Pampa, Texas

50¢ DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Low tonight in low 30s, high tomorrow near 70. See Page 2 for weather details.

PAMPA — A fire Sunday morning in the ingredient bins of Tejas Feeders caused little major structure damage, according to spokesman Leo Vermedahl.

Pampa firefighters responded twice — with five personnel at 6:05 a.m. and again with 18 personnel at 8:14 a.m. — Sunday and reported damage to the inside of the bins.

The bins were glowing red from the intense heat of the fire, said Capt. Kim Powell this morning.

Vermedahl said no damage estimate was known, but an insurance adjuster was expected today.

Firefighters responded again this morning to Tejas on a report of smoldering hay.

PAMPA — Gray County commissioners are to meet at 9 a.m. Thursday to hear John Cheshier discuss costs and maintenance for the Hoover Volunteer Fire Department.

They will also hear an insurance update from Kent Olsen on coverage and possible changes in insurance.

The court will consider:

- A request from Commissioner Jim Greene to transfer a pickup from Precinct 2 to county maintenance.
- Supplemental insurance coverage
- An audit contract with Brown and Graham.

In executive session, the court will discuss potential litigation.

PAMPA — Gray County Treasurer Scott Hahn is expected to be released late today from Saint Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo after suffering a heart attack last week.

Hahn entered the hospital Thursday after becoming ill Tuesday, said chief deputy treasurer Judy Rutledge.

He underwent angioplasty Friday.

"He is doing great. ... There is no damage to the heart. He is a lucky man," Rutledge said.

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 13, 18, 26, 31, 34, and 45.

There were 75 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $2,175. There were 5,164 tickets with four of six numbers, with each winning $115. And there were 100,679 tickets sold with three of six numbers, with each worth an automatic $3.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $8 million.

U.S. mediator reports easing of Bosnia crisis

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The government promised the top U.S. envoy to Bosnia today that it would not arrest any more people on suspicion of war crimes without authorization from a U.N. tribunal.

Bosnian Serbs broke off contact with the NATO peace force and Muslim and Croat officials last week in retaliation for the Muslim-led government's arrest of two Serb military officers it accuses of war crimes.

The Yugoslavia war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, said the two were under investigation and endorsed the arrests, but only after they occurred.

Under the agreement reached today, the Bosnian government is to send a list of suspects to the tribunal. Those certified as suspects can be arrested at will on federation territory, said Muhamed Sacirbey, the government ambassador to the United Nations.

"We feel that the better understanding of what we would call rules of the road is now in effect," U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke said. "And tensions that have risen in recent days should now begin to abate."

Serb Gen. Djordje Djukic and Col. Aleksa Krsmanovic were arrested Jan. 30 after straying into government territory. Serb ties with the Muslim-Croat federation that is to govern half of Bosnia were suspended on Wednesday, and links with NATO were broken off the following day.

Serb civilian leaders subsequently said they would restore links with NATO, but ties with the federation continued suspended. And it was unclear whether the Bosnian Serb military, led by Gen. Ratko Mladic, is willing even to resume contacts with NATO.

The Belgrade TV station BK said Mladic, himself indicted by the Hague tribunal on war crimes charges, issued an ultimatum Sunday for the release of his two associates.

But though the station clearly identified it as an ultimatum, there was no deadline, no independent confirmation and no word of what would happen if Mladic's demand were ignored.

Lt. Col. Mark Rayner, a spokesman for the NATO-led peace force, said the force will not comment on communication from Mladic or respond to it.

"Our position is straightforward: We do not deal with indicted war criminals," Rayner said.

Rayner said there were encouraging signs that "business is returning to normal" in contacts between the Serbs and the peace force. Today, he said, Serb engineers joined NATO soldiers in clearing mines in the northwest.

But there were other indications that the crisis was not resolved. The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe — the Vienna-based organization mediating arms reduction talks between the former enemies — said the Bosnian Serbs served notice that they would boycott the next round on Tuesday.

The Yugoslavia war crimes tribunal wants the men detained pending investigation into the war crimes charges. There has been no indication that their release was imminent.

Holbrooke, who spent Sunday in Bosnia and Serbia trying to resolve the crisis over the arrests, returned to Sarajevo today for talks with President Alija Izetbegovic. He said he had "a very good meeting" with President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, and described the crisis as "a bump in the road."

Lefors school trustees to consider possible staff reduction in budget

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Lefors school trustees Thursday will consider beginning a process that will likely mean a reduction in staff for the next school year.

Superintendent Norman Baxter today said the school board needs to consider declaring financial exigency because the district "does not have enough tax revenues to cover our expenses without [depleting] our fund balance."

The board in September adopted a budget of $1,145,974, a budget that includes a near $54,000 deficit.

The school expected then $1,091,999 in revenue for the year, making a deficit of $53,975.

Baxter said this morning the district may have to eliminate as many as four positions for the next school year.

"It's very unfortunate. These are good people doing a good job, but we don't have the revenue to support the positions," he said.

To permanently solve the situation, Baxter said he hoped that the district actually continues to experience a decline in the tax base.

Lefors ISD, he explained, is a budget-balanced school district, meaning it receives little in state funds and will send about $81,000 to Pampa for this year under state school financing laws.

The school gets about two to three percent of its budget in state funds, an amount that "for all practical purposes is meaningless," Baxter said.

If it lost the budget balanced designation, the district would be eligible for more state funds.

Board members will consider the proposal when they meet in regular session Thursday at 7 p.m. in the elementary school library.

Baxter said he expects the board to make a final decision about layoffs at its March meeting. In preparation, trustees will evaluate administrative positions Thursday.

Other items on Thursday's agenda include consideration of the following: 1996-97 school calendar, transfers from Pampa ISD, setting of a school board election for May 4, appointment of early voting judge, bid on school property and setting a March 5 school board meeting.

Baxter will report on TAAS Opportunity Program, advanced placement program, UIL realignment and drug dog program.

In executive session, the board will consider principal evaluation and contract.

Meetings are open to the public.

With winter at its mid-point, mild weather with clouding skies at sunset provide bursts of color, as seen here near Bowers City with a pumpjack and windmill silhouetted against the sky. Warmer weather is expected through the middle part of this week, but another cold front may bring chilling temperatures again toward the end of the week.

Wheeler rancher pleads guilty to child indecency, receives 15-year sentence

WHEELER — Wheeler County farmer and rancher J.R. Black was sentenced Friday to 15 years and six months in prison after pleading guilty to five counts of indecency with a child.

Black, 66, was indicted April 25, 1995 on the second degree felony charges.

He was arrested in Wheeler County Jan. 30, 1995 on two charges and again April 26, 1995 on three more charges. It was alleged in the indictments Black engaged in sexual conduct with five boys under the age of 17.

He had been free on $12,500 bond until the Friday hearing before visiting judge John Forbis, Childress.

District Attorney John Mann

said he called 14 witnesses "all begging the court not to consider probation."

Mann said Tony Arden, an Amarillo psychologist, testified Black was genuinely remorseful for his action and wanted to pay for counseling for the five victims.

Black asked the court for probation so he could help the five victims get counseling and therapy, Mann said.

Black's wife of 35 years also asked the court for probation, Mann said.

Arden also told the court episodes of sexual molestation had occurred over a 45-year period and involved 25 to 27 victims, Mann said.

Teachers injured in accident

Two Pampa High School teachers were injured in a vehicle accident north of town early this morning.

Matthew Gantz, theater instructor, and Warren Cottle, math instructor and soccer coach, were struck from behind by a pickup driven by Jeremy Knutson about two miles north of Pampa on Highway 70.

Gantz and Cottle were apparently following the soccer team, according to Department of Public Safety Trooper Jeffery Poole.

Gantz had slowed down to about 10 mph and had partially pulled onto the shoulder when the vehicle he was driving was apparently hit by Knutson, who was coming over a hill.

The car spun, Poole said, and Cottle was ejected.

PHS Assistant Principal Floyd Sackett said that the two were following the soccer team as they were doing running exercises from Hidden Hills Public Golf Course into town.

Cottle was released in stable condition to the care of a private Amarillo physician, Coronado Hospital spokesman Terry Barnes said this morning.

Gantz and Knutson were treated and released from Coronado Hospital.

Drug detection device sale barred

BEAUMONT (AP) — Federal authorities say citizens' rights will be protected by a court order barring the nationwide sale of a purported drug detection device.

U.S. District Judge Thad Heartfield ordered a temporary nationwide ban late Saturday on the manufacture, sale or distribution of the Quadro Tracker.

The Beaumont judge called the sale of the device "an ongoing scheme" and its manufacturer's claims for its effectiveness false. He also said that because the Tracker is sold to law enforcers and schools, it may jeopardize serious prosecutions and violate basic constitutional liberties.

Tax rebates hit record, but holiday sales were slow

AUSTIN (AP) — The state comptroller's office delivered $235.4 million in February sales tax rebates to cities and counties, a record total that nonetheless reflects a sluggish holiday sales season.

"Although we're delivering the largest single sales tax rebate in Texas history, monthly payments to Texas cities and counties this month reflect the slow holiday sales which many retailers experienced in December," Comptroller John Sharp said.

Statewide, the local rebates increased by only 1.9 percent over payments made in February 1995.

Cities received $215.7 million, up 2.4 percent from 1995, while county rebates were $19.6 million, down 2.7 percent from last year.

Clinton appeals for strong Democratic turnout in caucuses

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Even with the luxury of no opponent in tonight's Iowa Democratic caucuses, President Clinton tried to whip up a strong vote by the party faithful to stand in contrast to the Republicans.

"I want Americans to believe they make a difference," he said.

In two frenzied days of Iowa campaigning, Clinton drew huge crowds whose numbers towered over the Republicans' turnouts across the state. In a state soaked with negative GOP attack ads, he kept to the high road and didn't carve up the Republicans.

He left that up to his Iowa sidekick, Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin.

Warming up audiences, Harkin said the Democrats' real opponent in 1996 is clear: "It's Newt Gingrich and his radical right-wing agenda."

And to the delight of audiences, Harkin declared:

"Actually, I like to call them Newtie and the blowhards."

Clinton didn't object to the jabs or the jokes. "That's the third time I've heard him tell those jokes and they get funnier every time," he told a capacity audience of 8,200 at Drake University's sports arena Sunday before returning to Washington.

A camera crew from the Clinton-Gore campaign trailed the president around Iowa, gathering material for ads from Clinton's meetings with farmers, students and flood victims and recording his enthusiastic welcome from audiences at three colleges.

Clinton is expected to meet with more disaster victims at midweek, visiting Oregon and Washington to inspect damage from heavy flooding. In another response, he approved relief funds for inundated counties in Idaho.

The Iowa trip — and another visit to New Hampshire planned for Saturday — are just warmups for Clinton, who hasn't officially declared his re-election candidacy. For now, he is just showing the flag and energizing Democrats in states where Republicans have dominated the news as the campaign curtain rises.

The president wouldn't say who he preferred as his GOP opponent in November. "One of the things that I have found about this is that no one knows who can beat someone else before the actual event occurs," said Clinton, who in 1992 defeated incumbent George Bush, once considered unbeatable.

Four years ago, Clinton came in fourth in the Iowa caucuses as Democrats rallied behind Harkin's favorite son candidacy. "This is my last chance and I would really like to do well," he said Sunday in appealing for votes. "I would appreciate it if you would do that."

Ann Lewis, Clinton's campaign spokeswoman, said she was confident his trip would result in a respectable vote matching Harkin's tally of 76 percent of the 30,000 Iowans who attended the caucuses.

"I want this to work the way it's supposed to," Clinton said. "I want Americans to believe they make a difference if they go to town meetings, if they go to forums for candidates, if they ask questions, if they try to make some connections."

With three years in office behind him, the president asked audiences, "How are we doing?"

Pretty good, he replied to his own question, but not good enough yet. His unspoken suggestion: Give me four more years.

In a farm state enjoying a strong economic rebound, Clinton said jobs are up, inflation is down and farmers have cause to be happy. "We have all-time high exports, which is one of the reasons that corn and soybeans and wheat are at high prices now," he said.

Questions raised over sheriff's pay in jail rental deal

ANGLETON (AP) — A member of the district attorney's office is questioning an arrangement in which Brazoria County's sheriff would OK a $24,000 bonus for himself in exchange for housing Oklahoma convicts in his jail.

Sheriff Joe King may not be able to accept the payment because he would be receiving benefits from a contract over which he exercises discretion, an apparent violation of the Texas public servant gift law.

Capital Correctional Resources Inc., a private company, wants to pay King the salary supplement to monitor the private jail operation.

King's approval of the rental agreement is required by law before county commissioners can rent jail space to the company.

"In our opinion it's potentially, or arguably, a violation," said Hank Prejean, head of the district attorney's civil division.

Livestock center move irks neighbors' sense of smell

HOUSTON (AP) — A potential smelly problem is driving neighbors of Texas A&M University to federal court this week.

At issue is the agriculture school's relocation of a livestock center to make room for George Bush's presidential library.

"We've worked all our lives for what we have," said homeowner Ruby Ellis, whose Brushy Community neighborhood is the new location for Texas A&M's Animal Science Complex.

"I'm thankful for A&M. It gave us work. But now it looks like they're trying to take our lives."

Ms. Ellis and other residents have taken the matter to federal court. If a mediator doesn't help Texas A&M and the community reach a compromise this week, a federal judge will settle the issue for them.

Sixteen wounded in gunfight at apartment complex

PASADENA (AP) — Police are trying to sort out culpability in an apartment complex gunfight between two rival gangs that sent 16 people to area hospitals.

Pasadena police questioned eight suspects in the Sunday shootout, but said charges likely wouldn't be filed until today.

Of the injured, nine were male and seven were female. Eight people remained hospitalized Sunday, including two critically, police and hospital spokesmen said.

The 16 victims were members of the Pasadena Homies and the Latin Kings, ranging in age from 14 to 22, Pasadena Sgt. Kelly Payne said.

All were attending parties at the Bentley Apartments about 2:55 a.m. when shooting between the two gangs erupted.

Although different residents at the complex said they believed the gunfire lasted anywhere from 5 minutes to 20 minutes, Payne said it lasted about 10 minutes and was still going on when the first officers arrived.

Investigators say two members of rival gangs exchanged words in the courtyard between apartments No. 250 and No. 257, where some 30 people were attending the two parties.

Pilgrim's Pride poultry giant barges into Pittsburg

LONGVIEW (AP) — Texas poultry giant Pilgrim's Pride is determined to build a chicken plant near the East Texas city of Pittsburg even though it hasn't secured the rights to buy or dispose of the water it would need.

The company settled on a Pittsburg area site after residents in and around Mount Pleasant rallied against plans to build a plant that is projected to dump 2.5 million gallons of water per day.

But the Franklin County Water District rejected Pilgrim's Pride's plans to buy water, and the city of Longview is among those fighting the company's intention to release wastewater into a tributary of Lake O' the Pines.

"It is a substantial discharge," Austin attorney Jim Mathews told the Longview News-Journal. He filed Longview's protest of the Pilgrim's proposal on Dec. 29.

The Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission has received more than 500 letters from residents and officials objecting to a permit to allow such dumping. Both sides have requested a hearing, tentatively set for March 25, said TNRCC spokesman Terry Hadley.

Family of fugitives found running school in Dominican Republic

DALLAS (AP) — When the families of the students at the Trinitaria School of Santiago found out founders Jose and Monica Batista had been living a secret life, peculiarities about the couple began making sense.

They ran the school in the Dominican Republic until they were arrested last week by Dominican police and FBI agents. Their names were really Mark and Patricia Hall, and they were wanted for interfering with the custody of Mark Hall's daughter.

People familiar with the couple known as the Batistas recognized some inconsistencies about the white, English-speaking couple who claimed to be natives of the Caribbean island republic.

"There were things they used to do that we found unexplainable," Rita Dominguez, the school's Dominican attorney, told The Dallas Morning News for an article in its Sunday editions.

The Halls turned out to be living an elaborate lie.

Hall, a former City Council member in the Dallas suburb of Carrollton, and his wife were arrested at their school after U.S. authorities received a tip.

The husband and wife are charged with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution of a 1993 charge of interfering with child custody.

They are in federal custody in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and will be returned to Denton County.

Mrs. Hall's daughter, Alicia, was in the legal custody of her father, Denton resident Pete Connell, when the Halls vanished with her in June 1993. Mrs. Hall had been fighting for custody since 1985.

Also gone was Hall's son from a previous marriage, Jonathan, breaking his mother's parental rights, authorities said.

The children, both 10, have been reunited with their custodial parents.

The Halls had passed themselves off as the Batistas, born to American missionaries in the Dominican Republic, a Spanish-speaking land populated largely by people of African descent.

Their Christian school is located in one of the more affluent neighborhoods in Santiago, the second-largest city with about 500,000 residents.

The groundwork for reform in Japan

The day before President Clinton, with whatever degree of sincerity, announced that "the era of big government is over," newly-elected Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto gave his maiden speech in the Japanese Diet. The fact that Mr. Hashimoto - with whatever degree of sincerity or realism promised a "thoroughgoing deregulation" of the maze of restrictions and "guidance" imposed on commercial activity in Japan is an important indicator of which way the political wind (buttressed by intellectual conclusions) is blowing throughout the world.

Whether Mr. Hashimoto can achieve thoroughgoing deregulation in a society where regulation and top-down management has created a plethora of groups with a vested interest in regulation and protection from competition is an open question. But the fact that polls in Japan show support for deregulation as a key to bringing the country out of the economic doldrums in which it has languished for several years suggests a profound and welcome change in attitude.

For decades, the Japanese system, with its maze of cartels and cross-subsidies, administered by government agencies empowered to "pick winners" and buttress firms in trouble, was held up as a model for the rest of the world. Few observers paid much attention to the relatively low level of taxation or a government that wanted businesses to succeed rather than treat them as the enemy as factors in the Japanese success story.

But in the last few years, as the Japanese economic "bubble" was bursting, it became obvious that even a friendly paternalistic government will allocate resources more on the basis of political influence and bureaucratic prejudice than on economic performance - and thus eventually misallocate them. The cumulative effect of all those misallocations led to severe reductions in the value of Japanese resources, especially real estate, and hard times for banks, the economic institutions most tightly regulated and closest to the government.

Now Mr. Hashimoto, apparently backed by Japanese public opinion, wants to deregulate to make the Japanese economy more competitive again. "Our basic approach will be to assume that deregulation is appropriate," he said. "We will retain regulations only in exceptional cases."

Whether he will be able to accomplish his goals, however, is questionable. Many politically powerful interests - rice farmers, small business operators concerned about large chain stores, pharmaceutical manufacturers - have grown accustomed to regulations that protect them from lower-cost foreign and domestic competitors, and are influential in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party. And Mr. Hashimoto's political position is not overly secure in a society in transition.

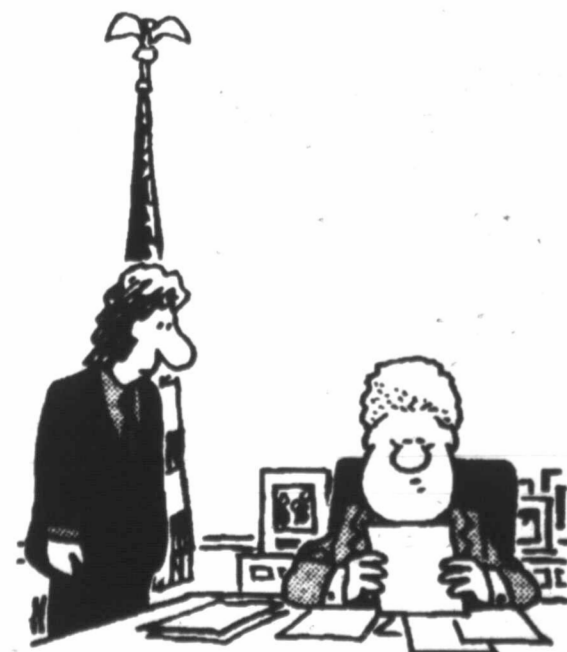

But the prime minister's recognition of the necessity of deregulation is an important step forward in Japanese economic and political life. Whether he succeeds this time around or not, Mr. Hashimoto has laid important groundwork for the kind of reform the Japanese economy will need to compete and, incidentally, to become more open to products and ideas from other countries, most notably the United States.

"Hey — WAIT A MINUTE! This poll was taken an HOUR ago. Where's the LATEST one?"

PBS: Liberal bias still seeps out

The PBS series Frontline recently aired its umpteenth condemnation of our corrupt campaign finance system, produced by the left-wing San Francisco hippies at the Center for Investigative Reporting. They like poking at the big-money begging of both parties.

Come now. How is the Center for Investigative Reporting any different? This ideologically pure preserve is a government contractor in documentaries, mostly dependent on tax dollars it has extracted from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting to keep the money flowing and pay the mortgage. Frontline, after all, has no private sector underwriters. CIR was collapsing in 1989 when it was saved by a set of PBS contracts. Its recent life at the government trough would make a good documentary all on its own.

But then, good documentaries aren't always the specialty of Frontline. On Jan. 16, the show devoted an hour to the rise of Newt Gingrich. While it was no all-out bash - these PBS types are as politically savvy as those corrupt pols they constantly condemn - it wasn't exactly a thank-you note to Newt for knuckling under on privatizing PBS.

PBS has joined that gang - Tom Brokaw, Connie Chung and Judy Woodruff, among others - who delight in spreading stories of Gingrich's private life while deploring and smothering stories of our priapic president. Correspondent Peter Boyer described Gingrich's first House win in 1978: "Newt had won by shedding his old politics and his old profile. And many of his old friends - the reformers, the environmentalists, the liberals - would feel betrayed. And Jackie, a loyal political wife, would soon be discarded as well. A little more than a year later, Newt demanded a divorce." Boyer then turned to a man named Kip Carter, who told of how they had to raise money to feed Newt's kids because he wouldn't pony up alimony.

Later, Frontline elevated to national renown a man at a Gingrich book signing, who is clearly a "hater," or so he would be described if Newt were a liberal. The man heckled the speaker: "You profess family values. This is hidden wisdom in the Holy Bible. And I want to know where it says oral sex doesn't count as adultery. I'd like you to sign it because, you know, you've been cheating on your wife. You've been crying family values. I don't know where it says oral sex is moral while you're trying to take away children's rights and children's benefits." That gave the speaker a fresh taste of what PBS can be all about: a tax-funded liberal outlet for character assassination.

On the other hand, in the last four years, Frontline has steered clear of anything dealing with Bill Clinton's sex life. Oh, perhaps you could count March 3, 1992, when in a documentary on David Duke, the discredited racist declared: "I am not a wizard under the sheets. I have to leave that title to Bill Clinton from Arkansas." But that's about it. The Oct. 21, 1992, Frontline, titled "The Choice," was a two-hour history of Bush and Clinton that raced at the very end from Clinton's announcement speech in 1991 to the Los Angeles riots and ended there in a mysterious heap. It had a nice section on Clinton's draft handling, but there was no Jennifer Flowers.

In 1995, Frontline aired "What Happened to Bill Clinton?" The answer: He hadn't been liberal enough. Seven liberal pundits described his unfortunate estrangement from the progressive impulse, but PBS asked nothing about the allegations of state troopers or the charges of Paula Jones.

Make no mistake: PBS and NPR today are not what they were in the 1980s, heaping encomiums on Central American revolutionaries or highlighting "secret team" conspiracies running the Western Hemisphere from the White House and the CIA. Now, they sound somewhat neutered, but the real liberal feelings lurking in their minds and hearts still seep out, sometimes in very personal attacks. This election year will no doubt be another occasion for taxpayer-funded public relations for the Democratic agenda.

For conservatives who might want to delude themselves about the continuing tilt of PBS, consider the future as told by Josh Clark, an associate producer for documentaries at public station WGBH in Boston. In the January/February issue of Mother Jones (in which he serves the magazine as an interviewer), he explains his feelings about the last 20 years: "In working recently on a documentary about Andrew Carnegie and 19th century industrialism, I explored a period of greed, of rapidly growing wealth inequality, of painful structural changes in the economy, of a frustrated labor movement, and of unethical business dealings born from an absence of regulation." That statement has merit until one reads the following sentence: "I found it surprisingly good preparation for my next project, a documentary about the Reagan years."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1996. There are 233 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Feb. 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the United States, was born in present-day Larue County, Kentucky.

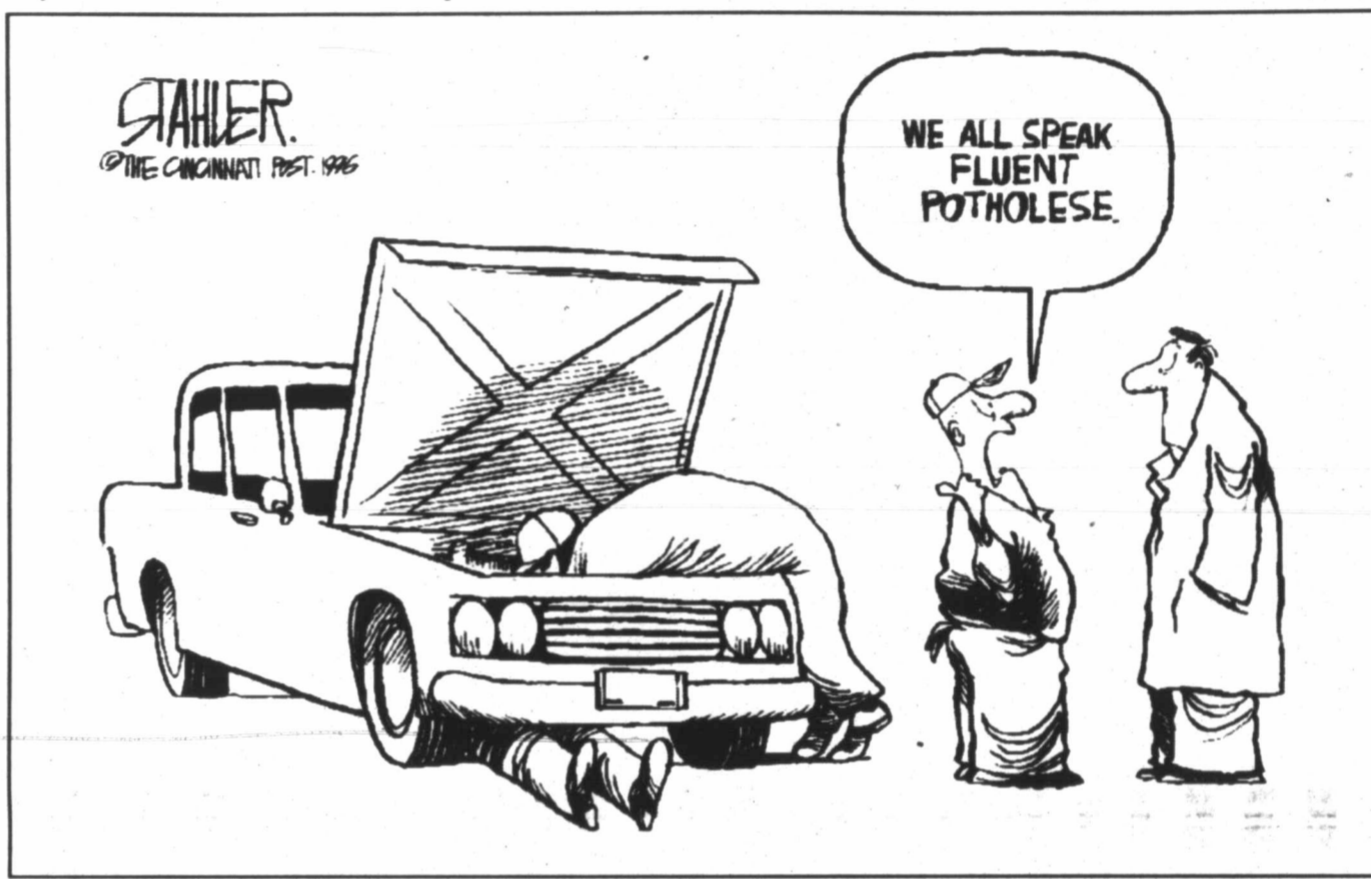

On this date:
In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who'd been queen of England for nine days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1892, President Lincoln's birthday was declared a national holiday.

In 1895, the Battle of Weihaiwei took place during the Sino-Japanese War.

In 1907, more than 300 people died when the steamer Larchmont collided with a schooner off Block Island in New England.

In 1908, the first round-the-world automobile race began in New York. It ended in Paris the following August.

Bill's efforts are worse than nothing

Two years ago, a domestic policy adviser to President Clinton assured me that the president was considering a national campaign to fight teenage pregnancy. I didn't doubt it. The question is whether the man who appointed Joycelyn Elders as surgeon general would have any idea of what such a campaign should consist.

Now, as part of a larger effort to appropriate conservative cultural themes as he plots a reelection strategy, President Clinton has announced that "All of us must work together to send a clear message to our young people that staying in school, postponing sexual activity, and preparing to work are the right thing to do."

The president is late to this party. Scores of grass-roots groups, churches and private organizations are struggling to reverse the frightening out-of-wedlock birth statistics in the United States. Nationwide, the number of children born illegitimate is now 31 percent - 22 percent of whites and 68 percent of blacks - and rising. One grass-roots activist I spoke with resents what he sees as the president's "trivialization" of the problem.

"To pigeonhole this as a problem of youth behavior is to miss the point. It lets adults and the culture we adults have created off the hook. Children are behaving this way because everyone is behaving this way. You can't just say, 'Let's send a message to kids not to do this,' when everyone else is doing it."

Moreover, the picture of teen childbearing is not as simple as the president would portray it. As recent data from the Alan Guttmacher Institute and others have shown, half of the fathers of babies born to mothers between the ages of 15 and 17 are 20 years old or older. Teenage pregnancy is not just the consequence of over-sexed high schoolers getting carried away in the back seat of a convertible.

Even leaving all of that aside, the question remains: What message will the president's campaign send to kids? The problem with liberal approaches to avoiding teen pregnancy is insincerity. Sex educators say, "We don't think sexual intercourse is appropriate until you are older - but if you are going to do it anyway, here is how you can protect yourself against pregnancy and disease." These same educators take a very different tone on drugs. The schools don't offer lessons on how to sterilize needles ("if you're going to do it anyway"). They teach abstinence, pure and simple.

Kids pick up the distinction with alacrity. Studies on the efficacy of sex education in preventing early sexual initiation have shown negative correlations. The more sex education a community has, the more trouble with pregnancy, abortion and sexually transmitted diseases.

But not all programs aimed at reducing teenage pregnancy have failed. Best Friends, a Washington, D.C. based program for inner-city girls, has shown dramatic results in the last decade teaching abstinence, self-respect and decision-making. And there are other programs around the nation that succeed with similar messages.

President Clinton indicated the kind of message he would send to kids with the naming of Dr. Henry Foster, last years rejected candidate for surgeon general, as his adviser on these matters. Foster's "I Have A Future" program, touted as a model by Presidents Bush (who listed the program among the Thousand Points of Light) and Clinton (who hailed it as "an unqualified success"), in fact failed to reduce pregnancies among the girls in the program. Indeed, according to an evaluation by the Statistical Assessment Service of Washington, D.C., the program actually showed paradoxical effects increasing the level of sexual activity among participants in the program as compared with a control group. Girls who participated in Foster's program demonstrated much higher levels of knowledge about sexual matters, but this did not translate into chaste behavior.

President Clinton wants to have it all ways - to placate the left by including Whoopi Goldberg and MTV President Judy McGrath on his national commission and to commandeer the rhetoric of the right. But as the Foster appointment makes clear, the Clinton contribution to solving the problem will be worse than doing nothing.

Meet the new Lyndon B. Johnson clone

Liberal Democrat Ron Wyden gets elected to the Senate from Oregon, and Democrats around the country clap their hands and lick their chops. And why shouldn't they?

If not a great victory - Wyden barely beat a conservative Republican and, to do so, had to engage in character assassination - a victory is a victory. Democrats have been starved lately for such victories. And more: A new poll shows Bill Clinton handily defeating Bob Dole in an election held this week. The joker, from Clinton's perspective, is that there ain't no election this week. Indeed, there won't be one for nine months. For the man bold enough to predict in February the outcome of an election in November, we can probably find a nice padded room on an estate named Happy Acres or something similar.

Clinton may win; he may not win. This is the point that realistic conservatives, of either party or none, should factor into their thinking. He could win. Could doesn't mean will; it means could.

Always, this possibility has been present - if only because Clinton's will be one of two names representing major parties on the general election ballot. But there is a larger reason that Clinton could win. The reason is not complimentary - not that Clinton probably cares deeply. It is that he is the most adroit, most highly focused politician America has produced since Lyndon Johnson.

Clinton's putative idol is John F. Kennedy, but Kennedy's political skills were as nothing compared with Johnson's. For Johnson, everything was politics and politics was everything. It was not so with the more laid-back JFK. Clinton is our modern-day Johnson. His every thought is of politics.

This is bad, but when you're in politics, it helps. Why is it bad? Because not only is politics not everything, it's next to nothing in substance.

Politics exists to facilitate those human arrangements where special degrees of cooperation are essential. This is all right until the politicians become obsessive about their role. Because facilitating cooperation involves the exercise of power, they imagine themselves to be powerful. They sit around thinking of ways to exercise all that power. Constructive ways, of course! Politics ceases at this point to be a dirty duty.

It becomes life itself: the manipulation of people, the amassing and deployment of power, the quest to gain that power or hold onto it. Clinton's obsession with politics is his most unsettling characteristic. It means he sees everything in the world as political in nature and shape - just lying there, waiting for a visionary politician to pick up, inspect, massage, bend, paint.

This same obsession with politics makes Clinton a formidable practitioner of the art. As with LBJ, he lives for it. There's nothing outside it - and little about it he doesn't understand. His whole life is focused on the gaining, the exercising and now the preserving of power. West office from him, and what would he do? A Jimmy Carter can find human satisfaction in public service; but, then, Carter never was fixated on power.

The Republican presidential field threatens to deprive Clinton of meaningful life by taking away his political job. He will fight in the last ditch to prevent this horrid outcome. He will fight with the political skills honed during a lifetime in politics. He will do what it takes to stay alive - misrepresent his own achievements, misrepresent his opponents, twist, dodge, squirm.

Clinton could win? It's impossible to write off one so highly motivated, so determined to keep his job.

There has been a tendency among Republicans to disparage Clinton's abilities - to write him off in advance. Nothing could be dumber. The Comeback Kid, as he dubbed himself in 1992, has come back again and again. Indeed, he is coming back at this moment. How long he will be back, time, tide and the Whitewater special prosecutor will help determine. For now, with whatever delight or squeamishness, meet the new Lyndon Johnson: He is so like the Old Master it's spooky.

Relief crews break through to rural areas in Oregon devastated by flood MIST, Ore. (AP) — In lush valleys turned to watery mush, their rivers running high, brown and mean, the rugged people of Oregon's north coastal mountains feel they are the flood's forgotten victims.

Tiny towns with enchanting names such as Mist and Jewell were cut off for days by high water and mud. Those driven from their homes tuned to Portland radio stations and heard the attention heaped on the city's waterfront and affluent suburbs 50 miles southeast of here.

"Nobody mentioned us," said Tami Bellingham, a rancher from Birkenfeld. "We felt lost."

The rivers and streams across the Northwest continued their slow retreat today, leaving behind a dispiriting trail of muddy destruction. The death toll stood at seven from the floods and mudslides in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. Three people were missing in Oregon.

As they waited for someone to remember them, residents of Mist ran out of food, laundry and patience.

On Sunday, they were cleaning up, helping their neighbors and welcoming the National Guard and other relief workers when they finally came.

John Fitch, who bought the old Mist Store in September, said he told people in town this would happen. They didn't believe him.

"There have been people who've lived here all their lives and didn't think it was coming," said Fitch, who stood around smoking with a group of townspeople.

Now, many had lost the things most dear to them, including photos, clothing and china.

"It's just devastating, especially to the old people out here," said Bob Buccholz, who lives a few miles south of Mist. "It's all they got."

Up to 200 homes along the Nehalem River, which runs past Birkenfeld and Mist, were destroyed or badly damaged by the flood.

A few homes still were flooded Sunday, but most were drying out. Under a brilliant sun, bedding and clothing were spread out on lawns to dry.

"The water went down like somebody pulled the plug," said Buccholz. "It went out as fast as it came in."

Across the region, there were signs of renewal and survival.

In the upscale Portland suburb of Lake Oswego, the water receded and residents returned to begin cleaning up their once-luxurious homes, now dank from the dirty Tualatin River.

With 3 1/2 feet of water in the living room of one $400,000 home, a grand piano that had been placed on cement blocks was flooded to its belly. It still played when the water dropped.

The canal that carries the water from Oswego Lake into the Willamette — now a muddy, churning river — was littered with broken boat houses and smashed motorboats.

At a community church service in the town of Scio, near Salem, worshippers grieved over the death of 8-year-old Amber Bargfrede, a local girl who drowned Wednesday in a culvert.

In Woodland, Wash., a 4-foot stuffed teddy bear, a bedraggled bow around its neck, hung from a tree limb where the water had left it.

Police worry about cracks in protection for mental patients, fear new state law not extensive enough

AUSTIN (AP) — A new state law to help protect mentally disabled Texans from abuse may not be working as hoped in Austin, home to three mental health institutions and more clients than any other Texas city, some advocates said.

The law, which took effect September 1992, created a state agency to investigate abuse and neglect of almost 170,000 people receiving state mental health and retardation services.

However, it did not give the agency authority to pursue criminal charges, leaving that task to law enforcement officers.

Police departments in other cities with state mental health hospitals report no problems. Officers in San Antonio, Rusk and Lubbock said they have good communications with protective service investigators who let them know as soon as a case appears to involve criminal intent. But in Austin, police say they are unable to handle the load.

Criminal acts against vulnerable people can slip through the cracks of the legal system because "there's too much confusion in these institutions as to who to notify," Bass said.

Until the law took effect, the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation investigated abuse and neglect allegations against the people it served.

The new law transferred that duty to the new Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services.

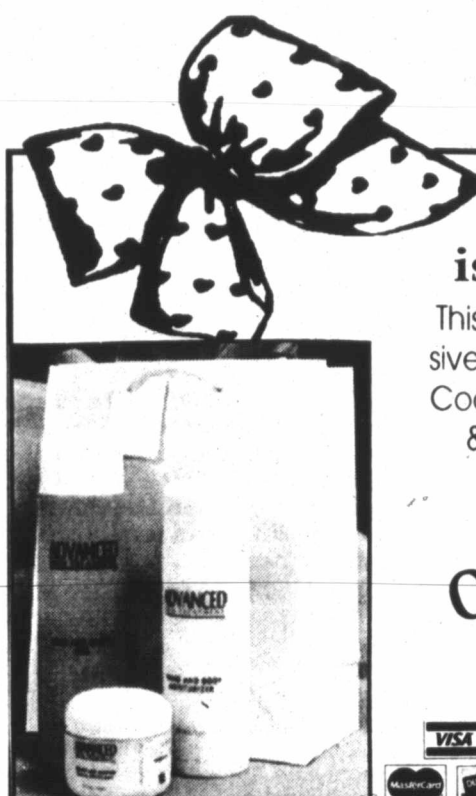

Within one hour of receiving a complaint of abuse or neglect, the protective services agency is required to notify a local or state law enforcement agency.

In Austin, police receive a faxed message each time the protective services agency receives a complaint about abuse.

At the same time, the agency is required to begin its own investigation. It is up to law enforcement to initiate a separate criminal investigation. Austin police officers say two problems often arise.

First, they lack the personnel to investigate the large number of allegations they receive — more than 700 a year from 1993 to 1995.

Also, information police receive from state protective services workers is often so sketchy that officers cannot determine whether a crime occurred.

Baby Shower For Unwed Teen Brings On Storm From Readers

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years and you are usually "right on," but in a recent column you goofed royally.

A teen-aged girl was invited to a baby shower by the mother of one of her young friends. The girl's grandmother advised her not to attend the shower because the pregnant friend was unmarried. The girl asked for your advice, and you advised her to go to the shower because the baby needed gifts whether the mother was married or not.

Abby, I think there's a bigger picture to consider here than whether or not the baby needed things. A baby shower is a party celebrating the future arrival of a baby. In attending such a party, the guests are honoring the mother and celebrating the coming event. In my opinion, an unwed teen-aged mother hasn't anything to celebrate.

How does one earn the privilege to be a parent?

1. Complete your education.
2. Work for several years to save some money.
3. Get married at a reasonable time — not in your teens.
4. Wait at least a year before getting pregnant to be sure the marriage will last.

Our society has supported unwed mothers for two or three decades. Now look at the epidemic we have. I don't suggest shunning these girls, but my attitude is: "This is a problem you created; now you and your family will have to handle it."

Abigail Van Buren

As a schoolteacher, I see babies born to girls who are neither emotionally nor financially able to handle motherhood.

Through the years, when I've been invited to baby showers for unwed mothers, I politely decline. I've never felt guilt and the people about whom I really care have respected me for declining.

If one of my grandchildren ever became an unwed parent, I would never put my friends on the spot by inviting them to a baby shower. And if their friends gave one, I would send a gift but would not attend.

MICHIGAN MOM

DEAR MICHIGAN MOM: Judging from the feedback, more readers agreed with your point of view than with mine:

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to the girl about whether it's improper to hold a baby shower for an unwed mother is way off base.

A baby shower is a celebration first and a financial event second.

When someone they know is involved in a tragic car accident, friends typically give extensive contributions of food, services and other assistance to the family. But they don't do it in the form of a celebratory party.

A baby whose mother is an unwed high school girl, and whose father doesn't want to accept any responsibility, is a tragedy — not a cause for celebration.

If friends of the girl want to help out financially, fine. But don't do so in the "isn't it wonderful" atmosphere that accompanies a baby shower.

CAROL SANDERS, SAN DIEGO

DEAR CAROL: Perhaps an unwed mother doesn't "deserve" a baby shower in the form of a celebration — but she needs it more than the married mother who has everything going for her.

AUTO RACING

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — More than 26,000 people visited the site of the new $100 million Texas Motor Speedway on Sunday to snap up souvenirs, gawk at the track's massive concrete skeleton and pledge support for Texas auto racing.

"This is pretty cool," said Carl Watkins, 22, of Haltom City as he appreciatively viewed the race cars. "I can hardly wait until we get to see these babies in action."

The turnout far exceeded the 5,000 racing fans that speedway General Manager Eddie Gossage had expected. "I've had NASCAR Winston Cup races that didn't draw this big," said Gossage, who promoted the sport in Nashville, Tenn., in the early 1980s.

"If there was any question of fan support in North Texas, it's been squashed today." Open-house workers encouraged adult visitors, who paid $5 each, to sign a document saying that they support the incentives that the speedway is seeking.

This month, Fort Worth, Denton County and the Fort Worth Sports Authority are expected to consider an agreement that would include road, water and sewer improvements worth about $16 million to the speedway.

The track north of Alliance Airport is scheduled to be completed in the fall. Racing could begin shortly thereafter.

Kidd exhibits confidence in NBA ALL-Star game

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For someone who could be a senior at the University of California, Jason Kidd showed uncommon confidence in the NBA All-Star game.

He even gave 12-year veteran Charles Barkley some advice. Kidd told the Phoenix forward to quit running with his head down or he might get hit on the noggin with a ball.

"That was fine with Barkley. 'I would pay to see him play,' Barkley said. 'He's great to watch and great for the game. In a couple of years he could be a great player in the league. I love Jason Kidd.'"

Kidd said he didn't mean to be brash with his advice. He was just trying to tip Barkley about his no-look passes.

"Charles was running with his head down and I nicely asked him not to do it because I didn't want to hit him in the head," Kidd said. "I told him 'Make sure you're looking.' I was kind of worried about his reply, but he said, 'I hear you.'"

Kidd was the first Dallas Maverick to start in the classic. But he was under fire from the minute he was selected to the team as a starter by the fans.

Seattle coach George Karl, the head coach for the West in the 129-118 loss, said several weeks ago that John Stockton and his own Gary Payton "are a helluva lot better than him."

Kidd put the quote on his locker and scored 36 points in a win over the Sonics.

Kidd showed he belonged in the All-Star game with flashy passes and his overall court play. He dished out a game-high 10 assists, scored seven points, collected five rebounds and got two steals in a mere 22 minutes. Payton played 28 and Stockton 18.

"I didn't want to embarrass myself. I had a lot of fun and played a pretty good game," Kidd said. "I didn't want to let my teammates down. I didn't care how many minutes I played."

Payton said, "I didn't expect to play that many minutes, but I guess that's why George is my coach."

Kidd said he didn't notice the minutes. He was just soaking up the atmosphere.

"I got a kick sitting on the bench talking to Barkley and Clyde Drexler," Kidd said. Clyde was telling me how he had to hang in there (13 years) to get a ring. I hope it doesn't take me that long."

Kidd brought aahs from the crowd of 36,037 fans in the Alamodome with his no-look passes.

The point guard did get a lesson from MVP Michael Jordan in the second quarter.

"He got me on a give and go," Kidd said. "He kind of got me going in one direction, then slipped behind me. He showed me he's still the man. I think he should have received the MVP."

Jordan pointed at Kidd with a big grin. Kidd pointed back, shaking his head.

"He showed me something new there," Kidd said.

Kidd said he and Karl had settled their differences on Saturday during practice.

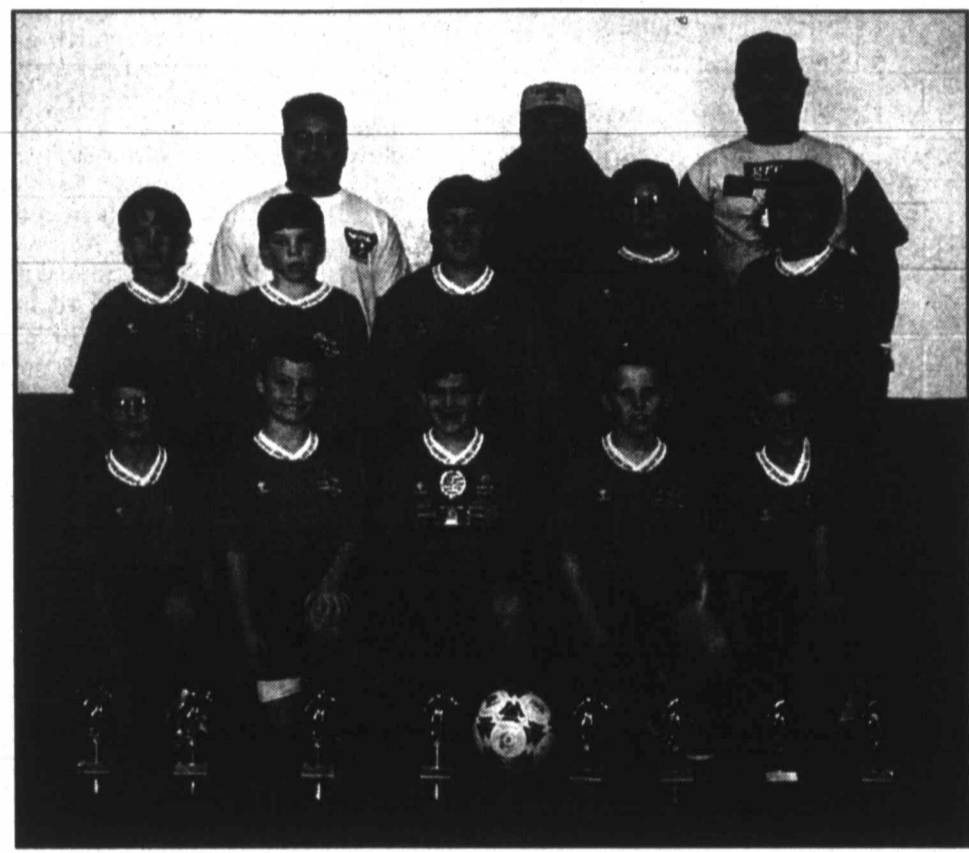

"He came over and kissed me on the cheek," Karl said. "All is forgiven and forgotten."

Karl admitted after the game that Kidd "is a special talent."

Kidd was the No. 2 pick overall in the 1994 NBA draft, one spot after Glenn Robinson and one before Grant Hill.

"I love the way he pushed the ball up court," Karl said. "He's a great passer and a great rebounder for a point guard. He has great defensive hands and understands defensive concepts. He makes the game simple for a lot of people when he is out there on the court."

Pampa captures 9th grade district tournament crown

PAMPA — Pampa defeated Valleyview, 53-42, in the finals to win the District 9th Grade Boys Basketball Tournament over the weekend.

Shawn Young led Pampa in scoring with 20 points while Kyle Gamblin and Zane Powers added 8 each.

Pampa opened the tournament with a 55-49 win over Borger. Young had 17 points and Justin Roark added 12 points and 9 rebounds for Pampa.

Pampa slipped by Dumas, 39-38, in the semifinals. Gamblin's free throws in the last 14 seconds secured the Pampa win. Roark had 14 points and Young 7 to lead Pampa scorers.

Pampa was the No. 1 seed going into the tournament after winning the regular-season district title.

"The players really hung in there together and they deserved this championship. They had a great attitude all year long and were very coachable," said Pampa coach Troy Bell.

Pampa's record is 16-4 going into the season's final game tonight at Hereford.

Pampa's individual tournament statistics are as follows:

Justin Roark: 31 points, 21 rebounds, 2 steals; Shawn Young, 44 points, 8 assists, 3 steals; Leo Ramirez, 16 points, 13 assists, 4 steals; Kyle Gamblin, 19 points, 6 assists; Trey Stokes, 4 points, 2 steals, 3 rebounds; Jemar Williams, 4 points, 2 steals, 4 rebounds; Zane Powers, 18 points, 8 rebounds, 2 blocked shots; Corey Sharp, 10 points, 6 rebounds; Courtney Lowrance, 4 points, 5 rebounds, 2 blocked shots.

In the B team division, Pampa beat Borger, 44-41, and lost to Canyon, 56-36, and Hereford, 50-48. Pampa's B team placed fifth.

Coach Bell wished to thank the parents for their support throughout the season and the businesses for their support throughout the tournament, which was held in Pampa.

Jarrett's Ford beats pack of Chevys in Busch Clash

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — First, Dale Jarrett's No. 88 Ford Thunderbird wasn't there. Then it was.

Seemingly in the blink of an eye Jarrett drove from near the back of the record 17-car field to the front row — an improvement of 13 positions — in one lap during Sunday's Busch Clash at Daytona International Speedway.

In the unique format that is used in the annual Clash, a 20-lap sprint for the previous year's Winston Cup pole-winners, the field is inverted during a brief caution period between 10-lap segments.

Jarrett, whose 1995 Daytona 500 pole earned his first Clash start, finished second to two-time defending 500 winner Sterling Marlin in the opening segment.

Both John Andretti and Bobby Labonte started the second half of the race behind Jarrett because of engine problems, while Marlin was just behind him in 15th.

But Jarrett, winner of the 1993 Daytona 500, wasn't looking behind him on the restart on lap 11.

"It was one for the books," Jarrett said of his second-segment start. "I got a good start and it kind of opened up for me.

"Everybody seemed to be wanting to follow (Dale) Earnhardt there," he added. "In most cases, that's great, but it opened up a line for me. I just decided to go to the inside and I had some good help from the back. I got my car wound up a little bit better than the others."

"Starting back there can be a disadvantage, but it can be an advantage, too, because you can get a running start. I was just fortunate that things worked out."

Jarrett found himself trailing only Earnhardt, the defending Clash champion who started up front after having an engine problem in the first segment, through the next two laps on Daytona's 2 1/2-mile oval.

By lap 13, Marlin had worked his way through the pack and was fourth, just behind fellow Chevrolet driver Ken Schrader. When Jarrett went to pass Earnhardt the next time around, Marlin also zoomed by into second.

That's the way it stayed the rest of the way, with Jarrett winning by 0.19-seconds, about four car-lengths.

Harvester baseball team holds annual Hit-A-Thon

PAMPA — The Pampa High baseball program began the 1996 season with its annual Hit-A-Thon Saturday at Harvester Field.

The Hit-A-Thon was held to raise funds for new uniforms and equipment. Players used the best hit of five balls to earn donations for the team.

Harvester hitters and their longest hit are listed below:

David Gamblin, 340 feet; Ryan Cook, 350; Matt Archibald, 360; Rene

Armendariz 360; Jamisen Hancock 315; Jeremy Knutson, 275; Ryan Davis

360; Seth Haynes, 285; Jarren Miller, 320; Duane King, 330;

Frances Juan, 340; Ryan Schumacher, 250; Shawn Harris, 360; Jason Cirone, 301; Kory Harris, 345; Tony Miller, 320; Jason Velasquez, 290; Jeff Griffith, 330;

Brandon Hill, 350; Joel Barker, 320; Kory Nickell,

285; Brent Phelps, 285; Jonathan Waggoner, 320; Eric Colby Street, 200; Eric

Ballew, 230; Jason Benton, 250.

PHS head coach Dennis Doughty said there were a number of bright spots in Pampa's first scrimmage against Dalhart.

"I thought Ryan Cook did a great job of pitching and our hitting was ahead of where I thought it would be," Doughty said.

The Harvesters scrimmage Perryton at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Perryton.

Love prevails in Buick Invite

By BERNIE WILSON
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Davis Love III wasn't about to let the hometown hero walk away with the Buick Invitational.

So, after five birdies on the back nine and eight overall, it was Love, not Phil Mickelson, who hoisted the trophy and collected a $216,000 check.

"You want to get out in front of everybody, away from the crowd," Love said after his two-shot victory over Mickelson on Sunday. "If I had been playing with Phil or Lennie (Clements), with the local crowd pulling for them, it would have been a lot harder."

"I was in a good position, where I could get my name up on the board and make the guys think about it coming down the stretch."

Love started the final round four strokes back, but closed with an 8-under par 64 on the 7,000-yard Torrey Pines South Course for a total of 19-under 269.

Comebacks are nothing new for Love.

In 1992, Love came from three strokes behind Rocco Mediate to win the Greater Greensboro Open by six strokes.

"Every time I get three or four back on the last day I always say it shouldn't be that hard to win," said Love, who won for the first time this year and for the 10th time in 11 seasons on the tour.

Love had been one stroke back when the AT&T Pebble

Beach National Pro-Am was canceled a week earlier because of a flooded fairway.

Mickelson made a strong move of his own Sunday, coming from three strokes behind third-round leader Clements, only to have his putting touch abandon him just as he was trying to win his third straight tournament.

"After I birdied 10 and 11, I really expected to win," said Mickelson, who finished with a 67. "I think that's why it's a little more disappointing."

Mickelson, whose 1993 victory in this event was his first as a professional, won in Tucson and Phoenix in his previous two starts.

After three-putting his first hole Saturday, Love didn't have another bogey the rest of the tourney.

Love curled in putt after putt for birdie on the backside Sunday, first on No. 10 and then three straight, starting with the par-5 13th. None was longer than 12 feet, thanks to better play with his irons due to a change he made in his stance following his 69 on Saturday.

Playing three threesomes behind Love, Mickelson sank an 8-footer for birdie on 15 to tie Love at 18-under. But just after Love sank a 5-foot sidehill putt for birdie on the par-5 18th, Mickelson three-putted from inside 15 feet for bogey on the par-3 16th. One of those was from two feet.

"I can make that putt right-handed," said the lefty Mickelson. "It was just a mental lapse."

Mickelson also bogeyed 16 on Saturday, the only blemish in his 6-under 66. He watched his 9-footer for birdie lip out on 17.

"Phil didn't miss those putts by much coming down the stretch," Love said. "If he had had a one-stroke lead, he'd probably pour them all in there."

Said Mickelson: "I lost it on the greens. I feel I gave three shots back the last three holes. I don't mean to take anything away from Davis, who had a phenomenal round, I'm just disappointed that I had a chance to tie him and I didn't capitalize on it."

Mickelson needed an eagle on No. 18 to force a playoff. But his approach shot went into the rough and he chipped past the hole.

Clements, who lives in suburban Poway, failed again to clinch his first victory in 16 seasons on the PGA Tour. He had set the tournament 36-hole record with a 15-under 129, kept his lead despite a par third round, then shot a 71 Sunday to finish tied for third at 272 with Marco Dawson, Scott Simpson, Tom Lehman and Mark O'Meara.

Nick Faldo also shot a 64 to tie Love for the low round of the day and finished tied for eighth with Mark Calcavecchia at 273.

The victory pushed Love's 1996 earnings to $252,000. He finished sixth in the season-opening Mercedes Championships.

Mickelson made $129,600 to push his lead on the money list to $603,650, more than twice Love's total.

Infante may be Colts' next coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Colts are getting the coach they really want — and it's not the coach they had.

Colts offensive coordinator Lindy Infante will probably be named head coach this week, team officials say, filling the gap left when Ted Marchibroda was not retained.

"Lindy is the only guy that I've talked to and the only guy that I intend to talk to at this time. ... We've got our business to take care of here with the combine and we think that's first, and then sometime this coming week we'll probably wrap up the details and officially have a new head coach."

Infante said he met with Tobin both Saturday and Sunday.

The former head coach of the Green Bay Packers, Infante was out of the NFL for three years before being hired last season as the Colts' offensive coordinator.

The combine, which brought more than 300 NFL hopefuls here to be tested and meet with team representatives, ends today.

After leading the Colts to the AFC championship game in his fourth season as coach, Marchibroda was let go Friday when he refused a one-year contract extension at the same pay.

Asked if he would accept a one-year contract, Infante smiled and responded, "I'm not going to get involved in hypothetical questions at this point."

Marchibroda, who produced the Colts' most successful season since they left Baltimore in 1984, came within one play of the Super Bowl after playoff upsets of San Diego and Kansas City.

"I've been in, this business too long to be surprised by the turn of events here, but I certainly didn't expect it," Infante said. "On Wednesday, when we were having a news conference about (defensive coordinator) Vince Tobin becoming the new coach at Arizona, the news came out about Ted's contract situation and you sensed something might be happening."

ALL-STAR NOTEBOOK

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Magic Johnson watched the All-Star Game as a spectator, but his presence was a highlight for fans. Johnson received a standing ovation after a videotape of one of his All-Star Game appearances was played on the AlamoDome's big screen. Johnson stood and waved to the crowd. Johnson, who retired from basketball after testing positive for the virus that causes AIDS, re-signed with the Los Angeles Lakers two weeks ago. He has played in 11 All-Star games and was named MVP in 1985 and 1992. He remains the all-time leader in assists with 127 and is 10th among all-time leading scorers with 176 points. FIVE MORE YEARS: NBA commissioner David Stern is expected to leave All-Star Weekend with a five-year contract extension. The NBA's board of governors was to vote on the extension in a meeting today. Stern, who became commissioner in February 1984, has been making $3 million a year. The new deal is reportedly worth as much as $30 million. HOMETOWN HERO: San Antonio Spurs center David Robinson wasn't a starter for the West team, but he clearly was the hometown favorite. Robinson received a huge cheer when he entered the game with 5:34 left in the first quarter. The crowd roared again when he scored on a dunk 16 seconds later. Robinson, appearing in his seventh consecutive All-Star Game, led the West in scoring along with Gary Payton. Each had 18 points. Robinson also grabbed 11 rebounds. "I've been pumped up all weekend. I've been so excited," Robinson said. "I think today I was more nervous before the game than I have been since my rookie year."

COACHING CONTEST

East coach Phil Jackson won for the first time as an NBA All-Star Game coach. Both Jackson and West coach George Karl were coaching their second All-Star Games and each was seeking his first victory. In 1992, Jackson's East team lost 153-113 in 1992. Karl's West team lost 127-118 in 1994. This was the first time two former CBA coaches had coached in the All-Star Game. Karl was the CBA's Coach of the Year three times, in 1981 and 1983 with Montana and in 1991 with Albany. Jackson won the honor once, in 1985 with Albany.

ALL-STAR VETERANS

Of the players in the 1996 All-Star Game, Hakeem Olajuwon has been selected as an All-Star the most. Sunday marked his 11th time as an All-Star. He was a starter seven of those years, including this one, and a reserve four times.

JORDAN'S STELLAR STATS

With his 20 points, All-Star MVP Michael Jordan moved within three points of becoming the sixth NBA player to score 200 All-Star points. He now has 197 in nine appearances. Jordan moved up from ninth to sixth place in career All-Star scoring, passing Walt Chamberlain (191), Isiah Thomas (185) and John Havlicek (179). Jordan had one steal, giving him 28 for his All-Star career and placing him second behind Thomas' 31. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the career All-Star scoring leader with 251 points in 18 games.

BARLEY BARBS

Asked why the East team did so well against the West, San Antonio's David Robinson paused, then joked: "We had Charles Barkley on our team. I'm not one to point fingers." Clyde Drexler of the West added: "He shouldn't have told the truth!" Told later of Robinson's kidding about Barkley, Michael Jordan said: "I think I got a little bit more sleep than Charles did last night. That could have been the difference."

COWBOY FUN

Karl Malone of the Utah Jazz said the most fun he had during All-Star Weekend was going to the San Antonio Stock Show and Rodeo. Malone, who buys cutting horses and likes to wear western clothes, said when he heard the rodeo would be going on the same weekend as the All-Star game, he knew he wanted to attend. "It was a lot of fun, without a doubt," Malone said. And the rodeo was a way to escape some of the celebrity hoopla surrounding All-Star Weekend. "These high-rollers don't like to smell that," he said.

Olson's 500th win comes on long shot

By The Associated Press

College Basketball

The first 499 victories in the coaching career of Lute Olson certainly weren't all routine, yet none ended like No. 500.

Miles Simon of Arizona grabbed a loose ball off an errant inbound pass by Cincinnati, took a dribble and one long stride and let fly with two hands from 65 feet. It banked in and the 13th-ranked Wildcats had a 79-76 victory, the 500th of Olson's 23-year career.

"We've had some big wins at the tail end, but never from that distance," said Olson, who also coached Long Beach State for one season and at Iowa for nine.

Simon's only 3-pointer of the game made him 4-of-12 from the field and wasn't considered lucky by the shooter.

"I didn't just leave it up; I tried to make the shot," said Simon, who finished with 17 points.

Keith LeGree of No. 6 Cincinnati (18-2) had his shot blocked out of bounds by Ben Davis to set up the final inbound pass with 3.8 seconds left. Danny Fortson couldn't handle the pass and Simon came up with the loose ball.

"I knew as soon as he let the ball go that it was going in," LeGree said.

Michael Dickerson had 21 points for Arizona (18-4) in the game played at Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Phoenix as part of the 7Up Shootout.

Damon Flint scored 16 points for Cincinnati, which had a six-game winning streak snapped after blowing a 68-59 lead with 5:37 to play.

"We usually put teams away when we get them down," LeGree said. "They really got after us in this game. They took everything away from us, passing and all."

In other games involving ranked teams Sunday, it was: No. 1 Massachusetts 84, Temple 55; No. 2 Kentucky 88, Arkansas 73; No. 8 Wake Forest 79, Duke 65; and No. 19 Iowa 76, Indiana 50.

Resnick testifies O.J. took drugs, threatened Nicole

NEW YORK (AP) — Faye Resnick testified in her deposition that O.J. Simpson used cocaine in the past and threatened to kill his ex-wife because she "rejected him, shamed and humiliated him," her lawyer said.

Today, O.J. Simpson's attorneys will begin their questioning of Resnick, and were expected to focus on her drug use.

Simpson has repeatedly said that Resnick's link to drugs led to the 1994 slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. He said in a recent CNN interview that the answer to the slayings is "in the world of Faye Resnick."

Resnick, 37, a friend of Ms. Simpson's who wrote a tell-all book about her life, waded through a crowd of photographers Sunday for her second day of questioning as part of the wrongful death lawsuits filed against Simpson by the families of the victims.

Her attorney, Leonard Marks, said she testified that Simpson had used cocaine and offered her some in the past, Marks said. Ms. Simpson also told her that Simpson used drugs during his football career, Marks said.

Marks said his client also repeated claims made in her book that Simpson was a jealous abuser who couldn't deal with the fact that his marriage was over.

Scientists uncover brain's own egg timer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Scientists have located the brain's stopwatch — the spot that calculates whether you've got enough time to bolt across the street in front of a car or run to the bathroom during a commercial.

It's called the interval timer and its job is to keep track of the minutes and seconds that make up everyday life.

Unlike the body's other time-keeper — the circadian clock, which keeps hormones, digestion, sleep and other functions running on a 24-hour cycle — the interval clock measures much shorter times.

It allows humans and other animals to learn and survive in their native habitat, whether that's the rain forest or the freeway.

In the wild, for instance, animals must keep track of how much time passes between catching prey. This is how they know whether to keep hunting in the same place or move on.

Humans put this faculty to other uses.

Las Vegas harbors some of nation's most violent criminals

LAS VEGAS (AP) — In this city where gambling is king, the odds are against violent criminals getting caught.

An Associated Press review of the latest FBI data found criminals in Las Vegas committed five times as many violent crimes in 1994 as police were able to solve — the worst ratio of any large U.S. city. Detroit, Buffalo, San Francisco and Miami rounded out the bottom of the list.

For Joyce Mackay, the ranking is a painful reminder of her son's unsolved murder. Dana Mackay, who made his living as an Elvis impersonator, was shot to death along with his girlfriend in October 1993 at the home they shared.

"It's a total mystery to me," Mackay said from her Fresno, Calif., home. "There's no closure. It's an ugly thing and an ugly feeling to be left with."

Crime experts say Las Vegas' rate shows that crime is difficult to control in a rapidly growing place where hordes of tourists can drink gamble and spend money around the clock.

The 1,300 officers of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department patrolled a jurisdiction of 779,210 people, along with a flow of 27 million tourists, in 1994.

Metro police that year reported 9,421 violent crimes, which include murder, manslaughter, rape, aggravated assault and robbery.

Of those, 1,946 resulted in an arrest and prosecution — a clearance rate of 20.7 percent — the lowest rate in the nation for cities with 250,000 or more residents, the FBI data showed.

Next was Detroit at 21.4 percent; Buffalo at 21.9 percent; San Francisco at 24.5 percent; and Miami at 25.7 percent, the AP review found. The national average for violent crime clearances in 1994 was 45 percent.

Las Vegas Metro Sheriff Jerry Keller says anti-crime initiatives started after he took office in January 1995 are working. A review of 1995 data shows the city's violent crime clearance rate has gone up to about 27 percent.

Keller doesn't like to compare Las Vegas with other cities. He points to the fact that it is the fastest growing city in the nation, with 48,000 new residents a year, in addition to being a gambling mecca.

"We're unique in our 24-hour town nature, unique in our growth, unique in the demographics of the community," Keller said.

"Any time you have money, you have the two things that drive crime: ego and greed. Greed for wanting the money that someone else has, and ego to think they can continue getting away with it."

Grant Stitt, chairman of the Criminal Justice Department at the University of Nevada at Reno, said crime is always a problem in tourist cities, especially Las Vegas, because there's less of a sense of stability and community.

Detonation fails to dislodge boulder from tunnel, 20 people trapped

FURUBIRA, Japan (AP) — Despite a blast from a quarter-ton of explosives, crews today failed in their second attempt to topple a massive boulder off a crushed highway tunnel where 20 people were trapped.

A bus carrying 19 people and a passenger car with one person have been buried in the tunnel since Saturday morning, when a slab of mountainside the size of a 20-story building peeled away and came crashing down on the tunnel roof.

The rescue drama, on the outskirts of a remote fishing village about 550 miles north of Tokyo, has captured national attention, with banner headlines and live TV coverage.

The satellite trucks of news crews outnumbered emergency vehicles clustered outside the tunnel at the base of a jagged mountain that rears up out of the sea. Flashing red lights reflected off the snow and a salty wind whipped off the water.

Freezing temperatures had already dampened hopes for survivors, and today's failure to dislodge the boulder deepened the despair for relatives, who kept an anguished vigil at the accident scene.

"They're just playing around with the dynamite and the mountain like a toy," Yukio Takahashi, who had several close friends on the bus, said disgustedly.

Work crews have already tried digging their way in from both ends of the tunnel, but were afraid the remainder of the roof would cave in.
