater consuming oxygen as fuel burns.

El Paso shooting spree leaves 5 dead; 3 hurt

EL PASO, Texas (AP) -Three "heroes" did their best against a gunman who sprayed a bar with rifle fire, but could not prevent him from killing five patrons and wounding three others in this city's worst mass killing in history, police said.

Police Lt. Ed Agan said the suspect, identified as Barry Chvarak, 21, of El Paso, was subdued and held for police by two bar patrons, and a third customer died when he stepped in the path of a bullet apparently intended for a woman.

Chvarak was jailed under $1 million bond - $200,000 on each of five counts of murder - setby Peace Justice Fred Chavez One of those killed was identified as Randy Wayne Steele. 20, of El Paso.

There are three heroes in this." Agan said. "Steele, I understand, when the shooting started pushed a young woman out of the way and stepped in front of her and took a bullet that I guess would have gotten

"Another man, a patron named John M. Harris, he jumped the suspect after the shooting had started ... and was able to take the rifle away after another patron, Roger Dean Miller, came to his aid. He (Miller) clobbered this guy with a pool cue."

Agan identified the other victims as Kathleen Lynn Austin. 32. Marianne Laweka. 53. and Jana L. Carpenter, 29. all of El Paso, and Fredrick Bergford, 28, a soldier at Fort Police have been unable to determine a motive. In fact, Agan said, "There doesn't seem to be one. The guy was with his brother ... there was no fight.

"He was upset, for what reason I don't know. He went outside to his vehicle, got a 22-caliber rifle, walked back into the bar and cut loose. I don't even believe he even knew the people he was shooting at."

Two 19-year-old men were treated for minor gunshot wounds, and a 20-year-old woman was hospitalized in stable condition with two gunshot wounds in her chest.

Oil company betting millions on new Gulfstream jet plane

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) - Tesoro Petroleum Corp., a San Antonio-based company, is betting $105 million on the Gulfstream, a corporate jet capable of flying non-stop from Atlanta to Paris.

The first production model of the Gulfstream III is to roll out of the Gulfstream American Corp.'s plant across from the Savannah airport in April.

Tesoro was fully aware of that last week when it announced plans to acquire Gulfstream American. The $105 million purchase is the oil and gas company's first non-oil acquisition.

Tesoro, with sales of $2.4 billion last year, has operations including an Alaskan refinery and extensive marketing operations in California. "Tesoro believes that the acquisition of Gulfstream will enhance its corporate development by strengthening our balance sheet and providing future earnings for energy expenditures," said Michael McDonald, Tesoro's senior vice president for finance.

"Although a portion of Gulfstream's anticipated revenues will be reinvested for maintaining that company's top-ranking executive aircraft business; Tesoro believes Gulfstream will generate substantial additional profits that would be available for Tesoro's further development as an energy company," he

The acquisition is subject to ratification by Tesoro's board and stockholders. It is to be completed "as soon as practicable" after the Federal Aviation Administration certifies the Gulfstream III. Paulson said

Congressman gives up race to begin work on alcoholism

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) -South Texas Congressman Joe Wyatt broke into tears when he told a news conference he would withdraw from his re-election campaign to work on conquering his alcoholism.

The 39-year-old former state representative said he decided to drop out of the race Jan. 9. when he checked into Bethesda Naval Hospital for an alcoholism treatment program.

"I have realized for some time that I had a very severe drinking problem." Wyatt told reporters Saturday. "On numerous occasions close friends have told me that I have this problem and that problem had to be corrected. It was excellent advice that I did not continue treatment until Feb. "This a problem I intend to overcome. It is a problem that is going to be with me for the rest of my life," he added. Wyatt said it was more important to tend to his personal problems than to fight a campaign he said he would be filled with invendoes.

He denied reports that he initiated a homosexual attack May 3 on a man he met in a Washington bar.

Wyatt said he had suffered blackouts because of heavy drinking, and apparently suffered one on the night in

No charges were ever filed in the case.

Wyatt, who said he plans to serve out the final year of his term, was elected to the Texas Legislature in 1971 and served four terms. In 1977 he was named outstanding legislator by Texas Monthly magazine.

How to solve space

BARBARA MAYER Newsfeatures

First came window-pane checks - for clothing, in flooring, on sheets and in decorative fabrics. And then, it dawned on designers that the grid pattern lent itself naturally to other, three-dimensional products.

Out of this design insight have come hanging storage grids which were shown by a number of manufacturers at the recent National Housewares Exposition in Chicago.

According to Kenneth Brozen, designer of a grid storage system now being marketed by Copco, Inc., the storage grid, which may be on its way to becoming a basic home-storage product, "is a creative response to the boredom of pegboard.

"We saw so much of the grid pattern around that we began to say to ourselves. 'Why not make a useful product of it?'" said

Most of the grid storage systems being marketed now are very simple. "That's their strength. It's a basic product with only a few variations that is useful all over the house," he noted.

Copco's system is fairly typical. It provides a grid based on a 30-inch module plus fasteners and shelves and bins that attach to the grid and make it possible to hang or otherwise keep a large number of items accessibly out in the open. Other companies marketing grid systems include Heller Designs. Inc., the Graff Group and McGrady Designs.

These and more new or recently-introduced systems are available to consumers at housewares stores, building-supply outlets and assemble-it-yourself furniture stores.

"The grid is an example of a product that meets a new and urgent need for storage capacity," said Martir Robert, a product designer. "Inflation made building a new home or moving impossible. So people stayed where they were and added on. Now adding on is impossible for many.

Everyone I know is converting part of their home to make room within existing space: A grid system helps one make do. You put it up on the wall and suddenly you have room.

Although some designers, like Kenneth Brozen, have zeroed in on the window pane checks of grids, others have noticed that storage grids and a closely related storage product - wire shelving - got started first as industrial storage and for display

At Taylor & Ng's booth at the housewares show, a metal grid system was used to store and display the company's housewares line. A company executive noted that the system was developed first for Taylor & Ng's own use and then was conceived of as a product to be sold commercially for display purposes.

However, interest shown by retailers is encouraging the company to make it available as a product for home use, as well. Another interesting example of how a commercial product makes its way into the retail-sales arena occurred with a stacking wire-bin system manufactured by United Steel & Wire Co. Inc., a subsidiary of Roblin, Inc. Daniel Berlin, vice president and general manager of the subsidiary, said he brought the bins to Chicago to see if there was any interest in them for home use. One large department store bought them for this purpose and another was considering doing so. The reception has convinced Berlin that the bins and shelves should be redesigned slightly to appeal directly to the home storage market. He got his first clue of its potential when a friend put up an entire wall of it in the kitchen of his $200,000 apartment. Also shown by more than one manufacturer were a number of new ideas for closet storage, consisting of vinyl-covered wire or plain wire drawers, shelves and oth r storage accessories. Lois A. Mackey, an importer of the Elfa closet storage system from Sweden, said a primary appeal of wire storage systems was that they allowed a user to pack so much into a small space. "I got 84 inches of dresser storage into 24 inches of Elfa when I put it in my bedroom and removed a triple dresser," she said.

Pine beetles munching through western trees

MISSOULA. Mont. (AP) - Western foresters are waging war against a bug with a big appetite. The mountain pine beetle is winning, leaving vast forests of rust-colored dead trees.

There is no solid defense against the insects, which have eaten their way along Montana's mountainous backbone - from Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming through Glacier National Park into Canada - infesting 1.4 million acres of forest.

Commercial timber worth millions of dollars is dying in eight national forests in Montana and Idaho. But inside Yellowstone and Glacier, the National Park Service considers the beetles just one more protected species of wildlife.

The U.S. Forest Service admits it is helpless to stem the beetle blight. Once a tree is infested, insecticides won't work — the beetles live beneath the bark. Annual sprayings are saving a few trees in campgrounds.

The Forest Service is responding to the beetle attack by accelerating timber harvest - to salvage timber killed by beetles and by "beetleproofing" uninfested stands by cutting vulnerable trees in the path of the spreading blight.

The bug is doing what we do. harvesting timber." said Jack Usher, the Forest Service's timber management chief for Montana. northern Idaho, North Dakota and western South Dakota. "Either we cut the timber. or the bug is going to get it.

Forest Service entomologist Mark McGregor said the beetle infestation is nothing new. "They've always been around forest stands, and are a natural part of the ecosystems.

The little insect with the long scientific name of "Dendroctonus ponderosae" is a picky eater. It prefers to dine on mature lodgepole pine. aged 70 to 90 years and measuring 7-9 inches in diameter. In a pinch, however, the beetle will turn to other species

Foresters say the epidemic can probably be traced to huge forest fires of nearly a century ago. After the fires, stands of lodgepole now about the same age - sprouted over vast areas of western Montana, northern Idaho and in Yellowstone park.

The beetle epidemic spread by 650,000 acres of lodgepole last year - a 21.5 percent increase in area - sometimes killing as many as 90 percent of the trees.

Lodgepole pines on another 2.2 million acres are the right size and age to be attacked by the beetles.

The tiny insects bore into the bark and lay eggs. The larvae feed on the inner bark tissue, which carries food and water from the roots to the needles. The feeding larvae girdle the trunk and the tree dies. often in two months, but the needles may not turn red-brown until the next year

Researchers say they don't know why beetles find large diameter lodgepole so tasty. Forest Service scientists think the insects may like the combination of chemicals produced by large trees.

Some trees mount their own defenses, drowning the beetles in floods of sap called "pitchouts." Extreme cold is supposed to stymie beetle epidemics. but the severe winter of 1978-79 had little effect.

The beetle epidemics eventually collapse. "It's because they have eaten themselves out of house and home." Usher said.

To meet the ongoing menace, the Forest Service has a five-year plan to increase the timber harvest in the Flathead National Forest by about 27 percent each year, to 144.6 million board feet, and almost double the current harvest in the Gallatin National Forest to about 28.4 million board feet a year.

It takes about 11,000 board feet to build an average wooden house. There will also be more clear-cutting, the controversial practice of removing huge blocks of trees. But in the Yellowstone and Glacier parks, it's live and let live.

McGregor, the Forest Service insect expert, said he was irritated because the National Park Service did nothing to stop the beetles from spreading out of Glacier, where about 1.100 acres were affected in 1972, to infest thousands of acres of Flathead National Forest. The infestation spread to about 228,000 acres in Glacier Park itself last

"It's a sore point with me it was allowed to spread when they could have done something," McGregor said.

Robert Hall, who heads bark beetle studies inside Glacier Park. defended the Park Service strategy.

"They (Forest Service) manage their lands for the economic value of timber and we manage for people to enjoy. If we logged in the park we would destroy more than we would save." Hall said.

More than 431,000 acres in Yellowstone have been attacked by beetles, and the infestation is especially noticeable driving east and north of the west entrance.

Rangers there are issuing information sheets to tourists, saying what occurs naturally is neither good nor bad — but the way should be.

Jim Sweeney, a Yellowstone spokesman, said that "while from a timber growers' aspect pine beetles are a disaster, it should be remembered that it was disasters like floods, earthquakes and even volcanoes that have created the scenery that makes Yellowstone

Body of Houston coed found on Bishop campus

DALLAS (AP) — The 22-vear-old daughter of a Houston minister was found dead near the student union on the campus of Bishop College here Sunday, the apparent victim of a rape and strangulation, police said.

Homicide investigator Jerry King said the partially nude body of Allene Beatrice Hines was found by two students behind a 6-foot enclosure Sunday afternoon. King said dozens of students probably walked past the enclosure without finding Ms. Hines, who was killed sometime early Saturday.

It (the enclosure) wasn't isolated. It didn't have a roof and the wall was open. You could see inside it when you were walking by." said a campus security guard who refused to give his name.

Dallas County Medical Examiners have scheduled an autopsy for

Two students told police they found several personal papers of Ms. Hines' outside the enclosure and found her body when they looked inside. King said. He said the contents of her purse were scattered inside the enclosure:

King said the Houston music major was last seen about 1 a.m. Saturday as she left her campus dormitory after returning earlier from a sorority rush party at Southern Methodist University. Another dorm resident told police Ms. Hines asked about her car as she left the building, he said. Investigators theorize she was killed on the way to the parking lot. Initial reports from the medical examiner's office indicate the victim had been raped and probably strangled.

Debate scheduled for legal burglary by federal agents

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is ready to propose that U.S. intelligence agents, with the permission of a secret court, be allowed to burglarize the homes and offices and open the mail of Americans suspected of spying.

Though Carter's proposal won't be unveiled before Friday, debate already has begun over whether such intrusions should be regulated

The first question is whether break-ins and mail-openings should be permitted against any American believed to be acting for a foreign power or whether those tactics should be employed only when there is specific evidence of an American's criminal conduct.

If the standard requires evidence of a crime, the next question concerns how much evidence.

Civil libertarians are prepared to argue for the most restrictive standard, allowing break-ins and mail-openings only when the secret court finds hard evidence a crime has been or will be committed. But conservatives in Congress seem likely to resist subjecting these tactics to court scrutiny, even in secret.

The controversy is developing as Carter polishes details of his proposed comprehensive charter governing intelligence-gathering by the CIA. FBI and other agencies.

Carter, in his State of the Union message, said increased U.S.-Soviet tensions require loosening some of the restrictions placed on these agencies after past abuses came to light in the 1970s.

It was the second attack on

Tripoli in about two months. On Dec. 2. about 2,000 Libyans chanting support for Iran stormed and ransacked the American Embassy Ambassador Claude Malo was the last person to leave the embassy building and reached his residence safely. Communications with the embassy were cut, they said.

A spokesman for President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said such actions called for energetic condemnation and a very vigorous protest.
