Grassland destroyed in fire

GROOM — A raging grass fire swept through hundreds of acres of Panhandle grassland Friday afternoon requiring the efforts of several area fire departments to bring the blaze under control.

Seven Panhandle area fire departments from Pampa, White Deer, Groom, Panhandle, Claude, Lefors, McLean and Clarendon were called to the scene, Mrs. L. A. Hudson said.

A lot of farmers who had water tanks came to assist the firefighters, she said. She said she had heard reports that as many as 200 people were fighting the blaze spurred by 35-40 mile per hour southwesterly winds.

The stiff winds pushed the fire eastward into Gray County and continued burning along Texas 70 near Pampa involving approximately 2,500 acres of land.

The fire originated on the L. A. Hudson farm about two miles west of Groom, destroying two garages, a chicken house and an outbuilding used as a brooder, Mrs. Hudson said.

A manure pile surrounded by bales of hay had been on fire, she said, and the Hudsons had been pouring water on it for two days.

"We don't know whether something blew from the smoldering fire or if it started in one of the garages," she said.

Damage to the Hudson property, she said, amounted to the total destruction of the buildings and four sections of grass (200 acres).

A spokesperson from the Pampa Fire Department said they received the call for assistance from the Groom Fire Department at about 3:05 p.m.

Two booster trucks and an emergency vehicle was dispatched to the scene and city firefighters battled the blaze until 8:20 p.m. that evening — a period of over five hours.

Mrs. Myrtle Knorr of Canyon — owner of a nine-room farm home near the Hudsons — said only grass was burned on her property.

The two residences on the Hudson farm was left unscathed by the flames, Mrs. Hudson said.

No estimate on damages from the fire has been made at this time.

Stafford gets ninth death sentence

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — "If it comes time for me to die, I'm man enough and I'll take what they give me." Roger Dale Stafford said after a jury gave him three new death sentences Friday.

Stafford — now condemned to death nine times — sat stone-faced as he was sentenced for murdering Air Force Sgt. Melvin Lorenz, 38, his wife Linda, 31, and son Richard, 12, of San Antonio, Texas, on June 22, 1978 in a robbery near here.

"Thank you, your honor," Stafford said softly to Associate District Judge J. Kenneth Love, after Love read the three death sentences handed down by a seven-man jury.

Love set formal sentencing for March 17. At that time, he must set a date for Stafford to die by lethal drug injection unless he rules that Stafford was improperly convicted and declares a mistrial.

Like the six death sentences he received in October for gunning down six Oklahoma City steakhouse workers, the three death sentences Stafford received Friday will be appealed. Even if Stafford loses all appeals, he could not be executed for years.

"It's a disappointment," Stafford said after the verdict. "I didn't do the crime. I'm not guilty."

"I always have hope," Stafford added. "If there wasn't no hope there wouldn't be no tomorrow."

"All I can do is hope and pray I have an appeal," the 28-year-old Alabama drifter said.

Stafford said he isn't angry, with the jury. "They had a job to do and they did it and they did a job on me," he said.

"Ultimately, I'm still convinced that we'll prevail," said J. Malone Brewer, the Oklahoma City attorney who unsuccessfully defended Stafford in both of his multiple-murder trials and will handle appeals of the cases. Brewer said he believes appeals will prevent Stafford from ever being executed.

Brewer said at the start of the trial that McClain County District Attorney Kay Huff offered a plea bargain in which Stafford would have pleaded guilty to murdering the Lorenz family in exchange for a prosecution recommendation that he receive two consecutive life prison sentences. Brewer and Stafford rejected the offer.

"I did everything I knew how to do," a weary Brewer said after a reporter asked him if he blamed himself for Stafford's nine death sentences. "If it's my fault, it's my fault."

The jury returned a guilty verdict after about 90 minutes of deliberations and returned the three death sentences after about an hour's deliberations in the penalty phase of the trial.

LaVerne Lorenz, the ex-wife of Melvin Lorenz and mother of Richard Lorenz, wept softly as the guilty verdicts against Stafford were read, holding her hands over her face.

"I think he should die," Mrs. Lorenz said outside the courtroom, fighting back tears. "I waited a long time for this."

Mrs. Lorenz, of Burbank, Calif., embraced Mrs. Huff and said softly, "Thank you very much."

Dennis Lorenz, Melvin Lorenz's brother, also hugged the prosecutor after the verdict.

"A person can get up and kiss all the members of the jury," said Lorenz, 33, a county parks official and part-time deputy sheriff from Jamestown, N.D. "Something really super happened."

"I can't think of a more brutal crime than this," Mrs. Huff told jurors in arguing for the death penalty. "Remind yourself of the brutality, remind yourself about the photographs," she said, referring to grisly photos of the blood-soaked bodies of the Lorenz victims she introduced into evidence.

"The only way that we can make sure that Roger Dale Stafford will never be able to kill another human being is to inflict the death penalty on him," Mrs. Huff told jurors.

Brewer compared the death penalty to murder in his arguments.

Mrs. Huff said she will meet next week with Oklahoma County District Attorney Andrew Coats — the prosecutor in the steakhouse murders case — and other officials to decide what charge will be filed against Stafford's wife, Verna, who was the star prosecution witness against her husband in both trials.

"She will be charged," Mrs. Huff said. The prosecutor said Mrs. Stafford's cooperation with authorities will be taken into account.

Mrs. Stafford, 26, testified in the steakhouse trial that she joined her husband and his late brother, Harold, in robbing a Sirlon Stockade steakhouse in Oklahoma City on July 16, 1978.

Brazilians wait in vain for Jupiter spaceship

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Thousands of Brazilians threw a party for some visitors from Jupiter early Saturday, but the guests failed to show up.

Police estimated that as many as 50,000 persons held an all-night vigil and prepared a reception for a spaceship from Jupiter. But it turned into angry frustration and a mammoth traffic jam when the Jovian visitors did not land at a farm near here.

The thousands of UFO watchers gathered in a farm at Casimiro de Abreu, a small town 75 miles east of Rio, after Edilio Barbosa, a rancher in the area, announced in a nationally televised program that the flying saucer would land there at 5:20 a.m. — 3:20 a.m. EST — Saturday.

A "Reception Committee" prepared a cordial welcome for the visitors. A luxurious issue of an encyclopedia "featuring the most complete information about our planet" was to be given to the Jovians as a welcome present by Casimiro de Abreu mayor, Celso Sarzedas. It will be given to the town's public library instead.

An official "Salute Anthem" by Neves Gurgel, a composer and UFO hobbyist, will be played on some other occasion, a committee member said.

Some 350 Rio de Janeiro state police troopers and Federal Highway Patrol officers were mobilized in an "Operation UFO" to maintain order during the night-long vigil. Sale of alcoholic beverages was banned. Casimiro de Abreu police chief Heralmir Ramirez said proudly: "Everything worked out beautifully. There wasn't a single incident of violence."

He said many people voiced their frustration and anger, "but nothing really happened. What we had was a big traffic jam." Ramirez said as many as 4,000 cars, buses and trucks from several Brazilian states came to the town of 6,000 inhabitants.

When the appointed hour came there was a "profound silence that lasted for several seconds," Ramirez said in a telephone interview. Then somebody in the huge crowd shouted loud and clear: "Hey, where is the UFO? I want my money back." It was a joke, Ramirez said, because nobody really paid anything to be there.

But many people did pay for many things that business-minded Brazilians were selling there — hot dogs, small robots, signs reading "Welcome, peaceful friends from outer space."

Choirs sweep contest awards

By DEBBIE DUKE
Pampa News Intern

As in previous years, the Pampa High School Choral Department proceeded to place Pampa on the map by bringing home the honors Thursday from the annual University Interscholastic League (UIL) Contest in Amarillo.

In the contest, area choirs compete in both concert performance and sight reading. They are rated on a scale of one to five by three judges, with a first division being the superior rating. The other ratings are as follows: second division, excellent; third division, good; fourth fair; fifth division the lowest, a poor performance.

Under the direction of John Woickowski, the high school choirs all received first division ratings in concert, the highest of the ratings.

The contest results stand as follows: treble choir — I in concert — III in sight reading; freshmen choir — I in concert — I in sight reading; concert women's choir — I in concert — I in sight reading; concert men's choir — I in concert — I in sight reading; and the concert choir — I in concert — I in sight reading. A first division rating in both concert and sight reading competition results in a "Sweepstakes" — the most prestigious of all UIL honors.

Contest judges were quite complimentary, as shown by the critique sheets on each choir.

"The concert women were very impressive," John King of Houston wrote with approval.

Bill Cormack, the executive secretary of the Texas Music Educators Association, added, "Listening to the Pampa choirs has been a pleasure — a very impressive day. Your performance demonstrates your great dedication to music, your director, and yourselves. Let there be no misunderstanding — if you hadn't sung it — you wouldn't have got it."

According to Woickowski, six Sweepstakes were given to AAA and AAAA choirs, four of those going to Pampa choirs. This is the second time since Woickowski has been the Pampa director that his choirs have come away from contest with that number of awards.

In the class CCC (junior high) competition, only three first division ratings were given — one of which went to a Pampa Middle School choir.

The Middle School choirs, under the leadership of Elena Donald, rated as follows: seventh grade girls' choir — I in concert — II in sight reading; eighth grade girls' choir — II in concert — II in sight reading; seventh and eighth grade combination boys' choir — III in concert — II in sight reading; and the eighth grade mixed chorus — II in concert — II in sight reading.

City backs 'head count'

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

City officials are preparing to assist the United States Census Bureau in the "head count" for 1980 beginning on April 1.

Pampa needs the census count, officials say, for accurate population information used in many city endeavors.

The census is necessary for the city. City Manager Mack Wofford said, to help commissioners make decisions where the number of citizens is affected and in grant applications, to name a few.

"The Chamber needs the census count for the selling of Pampa," Chamber of Commerce manager, Floyd Sackett said. He explained the population count is used to help convince outside firms to locate in the city.

"I don't necessarily agree with all the questions in these (the census questionnaires)," he said, "but I realize how much we need a correct census count and how important it is."

A local review committee will be formed in the coming week's city commission meeting, Wofford said. "A local effort is being made to be sure each individual is counted," he said.

The committee will review the results of the census, Sackett said, and check the results with the city's records to see if they coincide.

The nationwide population census will begin on April 1. The census has been taken every 10 years since 1790, in accordance with a provision in the constitution calling for a national roll call every decade in the years ending in "0".

Beginning in 1985 the national Census Bureau will be holding a count in the middle of each decade.

Censuses taken through 1950 were obtained in a conventional way: Census takers spread out and interviewed a member of each family.

Then in 1960 the Bureau mailed out a few questionnaires and asked the people receiving them to fill the questions out and hold them until a census taker arrived.

In 1970, however, the Bureau decided to ask areas of the country with 3-5ths of the population to answer the questionnaire and mail it in on Census Day.

Now, the Bureau intends to expand the mail-out, mail-back system. On March 28, a questionnaire will be delivered to each of the "estimated" 80 million households in the U.S.

In areas with about 90 percent of the population, householders will be asked to mail back the completed questionnaires in pre-paid envelopes on Tuesday, April 1.

The less populated areas such as Alaska, sections of the Rocky Mountain and Southwestern states and the northern-most points of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Maine will have a census taker to pick the questionnaires up.

In 1970, 87 percent of all households mailed back the forms. In 1980, however, the Bureau expects the mail-back rate to slip. It is hoping for an 80 percent mail-back rate nationwide.

A perfect census is unrealistic, but it is possible to reduce the "undercount" — the population miss rate.

The Bureau is particularly hoping to reduce the minority undercount. The difficulty in counting minorities could be linked to the belief that the Bureau shares the personal information with other government agencies.

Government officials say this is not true. They say that under Title 13, of the United States Code, all personal census information must be kept strictly confidential.

Nationally, the census is used to apportion fairly the seats in the House of Representatives.

Recent court rulings have allowed many state and local governments to use the data to draw legislative districts and ward boundaries.

The information can be used to help city and county planners advantageously locate schools, health care centers, and senior citizen facilities.

Be prepared for the questionnaires due on March 28. The average form of 19 questions will take about 15 minutes to finish.

If you get the long version... be ready! It has 65 questions, some requiring past income tax information and will take about 45 minutes to complete. Fortunately, only one in six residences — randomly selected — will get this form.

With this reporter's luck...

Board gets tough with suspended students

By LEE JONES

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — In what chairman Joe Kelly Butler called a "landmark decision" for discipline, the State Board of Education Saturday upheld a Houston-area school district's policy of reducing the six-week grades of suspended pupils.

The vote was 14-2, with board members Virginia Currey of Arlington and William Sarsgard of Fort Worth voting "no," to uphold the Klein Independent School District policy.

Ms. Currey accused Butler of "election year rhetoric" about discipline.

Parents of Joseph Rogers, a former pupil of Strack Intermediate School, attacked the policy after the boy — then an eighth grader — was suspended for three days for fighting in November 1978.

Following the Klein school board's policy, Rogers' six-week grade in each course was lowered three points per day of suspension — a total of nine points.

Rogers' six-week grades dropped from two As and four Bs to two Bs and four Cs.

State Education Commissioner Alton Bowen agreed with Rogers' mother and stepfather, Dr. and Mrs. Keith Weaver, that the policy amounted to "punishment for being punished" and exceeded the Klein school board's legal authority.

The state board overruled Bowen's decision, although some who voted to do so questioned the Klein policy.

Butler said upholding the Klein action "would become a landmark decision for this board, showing the 1,100 school districts of this state that this board does stand behind them 100 percent, interlocking discipline and local control."

Klein is in Butler's state board district. He is not up for re-election this year.

"I know these people. ... They have built one of the finest suburban school districts in Texas. They didn't build it by being nabby-pabby in their treatment of kids. They make the law and they expect it to be obeyed," Butler said.

Mary Ann Leveridge, board member from East Bernard, voted to Pampa man sentenced

A 48-year-old Pampa man was sentenced to four years in the state penitentiary during 31st District Court proceedings Friday.

Gordon Jack Addington of 620 N. Christy pleaded guilty to a felony charge of driving while intoxicated — a subsequent offense stemming from an arrested Dec. 2, 1979.

Judge Grainger McIlhenny for the 31st District sentenced Addington to the penitentiary in light of the evidence of a previous conviction of driving while intoxicated for which the man served time, District Attorney Harold Comer said.

Elvis Lee Miller, 48, of 1300 W. Kentucky, was convicted of felony driving while intoxicated on Dec. 28, 1979. McIlhenny sentenced the man to two years in Gray County jail — probated — and fined him $750.

James Claude White, 27, of 1022 S. Wilcox was also sentenced to county jail for felony driving while intoxicated charges. The two year sentence was probated and White was fined $600 by the court.

Tuesday, Comer said, jury selection for the State of Texas versus Adrian Franklin Hartman trial will begin.

The 28-year-old Hartman was charged with unlawful delivery of marijuana on Dec. 13th, 1979 after an investigation conducted by the Department of Public Service narcotics division, he said.

uphold the Klein policy but said, "It seems to me there is bound to be another way of punishing students. ... It is difficult to understand how a student could be punished in an academic area for a disciplinary matter."

Ms. Currey said it was wrong to penalize a youngster academically for an out-of-classroom infraction for which he already had been punished by suspension.

Butler said after the vote, "Discipline is the No. 1 problem in the schools today."

"The board hasn't taken a strong stand on discipline before, and in my opinion, now is the time," he said.

"That's election year rhetoric," Ms. Currey said in a separate interview. "Discipline is the code word in education circles this year. Discipline is the mod, new code word."

According to case records, young Rogers and his family have since moved out of Texas.

How to avoid the 3 mistakes of funeral planning.

Anyone who's planned a funeral knows how hard it is to make wise decisions under emotional strain. And how easy it is to (1) accept rather than select the type of service to be performed; (2) overlook some of the options; and (3) possibly spend more than you should for the funeral.

National Selected Morticians offer a free booklet that will help you avoid these mistakes. Read it and you can become better prepared to make the right decisions if, and when, the need arises.

IT'S TIME TO BUNDLE UP

Winter is here and time to bundle up to be warmer and more efficient with the energy you use.

Here are some tips that will help you wrap up your home to use energy more efficiently.

- *Add an extra blanket of insulation in the attic.
- *Secure ductwork joints with screws and wrap with tape to stop air loss.
- *Feel warmer by installing storm doors and windows.
- *Change the heating unit air filter when dirty.
- *Caulk and weatherstrip air leaks and infiltration around all doors and windows.

That about wraps it up for the basics. It's good to know there are some things you can do and depend on to be more comfortable this winter.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Welcome to the Top o' Texas

To all out-of-towners in Pampa for the "Top o' Texas Hereford Breeders Show and Sale," we say WELCOME TO THE TOP O' TEXAS!

You couldn't be in any friendlier part of Texas. We in the Texas Panhandle are proud of our youth and our community and hope you enjoy your stay here.

Many Pampa residents, as well as Top O' Texas 4-H and FFA members (and their mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, and all volunteering friends), have been preparing for months and especially during the past week, for this annual gala event.

Getting livestock ready for the shows has been a year-long process for most of the youngsters, an activity which we read is getting less and less profitable.

But we know of one youngster who found raising a steer profitable last week — 15-year-old Angie Airhart of Lamesa, Texas. Her grand champion steer Geoffrey Beane sold for a world record $110,000 at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.

According to a report by the Associated Press, on the auction block, some $350,000 was paid to young owners of grand and reserve champions.

The breakdown: grand champion steer, $110,000; reserve champion, $52,000; grand champion lamb, $41,000; reserve, $21,000; grand champion barrow, $36,000; reserve, $24,500; grand champion turkey, $15,000 (that's gotta be some Thanksgiving!); reserve $7,000; grand champion pen of broiler chickens, $26,000; and reserve, $18,000.

Although we don't anticipate any sales that high in the Panhandle, we hope the Top O' Texas tops itself this year as an encouragement to youth to continue their endeavors.

Good reporter's life can be a lonely one

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial was written more than a decade ago by a Freedom Newspaper editor. We have published it before, and we offer it again now because we consider it to be a classic commentary which merits repeating every few years.)

Beware the newspaper reporter whom everybody loves and the editor who is buried with public honors.

This is not an invariable rule, but it's as good a generalization about the newspaper business as you'll come across.

Well, what's wrong with a reporter who is the town pet and the editor who is one of the sweetest guys in town?

Principally, it is not the nature of their trade, properly plied, to win popularity contests. The best of them frequently enjoys the affectionate regard of an exceedingly small group, but he doesn't give much of a damn either.

Reporting a stormy session of the school board, a bitter divorce action, a bare-knuckle political campaign — reporting these things accurately is not going to win a newspaper man the affection of the principal contenders.

"My God did I say that?" asks the shocked city councilman when he reads an account of yesterday's meeting in which he was a heated and noisy contender.

"I wish I hadn't," is his next sentiment.

Then, "I don't think I could have said that."

Later, "I know I didn't say that!"

And eventually, "I was misquoted!"

It is remarkable how a man, virtually in a frenzy of argument, can remember the next day, with such clarity, exactly what he didn't say. The reporter took notes, the principal actors ranted and raved. But we are to believe that the notes were less accurate than the recalled version of the angry participants, later.

The handiest device is to blame the reporter, of course; and he is no longer "one of them."

Good reporting seems to exist almost entirely on the local level. The reporter in Washington becomes parties to all sorts of politics. The gross produce of all these men is so similar it is stretching the imagination to think that they are being reporters. They rewrite handouts, they record the words at the press conference, they drink the booze and eat the hors d'oeuvres and if they write anything unpleasant they might not get invited back. And even worse, they may show up their fellow practitioners.

We rather doubt that most "veteran Washington correspondents" (as they are almost invariably called) could cover a city hall to the satisfaction of a good editor.

Everybody in Washington loves these fellows, and why not? The rather insipid product they produce shouldn't get anybody angry. They simply write what they're invited to write by the politicians.

The editor who goes to his grave with a line of mourners from here to the county line is a sorry reporter whose legs went bad.

He frequently is eulogized — often by his own successor — as having been part of every civic betterment project in the history of his town. These good works, on analysis, most frequently turn out to have been forays on the state or federal treasuries. Chances are he was taken in, years ago, by some group of benevolent despots who rules his bailiwick somewhat ruthlessly, he did have to admit, but it was in the best interests of the stupid masses who must be driven to do the right thing, even if they lose an arm or leg in the process. He belonged to almost everything he could get on his expense account. He never said anything startling that would set anyone to wondering if he might be an oddball given to swimming against the current.

Everybody loved good old Joe Eyeshade, the friendly editor. But, strangely enough, when his fan club is pressed to explain exactly what Joe accomplished for his beloved town, they just can't put it into words. Well, he was a nice guy, you know. Kept things out of the paper for the folks who really mattered.

A good Joe, you might say. But sometimes you sort of wonder what really was going on in the town and what else Joe was leaving out of the paper.

No reflection on the dead, you understand. Just wondering.

How politicians get their way

By Robert LeFevre

The posturing of rival politicians as they parade before the international tribunal of public opinion is a bit like a pair of game-cocks strutting, cackling, spreading feathers and making a great racket. But nothing more.

The confrontations in the United Nations and out of it, between Iran and the U.S., Russia and the U.S., Pakistan and the U.S., China and the U.S., and so on, are beginning to pall.

Why don't the political leaders of other countries back down and do as we ask? Let me ask a second question which will probably reveal the correct response to the first question. Have you at any time, currently or in history, heard of the political leaders of a given nation abruptly altering their policy when requested by another group of politicians from another country?

I have never heard of it and I do not expect to hear of it now.

For a gang of politicians in a given country to back down before a group outside that country would be equivalent to acknowledging defeat after a war.

Put the situation in reverse. Let us suppose that we land troops in a small country in the Far East in an effort to protect what are called "American interests." When we do, a second country's politicians, who make speeches against what we are doing, tell us they won't sell us their vodka anymore if we don't stop. Finally, they tell us that they won't play games with us any more unless we change our position.

Do you suppose we would back down? We could not back down. Why? Because the people of this country would immediately charge that our own politicians were so weak and vacillating that they were being dictated to by vodka makers.

No politician can publicly back down to a foreigner. Whether the politician lives in what is called "dictatorship" or a "democracy," this is always true. The only way one group of politicians backs down before another group is when forced by total power of one sort or another to back down. And that happens only when the people of that country give up and ask for surrender, one way or another.

In point of fact, all this hostility, foot stamping, purse swinging and grimace grotesquery has been choreographed for the benefit of the press and the public. The latter is expected to be awed by the sound and fury which signify nothing.

So, let's take a practical look. The whole event began many years ago when American politicians sought to influence politicians of other countries so they would line up and support our "democratic system of government" rather than affiliating with any rival system.

Why did American politicians do it? Because, that is the way foreign politicians do it. We wanted to be like everyone else so we wouldn't appear to be an odd-ball nation that minded its own business.

Let me provide a parallel. How does the labor union reach its objectives? It fosters the belief among its members that management is rich and workers are poor. It further says it "will fight" for the workers. And when the chips are down there is only one weapon the union really has. It uses force and shuts down the obdurate business. Since the unions obtained legal sanction to disrupt the lives of everyone involved, we don't think of it as force. But it is force, naked and brutish, that has even resulted in bombings, shootings, knifings, property destruction and death. But it is all good, clean fun because the law says it is.

War is the only tool a government has when the chips are down. If it really wants another country to follow its dictates, it makes war and compels obedience. That is the way it is done and the only way it is done.

War consists of bombings, shootings, knifings, property destruction and death. This has been legalized so long as government people establish the targets. We don't think of it as good, clean fun because people who are not directly involved are victimized. We have altogether too many instances of innocent men with their legs blown off, their faces demolished, and too much land dedicated to receiving their mutilated corpses. So war is hard to shrug off.

Now let's get to some hard questions. Would you be willing to march down the street, knock on every door and shoot one person out of every five you see?

There may be a few sadists reading these words who would whoop in glee at the prospect. But, surely, not you. Within recent weeks I've been hearing war-talk from many quarters. "We ought to move in and bomb the hell out of Iran," one fellow told me. Okay, so you believe that we should try to compel the crazed and despotic leaders (?) of Iran to release the hostages.

And possibly we should broaden the contest and drive the Russian tanks out of Afghanistan, too. By armed might.

With the first bomb the hostages will die. How many with the second?

Very well. How many of your neighbors are you willing to condemn to death?

How many more taxes are you willing to place upon yourself and your neighbors? Do you wish to see your neighbor's sons, and possibly his daughters as well, legally kidnapped into involuntary servitude so they can lay down all they have in an effort to force alien politicians to do the bidding of American politicians?

I have found that the people who talk war aren't, in the main, talking about laying down their own lives. Some masochists have, I freely admit. But most are saying, "Let there be war, and let those other people (not me) fight it out."

I plead with you, my fellow countrymen, to stop this clamor for war. We have enough problems to solve without adding this.

Today in history

Today is Sunday, March 9, the 69th day of 1980. There are 297 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1974, seven former aides to President Nixon pleaded innocent to charges of a cover-up of the Watergate scandal.

On this date: In 1451, Amerigo Vespucci, the Italian navigator for which America is named, was born.

In 1862, the first battle of ironclad ships was fought in a Civil War encounter between the Monitor and the Merrimack near Hampton Roads, Va.

In 1916, Mexicans led by Pancho Villa attacked Columbus, N.M., and killed 15 people.

One year ago: A judge issued a temporary order prohibiting publication of an article in the Progressive magazine that, charged the government, told how a hydrogen bomb worked.

WASHINGTON--The bottom line in the presidential race is money -- or the lack of it. Everyone, including John Connally, the greatest campaign fund-raiser of them all, is running out of cash and the primaries have just begun.

The Reagan people are making deep cuts in their budgets, and the ones on salary at Kennedy Headquarters are never certain if they will get paid or not.

While many campaign workers are very committed to the candidates they are working for, they still have to deal with such small problems as eating and paying their rent.

How do you keep your help during a campaign when there is no money in the till?

I would guess this scene is being played out in the headquarters of every presidential candidate right now.

"George, I want you to know that you're doing a terrific job in the mailroom."

"Thank you very much. I didn't get my check this week."

"That's what I wanted to speak to you about. Did you ever hear the nursery rhyme about Old Mother Hubbard?"

"I think so. I didn't get my check from last week either. And don't tell me it's in the mail because I work in the mailroom."

"We would never lie to you, George. That's why our man wants to be President. He feels the American people have been lied to long enough. The truth of the matter is that we have the choice of either paying you or printing up 500-bumper stickers."

"Bumper stickers don't need shoes."

"I know how you feel, George, but the very life of this country is at stake. If our man doesn't get elected, no one in this country will be able to afford shoes. You have to think of the future. If we win, we can turn the economy around, and also regain the respect of nations throughout the world. Our man will lick inflation and bring new dignity and stature to the highest office in the land."

"What you're saying is I'm not going to get my check."

"George, if our man becomes President how would you like to be the Ambassador to France?"

"You promised that job to the guy who installed the telephones."

"Well, how about Secretary of Defense then?"

"What's it pay?"

"Seventy thousand plus a chauffeur."

"What else have you got?"

"There might always be an opening on the Supreme Court."

"They're always fighting amongst themselves up there. I don't think I'd like that."

"Well, with your background, George, I'm sure there would be no problem making you Postmaster General."

"Rumor has it you already promised that to a gal who's been stuffing envelopes. Look man, couldn't I just have $50 to see me through the week?"

"I could give it to you George—but it would be wrong."

Employees and productivity

By Oscar Cooley

Teachers who have recently gone on strike have tried to justify this action by saying that when one's cost of living rises, say 13 percent per year, his wage rate should rise accordingly. This seems to be good logic, but is it?

Every worker's wages are limited by what he does — by his product. This is an economic fact of life. And it is logical. The worker's product, or achievement, is his only source of wages. He may receive less than he produces, but he cannot receive more without taking part of what others produce.

This is why economists say that a worker should not expect a raise just because his cost of living has gone up, for a rise in his cost of living does not mean that his productivity necessarily has risen. These two are not at all the same.

Surely the employer is not responsible for what it costs his employee to live. The employer cannot hold this down no matter how much he might like to. So why should he be expected to pay a raise in wages just because it is costing the wage earner more to live?

If by a rise in the cost of living, we mean a general rise in costs, constituting a fall in the general purchasing power of the dollar, that is, inflation — it may be argued that unless the worker gets a raise he has in reality suffered a cut, since he is getting the same number of dollars but they are worth less to him. Therefore he merits an increase in the numbers of dollars he receives, an increase sufficient to make up for the decay in the value of each dollar. In short, he must have a raise in order to continue his usual level of "living." This would seem to justify "inflation raises."

By the same token, during a time of falling prices, "deflation cuts" in dollar wages would be in order.

This is the theory of "indexation," or changes in ones income to match changes in the general price index, that is, to tations in the purchasing power of the dollar.

Note that one can hold inflation raises to be economic without discarding the basic economic principle that a worker's wages have to be paid out of his product. An inflation raise is not a raise in terms of real wealth but merely in terms of dollars. The worker's physical product has not increased, it remains unchanged, but he receives his wage in dollars, and now he is paid more dollars to represent the unchanged amount of his physical product.

It follows that during a period of 13 percent-per-year inflation such as we are now having a worker is justified in asking for a raise of 13 percent yearly in the number of dollars per week he receives, for if he does not get it he is suffering an actual decline in real wealth.

I am assuming that his employer is prospering, by which I mean that the employee's work is just as productive as in the past. If, for some reason, the employer is not responding to market demand, is not offering the kind of goods that buyers want and hence the firm is losing money, then the employee's productivity is declining and his real wages can be expected to decline accordingly.

Employees should not count on raises — real raises — when their employer is heading toward bankruptcy. The Chrysler workers can see that. On the contrary, to preserve their jobs — and one assumes they would want to — they will be smart, in such a juncture, to consider taking a cut.

Much strife arises from the failure of the wage earner to realize that he has a marketing problem. He is not merely a working stiff who gets and holds a job. He is a marketer of labor. And the market for labor, as for corn, TV sets, stocks and bonds, etc., is a complex thing. It has two basic variables: Supply and demand, but each of these continually changes, and for many reasons, each of which is hard to foresee and account for.

The worker's union is supposed to be a help to him in solving his marketing problems. But unions, unfortunately, seldom tie the workers' demands for wage increases to their productivity.

Tower opens new office

WASHINGTON — U.S. Senator John Tower announced today he will open a regional office in Lubbock to serve the West Texas-Panhandle area.

"The needs of citizens in the vast West Texas area can no longer be adequately served by existing state offices in Dallas, Austin and Houston," Tower said.

"Opening an office in West Texas will give me better insights into the needs and concerns of the area. It will give citizens there faster and easier access to the senator. I hope people will use the new office for help with federal-related problems, and get information and to make their views known," Tower said.

The senator chose Lubbock as the site for the new regional office because of its central location, but he emphasized that the Lubbock office director will travel throughout the region to meet local needs.

The office is scheduled to open in June with an initial staff of two persons. It will serve the Panhandle, South Plains, Permian Basin, and the El Paso areas.

The nation's non-metropolitan counties gained 2.3 million in population between 1970 and 1976, growing faster than the cities.

Spelling bee champions named

Gray County's 1980 Spelling Bee champions were named recently in a contest involving school winners from the McLean and Pampa schools.

The county's senior champion is from McLean and he is John Glass, whose brother, Jamie, won the honor in 1977. Parents of the two are Mr. and Mrs. Dale Glass.

The 13-year-old seventh grader in the McLean Junior High, will compete for Gray County in Amarillo on April 12 with 45 other area winners from the Panhandle of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The winner of the regional event in Amarillo in April will go to Washington, D.C. on May 25 as a contestant in the 53rd national event.

Runner-up in the senior division is Amy Radcliff of Pampa Middle School, 12-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Radcliff. Amy claimed the county's junior title in 1979.

The champion of the county junior division is a girl who attends the fifth grade of Horace Mann School, Pampa. She is Kim Bennett, 10, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bennett, 333 Naida.

Last week, Feb. 24 - March 1, was Drug Abuse Prevention Week across the state of Texas, according to volunteers of the Drug Abuse Prevention Division of the Texas Department of Community Affairs in Austin. The program was conducted mainly to "focus public attention on the fact that drug abuse effects everyone, to provide information on prevention and treatment programs and to help Texans recognize the time when drug use crosses the line into drug abuse."

The Drug Abuse Prevention Division estimates that there are between 65,000 and 85,000 persons addicted to narcotics in Texas. Statistics also show that there could very possibly be a decrease in the use of heroin.

However, people are turning to other substances to "get high." Legal, over-the-counter drugs, alcohol, and a mixture of the two are just a few of the serious, possibly fatal tickets to a good time. Officials say that the increase of the other forms of drug abuse is due to the fact that they are easier to obtain and quite a bit less expensive.

Inhalants are another serious problem. Surveys show that twelve percent of the high school students in a Texas metropolitan area last year had inhaled some kind of substance, as compared to four percent nationally.

More and more, family members are seeing the increase in the use of drugs and alcohol in the loved ones... but since they are not using narcotics or marijuana, they fail to consider it drug abuse. Not only are young people involved in the drug scene, but the problem extends to women, the elderly, and professionals.

The Drug Abuse Prevention Division, according to officials, dedicated its 1980 Drug Abuse Week to supporting activities which will act as "Drug Preventers." These programs are focussed at the so-called "at-risk" youth; those who have tried drugs but not abused them, who are bored, and have nothing constructive to do with their time.

Experts in the field of abuse prevention feel that one way to prevent drug abuse is by providing alternative activities, which provide opportunities for rewarding experiences.

A national drug abuse hotline is provided and run by volunteers and is aimed to help youth (or others) combat drug abuse by lending a helping hand and a friend to talk to.

Girl Scout Week

More than 1,400 Girl Scouts in the ten-county area of Quivira Girl Scout Council will join in the nation-wide observance of Girl Scout Week, beginning today with church attendance and highlighted by special events and exhibits.

Pampa Girl Scouts will celebrate with special international dinners for parents Monday and Tuesday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Optimist Club.

East Neighborhood will meet Monday night with Mrs. Katie McDonald, neighborhood chairman, as mistress of ceremonies.

Tuesday night's festivities will be under the direction of Mrs. Deanna Hughes, West Neighborhood chairman. Cindy Stubbs and Michelle Hughes will show a film entitled, "Wyoming Trek," which will include scenes of Girl Scout National Center West, Ten Sleep, Wyo.

Special awards will be presented to those assisting with the Girl Scout program in 1979.

The Monday night flag ceremony will be conducted by Troop 209 with Mrs. Lou Adair as leader. Mrs. Carol Mackey's Senior Troop 619 will lead Tuesday night's flag ceremony.

A special feature of the covered dish supper will be presentation of the Juliette Low world friendship banks by a representative of each troop. The World Friendship Fund was organized 53 years ago by Juliette Low, Girl Scout founder. It helps maintain the international centers that include Our Cabana in Mexico, the centers in India and in Switzerland.

International exchange projects are financed by the fund which assists over 200 U.S. Girl Scouts to travel to over 30 countries each year. In an exchange program, over 200 Girl Scouts and Girl Guides from over 40 foreign countries come to the U.S. annually. Additional aid, including wheelchairs to disaster victims, typewriters, and clothing, is given annually to countries and cities where there is need.

TSU regents ask opinion

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Southern University board of regents will ask the state attorney general's office to rule if $900,000 in school funds deposited in a bank headed by the TSU board chairman is a conflict of interest.

The regents voted Thursday to make the request after it was learned the money had been deposited in National Security Bank in Tyler, where TSU board chairman Ernest Sterling is also chairman of the board.

"I am 100 to one positive that the opinion will show I do not have a conflict of interest," Sterling said after the Thursday meeting.

Sterling had been accused Wednesday by regent Joe Blades of conflict of interest. Blades said Sterling's bank had too much of TSU's money for a bank the size of National Security.

Repairs funds sought for Astrodome

HOUSTON (AP) — An agreement that would provide for $10-$20 million in repairs to Houston's Astrodome has been turned over to the Harris County Attorney for final review, according to county officials.

County Judge Jon Lindsay said the money which will be used by the Houston Sports Association will be raised through county-issued revenue bonds, and that HSA will repay the bonded indebtedness.

Lindsay said the agreement, which includes about $4 million in repairs to the Astrodome's leaking nine-acre roof, will be final if County Attorney Joe Resweber finds no "legal snags" in it.

In exchange for the HSA making the repairs, the county agreed to eliminate a lease requirement that HSA pay the county more than $2 million in delinquent gross receipts money.

The county also agreed not to raise the annual $750,000 rent figure and extended the current lease until the year 2020.

Lindsay said the county would not be legally obligated to pay off the bond issues if HFA defaulted on its obligation.

Ali going after both titles

CHICAGO (AP) — "I want (John) Tate first, then (Larry) Holmes, because I want to be a quintuple champion," says the champ.

Who else but The Champ? Muhammad Ali, 38 years old, three-time former heavyweight champion, at a real heavy weight now, is unretiring again.

His manager, Jabir (formerly Herbert) Muhammad, and Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, said so anyway, signing an agreement last week calling for Ali to fight Tate, the World Boxing Association champion, for what they called a record purse.

The date and location of the fight haven't been decided yet. But the matter could be made academic if Tate loses in a previous commitment.

Holmes holds the heavyweight title recognized by the World Boxing Council, and he and Tate have a television commitment to fight to unify the title in August or September if each wins his title fight March 31. Tate is scheduled to defend his title against Mike Weaver while Holmes fights Leroy Jones.

Should Weaver beat Tate on March 31, it is assumed Weaver would fight Ali in late June, the winner facing the Holmes-Jones victor.

Arum and Muhammad said the pact was signed Wednesday in Muhammad's offices. A formal contract will be signed later, said Muhammad.

Ali, who began training on Tuesday in Deer Park, Pa., approved of the signing in a telephone conversation, said Muhammad.

Ali said he was pleased after a 15-round workout on Tuesday with Eddie Gregory, a light-heavyweight, his first full-scale drill in a year and a half. "We had a pretty good go together," he said.

Ali, tilting the scales at about 248 pounds, said that aside from being a little sore, he was pleased with how well he felt.

He added that "Now I got two more titles I can take. I would rather go out being five-time champion than three-time champion."

Terming Tate "big and slow," he said, "I wouldn't take the risk if I didn't have a chance."

Neither Arum nor Muhammad would confirm reports that the fighters would split $14 million, but Arum said, "All I will say is that the compensation to both fighters is a world record for any boxing match in history. Muhammad would only remark, 'I did it again.'"

His attorney, Charles Lomax, said the $14 million was "approximately correct."

Jones-Meneses bout called off

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Nevada Athletic Commission, fearful a proposed heavyweight bout between Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Yaqui Meneses would damage the state's boxing reputation, has voted not to allow the bout as a nationally televised attraction.

At an emergency meeting last week, the commission rescinded its earlier approval of the 10-round bout, which was scheduled to be televised by CBS from the Aladdin Hotel on March 22.

The commission, however, left the door open for Jones to fight, but only with another opponent replacing Meneses and the bout being downgraded from the "main event" of the card. If another main event is televised, a Jones fight could also be shown but only if the first fight ends in an early knockout, the commission decided.

After ruling out the Jones-Meneses bout, commissioners were still not happy with having Jones fight in Nevada but approved him with the two stipulations.

Commission member Sig Rogich said commissioners reconsidered their earlier approval of the bout after studying films of their first fight and rewatching Meneses' 4-5 record. Meneses lost an earlier bout to Jones, the former Dallas Cowboys football star.

Rogich said the bout between Jones and Meneses "would make a mockery of the sport" and could be "detrimental" to Meneses.

"Promoting farces like this is horrible to the promoter, the property and the commission," he said.

MUHAMMAD ALI spars at his training camp during workouts that he hopes will bring him the heavyweight title for an unprecedented fourth time. Ali weighed in at an all-time high 248 pounds. (AP Photo)

It's Jack Superfrost, Olympic champ

By Murray Olderman

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (NEA) — Since the Olympic Games have become a television happening — and that medium is insatiable in its quest for the grandiose, the spectacular, the event to surpass all events — a suggestion is now forthcoming for the ultimate in winter frolics.

When the next Olympic frigid fun-fest is held (in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, or wherever, world conditions permitting) I propose to find the superman of snow and ice.

Past Olympics have produced tepid versions of such a spectacle. There were skiers Toni Sailer in 1956, Jean Claude Killy at Grenoble in 1968, and Franz Klammer defying gravity at Innsbruck in 1976.

The star of Lake Placid was unquestionably Eric Heiden, a spacy-eyed pre-medical student at the University of Wisconsin, who skims across ice faster than any person in the world.

Well, all Sailer, Killy and Klammer could do was ski. And all Heiden can do is skate. (Sure, I know, all Pavlov could do was dance.)

My man, when he is found (you can include women if you want to circumvent sexism), will be able to do it all. Because I want the Olympic Games to add to their winter program a pentathlon that would test man's capacity to conquer all the challenges of ice and snow competition.

The Summer Games have their decathlon, a 10-event trial that quadrennially spews forth the world's greatest athlete, the most recent of this colossal type being Bruce Jenner of the Prince Valiant haircut, a penchant for Wheaties and an implacable smile.

He is the latest and most marketable of an entire series of world's greatest athletes, which started with Jim Thorpe, the great Sac-Fox Indian, and descended through Jim Bausch, Glenn Morris, Bob Mathias and Bill Toomey.

None, however, would be more impressive than the pentathlete who conquers snow and ice because it encompasses an element the men in short pants don't have to contend with — danger.

In an alternate day schedule that would spread over a week and a half, this is how

Jack Superfrost would prove himself:

1. The giant slalom in skiing. This is a cross between the downhill, that challenge of hurtling speed, and the slalom, which demands the most in finesse and technique. So it becomes a test of all-around Alpine skiing ability.

2. The 70-meter jump. Not as spectacular as the 90-meter jump, but I don't want to kill the competitors off, either. And it's still an examination of man's ability to soar with speed, strength and grace.

3. The 5,000-meter cross country. I want all challengers to show versatility, which is the reason for this Nordic event. It's not ridiculously grueling, such as the 30-kilometer cross country race, but it still demands more stamina than the others on my list.

4. The luge. To excel in winter sports, you've got to be a little crazy — euphemistically, I could call it daring — and any guy careening down ice on his back is inherently daffy. So the luge adds a dash of danger.

5. The 1,500-meter speed-skating race. A fitting finale because it brings all the athletes into a compact outdoor arena for the climactic show, and it puts them on skates, also vital to the winter scene. The distance is a medium length that requires natural speed and agility. And in this last exhausting event, it also requires a final show of tenacity.

The scoring will be set up the same as for the decathlon in the Summer Games, with penultimates for each event based on world records where such exist. In the giant slalom, of course, the site and the particular course will have to set the criterion for the time standard.

Now, you may ask, where are you going to get the superman who can manage to spread out his skills to take on such a test?

No problem. I can easily see Eric Heiden, the best skater in history, transferring his muscular ability to all the other events named, and with the daring required. One of his secret ambitions, supposedly, is to skate down a luge course, an impossible gravity-defying stunt.

Honor Irish with potatoes, corned beef

There is no better way to honor the Irish on March 17 than with a traditional St. Patrick's dinner of corned beef, potatoes and cabbage.

But a traditional dinner need not be cooked using traditional methods. Once, the only way cooks knew to prepare corned beef so that it would be tender was by long, slow simmering in a pot of water. Today, a specially prepared corned beef labeled Corned Beef for Roasting and Simmering can be prepared either by simmering or by oven roasting. Both cooking methods produce a tender, juicy roast, and oven roasting gives the meat a golden brown surface.

Oven roasting instructions call for the corned beef to be placed on a rack in a shallow open pan and cooked in a 325 degree oven for about 2-2½ hours. To test for doneness, insert a sharp-tined fork; when it can easily be removed, the meat is done.

Potatoes are a "must" at least once a day in most Irish homes. Irish Champ, an old-time favorite, is an excellent accompaniment to corned beef. The dish combines mashed potatoes with finely chopped green onions and horseradish.

Buttered cabbage wedges and a green dessert, such as lime sherbet, complete a St. Pat's dinner that any Irishman (or would be Irishman) will love.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Trim off half the greens from onions and discard. Chop remaining onions and greens very finely. Combine milk, butter and onions and simmer 5 minutes. Add milk-onion mixture, horseradish and pepper to potatoes and mash. If necessary, add more milk to reach desired consistency. Serve immediately with a lump of butter in the center of each serving.

IRISH CHAMP

2 pounds boiling potatoes, pared and quartered
1 bunch green onions (4 to 6 onions)
½ cup of milk
¼ cup (½ stick) butter of margarine
1-1½ tablespoons horseradish
¼ teaspoon pepper
Butter or margarine

DR. LAMB

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor told me to gain 14 more pounds at a rate of two pounds a week. I'd like you to send me a good, balanced diet to gain weight. I'm 18 years old and 5 feet 4 and I'm not sure how many calories a day I need to gain weight and how many I need to maintain my weight.

I'm not sure which food groups I should especially increase. I've been eating lots of fattening desserts such as ice cream, pie, cookies and cakes but I doubt these have many nutrients. Should I be eating lots of bread and meat?

I lost 30 pounds in eight months and I still am losing large amounts of hair. I know this is from the poor diet. So is there any special thing I can eat to help replace my hair? Also, are sugar and fat bad for a person?

DEAR READER — I can only guess at what your letter means but I presume that your weight loss was because of a bad diet and that you overdid dieting. People who are on a substandard diet, particularly one that's low in protein, are apt to lose large amounts of their hair. This is temporary and it will come back in time, but it may take several months for all of your hair follicles to become normally active.

You didn't tell me how much you weigh but if you need to gain 14 pounds you must be pretty light. A normal 18-year-old female who is 5 feet 4 will need at least 2000 calories a day for normal nutrition. If you were to gain two pounds of fat a week, you'd need an additional 1000 calories a day.

Now, there are not as many calories in a pound of muscle by a great deal so it depends a lot on what the two pounds are that you gain. I hope some of it will be restoration of your normal muscle mass. People who have been on starvation diets often lose a lot of protein from the body and a great deal of that comes from their body muscles. So it's possible that you may need as much as 3000 calories a day, and that's quite a bit of food.

We usually tell people to avoid sweets and fat because most people have trouble with being overweight, not being underweight. The biggest problem caused by sweets and fat is providing too many calories.

Many of the sweets and fats don't contain anything but calories. They're limited in the amount of minerals and vitamins that they supply for the body. So there's a bigger emphasis on cereals and fresh fruits and vegetables and lean meats and low-fat milk because these are the sources of important vitamins and minerals that your body needs, as well as good quality protein (which is found in the dairy products and the meat group).

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). It will give you a skeleton basis for a balanced diet and you can add to it the foods that have lots of calories. Ice cream, pie, cookies and cake all contain plenty of calories. So if you get your basic minerals and proteins from the basic diet that I am sending you and add these foods to your diet, you'll be getting all the things you need, plus increasing your calories.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 15-year-old who has an A average. To maintain this average I must do a lot of studying. Last week, three large projects were due and I spent all my extra time working on them. Because of doing my homework I did not finish all of my chores.

Because of this, I am grounded for two weeks. My mother says that chores are more important than school studies. Do you agree? Also, do you think my punishment was fair? — Lori, Ogden, Utah

Lori: Schoolwork and chores are both important parts of a teen's life and I can't place a value on which is more important. It depends on the teen and the situation.

In your case, I think Mother was too harsh in her punishment. In fact, unless you were consistently not finishing chores, you should not have been punished at all.

Dr. Wallace: I am 17 and have been dating a wonderful girl for about a year.

My dad, who is a Mormon bishop, does not want me to see her because she is not a Mormon.

When we date, we have a good time and enjoy each other's company very much. We are not serious but care for each other.

My mom understands but not my dad. Whenever I talk to him about it, he gets out the Scriptures and reads something to me that always has a double meaning. Help. — Harmon, Worland, Wyo.

Harmon: While talking with a Mormon leader in Southern California, I was told that Mormons do not discourage dating and even marrying non-Mormons. Hopefully, I was informed, the Mormon member can lead the friend or partner to be a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Mention this to your father but don't expect him to change his mind immediately, if at all.

Dr. Wallace: I've got sort of a dumb question, but I hope you will answer it. I'm a 14-year-old girl who has a 15-year-old friend who happens to be a boy.

By Robert Wallace

He visits me at my house, we play tennis together and study with each other. We really get along well.

I told my mom that I call this boy my boyfriend and Mom said I was too young to have a boyfriend. What do you think? — Gail, Hayward, Calif.

Gail: I think Mother is making more out of this than she needs to.

Prison inmates trained in solar technology

By CHRISTOPHER CORBETT Associated Press Writer

SOMERS, Conn. (AP) — Bill Shelton, Anderson Atkinson and Norman Theriault hope to find a place in the sun as solar-energy technicians when they are released from Connecticut's maximum-security state prison.

"The thing that's pleasing is that this is the first solar-energy training program in a corrections institution in the country," said Edmund Gubbins, superintendent of the correctional school district.

The program, which began a year ago with funding from the federal Energy Department, is designed to teach inmates at the Connecticut Correctional Institution at Somers skills which will make them employable when they are released.

"One of the things I learned was that very, very few people were trained as solar-energy technicians," Gubbins said.

The program, which began with a handful of textbooks, has now developed several working models of various energy-saving devices.

The instructors say the solar-energy program, which combines solar-energy technology with skills relating to air conditioning and refrigeration, also builds confidence and pride in the inmates.

"For most of us, or a lot of us, it's the first thing that's really caught our interest," said Shelton.

Robert Anderson, vocational-education instructor, who developed the course from scratch, believes the program channels the inmates' interests and energies into something that is new and fascinating.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

Can we older spouses spoil each other to excess? I wouldn't have thought so until recently. But now I do — because I did it.

My beloved Otis likes a neat wife, a tidy house, pressed pants, shining appliances and everything in its proper place, inside and out.

He supports and encourages my writing career. But he expects his "castle" to be kept in total order. He even wants everything ironed that is supposed to be ironed, in time for his use, which is whatever time he chooses to set.

I praised the linen industry when no-iron sheets came on the market. I haven't pressed a sheet since. Permanent-press shirts take only a lick and a promise nowadays. I make a pass at shorts and he accepts it because underwear doesn't show. But handkerchieves — well, he doesn't like the ready-pressed kind because the corners roll up. And he wants his good cotton ones ironed faultlessly.

I spoiled him early in our marriage because I wanted his appearance to be as flawless as he did. And I knew that wrinkled handkerchieves would mar perfection.

But lately there have been times when I could not spare the time for 30 minutes of meticulous ironing. Deadlines seemed more important to me than household tasks that could be done the next day or the next week.

So, on a too-busy day, I made a pass at shirts and shorts. Then I shoved our unironed handkerchieves into the dresser drawers.

The next morning I took out an unpressed one for me, saying nothing. So did Otis but not without protest. To put it mildly, he was horrified as he demanded, "How come the ironing isn't done yet?" I explained that I'd done it except for the hankies.

That wasn't good enough. So I ironed one while he waited.

As we laughed about it later, he agreed that an unironed handkerchief never killed anybody — and that constant spoiling should not be taken for granted by either spouse.

We all want to keep our mates happy in every possible way, even to ironing on time if we can. But if circumstances such as illness, absence from home, career demands, etc. need to take precedence, then the spoiling should be interrupted briefly.

Of course Otis and I will go on satisfying each other's small wishes as time and conditions permit. But we're going to be sensible about it, he promises.

I've known a few older mates who demanded, and got, undeserved attentions, even excess labor, from their spouses.

In our young years we lived in a Kansas town where heat was mainly by coal. One of our neighbors was a crippled woman who took in washings to augment her lazy husband's income. One day while I was chatting with her in her kitchen, he called from the living room. "Sue, the fire's going out. Get in here and throw in some coal!" She hobbled in and did so while he continued to rock behind his paper.

Another true anecdote regarding this man was that one year he was shamed into taking a carpenter job. But he never worked one second, past quitting time. Fellow workers swore that one afternoon he leaped down a ladder at the stroke of five o'clock, leaving a nail only half pounded into a shingle.

I believe Sue was a doormat because she let herself be. We want to spoil and be spoiled but not to the point of becoming unpaid slaves to inexcusable demands.

Also, we should not expect too much spoiling. When we're ill or in sorrow or have suffered severe disappointment, we need comfort and sympathy and special spoiling. But as long as we are whole and healthy, we will do well to help ourselves as much as we can, enjoying whatever spoiling we get from our mates but not screaming for more than is reasonable.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband thinks I'm his personal servant. I'm getting sick of picking up his clothes where he drops them on the bathroom floor and cleaning the fish he catches when I don't even like to cook or eat fish. I've done those things for 40 years, but lately he's gotten worse. Do I have to go on shining his shoes and cleaning his muddy old boots? F.W.

DEAR F.W.: You probably do if you've done it all these years. You missed your chance to avoid unreasonable demands when you were first married. But if he does equal favors for you, you have no complaint. If he doesn't reciprocate now, you might suggest a few ways for him to do so. As for the shoes and boots, I think you have a lifetime job.

Write DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Petrochemicals are fraction of cost of consumer goods

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Few people realize the importance of petrochemicals and how little a fraction they represent in total costs of finished consumer goods, says a chemical company president.

"Forty-eight cents will buy the primary petrochemicals to make 24 ounces of nylon fiber in a square yard of household carpet that may cost $15 or more per square yard installed," said Leo H. Johnstone of Phillips Chemical.

"Add a typical $50 passenger auto tire, although it is a complex product involving synthetic rubbers, carbon black, extender oils, man-made fibers, and other chemicals, is made from primary petrochemicals sold by their manufacturers for a total of less than $6."

Johnstone noted petrochemicals are sometimes attacked as energy wasteful, yet petrochemicals and their most visible offshoot — plastics — are among the most efficient users of oil and gas.

Primary petrochemicals such as ethylene and propylene are made from certain petroleum fractions, natural gas, and natural gas liquids, collectively called feedstocks. They are chemically upgraded into a broad array of plastics, man-made fibers, detergents, fertilizers, agricultural chemicals, rubber, pharmaceuticals and other products.

"Thus, petrochemicals help increase our food and clothing supply," Johnstone said.

Steel workers making displays

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Steel workers in a California plant in Alhambra are making massive steel sculptures for public display at nine major U.S. museums and municipalities.

The newest creation, weighing five tons, now stands in front of the Phoenix Art Museum here.

The sculpture is made from a 12-foot by 14-foot rectangle of plate steel. George Elliott, foreman in the Tygart steel plant, supervised the sculpture, being made from models created by California artist Betty Gold.

The nine sculptures are being donated to museums by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney M. Feldman. Feldman is chairman of Tygart. He donated the factory space, the steel workers' time, and materials to support the artist and the program.

Hand-crafted of sturdy stainless steel components, Gas air conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. That means less wear and tear, and lower maintenance costs. And to prove its dependability, Gas air conditioning gives you a ten-year no sweat warranty.

WARDROBES THAT "REALLY WORK"

Wardrobes that "really work" can be expensive, but maintaining them should not be — a vital issue for salaried women. Employed women in the United States spend well over $6 billion a year on clothing — 9-12% percent of their disposable income. A wardrobe is an investment, so an initial expenditure is necessary in order to get a return.

A career wardrobe should project an image that says you're organized, neat, professional, flexible and aware of the world around you. It will be appropriate for the office, and yet take you out to dinner, to a party or into casual weekends. A wardrobe should reflect current fashion, but the serious-minded career woman will want to give the impression that she is working — not a "fashion freak."

Career wardrobes should fit well, be good quality, versatile, comfortable, classic and easy to care for. Also, a wardrobe should reflect a woman's age. Allow your dress to show the charm and wisdom of your years. Don't try to camouflage it — the attempt is generally unsuccessful.

Before planning a wardrobe, first analyze what you have, along with your figure assets. Plan clothing that will coordinate with what you have and enhance your assets. Concentrate on separates which coordinate with each other. A versatile outfit can dress down with the simplest changes. Choose some favorite colors to dominate throughout the wardrobe. It's a good idea to make a swatch or color card of current wardrobe items to carry with you in shopping.

A functional wardrobe includes a skirted suit in a basic color and a quality fabric. A skirt and blazer or jacket, combined with a tailored blouse, pumps or boots and appropriate jewelry create a professional look. Make sure skirt hemlines are below the knee at an attractive length on the leg. For some job situations, less "dressy" attire may be appropriate. Ensembles of blouses, sweaters, vests, pants and skirts are very serviceable. Or choose one or two-piece dresses in classic styles. For greater professionalism, add a blazer or jacket.

Accessories add versatility — all should project the same basic mood. Scarves vary in fashionability. Currently you can wear them many ways at the neck, twisted around the head, tied at the waist, or wrapped at the hips. Also, have lots of belts, both wide and narrow, including chains, leathers (hard or soft), sashes, macrame and ropes. Keep your jewelry "wardrobe" simple, such as a few earrings (that will not hinder telephoning), gold or silver chains and tubular chokers.

Consider care and upkeep of all wardrobe items. Choose clothes that don't wrinkle easily and those with easy-care features. Look for washable fabrics, permanent-press finishes or wrinkle-free blends. Remember that dry cleaning adds extra expense to wardrobe maintenance.

Now that you're armed to create an "image-making" wardrobe that really works for you, remember all guidelines are just that. Only you can assemble a wardrobe that says, "THIS IS ME."

AIN'T MISBEHAVING — JUST LEARNING

When your nine-year old comes in and tells you he got sent to the office for "jumping" someone who told him to "kiss a girl" remind yourself that he is not just misbehaving, but also is learning. Unfortunately, children don't "arrive socialized" — they have to be taught to behave in ways that are approved and accepted by society. Learning acceptable behavior is a hard and continuous task. Mistakes and misbehavior are part of growing-up.

Helping children adopt acceptable behavior is one of the critical tasks of parenting. For the most part, children must be told, directed, shown how and told again — much to the dismay of their parents. This requires time and patience, but being an effective parent also brings special rewards. Think of the compensations parents receive as they watch their children develop into mature, responsible and caring adults.

In dealing with normal misbehaviors, remember several ideas: consider the child's age and experience; children misbehave because they are children with inexperienced, impulsive and emotional natures. Accept these childish qualities and redirect their actions with understanding. Use discipline as guidelines for behavior, and use punishment only as a result of not following the established guidelines. Approach discipline in positive ways — focus on what can and should be done, rather than what not to do. Make sure punishment is fair and just — and in keeping with the child's age. Help the child understand the consequences of his behavior.

Listen to his point of view. Point out what might have — or could — occur because of his actions. Help the child develop acceptable ways of handling his emotions. Remember that each child is an individual with his own set of personality traits. Guide the child with love. The greatest lessons parents teach are with the models they present.

As society changes and life's pace intensifies, there is a greater tendency to rely on outside agencies — including schools and churches — to do some of our parenting. Researchers are pointing to an urgent need for parents to focus again on our roles as parents — who have major responsibility for transmitting values, attitudes and behaviors to our young.

Remember our children are not "just misbehaving," they're doing a great deal of learning. What they're learning is up to us, their parents.

Proper care prolongs book's life

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether you collect rare old volumes or today's best sellers, you'll want to keep your library in the best condition possible, says an expert on caring for books.

"The people who spend small fortunes on books often fail to care for them properly," says Jim Landers. "They cram books into the shelves, weakening the bindings, spill batter all over cookbooks, or leave open books lying around face down, wrinkling the fragile pages."

Landers, who as manager of a Waldenbooks store here is responsible for the maintenance of more than 100,000 books at any given time, offers some tips for keeping books in good condition:

— Leave enough space between books so they can be pulled out and replaced easily. Never stack books more than eight volumes high or shelve very large and very small books next to each other. Following this advice will make findings last longer and keep your shelves neater.

— Store books away from moisture, preferably in a glass-fronted bookcase. Dust off the tops of your books regularly so dirt doesn't collect near the binding.

— Never bend the corners of pages to keep your place; this causes irreparable damage, especially when the book has aged and the dried-out paper breaks off easily.

— Open a new book carefully, gently easing the binding in several places; don't lay an open book pages down.

— When using a cookbook, place it on a special cookbook stand to hold the pages open, well out of the way of your ingredients.

— Teach children the value of books, and buy very young children books with plastic-coated or cardboard pages. Little children tend to walk around holding books by one page.

— Prolong life of valued paperbacks by reinforcing the cover with cardboard and laminated adhesive paper, or cover paperbacks immediately with a purchased paperback cover in reinforced plastic or imitation leather.

— At the first sign of wear, mend pages with invisible cellophane tape; mend bindings with cloth tape. Try to preserve the paper book jacket on hard-cover books for as long as possible before exposing the cloth cover. If the binding is irretrievably worn, you can have the whole book rebound at a reasonable cost.

Denture wearers beware of bones

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Denture wearers are more likely to swallow small chicken bones than most people, because their palates have become less sensitive, a radiologist here warns.

In some instances, these bones pierce the stomach or intestines and can cause abdominal hemorrhage, obstruction, inflammation or abscess.

This problem was identified by Dr. Dean D.T. Maglente and his colleagues at the Methodist Hospital Graduate Medical Center here. They examined four elderly, denture-wearing patients and discovered that chicken bones had caused perforation in two of them. Because of their calcium content, chicken bones can usually be seen on X-ray studies, Maglente notes. However, infected fluid sometimes surrounds the bone and masks it from view.

It is often difficult for the doctor to determine the cause of these symptoms with X-ray examination, he says, because patients rarely recall swallowing the chicken bone.

In addition to denture wearers, alcohol and drug abusers and patients who are mentally disturbed are the most plagued by accidental swallowings.

Grant will help with unemployment

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A recent $10 million federal grant will not only help alleviate this city's unemployment problem, but will also generate more tax revenues and stimulate business, according to officials here.

The grant will be used to complete financing of a $42 million, 600-room deluxe downtown hotel and other Convention Center improvements totaling $75 million. Mayor Richard L. Berkley says as a result "it will generate more than 1,000 new jobs, $1 million annually in increased tax revenues, and added convention business that will pump an estimated $26 million into the coffers of local business."

Construction should begin by summer and will be completed in about two years.

UNICEF, the U.N. Children's Fund, estimates that 110 million of its greeting cards were sold during 1979 and raised $13 million to help finance its assistance programs to needy mothers and children. This represents just over 6 percent of its total budget.

SOUND COUNTRY

After a quarter of a century in the music business, Johnny Cash has topped a CBS-TV special in Nashville at the Opry House featuring the old, dear friends and colleagues of his life: Carl Perkins goes back to Cash's early days when he and Johnny were on Sun Records together at the same time as a youngster named Elvis. Waylon Jennings and Johnny once roomed together at a time when no one knew either of them. They are life-long buddies. Kris Kristofferson came to Cash's home to stand for the old American way amid scenery involving railroads, outlaws and farmers.

Tommy Tune makes directing debut

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Tune is his real name. He's from Texas, and he's tall, 6-foot-6. "I say 5-11, it sounds a little bit shorter."

He helped create the Broadway musical hit, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." He choreographed it and also co-directed it with another Texan, Peter Masterson.

This April, he'll make his solo directing debut on Broadway with another musical, an English import called "A Day in Hollywood, A Night in the Ukraine."

As he explains it, Act One is a revue done in 1939 by the ushers at Grauman's Chinese Theater. Act Two is a musical version of Chekov's "The Bear" as the Marx Brothers might have done it.

Tune, a lanky, youthful-looking man of 40, also will choreograph it. Ever since high school, Tune has readied himself for Broadway in the fields of song, dance, drama, choreography and directing, which he studied at the University of Texas in Austin.

Now a stage veteran, he still talks with unabashed wonder at his first trip here when he was 17. The trip was a high school graduation gift from his folks, the Jim Tunes of Houston.

He peered into the Belasco Theater, "the first Broadway theater I ever saw."

And there were real actors rehearsing, walking around on stage with real scripts with printed words. I couldn't believe that's the way it was really done, because that's the way we did it down home.

"And I think that was the connection, that there's no real difference, they put on plays the way we put on plays."

And after college, danced into show business because "you've got to start somewhere and it's kind of hard to start at the top. It was a good way to make a living and a good way to watch the way the big folks do it."

His primary apprenticeship came in summer stock musicals, and figures he choreographed about 100 shows before moving here in the early 1960s and scuffling for work.

After his Broadway debut in 1964 as a dancer in "Baker Street," he went to a variety of shows, on and off Broadway, as a dancer, choreographer and director.

He got a Tony award for his performance in "Seesaw," an Obie award for directing off-Broadway's "The Club," and in 1979 got two Tony nominations for co-directing and staging "Whorehouse."

He never worried, he says, that sophisticated Broadway audiences would find that broad, bawdy Texas musical too cornpone.

"Sure, they (the cast) talk like people down home, but it's real, the way it sounds," he says. "I thought that if we're doing something that's real, people will respond to it."

Despite the show's success, Tune is not of the rest-on-your-laurels school.

When tapped for "A Day in Hollywood, A Night in the Ukraine," he was busy on another project with producer-director Mike Nichols at the Long Wharf Theater in New Haven, Conn.

And, once the new show is under way, he and his "Whorehouse" colleague, Masterson, are off to Hollywood to direct the film version of the show.

"There's no sense in trying to live off a reputation or something nice that some critic has written about you, because it's not what you are at the moment," Tune says.

"So I just start with nothing and hope I make a nice building."

Residents flee rising waters of Lake Elsinore

ELSINORE, Calif. (AP) — "I may seem composed, but inside my stomach is churning," George Laus was watching the waters of Lake Elsinore lap at the tops of sandbags six feet from the spot where his mobile home had stood.

The convert trailer where Laus, 71, and his 79-year-old wife have lived for two years is now in a storage area along with 100 others.

The entire Lake Point Mobile Home Park appears in danger of being submerged following weeks of steady, often torrential rains that have made much of Southern California a disaster area — and more rain is forecast for the area late today.

Laus, who is moving to an apartment in this community 65 miles southeast of Los Angeles, described how the lake rose 23 feet in 24 days.

That's the vertical figure. The lake has also spread over an area twice the size it was when the rain began Feb. 13.

"When the wind blew, the waves and big rocks cut away the earth like a giant auger," he said. "If I seem pleasant, it's because I have the love of the Lord. But I've been taking a lot of pills and aspirin."

"My wife is just about ready to have a nervous breakdown and her high blood pressure condition is just getting worse," he said.

Despite the trauma predicted by psychologists and the Red Cross, little outright despair is in evidence at Lake Elsinore, possibly because it has never had a flash flood situation.

The creeping waters have claimed 150 permanent dwellings and several hundred mobile homes, largely peopled by the retired and elderly, but the slow process has given residents time to get out of the way.

Some humor has surfaced. On the windows of a padlocked, partly sandbagged home was a sketch of Mr. Bill, the hapless clay figure from NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live."

Over the drawing were the words, "Oh, nooooo... Mr. Flood!"

Although there is a helpless awareness that the rising waters cannot be stopped, people are still fighting to save their particular patches of land. High school volunteers and California Conservation Corps workers filled and placed sandbags around Elsinore Village, a retirement community of 82 single-story condominiums that shares the apparently doomed peninsula with the Lake Point Mobile Home Park.

Fifty feet away from the development, Mrs. Jack Davis, 54, was sweeping her front walk, a walk some experts predict will be under water within days.

"My husband and I just moved in Saturday and now we're moving out. There's not much I can do, so I thought I'd sweep," she said.

Two miles away, machinist Mike Wanbaugh, 32, and his 26-year-old sister, Cathy Ahlers, added to an impressive wall of sandbags surrounding the modest home where Wanbaugh and his wife have lived for 3½ years. It now sits on its own tiny peninsula.

"We've already moved out all but the bare necessities, because they say the lake will rise another three feet," Wanbaugh said.

Among the resilient Lake Elsinore refugees is retired miner, trapper and lifelong bachelor Hans Leichann, 86, whose rooms at Warren's Cabins sit at the end of a line of units — in three feet of water.

"I had moved most everything out," he said, "but I took a boat back in to get the map that shows the mountain on it that was named after me and the book on Alaska with my name in it, so the name will live on after I've gone."

The Army Corps of Engineers is still ripping up a street in the middle of town to try to clear an old flood control channel, unused since 1916, which lies beneath the pavement.

But the corps warns that even when cleared, the channel will drain off only a fraction of the water. There simply is no place for the lake to go.

Some feel the city should never have allowed structures to be built inside the lake bed's rim, despite the fact that the lake hadn't reached its natural rim since 1916.

"It just breaks my heart," said Angelina Rinetti, 72, who lived in the mobile home park. "It was an ideal place for retired people."

Other Southern Californians are facing other sorts of trauma from the storms. The rain caused hundreds of travesties to sink in Los Angeles' Tujunga area; many caskets were washed onto a roadway.

Groups of volunteers popped up everywhere. Some were organized, such as a group that called itself the Tree People. Among other good deeds, its members built a bridge to the isolated canyon home of a 75-year-old couple who were cut off when their bridge was swept away.

Todd Richardson and Robert Clark, both 17, were found helping homeowners clean up the mud in their homes, in Altadena. Why were they working so hard?

"We live here...It's our neighborhood," they replied.

Money supply has dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — A report that shows the amount of money in circulation in the United States has dropped $2.8 billion has raised hopes in the financial community that the Federal Reserve Board may take a breather after a series of aggressive credit tightening moves.

In the bond markets, where prices have tumbled recently because of spiraling interest rates, prices rose slightly after the Federal Reserve's announcement late Friday.

"Psychologically, I think the markets needed some good news," said Bob Sinche of Bear, Stearns & Co. "There is some reason to believe that there will be slower growth" in the money supply after weeks of surging growth.

The Federal Reserve's report for the week ended Feb. 27 showed M1A, a narrow definition of money, declined to a seasonally adjusted average of $374.7 billion from $377.5 billion in the previous week.

M1A includes cash in circulation and most checking deposits at commercial banks.

The more broadly defined M1B also includes deposits at other financial institutions. It fell $2.9 billion to $391.2 billion in the latest reporting period.

While money market analysts cautioned against drawing conclusions based on a single week's figures, the unexpectedly large decline should give policy makers "a head start on the down side" in trying to control money growth in March, said William Griggs, vice president at J. Henry Schroeder Bank & Trust Co.

"It is too early to reflect results of the Fed tightening which started back in mid-February. But I would say it will give the Fed a chance to catch its breath," said David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co.

The tight money policy resulted in one bank lifting its prime interest rate to 18 percent Friday and most banks went to 17½ on their loans to their most credit worthy corporate customers.

Jones suggested the sharp drop in money figures might partially reflect an unwinding of the $6 billion bulge in the basic money supply that occurred between Jan. 23 and Feb. 6.

While some stability in the Fed's day-to-day policy might be expected, Jones and Griggs both said they continue to expect the Fed to announce some further credit-tightening steps as part of a broader administration anti-inflation plan. Speculation has largely focused on credit controls on lending and an increase in the Fed discount rate.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York also reported declines in commercial and industrial loans for the week ended Feb. 27. Commercial and industrial loans at the nation's major reporting banks fell $458 million to $154.2 billion. They rose $85 billion in the previous week.

The Fed report showed the basic money supply for the latest four weeks averaged $376.4 billion, up 7.2 percent from 13 weeks earlier.
