Livestock sales near $200,000

The 1980 Top O Texas Junior Livestock Sale and the Top O Texas Hereford Breeders Association Livestock Sale Wednesday netted almost $200,000 in total sales, according to Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett.

Total sales for the junior livestock sale were $138,868, and total sales for the Hereford Breeders Association Sale were $55,000. The junior livestock sale showed an increase of about $6,500 over last year's sale, while the Hereford Breeders Association sale showed a slight decrease of about $3,000 under last year's sale.

Financial results of the sales are as follows:

Calves, 54 sold, total weight 56,128 pounds, total sales $58,263.11. Average weight per calf, 1,039.4 pounds. Average price per pound, $1.04. Average price per calf, $1,078.95.

Grand Champion Calf, 1,196 pounds, sold for $2 per pound, $2,392, to First National Bank of Canadian.

Reserve Champion Calf, 1,111 pounds, sold for $1.30 per pound, $1,274, to Canadian Production Credit Association.

Swine, 230 pigs sold, total weight 52,323 pounds, total sales $65,467.20. Average weight, 227.5 lbs. Average price per pound $1.25. Average price per pig, $284.64.

Grand champion pig weighed 244 pounds, sold for $4.10 per pound, $1,000.40, to Top O Texas Pork Producers of Pampa.

Reserve champion pig weighed 239 pounds, sold for $2 per pound, $478 to Wheeler Brothers Grain and Feed Company of Watonga, Okla.

Lambs, 59 sold, weighing a total 6,176 pounds, total sales $15,138. Average weight per lamb 104.7 pounds. Average price per pound, $2.45. Average price per lamb, $256.58.

Grand champion lamb weighed 117 pounds, sold at $4 per pound, $468, to Pampa New Car Dealers Association.

Reserve champion lamb weighed 112 pounds, sold at $3.40 per pound, $380, to Bentley Hampshire Farms, Panhandle, Texas.

Total sales of the junior livestock show were $138,868.31, an increase of $6,549.09 over 1979. Total sales for calves in 1979 were $79,526.69. This year's sale showed an increase of about $72 per calf over the 1979 sale. In 1979, 192 pigs sold for a total of $52,792.

Top O Texas Hereford Breeders Show

A total of 41 bulls sold for $55,000. Average price per bull was $1,341.46.

Grand Champion Bull sold for $2,100 to Kenneth Richardson of Pampa.

The Best Pen of Two Bulls sold for $4,050. One bull sold for $2,550 to Douglas Corse of Mobeetie, one for $1,500 to Jack Barnhill of Matador.

Best Pen of Three Bulls sold for $6,350. One bull sold for $1,800 to Johnny Carpenter of McLean; one bull sold for $2,500 to Melton McGehee of Wayside; one bull sold for $2,050 to Greg Stout of Stinnett.

The 1979 sale had 42 bulls, which sold for a total of $58,425 with the average price per bull at $1,391.07.

Oilmen pull out of Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent oil producers planned to pull their trucks out of the city today, leaving lobbying as the only remaining activity in their protest against the proposed "windfall" profits tax.

Bud Stewart of Muskogee, Okla., said the demonstrators decided to drive about 40 pump trucks and other vehicles past the White House on Wednesday "just to show we're in town and to acquaint the people of the capital with what real oil field equipment looks like."

Hand-lettered signs on the trucks proclaimed "Kill Unfair Tax" and "Let Us Drill."

The independents, who decided to come to Washington without the participation of their major trade associations, scheduled a meeting today with about a dozen legislators in place of an outdoor rally originally on their schedule.

They are seeking an exemption from the tax for the first 1,000 barrels a day produced by an independent operator, claiming a tax would serve only to discourage domestic production.

"I'm not saying we won't make any money, period (if the tax passes)," Oklahoma state Rep. Charlie Morgan of Prague said. "What we're saying is we're going to have the premature plugging of numerous wells in this country."

The Senate passed the exemption sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, but it was removed when a conference committee compromised between House and Senate versions to produce the proposed $227.7 billion tax bill.

The bill is designed to reclaim part of the revenue going to oil producers as a result of President Carter's decision to lift price controls from domestic production.

Ray Kraker of San Antonio, Texas, said the group could have brought more vehicles for the parade but it was designed to disrupt traffic as little as possible.

He rode on a pump truck belonging to Acid Engineering Inc. of Kilgore, Texas, that carried a Lone Star flag. Kraker said the group planned to present the flag to Bentsen as the only Texas flag ever to fly over oil field equipment in Washington.

Bud Wright, a petroleum engineer from Portland, Texas, said he came to Washington to support increased domestic production because false reports have predicted its decline since 1912.

"We ought to have incentives by our government to drill for American oil," he said.

Leaders of the protest, sparked by Oklahomans, have claimed about 400-500 persons from at least seven states traveled to Washington for the event.

'Last-ditch' energy vote pending

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the House ready for a final vote, Republicans are leading a last-ditch attempt to make President Carter's proposed "windfall" tax more acceptable to the oil industry.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, seeks to send the bill back to a Senate-House conference committee to exempt from the tax the first 1,000 barrels of oil pumped each day by an independent producer. Backers of the bill say such a move, if successful, probably would kill the tax.

"This would be the one positive factor in what is basically a negative bill for increasing energy supply," Archer said. The compromise measure already provides for lower tax rates for independents, which drill most of the nation's exploratory oil and gas wells. The bill survived an earlier GOP-led assault Wednesday by a 232-180 margin. The House defeated a parliamentary maneuver aimed at allowing a vote on an amendment to let an oil producer escape most of the new tax by re-investing profits in energy exploration or production.

Approval of the compromise tax bill today would send the measure to the Senate for final congressional action next week.

The bill is a major part of Carter's energy program, which, in turn, is a basic element in his plan for fighting inflation.

The tax is designed to win political acceptance of Carter's program to phase out federal price controls on U.S. crude oil. He has begun decontrol to provide greater incentives for increased domestic production which, in turn, would reduce reliance on imported oil. The compromise tax worked out by a Senate-House conference committee would cost the oil industry an estimated $227.7 billion in the 1980s. When combined with existing state and federal taxes, the new tax would leave the industry about $221 billion of the $1 trillion decontrol is expected to cost consumers during the decade.

The tax would take from 30 percent to 70 percent of each future price increase above last year's levels.

The House spent most of Wednesday debating how to spend the $227.7 billion. The lawmakers finally agreed to keep the non-binding formula worked out by the conferees.

That sets aside 60 percent of the money, or $137 billion, for possible income-tax reductions during the 1980s. Twenty-five percent would be earmarked for helping low-income Americans pay rising fuel costs, leaving 15 percent for federal energy programs.

Immigrants could solve Social Security crunch

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pension expert says Americans need not worry about how to pay Social Security benefits for the "baby boom" generation 30 years from now.

If there are too few people of working age then to support the elderly, the answer lies in immigration, Merton C. Bernstein says.

"We can solve that problem whenever we want in whatever numbers we want," Bernstein said in testimony prepared for a hearing today by the President's Commission on Pension Policy.

"Mexican immigration, almost singlehandedly, could do the job," said Bernstein, a law professor from Washington University in St. Louis and former counsel to a Senate labor subcommittee. "We could draw any given number of people of whatever ages we specify with whatever skills we desire from just about any area of the globe."

"If we need young Asians to support older Americans, the odds are that even bigger will see them in a new and favorable light."

There currently are five persons age 20 to 64 for every one 65 or older. Within 50 years, Social Security's trustees expect the ratio to slip to 3-to-1.

Bernstein denied that Social Security faces a fiscal crunch. He said society will be supporting fewer unemployed youths in the decades to come, so the total number of dependents will stay about the same.

He also predicted U.S. productivity will improve and the nation will be able to tap the sea bed as a new source of tax revenues.

'Chicken Little' tactics a hardship on boaters

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The "Chicken Little" tactics used by the Department of Energy in a proposed standby emergency energy conservation plan have caused the boating industry financial hardship during its busiest season, a Dallas boat builder charged today.

Jim Windsor, manufacturer of Beachcomer Boats, made his comments at the opening of a two-day DOE hearing on a nine-point package to be implemented during a severe fuel shortage.

There were more than 100 persons attending the morning session, many of whom opposed the idea of restricting weekend boating.

"My feeling is one of frustration with a system of bureaucrats that takes absolutely no notice of the consequences of their actions," Windsor said. "I have lost $192,000 in sales since September 1979...to people who say there will be no boating on weekends. And when I explained that this is just a proposal and not a law yet, their reply is that they will wait and see."

In a less emotional presentation, James W. Lauderback, deputy director of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Committee, told the six-member panel that mandatory demand constraints proposed by DOE would be extremely difficult to implement.

Among the nine proposals are a further reduced national speed limit, minimum gasoline purchase, odd-even gasoline rationing, a commuter plan, restriction on automobile use, a compressed work week and temperature restrictions on non-residential buildings.

Lauderback said the proposals would be difficult to implement for the following reasons:

- Insufficient public support.
 - Serious legal problems with labor contracts and state laws.
 - No practical means of mandatory enforcement.
 - The watercraft restrictions unduly single out one industry which consumes only one-half of one percent of total gasoline supplies.
 - If adjoining states fail to adopt similar measures, their effectiveness would be hampered.
 - From a cost-benefit analysis, they are not justified.
- The DOE's emergency plan would be implemented in the event of a severe fuel shortage and would apply to states that did not have an already approved plan.

However, state plans can be overridden by the president if he determines stricter measures are needed.

The measure which has drawn the most opposition at today's hearing and similar ones in Atlanta, New York and Chicago has been the measure which would prohibit the use of all owned, chartered or rented watercraft on Sunday or possibly all weekend.

Boating organizations estimate the measure would affect more than 535,000 registered boat owners in Texas and more than 900 retailers who contribute about $169,000 million to the state economy.

Several boating organizations have launched a media blitz, including newspaper advertisements, radio and television spots, have encouraged boat owners and retailers to attend the two-day hearing here and express their opposition.

"The DOE has based its proposals on findings that are wrong," said Frank Pillsbury, a representative of the Boat Trade Association of Texas.

Pillsbury's statement were made in response to a DOE official following a hearing in Atlanta earlier this month.

Henry G. Bartholomew, DOE director for energy, conservation and solar energy, said preliminary data used by the federal agency indicated boats consumed between 2 percent to 3 percent of all fuel when the watercraft actually use only about .05 percent.

The potential saving from curtailing boating is minimal since most Americans own a 16-foot boat and not a yacht, Bartholomew said.

The proposal "strikes at the very heart of middle America" while forcing a particular segment of business to carry a brunt of the effort to constrain energy demands.

Bartholomew also noted other low cost fuel consumers, such as snowmobiles and 4-wheel drives, were exempted from the measure.

If the actual figure falls anywhere between the two extremes, the chances of such a proposal passing were "slim to zero."

FRIENDS OF THE PAMPA LIBRARY Myrna Ross, left, Helen Carter, center, and Glenna Miller prepare books for the annual Friends of the Pampa Library book sale, slated for Saturday, April 26, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Friends need book donations of hardback and paperback books, children's books, specialty magazines, 33 1-3 rpm record albums and sheet music. Books and magazines should be in good condition with covers intact and no pages missing. Records should be free from scratches. Especially needed are do-it-yourself books and manuals, children's books and craft and hobby books and magazines. Those donating books may call 669-3924 or 665-5148 for pick-up arrangements. Dogs' best friend seeks home

BUCKLAND, Mass. (AP) — An old man who has sheltered thousands of stray animals says complaining neighbors have forced him to sell his home of 25 years and seek new quarters for his 35 dogs.
 Joe Schneider, 75, said Wednesday that the more he sees of man, the more he prefers man's best friend.
 "The people I've lived with for all these years have kicked me in the pants," he said of his neighbors in this rural Berkshires hilltown.
 And he accused town selectmen, who told him to stop keeping dogs in a kennel in his yard, of "setting down rules I couldn't live by."
 "We did make some noise," admits Schneider, referring to his dogs. "I had planned to build a noise-proof shelter, but they jumped the gun on me. Now I'm tired of fighting."
 Schneider has been searching for a new location for his Hilltown Animal Shelter for almost two years. But several possibilities dried up when neighbors learned about his hobby.

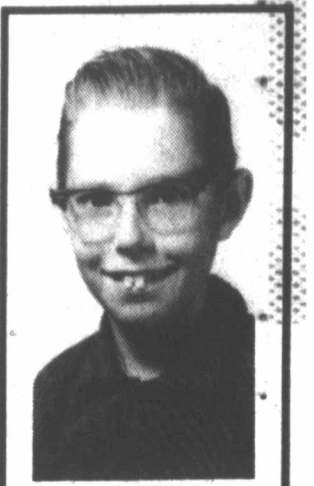

Animal Shelter for almost two years. But several possibilities dried up when neighbors learned about his hobby.
 Meanwhile, Schneider has placed his charges in cages in his house and garage, a situation which he described as "horrible."
 "I'm usually alone here after 7 p.m.," said Schneider, whose wife died five years ago. "I'm working until midnight putting them out and cleaning cages... It's a hell of a way to live."
 Next week, Schneider leaves his yellow, eight-room wood frame house and moves to nearby Greenfield — the largest nearby town — where he has promised neighbors he will keep only two dogs.
 He said he would place his strays in various shelters, while continuing to search for a new site for the Hilltown Shelter.

Senior Citizen housing ready for occupancy

The opening of the rental office of the Pam Apartments for senior citizens and the handicapped has been announced by Ronald Friedman, General Partner of the Pam apartment Associates, Ltd.
 The management staff is now available at the rental office 1200 N. Wells Monday through Saturday from 12 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. to take applications for the apartments.
 The Pam Apartments consist of a total of 96 unit rental apartments of which 86 are one bedroom apartments for senior citizens and ten are one-bedroom apartments designed specifically for the handicapped.

 Each apartment contains a total of 525 square feet of living space and has such amenities as individual heating and air conditioning, emergency call buttons in both bedroom and bath, smoke detectors, deadbolt locks and peep holes at the entry doors.
 The apartments are designed to provide safety, security and convenience in a manner which responds to the needs of the self-reliant senior citizen.
 Construction will consist of one-story row type buildings surrounding seires courtyards. Each apartment will have a front porch.
 A community building of 2100 square feet containing a general purpose room, an office a laundry and mail facilities is part of the apartment complex and for use by the residents. A gazebo will provide focus for the outdoor activities for the residents.

 The management of the apartments is by National Living Centers, Inc. of Houston.
 The Pam Apartments have been selected by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to receive a rent subsidy in the form of Housing Assistance Payments under their Section 8 Program.
 These payments will cover the difference between the contract rent and 25 percent of the income of eligible tenants.

 The rule provides that each court has a full time bailiff.
 Hemphill County joined with the other five counties of the 31 Judicial District in funding a salary for the bailiff.
 The salary will be $875.00 per month with Hemphill, Gray, Wheeler and Lipscomb paying 22 1/2 percent and Roberts County paying the remaining 10 percent.
 Bids were received for the purchase of a pick-up truck and Rollins Chevrolet was awarded the contract for $6111.37.

The Library Board met with the Court and asked that the 1979-80 budget be amended.
 The county budget was amended to include the $6,643 which the City of Canadian dropped from the budget. The budget now stands with $27,065.00 as the county's allocation.
 The airport will be opened after the FFA has reviewed the situation and after the electrician and the paving contractor have completed the current phase of construction.

JAIL CONSTRUCTION
 The new jail facility is still under consideration by the commissioners, with a feasibility study now being done by Correction Consultants & Associates of San Antonio. There is no definite decision concerning the facility, as commissioners are waiting to review the results of the feasibility study.
COMING EVENTS
 Hemphill County residents are eagerly awaiting the April 25 arrival of a tent circus. As one of the few tent operations left in the U.S. the circus will provide a look back in history, to see 'the way the circus once was.'

The planning of a Hemphill County Fair is still on the agenda. Nine executive members were recently elected. A Lipscomb County Fair Board member presented information on county fair organization and procedures to the newly elected officers. The nine will be charged with the responsibility of drawing up by-laws and generally getting the County Fair plans underway.
 The second annual "Great Easter Parade" will be announced soon by the Canadian Retail Merchants Committee.
CITY POWER NEEDS
 The City Commission of Canadian is still considering alternate plans for continued electrical power for the city. Commissioners seem to be divided on the eventual plan, one-half would keep the Canadian plant and renovate it to comply with necessary standards. The rest of the Commission would prefer to tie in with Southwestern Public Service which now provides one quarter of the Canadian power.
SHERIFF DEPARTMENT
 The recent death of an inmate in the Hemphill County Jail will be reviewed by the Canadian Grand Jury. Circumstances point to an apparent suicide, however the matter will still be taken to the Grand Jury. A man who was in the same cell as the victim, has made a statement to Sheriff C.H. Wright.
 The statement according to Sheriff Wright, states that the man (Ramiro Perez) was asleep at the time of the incident. Perez will testify at the inquest.

OCAW, Gulf schedule session

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union and officials from Gulf Oil Corp. scheduled negotiation sessions today in an effort to resolve the 10-week-old nationwide petroleum workers strike.

OCAW spokesman Jerry Achuleta said Wednesday OCAW president Robert Goss and Gulf officials held a preliminary meeting and had in-depth meetings scheduled.

He said the meetings in Houston show "an effort on the part of the union and the company to end the strike."

Goss and Gulf officials have met at least twice since the Jan.

8 strike began.

"We have shown a history of being willing to take steps to effect a settlement and have demonstrated the ability to resolve the problem," said Gulf spokesman Kirk Vogeley.

Gulf was the first major oil company to reach a settlement during the two previous rounds of contract talks. The union has come to terms with 19 independent oil companies.

While Goss talks with Gulf, the union's National Oil Policy Bargaining Committee, which began meeting Tuesday, will be recessed.

Archuleta said the committee, which Monday returned from unsuccessful negotiations with Union Oil Co. of California, will reconvene when Goss files a report.

The union Wednesday asked a judge in Beaumont to hold Gulf in contempt of court for failing to follow a court order prohibiting violence at Gulf's Port Arthur refinery.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Honesty and the supermarket

For once, the legislature let well enough alone. It allowed the featherbedding law requiring price markings on each item in a supermarket to lapse. Now local governments, whose officials are always telling us how overburdened they are, can't wait to pass similar ordinances of their own.

Harriett Weider, who alternates between understanding the marketplace and meddling in it, persuaded her fellow county supervisors to ban full conversions to computerized checkouts in all but a handful of stores in unincorporated areas. Several cities have prepared to follow suit. In Garden Grove, Mayor Elerth Erickson, his unceasing political ambition having exhausted the refugee issue, took up the cudgels of item pricing with much fanfare.

There is a group threatened by the elimination of price stamps on individual items, but it's not consumers. It's the Retail Clerks Union, which will lose part of its membership as stores find they don't have to pay workers to price a product that already has a computer code label affixed. The employees themselves are not harmed in the long run; as with any technological advancement, this one will create more wealth, which in turn provides the capital for new and higher-paying jobs for those displaced. But the union leadership knows that its stranglehold on thousands of dues payers is threatened. A memo we've obtained alerts local union councils to the urgency of passing laws requiring continued item pricing.

From the mass media, however, the impression to be drawn is that this is a consumer and not a labor issue.

In fact, what is happening is that a few stores (and someday, perhaps, many more) are trying to suffice with a price marked on the shelf and a computerized receipt that lists the product bought and the price paid. Bugabooers are cropping up, as they will with anything new. Unless they're resolved, Universal Price Codes will never catch on and no store will wish to use them. But they ought to be given the chance to prove themselves. If there are persistent hassles or genuine consumer objections to loss of the old price tags, stores that resist the new system will draw more customers and competition will point to the best course to follow. That's not a myth: business sifts out useful innovations that way all the time.

Meanwhile, a regrettable amount of fear-mongering is under way, using isolated incidents of inaccuracies to build a theory that deliberate overcharging is part of the management design. If that were an effective business strategy, the markets could have used it for years on fruits and vegetables, for instance, which have never had individual prices marked. The fact is that shoppers will not long tolerate the dishonest merchant, and the sellers know it, if they even need that inducement to honesty.

We wonder whether politicians, self-styled consumer spokesmen, labor unionists and much of the media are equally square with the public.

A scentless act

Somebody's trying to sell a cigar that doesn't stink. Whew! Actually, The New York Times reports, the Consolidated Cigar Co.'s new Flite stogie, now being test-marketed, isn't the first such attempt. A rival firm tried something similar, called the Aristocrat, in 1975. The common folk didn't buy it.

Even now, stench mongers are blowing smoke about the unlikelihood of Flite taking off. "No true cigar smoker would smoke the thing," said one New York retailer. But one reason for the introduction of this specially treated and filtered newcomer is that there is a declining number of true cigar smokers. The younger market, particularly, is repelled by the image of the oldtime puffers and their putridity.

Should Consolidated's tobacco shtick light a fire under cigar consumers, perhaps the deodorants will make their way into cigarette cartons. But that's another story.

The serious note to sound about this Flite of fancy is that contrary to what some people, many of them college professors, would make us think, a big conglomerate (Consolidated is part of Gulf and Western Industries) has to adjust its product if it wishes to maintain and attract customers possessed of free choice. That's something we can all cheer for.

Status quo safe in South

By Robert Walters
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (NEA) - If there's to be a successful challenge to the leaders of this year's contests for the Republican and Democratic presidential nominations, it's not likely to come from voters in the South.

President Carter, a native son of the region, is so far ahead in the Democratic race here that his two challengers, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and California Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown Jr., haven't been able to establish a political base anywhere in Dixie.

Former California Gov. Ronald W. Reagan appears to be almost as firmly in control of the top position in the Republican race in the first four Southern states to hold presidential primaries - South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally has poured vast amounts of money and manpower into a South Carolina campaign, but that effort may be a futile one. Reagan does, however, face a somewhat more serious challenge from former Ambassador George Bush in this state.

Florida is by far the most difficult of the four states to analyze politically because it has a heterogeneous electorate that Carter's campaign manager, Robert S. Strauss, recently described as comprising "a montage of America."

The politics and social mores of the voters in the northern Panhandle, a region in which Reagan is especially popular, are far more closely attuned to Alabama, which lies directly to the north, than to Tampa or Miami.

Connally earlier had an enclave of support in the area surrounding Jacksonville in the state's northeast corner, but some of that backing reportedly has dissipated.

Similarly, Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., apparently has lost some of the strength he earlier enjoyed in the Fort Myers-Naples region on the state's southwest coast.

About a third of Florida's approximately 9 million people live along the "Gold Coast" stretching from Miami northward along the southeast coast into Hollywood, Fort Lauderdale, Delray Beach, Lake Worth and Palm Beach.

That area includes more than 600,000 Jewish residents, almost 500,000 Cuban exiles and more than 150,000 blacks. It also contains the state's largest concentration of Republicans, but they are far outnumbered by Democrats.

The most intriguing area of the state for those attempting to assess the outcome of the Republican race is the corridor that includes the Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater and Bradenton-Sarasota metropolitan areas in the middle of the west coast, then stretches northeast along Interstate 4 through Lakeland, Winter Haven, Orlando and Sanford.

The cities along that axis, among the fastest growing in the state, are home to hundreds of thousands of transplanted Midwesterners who have brought moderate Republican politics to central Florida just as Northeasterners earlier carried liberal Democratic politics to South Florida.

The region's status as the principal Reagan-Bush battleground is illustrated by the fact that both candidates have established their statewide campaign headquarters in the Tampa Bay area rather than in Tallahassee, the state capital, or in Miami, the biggest city.

One indicator of Carter's apparently unshakable political strength in the state was the success of a recent fund-raising foray on the president's behalf led by Strauss, Sen. Lawton Chiles, former Gov. Reubin Askew and Gov. Robert Graham.

Charging invited guests $500 per person (and $1,000 on some occasions) for breakfast, lunch, dinner or cocktails, the delegation scooped up money for Carter in Tallahassee, Fort Lauderdale and Miami.

Strauss collected more than $400,000 for the president's campaign treasury in only two days, inspiring one dazzled journalist to compare reporting on the highly profitable tour to "covering a Jerry Lewis telethon."

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, March 13, the 73rd day of 1980. There are 293 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1868, impeachment proceedings against President Andrew Johnson began in the U.S. Senate. He was acquitted two months later.

On this date: In 1925, a new law took effect in Tennessee to prevent the teaching of evolution.

In 1942, British bombers staged saturation raids on the German city of Cologne.

In 1962, America's first lady, Jacqueline Kennedy, began a goodwill visit to India.

In 1974, the Arab oil-producing countries agreed to end a 5-month-old embargo on petroleum sales to the United States.

One year ago: Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin threatened to resign if his nation's cabinet rejected the Middle East peace treaty.

Five years ago: Portugal's new military revolutionary council nationalized almost all of the country's banks, except foreign ones.

Ten years ago: A strike by San Francisco city employees virtually crippled all city services, including public transportation.

Today's birthdays: Former band leader Sammy Kaye is 70. Walter Annenberg, former U.S. ambassador to Britain, is 72.

Thought for today: The way out of trouble is never as simple as the way in - Ed Howe (1853-1937)

Marriage on the rocks

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON-I'm not too sure of the statistics, but it seems to me that more and more young people are getting married these days. That's the good news. The bad news is that more and more of them are breaking up.

Ordinarily this would be their own business except for the fact that many of us have thousands of dollars tied up in wedding presents we bought for the couples at the time of the ceremony.

With the price of silver, crystal and china going sky-high, there has to be some way of protecting the innocent, when a marriage goes awry.

A group of us were discussing this the other evening.

Melissa said, "Did you hear the Warbuck kids have split?"

"There goes 200 bucks worth of Waterford glass," Joe said. "I told Edwina not to go crazy just because the wedding reception was held at the Pierre."

"Well," said Edwina, "the Warbucks gave our kids a six-place setting of Spode last year."

"How are your kids doing?" someone asked.

"My daughter moved out of the apartment three months ago. She decided he wasn't for her."

"But they were only married last June! I know because we still have the bill for the silver chafing dish we bought them."

Edwina got defensive. "I don't know why you should complain. We gave your son and daughter-in-law a Tiffany lampshade, and I understand she's now living with a rock star."

"If you think that's sad," Dinah said, "we gave the Benedict kids a Cuisinart three months ago and their marriage was just annulled. It didn't last as long as the warranty."

Ted said, "There has to be a better way of dealing with modern marriages. We can't just keep buying wedding presents for young people these days and seeing them go down the drain."

A 'Born-Again' currency

By Don Graft

Things aren't as bad on the American inflation front as they could be - although if you wait long enough they probably will be.

But at the moment they are not as bad as, for example, in Israel, where a new unit of the national currency is being introduced.

The shekel is replacing, and will be worth 10 of, the former Israeli pound, a victim of inflation compared to which the dollar appears almost disgustingly robust.

The pound has been devalued 400 percent in the last two years alone, and with the Israeli inflation rate hitting a feverish 111 percent last year, more of the same has been in prospect. The government, however, hopes to avoid going this route again by introducing the new name and eliminating a decimal place in a restructuring that is as much psychological as technical in purpose.

Since the old pound is going out at a rate of 39 to the U.S. dollar, the new shekel will be worth about a quarter. A much more respectable value for an international currency, about on par with the French franc.

The new name is a conscious invoking of national pride, reaching deep into the biblical past to what was originally a measure of weight - shekel comes from Hebrew "to weigh." In Old Testament times, a shekel was defined for purposes of value as the equivalent of eight grams of silver. It was not until the first century of the Christian era that it made its appearance as a coin.

The introduction of the contemporary shekel superficially recalls the French currency reform pushed through by Charles de Gaulle in the late '50s. He lopped two decimal places off the badly inflated franc to produce the "new franc." But this was accompanied by comprehensive fiscal reforms that have succeeded in keeping the revitalized franc relatively stable for the past two decades.

The Israeli authorities are contemplating nothing of the same. And since this means nothing is being done about the country's underlying inflationary pressures, there are doubts even in Israel as to what realistically can be expected of a new name and pride.

Under these Israeli circumstances, even the 18 percent projected annual inflation rate that the United States hit in the January statistics tends to look good. Which may be cause for some relief, since reaching back into the past for a new unit of currency might not work out so conveniently for Americans.

Wampum, anyone?

Kipling was right

Just when you think the Chinese are rushing headlong into the modern world, they suddenly veer off unexpectedly so that East doesn't quite meet West after all.

Consider for an example the current updating of Chinese airline service. Prospective stewardesses are reportedly being sought through an advertising campaign. To be eligible, candidates must present a good appearance and be well-proportioned.

Which sounds familiar enough, but there's more. They must also have "correct political thought."

Coffee, tea or Mao?

Organizing chaos

Second Thoughts on Headlines Department:

"OPEC panel proposes a 3-part formula for orderly price boosts every quarter."

(From a Wall Street Journal report on possible adoption by the oil cartel of a schedule for periodic automatic price increases.)

OPEC? Orderly? Isn't that a contradiction in terms?

Statesman asked 'to bag' one day

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans are being encouraged to spend a day as grocery store baggers in hopes of getting a better feel for the pinch of inflation.

But those promoting the election-year project, Republicans themselves, want to ensure that the congressmen don't botch the job and lose potential votes.

So, the representatives, who earn $60,700 a year, are being told:

—Open the bag carefully and quietly.

—Don't put glass bottles atop other goods.

—Keep the butter away from the onions lest the butter smell.

Simple, perhaps, but as Rep. Robert Walker, who's partly responsible for the idea, says, "Congressmen could do themselves a lot of political damage if they put the bread on the bottom."

Walker, from Pennsylvania, and Mississippi Rep. Trent Lott said the plan would let participants "conduct a personal oversight activity on the effectiveness of the food stamp program and talk with your constituents about the impact of rising food prices."

A statement prepared by Walker concluded the "Foodstore Workday" project "is a part of an effort to convince the American public that the Republican Party ought to be a majority party."

He said Wednesday that about 30 House members and several GOP congressional candidates would spend one of the next two Saturdays bagging groceries at supermarkets in their districts.

Film shows some hostages as despondent, listless

NEW YORK (AP) — Film of 11 American hostages in Iran being examined by a Red Cross doctor was broadcast on NBC Wednesday night.

The doctor pronounced the hostages "satisfactory taking into account the psychological state of those detained for almost five months." A psychiatrist told NBC the hostages on film displayed depression and listlessness. "Classic symptoms of hostages held for that length of time."

NBC identified six of the hostages as William Gallegos, Barry Rosen, Rodney V. Sickmann, Bruce German, John Lambert, and Jerry Plotkin.

NBC said it believed two of the hostages to be Michael Moeller of Caruthersville, Mo., and Duane Gillette of Columbia, Pa.

Three other hostages on the film had not been identified, NBC said.

It was not known how many hostages the doctor saw.

Excerpts of the film — showing three hostages — were broadcast during the "NBC Nightly News" and a longer version, showing 11 hostages, was shown late Wednesday night.

The film showed the doctor talking with some of the hostages, taking their blood pressure and putting a stethoscope to their chests. Gallegos and Sickmann, both Marines, were smiling and seemed fit. Gallegos was using a hand exerciser and did several situps.

"Exercise... that's all we do," Gallegos said.

Barry Rosen, the embassy's press attache, complained to the doctor of "a condition where I constantly have things going wrong inside of me."

He said, "In January, I had what I thought was a convulsion. My heart started to beat very fast and my stomach and everything... Ever since then I've had a condition where I constantly have things going wrong inside of me, like my heart beating fast. I hear it all the time, waves inside my body, you know, and it's been going on since January and have you seen my eyes? I wasn't sleeping and it's been going on for a long time. They brought a neurologist in here."

When the doctor asked, "Did you have any lab exam?" Rosen replied, "No, no lab examinations at all. They just gave me a checkup and they gave me an EKG (electrocardiogram) once. But, they brought a neurologist in, but I still have the same problem."

Bald eagle chosers Texas refuge

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — The American bald eagle, majestic symbol of the nation and long an endangered species, is taking refuge in the rolling blacklands of East Central Texas.

"It's really exciting," said Steven Runnels, curator of ornithology at the Dallas Museum of Natural History. Runnels said a newly completed national report on the bald eagle shows the creatures are wintering in Freestone County in record numbers.

More than 500 bald eagles were counted in Texas, he said. Those figures indicate Texas now may have the second largest population of eagles outside Washington State, Runnels added.

"There probably are more eagles in the State of Texas today than there ever have been," he said. "The reason is man-made reservoirs. Once, there were just a few spotty places" in Texas where bald eagles could spend the winter.

The National Wildlife Federation counted 9,836

bald eagles nationwide last year.

Eighteen bald eagles were counted at Lake Fairfield this winter. While not the largest concentration in the state, Runnels said the lake is typical of the reservoirs sought out by bald eagles.

Dick White, environmental manager for the nine-year-old Lake Fairfield, said he has spotted a growing number of bald eagles there since 1971.

But it is difficult to get a precise count, he said, because the birds move about quickly and can easily be confused with the similar golden eagle.

The bald eagle became the symbol of the United States in 1782, but has had a hard time staying alive ever since. Their feathers were valued as Indian artifacts, so they often were killed for their plumage.

And in the 1950s, they suffered from massive quantities of the pesticide DDT. Bald eagles are at the top of the food chain, so they absorbed the poison which decalcified their shells.

Oil slick monitoring hampered

GORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Poor visibility hampered Coast Guard efforts to locate a previously spotted 12-mile-long oil slick in the choppy seas 50 miles south of Brownsville. Capt. Gerald Hinson said.

"That's not to say it's not there. They just couldn't see it," said Hinson, on-scene coordinator of a team monitoring the spill from a runaway Mexican well in the Bay of Campeche.

Earlier this week, Hinson ordered oil containment booms stretched across the southern entrance to the Laguna Madre, an ecologically-sensitive inland waterway.

Hinson said Wednesday that he would leave the equipment in place until after he can determine where the oil slick is headed.

"I think it will be going offshore because it's still south of the convergence," said Hinson.

A southerly offshore current has protected Texas beaches for a second onslaught of Mexican oil and meets an opposing current in the gulf. The southerly flow will break down in April.

Hinson said Jerry Gault of Seattle, with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, is surveying the area from a helicopter to determine when the currents will begin shifting.

No new oil has hit South Padre Island, said Hinson, who ordered beach patrols of areas on either side of the Brazos Santiago Pass after the large slick was seen. The pass separates South Padre Island from Boca Chica beach.

Clean Up T.V.

The churches of Christ in this area invite you to join in a campaign to clean up television. Within the next four weeks 3 major sponsors of ungodly television programming will be presented with a response total of people who have agreed to boycott their products if they continue to support programming promoting immorality, violence, and sexual innuendo. For those who are interested we have a list of products to be boycotted (after the corporations have had 2 months to respond to our demands), and we have the forms for interested people to sign.

Jesus said in the sermon on the mount: "The lamp of the body is the eye; if, therefore your eye is clean your whole body will be full of light. But, if your eye is bad your whole body will be full of darkness" (Matthew 6:22-23).

Television has disdained its great educational, instructional, and entertainment potential to inflict society with viewing that corrupts the heart and mind. This boycott will hit the sponsors of these programs in their most sensitive vital organ, the pocketbook. If you are interested please write or call us:

Judge refuses confession

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas County district attorney says he may dismiss murder charges against an 18-year-old girl now that a state district judge ruled inadmissible the teenager's confession in the death of her mother.

Judge John Ovard granted the defense motion Wednesday after hearing testimony from a police officer who admitted he used threats and a falsified lab report to get Tammy Lynn Harrison to confess to killing her mother.

"We need to sit down and go over the evidence again to see if we have anything else tying her to the murder," said District Attorney Henry Wade. "If we don't, we'll dismiss it."

Miss Harrison is charged in the stabbing death of her mother, Phyllis Pearl Tucker, who was found Sept. 29 in the bedroom of their Duncanville home. She had been stabbed nine times with a large butcher knife.

"It (the ruling) definitely hurt my case," Assistant District Attorney Norm Keene said after the ruling. "The trial is set for May 19, and before then we will have to evaluate the facts and determine whether we will be trying it at all."

Duncanville Lt. Bob Moore testified Tuesday he told Miss Harrison she could go to the electric chair for the death of her mother, even though the girl insisted at that time she was innocent.

Texas no longer utilizes the electric chair in death penalty cases, and the maximum sentence for the crime Miss Harrison is charged with is life in prison.

Moore also testified that as an "interrogation technique" he altered a lab report to show Miss Harrison's clothes were covered with the victim's blood. The authentic report show some traces of blood on Miss Harrison's clothes.

"This whole investigation was pretty well messed up by this officer," Wade said.

Ovard set May 19 for Miss Harrison's murder trial.

Jeans suited for small fry

KIDPROOF DOUBLE—KNEE JEANS by Healthtex are durably constructed in shades of navy, brown, tan, burgundy, light blue, green and gray, among others, for $10.50 in denim and $11.50 in corduroy, to coordinate with shirts and polos for the active girl or boy.

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
NEW YORK (NEA) — Face it. Does your 7-year-old really need Ralph Lauren or Geoffrey Beene stamped on the hip pocket of his jeans?
 No, says Healthtex, quickly recommending instead its own new imprint, which is "Kidproof," which is not to be taken as a lifetime guarantee of the product. But, says Bruce Millon, director of boyswear merchandising for the company, "I would say the child would outgrow a pair of Kidproof jeans before he or she outwears it."

 The "she" is included because, he says, girlsweat buyers liked how well the jeans were doing in the boyswear department and began stocking them themselves.
 What everyone likes, he says, is the emphasis on durability which, he concedes, Sears and Penney's have been infusing their jeans with, too, but which he claims Healthtex is doing better.
 In any case, what they're doing is starting with corduroy, denim and poly-cotton that has a very tight weave, so it's "more abrasive resistant." Then, since knees are "the No. 1 problem area in jeans," he says, "a very thin piece of non-woven material is heat-applied in the knee area to make it stronger."

 Next, they either double or triple sew the seams in the seat, along the yoke and in the fly area, insert a synthetic zipper which is "non-breakable and has less snag potential," and proceed to reinforce that area with two bar tacks of double stitching so when the little darlings pull their jeans on or off, they don't pull them apart.

 Healthtex is doing this in shades of navy, brown, tan, burgundy, light blue, green and gray, among others for $10.50 in denim and $11.50 in corduroy, which is about half, Millon says, what you'd pay for kids' jeans with a designer name on the rear. Once again, it's up to you to decide, what's in a name?

DENIM OVERALLS go stylish this spring for young girls getting back to nature, above. Healthtex updates them with straight legs, big front pockets and colorful rainbow striped suspenders. Below, more Americans join the labor force on their off hours by slipping into comfortable worker-influenced casual wear. Extra color has slipped into this spring's multi-colored overalls and painter's pants.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By JOE GRAEDON

In mid-April the Food and Drug Administration will require new label warnings on certain hair dyes, but problems about product safety still exist in this area of the cosmetics industry.

Several months ago we alerted readers that some hair dye ingredients are known to cause cancer in animals. The worst offender was 4-MMPD (4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine), a chemical that has been the backbone of hair color products for more than 60 years.

Next month, the FDA will require the following label on those few products which still contain this coal tar dye: "Warning — contains an ingredient that can penetrate your skin and has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

Fortunately, most major manufacturers have already removed 4-MMPD from their hair dyes. The cosmetic industry is a highly competitive business and needless to say, the last thing hair color manufacturers want is a scary label on their products.

So far so good. It would appear on the surface that the consumer has nothing to fear. Most companies have reformulated their brands and the few that will continue to use 4-MMPD can be easily avoided because the permanent hair colors will have to carry a prominent warning.

Does this mean that people using permanent hair dyes can at last breathe a sigh of relief? Unfortunately, the answer is no.

Some cosmetic companies have taken advantage of the fact that it takes the FDA an extremely long time to act once a potential risk is discovered. More than four years have gone by since it was learned that 4-MMPD might cause problems. And yet the warning label will only first begin to appear next month.

Results from cancer tests in animals usually take a minimum of two years to complete and cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. Consequently, industry chemists can fiddle with the structure of their dyes and by making only minor changes they can produce new compounds that don't require a warning. This does not mean the "new formula" is any safer than the old one.

A case in point is the hair dye 4-EMP (4-Ethoxy-m-phenylenediamine) used in Revlon's Salon Formula Colorsilk Hair Coloring. It is so similar to the suspect 4-MMPD that Dr. Benjamin Van Duuren, an organic chemist and expert on carcinogens, said that "there's not one iota of difference between their potential for causing cancer."

Prodded by experts from Consumer Reports, researchers in the Genetic Toxicology Branch of the FDA started an investigation into the safety of this chemical. Their report, just published, confirms what Dr. Van Duuren concluded more than seven months ago — tests on bacteria produced mutations in the genetic material of cells.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter from a woman who had signed a "Living Will," and was relieved to know that should she ever fall victim to an incurable illness, she would be allowed to die in dignity. I think you should warn your readers that merely signing a Living Will is no guarantee that one's wishes will be carried out. It will also take perseverance on the part of the family.

Last May, my husband died of lung cancer after a very short illness. He had a history of heart disease, and the previous year had suffered a severe stroke that left him partially paralyzed. I feared that, should he suffer heart failure, "heroic measures" might be taken, so he would be "saved" only to suffer more from the cancer. The doctors who had treated him previously were aware that he had signed a Living Will. However, one specialist seemed to view my husband more as a pair of diseased lungs than a whole man, and was determined to save him should heart failure occur. It took days of arguing and button-holing every responsible person I could reach for the instructions of "No Code" to be included on his chart. (The "No Code" signified that no resuscitation team would be summoned.)

If your spouse (or family member) has signed a Living Will, my advice would include:

1) Talk the situation over thoroughly with your family so that there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to your intentions.
 2) Discuss this philosophy at length with your family doctor, who will be the admitting doctor and responsible for any instructions to be included on the patient's chart regardless of any specialists who might be called in. Doctors are trained to save lives, and some are unable to make the mental adjustment to a passive course of no action. If the doctor seems reticent or unwilling to follow your wishes, CHANGE DOCTORS!

3) Once the patient is admitted to the hospital, make sure the instructions on the chart are in accord with your wishes; keep pestering the doctor until they are.

4) If treatment is being prescribed that is offensive to the patient and family, the family can check the patient out of the hospital without the doctor's release.

Abby, we can die with dignity, but it might take great perseverance on the part of our spouses and family to make sure we are given the opportunity.

WITH A TAP of a wand, any magician can update the appearance of his home with roofing magic. A little magic can make a home look larger, smaller, stay warmer in the winter or cooler in the summer, and last longer than ever.

Roof magic can change home's looks

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. — If you've always wanted to try your hand at magic, here are some simple tricks that are guaranteed to work and will help improve the appearance of your home at the same time.

Does a large lot make your house seem to disappear by comparison? You can make it reappear with a minimum of hocus-pocus and a light-colored roof, according to CertainTeed Home Institute.

A light-colored roof gives the optical illusion of height and size to low, small houses. Hence, it can bring about a sense of proportion to your property.

Or does a large house dwarf your lot? If it does, conjure up a little reverse voodoo and add a dark-colored roof. It'll make your house stand out a little less.

Should you want to diminish the heat from the summer sun, say "abracadabra" while you add a light-colored roof. Just as light-colored clothes help keep golfers and tennis players cool, a light-colored roof will help your house stay cool.

If, instead, you want to draw the heat of the winter sun toward your roof, wave your wand while you add a dark-colored roof.

Want to add a pinch of security to your magic roofing potion? You'll need three eyes of newt and an earthtone-colored roof. Psychological tests reveal that people associate brown with places where they feel secure. Shingles come in a wide range of browns and other earthtone colors that will have a spellbinding effect when added to any roof.

Would you like roofing shingles that look like wood, but last like asphalt? Shingles with these features are available on today's market. Some even have a 25-year limited warranty.

Just want to add some life to a dead roof?

Put on your thinking cap and concentrate on texture. Textured shingles will bring a dead roof back to life by casting a pattern of small shadows across it. The deep, simulated woodgraining of this type shingle is entrancing.

The roofing magicians also offer this suggestion: Use top quality shingles for re-roofing. It takes just as many magicians' helpers just as much time to conjure up a new roof, regardless of the quality of the shingles. So, it saves them time and you money to have them use their magic on high-quality shingles that are guaranteed to last.

For more about re-roofing magic, contact the institute at P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, Pa. 19482.

You'll be astonished at what you can do with magical powers you didn't even know you had.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I lost my mother a week ago and needless to say I'm heartbroken. I had lived with her for 54 years and we were extremely close.

Her final illness puzzles me. She was 87 years old with a rugged constitution, had arthritis of the knees but walked with a cane. She controlled her gallbladder condition by watching her diet. She entered the hospital because of a tiny stroke on the left side. Her arm was affected and she had congestion from the flu, a low hemoglobin of six and a liver tumor. A total of six pints gradually brought her blood count up and a barium enema was clear.

She did not smoke, drink or eat spicy foods. She got plenty of sleep and rest and did not overeat or overexert. How could she get such a terrible tumor? Did the gallbladder cause it? She fought to live. About two months after she entered the hospital she vomited blood and was very weak and slipped away. I'd be so grateful to hear from you.

DEAR READER — In all the years that I've seen patients I've never found the right words that would ever really replace the loss of a loved one or would really console the grief that a person such as yourself feels. Just saying that you're sorry isn't enough.

Unfortunately, even though a person has an ideal life style and follows healthy living patterns throughout life, that is not a guarantee that he or she will not develop cancer. After all, one out of four people have or will develop cancer. It's possible as more of our population lives to older ages that we may see even a greater number of cancers than we do today.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 14-8, Cancer: A Fact Of Life. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The Health Letter I'm sending you will give you some of the basic information about cancers and what we know about their cause and, more importantly, what can be done to prevent them. Many of the cancers people have can be prevented, including cancer of the lungs in about 80 percent of the cases. Many other cancers, if detected early enough, can also be cured.

Liver cancer is fairly rare. It is true that a person with gallbladder disease is more likely to have cancer of the gallbladder. And whether that's what occurred with your mother with extension to the liver or not, I wouldn't know without knowing specifically what the pathology report disclosed. That's one of the arguments for removing a gallbladder full of stones even if it's not causing any symptoms or problems. If your mother had primary cancer of the liver, meaning it originated from liver cells, then it was probably not related to her gallbladder disease at all.

The fact that your mother had a stroke is interesting since severe anemia can contribute to the development of a stroke. The anemia in her case was undoubtedly secondary to the cancer.

The liver often has a tumor in it if a cancer occurs elsewhere in the digestive system.

China urges one-child families

By PHIL BROWN

Associated Press Writer PEKING (AP) — Even if China succeeds by 1985 in persuading parents to have only one child, its population will still keep growing until 2004, Chinese scientists have calculated.

If the present average of 2.3 children per family is maintained, China's population will more than double in the next 100 years, according to calculations published recently in the Guangming Daily.

The study estimated China's present population as 960 million, although Vice Premier Kang Shi-en recently said it had already reached 1 billion and would climb to 1.2 billion by the end of the century.

Chinese leaders have begun actively promoting a one child per family policy in an effort to bring China's population growth rate down to zero by the year 2000, and reduce the problems of feeding, housing and clothing so many people.

At the 1975 average of three children per family, China's population would be 1.4 billion in 2000 and 4.26 billion in 2080, about the size of the present total world population, the study's computer projections showed.

With one child per family, population would reach 1.05 billion by 2004 and then decline to its present 960 million in 2028 and to 370 million by 2080, the scientists calculated.

Even two children per family is unacceptable, the paper said, because population would grow to 1.2 billion in 2000 and 1.5 billion in 2050 before starting to decline.

With 1.5 children per family, the peak of 1.17 billion would come in 2027, with population declining to 777 million by 2080, the study estimated.

China's population can't stop growing in the short term, the paper said, because 63.4 percent of its people are now under 29 years old, meaning large numbers of women are at or near child-bearing age.

Because of baby booms in 1954-57 and 1962-71, huge numbers of women will reach child-bearing age in 1979-82 and 1987-96, it said.

The study dismissed worries about the one-child goal turning China into a nation of old people.

Only 4.8 percent of China's population was 65 or over in 1978, and by 2008 the proportion will still be only 8.9 percent, compared with more than 10 percent in advanced nations, now, including 16.6 percent in East Germany, the paper said.

The idea now is to bring population growth under control, it said, and adjustments can be made in the more distant future.

China's laboring population now totals 520 million and, with one child per family, will be 760 million in 2000 and 680,000 in 2020, it said. Achieving the one child per family goal will be difficult, the paper said, but "only in this way can we bring the natural population growth rate down to zero by the end of the century."

Problems in persuading people to go along with the policy include a traditional tendency to keep trying for a boy, and to count on sons to support the parents in their old age, especially in rural areas.

The Chinese are moving toward various forms of old-age assistance and persuading men to move in with their wives when the wife is an only child, rather than have her leave her parents.

They are also starting economic rewards and sanctions to support the one-child policy.

that will keep you young," she advised.

Mrs. Phillips still has her Texas accent, but claims to be too old now to return for a visit. However, "I have great grandchildren all over the state."

A former school teacher and telephone operator, Mrs. Phillips has gotten a little hard of hearing in the past few years.

A set of earphones keeps her up to date on television shows and politics.

"I like the Jokers Wild; that German, Phil Donohue; the news; and Billy Graham. I listen to all the religious programs I can," she said.

About politics, she said, "I don't think Carter should be out giving speeches and Ronald Reagan is too old to run, but I like him."

And who is she going to vote for? Carter, of course. "I've been a Democrat all my life."

Greenberg's short stories offer wit and sensitivity

HIGH CRIMES & MIS-DEMEANORS. By Joanne Greenberg. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 194 Pages. $9.95.

A middle-aged woman decides she no longer believes in gravity and finds herself floating about in mid-air, the inmates of an insane asylum exercise their power to vote and take over the local power structure, and a novice drug smuggler is confronted by his guardian angel.

These are some of the themes Joanne Greenberg explores with wit and sensitivity in "High Crimes & Misdemeanors," a collection of 10 short stories.

Miss Greenberg, best-known for "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden," set herself a difficult task when she wrote these stories. On the surface, the themes sound absurd and in unskilled hands they would be. But Miss Greenberg writes with sureness and what might have been nonsense comes through as being just right.

"Certain Distant Suns," for example, deals with the narrator's Aunt Bessie. For all of her 56 years, Bessie had behaved the way she was expected to. Then she rebelled, first giving up belief in God, then in germs, then in electricity and finally in gravity. What happens to Bessie is funny, but it is also sad, and Miss Greenberg draws an admiring portrait of a woman of independence.

"They Live" is the story of another middle-aged woman. This one, however, arranges murders — but the way Miss Greenberg tells it it's a most natural function. "Palimpsest" tells in a most logical way how the inmates of an asylum take over, and it's a chilling story.

"Merging Traffic" is a finely-spun story about two women who knew each other in high school meet years later and of the changes the years have brought them. "Flight Pattern" tells of drugs, misguided youth and a guardian angel who yearns to feel emotion.

Most French soups have humble origin

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The great dishes of most nations are of peasant origin, and French restaurateur Jean Paul Picot tells me this is true of the soups of his homeland. "I remember as a child seeing a huge pot of soup bubbling on the back of the stove in French farmhouses," Picot recalled as we sat in his cozy New York bistro, la bonne soupe. "After each meal they'd toss leftover vegetables into the pot and add some water." This was doubtless the origin of that French classic, soupe au pistou, a provincial vegetable soup which has been elevated to gourmet status. "The French farmer pours a little wine into his bowl of soup just before eating," added Picot. "It does wonders for the flavor. This is called chabro and is especially popular in the vineyard country of southern France."

French country folk usually eat soup and little else for supper since the main meal is at noon. An exception is that garlicky cornucopia of Mediterranean fish called bouillabaisse which is really a stew and a meal in itself.

Not all French soups come from peasant homes. Lobster bisque is certainly a rarity in cottage kitchens, but I recall hearing that vichyssoise, which is regarded as epicurean in America, is derived from the humble leek and potato soup so popular in rural France.

Picot serves full-course meals at his place but he has always leaned strongly to soups and likes to point out the difference between those of France and the United States. "One key difference," he said, "is the fact that the French go in more for purees like cream of watercress, sorrel or spinach."

It's also a fact that soups of France's provinces are based more on vegetables than on meats or even meat stocks, like America's. An exception is French onion soup.

Picot likes most American soups. "That's probably because of their broad European background," he said. "Most of the notable American soups came from France, Italy, Germany and Russia."

"My favorite soup is actually Russian borscht, but a close second is French onion soup, and here's my recipe," Picot said.

6 large onions, sliced thin
6 tablespoons pork or bacon fat
3 cups white wine
2 quarts beef bouillon
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
Salt
Pepper
2 cups croutons
1 cup Gruyere cheese, grated

Saute onions in fat till brown and add wine, simmering till most of the liquid has evaporated. Add beef bouillon, garlic and bay leaf, plus salt and pepper to taste. Cook about 1 hour over low heat. Pour soup into crocks, put croutons on top and cover with grated Gruyere. Place under broiler until cheese melts. Serves 6-8. Good with chilled dry white wine.

Ellen, 15, from Centralia, Wash., is being pushed into dating by an aggressive mother and would like a few suggestions from our teen guest writers. Jerry Kindall, 16, from Torrance, Calif., and Betty Miller, 15, who lives in Hagerstown, Md., will do the honors. Welcome.

Dr. Wallace: I am 15 and my mother's great desire is for me to be popular. She keeps pushing me to date and even throws parties for me and invites sons of her influential friends. Actually, I really don't want to date. I'd rather ride horses and swim.

When I tell my mother this, she says that there is something wrong with me. Is there? I'd enjoy hearing what your teen writers have to say. — Ellen, Centralia, Wash.

Ellen: There is nothing "wrong" with you. Many boys and girls don't start dating until after they graduate from high school. Mother wants you to be popular because she must feed her enormous ego. You just happen to be the fodder. — Dr. Wallace Hello Ellen: I think your mother has a misconception of what popular means. Money and sons of influential friends can't buy popularity.

I'm 15 and have never had a date and I don't think there is anything wrong with me (I do have my eye on a foxy guy though).

Since mother is the pusher, can dad come to your rescue? If he can't, conveniently get a headache the next time your mother acts like cupid. — Betty, Hagerstown, Md.

Hello Ellen: I'm 16 and have asked many 15-year-old girls for a date only to be told that they do not care to. So that should answer your question about anything being wrong with you.

I think your mom really loves you and is just operating under the old saying "It's just as easy to fall in love with a rich person as it is with one who's poor."

I wish my mom would have cared that way about my sister who married a dud who spends a great deal of time hiding from work. — Jerry, Torrance, Calif.

If you would like to be a teen guest writer, please write to me in care of this newspaper, stating your sex and age.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

You've all heard the hectic, harried statement, "I've run so fast today that I couldn't catch my shirt tail with either hand." I can't begin to count the times Otis has come in the door with that enthusiastic, exhilarating announcement.

Americans usually start running as soon as they learn to walk and keep it up until retirement or longer. A couple hurries together through a whole working life, trying to keep apace of food bills, doctor's fees, kids' educations, house payments and as much family fun as the nerve-racking years will allow.

We're a nation of hurriers. We have to be, we believe, to survive recurring recession and inflation — and to compete with all the other runners whose sights are set on our exact goals and might well beat us out of them.

When we reach our present age, we can choose one of three lifestyles. We can continue hurrying at breakneck speed. We can stop everything and sit down and rock ourselves into eternity. Or we can be middle roaders. Each path has its merits and its pitfalls.

Many retired people, usually men but sometimes women also, are geared to keep running as long as they breathe. I live with that kind of man.

I've never been able to understand how he can run a successful office with appointments all morning, play golf all afternoon, treat a prospective buyer to dinner and then take me dancing until midnight. But he does it, or its equivalent of rushing, six days a week, reserving only Sunday for church activities and the planning of the next week's work.

The hazard here is overdoing. No matter how alert our minds remain in our later years, we risk stress and strain if we run the way we did when we were 20. And too much anxiety can make us so irritable that we can drive away friends and neighbors and even our devoted mates.

Authorities tell us that hurrying can be continued without ill effects if we consult our doctors and follow their advice. Otis lessened his high blood pressure by strict diet, by new types of exercise, and by forcing himself to relax a little, usually by taking a 10-minute nap at noon. However, he'll always run, I'm sure.

So if you were a young hurrier and want to be an old one, go ahead — under the orders of your doctor and yourself.

What about the oldest who opts to give up all effort and activity at retirement? My opinion is that, if good health is still his status, he would soon stagnate. Then he would become irritable, a whiner, a lost soul, a mate that nobody would want to live with.

Then there is the possible field of adjustment to half hurrying, half halting, where most retirees seem the happiest. They have part time jobs or self-owned businesses that tax their strength less than their former jobs but still keep their hands and minds busy. Such retirement activity usually allows for recreation, tripping, visiting and true pleasure in living with a loving spouse.

If you are a runner like Otis, then run safely. If you insist on giving up, I am sorry for you. If you choose the middle of the road, I believe you are wise, happily married and likely to stay content.

DEAR LOUISE: My wife won't fix herself up. She's got plenty of good clothes but she never wears them. She barely combs her hair and she never puts on any makeup. She looks a fright and I'm getting sick of looking at her.

She was never much on dressing up, but she used to do better than she does now or else I didn't notice when I was working because I was so busy. But now that I sit and watch TV all day, I can't help seeing that her clothes look like she slept in them.

I don't want to look out the window and see other women dressed so neat and clean that their husbands can be proud of them. But I do look a lot and wish a lot. Wouldn't any man? T.C.

DEAR T.C.: No happily married man would look wishfully at other women. But he certainly would want his wife to be neat and well-dressed. However, you need to start the change in your household yourself. You should stir out of your chair and spruce up your own looks and interest in the outside world.

How long has it been since you took your wife anywhere? If you'd take her out to eat, to visit friends, to attend community functions, etc. I think she'd feel like dressing up for you — and would do it.

Write problems to DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Reformed villains please children

NEW YORK (AP) — Children aren't bothered by monsters or villains if they turn into good guys in the end, says a writer of children's television shows who says he gets some of his ideas from letters and drawings he gets from children. "Children seem to like the bad guy to become good rather than be destroyed," adds Romeo Muller, whose latest production, "The Wonderful World of Strawberry Shortcake," will be syndicated nationally early this spring.

The TV special is set in Strawberryland, where ice-cream mountains and soda-pop streams abound. But the show also has a villain — the Peculiar Purple Plemman of Porcupine Peak.

"Because the film is made for young children, the villain is not horrible or terrifying," Muller explains. "So there's nothing that's going to frighten anybody."

Top O' Texas Show Closes for 1980

The 1980 Top O' Texas Junior Livestock and Hereford Show and Sale is history.

Hundreds of junior exhibitors, members of area 4-H and FFA Chapters traveled to Pampa to take part in the event which pits animal feeding and grooming skills of the youngsters with their peers.

Usually not a paying experience, monetarily, the idea behind the show builds character and responsibility in any youngster determined to tough it out until show time. This special event recognizes the time and work expended by the younger set, and that, according to the exhibitors, makes it all worth while, even when the selling price of the show animal is far below the cost involved to get to the showing condition.

Buyers have consistently supported the junior show, and 1980 was no exception, according to officials.

In the photo at the top left, a show barrow quits his feed trough long enough to view the crowd of onlookers which trailed through the barn all week. Center top is a true portrait of bovine benevolence mirrored in the calm eyes of a junior exhibitor's steer. Top right, the lamb (it may not be Mary's) was one of the first group of lambs showing in a Pampa show. Center page right, two exhibitors share the task of grooming a show animal. (Any self-respecting show animal really enjoys a bath.) Lower right, youngsters ring for the judges, prompting steers into a proper show stance, and wait with anticipation, as do the youngsters pictured at the left center of page. Finally, a young show-goer is just pooped out from all the excitement, and takes a quick forty winks while waiting for the big kids to load up and leave the pavilion for another year. He could be dreaming of the day when his very own, steer, lamb or barrow is in the show ring.

Anticipated Argentine harvest cut nearly in half by drought

ROSARIO, Argentina (AP)—The U.S. grain embargo is forcing the Soviet Union to pay a record high price for Argentine corn, but farmers here in the world's second richest corn belt are having an unhappy harvest.

A six-week drought during the crucial flowering period cut the corn crop from 9.4 million to 7.25 million metric tons, the Agriculture Ministry estimated in late February. The total grain harvest outlook is down to 25 million tons, Argentina's lowest in four summers. Many farmers hauling corn from the surrounding pampas to silos along Route 33 say they lost half their crop.

Those farmers who were saved by scattered rain grumble about inflation and a currency exchange system that underpays them in pesos for the dollars they earn from exports.

The Soviet Union is paying at least $142 a ton for the dried corn, $22 higher than the bidding on the Chicago market for corn on the U.S. Great Plains.

Export prices for Argentine corn boomed after the Carter administration on Jan. 5 halted the shipment of 17 million tons of grain to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan. Most of the embargoed grain is corn, something only the United States and Argentina produce in big exportable quantities.

Under prodding by Washington, which offered to reconsider its criticism of human rights violations here.

Sugar recall issued
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Certain packages of Jack Frost and Ideal brands of sugar may contain pieces of stainless steel wire, and the National Sugar Refining Co. has urged consumers in five states to return them.

Sugar sold between Feb. 26 and March 6 might contain pieces of .011-inch-wide stainless steel wire measuring 1/8 inch by 1 1/2 inches, a company spokesman said Wednesday.

Some cookies made by an unnamed National Sugar customer also may be affected, he said. The cookie company will issue its own recall, he added.

the Argentine government pledged not to "take commercial advantage" of the embargo. U.S. officials took this as a promise to sell the Soviets no more corn than usual, or about 1.6 million of the 4 million tons of exportable surplus now expected.

But private export firms in Buenos Aires say they are under no restrictions and that the Russians, who have reportedly bought 1.2 million tons of corn already, are the only takers at the current high price.

Economy Ministry sources say a Soviet trade mission that visited Buenos Aires in late January was promised continued access to the grain market in exchange for a promise to buy greater quantities of Argentine beef, wool, mutton, leather and wine, as well as grain, in the future.

The emergence of food as a political weapon has given Argentina's military rulers a new sense of strategic importance, a status they reaped through policies favoring agriculture.

For more than 30 years, Argentine governments took income away from the farmers through export taxes to promote protected industries and keep food prices low for urban voters. As a result, farm output sagged, inflation took off, and Rosario lost its place as the world's busiest grain port to Chicago.

Dear Forest User:

During the next two years, Forest Service planning teams will be working on the development of a Land Management Plan for the Cibola National Forest and the Kiowa, Rita Blanca and Black Kettle (Lake Marvin and Lake McClellan) National Grasslands. This Plan will establish future management direction for the Forest and the Grasslands.

Your involvement is needed in the development of a useful and realistic Land Management Plan.

If you would like to receive further information on how you can become involved in the land management planning process please respond by using the form below. We would appreciate receiving the form by April 1, 1980.

Thank you.

Raymond ready for state meet

Pampa High sophomore Cindy Raymond, who seems to break a record every time she makes a ripple in the pool, has taken on a heavy workload as she prepares for the Class AAAA state swim meet Friday and Saturday in Austin.

"Last week I was using paddles and buoys to build my strength and this week I'm concentrating on sprints to build up my speed," Cindy said.

Two weeks ago at the Region One meet, she broke her own school records when she was clocked at 56.32 in the 100 freestyle and 1:14.12 in the 100 breaststroke. She finished third in both events, but will advance to state only in freestyle. During the season, Raymond snapped her own record twice in both events. She remains modest despite the feats.

"Going into regionals I wasn't sure how I'd do," she added. "I really didn't think I would qualify for state."

Cindy has ruled the 100 breaststroke and 100 freestyle in almost every meet this season. She holds the district record (1:16.64) in the breaststroke.

Cindy not only qualified for the state meet, but she also earned the right to participate in the Texas age group meet Friday, March 21 in Dallas. Cindy will be competing in the 200 individual medley, 500 freestyle, and 200 breaststroke in the age group meet after beating the stopwatch in a specified time during the season.

Preliminaries for Friday's meet start at 6:30 p.m. with the finals set for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Texas Olympic Swim Center on the University of Texas campus. The swim center was also the site of the United States Olympic Trials this year.

Cindy started her swimming career four years ago.

"I heard they were going to start a swim program here and I just wanted to try it," she said.

A pair of talented sisters, Lisa, a high school senior, and 12-year-old Amy, a middle school student, share Cindy's love of swimming.

Lisa took third in the 200 individual medley and fifth in the 100 butterfly at the regionals. Two years ago, Amy was state grade school champion in the breaststroke.

Cindy's coach, Mike Eckhart, is optimistic about her chances in the rugged state meet.

"I know she'll beat her regional time and I look for her to place among the top eight finalists," Eckhart said. "I know she'll be ready for it."

The Raymond girls are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Raymond.

Lamar bids for third straight upset

If Billy Tubbs is thinkin' about dustin' off his dancin' shoes, he's gonna have to hotfoot it past Clemson tonight.

"We sure would like to go to the prom," Tubbs, Lamar University's coach, says. That, of course, is the Final Four, the next-to-last step to the NCAA basketball championship.

Lamar, one of this year's "outsiders" in what began as a 48-team field, is looking to beat Clemson in a West semifinal, thereby pulling off a third straight upset and moving into the Final Eight, the showdown which determines the four teams to reach the March 22 national semifinals in Indianapolis.

In tonight's other West Regional at Tucson, Ariz., Ohio State faces UCLA. Also tonight it's Purdue vs. Indiana and Duke vs. Kentucky in the Midwest at Lexington, Ky.

Friday night's third-rounders are Iowa vs. Syracuse and Maryland vs. Georgetown in the East at Philadelphia and Louisville vs. Texas A&M and Missouri vs. Louisiana State in the Midwest at Houston.

Lamar has a student body of less than 13,000. Some of the schools in this NCAA tournament have more seats than that in their fieldhouses. Which is why Tubbs and Lamar aren't exactly nationally known, even after victories over 17th-ranked Weber State and fifth-ranked Oregon State earlier in this tournament.

But when you come right down to it, that doesn't seem to bother the 45-year-old coach of the Cardinals.

"Isn't that the great thing about college basketball?" Tubbs muses. "You can have yourself a grand season. Jacksonville can make it to the Final Four, or Charlotte can make it, or Nevada-Las Vegas — though now I consider them a powerhouse. You just don't get that in football. In our game, everybody's got some hope."

Boston rolls past Houston

BOSTON (AP) — It might not have seemed like it at the time, but when Nate Archibald was injured and Gerald Henderson made a couple of critical mistakes in a loss to Washington, the Boston Celtics may have taken a step toward playoff success.

Boston frittered away a lead Sunday and lost in overtime to the Bullets 133-128. Near the end, Archibald took an elbow in the eye from Elvin Hayes. Afterward, Coach Bill Fitch apparently had some bruising words for Henderson.

On Wednesday, with Archibald sidelined, the rookie started and played a key role in a 121-105 National Basketball Association victory over the Houston Rockets.

The win kept Boston one game ahead of Philadelphia in the battle for the Atlantic Division title. Houston maintained its one-game lead over Washington in their fight for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

For a guy who started only his second game he did very well," Fitch said of Henderson, who had 14 points and 10 assists. "Maybe if that rookie hadn't made those errors he wouldn't be as tough as he is now playing for Archibald."

"I wanted to correct my turnovers," said Henderson. "I had five last night (in a loss at Indiana) and four in the first quarter tonight." He had none the rest of the way.

The other first-string guard, Chris Ford, also missed the game with the flu and was replaced by M.L. Carr, who scored 18 points.

Klein, Yawkey inducted

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tom Yawkey was a forerunner of today's blank-check owners. He spent millions trying — in vain — to buy the Boston Red Sox a championship. And Charles "Chuck" Klein was an outfielder who, in today's free-agent market, might have become a recipient of some of those millions.

Yawkey and Klein were named posthumously Wednesday to baseball's Hall of Fame by an 18-man Veterans Committee.

The two, along with Duke Snider and Al Kaline, will be inducted into the shrine at Cooperstown, N.Y., on Aug. 3. Snider and Kaline were chosen earlier by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The Veterans Committee is, in effect, a second chance for players passed up by the writers and for other personalities. One of those players, four-time National League home run champion Johnny Mize, again failed to make the grade with the veterans, along with Charley Grimm, Jimmy Dykes, Glenn Wright and Walter Alton. Only the top two vote-getters enter the Hall. Mize was third.

Yawkey, who died in Boston on July 9, 1976, at the age of 73, became a millionaire in the family's lumber and mining business. In February 1933, four days after his 30th birthday, he spent $1 million to buy the Red Sox, a last-place team in the American League for nine successive seasons. The team hadn't won a World Series since 1918, when it beat the Chicago Cubs in six games.

Millions more went to refurbish Fenway Park and fill it with talent. Among the stars Yawkey bought were Lefty Grove, Jimmy Fox, Rick Ferrell and, from the Washington Senators, Joe Cronin, who took part in Wednesday's voting by the Veterans Committee.

"Yawkey wrote out the deal on a piece of brown paper," Cronin, the former American League president, said of the $250,000 transaction. "Then he made me his manager." But tossing around all that green only brought Boston close to the top. Between 1938 and 1942 the Red Sox finished second to the New York Yankees four times. They finally won American League pennants in 1946, 1967 and 1975 — and in each case they lost the World Series in seven games. That 1918 World Series is still the last one won by Boston.

Klein, who died March 28, 1958, at the age of 54, grew up in Indianapolis and built his muscles in the steel mills before reaching stardom in baseball. He spent 17 years in the National League (1928-44) with the Philadelphia Phillies, the Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

He was one of the game's most potent sluggers early in that span. In his first six seasons, the 6-foot, 185-pounder averaged between 337 and 386, hit between 28 and 43 home runs and drove in 121 to 170 runs.

In 1930 he failed to get a hit in just 21 of the 156 games he played. But his best season was 1933, when he won the NL's Triple Crown (average, homers and RBIs) with the Phillies.

Pampa just keeps getting that reliable pitching as junior righthanders Andy Richardson and Leroy Kuhn combined to pitch a two-hitter in Wednesday's 2-1 win over Hereford at Optimist Park.

Pampa coach Steve Scott was concerned about the mound corps before the season started because there's not an experienced senior among them. He's not worried so much now.

"I've been extremely pleased with the pitching," Scott said. "Not only have they got talent, but they're young. That makes it even better. They're showing a lot of poise and personal effort out there."

Richardson and Kuhn combined to strike out five and walk just four. Richardson (2-1), who relieved Kuhn in the fifth, was credited with the win.

Keenan Henderson knocked in both Pampa runs with a pair of singles. In the first inning, Monte Covalt doubled with one out and came home on Henderson's hit to left field. Henderson's base rap in the fifth scored Steve McDougall.

Covalt, who went three for three, rapped two doubles for the game's only extra-base hits. Henderson and Bret Atchley both went two for two. Greg Quarles and Sam Edwards had one hit apiece.

Pampa's mound staff has logged an outstanding 1.57 earned run average after seven games, but Scott is quick to point out that the defense has a lot to do with the achievement.

"Our pitchers are getting a lot of help from the defense," Scott added. "The team has been solid in the field. The outfielders are looking sharp and the infield is just as tight as it can be."

Pampa was charged with only one error. The Harvesters, now 5-2, meet Dumas at 1 p.m. today in the first round of the Hereford Tournament.

"I understand Pampa has never won that tournament," Scott said. "We're going to do our best to change that. If the Harvesters win, they go into the finals at 4 p.m. Saturday."

Pistol match scheduled Sunday

Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club will hold its monthly Hunter's Pistol Silhouette Match at 1 p.m. Sunday at the outdoor range six miles west of the city on 23rd street.

Entry fee is six dollars per person plus a one dollar fee for a classification card. Non-members of the club may participate in the match.

Astros support strike

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — After meeting two hours with player representative Marvin Miller, the Houston Astros voted unanimously to support the Major League Baseball Players Association if a strike is called.

"The unanimous voting brings the total to 276-1 in favor of a strike," Miller said Wednesday, adding he thought "players are more united this year than ever before."

Seven teams have voted thus far on the strike.

Joe Niekro, Houston representative on the association's executive board, made a similar observation last week after briefing his team on a board meeting.

Miller said baseball does not have a crisis every year, "but if you compare this year with 1972, I'd say the players are more united."

The last baseball strike was in 1972.

Primaries forming outline of what is to come in 1980

Solid in the South, President Carter and Ronald Reagan are grinding for showdown contests in Illinois, seeking victories that could point their way to rival nominations for the White House.

For Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy and for Reagan's Republican challengers, the Illinois presidential primary election next Tuesday has become a must. Unless Kennedy can stop Carter there, it will be hard for the Massachusetts senator to stop him at all. Republicans George Bush and John B. Anderson face the same situation against Reagan.

Both Carter and Reagan enter Illinois buoyed by towering landslides in three southern states.

Reagan won big in Florida, Alabama and Georgia on Tuesday, trouncing Bush, Anderson, who didn't campaign, ran a distant third.

In the Southern primaries, Carter won bigger over Kennedy, who all but wrote off the competition in the president's home territory.

And Carter swept past Kennedy in Oklahoma's Democratic caucuses, winning by a 3-to-1 margin. Carter and Reagan were the early leaders as both parties caucused in Washington state.

In his own Georgia primary, Carter got 10 votes for every Kennedy ballot. That dwarfed Kennedy's victory margin in his home Massachusetts primary one week earlier.

"We whipped him," Carter told Georgia Gov. George Busbee. Carter was quick to note that Kennedy had skipped the South. The president told supporters in Birmingham, Ala., by telephone that "it's not feasible to be elected unless you're a national candidate."

Let anyone miss the message, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the Southern bye meant a Kennedy ticket would be doomed to failure because, "History shows us that no Democrat can win the presidency if he writes off a whole section of the country."

Carter won with 88 percent of the vote in Georgia, 82 percent in Alabama and 61 percent in Florida. One surprise there: Nine percent of the voters marked No Preference.

Kennedy came closest in Florida, and he only got 23 percent there, boosted by the support of Jewish voters angry with the Carter administration's admittedly mistaken vote for a U.N. resolution critical of Israel.

Patrick Lucey, deputy chairman of the Kennedy campaign, said the challenger got "about what we expected" in the South.

Lucey predicted that the campaign tide would turn when Carter is held accountable for the nation's economic woes. Kennedy has been saying that regularly. He needs to prove it in Illinois.

Reagan's GOP landslides were almost as hefty as Carter's margins.

He beat Bush 73 percent to 13 percent in Georgia, 69 percent to 26 percent in Alabama, and 57 percent to 30 percent in Florida.

Reagan captured 105 votes for the Republican presidential nomination to 9 for Bush. That gave Reagan a national total of 167 to 45 for Bush. It will take 998 to win the GOP nomination.

Carter picked up 181 delegates in the three primaries, and was assured of at least 30 more from Oklahoma's Democratic precinct caucuses. Kennedy managed to take 26 out of the South, and one uncommitted delegate was chosen in Florida.

Nationally, Carter has 268 delegates in his column, Kennedy 141. The target for Democratic nomination is 1,666.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., also stayed away to campaign next for the April 1 Wisconsin primary.

The Democrats will battle for 179 delegates in Illinois. Kennedy has been pointing to the contest for weeks; he said that and the New York primary on March 25 are the contests in which his challenge will take hold.

Kennedy has defeated Carter only once, in Massachusetts.

A poll published by the Chicago Tribune said Carter is favored by Illinois voters by a wide margin. The Tribune said the president was preferred by 62 percent, Kennedy by 23 percent.

Six people on wrong side of road

BERWICK, Pa. (AP) — For their honeymoon, Jim and Debbie Bigler donned white helmets proclaiming "Free the Hostages" and set out on a 300-mile walk across Pennsylvania.

The Biglers and four companions have been turning heads and hearing a lot of horn honking on the hilly route from Hermitage, Pa. to Scranton.

That's fine with them. Attention is what they want.

The tiny caravan — carrying the flags of the United States and Canada — is on its way to Scranton to visit the family of Michael Metrinko, one of the 50 American hostages in Iran.

"We came to like this family very much," said Bigler, 31. "We wanted to do something to show there are a lot of people who support them, who want the exact same thing they do and who are praying for them."

Bigler is grounds superintendent of Hillcrest Cemetery in Hermitage. That is where the marchers met the Metrinkos, who attended a Feb. 11 ceremony in which 100 American flags were raised, one for each of the 100 days the hostages had been held there.

Harry Metrinko also lit a memorial flame for his son that will burn until he comes home. A new flag has raised each additional day the hostages have been held.

"They're extraordinary people... They have no anger for the Iranian people," said Tom Flynn, 41, who owns the cemetery and who organized the cross-state march.

Joe and Janice Baker are also making the trek, which started in 3-degree weather March 1.

"Every couple of cars blow their horns," Baker said during a recent roadside interview. "We find that the further we go, the more people know about us."

By Wednesday, the 130th day of captivity for the hostages, the walkers had reached Berwick in Columbia County, with a little more than 40 miles to go.

Jim Bigler's 20-year-old brother, George, says he doesn't expect the march to affect the fate of the hostages, but he hopes it will focus peoples' feelings.

"I think that's the problem with the American people. They don't know the families and they don't know how to show their feelings. This way, someone can just beep his horn and feel he's giving us support," Bigler said.

Baker said he hopes the walk will impress Iranian diplomats in the United States. "We have to do something to make them see we are united," he said.

The six take turns walking in pairs while the others ride in a car and a van ahead of them. Motels along the way give them free room and board and they usually eat lunch as guests of local officials in the small towns they pass through.

Among the people who have taken them in are the parents of baseball pitcher Sparkie Lyle, a former New York Yankee now with the Texas Rangers. They live in Reynoldsville.

People constantly ask questions or invite them into their homes and wish them luck. Occasionally, some join the march.

"I hope you get a lot of publicity," said the driver of an empty school bus that pulled up alongside the Bakers.

"God bless you," a woman called from her front yard.

"It's been beautiful all along the way," said Baker, 54, a Mercer County labor official. "We haven't had a negative remark yet."

The group expects to reach Scranton on Saturday to join a St. Patrick's Day parade and then continue on to the Metrinko home in suburban Olyphant.

The Metrinkos haven't heard from their son, a 33-year-old State Department official, since he telephoned on the couple's anniversary last Oct. 19.

"We're quite delighted," Metrinko said of the march. The Metrinkos talk every night with Flynn, who calls them with a daily progress report. When the walk is over, they'll receive a lantern that was lit at the memorial flame in Hermitage.

"I'm amazed that no one else is doing anything," said Flynn. "Here we are — just six people on the side of the road."

Illegal dumping crackdown planned

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — With the aid and precision of organized crime, authorities say, gypsy truckers are hauling toxic chemicals from factories in the mid-Atlantic and Western states and illegally dumping the hazardous waste in the woods and farmland of northern New England.

Law enforcement officials, citing lack of laws, shortage of trained investigators and bureaucratic apathy, say there is little they can do to stop the clandestine influx which has risen as states tighten their restrictions on the legal dumping of hazardous wastes.

Truckers loaded with rusting, often leaky drums of solvents, cyanide solutions, pesticides and acids, the truckers operate with apparent impunity.

Phony company names, false shipping manifests, midnight rendezvous with guides and large cash payments describe an operation that state and federal officials in New England say they are painfully aware of.

"At times, the interstates turn into raceways with trucks from New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and other Southern states hauling hazardous waste into northern New England," says Dennis Roberts, Rhode Island's attorney general. "The word is obviously out that there are a lot of trees they can dump behind in Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire."

The central figure in the operation appears to be the gypsy or independent trucker who hauls cargo on a one-time or freelance basis.

"It's clear to us that the shipping is being arranged by people with organized crime involvement," Roberts says. "Everything runs too smoothly for it to be anyone else and our intelligence confirms it. These people aren't going to hire major trucking firms to illegally carry illegal cargo for illegal dumping."

The drivers are getting paid two to three times the normal rate, because the cargo is dangerous and there's a demand. The word is that a nine-hour run from Wilmington, Del., to Maine will pay $2,200 while a short hop from New York to Vermont brings $900.

Federal and state officials agree that environmental experts who can spot hazardous waste aren't skilled in police work, while police can't tell whether truckers are hauling the goods listed on manifests.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has 20 investigators from New York to Maine to examine trucks, but regional director Gary Curtis says there are several hundred thousand trucks on the highways "and even if we find something, we're not always sure what it is."

More recently, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced new rules designed to control the disposal of an estimated 57 million tons of hazardous waste produced each year by some 750,000 companies. The agency estimated 90 percent of such wastes are now mishandled.

LAZY LAMBS took a break Wednesday after a full week of the hustle and bustle of the annual Top O' Texas Livestock Show. Waiting to see what happens next, these three show-goers await transportation by their buyers. The annual event included lamb judging for the first time this year with a very good results, show officials report. Lambs were exhibited by 4-H and FFA members from throughout the area.

'Festival' becomes like tax audit, dentist visit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Public TV stations are out with the tin cups again, reminding us of the valuable truth in that crude maxim: "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

"Festival '80" is called a panhandling extravaganza, begging, elevated to an art form and robed in elegant euphemisms.

Viewers who pledge money to the local station aren't called "donors" or "benefactors." They're called "Subscribers," a term presumably meant to impart a sense of privilege to the act of forking out bucks.

More offensive, even, is the use of the term "Festival '80" to describe the three annual money-raising periods. If this is a festival, so is a visit to the dentist, or a tax audit.

What "Festival '80" really means is a two- or three-week period in which your local PBS station airs its most commercial stuff and beleaguers it with insistent pleas for money. Sometimes it is gentle supplication; more often, it approaches brazenness, even impropriety.

In the last couple of weeks, barkers for KCET, the PBS station here, have resorted to asking children to call in pledges on behalf of their parents. "You kids like 'Sesame Street,' don't you? Well, call in your pledge now."

Then there was a plea to senior citizens on fixed incomes. "Wouldn't it be nice if 10,000 retirees each donated $5?" Yes, why waste a Social Security check on food?

I know this has the sound of an ingrate's ranting; after all, some of the best television comes from public TV, and public TV, we're forever reminded, can't earn money by selling commercials.

But I mean only to register complaint about the method, certainly not the end.

Alas, there appears to be no better way. "We don't like it, our viewers complain about it, it really is a pain," says KCET station manager David Crippens of the begging. "But it provides the basic support of the station."

KCET's working budget was $18 million, of which only $1.5 million came from the federal Corporation for Public Broadcasting. About $12 million came from foundation and corporate grants, but that money was earmarked strictly for production of specific national programs.

A big corporation would much rather invest money in a program that carries the slug. "This program was made possible by a grant from the Big Bucks Co." to a national audience than invest in local shows.

So, to get the $6 million required to run the local station (paying engineers, buying programs, paying bills), KCET has to beg viewers to supplement the money the government kicks in through the CPB. Viewers provided about $3 million to KCET's current budget, Crippens says.

Just at a time when PBS needs to expand its programming to meet the challenge of Pay TV, a congressional freeze on the CPB allotment will reduce the amount of money given next year to the local stations.

Budget cutters come up with sticky situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Br'er Rabbit could have told congressional budget cutters about the frustrations of wrestling with tar babies. But after days of becoming increasingly entangled in issues as sticky as the baby fashioned of tar that gave the rabbit in the folk tale such problems, it looks like they're figuring it out themselves. Some congressional sources say the budget cutters have reached tentative agreements on some $17 billion in cuts and a $4 billion increase in tax revenues for the upcoming fiscal year. But others say the decisions aren't that solid and that the final mixture — and the overall savings — could change. There is no guarantee, of course, that any of the estimated 40 or so proposals under consideration will be adopted. The panel of administration economists and congressional leaders is only trying to decide which are most feasible. And unlike the briar patch detested so lovingly by Br'er Rabbit in the series of allegorical stories written by Joel Chandler Harris, the thicket of special interests awaiting the proposed cuts is far from a friendly environment.

Murmurs of unrest already are being heard. Women, blacks and Hispanics threatened Wednesday to take their anger to the voting booths if Carter's budget-cutting digs into programs for the poor and disadvantaged. Congressional sources, all of whom asked to go nameless, cite the following as among items that could find their way into the final package: —Cutting $1.7 billion from the $6.9 billion in revenue sharing funds to the states. —Changing cost of living adjustments for federal retirees from twice a year to once a year, saving more than $2 billion. —Delaying anti-inflation aid to cities, saving about $1 billion. —Eliminating Saturday deliveries of mail.

Northbound border traffic bogging down

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Businessmen from Juarez, Mexico and El Paso planned to meet today with immigration officials to try to get around new U.S. procedures that are bogging northbound border traffic.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Businessmen from Juarez, Mexico and El Paso are meeting here today with immigration officials to try to get around new U.S. procedures that are bogging northbound border traffic.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, in an effort to save money, has cut back the number of officers who work the border bridges on overtime days, Sundays and holidays.

The holdback measure has caused long lines of motorists to wait more than 30 minutes to get into the United States, according to Gaston de Bayona, director of international relations for the Juarez mayor.

A new rule went into effect this week slowing the process of border crossing permits, according to Pete Reyes, assistant INS director here.

It used to take 45 days to process passes allowing Mexican citizens to visit the United States for 72 hours. The old plan allowed a temporary pass during the processing time.

"It used to take Mexican citizens half a day to get temporary permission to visit the United States," says de Bayona. "Now, it will take a month and a half."

The new rule forbids the temporary permit, says Reyes, and the applicant must wait until the document is approved in Washington, D.C., and a permit is printed at an Arlington, Texas plant.

Shoppers and tourists from both sides of the border might decide to stay home rather than fight the traffic jams, says de Bayona.

Mike Dipp Jr., of El Paso's Downtown Development Association, says he and Juarez businessmen will meet with Reyes and a representative of Texas Gov. Bill Clements to attempt to solve the problems.

Reyes said local INS officers have asked immigration authorities in Dallas and Washington, D.C., to reinstitute the temporary pass program.

"Hopefully," Reyes says, "we'll be able to tell the people... that temporary permits are still in order."

"If they don't allow us to extend these temporary permits," says Reyes, "it's going to create a burden on us because of the additional work... and we're going to have the irate individuals who will not be able to cross and will not be able to understand."

De Bayona says cutting the number of bridge lanes from eight to two on busy Sundays and holidays will harm the economy on both sides of the border. Sundays and holidays are popular border crossing days.

Man released from prison by error

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Dallas man sentenced to life in prison as an habitual criminal was accidentally released from prison after serving an earlier 5-year term for burglary.

Criminal court records in Dallas show, however, that Wilson was found guilty in May, 1979 of burglarizing a northeast Dallas television shop and because of prior convictions was assessed a life prison term as a habitual criminal.

The man, Bruce Patrick Wilson, 29, who was known as the "Jack of Diamonds" because of his reputed jewelry burglaries in north Dallas, was released March 4, a TDC official said. He had been in prison since January, 1978 serving a 5-year term for burglary.

District Court Judge Richard Mays confirmed Wednesday that the last case resulting in the life prison term was heard in his court by visiting judge Claude Williams.

Judge Mays said it was "oversight" by his office that led to the failure to issue the proper paperwork to keep Wilson in prison. The paperwork, he said, involved issuing a commitment, outlining punishment for Wilson.

"There's no question about it that I failed to tell my clerk to issue the commitments," Mays said. "My excuse for doing that was that it was never brought to my attention that hearings had been held."

"I simply have too many cases to remember all these things," A Dallas County Sheriff's office spokesman said a felony warrant has been issued for Wilson and said four men were assigned to find him.

Mays said that TDC officials should have had some type of hold on Wilson's release.

TDC spokesman Keith Wall said that without the commitment, officials here could have no way of knowing that Wilson faced further punishment.

"I'm not telling you that the man never got a life sentence," Wall said. "I'm just telling you that if he did, we've never received the paperwork."

Bell case to court in April

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether Southwestern Bell Telephone

Co. must pay $3 million to a fired executive and the widow of another executive.

The high court scheduled an April 16 hearing on the case.

James H. Ashley, Bell's former commercial manager in San Antonio, and Oleta Gravitt Dixon, widow of T.O. Gravitt, Bell's vice president for Texas when he committed suicide Oct. 17, 1974, each won a $1.5 million judgment in a San Antonio trial court.

The jury found in 1977 Bell had slandered Gravitt and Ashley during an internal investigation and drove Gravitt to suicide.

The appeals court held that anything derogatory that Bell investigators said about Gravitt and Ashley was "conditionally privileged" and could not result in damages for slander.

Famed Texan considering surgery on Shah

HOUSTON (AP) — Noted heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey will operate on the ailing shah of Iran if an examination shows the deposed monarch requires surgery, a Baylor College of Medicine spokesman says.

Baylor spokesman Frank Weaver said he talked to DeBakey Wednesday night and that the surgeon "is definitely going to Panama to examine the shah."

"No one is committed to surgery," said Weaver. "They first will have to examine the shah."

However, a New York spokesman for the exiled ruler said Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's spleen is inflamed, enlarged and probably associated with a tumor. He said the shah will undergo an operation soon to have it removed.

Weaver said if surgery is required DeBakey would bring his team from Baylor and Methodist Hospital in Houston to Panama to perform the operation. The Baylor spokesman said he did not know who asked DeBakey to examine the shah.

Sources in Panama City, Panama, said doctors and officials there worked under tight security Wednesday to prepare a hospital ward for the shah's expected operation.

Dr. Benjamin Kean, the shah's personal physician, refused to disclose the date of the operation for security reasons, the New York spokesman said. But sources in Panama said it probably would be sometime within the next week or so.

Weaver said travel plans were incomplete and he could not say when DeBakey would examine the shah.

The former monarch now lives under political asylum on Contadora Island off Panama's Pacific coast. His last medical check-up a week ago showed he had severe anemia, and low white cell and platelet blood counts, the New York spokesman said.

The spokesman quoted Kean as saying the operation would be "hazardous" and that the shah would require major blood transfusions during and after the operation.

The shah underwent gallbladder surgery and cancer treatment in New York in late October and November and spent a brief recovery period in Texas before arriving in Panama Dec. 15.

The shah fled Iran fourteen months ago during the final bloody days of the revolution headed by religious strongman Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, which culminated in the establishment of an Islamic republic in Iran.

Watercraft buffs ired by proposal

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A proposal to restrict the use of recreational watercraft on weekends comes under fire today during a Department of Energy's hearing on a proposed standby federal emergency energy conservation plan.

The measure is contained in a nine-point package that would become effective during a severe fuel shortage.

Although several states, such as Texas and California, have used an odd-even rationing program to ease the fuel crunch, the president would have the authority to override any state measure in favor of the stricter federal plan.

In addition to the boating restriction, the government is proposing lower speed limits, a minimum fuel purchase requirement, an odd-even gasoline rationing plan, an employer program to reduce commuter use of private vehicles and a vehicle sticker program to prohibit use of vehicles one or more days a week.

Included in the proposal are a compressed work week, a public information program and temperature restrictions in non-residential buildings.

However, the proposal to restrict boating on weekends has drawn the strongest opposition.

If approved, all owned, chartered or rented vessels which use fuel as a source of propulsion would be prohibited from operating on Sunday and possibly all weekend during a fuel crisis.

Boating organizations estimate the measure would affect more than 535,000 registered boat owners in Texas and more than 900 retailers who contribute about $169,000 million to the state economy.

Several boating organizations have launched a media blitz, including newspaper advertisements, radio and television spots, have encouraged boat owners and retailers to attend the two-day hearing here and express their opposition.

"The DOE has based its proposals on findings that are wrong," said Frank Pillsbury, a representative of the Boat Trade Association of Texas.

Pillsbury's statement was made in response to a DOE official following a hearing in Atlanta earlier this month.

Henry G. Bartholomew, DOE director for energy conservation and solar energy, said preliminary data used by the federal agency indicated boats consumed between 2 percent to 3 percent of all fuel when the watercraft actually use only about .05 percent.

The potential saving from curtailing boating is minimal since most Americans own a 16-foot boat and not a yacht, Bartholomew said.

The proposal "strikes at the very heart of middle America" while forcing a particular segment of business to carry a brunt of the effort to constrain energy demands.

Bartholomew also noted other low cost fuel consumers, such as snowmobiles and 4-wheel drives, were exempted from the measure.

If the actual figure falls anywhere between the two extremes, the chances of such a proposal passing were "slim to zero."

12 GOOD REASONS WHY YOU'LL FIND THE DAILY NEWSPAPER AN IMPORTANT PART OF YOUR CHILD'S EDUCATION...

1. It's an adult medium. No big seventh-grader with a reading problem likes to be seen carrying around "Six Ducks in a Pond." But he's proud to be seen reading the newspaper.
2. It deals in reality, in what is happening here and now. Motivation is built in for reading and discussions.
3. It bridges the gap between the classroom and the "real" world outside.
4. It contains history as it happens, reported as completely and objectively as is humanly possible.
5. It contains something for every student: comics for the slow reader, editorials for the bright youngster; real math problems for the child who hates textbooks; science as it happens.
6. It contains practical vocabulary, the words students will use over and over again throughout their lives.
7. It can be marked, cut, pasted, colored-important to young children who learn by doing and seeing.
8. It contains in its news stories the best models for clear, concise, simple writing.
9. It is the perfect model for teaching students to write for a purpose and for a particular audience.
10. It is the only up-to-date social studies text there is.
11. It is the only text the majority of children will continue to read throughout their lives.
12. It is an influential and integral part of our free society. Its freedom is guaranteed under the Constitution which some have said is "less the right of the newspaper to print than it is the right of the citizen to read."

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top defense officials have defended the Carter administration against a demand that the administration consider alternative ways of basing the huge MX missile system.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, told Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Wednesday that there is serious opposition to the "racetrack" deployment plan in Nevada and Utah where the system would be based. Carter's plan calls for putting 200 missiles on giant transporters and shuffling them among 4,600 blast-proof underground shelters built in oval patterns in some 40 Utah and Nevada valleys.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee has approved legislation to let the president withhold advance notification to Congress of sensitive covert U.S. intelligence operations.

A subcommittee had voted earlier to require prior notice of all covert intelligence activities, but Carter administration officials objected that some operations might be too sensitive. The compromise approved Wednesday would let the president withhold advance notice if the delay was necessary to meet extraordinary circumstances affecting the vital interest of the United States or to avoid unreasonable risk to the safety of the personnel or methods employed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carnation Co. has recalled some of its Rocky Road ice cream because it contains glass. The Spokane, Wash., branch of the company traced the problem to batches of mixed nuts it bought from Rocky Road and other flavors like Maple Nut, Banana Nut, Black Walnut, Mocha Nut and Caramel Cashew.

Only ice cream sold in Washington state, Idaho and Oregon was affected because one supplier provided the nuts for the product available in those states, assistant product manager Wallace Murphy said in a telephone interview.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A batch of Osco Brand Olive Oil, sold as a rubbing compound, has been recalled because some bottles were mislabeled and may contain camphor spirits, which can cause convulsions or death if ingested.

The recall, announced Wednesday by the Food and Drug Administration, was undertaken by Simpax Corp. of Seattle, Wash., and affects 144

FOREIGN BRIEFS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's martial law government has arrested 15 leftist army officers and a former army major-general on suspicion of plotting against the regime.

The suspects were arrested early this month, before they could mount a coup against the Zia government, several reliable sources said Wednesday.

The apparent chief conspirator was former Maj. Gen. Tajamul Hussain, who was expelled from the Pakistani army in 1976 for allegedly plotting to overthrow then Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. He was held under house arrest until Zia freed him in 1978.

CORBRY, England (AP) — Health officials have asked British doctors for help in trying to track down guests who stayed at a hotel in this central English city where an outbreak of Legionnaires Disease has been reported.

"We want to trace anyone who has stayed in the hotel in the past year. They could be suffering from the disease, but the symptoms may not be recognized," said Dr. N.S. Galbraith, chief of the government's Communicable Disease Surveillance Center, which traced the disease to the 50-room Strathclyde Hotel.

The hotel, patronized mainly by businessmen, was temporarily closed on Wednesday. The government team was called in last April after a Liverpool businessman contracted the disease, following a stay at the hotel. The man has since recovered. Legionnaires Disease is a pneumonia-like chest infection identified in 1976 after 183 American Legionnaires were taken ill at a hotel in Philadelphia. Twenty-nine died later.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's House of Representatives, the lower house of the Parliament, today adopted resolutions demanding the immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan and deploring the Soviet military buildup on the Kurile Islands north of Japan.

two-ounce bottles of Osco Brand Olive Oil and Osco Brand Camphor Spirits NF. They carry the lot numbers 188016 or 188018. Company president Steve Henkel said the firm believes four bottles of olive oil in this lot carry labels saying camphor spirits, but all of these have been recovered and did not pose a health threat.

Public Notices

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Mayor and City Commission of the City of Pampa, Texas, will be received at the office of the City Secretary, Pampa, Texas, until 9:30 A.M., Tuesday, March 25, 1980 for furnishing of necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence and labor for "SEAL COATING STREETS, 1980".

Bidders shall submit their bids on the forms attached to the Specifications and must submit therewith a Cashier's or Certified Check issued by a bank satisfactory to the City, or a Proposal Bond payable without recourse to the order of H.R. Thompson, Jr., Mayor, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible bid submitted on the project as a guaranty that the bidder will enter into a contract and execute bonds in the forms provided within ten (10) days after notice of award of contract to him.

The successful bidder must furnish performance and payment bonds on the forms attached to the Specifications in the amount of 100 percent of the total contract price from a Surety Company approved by the Owner holding a permit from the State of Texas to act as Surety or other Sureties acceptable to the Owner.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in bid script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive informalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices for the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. The contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions under which the work is to be done. The Contractor shall comply with all State and Federal regulations regarding wages and conditions of employment, including but not limited to those rules and regulations set forth or referred to in the specifications. Since a portion of project costs will be paid from the Revenue Sharing Funds, wages must be at least equal to those determined by the U.S. Department of Labor, as set forth in the Contract Documents.

NON-DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT
BIDDERS ON THIS WORK WILL BE REQUIRED TO COMPLY WITH THE PRESIDENT'S EXECUTIVE ORDERS NOS. 11246 AND 11375. THE REQUIREMENTS FOR BIDDERS AND CONTRACTORS UNDER THIS ORDER ARE EXPLAINED IN THE SPECIFICATIONS. BIDDERS MUST SUBMIT WITH THEIR INITIAL BID A SIGNED STATEMENT AS TO WHETHER THEY HAVE PREVIOUSLY PERFORMED WORK SUBJECT TO THE PRESIDENT'S EXECUTIVE ORDERS NOS. 11246 AND 11375 OR ANY PRECEDING SIMILAR EXECUTIVE ORDERS (NOS. 10925 AND 11114).

NOTICE OF REQUIREMENT FOR CERTIFICATION OF NONSEGREGATED FACILITIES
Bidders are cautioned as follows: By signing the contract for which these bids are solicited, the bidder will be deemed to have signed and agreed to the provisions of the Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities as contained in the specifications of this project.

NOTICE TO PROSPECTIVE FEDERALLY ASSISTED CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTORS
(a) A Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities, as required for the May 28, 1968 order (52 CFR, May 28, 1968) on Elimination of Segregated Facilities, by the Secretary of Labor, must be submitted prior to the award of a federally assisted construction contract exceeding $10,000 which is not exempt from the provisions of the Equal Opportunity clause.

(b) Contractors receiving federally assisted construction contract awards exceeding $10,000 which are not exempt from the provisions of the Equal Opportunity clause will be required to provide for the forwarding of this notice to prospective subcontractors for supplies and construction contracts where the subcontract exceeds $10,000 and are not exempt from the provisions of the Equal Opportunity clause.

Information for Bidders, Proposal Forms, Specifications and Plans are on file with the City Secretary of the City of Pampa, Texas, and copies may be secured at the office of the consulting engineers, MERRIMAN & BARBER CONSULTING ENGINEERS, INC., 117 North Frost Street, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Farm scene

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grain exports, notably shipments of corn, are at record levels and continue to edge close to what government experts projected before President Carter shut off the Soviet Union early this year.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday one reason is that the Soviets have been scrambling to find other sources for its grain imports. That has triggered competition among other foreign buyers for U.S. corn.

Carter canceled further U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union Jan. 4 in retaliation for its occupation of Afghanistan. The Soviets, beset by a short harvest last year, have been scouring other markets, including Argentina and others, to help make up its shortfall.

"The higher estimate (of U.S. corn shipments) reflects a decrease in export availability from Argentina as a result of deteriorating crop prospects and growing world demand as importing nations seek new sources of grain in the face of strong competition from the USSR," officials said.

In all, the report said U.S. corn exports are now expected to be a record of about 2.4 billion bushels. That is 125 million more than experts had projected for 1979-80 on Jan. 28, several weeks after Carter's action.

Also, the new corn export figure nudged to within 100 million bushels of the 2.5 billion bushels predicted last Nov. 13, long before the partial embargo was ordered.

Consequently, the report said, prices of corn at the farm are expected to be about 5 cents a bushel more than was indicated six weeks ago, averaging $2.30 to $2.50 a bushel over the entire crop marketing year, which will end Sept. 30.

Last November, the price forecast was $2.25 to $2.55 a bushel at the farm over the entire year.

On Monday, the Agriculture Department acknowledged the Soviet Union has made some headway in finding grain to offset part of the shipments canceled by Carter. But officials added the Soviets would not come near making up the entire amounts.

The partial embargo affected 17 million metric tons of corn and wheat that the Soviet Union was expected to take from the United States in the 1979-80 year, which will end Sept. 30. Orders for 8 million metric tons, specified under an earlier agreement, were exempted.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

On a tonnage basis, the U.S. corn exports now projected at about 2.4 billion bushels this season would be equal to 61 million metric tons.

Figures for wheat were unchanged from the January forecast, a total of nearly 1.33 billion bushels to be exported in the wheat marketing year, which will end May 31. That is equal to 36.1 million metric tons.

Last November, wheat exports were projected at 1.4 billion bushels, or some 38.1 million metric tons.

The farm price of wheat was estimated at $3.70 to $3.90 a bushel, unchanged from January. It was projected last November to average $3.60 to $3.90 a bushel at the farm over the entire marketing year.

Overall, total U.S. exports of feedgrains — mainly corn but including sorghum, barley and oats — were put at a record of 69.1 million metric tons in 1979-80, up 15 percent from 61 million last year. Last November, the projected total was 71.1 million metric tons.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says Florida vegetable crops are in "highly variable" condition at this time, ranging from "poor to mostly good."

Low temperatures moved through production areas during the last week, causing "substantial plant loss to cucumbers, squash, tomatoes, peppers and potatoes in northern and west-central areas," officials said Tuesday in a weekly report.

In Texas, it said, cold weather damaged some melons, young cabbage plants, cucumbers and some onions and potatoes.

The report, which includes only brief comments on weather and crop conditions, did not indicate the extent of losses.

Looking at winter wheat conditions, it said the crop was generally "rated good throughout major production areas" for this time of year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indonesia will get $51 million worth of U.S. rice and wheat under a new Food for Peace arrangement.

The package, announced Tuesday by the Agriculture Department, includes more than $40.7 million worth of rice, an estimated 117,000 metric tons, and $10.3 million worth of wheat or flour, around 60,000 metric tons. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Officials said the agreement calls for Indonesia to get the commodities this calendar year.

'Integrity Harris' accused in murder

GREENWAY, Va. (AP) — Jean Struven Harris, headmistress at the exclusive Madeira School, used to lecture her assembled students frequently about the need for integrity.

"She has said that word 'integrity' so many times that some of the students call her 'Integrity Harris,'" said Sonya Knight, president of the boarding students at the school.

Now Mrs. Harris is accused of murdering Dr. Herman Tarnower, a wealthy New York heart specialist who wrote the famous "Scarsdale Diet" book.

The 400-acre campus on the banks of the Potomac River — complete with riding stables, tennis courts and swimming pool — was quiet Tuesday. The 325 female high school students began a three-week spring vacation at the end of school last Friday.

But the headmistress was not forgotten.

"Mrs. Harris is a fine woman and a fine headmistress and no matter what happens I will always believe in her," said Laura Gill, president of the day-school students.

Mrs. Harris' arraignment before a Westchester County judge Tuesday on a second-degree murder charge shed little light on the circumstances of Tarnower's death late Monday.

She had a bruised upper lip and her lawyer said, "She suffered the bruises at the house." Police said there were signs of struggle in the upstairs bedroom where the 69-year-old doctor was found bleeding to death, shot three times.

Mrs. Harris met police at his $500,000 mansion, told them there had been a shooting and produced a .32 caliber pistol from the glove compartment of her car, police said.

"I have no idea what happened in New York and I'm shocked by it all," said a faculty member who asked not to be named. "Jean Harris always seemed to know exactly what she was doing and she was a good headmistress. I just hope this doesn't hurt the school."

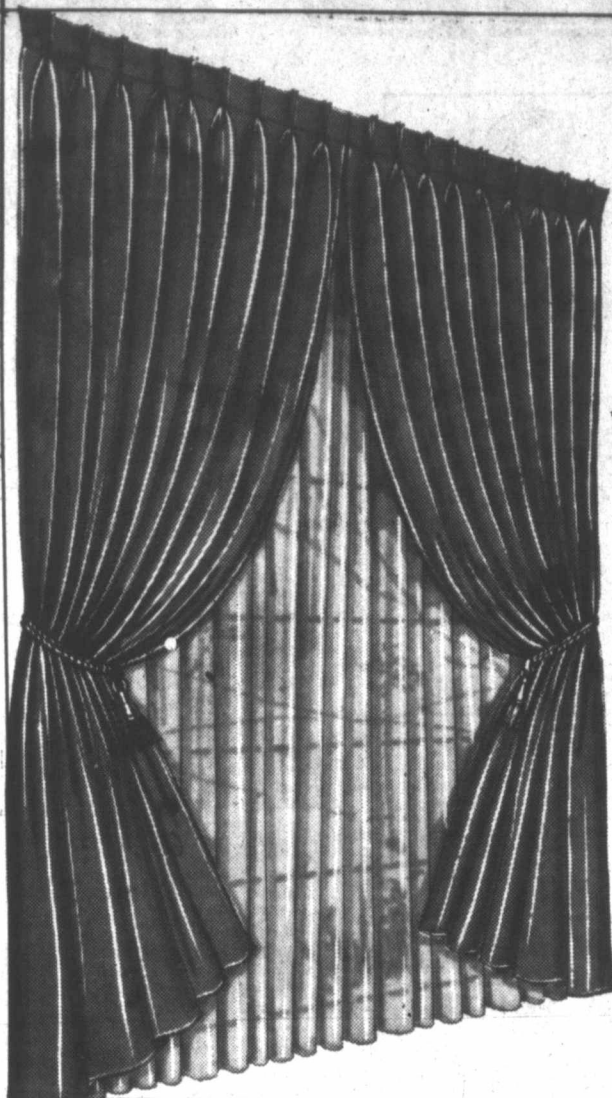

Mrs. Harris, headmistress at Madeira since 1977, had known Tarnower for some time and was said to be a frequent guest at his house. Her name was first among the acknowledgements in his "Scarsdale Diet" book and he credited her with helping research and write it.

"On behalf of everyone at the school, I can only say that we are most distressed to learn of unfortunate events affecting Mrs. Harris, the headmistress," said Madeira school president Alice W. Faulkner. She added that she had been informed Mrs. Harris was resigning her position.

"We have a very strong administration in place and I am sure that we can continue in a strong way and continue as normally as possible," Mrs. Faulkner said.

Two-thirds of the Madeira students live on campus and pay $6,130 a year for tuition, room and board. Founded in 1906, the school boasts many notable alumnae, including Washington Post Co. board chairman Katharine Graham.
