NAMED TO IRAN COMMISSION? United Nations Secretary, General Kurt Waldheim has chosen a five-member commission to probe Piran's grievances against the deposed shah, a U.N. official said Sunday. The spokesman did not name the members of the commission, but diplomatic sources

Iran demands U.S. admission of 'guilt'

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr has repeated his demand for a U.S. admission of guilt for alleged misdeeds during the shah's reign as a condition for the release of the American hostages, Tehran radio said today.

The inquiry by an international commission into Iranian allegations against the deposed shah will not be sufficient to ensure the release of the 50 Americans, now in their 107th day of captivity, Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying after a meeting of the ruling Revolutionary Council Sunday night

Bani-Sadr declaration came as U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was awaiting the Iranian government's response today to his choice of a five-member commission that will probe Iran's charges against the deposed monarch, now living in exile in Panama.

"The freeini hostages will depend on the compliance by the United States to three Iranian conditions," he was quoted as saying in a

It listed the conditions as: "Admission by the United States that it had interfered in Iran's internal affairs during the rule of the shah. A pledge to refrain from any such interference in the future. A promise not to block efforts by the Iranian government to ensure the extradition of the shah and the recovery of his fortune.

Bani-Sadr's statement confirmed a hard-line tack he took in two weekend interviews and offset statements he made last week indicating that the Americans might be released once the U.N. commission began its inquiry.

In a news conference last Wednesday, President Carter said he supported formation of "an appropriate commission with a carefully defined purpose" as a means to free the hostages. But he ruled out any U.S. admission of guilt during the alleged misrule by exiled Shah

Hostages report feelings in released film interview

NEW YORK (AP) — Cpl. William Gallegos, one of the American hostages in Iran, says that after two weeks of captivity he thought he would remain in the U.S. Embassy forever or leave "in a plastic bag."

Gallegos and another Marine, Sgt. Paul Lewis, exchanged these and other thoughts on Feb. 10 with a group of 49 Americans during a visit organized by the Committee for American-Iranian Crisis Resolution 10. The talk was filmed by Greek television and broadcast by NBC-TV on its "Today" show.

Gallegos. 21, of Pueblo,

Colo., said that in the first days after the Embassy was captured Nov. 4, the captors "were more afraid" of the group of Marines among the

"They didn't know what we were going to do," he said. "But we weren't going to do anything really. We were told to give up the Embassy at that time; we gave up the Embassy. We gave up everything at that "We might have given up our lives, too," he said. Both Marines appeared in good health, chuckling at times, and spoke of Iran's demand that deposed Shah

Mohammad Reza Pahlavi be returned before the hostages are released

"I had no idea what was going on," Gallegos said. "I for sure thought he'd be back ... They the second week said, we're here because when the shah comes back. vou'll go home. That's when I said to myself. 'Why hasn't he been returned?' You know. I didn't know.

"I thought myself we would have been out of here the second week." he said, adding that after 14 days, "I didn't think we were ever going to leave, or else if I did I thought I was going to leave in a plastic bag.' Lewis, of Homer, Ill., said the other hostages, who were not shown in the flim, were

"I don't feel that we were going to be taken out in the courtyard and shot," he said. "I think they realize that it wouldn't do anyone any

The pair said they were getting some censored mail but believed that they were not getting all that was sent, judging from Christmas time news clippings they saw that reported heavy U.S. mailings to the hostages.

Puerto Ricans Vote in first primary

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — George Bush says winning all 14 delegates in Puerto Rico's first-ever presidential primary will give his presidential bid continued momentum for the New Hampshire primary next week.

Bush defeated Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee by a 3-2 margin in the Republican balloting Sunday in 1980's first presidential primary. Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, not on the ballot here, received a handful of write-in votes. The voting was held without the privacy of voting booths because there wasn't time to set them up when a judge ruled that the Caribbean island commonwealth could not spend public funds for a party primary. To offset the cost of the primary, coffee cans were set up at the voting places to seek donations

The Puerto Rico victory will illustrate "the national aspect of our candidacy, Bush said Sunday while campaigning in Nashua, N.H. "It is not just a one- or two-state campaign.

The former CIA director and ambassador said the victory "will lift up our workers and continue our momentum. It will help us in New Hampshire and set off some of the attacks on me.'

Actually, the 3.3 million Puerto Ricans are U.S. citizens but have no vote in the November presidential election because the island is not a state. They also pay no federal income tax.

The victory gave Bush a total of 17 committed delegates on the first ballot at the Republican National convention this July in Detroit. Reagan has nine delegates; Baker, five. It takes 998 to cinch the Bush built a 2-1 margin in early returns, mostly from the cities, and saw it shrink only marginally when the rural vote came in.

When the party stopped counting votes early today, with tabulation 99.7 percent complete. Bush had 123,217 for 59 percent to Baker's 80,782 for 38 percent.

Of the other candidates in the primary, former Texas Gov. John Connally got 1,934 votes; California businessman Benjamin Fernandez, 1.912: former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, 631: and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, 513.

Dole had asked his supporters to vote for Baker. Two unknowns on the ballot. Bedo Istvan Karoly of Washington, D.C., got 87 votes and Gerald de Felice of Hamden, Conn., got 48.

Foreign goods touted on Chinese billboards

Canadians will choose today between conservative, liberal

By CHARLES HANLEY

Associated Press Writer TORONTO (AP) - Canadians vote for a new Parliament today, choosing as leader either conservative Prime Minister Joe Clark or the politically "born-again" Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Clark, elected only last May, asked for a "fair chance" to carry out his tough economic programs. But the opinion polls indicated the voters would not give him another chance, making his the briefest tenure of any elected prime minister in Canadian history.

In large part a Clark defeat would be traceable to an attempt by his Progressive Conservative government to raise the gasoline tax by 18 cents a gallon.

Liberal Party chief Trudeau, Canada's prime minister from 1968 to 1979, tried not to appear too confident in the final days of the 67-day campaign. But after flying home to Ottawa Sunday he told an airport crowd, "I can smell victory here." Clark and his Progressive Conservatives insist the polls will be proven wrong.

The 40-year-old prime minister sounded like a cheerleader Sunday in a talk to parliamentary candidates in a restaurant high up in the needle-like CN Tower, 1,000 feet above this sprawling lakeside city.

"We had long odds," he told them. "....Don't let up for a moment ... every second counts." Some 15.4 million Canadians are eligible to vote in one of 282 districts that will send AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Times have changed in the federal court system in Texas.

We're in great shape now," says Joe Reynolds. Houston attorney who is a member of the State Bar committee that checks on qualification for proposed federal judges. He formerly headed the committee.

Expansion of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in 1978 by Congress and increasing the number of Texas district courts from 22 to 32, also in 1978. eased a great many dockets throughout the state.

The expansion also gave women and minorities more representation on federal benches in Texas

At present, the federal judiciary in Texas is divided into four judicial districts — Northern, Southern. Eastern and Western - with 26 divisions. Each district has its own chief judge. U.S. attorneys. marshals and clerks. Federal * judges get a basic pay of $54,500 a year and are appointed for life

The 5th Circuit, which is headquartered in New Orleans, handles appeals from the Texas district

"Texas' population expanded so much so fast there was a heavy court load everywhere," says Reynolds. Every federal court was

"Now (with the expansion) they particularly can handle the criminal cases, which take priority, and then that lets the civil cases come to trial. There was a time when it took a long, long time for a civil case to come to trial in a federal court," Reynolds said.

Farmers plan for third Capitol Hill pilgrimage

WARRENTON, Va. (AP)- The national chairman of the American Agriculture Movement says age is not making the organization any tamer as it prepares for its third annual assault on Capitol Hill. "We certainly are going to remain vocal - very vocal - and we need to blast those that blast us and blast those that are advocating a cheap food policy," Marvin Meek of Plainview, Texas told several hundred farmers gathered here Sunday for a rally

The farmers were to head for Washington, about 45 miles away, later Sunday and today. However, they planned to travel individually or in small groups instead of the large motorcades that have characterized their visits to the nation's capital the past two years.

No estimates were available of how many farmers would be on hand by Tuesday when this year's demonstration begins in earnest with a meeting at the Commerce Department. A similar meeting was scheduled Wednesday and Thursday and Friday have been set aside for lobbying congressmen on upcoming agricultural bills

Freedom of religion in U.S. elsewhere

On June 27, 1978, seven Pentecostal Christians from central Russia managed to elude the Soviet police and entered the U.S. Embassy in Moscow seeking sanctuary

These members of the Chmykhalov and Vaschenko families made their way from Chernogorsk in central Russia to Moscow after spending years trying to get permission to emigrate from the Soviet

Once in the U.S. Embassy, the families hoped something could be done to secure their right to emigrate. After all, didn't the Helsinki Treaty between the United States and Soviet Union guarantee the freedom of emigration? Those seven Christians are still waiting, virtually prisoners in the embassy.

Attempting to enter the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is an act of courage for a Russian citizen. Burly police officers are stationed outside with the specific purpose of arresting those unauthorized Russians foolish enough to try it. Yet these seven, knowing the limited chances of success, giving up everything they had, risking the persecution of their families, decided it was worth a try. They are not alone.

One of the reasons the Soviet government is not permitting these two families to leave the country is that it would encourage the many thousands of other religious persons in Russia to make a similar attempt. Undoubtedly the Chmykhalov and Vaschenko families felt as imprisoned outside the embassy as they do inside. Currently they exist, permitted little mail and few visitors, in the embassy basement: Thanks to the publicity, the Carter administration has at least not kicked them out into the arms of the KGB, but the administration has put subtle pressure on them. Several weeks ago visiting Baptist clergymen from the United States asked to see the trapped Pentecostals. They were denied permission.

In an article published in Religion in Communist Dominated Areas, Soviet dissident Arkady Polishchuk claims that more than 30,000 Christians have taken the chance to apply for emigration. He suggests that hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, more are waiting to see what happens to those who have legally applied. The suppression of Jews seeking to emigrate is well known; the repression of Christians seems to be as unyielding.

The dissatisfaction religious people have with the Soviet Union is due to the overt repression they face. If there are a few churches that continue operation, those who attend services are placed on a subversive list. Soviet citizens are allowed to go to church but they cannot, in the name of their church, participate in charitable activities, evangelize their fellow citizens or give their children religious training. Believers face enormous problems, most intentionally created by the communist government. Polishchuk, for example, was 40 years old by the time he saw his first Bible Christians and Jews are not the only victims of communism's atheistic repression. The Islamic rebels of Afghanistan know the threat the Marxist dictatorship poses to their cherished religious convictions as well. Those who believe in God, whatever their religion, should be aware of this threat. Freedom of religion is something Americans have taken for granted for too long.

Remember Canada for a splendid act forget what the Canadians did.

They came to us in our adversity, shielded some of our people in Iran, comforted them, gave them hope. And then, at great personal risk, the Canadians helped the six Americans to freedom.

Fair-weather friends are a dime a dozen. It's the person or the country who comes to someone in the darkness of trouble and says, "Let me help," who deserves lasting thanks and admiration.

In recent years, Canada has had her own brand of problems. There were times when our frailties shone through in our dealing with one another. It is unusual when there are never sharp words between neighbors.

When the chips were down in Iran, however, the Canadians gave evidence to

After all the Iran mess is over, let us not the world what strong ties exist between their country and our own. There was extreme risk in hiding the six Americans. Iran was and is a country writhing in pains of its own making. If the Americans had been discovered, the Canadians would have

> Canadians could have reacted to our Iranian problem with unconcern. "You got yourself into trouble, now get yourself out," might have been its attitude. It wouldn't have been the first time when other supposed friends turned on their heels when this country found itself in hot

The Canadians don't need to read Ralph Waldo Emerson ("The only way to have a friend is to be one.") to know about friendship. Let us not forget.

Mobil loses voice

Mobil Corp. recently wanted to run a commercial on the three major television networks that pointed out the networks are more profitable than Mobil

But the networks wouldn't allow it. They turned Mobil down flat

NBC said under its policy partisan viewpoints on important issues, such as oil company profits, are presented in news and public affairs programs, and not in paid commercials. ABC said it had a similar policy. CBS said its refusal to air the ad "had nothing to do with our profits."

Here's part of the commercial:

"To get profits in perspective," the man in the commercial says, "business analysts look at percentages, just as you do when you open a savings account. Over the years. Mobil has earned about the same profit percentage on money invested as the average for all manufacturing industries and less than for ABC, CBS and NBC."

Mobil says that it earned 20.8 percent on shareholders' equity in 1979, up from 13 percent the previous year. In 1978, the return figures for ABC, CBS and RCA, which owns NBC, respectively, were 21.6 percent, 21 percent and 17.4 percent. The 1979 figures are not yet available. Mobil has a right to complain. The way some television and radio announcers have screamed over oil profits you would think they had been garroted. What they didn't point out in most of their stories is that much of those profits will be plowed right back producing new oil. And if profits are small, there will be little additional production.

Figures compiled by Business Week magazine show that Mobil's profits have been at or below the national average of industrial companies. They indicate Mobil earned more than the average in 1974 and 1975 and less than the average in the next

We see no valid reason why the TV networks wouldn't want that kind of information disseminated, especially if it is paid air time

Freedom battling force

By Oscar Cooley When the two most powerful nations of the world start shaking their fists at one another, I wonder - are we on the verge of World War III? As one who vividly remembers two world wars, neither of which accomplished a thing except the slaughter of many of our finest young men, I profoundly hope not.

Indignant as Americans are at the Soviet aggression in Afghanistan, we must face reality. The United States is not, as Henry Kissinger has pointed out, in position to fight a war against a major power on the other side of the world. We haven't the ready forces - ground, water, air - to fight such a war with any hope of success. Our opponent has.

Further, the logistics are all in Russia's favor; the scene of the dispute is at her southern doorstep. From New York to the Persian Gulf via Suez is 8,000 miles. Did not Vietnam teach us how difficult it is to supply an army in the Orient?

We Americans have walked into a trap. We have allowed ourselves to become dependent on an enemy-dominated area for a necessity of life as we live it, petroleum. To lose our access to the Middle East oil would be to lose a substantial part of our

As yet the Russians have not choked off our access to the oil, but they can do so whenever they choose. The Suez route is already controlled by their sympathizers, South Yemen on the east side of the Gulf of Aden and Ethiopia on the west. The Strait of Hormuz, entrance to the Persian Gulf, is flanked by Iran, strife-torn and, like Afghanistan, vulnerable to Soviet invasion. Plainly, we must free ourselves from dependence on Middle East oil. Considering the importance to us of the automobile, not to say the plane, bus, truck and train, all fueled by oil, that will be difficult, but it will be possible through rigid economy plus redoubled effort to find more oil in the Western Hemisphere. We are better off than our allies in western Europe, if that be any comfort.

We must develop sources of energy other than oil, which regardless of what happens in the Middle East, is a wasting resource, but that will take time.

Economy in the consumption of oil can begin at once. In fact, it has already begun. We have cut our gasoline consumption by 5 percent. People can drive less, use public transportation, or walk and bicycle more. They can switch from heating with oil to burning of coal- and wood. Some will hesitate to burn these fuels because they pollute the air, but we must put first things first. Though clean air is important, from experience we know it is not as pressing a need as abundant energy.

It is easy to say we should economize energy, but what will move us to do so? As long as my service station has gasoline. what will cause me to visit it less frequently?

Answer: the price of the gasoline. As the price goes up, I will buy less because I have to. In the American economy, most goods are rationed out to each of us by price. The quantity of each good I purchase depends on the price I must pay. This is both common sensible and fair to everyone. It is the central principle of our distribution system. Let's make full use of it now when we most need that system to work efficiently

Freedom is superior to force. Isn't that what the argument with the Russian communists is all about? We are going all out for freedom; surely we should make utmost use of it.

For this reason, the special tax on 'windfall profits'' is a mistake. The purpose of such a tax is to take earnings from the oil companies by force and hand the money to the government to spend, presumably on finding any tapping new sources of energy to replace dwindling oil. But will the government find such sources? Which is more likely to find them, government which has no special ability in this field, or the oil companies which have made a business of finding, producing and distributing energy? Does government spend money, even in its recognized zone, efficiently? And what of the precedent? If windfall profits are taxed from the oil companies, is there any reason they should not be taxed from steel companies, home builders, machine tool makers, cloth weavers, shipbuilders, food firms, farmers - you

One other question: Does President Carter really expect the windfall profits tax to finance government energy research? Or is his motive rather to retaliate against the oil companies for making so much money as a result of the OPEC price hike?

The oil price hike, the energy shortage, are important issues, but they are far overshadowed now by the threat of war with Soviet Russia. And whether or not we are drawn into a shooting war it seems we Americans are already and always engaged in an ideological war between freedom and force.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the young boy who suspected that his sister was gay because she and her girlfriend ate, slept and even bathed together. (You told him not to worry—that it was probably just a warm friendship.)

Well, I have a daughter I'll call Karen, who also had a "warm friendship" with a classmate named Rita. We thought nothing of it until Karen told us that she and Rita were "in love." They were both 18. We were shocked and sickened, and forbade Karen to see Rita again. We even saw a psychologist with her for several months without any success. That was two years ago. Now Karen has moved into an apartment with Rita, and they plan to live happily ever

We are ashamed and heartsick. Now I wish we had never found out because we feel so helpless. Karen refuses to change; she insists she's "happy" as she is. We think she's sick or twisted, and wonder where we went wrong, where we failed.

We raised two daughters. The older one is happily married. We never considered the possibility that this could happen in our family.

Abby, how do parents learn to cope with a problem like this? We've tried for two years and it's still as repulsive as ever. I am too ashamed to give my name and address.

DEAR HEARTSICK: First, get over the notion that you have "failed." You haven't. No one "knows" what causes homosexuality, but consider this: Karen's sister was raised by the same parents in the same house as Karen, and she turned out to be heterosexual. Doesn't this suggest that perhaps homosexuality could be an inborn biological trait? For enlightening information, write to: Parents of Gays, 201 W. 13th St., New York, N.Y. 10011, or Box 24528, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024. Be sure to enclose a long, stamped,

One thing is certain, God made gays just as surely as He made straights. And all His children are entitled to live and love in dignity, without shame or guilt.

DEAR ABBY: You told of the "Orr Maneuver" in which a Mr. Orr tape-recorded the annoying barking of a neighbor's dog, amplified it, and played it back at the dog. The pooch was quickly silenced.

Well, that maneuver has even a better use: My friend, "Tiny," a Phoenix insurance executive who needed his sleep, lived about 10 feet from a house of heartless klutzes who played their stereo at a high-decibel volume until well after midnight every evening.

Polite protests to the neighbor got him nowhere, so one evening Tiny recorded their music, set a loud speaker just inside his fence facing their bedroom window. He turned the volume on high and played their own concert back to them 3 o'clock in the morning

Once was enough. Problem solved.

DEAR OREN: Thank your friend, "Tiny," for the free sleep-insurance-policy. I'll underwrite it.

Dr. Wallace: Please please answer my letter in the newspaper. My good friend is being physically abused by his parents. It's getting worse but he is afraid to tell anyone and doesn't want me to do anything, but I feel I should. Hurry, please write your answer. - Tom, Colorado Springs, Colo.

demically Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and have been dating this sweet guy for almost two years. I'm a junior in high school and he is 20 years old and living with his parents. We are engaged and plan to marry after I graduate. His family life is very troublesome and his parents are always throwing him out of the house. He has a job but is not making enough money to support himself so he can't move out.

Because of his miserable home life, he says that he wants to join the Navy. This hurts me because my junior and senior years should be the two most enjoyable years of my life and I want my flance as part of them. I have big plans for the junior-senior prom and I wouldn't allow anyone but him to take me. I need this guy and don't want him to leave me. Help! - Jane, Pottstown, Pa.

Jane: It's clear that your boyfriend must get out on his own. If he can't find a male roommate or can't get a better-paying job, then I think the Navy is a good choice.

There are programs that will allow him to serve two years and more importantly, allow him a certain freedom that he needs at this

Q. My husband has a drinking problem. His doctor has prescribed a drug called Antabuse (disulfiram) to help him stay

TWEEN

12 AND 20

By Robert Wallace

How does the medication work and are there any side effects or interactions we should know about?

A. Antabuse is a fascinating drug. In 1937 a doctor reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that workers exposed to this chemical used in making rubber became sick when they drank alcohol. He suggested it would be useful in treating alcoholism.

His idea was ignored. But in 1948 the full potential of disulfiram was appreciated. Two Danish doctors were experimenting with the drug as a treatment for worms. After taking it themselves they went to a cocktail party and, after a few drinks, unexpectedly became quite ill.

They quickly realized that the medicine had made them extremely sensitive to alcohol. Further testing convinced them that it would indeed be useful in helping alcoholics stay on the wagon.

Antabuse has been used for more than 30 years and today hundreds of thousands of alcoholics rely on it to help bolster their resolve to avoid booze.

The drug works by disrupting the normal metabolism and elimination of alcohol from the system. If someone has a drink after taking Antabuse they become deathly sick. As little as half a jigger of liquor can cause flushing, headache and nausea within five or 10 minutes

If a person were foolish enough to drink more than that, he or she could experience anxiety. vomiting. sweating. chest pain. difficulty breathing and dizziness. In some people serious complications could even lead to death.

Antabuse is a long-acting drug, and this nasty reaction with alcohol can occur up to a week after a single dose.

Tell your husband to avoid alcohol in any form including cough medicine and mouthwash. You should also leave out the fancy wine sauces and even wine vinegar

Given by itself the drug is relatively non-toxic. It may cause some sedation and stomach upset and leave a garlic-like taste in the mouth. Some people develop skin blemishes, tiredness, headache, eye pain, numbness, and reduced sexual potency. but these side effects are uncommon.

Antabuse can increase the toxicity of several other drugs. If your husband ever has to take anticoagulants, anticonvulsants or antidepressants, he should make sure the prescribing physican knows he's also taking Antabuse. Q. I have been bothered with asthma lately, and have recently started using Primatene tablets. My druggist told me I should use them to prevent attacks, instead of relying upon them after an attack has started. But I'm afraid to take a drug unless I really need it. How safe is the preparation? A. The active ingredients in the medication you're taking, as in most non-prescription asthma pills, are ephedrine and theophylline. They both work to open up your airways, and they're both fairly safe if you stick to the recommended dosages. Ephedrine is a very old drug. Five thousand years ago, the ancient Chinese were using ephedrine derived from herbs. And it is still an important medication in traditional Chinese medicine. Theophylline, which is related to caffeine. is also found in many plants

We don't have to grind leaves to get these drugs anymore. Since the 1930s, pure synthetic forms have been the mainstay of asthma therapy.

They take action slowly, though, and last a long time, which is why your pharmacist recommended you use those tablets preventively.

Some people find that they become nervous or have trouble sleeping during the first few days of taking these medications. If these side effects do not go away, or if you experience nausea, headaches or trembling, you should stop the tablets and

Russian ice hockey team makes life miserable for opposition

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The Soviet ice hockey team is rolling over its Olympic opposition like a red tidal wave, and no one is less surprised than that youngish old pro of the New York Rangers, Rod Gilbert.

"In Olympic hockey," he said, "you have the Russians, a wide gap and then everybody else. They are by far the best. The tournament is a mismatch."

Gilbert, who played right wing for the Rangers from 1961 through 1978, is attending the XIII Winter Olympics as commentator for a Canadian TV network. As such, he is renewing some old acquaintances with guys wearing the letters CCCP on their jump suits.

"I've played against a lot of them," he said, calling off names such as Tretiak, Starikov, Petrov, Shalimov, Vasiliev, Balderis and Mikhailov, "Look at their roster. When you see guys around 30 years old and over, you can bet I've swapped a few licks with them against the boards."

Gilbert is Canadian a Quebec kid who

Gilbert is Canadian, a Quebec kid who got away from the Montreal Canadiens. Ice hockey is Canada's national sport. It traces its roots back to the 1850s when kids played the game with broomsticks and stones on Canada's frozen lakes. The first known league was organized in 1885.

Canadians naturally dominated the sport, equipping the rosters of the pro National Hockey League, until the Russians became intrigued with the pasttime about 30 years ago. Then the international climate changed dramatically.

Whereas Canada held sway over both professional and amateur hockey for generations, the Russians have won 16 world championships and five of the six Olympic gold medals — the United States snapping the streak in 1960 — since they started playing seriously in the 1950s. Also they have beaten the best of the NHL teams.

How were the Russians able to close the gap so quickly?

"First they absorbed our know-how, reading every book they could get their hands on dealing with our techniques,"

Gilbert said. "To this knowledge they added their faculty for rigid discipline, then refined this with what they learned through competition with our best teams and finally built an almost flawless machine."

The USSR boasts 26,077 collectives — farms, schools and the like — where the game is taught. They have 749,291 players, according to the team brochure, 6,461 of whom are top grade or Masters of Sport. There are 986 full-time coaches and 50,469 unpaid instructors.

"They don't have many player turnovers." Gilbert said. "The present squad has more than half a dozen guys who played against our NHL all-star team in 1972 when we had to rally with three wins in Russia to squeeze out the series 4-3-1. They are the same men who last year convincingly whipped the best in the NHL."

Gilbert said the Russians are not better individually than their western rivals — they're just collectively better.

It's final week in Southwest Conference

By DENNE FREEMAN

The Southwest Conference goes into its final week of the regular season with a schedule maker's delight, logjams for first and third.

The Texas Aggies and the Arkansas Razorbacks have already made their reservations for the semifinal games Friday night Feb. 29 in HemisFair Arena in San Antonio in the SWC Tournament.

Tied with 12-2 records, the Aggies and Razorbacks are competing this week for the regular season title and the top seeding in the tournament.

Texas. Texas Tech and Houston are knotted with 8-6 ledgers and battling for the only other bye available, a quarterfinal berth Thursday night. Feb. 28.

Teams finishing fourth through six get homecourt advantages in the first round of the tournament Feb. 25.

The clubs fighting for a third-place post have already at least clinched the home gym edge for the first round.

Southern Methodist (6-9) and Baylor (5-10) are struggling for the other home advantage position.

Arkansas and SMU play tonight in Dallas. The Razorbacks have one other game, home against Texas Tech on regional television Saturday afternoon.

The Texas Aggies host TCU Tuesday night then play on the road against Houston Friday night. Should Arkansas and Texas A&M win their remaining games a coin flip would determine which school gets the No. 1 seeding in the tournament.

In games Tuesday night, Houston is at Rice. Texas is at Tech, and the Aggies host the Horned Frogs.

Over the weekend, several Aggie players showed up in tuxedos and then A&M waltzed to an 84-61 victory over Texas.

The Houston Cougars beat Baylor 60-58 to tie Texas and Texas Tech for the important third place in the standings.

The tuxedos? Guard Dave Britton, forward Vernon Smith, student trainer Jay Harris and team manager Mike Owen wore them to the game.

"We went in to pickup some dry cleaning and a woman showed us the tuxes," said Smith. "We wore them over from the dorm. We were just trying to do something different to loosen up the team."

The relaxed Britton and Smith scored 20 and 21 points, respectively.

The Toy Manufacturers of America, Inc., an industry association, estimates that 1979 sales reached $5.8 billion at the retail level, an increase of about 13 percent from the year before. Prices last year were 15 percent higher on the average, than they were in 1978 and the trade group predicts they will go up another

The fourth-quarter of the year is still the biggest selling season for toys, but the manufacturers say the introduction and popularity of electronic games has widened the market. People buy the games all year long and they seem willing to pay higher and higher prices

The manufacturers estimated that 3.600 new items were on display at the annual toy fair this year, but some of the so-called 'new" products are simply variations on existing lines.

Mattel Toys of Hawthorne. Calif.. the biggest toymaker in the world. listed 241 products as new. Among them were new accessories for the "Barbie" doll, now in its 21st year. The "Barbie Dream Furniture" collection now includes bathroom items. "The commode can be filled with water and has realistic flushing action." says the company. The doll-size bathtub also can be filled with water and drained realistically - the water going into a storage tank in the bottom half of the tub to be drained Going from beauty to the beast. Mattel offers "Gre-Gory." the vampire bat, "Press Gre-Gory bat's back," explains Mattel. 'Blood' surges into his see-through belly." In case you'e worried. the company is quick to point out that the "belly" is tightly sealed.

Kenner Products of Cincinnati, a division of General Mills, Inc., described 85 of its offerings as new. Like Mattel, however, Kenner, is sticking with success and that means "Star Wars." Sales of "Star Wars" toys, introduced in 1978, increased by 30 percent last year alone. Included in the 1980 line are 23 toys linked to the upcoming movie. "Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back."

Tom Clark, Kenner's "Star Wars" product manager, indicates there is little relief in sight for parents who tired of the Force being with them. "There are 12 written scripts for movies. offering endless possibilities for new toys." he said.

Abd. from the Milton Bradley Co., the people who brought you Simon." there is "Milton." Describing the new electronic game. which involves completing phrases correctly by pushing buttons. the company says: "Milton' not only talks, he talks back

Legislative races gain momentum

AUSTIN Texas (AP) - Voters won't have any choices to make in electing almost a third of the members of the Texas House this year. Barring upsets by by write-in candidates, 46 of the 150 House members were — in effect — re-elected on the Feb. 4 candidate filing deadline because nobody filed against them.

Three senators of the 16 whose seats will be filled by this year's elections - Carl Parker of Port Arthur, Tati Santiesteban of El Paso and Walter Mengden of Houston - also drew no opponents.

John Liston of Orange, says, however, he will run against Parker as a write-in candidate

Cuban says Soviets

'laughing at U.S.'

House members who are home free include four conservatives who have lined up for a shot at the 1981 speakership if Speaker Bill Clayton's troubles with an FBI "sting" investigation cause him to resign. Clayton appointed each to an important committee chairmanship last year.

They are

- Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, chairman of the House Committee on Intergovernmental Affairs. - Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, chairman of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence.

- Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of the House Committee on Regions. Compacts and Districts and speaker pro tem of the House. Clayton chose Von Dohlen to oversee 1981 legislative and congressional redistricting and to make preparations for the politically and technically exhausting task.

- Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, chairman of the House Committee on Environmental Affairs.

Skating to elections without opposition will give speaker candidates plenty of time to seek advance pledges of support from other representatives

Clayton himself is unopposed for a tenth two-year term as DALLAS (AP) — A former Cuban newspaper editor and political prisoner said the Soviet Union is "laughing at the United States"

Some of the Soviet installations are so secret, said Eugenio de Sosa

Clayton has a subpoena to tell a federal grand jury next month about his encounter with FBI plant Joseph Hauser and union leader L.G. Moore of Deer Park in which Moore left $5,000 behind as a "political contribution Several representatives and lobbyists say they believe Clayton would resign as speaker if he is indicted. That could set up a speaker election in August if Gov. Bill Clements goes through with his plan for a special legislative session them.

Normally. House members choose the speaker at the start of each regular session in January of odd-numbered years

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, the only member to challenge Clayton for the 1981 speakership, has both Democratic primary and general election opponents.

And, he said, the Soviets are behind a new "reign of terror" that has jailed 25.000 political prisoners and forced scores of Cubans to secretly flee for asylum in the United States.

"They are coming now like they were 15 years ago." he said. A week ago. 65 Cubans escaped to America on a barge. De Sosa. 63, said he was subjected to electroshock treatments and other tortures while in prison.

He said his arrest as a dangerous person came because of his educational background and his refusal to accept the Communist doctrine. De Sosa said he attended the Choate School, England's Brighton College and law school in Havana.

In Cuba, he said, he owned a sugar plantation, mill and refinery and for five years was editor of Diario de la Marina, a conservative Havana newspaper that opposed Castro's takeover in 1960.

Salvage crews attempt to raise Blackthorn

TAMPA. Fla. (AP) -Salvage crews were to try again today to raise the sunken Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn from Tampa Bay, where it has been disrupting shipping traffic since taking 23 seamen to their deaths three weeks ago.

Meanwhile, the skipper of the doomed cutter. Lt. Cmdr George J. Sepel, was expected to testify before a Marine Board of Inquiry investigating the Jan. 28 collision of the Blackthorn and the oil tanker Capricorn.

Sepel earlier had refused to testify, citing constitutional protections against self-incrimination. However, he has since agreed to take the witness stand

In his third day of testimony Sunday. Ensign John R. Ryan, 29. deck officer of the Blackthorn, said he left the deck to prepare classified radio messages shortly after the cutter left for its home port of Galveston, Texas.

"It's hard for me to believe that there would be anything classified about the Blackthorn's movements from Tampa to Galveston," said William R. Dorsey, a Baltimore lawyer representing a Capricorn crewman. "The KGB reads everything

- even the Tampa papers." responded Rear Adm. Norman C. Venzke, ranking Coast Guard officer on the board, in a reference to the Soviet intelligence agency. Venzke later questioned Ryan privately and announced the
