Texans can forget higher sales tax

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says Texans can forget about a general state tax increase next year but can probably count on paying a higher state gasoline tax.

circumstances, such as a drop-off in tax collections, that would cause him to change his mind about vetoing a tax bill. Clements said: "No, there are no such circumstances." He said, however, "I don't think we will have any difficulty" raising the nickel-a-gallon gas tax, which is one of the lowest in the nation. "We should have done it long ago." The gasoline tax supports highways, primarily, but also contributes to public schools and the highway patrol. Clements said he had talked with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Bill Clayton and other legislators and "found no disagreement" that enacting a gas tax increase "is the proper and appropriate thing to do." Clements' views were sought on presidential politics, and he said President Carter "will be in deep, deep trouble by mid-summer. All his chickens will have come home to roost." "Any Republican who is nominated can win this race," Clements said. He added that he had advised an associate of Gerald Ford against Ford seeking the GOP nomination. Clements said he told Tom Reed it was too late for Ford to get on the May 3 presidential primary ballot and win Texas delegates to the national convention.

Cable television changes announced in Pampa

The dropping of three Dallas stations and the addition of New York, Chicago and Oklahoma City stations and live telecasts of the U.S. House of Representatives when it is in session are among the changes in Pampa's cable television system which will go into effect Monday, according to Wayne Stedum, general manager of Sammons Communications of Texas Inc. Stedum said cable channels to be dropped from the cable are channel 2, KXTX of Dallas, Christian Broadcast Network, channel 11, KTVT of Dallas; and channel 13, KERA of Dallas, Public Broadcast System. To be added to cable television will be channel 11, WOR of New York City, a 24-hour movie and sports station, carrying New York Mets and New York

Knicks and other teams; channel 2, WGN of Chicago, also a 24-hour movie and sports station, carrying the Chicago Cubs and the NBA Chicago Bulls; and channel 12, KERA of Oklahoma City, Public Broadcast System.

Stedum said channel 9 will carry the Christian Broadcast Network of Virginia Beach, Va., a 24-hour religious channel. Channel 5 will carry ESPN, a 24-hour entertainment-sports network, and channel 8 will carry C-SPAN, live telecasts of the U.S. House of Representatives when in session. Channel 6 will carry UPI News Service, local weather, and the New York Stock Market in coming weeks.

Oklahoman charged in Canadian man's death

First degree murder charges have been filed against a 19-year-old Clinton man in the December death of George Marsh of Canadian. Elwayne Shockey of Clinton, Okla., an oilfield worker, was arrested by Custer Co. deputy, Jim West. Shockey is being held in the Custer Co. jail without bond.

A preliminary hearing has been set for April 2 in Arapahoe, Okla. The body of Roger Marsh, a 21-year-old Canadian oilfield worker, was found by a bird hunter New Years Eve, northeast of Arapahoe on a railroad right-of-way. Authorities believe that Marsh was killed as the result of a blow to the head. Marsh's money and wallet were missing when the body was found. Marsh was last seen alive on Christmas day in Clinton, Okla. He is survived by his mother of Clinton, his father of Clinton, Okla. two brothers and his grandparents.

Panhandle cities plan resolutions delaying rate increase

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Despite an erroneous reports, the Canyon city council has rejected the compromise 11.1 percent Southwestern Public Service rate hike, officials of the city said today. "I'm sorry the news media did not understand what we did last night," Canyon city manager Glen Metcalf said early today. The council passed a resolution suspending the increase for 120 days during Thursday night's regular council meeting, he explained, in order to further study the rate hike. Bill McMorries and Dr. J. Pat Stephens (both members of the Texas Panhandle Rate Committee formed to study the electric utility's increase) briefly reported to the Canyon city council members and recommended the passing of the resolution, he said. "We thought the resolution was necessary," he said, "so we could take into account what the steering committee says." "Any entity needs to pass the resolution," Metcalf said, "otherwise, the rate increase will go into effect on April 3, regardless of what the cities may think." Memorandums were sent out by Merrill Nunn, Amarillo city attorney and member of the steering committee, "some time ago" recommending all the cities pass the resolution, he said. The misunderstanding over Canyon's council meeting, he said, "was because they had not received the committee's recommendation on the compromise rate increase."

"This is entirely possible," he said, "since I only sent them out yesterday. So they didn't have anything to act on." Pampa city manager Mack Wofford said consideration of the 120 day suspension resolution has been placed on the city commission's agenda for the March 25 meeting. "It is a safety measure," he said, "since we didn't know whether all legal matters (concerning the proposed increase) could be taken care of in the time limit. The extended time will be used to examine and review the latest proposal and the steering committee's reports, he said. "It's a standard procedure under the State Public Utilities Commission law," Wofford said.

Chairman of the steering committee, Dudley Bayne, was not available for comment early today. A compromise on the proposed 14.78 percent increase for SPS services was formally reached Wednesday when the electric company agreed to an 11.1 percent rate hike. The steering committee, after almost two months of deliberation of the increase proposed on Jan. 28, countered with the following: a revenue deficiency of $31,923,000, rates to correct the deficiency to become effective with the May billings; no differential between winter and summer rates and the Public Utility Commission should eliminate the requirement of showing the fuel cost adjustment as a separate item on the bills.

ALAMO PROTESTORS. Three Chicano rights activists occupy the roof of the Alamo Thursday afternoon as a San Antonio police helicopter buzzed overhead. The protesters occupied the roof and flew a red flag for over 40 minutes before being arrested and jailed for desecrating the American and Texas flags. Utilities delayed; Zoning Board calls for property easements

Members of the city planning and zoning commission met in regular session Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in city hall to discuss a six-item agenda. A report on an utilities easement for Star Lite Acres located north of the city was given by senior engineering technician, Forrest Cloyd. Dan Carter, one-time principal owner of the property, was contacted by Cloyd and city attorney Don Lane, he said, concerning an alley to be used by the utility vehicles. They were told by Carter that he had sold most of the property before the subdivision ordinance stipulating the easement be dedicated by the property owners became effective. Lane told board members no utilities could be furnished to the area until an easement was allowed by the land owners. The zoning commission directed Lane to contact the property owners by letter, asking them to dedicate a portion of their property as an alley for utilities. No opposition was voiced in a public hearing held for a zoning change for agricultural to commercial for an area on Price Rd. north of Kentucky Ave. Two letters from surrounding land owners were received by board members in favor of the proposed change. The area in question is presently owned by Superior

Supply Company seeking the change for expansion purposes. Three plats were approved by the zoning board after they were added as emergency items to the agenda two hours before the meeting. Approved by the board to be presented to the city commission for final okay were the following three items: Preliminary and final plat for Superior Iron Works and Supply located west of Price Rd. and north of Kentucky Ave. Final plat for Ainbinder-Pampa Ltd. (the Pampa Mall) showing additional easements added for the utility companies. And a preliminary plat of a residence for Wallace L. Bruce to be located north of Kentucky Ave. The additional plat approvals were added to the agenda, officials said, due to financial obligations.

Assault on Alamo ends with trio jailed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — By the Alamo's legendary standards, it wasn't much of a battle. Three unarmed protesters scaled the walls and flew a red flag over the historic shrine Thursday, only to be arrested by police 40 minutes later. A crowd of about 200 downtown bystanders cheered and applauded as police officers unceremoniously plucked the three activists off the roof. They cheered again when an officer removed the red flag and replaced the Texas flag the protesters had torn down. The three protesters, who claimed to be members of the obscure "Texas Revolutionary May Day Brigade," said their occupation was meant to show that the Alamo was a "hated monument to slavery, U.S. plunder of Mexico and the vicious oppression of the Chicano people." The incident was termed an "outrage" by officials of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, who administer the "Cradle of Texas Liberty," where a crucial battle of the Texas Revolution was fought in 1836. "All they wanted was a little press coverage," said Police Sgt. Johnny Sanders, one of the contingent of more than a dozen officers and firemen on the scene. "They can take American hostages in Iran, but when they try to take over the Alamo, we Texans just won't stand for it," said one police officer who requested anonymity. Police identified the three protesters as: Damian Garcia, 31; Hayden Steel Fisher, 31, and Abigail Bayer, 33, all of Houston. Officials said late Thursday night that the trio would be charged with "desecration of a venerated object," a misdemeanor that carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $2,000 fine. The three were arraigned late Thursday by Magistrate Mary Elizabeth Ladd, who set bond at $1,000 each. Police also arrested three other persons they identified as associates of the trio. Those persons, who remained on the ground, would be charged with disorderly conduct, police said. Witnesses said the three protesters unexpectedly began scaling adjacent walls at the side of the famous Alamo chapel building about 2 p.m. and easily reached the 20-foot-high roof. An undetermined number of tourists were inside the mission at the time, but most were unaware of what was happening until the protesters began shouting. Alamo security guard W. D. Lucas said the protesters ripped down the Texas flag and replaced it with an red one. They also unfurled a banner that said: "Revolutionary May Day 1980. Take History Into Our Hands."

Clear skies and mild temperatures were forecast for most of Texas today.
It was to be partly cloudy over extreme South Texas, the only area of the state expected to have cloud cover.

Hights were to range from the 60s in North Texas to the 80s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas and in extreme South Texas. Most areas were to have highs in the 70s.
Early morning temperatures ranged from the 30s in Northwest Texas and parts of West Texas to the 60s along the coast.

NATIONAL

Tornado watches were posted across much of the Southeast early today as thunderstorms dumped heavy rains from the Mississippi Valley to the Tennessee Valley.
Flash flood watches were posted in parts of Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and the Carolinas while spring rains gorged already swollen rivers and streams.
Showers and thunderstorms were forecast from the lower Great Lakes and New England southward to the Gulf of Mexico. Rain also was expected to spread from the Pacific Coast across the Rockies and into Montana.
Eight tornadoes were reported across the Southeast on Thursday. Several persons were reported injured in Alabama after twisters and severe thunderstorms shattered windows and downed trees. Initial reports indicated that six to 15 persons may have received injuries, and wind gusts were clocked unofficially at 78 mph near Fairhope.
The storm left up to five inches of rain in some parts of Alabama and officials at Owens Cross Roads, south of Huntsville, evacuated four families along the Flint River as waters rose.

The National Weather Service said most major rivers in Alabama had reached flood stage by Thursday and additional lowland flooding was likely today.
Some property damage also was reported near Memphis, Tenn., as thunderstorms dumped rains from the Mississippi Valley to the Tennessee Valley.

Clements blasts bureau in census figure denial

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says the failure of the Census Bureau to provide Texas with the number of citizens and non-citizens in the state would make it impossible to draw fair legislative and congressional districts.
He said this failure "can only be viewed as an attempt by the Carter administration ... to rob American citizens of their constitutional right to full and fair representation in their state legislatures and Congress."
Clements said he was dismayed by the refusal of Vincent Barabba, director of the Census Bureau, to implement the "Texas Plan."
The governor wants the Census Bureau to provide the state separate counts, by census tract, of citizens and aliens. He says the Legislature should not count aliens when it tries to draw legislative and congressional districts of substantially equal population.

"By counting but not distinguishing aliens, you would make citizens count for less in their own government," Clements wrote Barabba on Wednesday.
Clements indicated Texas, and possibly other states, would sue if the changes are not made in collecting and reporting census data.
In a March 11 letter, Barabba said the "paramount difficulty" with Clements' request on counting the alien population is that it "comes long after basic decisions on the availability of data had to be made."
Barabba said the final census questions had to be transmitted to Congress in April 1978. "During the period before April 1978, when revisions in questionnaire content were still possible, neither the states nor other primary data users identified the potential importance of including citizenship on the short form," he told Clements.

He said the Census Bureau had rejected the idea of attaching a flyer on citizenship to the short form questionnaire because "this procedure would seriously delay the census and would, in any event, be very unlikely to produce accurate and reliable information, even for total non-citizens."
"It is, of course, impossible now to make any significant alterations in these work plans," said Barabba.

"I don't buy that for one minute," responded Clements.
He said Barabba's letter did not address the "central point of the Texas Plan: simply stated, only by having a citizen count available as part of its redistricting data will the Texas Legislature, among others, be able to enact a redistricting plan that is constitutional under the Supreme Court's one-man-one-vote decisions."
The governor said he was sure the bureau could furnish Texas the citizenship answers from the long form by April 1, 1981, for the Legislature's use in redistricting.
"It is time for you to stop making excuses," Clements said.

Port authority puts squeeze on big importers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Deepwater Port Authority says Louisiana will be the chief beneficiary if an offshore crude oil terminal is not built 27 miles south of Freeport.
The authority refused Thursday to call it quits on the $700 million project but left no doubt it is only a matter of time.
Bob Casey, chairman, and Gerald Jackson, general manager were instructed to cut the staff to bare bones and hope major importers will change current positions and pledge sufficient support to make the project financially feasible.
Sherman Fricks, a labor official from Houston, said "I don't want to bury the body until it is dead."
"I can't give you any hope but the body is there and if somebody wants to come breathe more life into it, it will be ready to rise up in stride," Casey said.

"Until then, we are going to let it sleep a little bit."
Casey and Jackson said the companies had agreed to import only 517,000 barrels a day and insisted the authority continue seeking commitments to cover the 1.2 to 1.4 million barrels needed to underwrite revenue bonds for the overall project.
"We don't have a viable project," Jackson said.
Casey said he was not critical of the companies in that the authority had encountered a "poor climate" because of current uncertainty over foreign oil supplies.
"I personally am convinced LOOP is going to expand like nobody's business because if this isn't built the companies are going to find LOOP to be a better place for their long haul oil and Texas will have to depend on the short haul," he said.

TSTA sets meet

PORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Student performance in public schools should be monitored by stronger, broader local promotion standards and not standardized state-administered tests, the executive committee of the Texas State Teachers Association said.
The committee approved a proposal Thursday aimed at developing procedures for evaluating student performance on local levels. The proposal must be approved by a majority of the 1,500 delegates.

Canadian man dies

CANADIAN — A 46 year-old Canadian man died Wednesday of head injuries suffered when the semi-rig he was driving overturned three miles south of Canadian.
Texas Department of Public Safety trooper, Pat Moore said Clifton Lee Burchfield was killed when his semi-rig jackknifed and the tank trailer containing water overturned, crushing the cab.
The accident occurred about 11:05 a.m. on a Gulf Oil Lease Road. Burchfield, a driver for the J. T. Richardson Trucking Co. with offices in Pampa and Canadian, died of massive skull fracture injuries in the Hemphill County Hospital in Canadian.
Investigators said Burchfield was en route to an oil rig with a load of water. His truck was climbing a hill and apparently lost traction near the top of the incline and began rolling backwards. As the rig rolled, the motion of the skid turned it sideways and caused it to jackknife.
As the truck jackknifed, the weight of the water caused the tank to shift, turning it so that it overturned crushing the cab. Workers from a nearby rig, pulled Burchfield from the cab and started revival efforts.
Services for Burchfield are pending with Stickey-Hill Funeral Home in Canadian.

Teacher dies in shooting

DALLAS (AP) — Homicide investigators today sought a bearded gunman with a "big gun" who shot and killed a Dallas schoolteacher as she stood with fellow teachers in a school lobby.

Rosie L. Pearson, 49, was shot three times and reportedly tried to crawl away from her assailant as her co-workers rushed to her aid Thursday afternoon.

She died about an hour after the 3:25 p.m. CST shooting at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

A source close to the investigation said officers were seeking a man acquainted with Mrs. Pearson in the shooting.

Hortense Toles, principal at J. Leslie Patton School said Mrs. Pearson was a fifth-grade language arts and social studies teacher.

"The students had just been dismissed and the teachers were standing together in the lobby," Mrs. Toles said. She said teachers told her the gunman came into the lobby and shot Mrs. Pearson, then fled.

No one else was injured, Mrs. Toles said, and apparently the gunman said nothing before the shots were fired.

The shooting occurred about "50-150 feet" from Mrs. Pearson's classroom, Mrs. Toles said.

Agents testify in 'pot' trial

GALVESTON (AP) — A U.S. Customs agent testifying at the first of six trials for the 36 suspects nabbed in the state's biggest marijuana bust says a tip from a paid informant led to the arrests.

U.S. Customs agent Bob Weaver told a five-woman, seven-man federal jury Thursday that Tommy Troutwein, a Surfside marina mechanic befriended by Weaver, called Dec. 19 and said a large number of trucks were coming into the marina.

Weaver said he suspected that a load of marijuana was coming into the marina and called other law enforcement officials to help organize a raid.

Officers arrested the suspects and confiscated about 50 tons of marijuana from the offshore supply boat Mr. Jake later that night.

The jury is deciding the fate of eight Colombian nationals arrested in the raid in the first trial after U.S. District Judge Hugh Gibson ordered separate trials because of the number of defendants.

DWI convictions to carry suspensions

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans convicted of drunken driving after April 1 can count on having their licenses suspended even if their sentences are probated, the Department of Public Safety says.

DPS director Jim Adams announced the policy Thursday. A law that took effect Aug. 27, 1979, says a probated DWI conviction is a final conviction, meaning a convicted driver's license can be suspended.

Before the new law was passed, a conviction with a probated sentence was not considered final, and the mandatory one-year suspension did not apply.

Attorney General Mark White held on Jan. 29, however, that a person convicted of a misdeemeanor DWI and placed on probation is subject to automatic license suspension.

Adams said he has asked White whether the Jan. 29 opinion applies to all DWI convictions since Aug. 27, or only to those convictions occurring after Jan. 29.

Adams said the DPS is delaying action on approximately 6,000 cases until it receives White's second opinion. DWI convictions that become final will be controlled by the pending opinion. Convictions after April 1 will be controlled by the new law, which provides an automatic one-year suspension on final conviction in a misdemeanor DWI case.

Analyst testifies tankeroff course

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A course recorder from the Capricorn showed squiggles in a graph that could mean collision, grounding or dropping an anchor, according to a marine expert who traced the oil tanker's movements the night it collided with a Coast Guard cutter.

Capt. William Griswold, who has been analyzing automatic recorder charts for 30 years, testified Thursday in a marine board of inquiry into the accident that claimed the lives of 23 crewmen from the cutter Blackthorn.

Griswold said it wasn't his job to pinpoint where the 605-foot tanker and the 180-foot buoy tender hit — it was merely to plot the tracings from the recorder, he insisted. But pressed by both sides for an interpretation of three distinct hesitations in the graph, he called on experience.

In the 200 such cases he has worked, he said, he's seen the same sort of irregularities in collisions, groundings and dropping anchor.

He refused to be committed to interpreting just which of the irregularities signaled the crash.

That didn't help shed any light on a big point of disagreement throughout the six-week hearing — exactly where the crash occurred. Lawyers — depending on who they represent — have put the crash spot on opposite sides of a turn. The crews have testified respectively that the other vessel was off course.

Griswold was hired by the Coast Guard to plot the course and speed of the tanker, using fixes for headings and time from the automatic device.

Pillscam checked by jury

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More than a dozen local doctors and pharmacists are being investigated by a federal grand jury looking into the alleged illegal distribution here of prescription drugs, a San Antonio newspaper has reported.

As a result of the 10-month-old investigation, one doctor and a pharmacist have already been indicted on charges of illegally dispensing pills.

Dr. Arnold Albert and James Hollis Cleveland are scheduled to go on trial June 17.

The San Antonio Express reported the investigation Thursday. Jack Paul Leon, defense attorney for Cleveland, has dubbed the investigation "Pillscam" after the "Abscam," the FBI's investigation into congressional corruption that has been criticized for possible entrapment.

Drug Enforcement Administration agents said in documents filed in federal court that federal informants exchanged television sets and jewelry for amphetamines and barbiturates.

The informants, who were wired with transmitters, told Albert and Cleveland the merchandise was stolen, DEA agents said in an affidavit filed in court.

Court records indicate the agents bought the television sets and jewelry at retail stores before the alleged drug transactions. Although pharmacy records are audited regularly, this investigation began when agents received tips about alleged prescription abuses that could not be dismissed as record-keeping errors, federal officials told the newspaper.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Balance within our grasp

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - As recently as the beginning of this year, the concept of a balanced federal budget was widely derided here as a bizarre notion embraced only by hopeless romantics, heartless conservatives and penny-pinching zealots. But a change in attitude as dramatic and sudden as any shift in opinion in recent years now has produced a rough consensus that the budget for the 1981 fiscal year, beginning next Oct. 1, can and should be balanced.

That drastic change can be attributed in great measure to a pair of terrifying reports on potentially uncontrollable inflation that followed one another in rapid succession — a 1979 rate of 13.3 percent and a January 1980 rate of 18.2 percent on an annualized basis.

The theory that the government's unrestrained production of "printing-press money" is the sole cause of inflation, a simplistic concept embraced by some ideologues, has been rejected by respected economists who offer convincing arguments that a balanced budget will only slightly ease inflationary pressures.

Yet there now exists in this capital a general agreement that a balanced budget is imperative not only because every feasible technique for dampening inflation must be used but also for political and psychological reasons.

In an unusually prescient action last December, the House Budget Committee asked the Congressional Budget Office to produce "a report on the possible strategies that could lead to a reduction in the size of the federal budget."

The 102-page report, completed only a few weeks ago just as the budget-balancing wave was beginning to crest, has become the hottest document in official Washington. It already is the semi-official workbook for White House and congressional leaders holding intensive meetings on the subject.

The CBO's clinical, non-partisan analysis, "Reducing the Federal Budget: Strategies and Examples," demonstrates that federal spending can be significantly cut without weakening the military, humiliating the poor or even seriously discommodating most middle-income citizens.

Item: The Navy has proposed retiring 12 destroyers built more than a third of a century ago, but Congress insists upon retaining the ships for use by the Navy Reserve. If the legislators back down, $129 million can be saved next year.

Item: Oil producers who now reap the benefits of soaring world petroleum prices could give up the right to "expense" their intangible drilling costs and have their depletion allowance cut from 22 percent to 15 percent. The savings to other taxpayers would total $4.4 billion next year.

Item: Children of poor families aren't the only beneficiaries of free or reduced-price school lunches. Requiring wealthy and middle-income parents to share more of the cost of feeding their offspring could save $300 million next year.

Item: One of the least defensible boondoggles in the federal budget is the Impact Aid program that provides payments to school districts near major government installations. Eliminating it would save $250 million next year.

Item: Abolition of General Revenue Sharing payments to the states would reduce the federal budget by more than $2.4 billion next year. Requiring the states to pay for maintenance of secondary roads would save another $200 million.

Item: Adjusting former federal workers' retirement benefits to reflect cost-of-living increases on an annual instead of a semi-annual basis would save more than $800 million.

Item: Requiring institutions that disburse interest and dividend payments to withhold 15 percent of the funds for remittance to the Internal Revenue Service would allow the government next year to recoup $6.5 billion in tax estimates it now loses through fraud and tax evasion.

The CBO study contains scores of other examples. All that is necessary now is for Congress to finally muster the courage to subordinate the pleas of the special interests to the requirements posed by the national interest.

OPINION PAGE

Must we reform the reformers?

When passed by Congress, the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 was heralded as a vehicle that would usher in a new era in American politics. Reformist organizations were certain a great victory had been won. The Act meant more control of elections, and to reformers that meant more democracy. It didn't work out that way.

Federal regulation of elections has been a disaster. Columnist Richard Reeves, an early backer of so-called election reform, now says those laws created a monster. Reeves, now national editor of Esquire, says election reform legislation has had numerous negative effects on democracy. Among those minuses:

- Increasing the power of the rich, special interests, and corporations;
- Making it difficult to unseat incumbents;
- Cementing the dominance of the two major parties;
- Reducing public participation in elections;
- Lengthening the presidential campaign season;
- Creating a host of complicated and contradictory regulations.

Reeves cites numerous statistics backing up his observation that federal election regulation has had a negative effect on American politics. The most striking change has come in the area of campaign financing. The number of political action committees (PAC's) has increased dramatically. Five years ago there were only 89 corporate PACs; today there are 949. The number of PACs sponsored by other interest groups rose in those five years from 318 to 807. Labor union PACs increased from 201 to 240. What decreased, ominously, was the contribution of individual citizens to political campaigns. This, of course, was the opposite effect that the reformers of the early 1970s had in mind.

What is happening to American politics because of federal regulation of elections is not so different from what is happening to the standards of living of the American people because of regulation of the economy. What reformers have not realized is that basic change is not created by passing a few laws. That is the easy way out.

By taking the easy way out, reformers have usually hurt the very people they intended to help. The poor are hurt when American business can no longer expand and give them jobs because of taxation and regulation. Democracy is hurt when well-intentioned reformers let congressmen pass legislation governing their own elections. Government just doesn't work, even when regulating its own electoral process.

Russia deepening Afghan troubles

The news from Afghanistan continues to be bad for the Soviet Union. A close look reveals that the Soviet defeats being suffered in that mountainous Asian nation are due as much to the nature of communism as to resentment by the Afghan population to domination by foreigners. Whatever the outcome of this Soviet political and military maneuver, there are some lessons to be learned from what is happening.

The Soviets, undoubtedly, would rather not station their troops in a nation of hostile people. They have nothing to prove; their occupation of Eastern Europe has already demonstrated that they are willing to use military force when their interests are threatened. If they could have accomplished their ends without an invasion they would have done so, gladly.

What led to the invasion was the inability of Marxist regimes in Kabul to communize the nation. The Afghan people are deeply religious people and rightfully believed their traditions were threatened by their Marxist leaders. It was the nature of communism that caused the Russian position to degenerate so quickly. Had the pro-Russian governments in Kabul not tried to superimpose Marxism on an unwilling population, they would not have lost so much support that it required Soviet troops to keep them in power.

By now almost all Afghans bitterly oppose the Soviets. Yet there is one group of citizens that walk arm-in-arm with occupation troops. This small faction has armed itself with submachineguns and is helping the invaders patrol the streets. Treason is too weak a word to describe this treachery. Those traitors who now help Russian troops enslave their friends and neighbors are members of the Khalq Party, the local version of the Communist Party. Their behavior, no matter how our homegrown Marxist-Leninists will deny it, is totally consistent with communist ideology.

The Soviets' latest act of repression may even get the attention of the Ayatollah Khomeini. In the wake of last week's rioting in Kabul large numbers of Shia Muslims were arrested. While the Shia Muslims constitute only 10 to 20 percent of the Afghan population, the overwhelming number of Iranians are Shia Muslims. It is difficult to understand why Khomeini still hasn't already got the message about the rape going on next door.

If the Russians were smart, they would have never arrested members of the ayatollah's or anybody else's sect. If the Afghan communists had been smart they would never have tried to superimpose their orthodoxy on an unwilling population, much less call for foreign troops to help them with their task. These actions reflect more than the oppression of despots. Instead the actions suggest that communists are such ideologues that they will march down the streets of their own nation with the troops of an occupation army in order to accomplish their goal.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir:
I was born in Pampa, but my parents moved away when I was in the fourth grade. My parents were killed in an automobile accident, when I was sixteen, and I lived in foster homes, until I was eighteen. I am in prison now and have never felt more lonely in my life.
I don't have anyone to write to, nor anyone to write to me. I believe that some of my relations still live in or around Pampa, and I thought that if maybe you could find the kindness in your heart to publish my letter in your newspaper, some of my relatives, or someone who knew them might write to me.
I would also like to correspond with anyone as a pen-pal who lives in or around Pampa. I am a young white male, but loneliness picks no certain age or color. And if there is anyone who reads my letter that is lonely, and want a friend to share a smile with from time to time, please write and I will answer.

Thank you kindly for your time.

Our strength is our weakness

by Paul Harvey

Actor Jim Garner must get credit for the quote of the week, perhaps the quote of the year.

Explaining his recent altercation, he said, "The guy came up to my car, grabbed me through the window and began to beat me. I fell out the car door onto the ground and the man kicked me -- repeatedly."

"But I could tell he was tiring. If he'd kept it up for five minutes more I'd have had him!"

Jim Garner is too nice a guy to have to have suffered all his recent troubles. Yet had it been he who hit the other guy, he'd have been in even more trouble.

That's one of the ironies resulting from our nation's recent preoccupation with the rights of wrongdoers. At home and abroad -- individually and collectively -- we are targets because we are strong.

Dwight Eisenhower recognized this disadvantage of the advantaged. He called it "the tyranny of the weak."

Jim Garner would know about that. Garry Wills says anybody who ever received a threatening telephone call understands the feeling.

So does anybody who ever saw a gigantic hydroelectric dam shut down or a huge utility shut down or construction stalled on a great nuclear energy plant -- by a lone lawyer with a subpoena in his hand and nothing to lose.

And anybody who ever saw a uniformed woman in sneakers disrupt the stockholder meeting of a corporate giant.

Any such witness recognizes this terrible tyranny of the weak.

"The tyranny of the weak."

In Iran an unwashed handful of young fanatics are able to seize an embassy and the most powerful nation on earth is helpless to do anything about it.

A rabble-raising hate-monger on a New York street corner can rally followers crying, "We're going to have to kill a lot of cops and judges!"

While cloaking himself in the impregnable protection of our own Constitution's First Amendment.

In Denver, Colo., one woman can proclaim herself an unbeliever and deprive an entire city of its traditional Christmas -- the tyranny of the weak.

In Latin America renegade malcontents can kidnap an executive and a billion-dollar multinational corporation is at their mercy.

Paradoxically, it is the corporation's wealth and power that make it vulnerable. It was ever thus.

History remembers that Ghengis Khan was a nobody. He was a herder of beasts, nothing more. Yet his barbaric ruthlessness overwhelmed the armies of three empires.

Voltaire says, "History is the patter of silken slippers descending the stairs and the thunder of hobnail boots moving up."

Because the United States is "too civilized" to resort to kidnapping and kneecapping and letter-bombs and skyjacking, we, the merciful, are at the mercy of the merciless.

Wisdom for the '80's

By Anthony Harrigan

SEWANE, Tenn.--My friend Robert Lancaster, longtime professor of political science at the University of the South, lawyer, former dean, outdoorsman and raconteur, recently gave the Founder's Day address at this famous old Southern institution. His remarks bear repetition through the country.

"For 48 years I have been in this place," he said. "It's a day for memories. Men who do not cherish memories, who do not revere their heritage, are little more than barbarians; memory civilizes us."

He spoke eloquently of the Southern churchmen and planters who established the University in 1856. It was a marvelous, discerning tribute that "Red" Lancaster gave to the founders. "There was to them, both a public and a private domain; they were secure in each. Above all, they appreciated their civility, for without it men become animals. They were aristocrats: aristoi in the Greek sense of the word. They preferred excellence to the commonplace, they accepted responsibility."

These are words that students and teachers in all parts of the country need to hear. Many colleges and universities--indeed American society as a whole--has lost sight of the aim of producing civilized men and women. We live in the age of brutality and barbarism, of the x-rated motion picture, vulgar language, and loss of civility in personal relations.

Dr. Lancaster embodies the ideals he praises. In his years of teaching, he sought to impart respect for those ideals, which are essential to a civilized, free society.

"In my time," he told his audience, "I have witnessed the great struggle between freedom and equality, and for a time the beam is tipped by equality. Men have been so leveled that we honor few men as great. Scarcely can we recognize one in our own midst; if we do, we may be sure that historians will become very busy at putting him in his proper little place."

Our national condition in this presidential year demonstrates the truth of Dr. Lancaster's remarks. We seek our national leaders only among the ranks of the office-holding industry. We can't see or find the great men among us who are capable of national leadership. Our country's difficulties cry out for new, authentic leaders, but we seem unable to recognize or discover them. It's a very sad situation.

"It seems to me," Dr. Lancaster said, "that education in America has, in recent years, gone astray." We have taught management instead of leadership and courage. We have praised social adjustment instead of resolute resistance to what is wrong. We have cultivated the study of trends and psychological values and ignored the lessons of history.

If we are to enjoy a great awakening in this country and assure its survival, we must heed the Robert Lancasters who offer traditional wisdom--wisdom confirmed by experience down through the centuries.

Now, as the 1980s open under warclouds, we need to recognize anew the need for civilizing purposes in all our education and public and private efforts. We won't long endure without emphasis on conscious will, rational purpose, and moral conviction.

Build muscles and strength

By Theodore Berland
(Fifth of 14 parts)

Some people — primarily young men — want to build big, bulging muscles, mainly to impress others. Other people — primarily athletes — want to build strength, mainly to do better in their sports.

Keep in mind when setting up your fitness program that size and strength aren't necessarily the same.

Muscle building requires just the opposite of slimming. You must consume more calories and exercise in short bursts of very strenuous effort. That involves working a muscle against resistance from its naturally opposing muscle or from a wall, table or weight.

The idea is to keep increasing the burden the muscle must overcome. Because muscles have an astonishing ability to adjust, they will get bigger and stronger until they are able to meet a task. If you then continue to increase the task, they will grow even bigger and stronger.

To build up your body, you must do resistance exercises on a regular schedule. Space the exercise sessions a day apart to allow the muscles to adjust, grow and strengthen.

This is exactly the technique that enables a puny little guy to become Mr. Universe and stand in front of audiences flexing huge biceps.

The most popular way to build bulging muscles is weight training, which employs weights such as barbells, dumbbells and weight machines.

When "pumping iron," you must eat enough food, especially protein, to give your body the blocks upon which to build new muscle tissue.

For detailed diet information — whether for building muscles or losing pounds — order my "Fitness Fact Book." Send $1.95 plus 50 cents postage and handling to "Fitness Fact Book" in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Body builders in weight training are taught to breathe deeply. That develops their lungs to keep up with the new physical requirements of their bodies.

They are also encouraged to jog to help the heart and circulatory system meet the new demands. And they are advised to swim for flexibility, since weight training causes the body to stiffen.

Another way of providing muscle resistance is isometrics, which call for brief efforts against immovable objects such as walls or against opposing muscles or limbs.

Isometrics are a quick and easy way of building muscles. Each contraction lasts only about six seconds and is repeated 15 times or so. Thus, 90 seconds a day can produce spectacular results.

A similar technique is isokinetics, which use devices such as stationary cycles to allow movement with controlled resistance. The faster you try to move, the more resistance you meet.

The main problem with body-building exercises is that they do nothing for the cardiovascular system nor for flexibility or suppleness.

These exercises can even be harmful since they sometimes compress blood vessels and cut off circulation. They are unsuitable for people with heart trouble.

Some of the same techniques for building muscles are used for building strength. But though weights and other forms of resistance may again be used, they are used differently.

The main differences are in repetitions and weights. To develop strength, lighter weights are used in more repetitions. Or isometrics are done for shorter periods.

As the muscle strengthens to meet the task, the task is increased until the muscle reaches the desired strength. To keep the muscle from building in size, you increase repetitions.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Frank Sinatra wants to clear up a "shadow on his reputation" by explaining to the Nevada Gaming Commission what led up to the revocation of his gaming license in 1963, Sinatra's lawyer says.

The commission agreed Thursday to a Gaming Control Board recommendation that Sinatra come forward for licensing as a key employee at Caesars Palace Hotel. Sinatra and the hotel originally had proposed that he be licensed.

Sinatra's employment contract with Caesars stipulates that he will not assume his largely ceremonial duties until he is licensed.

Attorney Milton Rudin said Sinatra wants an opportunity to explain the details leading up to the 1963 revocation of his first Nevada gaming license. The license was revoked after Sinatra played host to purported mobster Sam Giancana at the Lake Tahoe resort Sinatra then owned.

show in New York's garment district to sell classic Thai fabrics made by Cambodian refugees.

The 47-year-old queen is promoting silks manufactured by refugees in Thailand. Among the models at Thursday's invitational show was the queen's eldest daughter, Princess Ubol Ratana.

Queen Sirikit is on a six-week private visit to the United States, but is actively trying to promote commercial interest in the fabrics. The intricately patterned silks are the product of a charitable foundation founded by the royal couple to give a livelihood to refugees displaced by a decade of war in Cambodia.

An estimated 500,000 Cambodians have sought refuge in Thailand, and have proven to be a major economic drain.

"I don't like them to sit idle and sad," said the queen. "They have lost everything except their lives."

PARIS (AP) — Philosopher and author Jean-Paul Sartre remained hospitalized today with fluid in his lungs, according to his publishers, but Sartre's family wants no further details released.

A spokeswoman for Editions Gallimard said Thursday that Sartre was in intensive care at the Broussais Hospital. The news agency quoted close friends of the writer as saying there was no cause for alarm, that Sartre, 74, was hospitalized as a precaution.

Sartre refused the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1964, claiming awards lend too much weight to a writer's influence.

NEW YORK (AP) — City Health Department officials don't object to Penthouse Pet of the Year Cheryl Rixon showing up at a disco in feathers and skimpy buckskins — but the horse has got to go.

Miss Rixon wowed the crowd at Magique during something called Cowboy and Indian Night when she showed up astride a white horse. But health officers didn't know about it until they saw a newspaper photo of the pair on Wednesday.

The disco was slapped with a summons for allowing a horse in a food establishment, and operating without a valid permit. Magique owners will get a chance to explain during a hearing April 4.

American Cancer Society withdraws x-ray guideline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Cancer Society, modifying its recommendations for cancer detection checkups, says annual chest X-rays, Pap tests and breast examinations no longer appear necessary for most people.

In announcing the changes Thursday, the society said it has determined the public can get the same benefits with greatly reduced costs and health risks by using the revised recommendations.

However, the society cautioned that the guidelines do not fit all individuals and urged people to consult their doctors about how the new suggestions relate to them.

Many doctors and patients have long used the private group's guidelines in scheduling checkups for the early detection of cancer. No other group, including the federal government, issues such guidelines.

Announcing the revised recommendations in New York and at a news briefing here, society officials stressed that the guidelines apply only to people with no cancer symptoms. Those with symptoms should see their doctors immediately, the officials said.

"These changes are based on updated information on the effectiveness, costs and risks of tests used for early detection of cancer," Dr. LaSalle D. Laffall, the immediate past president of the society, said at the briefing in Washington.

"About three years ago, the society was asked to update its recommendations because they didn't seem to be current based on the latest clinical and epidemiological data," said Laffall, chairman of surgery at Howard University Medical School.

The society revised its recommendations for tests for cancer of the lung, cervix, colon, rectum and breast after a study by Dr. David Eddy of Stanford University, which reviewed data on cost and effectiveness.

As a result, the society dropped its recommendation that people with a higher-than-normal risk of lung cancer get annual chest X-rays. These are people over age 40 who are heavy cigarette smokers or who work with known inhaled carcinogens, such as asbestos.

X-rays and sputum cytology tests, which look at mucus from the lungs, do detect lung cancer early. But studies indicate this early notice does not reduce mortality because present treatment isn't very effective, the society said.

RECRUITS in the nation's first all-female state police class practice their shooting skills at the Police Academy in Sea Girt, N.J. Five weeks after the 20-week course began, only 67 of the original class of 104 remain.

Female troopers: pushups and pistol practice

SEA GIRT, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first all-female trooper cadet class is shaping up nicely, with no pun — or offense — intended, says New Jersey state police Superintendent Clinton Pagano.

The remaining 67 women of the original 104 recruits, now beginning the second quarter of their 20-week course, are "the committed ones," say academy staff members, who include the only two women among 1,931 state troopers. Graduation is June 27.

Pagano says the dropout rate is normal for recruit classes.

"The people go home over the weekend and reassess things. We get mothers who decide they want to be with their children, we get a variety of reasons."

"It's too early to say if it's the physical training pressure or the discipline pressure," said Pagano, who would not allow interviews with the recruits.

"One said she treated her dog better than we treated her. She wasn't here long enough for a truthful appraisal."

The class began Feb. 13, the result of a federal consent order to add more women to the force.

"It's a one-time thing, an all-female class," said Pagano, who now must concentrate on recruiting minorities because of another court order.

Only two of the remaining female recruits are black. The force now includes only 84 non-white males and one black female.

The "committed" recruits practice in barracks at night with dummy pistols, reread course material and train hard on heavy punching bags to build strength.

They eat quickly because the short time immediately following meals is their own, the only break in a day that begins with exercises at dawn and runs in unbroken military precision through dinner.

Demerits for infractions mean extra duty, so recruits learn to keep their collars neat and not to cut a path across soggy lawns.

Lt. Joseph Kobus said some adaptations had to be made in the training program for women.

"We're finding some differences," Kobus said. "Women need some additional exercises to strengthen their left wrist. They have to qualify firing a pistol with both hands... That's in case you get shot."

Pagano and his staff modified pushup and chinup requirements to compensate for women's inferior upper body strength. "Now we're finding they might have superior lower body strength," he said.

"Our main concern is to get fully qualified state troopers," Pagano added.

The recruits are taught that the chest and head are the "maximum kill area" for gunfire and instructed in the basics of constitutional law, communications, sociology and weaponless self defense.

"I have to impress on them somehow they could get killed," Trooper Walter Jensen said during a break on the pistol range. "Fourteen seconds to get off six shots. The average gunfight is 2.8 seconds at a distance of about six feet. I'm not sure they know what we're into — yet."

In a law class, Trooper Richard Tomasik patiently explained a fine point to recruits: "No, no, you don't get a jury of your friends, you get a jury of your peers. Friends would be a little too beneficial."

Outside, young women lined up in formation. "Dress right, dress! Right face! Forward, march!" The recruits moved out, counting cadence as a drill instructor bellowed orders forever into their memory.

Then the DI started after them, skipping once to get in step as they headed for a mountainous high-carbohydrate lunch.

Recruits who complete the academy course begin work as road patrol troopers earning about $15,000 a year. They will face resentment from some male state troopers.

"It's dangerous out there at 3 a.m. on the highway and you get some guy looking for trouble... It's no place for a broad," Sgt. Steve Cermak said when the class was formed on Feb. 13.

"The weakest guy is going to be better than the best woman," said Cermak.

The exam, along with medical and physical ability tests, pared the prospective class to 255. Background investigations and interviews further cut the class to 116.

Twelve decided not to report for the beginning of training.

Your recipe could win a cook-off

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Your special recipe for chicken or beef could win you a lot of money at one of the two big cook-offs scheduled each year.

The nation's top chicken recipe will be decided at the National Chicken Cooking Contest, which takes place this August in Atlanta.

Beef recipes will be judged at the September contest conducted by the CowBelles in Scottsdale, Ariz.

For the former, you must use between 2 and 3½ pounds of chicken. You may use a whole chicken or parts. All other ingredients should be familiar to most people available throughout the country.

Total preparation time must not exceed three hours. That includes marinating, deboning, etc. The recipe should not include garnish.

The contestants — male and female — must reside in one of the 50 states at the time of the contest.

The entry period for the 1980 contest has already gone by. State cook-offs will take place in May with the national cook-off on Aug. 6.

The National Chicken Cooking Contest is a gala affair. It has been a major cooking event for many years. If you missed it this year, make plans for next year's competition.

The five top prizes are big, and the judges are competent at both the state and national levels.

For further details, write to: National Chicken Cooking Contest, 614 Madison Building, 1155 15th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

The beef contest welcomes any recipes using beef chuck, round, rump, fresh brisket (in any form) or ground beef.

Total preparation time should not exceed three hours, including preliminaries such as marinating. Garnishes are permitted, though accessories are not.

The sponsoring CowBelles is an organization whose purpose is to increase understanding of the various cuts of meat and their proper preparation as well as to promote the beef industry in general.

The eight prizes in this contest are substantial, though not quite as impressive as those for the chicken cook-off.

Every beef recipe should be in the hands of the CowBelles by July 1. The finals will take place Sept. 3 through Sept. 5.

For further details, write to: Mrs. Stuart Anderson, The CowBelles, 2534 Boulder, Kingman, Ariz. 86401. Or you may telephone (602) 753-5620 or (602) 753-2978.

Overweight coed to finish college despite Oral Roberts

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jerri Johnston will graduate from Oklahoma State University in May, two years after she was forced out of Oral Roberts University because of her weight.

"Getting kicked out of there was the best thing that ever happened to me," said Miss Johnston, 23, of Braman, who now diets "for myself."

"I feel a lot closer to God now," she said. "I've come to trust God a lot more than man."

However, another woman, a senior at ORU who asked that her name not be used, will graduate from the Tulsa school in six weeks. The weight-loss regimen she was placed on for a semester was "humiliating," she said, but "it's not enough to run me away from ORU."

Controversy first arose over the religious school's "Pounds Off" program in October 1977 when a group complained to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that ORU discriminated against persons with disabilities.

ORU's no-fat policy was cited "as an example of the kind of silliness that goes on out there," said Joe Fallin, president of the Oklahoma Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities. However, the real issue was access for the handicapped to ORU buildings and programs.

"We do not consider obesity a handicapping condition unless it creates other health problems," he explained.

"The press got titillated about" the no-fat policy and overlooked the "very serious" problems cited, said Shirley Barry, executive director of the state American Civil Liberties Union.

DEAR ABBY

Elderly men need to change line

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You would do a lot of elderly single men a favor if you would tell them to change their line when they go courting. This is the message: Most older ladies hate to cook!

Some may like to cook, but my widowed mother, mother-in-law, and all their friends (in their 60s and 70s) are wary of remarrying because it seems that most men just want a cook. After 40 or 50 years of making meals for a husband and family, these women have had it, and they want to eat out as often as possible.

So, Abby, tell the older gentlemen that the quickest way to turn a woman off is to say, "Gee, I sure would enjoy a good home-cooked meal."

But if they want to turn a woman on they should say, "I miss having company at mealtime. What time shall I call for you?"

HOOSIER MATCHMAKER

DEAR HOOSIER: Inviting a lady out to dine is better for openers than hinting for a home-cooked meal. But feeding a man is a time-honored expression of love.

DEAR ABBY: I am a former ugly duckling. For the last few years I have been on a staunch self-improvement campaign. This includes diet, exercise, and instructions on skin care, makeup and hairstyles. I am 30, married, and considered attractive by most people.

A few times, my husband has given me the following compliment: "Even though you are far from beautiful, you are kind, smart and a good housekeeper."

I realize that I am overly sensitive, but I take this compliment as an insult. During a heated argument over this often-repeated "compliment" my husband insisted that in a marriage one must be totally honest about one's feelings, even if the other is hurt.

I maintain that his comments were unnecessary, and damaging to my ego, and he should have kept them to himself.

Who is right?

CONNECTICUT

DEAR CONN: You are. Your husband's "total honesty" strikes me as being needless cruelty.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were invited to my cousin's home for a gathering of friends and relatives. (About 20 people.) Food and drinks were served.

As we were leaving, we thanked our hostess most sincerely for the enjoyable evening.

About a week later, I ran into this cousin, who told me that I was the only person at her party who didn't call her to thank her again. I felt like a heel.

Abby, is this second thanks necessary? I thought thanking her when we left was sufficient.

PERPLEXED IN BALTIMORE

DEAR PERPLEXED: A written "thank you" indicates the ultimate in graciousness. A phone call is next. Neither is mandatory — but both show good manners.

However, pointing out your failure to follow through with a second thanks shows your cousin to be more lacking in good manners than you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ASHAMED IN KENOSHA, WIS.": George Bernard Shaw said, "The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is." Wise man, Shaw.

Are your problems too heavy to carry alone? Unload on Abby. For a personal unpublished reply, write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M. D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have angina and had one heart attack about nine years ago. I've been under a doctor's care for 11 years. We moved to the mountains and I can't do much walking since the hills give me chest pain. I feel better if I lose weight. I used to walk in the other place we lived.

The doctor said I should keep my weight down but I can't do any exercise. Could you please tell me what I could do? I tried some of the diets but I can't drink milk so I stop and I gain again. I'm 5 feet 7 and weigh 193 pounds. I take Inderal and nitroglycerin and Valium. Please let me know if there's anything I could do. I get very depressed about this.

DEAR READER — Obviously, the most important thing you could do for yourself is to lose a great deal of weight. A woman of your height could probably weigh 50 pounds less than you do. That amount of weight loss could greatly improve your heart condition and might even eliminate your angina. It would certainly make it a lot easier for you to exercise.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. It does include milk in it because I would like for you to get your calcium. I'm not sure why you can't drink milk but you could substitute ProSobee or some other soybean milk substitute that you could find in the infant section of the grocery store. They'll contain more calories than fortified skim milk because they do contain a certain amount of vegetable fat. So you might want to decrease the quantity that's on the diet a little bit.

Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. I was also intrigued by your comment that you had to move to the mountains. There are two ways that this could make your angina more difficult in your particular situation. Walking uphill always requires more effort. Angina is more apt to occur in a person who has coronary artery disease when he's walking uphill.

The other important point is the altitude. You didn't say at what altitude your new home is but if you're higher than 5,000 feet, the decreased available oxygen in the air also will decrease your exercise tolerance.

So it looks like you might have as many as three things working against you, the most important being all that excess body weight. The second, the hills to climb and the third, the decreased available oxygen. I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction and Angina Pectoris, to give you a better idea of what these disorders are.

Since you can't exercise much, you'll have to do most of your weight reduction through diet. You might try some indoor exercises. As soon as the weight really begins to go down and you can add light exercises such as walking that will help you do better on your weight control. Obviously, you are going to have to cut back on the calories enough to get results.

It's best to switch to a lighter perfume in the summer. Those spicy Oriental fragrances are fine for cold weather, but now they'll seem overpowering. Scent grows stronger in hot weather and also as your body perspires. Try using herbal and citrus fragrances instead. And switch to spray cologne rather than perfume. It has more alcohol, which will refresh you on a hot day.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life.

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

GOING UP...

A building is being erected. It is made of strong materials, steel and concrete. The foundation is firm and deep. The edifice is built to endure.

We need to build our homes to endure. They need a strong foundation. They need to be built on the rock of Christ. Psalm 127:1 reads, Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it. Attend church regularly that your house may be instructed in the ways of the Lord.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

The future of nuclear power

EDITOR'S NOTE — This last part of a four-part series — "TMI Plus One" — looks at the future of nuclear power in the United States as it attempts to recover from the accident at Three Mile Island and overcome various other problems.

By H. JOSEF
HEBERT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Philip Bray, General Electric vice president, is adamant in his argument: By the turn of the century nuclear power will spell the difference between Americans having enough energy or having to import more oil.

But by then, he concedes, the industry may no longer be around. Bray, who is head of GE's nuclear division, says the nuclear power industry is in "grave danger of atrophy...dropping off like an unused arm."

A year after the Three Mile Island accident and three decades after some predicted the atom would one day make electricity "too cheap to meter," the future of the commercial nuclear industry is so precarious few are taking bets on its survival.

Only two orders for new reactors have been received in the past two years, and none is expected for several years. A half dozen reactor orders have been canceled during the past three months, often with the loss of tens of millions of dollars already invested.

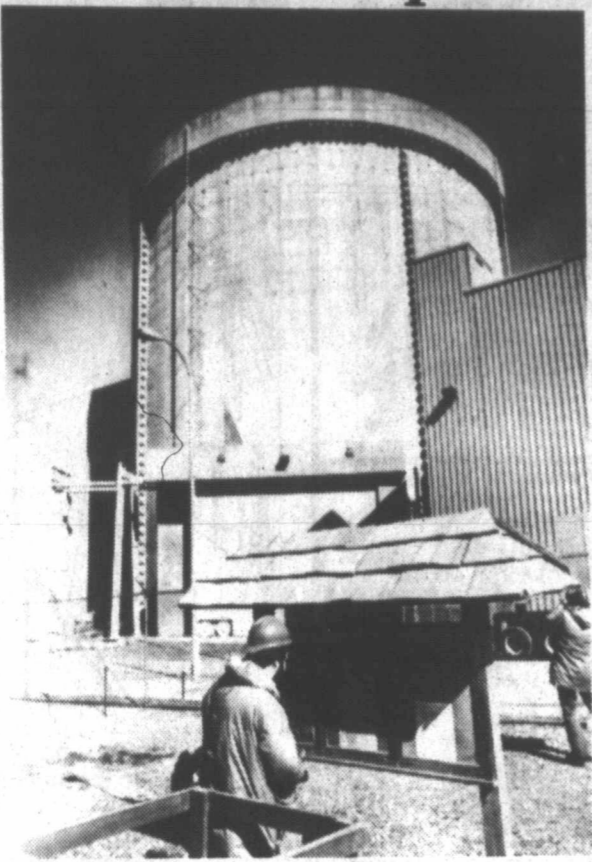

The Three Mile Island accident a year ago in central Pennsylvania forced not only a re-examination of safety matters throughout the industry, but also a re-evaluation of the commitment utilities must make to build a nuclear power plant.

Energy consultant John O'Leary, until last fall the No. 2 man at the Energy Department and a supporter of nuclear power, says much of the hesitancy by utilities to push ahead with reactors stems not from safety-related matters but corporate economics.

A utility increasingly is risking potential bankruptcy if construction and licensing are drawn out by regulatory delays or if the plant should have a serious accident. Today, a typical nuclear plant can cost more than $3 billion and take a dozen years or more to build and license.

Most industry observers believe the 65 plants currently producing electricity will continue to operate and most of the 90 under construction eventually will be completed. But serious doubts are being raised about whether additional reactors will be ordered in the near future.

Last December, President Carter said the country could "not afford" to "shut the door" on nuclear power and that current plants must continue to operate and new ones must be built. Energy Secretary John Duncan told reporters he would PRECARIOUS FUTURE. The disabled Number Two reactor, in this recent photo, still stands idled at Three Miles Island in central Pennsylvania. A year ago cooling problems forced a shutdown and evacuation of nearby areas. The accident has forced a re-examination of safety matters throughout the industry, and a re-evaluation of the commitment utilities must make to build nuclear power plants. like to see 200 to 250 nuclear plants in operation by the turn of the century.

But Bray and other industry leaders strongly criticize Carter for not coming out strongly enough for nuclear power, saying a clear national mandate to expand nuclear energy production is needed for the industry to survive.

The industry argues that both expanded coal production and additional nuclear reactors will be needed in 20 years to meet the nation's electricity needs — even if annual demand increases at only 2 percent, less than half what the industry estimates.

Nuclear critics reject the argument and say that increased conservation and emphasis on alternative sources of energy will make the nuclear option unnecessary. They note the industry consistently has been overestimating future demand.

A study by the National Science Foundation concluded recently that a combination of nuclear plants and coal production will be necessary to meet demand by the turn of the century. And the industry admits the competition increasingly has been one of nuclear vs. coal.

Electricity today costs an average of 15 cents per kilowatt hour as it leaves a nuclear powered generating station, compared to 2.3 cents at a coal plant, says the Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry lobbying group.

That advantage may be short-lived, however. A study conducted before the Three Mile Island accident by Ebasco Services, Inc., an engineering and consulting firm, predicted by the end of this decade the cost gap between coal and nuclear will have narrowed — 6.4 cents per kilowatt hour for nuclear and 6.5 cents for coal.

If nuclear power loses its cost advantage — and some nuclear critics claim it already has — the industry will not survive, many analysts contend.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, chairman of the House committee which has jurisdiction over nuclear issues, argues that a three-year moratorium on new reactor construction is needed to give the public time to make up its mind and be convinced nuclear power is safe.

Such a moratorium, counters Floyd Lewis, chairman of Middle South Utilities and a staunch nuclear power advocate, would mean the death of the industry.

"People talk about the nuclear option," said Lewis in an interview. "It's a necessity if we want to move at all towards domestic reliability of energy."

But says Udall: "The future of nuclear is not going to be decided by the experts. It's going to be decided by the average, ordinary people who have to be convinced that it's going to be safe."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

March 22, 1980

A busier-than-normal social life could be in store for you this coming year. Meeting new people and having a good time is healthy, but don't let your work suffer because of it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could spend so much time worrying about things that you won't even attempt to accomplish anything. It's needless, because all will work out better than you think. Getting along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your Astro-Graph Letter, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Continue to be frugal except where basic necessities are involved. You still have a tendency to be unrealistic about your financial position.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a touchy situation at home, it's important to talk things out rather than let them stew.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is not a good time to overindulge and be negligent in matters relating to good health. Be sensible and moderate in all things.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Over-reacting to something somebody says could cause you to pitch in more than your share for a social event. Be your own person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In dealing with an authoritarian or dominant individual today, listen politely but don't be bulldozed by what he or she says. Quietly do your own thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When something doesn't work out exactly to your liking you could become a bit moody. Being temperamental doesn't become you. Rise above it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could come out on the short end financially if you're not careful. Be generous with others, but not to the point of being abused.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't allow yourself to get involved today with individuals who can get your dander up. You'll have little patience for their indelicacies, so steer clear of them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Counting on another to do you a favor could lead to disappointment today. Stand on your own two feet. You'll get everything done that you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Differences in viewpoints arise all the time. Rather than get into a hassle with a pal about who is right, change the subject if a meeting of the minds can't be reached.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Busy hands will enable you to forget a situation that has you a little peeved today. Dwelling on it will only make you miserable.

Pickford mansion up for sale

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — For Sale: one gracious white-walled mansion, 22 rooms with guest house, 100-foot pool and all the silent screen era memories money can buy.

Anna Pavlova danced there. Maurice Chevalier sang there. Charlie Chaplin, Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Rudolph Valentino and Norma Shearer partied there.

And Mary Pickford, the screen's first major star known as "America's Sweetheart," lived there for 59 years with her second and third husbands — Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Charles "Buddy" Rogers.

The house is Pickfair, and it went on the market this week for $10 million.

"How do you put a price on history?" said Elliott Feinman, executive vice president of the Harleigh Sandler Co., which is handling the sale. "This is really a legend."

But it's a lot of money even in Beverly Hills, where homes more commonly range from $1 million to $5 million.

Before Miss Pickford's death last May at age 86, she and Rogers had tried to offer Pickfair to the city, local universities and charitable organizations. There were no takers — its yearly upkeep was estimated at $300,000 to $400,000 — and the proceeds from its sale will go to charities under the terms of Miss Pickford's will. Prospective buyers and reporters on Wednesday got a last glimpse of one of Hollywood's original palatial homes — just as it was during Miss Pickford's lifetime.

Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were among the founders of United Artists.

The house commands a magnificent hillside view of the Pacific Ocean. Inside are antiques, including a set of firearms and daggers given to her by silent film heartthrob Rudolph Valentino that will go to the Smithsonian Institution.

Among its special features is an adobe-walled Western bar room complete with a bar from a Gold Rush-era saloon and a concealed projection booth.

In the last years of her life, Miss Pickford secluded herself in her bedroom, saying she didn't want to disappoint the public that remembered her as a light-haired beauty of silent films.

Rogers, married to Miss Pickford for 44 years, will take some furnishings with him when he moves into a new $700,000 home he is building on part of the five-acre estate, and Pickfair's new owner will have 2.7 acres of the walled-off estate. "I've had my happiness here, wonderful happiness, dear," he said.

PICKFORD MEMORIES are up for sale — the legendary star's Pickfair mansion in Beverly Hills went on the market this week for a price of $10 million. Buddy Rogers, Mary Pickford's third husband, stands beside a portrait of the late actress, who died last May.

'Hair' producer brings on another revolution

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 12 years ago, Michael Butler made his debut as a Broadway producer with "Hair," the revolutionary musical whose flower-power tribe sang of love and protested the Vietnam war.

It ran for 1,750 performances, an improbable hit with an improbable producer — a rich, anti-establishment figure from an Illinois family whose empire includes aviation, paper, real estate and banking.

On March 20, at the same theater where "Hair" premiered, Butler will be on hand for the opening of a new musical he's coproducing. It features a new — for Broadway — kind of music.

The music is reggae, the show "Reggae, A Musical Revelation." Set in Jamaica, it involves a female rock star who gets caught up with Rastafarians, a religious sect. Reggae is a form of pop music that originated in Jamaica and has roots in rock-and-roll and calypso.

Butler, 53, a tall, slender man with a deliberate way of talking, considers the new musical "just as revolutionary and political as 'Hair,' in the context of Broadway."

Its theme, he says, "is what reggae artists are talking about: Oppression on the part of government. I don't know of any country in the world that's not suffering under oppression of government."

Such didn't concern him in his younger days. He was a jet-setter in addition to being a tender of Butler business interests in the United States and overseas. How'd he get from that to the theater?

"Politics," he says flatly. He isn't joking. He befriended John F. Kennedy and helped JFK's campaign for the presidency. Kennedy's assassination in 1963 changed him from political visitor to activist.

He ran for state senator on the Democratic ticket in the GOP stronghold of DuPage County, Ill. His campaign was colorful and unorthodox, spoofing his one-time playboy image, among other things.

The cause was lively but losing. In time, Butler says, he became involved in the nation's antiwar movement. That, plus politics, led to his first producing success in theater.

He says he was planning to run for the U.S. Senate against incumbent Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., when he happened to see an earlier version of "Hair" at Joseph Papp's Shakespeare Festival here.

He wanted to make the antiwar musical part of his campaign, "but Joe said, 'No, we don't do things like that.'"

But later, he says, Papp asked him if he'd like to try "Hair" on Broadway. He did, being disillusioned by now with politics. Which is how the would-be senator became an actual Broadway producer.

Butler returned to the stage here in 1972, as coproducer of "Lenny," based on the life and sayings of the late Lenny Bruce, the no-holds-barred comic. The show ran a year but lost money.

Despite the fact that "Reggae" is only his third major Broadway project in 12 years, he doesn't consider himself a sometime producer.

He says he might have been busier on Broadway were it not for the fact that until 1976 he was busy in other cities supervising local productions of "Hair."

"We were up to 19 productions at one point. I really, basically felt that my first responsibility was to 'Hair,' and as long as we were opening productions all over the place I had to stay with that."

He also coproduced its film version, released two years ago. He liked the result, but grumbles about the movie's $12 million budget.

Butler believes in a no-frills, carefully-planned approach to a project, whether it involves Hollywood or Broadway.

"I don't believe in big-budget films. I think you get drowned in money. I think it can hurt the creative process in any artistic area. Same for theater. That's why 'Reggae,' for example, has a relatively small budget. "That's out of necessity, of course, but even if we had twice the money available I probably wouldn't do anything differently."

He puts the show's budget at $950,000, a few hundred thousand dollars less than the usual tab today for a Broadway musical. Only $50,000 of the "Reggae" backing is from his pocket.

"I believe in having somewhere between 5 and 10 percent of a show, just a taste," he says. "The reason for that is a producer's got to be totally free of any influence of his own money. He's done his task by putting up the front money."

"Later on, he's got to make decisions that aren't influenced by his own money. He's got to be totally influenced by the piece."

What influenced him to put on a reggae piece? "It's a valid musical form," he says. "I love the music and think it has earned the respect of a tremendous number of musicians over the years."

"I'm betting that underneath it all, people will not find reggae music strange to the ears," he said. "It's been around so long it is not strange. It just has not been presented on Broadway."

Hardy Boy in safari

Young actor Parker Stevenson ("The Hardy Boys Mysteries") will be the first celebrity ever to compete in the 3,200-mile Safari Rallye in Kenya April 3-7.

Stevenson has been practicing in Los Angeles and is set to arrive in Africa to run the course prior to the rallye. He will act as navigator and co-driver of a Mercedes 450 SLC to Joginder Singh, a past winner of the event.

A holder of both U.S. and international competitive racing licenses, Stevenson has also attended a professional driving school. He has entered other road races, but the Safari will be his first rallye.

LONI ANDERSON of the television series "WKRP in Cincinnati" is made up for her role as Jayne Mansfield, for an upcoming CBS television movie, "Jayne Mansfield: A Symbol of the '50s." Makeup artist Alan Friedman, right, and hairdresser Janice Clark work on the transformation.

Pistol Pete having fun again

By the Associated Press
Pete Maravich says, "I'm enjoying the game again," and that would seem understandable. The 31-year-old veteran has moved from the team with the National Basketball Association's third-worst record to the club that leads the pack.

"All I ever wanted to do was play basketball the way the Boston Celtics play it," he said Thursday night after scoring 20 points and helping the Celtics to a 124-106 rout of the Detroit Pistons. "When I got here (from the Utah Jazz), I was physically and mentally exhausted. I wasn't really into the game of basketball very much."

But now, things are different. They were very different in another way Thursday night: rookie Larry Bird was not his usual sensational self in the Celtics' fourth consecutive victory.

"Of all the games this season, this is the one I'll remember because Bird proved he's human," observed Boston Coach Bill Fitch after Bird made just four of 14 field goal attempts, scored 11 points (10.5 under his average) and made eight turnovers.

"It wasn't his shooting, it was his passes, decisions on the floor, everything," said Fitch. "Until tonight, I had never seen him play a bad game. It was disappointing to see the fairy tale end."

In other NBA games, the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Houston Rockets 109-96, the Kansas City Kings beat the Denver Nuggets 121-105 and the Washington Bullets beat the Philadelphia 76ers 119-113 in overtime.

Boston's Dave Cowens scored 15 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and late in the game recorded his first career three-point basket.

The Celtics had eight players in double figures. Rookie Greg Kessler scored 24 points for Detroit, which trailed by 18 after one period and never came closer than 12 the rest of the way.

Cavaliers 109, Rockets 96
Mike Mitchell scored 24 points, Randy Smith added 20 and Cleveland kept its playoff hopes alive by running its winning streak to seven games with the triumph over Houston.

The victory pulled the Cavaliers within three games of the Rockets in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Robert Reid and Moses Malone led Houston with 19 points.

Kings 121, Nuggets 105
Phil Ford scored 25 points, all but two of them in the second half, to power Kansas City past Denver and lift the Kings within one-half game of first-place Milwaukee in the Midwest Division.

Denver got 40 points from Alex English while Otis Birdsong added 32 for Kansas City.

Bullets 119, 76ers 113
Greg Ballard had 30 points and Kevin Grevey scored 27 — including Washington's last five in overtime — in the Bullets' triumph.

"Nobody has quit or made any vacation plans yet," said Grevey after the Bullets recorded their first victory in seven tries over Philadelphia and remained within 1½ games of Houston.

Washington's Greg Ballard added 30 while Maurice Cheeks had 22 for the 76ers.

Gray's lead couples league

The plot thickens in the Harvester Couples bowling league race with just a little over a month left in winter league activity at Harvester Bowl.

Hardin and Roth, first-half league winners, will have to rally to sweep the title. Two teams—Gray's Flying Service and H&S Heating—are ahead of them after this week's action.

Gray's Grace Brent, Robert Harris, Jean Harris, and Raleigh Rowland have a scant two-game lead (28-8) over H&S Heating (26-10) while Hardin and Roth hold down third place at 23-13. They're followed by Call's, 23-13; Louis' Garage, 21-15; Country Inn, 19-17; Chase Productions, 19-17; Holy Rollers, 14½-21½; Spring Meadows, 13½-22½; Harbison-Fisher, 12-24; Sideliners, 9-27; Fitch Gulf Service, 8-28. Gray's also own both the high team series (2205) and high team game (789)

Individually, Brent has the highest average (176) in the women's division while Rowland has the best average (170) in the men's division. Shirley Peterson of Hardin and Roth has both high series (568) and high game (227) in women's play. Rowland has high series (652) and Lewis James has high game (245) on the men's leader.

The Harvester Couples and the remaining leagues bring down the curtain on winter bowling the first week in May. Summer leagues are already being formed and bowlers may sign up at the lanes or call 665-3422.

Western Texas meets Tyler tonight

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Saturday night will decide the championship of the Men's National Junior College Basketball Tournament, tonight will determine who's tops in Texas.

Top-ranked Western Texas of Snyder will put its 35-0 record on the line in a semifinal game against Tyler, Texas, which owns a not-too-shabby 31-6 mark.

The other contest pits Yavapai, Ariz., 23-12, against Jefferson State, Ala., 23-9.

Western Texas advanced on the strength of a 100-79 decision over Lincoln, Ill., Thursday night, while Tyler sent Baltimore out of title contention with a 73-59 triumph.

Western Texas, behind 22 points from sophomore forward Greg Stewart, rallied from a sluggish first half to defeat

Lincoln. The winners trailed by as many as eight points before tying the game at 45-45 at halftime, then opened the final period with a decisive 13-2 spurt.

Bill Patterson added 20 points for the winners, while Fred Watkins had 24 and Julius Poinsette 19 for Lincoln, 27-8. Tyler took advantage of cold Baltimore shooting early in the second half to dismiss the Maryland team.

Tyler led 33-27 at intermission, but ballooned its lead to 19 points when Baltimore failed to score during the first five minutes of the final period.

Elton Webster had 18 points and Clarence Swanegan 16 for Tyler. Baltimore, now 30-6, got 11 from Anthony Williams.

In losers' bracket games Thursday, Three Rivers, Mo., handed Anderson, S.C., 96-73; Westchester, N.Y., defeated Westark, Ark., 54-50; North Idaho eliminated Cloud County, Kan., 97-91 and Monroe, N.Y., dismissed Northwest Mississippi 89-62.

Today's consolation-round schedule matched Middle Georgia against Monroe; North Idaho against Westchester, and Lincoln against Baltimore.

Rangers bop Orioles

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Back-to-back home runs by Al Oliver and Buddy Bell keyed a six-run fifth inning that powered the Texas Rangers past the Baltimore Orioles 11-6 in an exhibition baseball game Thursday.

The Rangers trailed 4-2 when light-hitting Nelson Norman led off with an infield single against Oriole righthander Steve Stone. Norman had four hits and Dave Roberts added three more to lead the 13-hit Texas attack.

Bump Wills walked to put runners on first and second and, with one out, Oliver homered to right. Bell followed with his second homer in as many games.

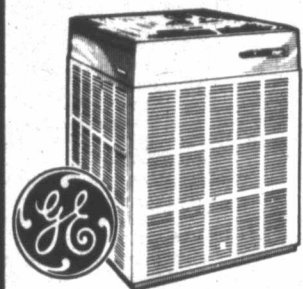

A walk to Pat Putnam and Roberts' double put runners on second and third with two outs. Catcher Jim Sundberg singled to left to drive in two runs.

The Orioles jumped on Texas starter Dave Rajsich for three runs in the second inning. But the Rangers came back in the bottom of the third on Bump Wills two-run homer to left.

Aging athletes defy odds, over the hill syndrome

"I am still physically capable and motivated — I want to beat everybody."

That's Billie Jean King's comeback chant. It comes from her throat with all the fervor of a challenge from some female Tarzan. Billie Jean thinks she can do it all again, and who among us has nerve enough to doubt her?

She is truly a sports phenomenon. Now 36 years old, both knees so scarred from operations that you could play tic-tac-toe on them, counted out on numerous occasions, the so-called "Old Lady" of tennis keeps bounding back.

All the young lionesses of the game are looking apprehensively over their shoulders as the top women players vie in New York's Madison Square Garden this week for their richest prize, the $300,000 Avon Championships.

Why not? Within the past month King put together four victories in Detroit and Houston, beating Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 6-0 and following that with a 6-1, 6-3 rout of Martina Navratilova, rated the world's best.

The tough die hard. Muhammad Ali, 38, is trying to shed 50 pounds in hopes of winning the boxing's heavyweight championship a fourth time. The 41-year-old Jim Kaat is pitching like a schoolboy in the Yankees' baseball camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The legendary Gordie Howe, 51, and Bobby Hull, 41, are playing ice hockey with the same enthusiasm and daring as when their bodies were 20 years old.

The ranks of the "Over the Hill Gang" keep swelling like an inflated balloon. Nobody wants to hang it up any more. Workhorse Phil Niekro, 40, is just coming off a 21-20 season of pitching for the Atlanta Braves. Gaylord Perry, 41, was a 21-game and Cy Young winner two years ago. Both expect their arms to last forever.

Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell was a World Series and National League MVP last year at age 38. Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, 40, and the Phillies' Pete Rose, 39 in April, are just getting their second wind. Dallas' Roger Staubach, 38, and Denver's Craig Morton, 37, are two of the older wonders of the National Football League.

"People have been asking me why I don't retire ever since I was 24," Billie Jean said during a break at the Garden this week. "I'll never forget a comment by Arthur Ashe a couple of years ago. He said, 'Can you imagine being No. 7 in your profession, and people asking why you don't quit? What if you were the seventh best lawyer, doctor or accountant in the world? Nobody would think of asking why you didn't retire.'"

King said for some unexplained reason people pose the "Big 30" as the competitive life of athletes — from that point, they're supposed to start downhill.

"Not so," she adds. "Decay starts in the head. An athlete, physically sound, should be able to last until he is 43 if willing to work hard."

Carroll holds key to Purdue NCAA title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — UCLA Coach Larry Brown knows the tall task facing his Bruins if they plan to write another chapter in their Cinderella success story: Stop Joe Barry Carroll.

"Carroll is a dominating player, certainly the key man on their team," Brown said of Purdue's 7-foot-1, 245-pound All-American center. "The only player on the West Coast who compares to Joe Barry performs for the Lakers."

It may be exaggerating to rank Carroll alongside Los Angeles Lakers pivotman Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. However, how well the young Bruins meet the challenge Carroll presents will go a long way toward determining the outcome of Saturday's semifinal of the NCAA basketball championship between unranked UCLA, 21-9, and the 20th-ranked Boilermakers, 22-9.

No. 2 Louisville, 31-3, takes on unranked Iowa, 23-8, in the opener of Saturday's doubleheader before a sellout crowd of some 17,000 at Market Square Arena and a national television audience. The winners will meet for the title Monday night.

The first game will feature two of the premier guards in the nation, Louisville's Darrell Griffith and Iowa's Ronnie Lester.

The spotlight in the second game will be focused squarely on Carroll, who is regarded by most scouts as the one college senior capable of stepping into the pro ranks and turning a team around. He averaged 22.1 points and 9.1 rebounds per game during the regular season, and has picked those numbers up to 26.5 and 9.8 for his four NCAA tournament games so far.

Ex-Marquette Coach Al McGuire calls

Carroll "an aircraft carrier." DePaul Coach Ray Meyer describes him as "a skyscraper, the kind of guy who scores more points by accident than those little guys score on purpose."

And St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca, whose team was beaten by Purdue 87-72 in the Midwest Regional, says Carroll will need "a Brinks truck" when he turns pro. "Once he gets the ball down low," adds Carnesecca, "he's unstoppable."

Brown knows that all too well, and has designed his game plan accordingly.

"There's no doubt in my mind what the key to stopping Purdue is," he said. "We have to keep the ball from Carroll. Once he gets it, there's not much chance for us to stop him."

The problem is particularly acute for UCLA, whose starting center is 6-foot-6 sophomore Mike Sanders, one of the shortest regular pivotmen in the major college ranks.

But it was Brown's midseason decision to move Sanders, as well as freshman guards Rod Foster and Michael Holton, into the starting lineup that turned UCLA's season around. The Bruins, who struggled to an 8-6 start, went 13-3 with their new lineup of the young trio plus senior forwards Kiki Vandeweghe and James Wilkes.

"We went through some difficult times," said Brown. "We played a lot of people early. When we were 8-6 it was time we started building a foundation for the future. I decided to go with the kids because they deserved a chance to play."

And play they have, knocking off top-ranked DePaul in the second round of the tournament and outrebounding their four opponents 150-142.

"We've rebounded well all year," said Brown. "We have tremendous quickness and jumping ability inside. Our man-to-man defense gives each guy the responsibility for working hard on his man and blocking him out."

"But no one we've faced this year compares to Carroll."

Nevertheless, Purdue Coach Lee Rose isn't taking anything for granted. "I'm very impressed with their quickness, especially when they go to the boards," he said.

In the first game, Iowa will seek to extend its unbeaten streak against opponents from outside the Big Ten Conference. The Hawkeyes, who tied for fourth place in the conference with a 10-8 record, were 13-0 against outside foes.

Their success may hinge on the health of Lester, their 6-2 senior guard who missed 15 games because of a knee injury that still bothers him. Iowa was 15-1 this season with Lester, 8-7 without him.

"Our team plays well without Ronnie, but we play better with him," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "There is a feeling of security knowing No. 12 is out there. He is like a security blanket."

Louisville has a similar player in Griffith, an All-American who like Lester is his school's leading scorer. The 6-foot-4 Griffith averaged 22.6 points per game on .549 shooting and had 40 dunks, many of them flashy enough to explain the nickname Dr. Dunkenstein.

Evans to speak at basketball banquet

Rob Evans, Texas Tech assistant coach, will be the featured speaker at the Pampa High basketball banquet and awards ceremony at 7 p.m. Monday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Evans, who was an All-American cager at Lubbock Christian College and New Mexico State, has been on the Red Raiders coaching staff for the past seven years.

Banquet tickets are five dollars apiece and may be purchased at the high school business office.

Pampa High cagers will receive several honors, including the Hustling Harvester Award for both male and female.

Other awards for rebounds, scoring, free throw percentage, etc. will also be presented.

Bronze 'children' offer immortality

By Etta Worthington

"I'D RATHER DO children than anything else in the world," says Jesse Beesley, whose sculptures of "the universal child" have brought him national fame and fortune. (Photo by Stephen Workman)

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (NEA) - Most people are content to slow down and take it easy when they reach their 70s.

But Jesse Beesley's 70s have been a time of productivity, creativity and hard work as he has gained national stature for his bronze sculptures of children.

Though a lifelong bachelor, Beesley loves children. He recalls that his friends didn't like to walk into Murfreesboro with him when he was growing up because he would stop at every perambulator to play with the baby.

"I'd rather do children than anything else in the world," says the sculptor.

It was a happy discovery, Beesley adds, when he found that the public preferred to buy the subjects that he preferred to sculpt. Although he has attempted other subjects, it's the children that have always sold best.

"If I hadn't hit on children," says Beesley, "I'd still be struggling today."

Some say Beesley has captured "the universal child" in his figures, which are slender and poised to show both motion and emotion.

All his children are engaged in some simple activity — feeding a bird, looking at a frog, picking flowers. All of them are discovering.

Beesley hasn't always been a sculptor. Nor has he always made Murfreesboro his home, although he was born in the house on Main Street where his mother lived for 78 years.

One of his first jobs was editing the town's daily newspaper, which his father had founded. But the paper had to be sold in 1933 because of the family's financial losses during the Depression.

Beesley then left for New York City, where he pursued a career as a writer and editor. He edited "This Week" magazine for 17 years. Later he took an editing position at Prentice Hall.

It was at Prentice Hall that Beesley's work as a sculptor began. He entered an employee art show that was judged by Theodore Rousseau, art curator at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Of Beesley's entry, the bust of a child, Rousseau said, "It is a noble coordination of heart, mind, eye and fingertip."

With this encouragement, Beesley began to pursue art while working as an editor. He recalls devoting every night and every weekend to seeking success in his new field.

"When you make it on Madison Avenue against the best, you've got to give time," Beesley says. And make it he did on the avenue that houses many of the city's most prestigious art galleries.

Beesley's easily recognizable children command prices of $10,000 and up. They are included in the collections of such celebrities as Jim Nabors, Patricia Kennedy and Minnie Pearl. According to artists' representative Karl Schunig, Beesley's sculptures sell better than paintings by Pablo Picasso or Max Ernst.

Beesley retired from Prentice Hall at age 70 and returned to Murfreesboro to devote full time to his art.

His sculptures are born in his studio, where he fashions heads of wax and limbs of armatures covered with sculpt metal. The completed pieces are taken to a New York foundry, where they are cast in bronze by the 2,000-year-old lost-wax method.

There is retouching to do because the bronze shrinks. Beesley must supervise the work, making sure it is perfect.

Two cancer operations have taken their toll on Beesley. He tires easily and takes naps some afternoons. He likes his privacy, resenting those who intrude on it without invitation.

He lives quietly in a modest house with his dog, Tinkerbell. But out back is a shiny black Rolls Royce that he uses to deliver sculptures.

Beesley recognizes that eventually he may not be able to sculpt anymore. If that time comes, he has other plans for his creative energy.

"I'd like to write," he says. He has already written two books and many articles and short stories.

He adds, "I have absolutely no fear of death."

Meanwhile, Beesley continues his work, surrounded by the bronze children who, like real offspring, offer hope of immortality. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

'Alternative' leaves us uneasy

By Norman Nadel

NEW YORK (NEA) - It seems safe to predict that Frederick Forsyth's new espionage novel, "The Devil's Alternative" (Viking, $12.95), will become a best-seller, and soon.

The author's name alone almost guarantees that. When Forsyth's "Day of the Jackal" appeared in 1971, he announced that he would write three novels and no more. It was highly popular, as were the two remaining books of his planned trilogy, "The Odessa File" in 1972 and "The Dogs of War" in 1974.

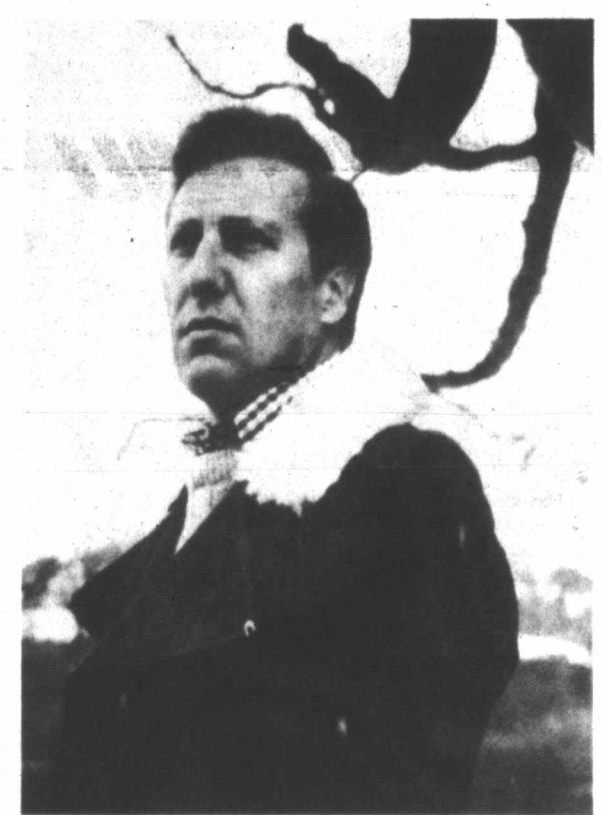

So to his devotees, this new book, appearing after a six-year silence, comes as an unexpected bonus.

But reputation aside, "The Devil's Alternative" is suspenseful, intricately woven and timely. Forsyth completed his book well before the Russian invasion of Afghanistan, yet he has Sir Nigel Irvine, head of British Intelligence in 1982, referring to "... The Russian buildup in Afghanistan. We think they may be mounting a move toward Pakistan and India through the passes." It's oracular and eerie.

Set two years in the future, the story is solidly structured on situations which, while not probable (we hope), certainly are possible. It is as if he planned to pinpoint the vulnerabilities of this nation, Russia and Western Europe.

Soviet Russia is facing famine through a combination of blight and a bad weather pattern which has destroyed two-thirds of the anticipated wheat harvest. And to the Politburo, famine — not just hunger but widespread death — means the threat of uprisings.

Through surveillance by its Condor satellites, the U.S. knows about the blight and plans to use this knowledge in the SALT III talks on disarmament.

FREDERICK FORSYTH once vowed he would write only three novels. "The Devil's Alternative," his fourth, is a welcome bonus.

Meanwhile (in a good yarn there's always a "meanwhile") to pull in a seemingly remote situation which eventually will become critical), a half-dead seaman found in a swampy skiff in the Black Sea provides the means through which a Ukrainian in England can discredit the Ukraine's oppressor, the USSR.

Meanwhile (again), construction starts on a Norwegian oil tanker, twice as large as any previous supertanker, and capable of carrying one million tons of crude oil.

Other "meanwhiles" include a power struggle in the Kremlin, the re-ignited romance of a British Intelligence operative with the Russian woman he had loved 22 years earlier, a Soviet factional plot to blitzkrieg Western Europe, and a Norwegian captain's unwavering dedication to his ship and his responsibilities.

So while the crucial events in "The Devil's Alternative" involve global consequences, the linking of them is human. Nevertheless, there is just too much plot detailing to permit any deeply insightful study of the people involved, though Forsyth does tell all that's needed for the sake of the narrative about Adam Munro, the British operative; Drake, who is plotting Ukrainian vengeance; Maxim Rudin, president of the USSR, and Thor Larsen, skipper of the "Freya."

Others, including the U.S. President, William Matthews, are sketched in and, unfortunately, mostly in stereotypes. They function as characters but without overwhelming conviction.

No single aspect of "The Devil's Alternative" is more seriously vital to world security than its ultimate crisis, which involves the hijacking of the million-ton oil tanker. Not all, but a major part of the author's premise is built on the facts that the super-tankers are inadequately protected against takeover (and their capacity to deal with other emergencies at sea also is open to question), and that they can do awesome damage, through intentional oil spillage.

Maybe the authorities are aware of this. But whether they are or not, Forsyth's book will make them think, and perhaps act. For any reader, it provides a large, mercilessly absorbing adventure, right to the final paragraph. And if it leaves us uneasy, perhaps that is precisely what the author intended. TEXAS BRIEFS

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 40-year-old woman fell to her death Wednesday from the 10th floor of a downtown office building. A medical examiner pronounced Priscilla Young dead at the scene after she landed on a second floor overhang.

A construction worker across the street said he had seen the woman sitting in the window sill before the fall. "I didn't think anything of it. I see people leaning out windows all the time," said Tom Marshall. "She leaned way out, then got up, came back, leaned out again and just let go."

The woman worked for a banking service in the building. Police said she was divorced.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Food and Drug Administration inspector says it is "probable" Mexican cucumbers sprayed with a toxic pesticide have entered the United States.

"It's probable because we can't check every load," FDA investigator Paul Thomson said four truckloads of cucumbers treated with the chemical ENDRIN were stopped at the border almost a month ago.

The pesticide is banned for use on vegetables both in Mexico and the United States. Minute traces of the highly toxic chemical were discovered during laboratory tests in Dallas. Further shipments have been halted from the suspect grower in the southwest Mexican state of Guerrero. Possible dangers to consumers and markets possibly selling the treated cucumbers have not been determined.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tracor, Inc., has received a $5 million contract to continue its work on sonar and fire control systems for nuclear submarines and surface ships.

The contract came from Naval Sea Systems Command, Department of the Navy. Approximately 85 Tracor sonar scientists, engineers and managers in five states — Texas, Maryland, Virginia, Connecticut and California — are involved in the program.

Headquarters for the work is Tracor's facility in Rockville, Md. Tracor has headquarters in Austin.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board has approved the sale of the locally owned Bank of Austin to a Dallas bank holding company.

Bank of Austin, the city's seventh largest financial institution, will become part of the Republic of Texas Corp. after a stock exchange worth about $7.6 million. Bank of Austin has deposits of $71 million. The merger is subject to approval by Bank of Austin shareholders and regulatory authorities.

Phone in order nets bandit $400

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Most fast food restaurants take "call in" orders, but it cost one in Fort Worth about $400 to fill a customer's "order."

Cheri Moore, 25, manager of a Taco Bell restaurant, said she and another employee were early to close the establishment early Thursday when a man telephoned.

"This is a telephone robbery," she quoted the man as saying.

She said the man accurately described her and the employee and said another man was across the street with a rifle aimed at them.

"This guy is an ex-con and he is not afraid to shoot to kill," the manager quoted the man as saying.

She said she took about $400 and placed it outside where the man told her to.

Moore said she never saw the robber or robbers. "I'll be honest with you, I didn't even look. I was afraid that if they saw me looking they'd shoot," she said.

The woman said the robber stayed on the telephone, giving her permission to lock the establishment after she placed the money outside. He said he would come back to the telephone, but he never said anything else.

Song leads to surrender

NEW YORK (AP) — Strains of the country-rock song "Desperado" by the Eagles led a "desperate trucker" from Texas to release a diabetic woman he was holding at a record company here, police said.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top real estate official says one of America's worst social problems in the coming decade is likely to be a shortage of rental housing.

"We're going to see social protest the like of which we've never seen except, briefly in the inner cities" unless there is action to provide apartments for low- and middle-income Americans, said Allan Cymrot, president of Robert A. McNeil Corp. Cymrot testified Thursday before a Senate committee that has been investigating predicted shortages of rental housing.

WASHINGTON (AP) — States could stand elimination of federal revenue sharing although most of them would suffer a bit, says one of the federal government's top auditors.

A House committee has approved — in principle — a $1.7 billion cut in state revenue sharing as part of an attempt to balance the budget. Thursday, Comptroller General Elmer Staats told a Senate subcommittee that dropping state revenue sharing would create "difficulties for the state and local sector," but "the sound current and short-term projected fiscal health of most of the states we visited would enable them to withstand" the loss.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The Malaysian government hanged two men at dawn today for illegal possession of firearms, in violation of the nation's tough Internal Security Act.

Khong Teng Khen, 27, and Ong Siang Wah, 25, were convicted in 1976 by Malaysia's High Court.

The Malaysian Parliament amended the security act in 1976 to include a mandatory death sentence for illegal possession of weapons. The stringent weapons law came in response to a growing wave of assassinations of police officers by communist guerrillas.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Not everybody is unhappy about the world's growing divorce rate. For diamond merchants, a broken first marriage means a probable second wedding — with a bigger, more expensive engagement ring.

The current issue of Israel Diamonds, trade publication of Israel's diamond industry, cites research by the U.S. Diamond Information Center that claims the rising divorce rate is a "positive factor."

According to the magazine, 80 percent of divorcees remarry "and do so at a stage in their lives when their financial situations can lead to a more extravagant purchase in engagement rings than before."

Mineral rights, surface rights definitions urged

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has ruled that Texans who own land also own any lignite beneath it, if the deposit lies near the surface and if the soil would be destroyed or depleted by "reasonable" methods of mining it.

Justice Franklin Spears issued a separate opinion Wednesday saying the decision would simply lead to more lawsuits over lignite — as well as coal and iron — rights.

The suit arose from a dispute between the surface owners of a tract of land and previous owners who had retained mineral rights.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wylie sold land in Freestone County in 1950 — a year after entering into a lignite lease — but retained the mineral rights. The lignite-lease specifically said the mineral would be recovered by strip mining.

Bette Reed later bought the land and contended she, as surface owner, was entitled to the lignite revenue. The land has been "completely strip mined" by now, the Supreme Court observed.

The court amplified its previous decisions that surface owners own lignite, iron or coal if the deposits lay "at the surface."

In its decision Wednesday, the court said the "surface" could extend downward for several feet. In this case, the "hard lignite" deposit started about 20 feet below ground.

"The rule for near surface lignite, iron or coal ... is that if the deposit lies near the surface, the substance will not be granted or retained as a mineral if it is shown that any reasonable method of production would destroy or deplete the surface," the court said.

It specifically said strip mining "is a reasonable method as a matter of law."

Spears said the decision left too many fact issues for courts to determine, case-by-case. He said the court should have issued a more concrete standard.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Now, a British weekly news magazine, has obtained exclusive rights — for an unnamed but "substantial sum" — to first international publication of extracts from former President Nixon's upcoming book on foreign affairs.

"I read the book in two hours and immediately made a bid for it," Editor-in-Chief Anthony Shrimley said Wednesday.

Excerpts of about 15,000 words of "The Real War" will begin appearing April 11.

The magazine also plans an interview with Nixon, Shrimley said.

"I think it's a formidable book... a very well written book. It's based upon direct personal experience and the Watergate business will not be seen to reflect upon this in any way," he said.

Shrimley added that Nixon's policies had commanded "considerable respect" and that Europe regarded "American foreign policy in the Nixon years as rather more in their interests than American policy since then."

NEW YORK (AP) — "Caroline is happy with Philippe, Stephanie is a delight, and Albert has never caused us a moment's worry. What more could a mother ask?"

Well, a grandchild would be nice, adds Princess Grace of Monaco. "I'll be delighted to be a grandmother," she said in an interview in Good Housekeeping's April issue.

But that's up to Caroline, her elder daughter, now married to Philippe Junot, says the former actress Grace Kelly.

Offering a rare glimpse of family relationships, she also commented on her 22-year-old son, a student at Amherst and heir to the throne ("his grades are good, he's active in sports"); 15-year-old Stephanie (shy, but with a very strong character) and her own life.

"Being a mother, being a wife, being a princess all require effort. I have been married since 1956 and I think the reason my marriage has lasted is because both my husband (Prince Rainier) and I have worked at it. We have worked hard, too, at being good parents because we feel that's terribly important."

NEW YORK (AP) — "They've got a certain something, a distinctive look... excitement that lights up TV and movie screens, the printed page, their private lives," says Good Housekeeping.

They're the 10 most beautiful blondes.

According to author Lois Wyse, whose new book "Blonde Beautiful Blonde" is excerpted in the April issue, the top ten are (in alphabetical order): Candice Bergen, Catherine Deneuve, Bo Derek, Farrah Fawcett, Cheryl Ladd, Dina Merrill, Deborah Raffin, Barbara Sinatra, Meryl Streep and Cheryl Tiegs.

The article also includes tips for would-be blondes, a table of blonde personality traits and tidbits of blonde folklore.

Commissioner wins honor

Ted Simmons, local precinct 4 commissioner, has been elected to the board of directors of the West Texas Judges and Commissioners Association of Counties.

Simmons recently attended a three day seminar of judges and commissioners in San Angelo. The annual meeting brings together West Texas representatives in an effort to keep commissioners informed about laws. In turn the commissioners can interpret state laws for their constituency.

Featured speakers at the meeting were Governor Clements, Mark White, Attorney General, John Poerner of the Railroad Commission and Raegan Brown, Agriculture Secretary.

Simmons felt, "the position is pretty serious and represents a large area." Simmons wants to be able to do a good job in the Association for the Panhandle area and make this area aware of what is going on in the State Legislature.
