Winds rake Oklahoma, cause $3 million damage

By The Associated Press
Tornadoes and high straight winds raked across Oklahoma Monday, causing one apparent drowning, at least a dozen injuries and an estimated $3 million in damage.

High winds on Foss Lake near Clinton capsized a boat about 300 feet from shore, dumping its five occupants into the lake, authorities said. Four persons were rescued, but Lake Patrol personnel were unable to locate 9-year-old Gary Lynn Rippey of Burns Flat. A patrol spokesman said the boaters weren't wearing lifejackets and none were in the boat.

Twisters, howling winds, rain and hail moved in a powerful spring storm that cut a path of destruction through the Grand Lake area, killed about 20 head of cattle northwest of Bartlesville, ripped apart a shopping center in Poteau, and left scattered damage elsewhere.

Meanwhile, winds up to 70 mph whipped up dust storms across western Oklahoma, toppling billboards and scattering roof shingles in Altus and Lawton.

Poteau Police Chief Bill Seale said damage to businesses in a shopping center would top $1 million after a fast-moving tornado generated high straight winds about 4:15 p.m. in this town of 5,500 in far eastern Oklahoma.

Spokesmen for the National Weather Service in Fort Smith, Ark., and the Oklahoma Highway Patrol in McAlester said the funnel apparently never touched down.

"There's a drive-in theater near the north edge of Poteau that was flattened," said OHP Lt. Bob Shaw.

He said several persons were taken to a local hospital for treatment after being cut by flying glass broken from stores and parked vehicles in the northside shopping center. Local authorities said at least one woman, whose name was not immediately available, was transferred to a Fort Smith, Ark. hospital for further treatment.

Live electrical lines downed on parking lot pavement trapped several people inside their cars for a short time.

The north side of Poteau also reportedly sustained damage from baseball-size hail.

Outbuildings near the shopping center and drive-in reportedly were destroyed, two houses were demolished and three were heavily damaged, Shaw said.

North northeast of Tulsa, Bernice and Ketchum, about 12 miles apart along Grand Lake with about 300 population each, had property damage estimated at $1.5 million to $2 million.

Four persons were injured and about 25 homes damaged or destroyed in Bernice and Ketchum. The Bernice Point Boat Resort was demolished along with 30 to 40 homes in the lake area.

"We could see it coming over the trees in our pasture," said Barbara Sufficool, dispatcher for the Tri-County Volunteer Ambulance Service. "Our place has been hit three times before, but this is the first one I was able to watch."

"A barn, several silos and numerous outbuildings were destroyed and 20 head of cattle were killed as a tornado cut a $100,000 quarter-mile path across the Stewart Ranch northwest of Bartlesville in far northern

Oklahoma, an OHP spokesman said.

Harold Chanley, a ranch hand, said he and his wife hid in their house when the storm went overhead.

"It definitely was a tornado," Chanley said.

"Somebody said it lasted only a minute, but it was the longest minute in my life."

Three Langley residents — a woman and her two children — received minor injuries when their car overturned twice. Mrs. Kathy Griffith and her children, Heather, 7, and Sharon, 10, were treated at Grand Valley Hospital in Pryor.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies and highs Tuesday in the upper 50s in the north to low 70s in the south. Lows Tuesday night were expected to range from near 30 to 40 degrees.

Strong straight winds caused damage in Oklahoma City and Lawton, authorities said. One woman was injured in Oklahoma City Monday evening when her car ran into a fallen tree in the downtown area.

A construction trailer was blown over and several tool sheds and other outbuildings were damaged in Lawton.

FUNNEL SWEEPS WISCONSIN. A twister roars past a Dodge County farm near Iron Ridge, Wis., in the storm that hit central Wisconsin Monday. More than 20 persons were injured as tornadoes destroyed mobile homes and farm buildings and ripped roofs off other buildings.

Highland application misses 'windfall' of new regulations

BY SHEILA M. ECCLES
Of The Pampa News

Highland General Hospital officials have submitted an application for construction of a new hospital facility, just in time, to miss the "windfall" of proposed federal bureaucratic hospital regulations.

Representatives for Highland General Hospital will be traveling to Austin Wednesday to state their case to the Texas Hospital Facilities Commission. Representatives will be asked to verify the need in this area for a new hospital.

Those making the trip are trying to win a certificate of need from the Austin Hospital Commission.

A certificate of need is equivalent to a building permit and must be secured before further plans are completed.

A Texas Health Commission Hearing Officer will listen to the representatives and will make his recommendations to a three-man commission. It is the responsibility of this Texas commission to award the certificate of need to any hospital corporation contemplating construction.

Guy Hazlett of Highland General Hospital here said, "There will be sixteen representatives going to Austin, including Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, County Commissioner Ted Simmons, Dr. C. Ashby, who will assess the need of the community from a medical standpoint, several officials from the Hospital Corporation of America, the controller and the administrator from Highland General Hospital."

Tentative groundbreaking ceremonies are being considered for May 13 or May 29 and will be definitely scheduled in Pampa as soon as the commission awards the certificate to the hospital.

According to the Texas Hospital Association, an increase in expense and in bureaucratic red tape will result from recently issued federal regulations which strike a major blow against hospitals.

Once implemented, these regulations from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) mandate establishment of an independent, intermediate appeals body to review decisions on project applications which deal with expansion of hospital services or sizable hospital construction — even though Texas state law already provides for such an appeals mechanism through the Texas Hospital Facilities Commission.

According to Hazlett, "The regulations are not yet implemented and will probably not affect the proposed Gray County facility."

An additional layer for appeals between the Texas Health Facilities Commission and the courts will not only increase the costs of applying for the certificate of need but could delay many projects.

White Deer officials sworn in

In Monday's regular session of the White Deer City Council, new members to the council Bob Hill and Dwight Huffman were sworn in by Mayor Virgil James.

Mayor Virgil James was also sworn in and repeated his concern for welfare of the city.

Outgoing members Harry Hughes and Owen Lafferty were thanked for their participation in the city council.

R. T. Laurie was named as Mayor Pro-Tem by council members.

In other action, councilmen received bids on approximately 853 feet of chain link fencing to be placed around the city dump. Three bids were opened and Earl Luper of Pampa submitted the lowest and was awarded the contract for $4,200.

Mayor Virgil James explained to the councilmen the need to raise the gas and water deposits for the city. Deposits are now $20 for water and $20 for gas. Councilmen approved a $20 rate increase for each of the deposits making the gas and water $40 each.

City councilmen declined to approve the purchase of a tranquilizer gun for the dog catcher after it was decided that it may be harmful to those using it. Although previously approved by the council, members agreed Monday it may prove more harmful than good.

The votes cast in the Saturday White Deer Council and School Board election totaled 224. Mayor James said this amount was 101 votes less than those cast in the 1978 election. The election returns were accepted.

Jordy Gillespie presented to council members his concern about the adequacy of the warning siren system in White Deer. According to Gillespie, volunteers have been having difficulties in hearing the sirens, especially at night. Although $800 was spent in 1978 to update the system, added repairs and two new sirens are badly needed.

Councilmen approved the repair of the siren at the fire chief's home and will continue to look for the two new sirens that are needed.

A date for the vaccination of local dogs was discussed by council members, with Dr. Horne approved to do the work. Dog tags have been ordered and either April 19 or April 26 will be the vaccination dates.

The historical marker will be placed on the E. H. Grimes lot as soon as possible, commission members decided.

Liability insurance for council members and city employees was approved for $3,608 for three year coverage.

Iranian pilots leave Texas air bases

By The Associated Press

Iranian military trainees at three Texas Air Force Bases today are packing their bags and preparing to leave the country in the wake of President Carter's diplomatic break with Iran.

The 97 trainees in Texas — almost half of the 203 in the United States — were notified of their expulsion Monday afternoon.

A statement released from Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio said the trainees have until Friday to leave the country. The spokesman did not say whether or not the trainees would be allowed to ask for political asylum.

He said all the trainees arrived in the United States before the Shah of Iran was deposed one year ago.

The trainees have been taking only ground school classes since Nov. 23 when they were grounded by the U.S. Air Training Command.

"Following the presidential announcement that we have broken off diplomatic relations with Iran, all Iranian military students engaged in training at Air Force installations were notified that their training is terminated immediately," said the Randolph statement.

Paul Zimmerli at Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls said arrangements were being made for the 38 Iranians who had been training there. Zimmerli said he was not sure how long the students had been stationed at Sheppard, but most had been studying the ground school training at a "self pace" program.

Who votes? And why?

The first taste of the 1980 elections has been savored. Locally, residents were able to pick school board and city councilmen to represent them in all business related to those offices.

Who voted and why? Although election polls are rampant in an election year and candidates claim victory for wins and losses, where is the true picture of the American voter?

Texas A&M University has looked at the situation with some eye opening and logical conclusions.

Homeowners do have stronger community ties than renters, the recent A&M information states.

In the Saturday election, Wheeler tallied votes for races that were unopposed. People want a say in their representation, and a vote for a candidate, unopposed or not, is a vote of confidence.

Recent home ownership-voting practices comparisons show home owners voting at twice the rate of renters—which proves a belief many have held but couldn't support with facts, reports Jane Bery, a housing specialist.

The difference in voting occurs regardless of age or race and apparently reflects homeowners' stronger ties and interest in government decisions, she explained.

Length of residency was a factor in voting, with longtime residents more inclined to make the trip to the polls, she added.

Sixty percent of the people who had lived in the same house for at least six years voted compared to 26 percent of those who had resided there for less than a year.

Voting was especially low among new residents age 18 to 24, with only 15 percent voting, Dr. Berry pointed out.

Another study comparing mobile home owner suggested that rental or ownership of the mobile home site also makes a difference in voting practices among mobile home owners, the specialist says.

Celanese wins Ed Burris award

The Celanese Chemical Company Inc., Pampa Plant, has won the Eighth Annual Ed C. Burris Award, for achievements in business operations and contributions to civic and governmental affairs.

Governor Bill Clements presented the award to Celanese officials in Austin April 1, kicking off Texas Business and Industry Week, which ended Monday, April 7.

The Celanese Chemical Company Inc., Pampa Plant, was chosen from nine entries by a committee comprised of Texas business leaders for its achievements made in business operations and contributions to civic and governmental affairs, including increases in sales, profit margins and employment; marketing achievements; employee relations programs; contributions to education, community development; and employee participation in clubs, organizations and local, state and-or national political affairs.

Established by the Texas Association of Business (TAB), the award is named in honor of Ed C. Burris, the president of TAB until his retirement in 1972. The award is symbolic of TAB's objective — that of building a better climate for Texas business and industry.

On hand for the presentation in Austin were several Celanese Chemical Company Inc. employees, president Harry Bartley Jr. and vice-president of operations Homer C. Wilson, both of Dallas.

Also attending were Bill Gray, TAB president, of Houston; Lamar Lovvorn, TAB state chairman of Dallas, and Frank Lee, TAB Panhandle Chapter public relations chairman, of Amarillo.

TAB is one of the oldest and largest state associations in the nation, comprised of approximately 7,000 members and 4,000 member-firms.

Murder victim's husband passes lie detector test
 DALLAS (AP) — Don Martinson and his attorneys told police he was asked about the death of his wife and passed a privately administered lie detector test "with flying colors."
 The 32-year-old attorney also turned over a packet of papers Monday in a two-hour meeting with police — the first since his wife was found strangled in their North Dallas home.
 He was accompanied by law partner Robert Fanning and criminal defense attorney Phil Burleson, who helped defend Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.
 Burleson said independent polygraph operator Eric J. Holden questioned Martinson for "several hours" Saturday and "he showed no deception ... no knowledge" of the murder.
 Martinson said he found the nude body of his 28-year-old wife, Debra, when he returned home from jury duty March 31.
 A macramé plant hanger was wrapped around her neck, and a bizarre message was written on a nearby mirror in pink lipstick: "Now we are even Don."
 Medical examiners ruled she had been strangled and that semen was found in her mouth.
 Burleson said he agreed with Martinson's other lawyers that the lipstick message was written only as a diversion.

TEXAS
 By The Associated Press
 One man was killed and property damage was heavy in Central Texas after tornadoes touched down at Round Rock, Lund and Elgin Monday.
 Police have said they have no information linking Martinson to the crime.
 "He provided us with some things we're certainly going to check on in terms of service people, people who had been in the house, her plans for the day," said Sgt. Bill Parker. "He gave us receipts that indicate the dates and times that service people had been to the house."
 All the repairman had access to the house and have not been questioned by police, Burleson said, adding yardmen worked at the house the day before the murder.
 Martinson answered all the police interrogators' questions, Burleson said.
 "There were times when he was emotional. The questions got to many things that he found that night. It's still a traumatic experience," he said.
 He said it had not been decided whether Martinson would take a police polygraph test.
 Burleson said a week passed before Martinson met with police partly because the lead investigator, Parker, was inaccessible.
 Parker said the only time he was unavailable was while in court Friday.

Most of the turbulent weather calmed down during the night although thunderstorms continued early today in Southeast Texas.

Heroin haul case of mistaken identity

DALLAS (AP) — A couple of red-faced sheriff's deputies today say they are trying to figure out how 10 plastic bags of starch could have been mistakenly identified as $1 million worth of heroin.

Deputies Larry Forsythe and Grady Newton announced late Sunday that the bags, containing a substance believed to be heroin, had been found strung in trees three miles west of Red Bird Airport inside the suburban Duncanville city limits.

Stories of the find escalated and news organizations ran photographs of the smiling deputies and the bags of powdery stuff.

"All we know is that we have a whole lot of heroin," Forsythe said Sunday night.

In a field test the white powder turned dark green — the color heroin should turn. But Monday, a crime laboratory analysis showed the substance was 23.5 ounces of a less valuable powder — corn starch.

"Yes, I expect some people to make fun of us," Forsythe said Monday.

Three hikers had tipped deputies after finding the bags dangling from tree limbs and strewn on the ground near the airport, which serves primarily private aircraft. Officers had speculated the bags fell or were thrown from a plane.

"The men thought they really had themselves a haul," said Justice Tucker, administrative assistant to Sheriff Carl Thomas, who is running for re-election.

She said the field tests "frequently are not 100 percent," and that deputies should not have issued a positive identification. However, "it's not unusual for this type of error to be made," she added.

Newton said Monday he warned Forsythe not to call the substance heroin before lab tests were completed. But Newton had said Sunday night that if the substance had been 50 percent pure heroin, it would have a wholesale value of $325,000 in Dallas and a street value of about $1 million.

"We're doing a little checking on it. We would like to find out what the motive was, but we haven't come up with anything," said Capt. A.B. McCurley. "We would certainly like to get to the bottom of it."

Kidnap victim not located; charges against suspect grow

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — FBI investigators say they still have no leads as to the whereabouts of a kidnapped 88-year-old woman despite apparent cooperation received from the girlfriend of the case's prime suspect.

John Warren, FBI spokesman, said Monday, "We don't know where Mrs. (Ella) Shelton is or whether she is alive or not."

Nathan Edward Cowger is being held in Akron, Ohio, in lieu of $500,000 bond in the ransom-kidnaping of Ella Shelton, mother of an Oklahoma bank vice president, on March 13.

U.S. Magistrate Charles Laurie set a removal hearing for Cowger, who is charged with extortion by threat, for April 16.

Edmund Pistey, agent in charge of the Oklahoma FBI office, said a portion of a $25,000 ransom allegedly paid to a kidnapper was recovered when Cowger was arrested Saturday as he attempted to board a plane to Chicago at a Youngstown, Ohio, airport.

An extortion complaint lodged Monday against Cowger in federal court here alleges a woman who was "well-acquainted" with him identified the taped voice of a caller's ransom demands to Mrs. Shelton's daughter, Jewell Shelton, a vice president at Fidelity Bank of Oklahoma City.

The seven-page federal complaint said FBI agents Friday talked to Liz Scism, who lives in the same Midwest City apartment complex Cowger did.

Search warrants returned filed Monday said one bloody white sock was found at the Shelton home in The Village, an Oklahoma City suburb, and another was found in Cowger's pickup, which was located Friday.

The daughter told the FBI her mother was wearing a bathrobe, slippers and two white socks the day she disappeared.

Cowger allegedly directed Ms. Scism to "get rid" of two suitcases containing pictures of Jewell Shelton, jewelry and "a set of false teeth," the complaint said.

The complaint said Mrs. Shelton wore false teeth. Pistey said searchers plan to drag the North Canadian River for the suitcases Tuesday although a search Saturday proved fruitless.

Federal officials were tight-lipped Monday on how they came in contact with Ms. Scism and her role in the investigation.

Mrs. Shelton has been missing since the day her daughter, Jewell, received a telephone call demanding money for her mother's return.

The daughter, who is a vice president of Fidelity Bank in Oklahoma City, delivered the ransom to a location near Denton, Texas, but the family did not hear from the kidnapper again, FBI agents said.

The complaint said Ms. Scism told the FBI that Cowger "knew an old lady" who worked at a bank and that "he could always get money." She said he made the statement "more than once" before Mrs. Shelton's disappearance.

Ms. Scism said in the complaint that Cowger was "dead broke" before March 13, the date of the alleged abduction. But on the next Friday, he had more than $6,000, which he used to pay off debts and to pay her $900 in cash as a "gift."

She said Cowger also told her Thursday to dispose of a .38-caliber pistol and the money, which she said she had kept at her apartment.

When she allegedly asked him if she could just get rid of the contents but keep the suitcases, Cowger allegedly replied that the suitcases "were the worst part of it" and not to look inside. However, the complaint said Ms. Scism did peek inside and noticed the false teeth among other items.

Ms. Scism allegedly told the FBI that about March 30 she and Cowger went to an airport parking lot in Little Rock, Ark., where Cowger's pickup was parked to retrieve the money, the gun and other items.

Forester quits post

LUFKIN (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service director in Texas resigned because he didn't want to move to Washington, not because his office was investigated last year, he said.

John H. Courtenay, who headed the Texas office for 13 years, said the U.S. Agriculture Department investigation "had nothing to do with my resigning. My wife and I really just didn't want to live in Washington."

The Agriculture Department, which oversees the Forest Service, initiated the investigation because of a land exchange between the service and Sunoco Energy Development Corp., which involved allegations of misconduct among staff members.

The USDA's report on the investigation has not been released, but Courtenay said none of the charges was substantiated.

"I think I am one of only three people who have actually read the entire report and they found nothing out of line," he said. "In fact, if they had found something, I would have stayed on."

Three bodies recovered at crash site

HOUSTON (AP) — The bodies of a man, a woman and a toddler — still strapped in their seats — were pulled from the submerged wreckage of a light plane that apparently crashed in the San Jacinto River during heavy fog this weekend, authorities said.

Divers using heavy generators to power lights worked into the morning today to recover parts of the plane. Investigators on the scene at the Lynchburg Reservoir said another body, that of an infant, may still be underwater.

"We anticipate finding one more body, that of an infant, because of all the baby bottles they (the divers) have found," said Harris County Sheriff's Sgt. Warren Kahle. He said identities of the victims were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The plane was en route from Phoenix to Lake Charles, La., Sunday, he said. Investigators speculated the crash occurred Sunday evening, since the plane was due in Lake Charles at 10 p.m. CST Sunday.

"All the bodies were in the airplane," Kahle said. "They (the divers) say the main part of the airplane is in about 40 feet of water and is some distance out in the water. It apparently hit the ground or the water at a pretty shallow angle. "They recovered part of the tail of the airplane very early. The wreckage is scattered over about a quarter of a mile area," Kahle said. "They have at least found enough of it to identify it as a Cessna."

A Harris County sheriff's patrol unit spotted the wreck earlier Monday and called the divers.

"It is busted up pretty good," said Sheriff's Cpl. Tom Twardowski.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Right thinking: A few scars

By John Willson
The other day, in an otherwise perfectly innocent conversation, my wife remarked that "liberalism is like chicken pox: sooner or later you recover, and usually with only a few scars." At this writing, with the present liberal resident of the White House piling up huge majorities of votes and delegates in the Illinois primary, one wonders how few the scars will be. Inflation is at a record rate (a banker friend admitted to me that neither he nor anyone else really knows how high it is right now), and the United States is so impotent abroad that our diplomats lie rotting in the hands of terrorists at both ends of the earth. Still Mr. Carter gets votes. If the history of Democratic administrations in this century means anything, economic crisis leads to more collectivism, and crisis abroad leads to either war or appeasement. Maybe we won't even recover from this case of chicken pox.

Fairlie spots a trend (progressive journalists specialize in trends). The seventies, he says, was a decade of reaction, in the sense of reacting against the turbulent sixties. Furthermore, it was a "decade of no survivors": politics, the church, education had all been blown apart by 1970, and Nixon's misadventures applied the death blow. Nothing survived. Even liberalism was perverted by faddish leftism which leads to the trend: people are becoming "ungovernable" the world over, a pattern that is likely to continue until, one infers, a new and creative era of social democracy begins.

Probably what Mr. Fairlie thinks is a trend is really an open sore from the last episode of social democracy. People are not ungovernable, they are, in the words of Howard Jarvis (the father of Proposition 13), "mad as hell." They are mad at feeling powerless to make the decisions that might make their lives better: they remember their historic devotion to liberty and self-government, and have begun to fight the collectivist disease. An interesting phenomenon thus emerges: the initiative, once a potent device used by progressive reformers, has become conservative. Rep. Jack Kemp, as I have reported before, has even suggested that a national initiative be adopted to cure all liberal diseases. He has confidence, as I do, that the Republic is thinking Right, out there in the land of the majority. But one generation's Jarvis can be the next generation's Nader.

Speaking of Mr. Nader, it has been suggested by more than one skeptic that the Brer Rabbit technique (whatever you do, don't throw me in that briar patch of regulation) has been used by big corporations for almost two generations, as part of their drive for "rationalization" of the economy. It is a device long noted by Old Liberals, by some elements of the New Left, and most persuasively, by the historian Forrest McDonald, in his brilliant book, THE PHAETON RIDE. Mr. McDonald calls himself a "Hamiltonian conservative," and likely will not endear himself to philosophical libertarians, but his description of the "crisis of American success" is nothing less than an anthropology of the nation's political economy. When he quotes John L. Lewis: "Is anyone foolish enough to believe for one instant that we gave this money to Roosevelt because we were spellbound by his voice?" or Samuel Insull, Jr., "Year after year and generation after generation, New York maintained its financial supremacy against all comers—Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Cleveland, Chicago—until one day Washington won it all."—we begin to understand the economic history of this country. What has passed for reform has created the corporate state. Welfare capitalism has been primarily a means of worker control, FDR, far from being a "traitor to his class," was a tory—a replica of the English gentry whose tradition, there and in this country, has been antiliberalism.

Mr. McDonald bears a number of scars. He began his professional career by attacking Charles Beard's perverted interpretation of the Constitution, and later was ostracized by his Ivy League colleagues for his Goldwater activism. He is now, however, emerging as one of the most important historians of his generation. And he has lately become a founding member of the Conservative Historians' Forum (all right, we know the name could be better), which is trying to heal the effects of liberalism in that discipline. For more than three generations American historians have been, overwhelmingly, hostile to liberty, sympathetic to collectivism, and deeply anti-American. David Donald of Harvard, one of the establishment figures of the profession, said in 1978 that it is "the essentially negative tone adopted by most American historians that has deprived them of an audience, both at home and abroad."

At the November, 1979 founding meeting of the Forum (hosted by Hillsdale College), one of the members expressed what was going on. We are conservative historians because we are dedicated to the traditional standards of our profession, which have seriously eroded. But also "I am here because I love this country, and I love liberty." This is one more way the great work of recovery has begun. Maybe, indeed, the scars will be few.

OPINION PAGE

Thatcher: the difference and the danger

Policywise, this is an economic springtime in England. But the runoff, the devastating floods that this warming trend will bring after decades of the deadening snowfall of the welfare state, shall severely test the residual strength of the British nation.

Not even one year into the term of Margaret Thatcher, the free market-oriented prime minister, the forecast is gloomy for the months, even years, ahead. Unemployment, unusually high at 5.6 percent, is going up. So is inflation, now at 19.1 percent. Output and real profits are down. And the powerful unions are outrageously defiant; the 11-week strike against the government steel works is the longest national walkout since World War II. Still Thatcher adamantly tells her people they must endure.

The comparison to Jimmy Carter and his calls for sacrifice might seem obvious. But there is really little in common. Thatcher, her nation farther down the road of sick dependence on state manipulation and handouts and thus facing a more painful withdrawal than would the United States, remains committed to a real anti-inflationary policy. Carter's is a facade.

Thatcher is dismantling the trappings of a socialist state, gradually. She's moving toward sale of nationalized industries back to the private sector, and is tightening the reins on social welfare programs. Most importantly, she realizes that England must stop the money supply expansions that have been its succor over the years if the country is to escape the cycle of worsening inflation, and that, with a steady stock of currency, government (deficit) borrowing must be held in check or private investment for productivity will be squeezed out of the capital market.

Carter, on the contrary, has actually failed to reduce the planned expenditures for 1980-82 from what they were when he delivered his State of the Union message in January. His recent proposed cuts have been offset by budget overruns in the meantime. Further, federal borrowing is occupying about a quarter of nation's available capital, far more than it was in 1974 and 1969, two previous austerity periods. And the Federal Reserve board has not held the printing presses in abeyance.

About the only similarity between the two leaders' policies is their unwillingness to countenance net tax cuts at a time when other factors discourage it. Both refuse to apply the "supply side" economics of Arthur Laffer or even accommodate more savings through prudent tax relief.

In overall direction of their ships of state, however, the difference is marked. Jimmy Carter has not been willing to risk the political fallout from weaning America away from the tax, borrow and spend routing into which we've settled (not too comfortably, now) with our government. Margaret Thatcher is unrelenting, it seems, in her determination to do just the opposite.

Thatcher has the advantage of five years remaining before she and her Conservative Party must face the voters again. Nevertheless, as her standing in the eyes of the public drops along with their perceived economic fortunes, the Iron Lady's will and perhaps her ability to maintain a consensus may fail. Therein rests a danger of relying on allies in elected government to see through the principles of a free society.

Earlier this month, for instance, Thatcher retreated from a cost-cutting plan to change the mailing schedule for pension checks, because it would threaten the viability of village post offices where the ubiquitous government checks are distributed.

Apparently, such a move would have enraged the Tories' country constituency, as did an earlier proposal — defeated despite Thatcher's parliamentary majority — to charge rural parents for the cost of school transport for their children.

The wavering of conservatives who feel the backlash from a people confronted at last with the fallacy of a free lunch prompted Sir Ian Gilmour, a Tory member of the House of Lords, to say: "A free state will not survive, unless its people feel loyalty to it. They will not feel loyalty to it unless they gain from the state protection and other benefits. Lectures on the ultimate beneficence of competition and on the dangers of interfering with market forces will not satisfy people in trouble."

Spoken like a true conservative: the state is vital to the furtherance of a society.

If Thatcher, on the other hand, is to lead a libertarian reformation that will restore England's economy to the sound footing of human effort freely exchanged and rewarded, she must hold steady to a different banner, one that requires of her people self-responsibility and an end to the fantasy of a public parent that is anything but their own resources recycled. This adjustment will be traumatic; to our knowledge, it has never been successfully completed in the course of a democracy. The danger of Thatcher's attempt is that she will fail, or England will, and that lasting truths will be enshrouded in the darkness that failure will ring down.

Olympic solution

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—President Carter has asked all companies which were going to supply equipment, food and drink to the Moscow Olympics to refrain from doing so. Millions of dollars will go down the drain if everyone complies.

I'll go along with the President's boycott, with one exception. To leave the detente door just slightly open, I think the President should permit the people who ran the bus system from the parking lots to the stadiums at Lake Placid to provide the transportation for the Moscow games.

I can't think of any gesture that would be more meaningful. If the system works as well as it did at Lake Placid, no one will be able to get to the events and the people who came from all over the world will be furious at the Soviets for ruining their fun. If the Lake Placid transportation plans for busing are used in Moscow, there will be thousands of empty seats at every event, and television audiences all over the world will believe President Carter's boycott was a smashing success.

We could even go so far as to tell the Russians that they could keep the buses after the games are over.

As for the other items for the Olympics, it seems unfair for the manufacturers, who have been working on them all winter, to take a financial bath. What do you do with the souvenirs and other products with the Moscow Olympic logo on them?

Not too many people know about it, but there is a place in the United States called Moscow, Idaho. What would be wrong with having a summer Olympics in Moscow, Idaho, not so much to let our athletes compete as to give American entrepreneurs an opportunity to unload all their stock?

It could also give NBC an opportunity to get off the hook. They could televise the games, starting each program with the announcer saying, "And now — live from Moscow — the Summer Olympics." No mention would be made of Idaho.

I'm not suggesting outright duplicity, but there is no reason why American athletes could not wear East German, Russian and Hungarian track suits, as well as U.S. ones, so the viewing audience would have a rooting interest in the results.

If the idea doesn't appeal to NBC, they could use a split screen and at the same moment they're running a relay race in Moscow, U.S.S.R., our men and women would be running it in Moscow, Idaho. If we beat their time, we would declare our team the winners.

The only things Americans had to look forward to this summer were the political conventions and the Moscow Olympics. As time goes on, more and more people say the President made a mistake. He should have urged a boycott on the political conventions and allowed Americans to participate in the games.

I am not criticizing Mr. Carter for his decision not to have the U.S. team go to Moscow. I'm just trying to find a solution which will satisfy his foreign policy and also give us something to watch on TV.

If we knew the Lake Placid bus system was being used in Russia, and we could still watch an Olympics from Moscow, Idaho, our summer would be made.

The giveaway madness

By Anthony Harrigan

While the Carter administration opposes water projects in Western states, the federal government is helping finance the construction of water projects in communist Romania.

Taxpayers in the Western states, who understand the importance of irrigation and other water developments to their region, undoubtedly would be enraged if they knew that the World Bank, to which the U.S. contributes large sums, is making two loans totaling $190 million to help finance Danube River-Black Sea canal construction and irrigation works.

According to the World Bank, a $100 million loan will support the construction of a 64 kilometer canal, connecting Carnavoda on the Danube River with South Constanta-Agigea on the Black Sea. The other loan of $90 million will assist the construction of irrigation works in an area 200 miles north of Bucharest, Romania.

Establishment of a direct canal link will add significant additional transport capacity for Romania's economy, the World Bank reports. The irrigation project will result in increased production of maize, wheat and other crops.

It's incredible that the United States is helping finance these development projects. The funding is indirect, utilizing the vehicle of the World Bank. The Carter administration prefers this indirect method, for it makes possible fulfillment of administration aims while avoiding the political heat that would be generated by direct foreign aid for a communist country.

Because U.S. funds are channeled through the World Bank, the U.S. public doesn't get the word about such assistance. The major media don't report World Bank assistance to socialist countries or fail to explain to American readers what is going on. The administration succeeds in hoodwinking the taxpayers.

Both indirect and direct foreign aid programs are dangerous anachronisms at a time when the U.S. economy is in peril. Though the United States is experiencing 18 percent inflation and warnings are being voiced regarding a slide towards national bankruptcy, the Executive and the Congress continue to support multi-billion dollar foreign aid programs. The liberal establishment in Washington can't break the habit of sharing America's wealth with foreign countries, both friend and foe.

It's hard to say what it will take to develop effective grass-roots resistance to foreign giveaways, either directly through foreign aid or by the device of the World Bank. Maybe it will take an economic disaster in this country to end the profligate foreign aid spending.

That an economic disaster lies down the road is the conviction of some very well-informed observers. For example, Felix Rohatyn, the New York City financier who helped manage the financial recovery efforts of the metropolis, recently warned that the United States is "headed for a national bankruptcy." He declared that "what is happening to the United States in 1980 is similar to what happened to New York City in 1975, namely a slide towards bankruptcy." He warned that we risk a near-collapse of credit markets.

In the face of this situation, foreign aid should be stopped forthwith. The diversion of U.S. funds to socialist countries, through the conduit of the World Bank, should be the first giveaway activity to be terminated.

'Oldest Living Graduate' thrills Dallas audience

By LAURA RICHARDSON
 Associated Press Writer
 DALLAS (AP) — Celebrities, Dallas theater patrons and National Broadcasting Co. executives crowded into the Bob Hope Theater Monday night to watch the first live dramatic production televised nationally in 18 years.
 But it turned out that the best view of the show could be had perhaps by home viewers who didn't have to crane their necks in a frequently futile attempt to see the play. Most of the time the live audience had a good view of the NBC cameramen and their bulky equipment.
 The television lights produced stifling heat, mainly in the second half of the play.
 The play, Preston Jones' salty "The Oldest Living Graduate," part of the late playwright's "Texas Trilogy," was telecast from the Bob Hope Theater at Southern Methodist University's Meadow School for the Arts. It was the first live drama ever telecast nationally directly from the performance stage.

 Tickets cost $100 each for the benefit showing and were at a premium.
 The live audience's best view came by watching a rather fuzzy picture on an overhead screen that lacked the quality home viewers would have been able to see.
 But that didn't keep anyone in his seat during the curtain calls when star Henry Fonda was given an enthusiastic ovation and the rest of the cast which included Cloris Leachman, Penelope Milford, Harry Dean Stanton and David Ogden Stiers was warmly applauded.
 "The Oldest Living Graduate" premiered at the Dallas Theater Center in 1974, starring Randy Moore who was present at the NBC production. "Obviously, we did some things differently," Moore said of Fonda's re-creation of the part. "For one thing, I really had to worry about my age." Moore, 35 at the time, wore two hours worth of make-up to play the cantankerous Col. J.C. Kinkaid.

 Celebrities in the audience included NBC President Fred Silverman, Mary Sue Jones, widow of the playwright, and Hollywood producer Martin Jurov.
 Also attending was Shirlee Fonda, the actor's wife, who said about her husband's performance, "Pleased? I'm thrilled! It was the best."

Japanese officials eye Dallas-Houston rail line

MEMPHIS (AP) — Japanese railroad officials would like to send passenger trains along Interstate 45 between Dallas and Houston at 300 mph, a spokesman said.

Shunichi B. Shenefelt, a Japanese National Railway consultant, said the Japanese railroads would like to test the high-speed train in Texas, if cooperation with state and federal agencies could be worked out.

Shenefelt told the 6th Annual Sarn Rayburn Symposium that the I-45 right-of-way from Dallas to Houston would make a good site for laying the trains, which he said are in the experimental stage.

He said the Japanese expect to have the trains in passenger operation by 1987.

Earlier in the symposium, Dr. B.H. Cooper Jr. of the University of Texas Center for Energy Studies proposed converting railroads from oil fuel to electricity for inter-city freight transportation in Texas.

The United States is facing an increasingly serious problem of decreasing availability and increasing costs of energy supplies," said Dr. I. Cooper Jr. of the University of Texas Center Energy Studies in Austin.

The problem is particularly serious for petroleum, where the United States is importing from 8 to 8.5 million barrels per day," he said.

"The oil import level is expected to drastically increase in the future in the absence of stringent conservation measures and by development of alternative energy supplies," Cooper said.

The symposium's leadoff speaker, Texas Railroad Commissioner John Poerner, said the "massive new population" converging on Texas makes it imperative that preparations begin now for a rapid-rail transit system in the state.

"The rapid-rail system in Texas probably won't be a reality before the end of this century, but there is no more time to waste," he said.

Poerner cited a U.S. Department of Transportation study showing that the "Texas Triangle" linking Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio, is expected to rank fourth in the country among major rail corridors in average predicted ridership.

"The so-called Texas Triangle is the home for almost half of our state's 12 million people and the population in the triangle is expected to grow by about 3 million during the next decade," he said.

"Within these major city areas, travel demand is predicted to increase by about 120 percent within 10 years."

New computer understands human voice

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y. (AP) — When Alan Cole talks, machines listen.

He speaks, with perfect composure, into a headset attached to a computer. "Some poor men found the building into the missile."

Fifteen minutes later, the computer has "digested" the first six words of the sentence and printed them on a screen.

But it's given up on the last three words, which do not fit the tight grammatical rules of the 250-word artificial "New Raleigh language" from which the sentence is drawn.

"All the sentences in this language are equally meaningless," said Cole, a bearded, 35-year-old scientist at IBM's Thomas J. Watson Research Center here. Cole has been the "voice" for a number of recent experiments in speech recognition.

But Cole and other members of the IBM group believe they took an important step recently in teaching computers to go beyond simple languages like New Raleigh.

They programmed an IBM 370-168 computer to understand a person reading at a natural pace from a complex text with a 1,000-word vocabulary.

The program recognizes only one speaker at a time and must study a two-hour sample of his voice before starting. But Fred Jelinek, head of the continuous speech recognition group, said the program's 91 percent accuracy is the best yet under such complex conditions.

It is the latest step in the race to produce machines capable of recognizing human speech.

Computers that respond to one-word commands are already used for package sorting and inventory control, and Toshiba Corp. recently built a voice-activated television.

But scientists dream of more sophisticated devices: automated dictating machines, instant court transcribers, foreign language translators or aides for the deaf.

The problem is that recognizing continuous human speech is difficult, largely because of the way people talk. Speakers stutter and slur their words, mispronounce connecting words, make false starts, pause at odd places and invent grammar and vocabulary as needed.

"Your brain is a computer which is suited for language and it took many evolutionary steps to work that out. But all we have is a computer suited for sequential processing," said Jelinek, 47.

The IBM program is tested on a mind-boggling document called the "Laser Patent Text." This 1.8 million-word compendium lists every patent ever submitted on lasers up to a few years ago when the U.S. Patent Office experimented with computerizing its files.

The Laser Patent Text is ideal because it is already in computer-readable form and deals with a single subject in a relatively limited legal and scientific vocabulary, Jelinek said.

But it also presents the challenge of natural English grammar — something lacking in artificial languages like New Raleigh.

Ceremony renames

Bexar courthouse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The U.S. courthouse here has been formally renamed for assassinated U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. It is believed to be the first time a federal courthouse has been named for a judge.

The renaming was formalized Monday in a dedication ceremony attended by 17 federal judges and warily watched by armed federal marshals.

While Wood's widow, two daughters and four grandchildren looked on, Deputy U.S. Attorney General

Charles Renfrew pledged to the crowd Monday that the Justice Department would continue its massive investigation of the assassination.

Tenaha shutdown ordered

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission has ordered Tenaha in East Texas to shut down its municipal natural gas system until the commission decides it is safe enough to resume service.

Hearing Examiner Michael George told the commission Monday the Shelby County town had major gas distribution problems, including a large concentration of gas beneath the Tenaha school.

Large concentrations also were found beneath a gas station and washateria, George said.

He said the gas distribution system was badly deteriorated, the town had inadequate odorization procedures and practices and no maps of the distribution system.

The commission said Tenaha asked the agency on Jan. 24 to assist the town in evaluating its distribution system.

"Hazardous conditions were discovered during the evaluation," the commission said, and the "combination of these hazardous conditions pose an imminent threat to persons and property within the city."

On March 4 the Gas Utilities Division directed Tenaha to shut down the system, but city officials refused to comply with the order. The commission then scheduled a March 20 hearing.

The commission said Mayor George Bowers testified at the hearing that the city had obtained a temporary restraining order blocking the commission's order because city officials felt no hazardous conditions existed.

The commission said Tenaha officials were not able to explain discrepancies in a gas leak study conducted by a firm hired by the city and the commission's study.

Probation records private

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White said Monday that adult probation records are in the hands of the courts and not subject to public scrutiny.

District Attorney Odus Hill of Longview asked White if records in the Gregg County adult probation office are subject to the state's Open Records Act.

Hill said the specific information requested concerned whether a probationer was meeting the terms of his probation.

White said the state law covers only "governmental bodies," and the judiciary is not considered such a body. Probation officers are agents of district judges.

"It is within the court's discretion as to whether to release such information," White said.

TEXAS BRIEFS

By The Associated Press
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy has awarded Texas a $2 million grant to help poor people weatherize their homes.

This is the fourth year low-income Texans have been included in the department weatherization program, which is designed to save energy. Some 7,000 Texas homes have been weatherized so far.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-San Antonio, has announced that former Congressman O.C. Fisher of San Angelo and James H. Lutz of San Antonio will be co-chairmen of his re-election campaign.

Fisher is a former congressman from the 21st district, which Loeffler represents.

DALLAS (AP) — First Texas Savings Association and the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin will sponsor a tour of presidential election memorabilia through 10 Texas cities this year.

"The Presidency Remembered" has been on display in the LBJ Library.

The display includes objects ranging from William Henry Harrison's "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too" quilt from the 1840 campaign to items from Johnson's "All the Way With LBJ" campaign in 1964.

The collection will be on display in larger First Texas Savings offices throughout the state.

HOUSTON (AP) — China has purchased a 32-unit apartment building for use as the Houston consulate and consular residence.

Lance Funston, president of Portfolio Management of Texas Inc., said Monday the purchase of the five-story building is China's first Houston real estate transaction.

The purchase price for the Montrose Boulevard property was not revealed but Funston said his company had been working with the Chinese government six months to find property suited to their needs.

"They wanted a building in a suitable location which offered both office space and living quarters under the same roof," he said.

Funston said the ground floor of the building will be converted to consular offices, including a 400-person meeting room with kitchen and dining facilities.

In addition to the Embassy in Washington, China has consulates in Houston and San Francisco.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton has ordered a $15,000 remodeling job on his Capitol apartment.

The work includes $5,600 in synthetic-fabric carpets, covering the walls in a cotton-raw silk fabric, new covering for the kitchen counters and retaining furniture and woodwork.

Director Tom Treadway of the House Financial Division said the renovation is the first on the speaker's apartment in 10 years.

The project was approved by the House Administration Committee.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced the appointment Monday of William Keener of Brownwood as chairman of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Melvin Rowland of Uvalde was appointed vice chairman. He had served as chairman since the commission was created five years ago.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Charlie Ray of the City Parks and Recreation Department was raking leaves Monday when he saw a woman douse herself with gasoline.

"By the time I got to her she was in flames," said Ray. "I started throwing sand on her to put out the fire. But she was already badly burned."

A woman identified as Voncell Jefferson, 39, was rushed to Brackenridge Hospital. A hospital spokesman listed her condition as "serious" with second- and third-degree burns over 80 percent of her body.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The priceless, 765-year-old Magna Charta went on display here Monday. The week-long stay here is the third stop in the document's four-week tour of five Texas cities.

The Magna Charta is considered the basis of justice and legal freedoms for English-speaking countries. The document touring Texas is one of four remaining original copies sealed by King John in 1215.

It is considered priceless and is being heavily guarded.

Home Showcase '80 opens Friday in Amarillo

Home Showcase '80, sponsored by the Associate Council of the Texas Panhandle Builders Association, will open Friday at 1 p.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center.

Many phases of home building will be represented in displays and demonstrations at the show, which will run from 1 to 10 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday. Visitors to Home Showcase '80 will be able to study practical and effective step-by-step procedures for financing new homes and remodeling projects. Individual exhibitors will feature the latest trends in the practical and artistic use of lumber, brick, masonry, ornamental iron and space age materials.

Every building consideration from foundations to roofs will be displayed or demonstrated. Heating and cooling, water conditioning, built-ins and home decor, as well as timely energy-saving tips and a special "idea house", will be on display.

Another feature of the show will be a home buyers seminar Sunday from 2 to 4:30 p.m. The seminar, free to the public, is sponsored by the Amarillo Board of Realtors.

Other features of the show include door prizes, free gifts and an elementary school "dreamhouse" art exhibit and contest.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married to the kind of man who can never be faithful to just one woman. I have left several times because of this, but I always took him back because of the children. Tell me, Abby, is a woman a fool to stay married to a man for the sake of her children?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: A man's faithfulness (or the absence of it) is only part of his total behavior. What kind of man is he otherwise? What kind of husband is he? What kind of father has he been? Has he been discreet? Do your children love and respect him? How much have his extracurricular affairs affected your family life?

Many a woman has stayed married to a man for the sake of her children when she should have left him for the same reason.

DEAR ABBY: I was a secretary to a professional man for several years and enjoyed my work very much; however, he started getting very affectionate and putting his hands all over me, so I quit my job.

I feel that sexual harassment leaves a woman with feelings similar to rape.

What causes a well-thought-of family man to behave this way? I did absolutely nothing to provoke it. So here I am, looking for work and wondering what to put on my applications as to why I left my job. Any suggestions?

SECRETARY

DEAR SECRETARY: I am informed that when applying for a job, you are no longer required to state why you left your last job. Get in touch with your local Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Council on Economic Status of Women, or a civil rights organization. Also, if there is a National Organization for Women (N.O.W.) chapter in your city, they can help you.

As for why a "well-thought-of family man" would behave that way, he's obviously looking for some carnal fringe benefits from those over whom he has an unfair advantage.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went to a lovely wedding that was perfect — with one exception. The bride and groom did not open their wedding gifts at the reception. They said they plan to open them after they return from their honeymoon. Well, what good will that do the guests who wanted to see their gifts opened as well as all the other gifts?

This was a big disappointment to us, and we know others felt the same way. What is proper?

DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: While some couples do open their gifts at the reception, those who don't shouldn't be criticized. After an already long and exhausting day, opening each gift, reading every card and thanking the giver could make an already long and exhausting day longer.

Address comments and questions to Abby, c/o Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Computerization scheduled for Smithsonian collections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The computer age has caught up with the world's largest museum complex. Within three years, the Smithsonian Institution's 78 million items must be recorded in its computer system.

The monumental task, imposed by Congress, requires a physical inventory of collections that then has to be matched against catalog information to ensure the existence of everything from Bell's telephone to moon rocks, from old masters to microscopic marine life.

The full inventory must be completed by June 1983.

The mammoth stocktaking has for the most part just begun, though the task of collections management using the computer started some time ago. Some of the collections, particularly the smaller art collections like that at the National Collection of Fine Arts, have already been recorded in "machine-readable" form.

The Air and Space Museum is also well on its way to computerizing its inventory. Others, like those collections in the Museum of Natural History, which alone has in excess of 60 million specimens, present a much more complex problem.

"We're trying to keep up with current collections and gradually automating these along with significant areas within collections, such as 'type' collections, that will yield most benefit to museum researchers," said Jim Crockett, deputy director of the Smithsonian's Office of Computer Services.

There are 12 Smithsonian museums — seven on the National Mall here and four others elsewhere in Washington, with another in New York — and each is being allowed to tackle its inventory in its own fashion. It's Crockett's job to see they get the systems and programming support they need.

The computer center, based on a large-scale Honeywell system, is also used by researchers from all areas of the museum to support their studies. For example, these include the environmental studies being conducted at the Chesapeake Bay Center and animal-behavior studies at the National Zoo.

Some others are anthropological and biological research in the Museum of Natural History, and analysis of historical, political and art data in the Museum of History and Technology.

The computer is tucked away in the Arts and Industries Building, the second oldest building in the Smithsonian museum complex.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

Surely most older couples are unaware of the "war" that is going on in some places between the old and the young, usually in cities that contain large numbers of retired people.

I had not heard of this until I read a recent article in the Saturday Review entitled, "Old Vs. Young in Florida."

The author, Rasa Gustaitis, says that Florida is unhappily shared by two or three generations that will not try to bridge the wide gap between them. This article states that between 1970 and 1978, our total population increased by seven percent, while the elderly population grew by 20 percent. In Florida the growth of oldsters was even more dramatic, jumping to 18 percent of the total population of the state.

In Broward, Florida, one-third of the people are over 60 and the number of older people is growing every year. The elderly believe they have the right to take over the premises down there and live in warmth and pleasure after lifetimes of work on icy streets. But, naturally, the young people in Broward do not agree with that opinion. They are furious when they hear the old cry, "We earned it. We paid our dues."

Government programs for the youth have been cut back, as have activities of all sorts for the young. The beaches are so crowded with older couples that the younger ones cannot use them. Youth-oriented legislation gets nowhere because the elderly have the most votes. The older folk have lobbying groups and get easy support for their projects, which sometimes sparks the ire of their juniors. Doctors report that even baby clinics are not properly financed.

This so angers the young rowdies that their crimes against older people are growing fast. The prison population of youthful criminals in Florida is increasing alarmingly. Older people are often attacked and robbed, sometimes beaten to death by juveniles who contend that they are only asserting their rights to be part of the scene.

Florida is considering a revision of the death penalty to include young killers.

All these statistics and accounts are appalling. Gary Feinberg, a sociologist at Nove University, points out that the situation should not exist because the elderly in Florida have much in common with the young. Both have only one aim — fun. But both are outside the mainstream of society. The young have not yet reached it, and the old are past it.

This sad situation has not yet spread over the whole country, and we hope it never will. But we must try to prevent its reaching us.

There is no need for generations, even those 50 years apart, to hate each other. The teenagers should know that they were once young.

How can we long-married couples hope to bridge this special gap in our areas?

By becoming acquainted with the young people, beginning with our relatives. Don't you know families who welcome visits from grandparents — and others who never invite their elders to their homes and groan aloud when the old folks come anyway?

We can make ourselves wanted and loved if we present the kind of personalities that our children and grandchildren can love. We can't be critical of lifestyles that differ from ours nor pour out our ailments for hours at a time nor stay a year instead of the week we'd promised.

But if we are happy and helpful and harmonious, we stand a good chance of being wanted in our own family groups.

There is ample room for a meeting ground of ideas between generations, related by blood or not. Why can't we all grant that every living person, whatever his age, has the right to live among us all? Why can't we older couples understand the rebellion of youth, recalling our own rebellions at that age?

I have found that when I talk to the kids happily, instead of berating them for pulling up flowers or snitching Christmas wreaths or running on the asphalt roof, they usually listen and reform.

DEAR LOUISE: My neighbor's kids stole the milk off my front porch and I called the police. They and their folks have hated me ever since. Last week they threw a rock through our kitchen window. What shall I do now? D.F.

DEAR D.F.: You should have made friends with the kids years ago. But if you can't get them to like you now, you have three choices: continue the "war", move away from the neighborhood or take comfort in the fact that the kids will eventually grow up and leave home.

Write DEAR LOUISE, Box 616, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Dancing had role in overcoming polio

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Janet Panetta loves to dance. She started at the age of 6, to overcome the effects of an illness, then went on to dance with the American Ballet Theater and to eventually form her own dance company, Dance Odyssey.

"When I was a child, I had polio," she explained. "The doctors told my parents that I had to have physical exercise, my left side was left weak, so they started me in ballet classes."

Ever since those first childhood ballet classes, Ms. Panetta said there had been only one thing she wanted to do — and that was to dance.

Ms. Panetta went on her first dance tour at the age of 16. She danced with the American Ballet Theater and the Metropolitan Opera Ballet, among other companies, before deciding to go out on her own.

She worked for five years as a free-lance dancer, which meant that she worked with a lot of different dance companies. Gradually, she said, she became interested in modern, as well as classical ballet.

"I loved ballet, and I still love ballet, I still want to do them," Ms. Panetta said. "But it really gets tiring to go out there and do 400 Swan Lakes. You develop to a certain point in your career and then you don't go any further..."

Ms. Panetta performed with small companies that gave leading roles to many of its dancers, an experience, she said, that helped improve her dancing.

"Even if the companies were not so famous, I got to work with choreographers and understand different ways of movement, so I really grew as a dancer from that," she said.

Ms. Panetta, 32, is married to New York City businessman Jeffrey Roth. It was when she became pregnant with their son, who is now 2 years old, that she decided it was time to form her own dance company.

"I said to myself, 'Do you really want to go back and work for someone else, or do you want to expand more?', which would be either choreographing myself or starting my own company and being the artistic director, deciding what and how it gets done. I opted for that over choreographing," she said.

Ms. Panetta, who has been teaching ballet for four years, said she also felt that by creating her own company she would be able to continue working with her students.

"My students came in as good, young, advanced dancers, and they got better and better, and I suddenly realized that it was a disappointment that I had no place for them to go," she said. "They got into dance companies and I didn't have them any more as students. I'd get them to the point of being really good dancers and then that would be it," she explained.

Dance Odyssey is an eight-member repertory company, four men and four women who range in age from 22 to 28. All have studied with Ms. Panetta. The group combines the works of a variety of choreographers, including Sallie Wilson, the company's artistic advisor; Ze'eva Cohen; and Paul Sanasardo of The Paul Sanasardo Dance Company.

Ms. Panetta says it's a lot of hard work — coordinating costuming, staging, rehearsals and performances — particularly because the company, like a lot of companies, is on a tight budget.

"Now, I've been lucky because a lot of people have taken into consideration that we don't have a lot of money and they're contributing some of their time, some of their work, or all of their work," she said. "But eventually, there are just so many favors you can ask people for..."

It's all quite a challenge, said Ms. Panetta, who is a member artist of the Dance Theater Workshop Inc., a non-profit organization.

"I know that as a dancer, I've had a very good career. But I've never learned anything else. I never learned how to deal with people, never learned what was needed to start a company. You can have a brilliant career and not know any of it. But I'm learning fast."

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a female, age 48, and I weigh 130 pounds and I'm 5 feet 4. I have a heartbeat of 100 per minute. I've been told that a normal rate is from 60 to 80. Is this a normal heart rate for me or should I be on medicine? I've read that Inderal and other medicines are given for irregularities. I've been told that I do not have heart disease and I went through the treadmill examination and electrocardiogram and they just said that my heart was a little fast.

The doctor does want to send me to have my valves checked. He thinks it might be a malfunction of a valve. Does this mean I have heart trouble? I was on Inderal for a short time but was taken off because it was making me drowsy. I do have some dizziness but I understand it could be due to my midlife. The doctor also told me I had a noise in there. What did he mean by noise? Could the noise be from my nerves or anything other than valve trouble?

DEAR READER — Heart rates are extremely variable. A normal person can have a relatively fast heart rate if he or she gets excited. That's why we see top athletes having high resting heart rates for days immediately before competition. We usually say that the resting heart rate in a normal person should be between 60 and 100 beats per minute. In truth, in healthy people are not anxious, the rate should be less than 80 beats per minute. Sometimes it can be faster because a person uses a lot of coffee or cigarettes or is in poor physical condition. But if none of the factors are true and an individual is in good health and good physical condition, resting heart rates are usually below 80.

If your doctor heard a noise in there, he's probably telling you that he thinks you have heart murmur. These sounds created by the circulation and they're caused by turbulence of blood. This can be associated with an aortic circulation as might occur with somebody who's anxious or even a person who has overactive thyroid gland. The turbulence can be associated with a valve defect. Of course, your examination will have to determine whether you really have a valve defect.

To give you more information about heart rates, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 9-8, Your Heart Rate What It Means. Other readers who want this issue can see 75 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for. Send your request to me, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

'Love yourself' campaign begins

Albert Freedman, a New York editor who believes the key to world peace is love, two years ago conceived "Love Yourself Day" in the United States on Oct. 1. "Before anybody can love another, he must start loving himself," he explains.

Freedman kicked off an international campaign by going to New Zealand for Love Yourself Day activities on March 22. He was invited to speak at Auckland University. "New Zealand is isolated from most of the world, and because the country is small people suffer from a lack of self-esteem," says Freedman.

Love Yourself Day is a day for pleasing ourselves because we are worth it, he says. The purpose of the day is to give a person the opportunity to shut off the demands of work, friends, lovers, children and relatives. "On this one day, you are more important than anyone else. Treat yourself to what you really want," he suggests.

Drivers neglect automatic transmissions

NEW YORK (AP) — The automatic transmission is the most neglected car component, according to Fram Corp.

The manufacturer of auto products says that without proper care, transmissions must work harder and therefore will consume more fuel. It recommends checking the transmission fluid monthly and changing it yearly, along with the transmission filter.

Trailer-towing a heavy load and driving in areas with steep grades also puts extra strain on transmissions. These motorists should change the transmission fluid and filter twice a year to keep cars healthy and fuel efficient.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Heavy obligations not of your making could put a damper on what otherwise should be a successful day. Try to get the culprit to pitch in and help.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't allow yourself to get caught up in the bickering of friends. If you do, distress will quickly take the place of your pleasant mood.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make any excuse to beat a hasty retreat if you find yourself face to face with anyone who is too dictatorial. This person could leave you thinking everything is your fault.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could easily get sidetracked today by secondary issues that would thoroughly confuse you. When in doubt follow your heart, not someone else's logic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Stand up for your just dues today if you find out someone has been rerouting things earmarked for you. Let the chips fall where they may.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep your social encounters light and frothy today instead of delving into heavy matters. A fun discussion could boil over into a serious debate.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Schedule your agenda to take care of important matters first today. If they're left until last, disruptions could occur that might prove very frustrating.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Political ploys by pals today could place you in an awkward position if you permit yourself to be manipulated. Steer clear of their petty antics.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A situation you're involved in could work out to be materially fortunate today, but you must be careful not to boast of your good luck in front of one not so favored.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're a very pleasant person to be around today as long as others are in accord with your ideas. However, when your views are challenged the opposite might be true.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This could be a critical day where your finances are concerned. Budget your resources as skillfully as a prudent banker would.

MICKEY PIERSALL

New assistant pro joins Pampa CC

Mickey Piersall, a Perryton native, is the new assistant pro at the Pampa Country Club. Piersall, 28, replaces Dick Weston, who moved to Kermit. Piersall spent the past year and a half as assistant pro at the Grapevine Country Club in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Among Piersall's duties at PCC are sales, teaching, club repair, and merchandising. As a member of the Perryton High golf team, Piersall qualified for the regionals three years and was named the most valuable golfer as a senior. He attended West Texas State on a golf scholarship. Piersall has played on the PGA mini-tour since graduating from college and qualified for the USGA Public Links Championship in 1975 in Hawaii. He currently holds the course record at Canadian where he recently shot a 67. Piersall and his wife, Janice, have an 18-month-old son, Matt.

Masters doesn't need gimmicks

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Special Correspondent
The golf tour moves to Augusta and the magnificent Masters this week and, thank goodness, there will be no electrical apparatus attached to the shirts of the birdie-chasing elite. The Masters always has been content to just run a golf tournament, the best in the world. It doesn't need gimmicks to sell its product. It shuns fanfare and folderol. Times change: the Masters, never. The setting is incomparable — an exacting course fashioned among the statuesque pines, flowering dogwood and azalea of a longtime Georgia nursery. The cast: All the fairway VIPs, there by invitation only. This microphone business is a bit bush, as witness last weekend in the Heritage Classic at Hilton Head, S.C. It's a TV idea designed to add a little razzmatazz to a sport suffering in the ratings. Golf commissioner Deane Berman went for it. Now he would be wise to nix it. Golf isn't a hip-hip-hooray sport. It's a dignified man against course exercise in which concentration is of the essence. Who cares, anyway, what a group of pro golfers may say on the tee? Nobody much, but in this case John Schroeder cared a whole lot. John is a serious young pro tourist whose father, Ted, played tennis on the U.S. Davis Cup team and won Wimbledon. Young Schroeder was fit to be tied — rightfully so — when he found out that a trio of his contemporaries, Tom Kite, Lanny Wadkins and Bruce Lietzke, equipped with microphones, had bad-mouthed him about slow play on national television while they were waiting on a tee in Saturday's round. Knowing they were wired for sound but not realizing they were on camera, all three joined in the criticism. Wadkins quipped that Schroeder would realize he was slow "when a pigeon landed on him." Kite said Schroeder should be "fined and fined and suspended." Lietzke agreed. The whole country was listening.

Schroeder was livid. Admitting he was slow but always within time bounds, the Californian went on the air to give a rebuttal. "It shows no class," he said, "the poorest kind of judgment." Kite, Wadkins and Lietzke all were personally embarrassed. The incident is bound to leave scars. Wiring sports figures is not a new fad for TV geniuses, always looking for a more personal touch. They've tried it in football and baseball, sometimes with regrets. As the golfers did, a guy forgets he's wired and blurts expletives that changes the show from a "G" rating to an "R" or an "X." National Football League films once attached a live mike to a New York Giants linebacker for a segment called "The Violent World of Sam Huff." The football special didn't produce much more than a few huffs and puffs from Sam but it helped glorify the linebacker. Dapper Hank Stram wore a microphone in Super Bowl IV when he coached the Kansas City Chiefs to a 23-7 victory over Minnesota, but his vest was louder than his voice.

SWC may return to two officials

DALLAS (AP) — Eddie Sutton of Arkansas likes it the way it is, and Texas' Abe Lemons says he doesn't care. But a majority of the other seven Southwest Conference basketball coaches say they want a return to two-man officiating crews for next season. "I was a very big advocate for the three-man crews," said Rice Coach Mike Scouler, "but three just aren't doing the job." The Atlantic Coast Conference originated the use of three officials in 1978, and six conferences — including the SWC — followed suit the next year, along with the National Basketball Association and the National Collegiate Athletic Association's post-game tournament. But the NBA and Big Eight conference have already returned to the two-man system, and the SWC apparently is not far behind. "It just hasn't worked out," Schuler said of the three-man crews.

"Three officials seem to work well in the Big Ten," said Shelby Metcalf, coach at SWC Champion Texas A&M, "but I think in our case, two would be best." "Two-man crews are fine," said new Southern Methodist coach Dave Bliss. "College basketball is a tremendous sport. We don't need a shot clock or extra officials to improve it." But Lemons said he would be satisfied with any number of officials from zero to five. Most of the SWC coaches who criticized the new system said there are not enough good officials available to make up the necessary number of high-quality crews. "I still believe in the concept of three officials," said Sutton, "but I'd be the first to acknowledge that perhaps in our league there aren't as many quality officials as we'd like to see. "Some coaches feel we're better off with two good ones, rather than two good ones and one mediocre one," he continued.

"The number isn't as important as who the individuals are," said Metcalf. "You have to have the right people." "Three would be all right if you had that many good ones," Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers concurred, and Texas Christian Athletic Director Frank Windeger said, "I just don't see that we've improved the game any by going with three." Conference officials gather for their annual spring meeting later this month, and the matter could be decided then. The voting will be done by faculty representatives, not the coaches, but a coach's opinion could sway his faculty member's decision. "I prefer three," said Arkansas' faculty representative Al Witte, "but I recognize that I'm just a fan and the opinion of the coaches is more significant. "If the coaches are strong in their feelings and have good reasons for the cutback, the faculty reps often are willing to accommodate them."

White expected to replace legend

DALLAS (AP) — Danny White says the Dallas Cowboys shouldn't be favored to win the National Conference Eastern Division championship again this year, but adds "I'll be disappointed if we don't." White, who is expected to replace the retired Roger Staubach as the Cowboys' No. 1 quarterback, said "I have one weakness—I'm a bad loser. I'm just like Roger in that regard. I have a lot of pride and I hope to prove it over the next 10 years.

"I could see where we might not be favored because of the retirements, the changes and the injuries. But I think we'll surprise a lot of people. I think things have been blown out of proportion about all of our troubles." He said he thought he could handle the pressure of replacing a National Football League legend. "You have to expect to be criticized in this business but I'm not going to worry about it unless it comes from the coaches or my teammates," said White. "I'm going to do things my own natural way. If that's not good enough, I'm not going to apologize." White said he would not mind a dual role of punting and quarterbacking. "I'd be glad to keep on doing it," said White who hasn't heard from Coach Tom Landry on the punting matter. White has been the No. 2 Cowboy quarterback behind Staubach, and also has been one of the top punters in the National Football League.

McLean leads district golf meet

CLARENDON—McLean shot a 400 to take over the first-round lead in the District 3-B golf tournament Monday at Clarendon Country Club. Claude follows at 418 while Nazareth and Lefors are next with 425 and 445 respectively. Timmy Kilham led the leaders with a first-round 97, backed up by Wade Smith, 99; Bill Hambright, 106; Rodney Smith, 103, and Tim Smith, 101. Hedley's John Scott fired an 80 to take the medalist lead. Nazareth's Steve Albracht is second at 96 and Killham is third at 97. Buddy Reeves shot 103 for Lefors while teammates Kenneth Humphrey, Steven Franks, and John Tarbet all had 114s. McLean also led the girls division with 479. The Tigerettes were paced by M. Billingsley's 108. She also leads medalist race. Next in line for McLean were S. Haynes, 120; Rozanne Eck, 127; Do. McAnear, 124, and Tami Smith, 138.

Lakers looking forward to meeting with Suns tonight

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
After nine days on the outside looking in, the Los Angeles Lakers are getting a little itchy for their first taste of playoff action. "We're anxious to play," said Coach Paul Westhead, whose Lakers will host the Phoenix Suns tonight in the opener of their best-of-seven series. "It's been a long wait. I'm excited and ready to get in there and get it going." While the Suns were beating the Kansas City Kings in a three-game mini-series, the Lakers have been off since March 30. They earned a bye through the first round of the National Basketball Association playoffs by winning the Pacific Division title during the regular season with a 60-22 record. Phoenix came in third, behind Los Angeles and Seattle, at 55-27. "The rest is advantageous to us," said

Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. "It gives us time to heal up and focus. I know we are in good condition emotionally and physically." According to the form charts, the Lakers are lucky that first game is at home. Los Angeles compiled a 37-4 record at the Forum during the regular season, equalling the best home mark ever posted in the NBA. And in the last six years, Los Angeles holds a 17-2 edge over Phoenix on its home floor. The Lakers led by Jabbar and guards Norm Nixon and rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, finished the regular season with a rush, winning 21 of its final 26 games. Whether that momentum will hold up through the nine days off remains to be seen. The Milwaukee Bucks find themselves in the same situation as they head into tonight's opening game at Seattle. Milwaukee was the second hottest team at the close of the regular season, winning 20 of its last 26 games since acquiring center Bob Lanier from Detroit at the All-Star break. But the Bucks have been sitting for nine days, having won the Midwest Division title and earning first-round bye. Seattle, meanwhile, opened defense of its crown by beating Portland in a three-game series. "Maybe we won't be favored, but we the big man we can win it," said Milwaukee guard Quinn Buckner, referring to Lanier, who will do battle with Seattle's Ja Sikma in the pivot. The first two games of the series, tonight and Wednesday night, as well as the seventh game if needed, will be played in the 14,098-capacity Coliseum instead of the mammoth Kingdome.

River Oaks upset

HOUSTON (AP) — Unseeded Brian Gottfried scored the first major upset Monday in the $175,000 World Championship Tennis tournament at River Oaks Country Club. Gottfried, trailing 4-2 in the second set, after losing the first set 6-1, got his game untracked and beat seventh-seeded Vijay Amritraj 1-6, 6-4, 6-2. First-round play was uneven, especially on the soggy stadium court, after day-long rains in the Houston area. The tournament's top seed, Jose Higueras of Spain, beat Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador 6-2, 6-4 in another first-round match. Other Monday action saw No. 3 seed Eddie Dibbs beat Mike Estep 6-1, 6-3. Terry Moor beat Andres Gomez of Ecuador 6-3, 6-3. Marty Riessen defeat Chris Delaney 7-5, 6-2, fifth seed Eliot Teltscher down Jaime Fillol of Chile 1-6, 6-0, 7-5. Chris Lewis of New Zealand beat Peter McNamara of Australia 6-3, 6-3 and Geoff Masters of Australia down Rolf Gehring of Germany 6-3, 6-3. Only six of the world's top 20 players are entered in the tournament.

Volcano is 'percolating'

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The water percolating in the crater atop Mount St. Helens may be controlling the volcano's behavior, say two geologists who got the first good look into the mouth of the volcano since it began belching gas and ash nearly two weeks ago.

Water from melting snow and ice runs into two ponds in the 1,700-foot-long crater. James Moore and Peter Lipman of the U.S. Geological Survey said Monday.

They believe the water percolates down under the crater until it encounters magma-heated rock hot enough to flash it into steam, causing an eruption of mud and rock.

It rains back into the ponds, and the cycle starts over again in percolator fashion, the geologists said.

"We think the water, caused by melting of the ice and snow, is controlling the behavior of the volcano," said Moore of Menlo Park, Calif.

"The mountain seems to have settled into a steady state (of behavior)," said Moore, with eruptions caused by steam explosions about every half hour.

"As far as we can see, we expect it will continue to perk along as it has for the past few days," he said.

Scientists flying over the volcano Monday said the massive crater on the summit had enlarged from about 1,500 feet long to about 1,700 feet long and 1,200 feet wide, according to Jim Unterwagner of the U.S. Forest Service. At a news conference in Vancouver, about 50 miles southwest of the peak, he said the crater appeared to be about 500 feet deep.

Meanwhile, avalanches of ice, snow and rock raked the north side of the mountain Monday, sliding down Ape and Goat canyons from large cracks across the peak.

The 9,677-foot peak that began erupting March 27 continued spewing small amounts of steam and ash and shaking with regular earthquakes, said Don Mullineaux, a Survey geologist. But he said there is still no evidence that an eruption of lava or pyroclastic material — a lethal combination of gas and debris — is imminent.

The eruption at Mount St. Helens began after it was dormant for 123 years. It was the first eruption in the contiguous United States in 65 years.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country and western star Kenny Rogers, whose hit song "The Gambler" was made into a TV movie, has bought himself a flying poker palace.

"Kenny loves to play cards," said spokesman Guy Thomas. The used BAC-111, about the size of a DC-9, normally seats 80 passengers but has been revamped to hold just 21 passengers, with the extra space going to couches and tables, Thomas said Monday.

Rogers, whose TV acting debut in "The Gambler" is scheduled to air tonight on CBS, will use the plane to fly his band to various concert engagements on upcoming tours, Thomas said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Paul Newman concedes the language in his new movie "Fort Apache, the Bronx," is pretty salty stuff. But Newman in a picture that is promotes racism? No way, says the actor, despite what two New York newspapers say.

Newman held a news conference Monday to refute charges in stories in the New York Post and the Village Voice that the $13 million epic life in the South Bronx ghetto is anti-black and anti-Puerto Rican.

The movie was "tough on Puerto Ricans, tough on blacks, tough on the neighborhood," he said, but the villains were "two Irish cops who throw an innocent Puerto Rican kid off a building."

Newman accused newspapers of printing portions of the script out of context and said a photograph purporting to show a crew member shoving a protesting citizen was "phony."

Asked about allegedly racist language in the script, Newman suggested it would sound rather strange to hear "cops in the locker room saying 'Oh, gosh!' and 'Oh, golly!'"

The movie is expected to be released around Christmas time.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It turns out that Shelly Hack's career as an angel was not made in heaven after all.

The popular ABC series, "Charlie's Angels," is once again searching for new blood. Miss Hack, hired last spring to replace Kate Jackson, told People magazine last month she was fired. Executive producer Aaron Spelling denied the report. Nonetheless, Miss Hack won't be returning when filming begins for next season this June.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito, battling for months to overcome a series of illnesses, appears to have reached a medical plateau with his health stabilized, according to outside medical sources.

Barring sudden setbacks, the 87-year-old Tito might be nearing a level that could be maintained "for quite a long time," the medical experts, who are not privy to hospital test results, said.

Tito is suffering from a series of ailments, not the least of which are kidney failure and heart weakness — complications that originated after his left leg was amputated in January.

Tito's medical staff listed his condition as "very grave," but Monday was the 26th day that there were no reports of new declines in the battle to save his life.
