Man wins jury verdict against five IRS agents

HOUSTON (AP) — Each year, as April 15 draws near, the Internal Revenue Service sends out news releases about tax-owing scofflaws finally nabbed by the agency.

The IRS calls it "enforcement publicity."

But on Friday, the agency was tight-lipped after a federal jury in Houston found five IRS agents should pay former insurance executive E.E. "Johnny" Johnson $9 million for publicizing his 1981 plea bargain on tax evasion. The agency had agreed to keep it confidential.

"I cannot comment whatsoever," said Steve Yost, an IRS spokesman in Houston.

But Johnson can, and after 20 years of fighting, he's delighted — even if he doesn't see a dime.

"I don't want anyone else to go through what I went through," said Johnson, now 74 and living in Springfield, Mo.

An IRS audit of his 1974 and 1975 tax returns found Johnson took too many business deductions that reduced his taxes by $3,500. The IRS wouldn't accept the deductions. After arguing back and forth, a criminal investigation began, Johnson said.

Johnson, who earned $200,000 annually as the No. 2 man for American National Insurance Co. in Galveston, finally agreed to plead guilty to one felony count of tax evasion, with one condition: that his case not be made public.

Johnson was given a suspended six-month sentence with one year probation. He never served any jail time.

His company was informed that the U.S. Attorney's office would agree not to publicize the case. Prosecutors also agreed to name Johnson by his birth name in documents: Elvis Eugene Johnson.

Three days after Johnson pleaded guilty in 1981, the IRS took information not found in public documents — such as accusations that he filed false documents and his commonly used name — and prepared a news release, Johnson said. The information made its way into several publications, including Time magazine and The Wall Street Journal.

"I was totally devastated," Johnson said.

He was demoted as senior vice president and made assistant regional manager in the company's Springfield, Mo., office, where he earned $35,000 a year.

The IRS legally can publicize the cases of tax-owing citizens whose cases hit the nation's courts, said John O'Quinn, Johnson's attorney.

"It is legal to publicize what is in the court record," O'Quinn explained. "It is illegal to publicize what is not in the court record."

Although it would not address Johnson's case, the IRS insists that it does everything possible from keeping private tax return information from the public.

"We are bound by a number of different provisions that keeps us from releasing confidential tax information," Yost said.

In the civil trial verdict returned Thursday, jurors found five IRS agents acted "negligently or knowingly" in permitting the disclosure of tax return information related to Johnson.

The IRS in Houston forwarded inquiries about the five to the Justice Department in Washington.

Johnson originally sued the IRS in 1983. He won an $11 million verdict in 1987 from a federal judge. The government won an appeal before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

In the most recent case, he sued individuals.

What do eggs have to do with Easter? Kids give reasons

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Each year at this time, children all over the country start scouring under rocks, in trees and through bushes looking for elusive Easter eggs.

Question is, what on earth do colored eggs and candy have to do with the Easter holiday?

"'Cuz it's Easter, I don't know," said Jackie Medley, a little plaintively.

Medley, a kindergartner, was one of several Skellytown Elementary students who Thursday raced along a school playground in search of fluorescent plastic eggs and candy by the truckload.

And she wasn't the only student who couldn't really explain why she was braving a 20 mile-per-hour wind and temperatures hovering in the 40s to look for those eggs.

"'Cuz it's Easter," first grader Levi Lauer said matter-of-factly.

"No, I know. I know! Because they get candy and it's for Easter," classmate Shonda Sears interjected.

"It's because people can find 'em and there could be money in 'em or candy," added Sandi Kramer, in a rushed, lispied voice through two missing front teeth.

"Uh-uh! I know what it is. I know what it is! It's because Jesus came off the cross on that day," Kayla Corley chimed in.

Corley, of course, came the closest to pinning down the reason.

The Easter holiday gives Christians the opportunity to celebrate the resurrection of Christ, but biblical accounts don't report eggs hidden around the foot of the cross.

Actually, the eggs likely come from decidedly non-Christian traditions.

Eggs are, obviously, considered fertility symbols.

They reflect ancient spring renewal rites and beliefs that have been absorbed into modern traditions, according to Folklore of American Holidays.

"The fact that eggs are brought by a rabbit, another fertility symbol, underscores the pagan elements that remain part of Easter. The rabbit was the escort of the Germanic goddess Ostara who gave her name to a holiday which fell at the time of vernal equinox," according to the book.

But is it really that complicated anymore?

One Skellytown student didn't think so.

When asked, "Why do people hunt Easter eggs?" first grader Casey Menigold had a simple answer.

With a big grin and smirking eyes, she said, "Because I want to."

Changing the time

Herb Smith, center, gets ready to set forward the time on a clock brought into his shop by Garnet Poole, second from right, and her sister, Jackie Poole, as Ray Christenson looks on Friday morning. Garnet Poole said she bought the clock from Smith and as long as he will change the time for her, she'll let him do it. She was having the time moved forward an hour to prepare for Daylight Savings Time, which officially began at 2 a.m. today. For those who forgot to change their clocks last night, today is the day to set the clock forward an hour.

Network aims at bringing information highway to Panhandle communities

Someday soon, a firefighter from Groom could attend a safety workshop without leaving the city limits. An elderly patient from Panhandle could receive specialized medical advice without leaving the hospital bed.

Perryton and Dalhart commissioners could discuss local issues of common concern without leaving their respective home towns. Rural schools could combine forces to offer courses currently afforded only in more populated regions.

The day is coming, say organizers, thanks to technological advances and the efforts of the Panhandle Information Network, a team of area leaders representing school districts, higher education institutes, public libraries, health care providers, local governments and governmental agencies.

"The success of the Panhandle Information Network is of utmost importance to the future of this region," said Linda Pitner, interim planning coordinator of PIN and West Texas A&M University grant writer. "Many like the information superhighway to the coming of the railroad and the interstate highway system. Access to this highway will profoundly change the way the Panhandle of Texas works, communicates, educates and meets its health care needs."

Network coordinators will host five regional informational meetings in an effort to create awareness and to solicit technical as well as programmatic input from area residents. Those meetings, free and open to the public, include one in Pampa.

The local meeting will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, April 11, in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building at 200 N. Ballard.

"Many of the telecommunications projects in the planning stages across the state are very isolated in focus," Pitner said. "We are focusing on an integrated network to serve the entire Panhandle community."

The PIN project began more than two years ago when Amarillo College, Clarendon College, Frank Phillips College, Oklahoma Panhandle State University and WTAMU jointly applied for and received a $500,000 federal planning grant.

Now that much of the planning process has been completed, membership in the network has been expanded and organizers are preparing a proposal that, if awarded, will provide funds for development of a telecommunications infrastructure throughout the top 26 counties of Texas.

"It may be somewhat optimistic," Pitner said, "but if all goes as planned, Panhandle residents may begin to enjoy the conveniences and benefits of Internet, videoconferencing and distance-education access within the next two years."

For more information about PIN, call Pitner at (806) 656-2983.

Suspect in 1987 murder case being held without bond

Norman Michael Patterson, 25, is being held without bond in Gray County jail after being returned from Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas on Thursday.

Patterson is charged with capital murder in the 1987 slaying of his stepfather, Edward Patterson, 38. The elder Patterson was discovered dead of gunshot wounds to the head by his supervisor when he did not report to work. The Pattersons lived in a trailer house at 533 Doyle.

Patterson was arrested Monday by Texas Rangers in Dallas, where he had been living. A warrant was issued on the capital murder charge March 13 subsequent to the receipt of DNA testing results performed on clothing obtained at the time of the shooting and held in evidence at Pampa Police Department.

Patterson was stopped Sept. 2, 1987 - the date of the shooting - in Monahans driving his stepfather's Suburban. Patterson was 16 at the time the slaying.

Patterson was questioned at the time but released, said District Attorney John Mann in March.

He will face a district court because the juvenile justice system no longer has authority over him, Mann explained.

Actress Greer Garson dies in Dallas hospital after lengthy illness

DALLAS (AP) — Film historians and university scholars Saturday mourned the death of Greer Garson, who capped a 64-year acting career that included an Academy Award-winning role in Mrs. Miniver by turning to philanthropy.

The Irish-born actress donated $10 million to build the Greer Garson Theater and film archive at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. She died Saturday at the age of 92.

A vibrant, gallant leading lady in other films such as Goodbye Mr. Chips, Miss Garson died of heart failure at 1:30 a.m. in Dallas Presbyterian Hospital, where she had lived for more than three years, said John L. "Jack" Roach, a friend and attorney for the family.

"Until the last few days, when she became critical, she was very lucid and very bright," said Roach. "It was very peaceful."

Although some reference books list Miss Garson's age as 87, Roach and a hospital spokeswoman said she was 92.

Burial is pending at Sparkman Hillcrest Memorial Park in Dallas, Roach said. A memorial service will follow at Highland Park Presbyterian Church.

In recent years, Miss Garson made her mark as a philanthropist, donating millions to colleges and other institutions.

Miss Garson's donations to SMU that began in 1979 with scholarships for theater students and continued after her husband's death made her one of the private university's biggest benefactors, the school said.

From her private collection, Miss Garson donated to SMU's G. William Jones Film and Video Collection Mrs. Miniver and 11 other feature films in which she starred, the university said.

"She was extraordinarily generous to the school in terms of theater scholarships and the building of the Garson Theater," said Carole Brandt, dean of the Algor H. Meadows School of the Arts at SMU. "But it's even more than that — on two levels."

"One is her generosity that makes all of our lives at SMU a lot better every day," she said Saturday. "With my offices at the top of the theater, on its third floor, I think about her every day when I walk in. And the level of her artistry and the spirit I think very much is a role model for our students and sets standards for quality that I hope we may find a way to support in the future through our work with students."

The red-haired Miss Garson won an Oscar for Mrs. Miniver, the 1942 drama about a British housewife courageously guiding her family through the blitz bombings of World War II. She was nominated for Oscars for six other roles, including Eleanor Roosevelt and Marie Curie.

Miss Garson's scrapbooks are kept in vaults at SMU, said Ms. Brandt. She said the film archives may plan a retrospective of her work and allow public viewing of the scrapbooks.

"They are fragile and we have not conserved them yet," she said. "That is one of the needs, to conserve more of her work."

"She lived a long and wonderful life. If the rest of us could only do a little portion of what she did with her life, we would be successful," she said.

Miss Garson, in a 1990 Associated Press interview, deplored the violence of many modern films and added: "I think the mirror should be tilted slightly upward when it's reflecting life — toward the cheerful, the tender, the compassionate, the brave, the funny, the encouraging, all those things — and not tilted down to the gutter part of the time, into the troubled vistas of conflict."

With her late husband, oilman E.E. "Buddy" Fogelson, the couple maintained homes in Dallas and Los Angeles and a ranch near Pecos, N.M.

Born in County Down, Ireland, to a family with no theater background, Miss Garson performed Christmas plays in her home and gave recitations in the town hall at age 4.

Miss Garson, after graduating from the University of London and studying at the University of Grenoble, made her professional acting debut in 1932 at the Birmingham Repertory Theater.

MGM boss Louis B. Mayer, in a 1937 visit to England, saw her on the London stage and promptly signed her to a film contract.

But she ended up doing little for a year. "It was the most difficult and unhappiest year of my life," she once said. "I decided once I was fortunate enough to get away from Hollywood, it would take wild horses to drag me back."

Returning to England for Goodbye Mr. Chips, Miss Garson won acclaim for her depiction of the woman who draws the scholarly title character, played by Robert Donat, beyond the walls of academia. It brought her first Oscar nomination.

Miss Garson made 1939's little-known comedy Remember? with Robert Taylor after returning to the United States, where her career soared.

Pride and Prejudice with Laurence Olivier — a co-worker with Miss Garson in London theater — was an example along with Blossoms in the Dust with Walter Pidgeon, and When Ladies Meet starring Joan Crawford.

After Norma Shearer turned down the title role in Mrs. Miniver, Miss Garson stepped in and went on to take the Oscar.

Miss Garson recalled her acceptance speech, a 5 1/2-minute address in which she thanked even "the doctor who brought me into the world," was remembered as the longest ever.

Additional Oscar nominations came for Mrs. Parkington, Blossoms in the Dust, Madame Curie, The Valley of Decision and Sunrise at Campobello, her 1960 comeback film in which she played Mrs. Roosevelt.

She also starred in The Youngest Profession, Random Harvest and Adventure, the first movie Clark Gable made after returning from the war. It inspired a publicist to pen the memorable slogan, "Gable's Back, and Garson's Got Him."

Miss Garson's second marriage was to Richard Ney, who played her son in Mrs. Miniver. But like her first marriage with Abbot Slenon, a British civil servant, Miss Garson's and Ney's relationship ended in divorce in 1947.

She married Fogelson in 1949. The marriage lasted until his death in 1987.

Teacher and author to discuss Quannah Parker at local library

Bill Neeley, teacher and author of The Last Comanche Chief: The Life and Times of Quannah Parker, will be the featured speaker at Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa Tuesday, April 16, at 7 p.m.

Bill Neeley

Neeley's appearance will be part of the local celebration of National Library Week. At the same event, Friends of the Pampa Library will honor the Library Family of the Year.

Recognized as the pre-eminent authority on Quannah Parker, Neeley grew up on a farm near Amarillo. He developed a strong attachment to the land, particularly the topography and history of Tule and Palo Duro canyons which were once Comanche domain. As a child he became fascinated by the lifestyle of the Indians of the southern plains.

After earning his bachelor's and master's degrees in English at West Texas A&M University in Canyon, Neeley taught in area high schools. He later moved to Saudi Arabia, where he taught English for three years to employees of Saudi Arabian Airlines. He then returned to Texas and began work on The Last Comanche Chief, which the Dallas Morning News called "an important and probably definitive account of this tremendously significant figure in American history." Neeley currently teaches Spanish at Borger High School and is researching a sequel to be entitled The Comanches: Survival of a People.

Poll finds Americans critical of television

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than two-thirds of Americans believe television contributes to violence, erodes family values and fosters a distrust of government, according to a new poll released Saturday.

The public also is deeply troubled about increasingly graphic portrayals of sex during prime time, said the poll, which will appear in the U.S. News & World Report issue on newsstands Monday.

Nearly 80 percent of Hollywood executives questioned by mail in a separate survey agreed there was a link between TV violence and violence in real life, but they were not nearly as concerned about TV's role in other social problems.

Fifty-three percent of the executives said TV contributed to distrust of government, and 46 percent thought it contributed to the decline of family values. Thirty-four percent believe TV played some role in America's divorce rate.

One thousand adults were interviewed for the poll, which had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent. U.S. News said 570 of the 6,500 Hollywood executives who received the mail surveys responded to them.

"It is not a scientific survey, but the total number of responses was significant and suggests that many Hollywood leaders are concerned about trends in the television business," the magazine said in a statement.

Eighty-four percent of the general public said they were concerned about the relationship of extramarital sex on TV and real-life problems. In contrast, 43 percent of the Hollywood executives said they were concerned.

Seventy-five percent of the public said they were concerned about the portrayal of passionate encounters and heavy kissing on TV, compared to 28 percent of Hollywood leaders.

When asked about the solutions they would favor, 95 percent of both groups agreed that parental supervision was the most important step, the magazine said.

"Strong majorities also supported the installation of a V-chip on TV sets to allow parents to block out shows to which they object," the magazine said. "Eighty-three percent of the public backed the V-chip, and 62 percent of the Hollywood elite did."

To examine the kinds of messages the public receives over TV, the magazine looked at a week's worth of prime-time programs on ABC, CBS, NBC and the Fox networks in mid-March.

Of the 58 shows monitored, almost half contained sexual acts or references to sex, U.S. News said.

"Sexual innuendo and scatological humor are rampant even during the 8 p.m.-to-9 p.m. slot that used to be reserved for family-friendly programming," the magazine said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Higher learning down the tubes

Hardly a day passes without some new evidence emerging about the pitiful condition of America's public schools.

Americans tend to be aware of "dumbed down" and politically correct school curricula, and other problems that plague our nation's classrooms. They've heard about schools more concerned about teaching environmental awareness and sex education than math and English.

The latest survey, by pollster Daniel Yankelovich and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, added more evidence to that bleak picture. Fewer than 25 percent of public school teachers said that classic Western literature is essential to the public school curriculum. "I think teachers believe they have a lot more students in their classrooms who will have jobs that require dealing with computers than with reading the classics," the National Education Association president said. In that view, schools are nothing more than glorified job-training centers where pupils are taught some valuable basic skills, but are not encouraged to stretch their minds and learn how to think.

A study by the Princeton-based National Association of Scholars reports that learning conditions on the nation's public and private college and university campuses aren't much better than in public schools.

"The prevalent unwillingness to set priorities within general education programs, together with the growing disinclination to insist on rigorous standards for completing them, suggests that undergraduate general education has become substantially devalued as an institutional objective. It also indicates that most institutions are no longer seriously committed to ensuring that their students are exposed to a broad survey of basic subject matter," the report concluded.

NAS embarked on a detailed study of the requirements for a baccalaureate in arts degree at 50 top colleges and universities over the course of the century. The group found that standards and requirements loosened over the years, but that the 1960s free-speech movement was the catalyst to dramatic change.

In 1914, 98 percent of these top institutions had English composition requirements. That number fell to 36 percent in 1993. Mandatory literature courses were found at 75 percent of the 50 universities in 1914, at 50 percent of the institutions in 1939 and 1964, and at none of the universities today. Similar statistics were provided for all major subject areas.

The structured curriculum was dashed during the late 1960s and early 1970s when "radical libertarianism" and idealism ruled the day. But the counterculture is not the only culprit. Since mid-century, colleges and universities became larger and more research-oriented than in earlier decades. The result was a move away from teaching as the key higher education focus, and its replacement with research work. Government funding and rules, other observers have noted, have exacerbated this trend toward bigness and away from teaching.

The study doesn't offer any answers. But it raises key questions that Americans must answer if we hope to create a promising future.

Thought for today

"Slavery is but half abolished, emancipation is but half completed, while millions of freemen with votes in their hands are left without education. Justice to them, the welfare of the States in which they live, the safety of the whole Republic, the dignity of the elective franchise, — all alike demand that the still remaining bonds of ignorance shall be unloosed and broken, and the minds as well as the bodies of the emancipated go free."

Income lies and propoganda

The rich are getting richer. The poor are getting poorer. The middle class is disappearing. That's the litany of political hacks, quacks and scum who seek control over our lives in the name of fairness. People making those claims about income in America are misguided, foolish or sinister manipulators. Let's look at the facts.

The Minneapolis-based Center of the American Experiment recently released a report by John Hineraker and Scott Johnson titled "The Truth About Income Inequality." Yes, leftists on college campuses, in Congress and the news media are right. There has been a net decline in the number of middleclass Americans — families earning between $15,000 and $50,000. But all of this decline is a result of families moving into a higher income category, above $50,000 in inflation-adjusted dollars. The number of families earning more than $50,000 grew from 24 percent of the population in 1970 to 32 percent in 1990.

Rep. Richard Gephardt whines that high-income earners are "winners" in "the lottery of life." Robert Reich, secretary of labor, calls high-income earners the "fortunate fifth." These statements reflect resolute, incurable stupidity. If your annual family income is $100,000, you're in the top 20 percent of earners, and $50,000 qualifies you for the next 20 percent. We might just ask all those Americans in those income categories whether they think their income is a result of winning a lottery. I'm betting they're going to say, "Hell, no, we work our butts off."

Statistics confirm their story. In 1990, of the families that comprised the lowest 20 percent in income, only 45 percent worked at all, and of those working, only 24 percent worked full-time. By contrast, of families in the top 20 percent, 93 percent had two or more members working, and amazingly, 11 percent of those families had four or more workers. Hineraker and Johnson reached the sensible, though boring, conclusion: The reason upper-income families earn more is because they "simply work more jobs and longer hours" than families with lower income.

What about the massive economic expansion of the '80s that led to the creation of 19 million new jobs?

Liberal liars tell us these were mostly low paying, hamburger-flipping jobs, but here's the distribution of jobs created by type and percentage according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics: managerial/professional (33 percent), production (19 percent), technical (22 percent), operators (8 percent), services (17 percent). The average pay for those new jobs was $23,000.

There's considerable income mobility in our country, as seen by a Treasury Department tax returns study. Of those in the bottom 20 percent of income in 1979, 86 percent moved to a higher income class by 1988. And how about this: Fifteen percent of those who were poor in 1979 went all the way to the top income category by 1988. Mobility is a two-way street. The Treasury Department study found that of those taxpayers ranking in the top 1 percent in 1979, 58 percent fell to a lower category by 1988. You tell me how these facts gibe with the liberal claim that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

Differences in income are mostly explained by people's differences in skills, discipline, drive and productivity. James Madison said the "first object of government" is that of protecting the "different and unequal faculties of acquiring property" that naturally result in the possession of different degrees and kinds of property, in a word — income inequality. Contrast Madison's vision with today's Congress, which sees high skills and productivity as characteristics it should punish and penalize.

It's time for a political info label

Charley Reese

The Republican revolution seems to have fizzled out. Even the proverbial dime's worth of difference between Republicans and Democrats is hard to detect. Maybe it's only a penny's worth today.

GATT? No difference. NAFTA? No difference. Mexican bailout? No difference. Troops to Bosnia? No difference. Trade policies? No difference. Corporate welfare? No difference. Foreign aid? No difference. Welfare reform? No difference. Monetary policy? No difference.

Time and again, the Republican leadership led its would-be rebels into surrendering to the Democratic position. The Senate just voted to fund Goals 2000, a federalization of education. Republicans caved in and agreed to keep AmeriCorps, Clinton's big boondoggle.

Did they get rid of the Legal Services Corp., a virtual nest of left-wing filers of class action suits who use the poor merely as cannon fodder in their ideological wars? No. Rep. Bill McCollum, a conservative Republican in Florida, is credited with saving the left-wing outfit. House Speaker Newt Gingrich saved the environmentalists and the liberal artsy-craftsy crowd.

Once again, people voted for change, and once again they got shortchanged. In this country it seems that voters get the rhetoric and money gets the results. It's no surprise so many people don't bother to vote.

Unless voting can produce actual changes in more than faces and labels, there is really no point in the exercise. Unless a way can be found to take big money out of the political process, I really don't see much hope for the future of self-government or for the incredible, shrinking American middle class.

I don't think a Republican Party that could not bring itself to kill off the Legal Services Corp. and the National Endowment for the Arts, or put a dent in foreign aid, is going to balance the federal budget no matter who is in the White House. Heck, those should have been easy cuts and would have been if, in fact, Republicans really were Conservatives.

Maybe it would help if we all took off our labels, jumped into the same mill pond and sort of ourselves out according to actual beliefs and philosophy rather than by merely customary labels.

If it's important for catsup makers to be truthful about the ingredients in the bottle, then it ought to be equally important for politicians to be truthful about their actual beliefs or lack thereof.

I think it would definitely help if we concentrated our energies on local, state and regional affairs and sought out good men and women with firm convictions and a desire to do something more in public office than stay there or act like an adjunct of the chamber of commerce.

We will need such people because, at some point, the issue of usurpation of power will have to be faced head-on.

Right now, people are ruled by the federal government. Only recently, a federal judge struck down an amendment to the state constitution of Arizona that the people had just adopted. The Californians' decision not to fund illegal immigrants' claims on welfare was knocked aside by a federal judge.

In Missouri, one federal judge got so drunk with power he ordered local elected officials to raise local taxes and build schools according to his desires. And the Supreme Court upheld him, proving, if anyone still doubted it, that the Constitution has been rendered meaningless.

The notion that the federal government can nullify any state law and any part of a state constitution, and can override the decision of any state court or body of elected officials, truly is a radical departure from the American tradition.

But I don't think faith in either the Republicans or the Democrats will yield anything but higher taxes and disappointment. Between Republicans betraying conservative principles and Democrats betraying liberal principles, what we have is a centrist shacking up of opportunists eager to fleece the middle class of both their security and their liberty.

Victory on the foreign affairs front?

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

If you share my view that our big lovable lug of a president is a total flop as a policy-maker, you might share my amusement that he now claims his real achievements are in foreign policy. In other words, avert your gaze from his failure to make good on those campaign promises of a middle-class tax cut, a balanced budget, health-care reform and the end of "welfare as we know it" — or whatever his weirdly repeated line was. Instead, look to Clinton's Kissingerian mastery of the globe.

Yes, I suppose he can, with some justification, claim that as compared to the above-mentioned domestic initiatives, in which he has accomplished absolutely nothing, he can point to Ireland, Bosnia and Haiti as three tiny plots of land where he has gotten something broken daily — and in Ireland and Bosnia, at a considerable cost in lives and property. But there you have it: the most prodigious liar ever to be president passing himself off as a foreign-policy president and adducing as evidence three obvious failures. We live in amazing times.

Foreign policy is the one place where an American president's hot air and ineptitude can be very dangerous. Two voices have been heard this month, warning of the dangerous areas into which the Clinton administration's sleepwalking. Unfortunately, neither speech has attracted much attention in Washington, where the only draft dodger ever to be elected president is still capable of evoking wonder and admiration before his every pratfall.

On March 9, in Fulton, Mo., to mark the 50th anniversary of Winston Churchill's Iron Curtain speech, former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher attempted to sober things up. Pointing to the spread of nuclear and chemical weapons of mass destruction into the hands of such gangster states as Iraq and Iran, she urged the renewal and expansion of NATO. Equally important, she pushed for development of defensive weaponry to ward off hostile attacks from such bellicose powers. The speech was big news in Europe.

In Washington, a bigger story was Hillary and Chelsea's peregrination to cheer up our troops. Presumably, Mrs. Clinton will not bring along her White House aide who, in the early days of the administration, informed General Barry McCaffrey that uniforms were now out of favor — or the White House aide who had Marine guards serving drinks.

Now, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Jesse Helms, has issued a warning to the president about his foreign policy of "failing around in the world, rushing from disaster to disaster ... because the Clinton administration has failed to set priorities. Everything, from Burundi to Bosnia, is equally important — and therefore equally unimportant."

Delivering the B.C. Lee Lecture to the guests of the Heritage Foundation on March 26, Helms attempted to direct Washington's gaze to strategic realities as America — a Pacific nation — enters "the Pacific century." Helms warned of the hostile relations between India and Pakistan that are leading to the spread of nuclear weaponry and repeated illegal arms shipments from China. He warned of the vast North Korean army, its truculence and the idiocy as "the United States props up North Korea's failing economy." He called for support of Taiwan. But, he spoke most ominously of China and that other Asian state, Russia.

The direction of his talk was clear. It was a warning to China to live by its agreements and to give up its designs on Taiwan. He called on Russia to "overcome the legacy of military competition in the East" and to "build cooperative relations with its Asian neighbors." But, most pointedly of all, Helms called on the administration to end technology transfers to China that strengthen its military and to insist that China desist from illegally exporting nuclear technology.

Yet, Helms was not optimistic about the direction of Clinton's foreign policy. Particularly with regard to United States-Asia relations, it reminds him "of Alice in Wonderland — if you don't know where you're going, any road will get you there." Another alarmed witness to Clinton's shapeless foreign policy was sitting in the audience, former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. She explains why the Clinton policy is so weak. She attributes it to the boy president's stupendous arrogance. In his arrogance, "he believes he is invulnerable." Recent threats and maneuvers from Beijing may soon put his invulnerability to the test.

Incognito postal terrorism

To the editor:

"No good deed goes unpunished." When I was a child I was certain that my father originated that saying. My beloved father passed away just a month ago, but sometimes his words ring in my ears loudly and clearly.

Recently an anonymous person informed us, the grieving family, that my father is damned to hell because he belonged to several Masonic organizations. Is this an appropriate expression of sympathy? I must have overlooked the "harassment for fun" chapter in my Emily Post Book. Maybe this anonymous person should ask the parents of a crippled or burned child treated at no expense about the satanic workings of the Shriners' Hospitals.

This anonymous person obviously reads The Pampa News, because they lifted our name from my father's obituary. How genteel! This incognito entity fancies themselves a mail missionary.

Let me describe the smoking gun so that other widows will be informed and can refuse delivery of the offensive missive. It is in a small, plain, white 3 5/8 in. x 6 1/2 in. envelope, an Amarillo postmark, a pretty pink, rose stamp; of course, there is no return address, the addressee is printed and the handwriting appears to be feminine. The envelope contains a 5 in. x 2 3/4 in. booklet. You can see through the envelope. The logo on the cover of this unsolicited publication looks like a cross between a devil and a court jester. Don't waste your time. Further inspection reveals that the brochure attempts a comic book style. A comic book? It's an insult to me and is certainly an affront to Batman and Robin. I must admit I didn't read it completely. Such a difficult read and far beyond my comprehension.

I was under the impression that anyone living with grief has earned the caring and respect of the community. Most anthropoids even grasp this concept. When did it become tolerable to harass a widow? And I might add, harassment through the United States Postal Service. Isn't that some kind of criminal offense? While I'm at it, how about those nuisance phone calls? Countless telephone sales operators who mispronounce our name and spouse sales pitches designed to prey on the perceived vulnerability of a fresh widow. If these businesses generate their sales lists from obituaries, there is just one thing to say about that. Shame on you!

But I digress. Let me address little miss anonymous. So very pleased that we have never met. If we had, you would know that we don't need your brand of conversion. My family belongs to a Church that was founded on principles that include loving and caring, not hate and misinformation. We should have been very suspicious. The addressee name on the note was not even correct. But, I guess it just went unnoticed among the volumes of correspondence from our many loving and supportive friends and relatives. What a waste of a poor innocent stamp. A little botanical seal intended for a higher purpose than your postal terrorism.

You know those small candy displays located at checkout stands? The ones that, for example, collect funds for the Shriners. From this day forward I will seek out those little coin collectors. And, I will be donating 32 cents in each one in your honor.

Profanity is selfishness

To the editor:

It is very offensive to be in company or around anyone who makes the use of profanity. When these shallow and meaningless words are being used, rather than underscoring or adding emphasis to a point two things come to mind. First, these individuals lack the vocabulary to express themselves adequately to their perspective audience. Secondly, these people lack respect or consideration for the people around them who do not care for these colorful metaphors. Selfishness notices no one, a contagious social disease.

When "cuss" words are being used, instead of thinking how cool or clever this person is, images of crudeness and blatant ignorance flashes before me. Does this person have the verbal skills to describe or convey a point? Is the use of these words really necessary? Instead, the option is used to overwhelm and punctuate their statements with profanity to spice up their somewhat drab vocabulary to persuade or arouse an argument, an action that requires no skill or forethought. Another argument or excuse to use these words are that some words aren't considered profanity, but everyday common vocabulary, similar to what is heard on network TV. Yet in most people's eyes they are "cussing." Just because it is found in the dictionary doesn't deem it public domain or proper use.

Often when profanity is used in a public setting, consideration of others is violated by the person using the language. These self-centered individuals think of no one but themselves. Respect for others by these self-serving people are disregarded. Loud-mouths want to be noticed by everyone and think the contents of what is being said is worthy of being heard by everyone. Yet the opposite is true.

If the subscribers of profanity knew how belittling it makes them, perhaps they would think twice about using the weak little four letter words that are suitable for people who write poems in public bathroom stalls. It doesn't take long to lose respect for people who cuss. If you have any self consideration for yourself and others around you, you can rise above and shed the foul-tongued image and seek a little respect in this civilized world. Anyone can use foul language, but it takes someone with special talent to convey thoughts and ideas in a more meaningful way.

Put God at top of list

To the editor:

As I am sitting here today, Good Friday, and thinking about the government offices being closed, this thought comes to mind. Why is it that we say we have to separate Church and State?

Supposedly we cannot have religious decorations put in our city parks, etc., nor can we have prayer in schools, but then we close in "HONOR" of religious holidays. Somehow this sounds very contradictory.

If it wasn't for Christ being born, we would not have Christmas. If it wasn't for Christ having died for our sins, we would not have Easter. If it wasn't for God, we would have nothing.

I think it is time that we stop and THINK about what is really important, and put GOD at the top of that list.

Taxpayers need answers

To the editor:

This is the season when many school districts select a manager (superintendent) to give guidance and direction to the school board for a better school system. Usually the same superintendent is selected with much acclaim, usually accompanied with a substantial increase in salary. In the business world, managers are rewarded for meeting set goals and improving the value of the organization. This apparently does not apply to our public school systems.

When the SAT scores do not improve and the drop-out rate remains the same, how effective is the manager of the school program? How innovative has he/she been to encourage the students to learn? What did he do to promote responsibility of the parents? Have the students' abilities REALLY been challenged? Is homework asking too much of the student or the teacher? The teacher's unions promote a 9 to 5 concept for their members; it is doubtful there are any successful teachers who adhere to such a concept.

It is reported that 20 percent of the adult population of Texas is illiterate, the highest illiteracy rate of any of the industrialized world. This indicates the entire educational system needs imaginative and innovative revamping, starting with the family structure. Teacher education programs need to focus on today's family and children, with practical methods as to how to cope with disinterested parents. More should be required of the students; students are capable of much more than is today being required. Schools should not be EASY, because learning itself is difficult. There is something wrong when a sophomore student from Thailand, who 8 years ago knew no English, in one of our universities said, "I like it here because it is easier than at home."

Would it be asking too much to insist the manager be required to up-grade the system before being given a raise? Each year the cost for students' education, in real dollars, keeps increasing with no visible improvement in the educational system.

It is time the taxpayer requires some answers.

Oh, to be so perfect ...

To the editor:

Being a PERFECT PERSON must be so heady that one can criticize the rest of GOD's creations with impunity.

Other than himself, Bill Weaver from Skellytown must find fault with us all. And did he just happen to think about who might wear the "pants" in President Clinton's family, or could he be writing from personal experience?

ELECT Frank Sparling

Constable-Precinct 4
"THE LOGICAL CHOICE"

I would like to thank all the people who supported me in the election for Constable. I would appreciate your continued support by voting on April 9th in the run-off election.
Thank You Again
Frank W. Sparling.

To all voters in Precinct 4:
★ On April 9, 1996, there will be a run-off election for Constable, Precinct 4 in Gray County. I would like to ask you to get out and vote for Frank Sparling. McLean needs a local man for the job.

Doyle Lee
McLean, Texas

I, Johnny Lee Belt, have given Frank Sparling my endorsement in his bid for Constable for Precinct 4. His availability in contrast to his opponent is more substantial.

Johnny Lee Belt

I have worked with Frank Sparling since 1983. I find Frank to be a very reliable person. Frank will work well with the youth of our community. We need our Constable "in" McLean. Frank has my support.

Constable Precinct 4
Joe Billingsley

To the voters of Pct. 4,
★ I support Frank Sparling for Constable in Pct. 4. It seems only logical to have a Constable residing in McLean for emergency calls and to back up any other law enforcement as necessary. Frank will be dedicated to his work and will make a good Constable.

County Commissioner
James Hefley

To the voters of Precinct 4, 5, 8 and 9, Gray County:
★ I am concerned about the Constables run off election to be held April 9th. The Constable's primary duty is to serve the Justice of Peace in their respective precinct. I believe it would place undue expenses on tax payers and county to pay mileage for a constable to live in Pampa. To serve the Justice Court and citizens of McLean - Alanreed area, the Constable should reside in McLean. I urge you to vote Frank Sparling for Constable.

Past Commissioner

Business

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Keeping your promises

It is a simple principle. It isn't rocket science, cutting-edge technology or even new. The principle is: Keep your promises, keep your customers.

Keeping your promises — that is, doing exactly as you say you're going to do — is good business practice and sound political advice as well. Perhaps some of our political leader's actions are rubbing off on our business community. There does appear to be a credibility gap between what some of our leaders say while running for election and what they do afterwards.

Out in my area of West Texas, we are fortunate enough to have two men of integrity serving us in Congress. Larry Combest and Mac Thornberry are keeping their promises as they serve our interests well. They are proof that in politics, honesty is still the best policy and promise keeping is important.

Why some businesses don't see the obvious benefits of keeping their promises is beyond me. Unlike voters, customers don't have to wait until the next election to vote. They can vote to put you out of business tomorrow simply by taking their business elsewhere today. In business, if you don't keep your promises, you lose your customers.

Unkept Promises

During a recent business trip to Las Vegas, I called ahead to confirm my hotel reservations. I was arriving late and I wanted to verify that I had a place to sleep. "Yes sir, we have you all set in a non-smoking room for the nights of the 21st and 22nd," was the promise.

When I arrived at nearly midnight on the 21st, I was greeted with this news: "I'm sorry, Mr. Taylor, we're out of non-smoking rooms tonight. In fact, I don't even have any rooms with a bed. All I've got left is a room with a pull-out sleeper sofa."

"But I called two days ago and guaranteed the room with my credit card," I complained.

"I'm sorry, sir, this is all I have. Do you want it or not?" It was a we're-not-going-to-keep-our-promise reply. I took the room, but made a mental note to cross the Stardust off my preferred places to stay in Vegas.

Earlier in the week it was the rental car company that didn't keep its promise. When I called they promised to pick me up "immediately." Two hours and two calls later I finally got a car. Take Enterprise in Dallas off the list of promise keepers.

Every day, we encounter unkept promises. "I'll call you right back," "You'll get my check today" and "I'll get right on it" are all famous last words.

Three Main Causes

I believe there are three main reasons businesses don't keep their promises. First, some don't care if they keep their word. Truth, integrity and doing exactly as you promised doesn't seem to matter to some folks. These businesses deserve the negative consequences they will receive as a result.

The second major cause is that we really aren't thinking about what we're saying when we make a promise. When someone says, "I'll call you right back," they don't stop to think that the other party may stay off the phone anticipating a quick call back. It is wise to think before you speak. If what you're about to say isn't what you mean, change what you say.

The third probable cause is that most businesses don't realize how very important the principle is. Competition is getting tougher and customers expect more. Promise keeping is a good way to hold market share.

Finally, remember that promises you make to yourself are as important as promises you make to others. Keeping all promises is a good step toward growth and prosperity.

Therassage professional completes workshop

Blaine Going, a registered massage therapist at Therassage Bodywork Professionals in Pampa, recently completed a workshop in neuromuscular therapy for the leg and pelvis.

This type of therapy is used to alleviate pain in the lower extremities and to increase flexibility and range of motion as well.

Going traveled to Lubbock to attend a 20-hour advanced training workshop in neuromuscular therapy as part of his post-graduate education and hands-on training. The certification program consists of a total of 300 hours.

This is the second of a four-part series in the neuromuscular therapy certification that Going has attended and completed.

His training in Lubbock focused on leg and pelvis pain and dysfunction. Some of the techniques involve myofascial, trigger point technique, range of motion, stretching, structural release and re-education of the muscles.

Neuromuscular therapy is a "specialized" practice of massage therapy which focuses on pain relief and injury rehabilitation. Having a different goal than that of the standard Swedish or relaxation massage, neuromuscular therapy deals with assessing the problem area with the modalities needed. This approach gives the client a much quicker result to alleviating the pain, Going said.

This training, along with his Swedish massage background, gives him a broader range of therapeutic skills to better benefit his client, Going said.

A&M accepting registration for rural land market conference

COLLEGE STATION — Registrations are now being accepted for the sixth annual "Outlook for Texas Rural Land Markets" to be held at Texas A&M University on May 13.

Sponsored by the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M, the conference will be held in new state-of-the-art $23.5 million College of Business Administration building.

Unlike years past, there will be no limit on the number of registrations for the 1996 conference.

"Rural Texas land is at a crossroads," says R. Malcolm Richards, Real Estate Center director and conference speaker. "This conference will explore the issues influencing Texas rural land markets. For example, land prices are at historically low levels despite steadily improving sales in 1993, 1994 and 1995. There are apprehensions concerning new federal farm legislation, environmental regulations, water rights and protection of endangered species habitats."

Jared E. Hazleton will set the stage with a look at "The State of the Economy." Hazleton is director of the Center for Business and Economic Analysis at Texas A&M. The "Changing Face of Agriculture" will be addressed by A. Gene Nelson, professor and head of the Department of Agricultural Economics at Texas A&M.

"Developments in Agricultural Policy" will be discussed by Edward G. Smith, also a professor of agricultural economics. Amy Purvis, assistant professor in the departments of agricultural economics and range land ecology and management, will cover "Emerging Issues in Endangered Species Policy." Gilliland will conclude the conference with his annual assessment of Texas land markets.

Advance registration is required. The cost is $60 per person, including parking and lunch. A full refund is possible for cancellations made before May 6. For more information or to register, call Margaret Benedict at 1-800-244-2144 or (409) 845-9691.

Area furniture company supports Students Against Driving Drunk

AMARILLO — Heath Furniture Company announced that it has joined with SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) and The Lane Company, a national furniture manufacturer, in an effort to encourage seniors at high schools throughout the Panhandle to celebrate graduation safely by not drinking or riding with a drinking driver.

Each senior signing the SADD "Commencement Commitment" pledge will be given a free Lane Keepsake Chest. These chests have been popular graduation gifts since 1929.

According to William F. Cullinane, executive director of SADD, Heath Furniture's participation in this program is evidence of a strong community commitment to caring and saving lives.

Cullinane says that SADD includes over 7 million students who have saved about 10 lives each day.

Douglas B. Lane, president of The Lane Company in Altavista, Va., said, "This joint sponsorship with furniture retailers, such as Heath Furniture, and SADD is the most exciting and sweeping change in the Keepsake Chest Program's 66-year history. Alcohol-related accidents are a major concern among parent and school authorities, especially during graduation festivities. We and Heath Furniture are anxious to join in an effort to call attention to the problem and, hopefully, save lives."

Seniors at school are urged to ask their SADD faculty advisor or senior class sponsor for details on the program.

Social services resource fair to be held on April 11

A resource fair of services will be conducted Thursday, April 11, from 5-6:30 p.m. in the Gray County Annex. Social service agencies and organizations have been invited to come and provide informal booths or tables with information about their agency, who they serve, how they serve, and opportunities for volunteers. Interested people are encouraged to attend this come-and-go activity. Volunteers or staff persons who work with individuals and families will benefit from the opportunity to learn about local services. Following the resource fair, a session on "Networking For Success" will be conducted by Donna Brauchi, Gray County Extension Agent. The session will also be at the Gray County Annex from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The networking session will help volunteers develop better skills of assessing clientele needs and accessing appropriate services. Knowing what services are available locally and working together to meet the needs of families and individuals will be emphasized. Both activities are sponsored by the Gray County Extension Family and Consumer Issues Committee. The programs are provided free of charge and are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin. For more information on the resource fair of services or the "Networking For Success" session, contact your Gray County Office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the Gray County Annex Building or call 669-8033.

REINVESTING YOUR PROFITS
If you sell your current home at a profit planning to use the money for investment, travel, business start-up costs, or any non-residential purposes, beware. Not only will you pay capital gains taxes on the profit, but you may find yourself in a higher tax bracket when you do.

Internal Revenue Service rules permit you to avoid capital gains taxes by reinvesting your profits in another principal residence.

If you choose a lower-priced home, you can offset the blow by making deductible improvements to the property within two years of the purchase.

Another "loophole" is the one time exemption for those 55 and older, up to $125,000.

Whatever your Real Estate needs, JoAnn Shackelford can help. Call 665-7591 or First Landmark Realty 665-0717 and ask for JoAnn. Ask me about my MLS Listing.

SOCCER

PAMPA — The Pampa Soccer Association will hold its general meeting Tuesday, April 9, at 7 p.m. in the Austin Elementary Cafeteria.

All PSA parents, coaches, referees and players in under 12 and older may vote. A proposed bylaw change is the addition of two more members-at-large.

Officers to be elected are president, secretary, general manager, public relations-scorekeeper and members-at-large.

BASKETBALL

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks are prepared to bring Derek Harper back to the team with a deal that would pay him about $3 million for two seasons, retire his number and create a spot for him on the coaching staff, according to a published report Saturday.

Two NBA sources told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Friday that the Mavericks would have Harper's No. 12 jersey retired as the coaching staff position became available.

Harper is scheduled to be a free agent after this season with the New York Knicks. He spent his first 11 seasons with the Mavericks after being the team's first-round draft choice in 1983.

He said recently he would like to end his career in Dallas and has privately told friends he desperately wants to help the Mavericks get back on track, according to the newspaper.

AUTO RACING

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — At least two teams will play both sides of the Indy-car wars next month.

While most Championship Auto Racing Teams will skip the May 26 Indianapolis 500, at least two have decided to send entries and drivers to both the Indianapolis race and CART's U.S. 500 at Brooklyn, Mich.

Mike Groff, a driver for Walker Racing, said Friday he will enter the Indy 500. Also, The Indianapolis Star reported Saturday that Davy Jones plans to run at Indianapolis for car owner Rick Galles.

Galles will have Jones in Indianapolis and rookie Eddie Lawson in the U.S. 500. Walker will run Groff at Indianapolis and Robby Gordon at Michigan.

"I've been at Indy before, but this is the best opportunity that I've had," Groff said. "To say the least, I'm excited. We're going to be swinging as hard as we can to bring home a win."

A feud between Indianapolis Motor Speedway president Tony George and CART led to the latter's scheduling of the U.S. 500 on the same day. CART scheduled the Michigan race after the speedway announced that up to 25 spots in the 33-car Indy 500 field would be reserved for regulars in George's fledgling Indy Racing League.

The official entry list for the Indy 500 won't be made public until later this week.

Galles, who said last December he would likely compete at Indy, said his primary sponsor, Kokomo, Ind.-based Delco Electronics, didn't demand he field an entry at Indy.

Hospice of the Panhandle schedules annual golf scramble at Hidden Hills

PAMPA — Tee off for Hospice of the Panhandle's sixth annual Golf Scramble is set for 9 a.m., Saturday, May 4, at Hidden Hills Golf Course, north of Pampa.

Proceeds from this four-player, 18-hole scramble benefit Hospice of the Panhandle, a not-for-profit organization that provides care for terminally ill patients and support for their families throughout nine counties of the northeastern Texas Panhandle.

The event features prizes in first, second, third, and fourth in all flights, said David Teichman, Hidden Hills golf pro. Prizes are also planned for longest drive, closest to the hole and high score categories.

Registration opens at 8 a.m. on May 4. An entry fee of $35 includes green fees, use of a golf cart, and refreshments, said

Sherry McCavit, Hospice of the Panhandle's executive director. During the morning registration period, free doughnuts, juice, and coffee will be served. At lunch, Hospice of the Panhandle volunteers will serve free sandwiches, chips, desserts, and soft drinks.

Registrations to play in the Scramble are now being accepted. To register, or for more information, call David Teichman at Hidden Hills Golf Course at (806) 665-6677.

In 1995, more than $3,700 was raised. These funds were used to provide care to all appropriate persons, said McCavit. Patients and their families are never billed for Hospice of the Panhandle's services, she added.

Hospice of the Panhandle receives funding from two annual events — the Golf Scramble and the Tree of Love, from memorials and donations, and from reimbursements from Medicare, Medicaid, and private insurance, she explained. Possibility of reimbursement is never considered when patients are referred to Hospice of the Panhandle for care, she said.

In 1995, hospice of the Panhandle served 173 persons with limited life expectancies. An average of $8,714 per month was spent to care for needy patients. More than 750 patients and their families have received care from Hospice of the Panhandle since it began in 1988. The organization's service area now includes Gray, Hutchinson, Carson, Collingsworth, Donley, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Roberts and Wheeler counties.

Indians end losing skid

CLEVELAND (AP) — Charles Nagy, the forgotten man in Cleveland's big-name rotation, pitched the Indians out of their season-opening skid Saturday as they defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3.

The Indians, who had scored just one run in each of their first three losses, broke out of the slump almost in spite of themselves. They benefited from six walks, three errors, a wild pitch and a passed ball, and scored five runs despite going 1-for-12 with runners in scoring position. Toronto's three-game winning streak ended.

Nagy (1-0) gave up one run and six hits in six innings, getting the Indians' first win after Dennis Martinez, Jack McDowell and Orel Hershiser all failed.

PHS girls take third in district golf standings

DUMAS — Pampa High girls' golf team shot a 377 Friday to finish third overall in the final round of the District 1-4A Tournament.

Borger shot 341 to win the district title while Hereford was second at 352.

Jamie McInturff of Dumas was medalist with a 78 Saturday and 330 for the four rounds. Sarah Moore of Borger was second at 79 Saturday and 336 overall.

Pampa's Melissa Gindorf was eighth in the medalist race after shooting a 91 Saturday for a total 372 score.

The golfers once again had to battle cold temperatures.

"The girls never had a decent day for district play. The weather was miserable again yesterday (Friday), but these girls were a bunch of troopers. They never once complained about it," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough.

The team's only senior, Melissa Randall, missed the last two district rounds after being struck on the finger with a golf ball.

"It was one of those freak accidents, but she just wasn't able to grip a golf club," McCullough said.

With a more experienced team next season, McCullough looks for the Lady Harvesters to make a run at the district championship.

"We're going to be juniors and seniors next year and our goal is to win district. We should be right up there in the 340's and 350's," he said. "They're all looking forward to next year."

Cubs rip Dodgers

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Bullinger allowed five hits over eight innings and had two RBIs Friday as the Chicago Cubs scored seven unearned runs and beat Los Angeles 11-1, sending the wind-whipped Dodgers to their fourth straight loss.

Bullinger (1-0) walked three and matched a career-high with eight strikeouts before giving way to Mike Perez in the ninth.

Meanwhile, Mark Grace continued his hot hitting at cold Wrigley Field, going 3-for-3 with two walks and two RBIs. He is now 10-for-17 this season.

Game-time temperature on a sunny day was 36 degrees with a biting wind from the northeast at 13 to 20 mph. On Thursday the team played in snow and sleet with a 12-degree wind chill.

Chicago, which finished with 16 hits, scored four unearned runs after two were out in the fourth against Tom Candiotti (0-1) with Bullinger's double the key.

Scots win girls' soccer title

PFLUGERVILLE, Texas (AP) — Dallas Highland Park's Meredith Florance and Elizabeth Ball each scored a goal in the Scots 2-0 University Interscholastic League State girls soccer finals Saturday.

Florance, the championship game most valuable player, scored the Scots' first goals two minutes into the game. The junior forward took a Ball pass and slipped it past Westlake goalie Elizabeth Randolph.

Highland Park (24-4) did not score again until Ball's runaway goal with two minutes left in the game. In between Westlake (21-2-2) assaulted the Scots' goal with the 15-mph winds and against it, but couldn't follow through.

"We were nervous at the half. (Westlake) played well. We could only imagine what it would do with the wind," said Highland Park goalkeeper Celeste Rausch, who had three saves Saturday. "We knew we had to step it up. They looked like they wanted it more."

Westlake, who defeated defending champion Humble Kingwood 1-0 in Friday's semifinal, played in its first soccer championship game, but is not void of championship experience. The soccer team had three from the Chaparrals' 1996 championship team as well as Randolph, who played in her fifth UIL championship game Saturday.

Gays in military lose court case

RICHMOND (AP) — Openly gay individuals can be banned from serving in the military, judges found in the first federal appeals court ruling on a challenge to the Clinton administration's "don't ask, don't tell" policy.

In upholding the policy, the court ruled 9-4 Friday against former Lt. Paul Thomasson, who was discharged from the Navy last June after giving a letter to his commander stating, "I am gay." Thomasson, who worked for the admiral administering the "don't ask, don't tell" policy, said the dismissal violated his constitutional right to free speech.

The court rejected that argument, and said elected leaders — not the judiciary — must set military policy.

"It was appropriate for Congress to believe that a military force should be as free as possible of sexual attachments and pressures as it prepared to do battle," wrote Chief Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III.

Clinton's policy explained how to implement 1993 legislation that turned into law the military's longstanding policy to ban service members that show homosexual conduct, try to marry people of the same sex or even state that they are homosexual.

Five killed as rain, snow usher in Easter weekend

DALLAS (AP) — Record snowfalls along with sleet and heavy rains that gave the start of Easter weekend a Christmas-like chill have caused five deaths on Texas highways.

Eighteen inches of snow fell in Sweetwater Friday as the all-time 24-hour snowfall record for Abilene was broken with 9.3 inches. The previous record of 8.0 inches was set on Jan. 15-16, 1919 and on Feb. 12, 1890.

The low temperature record at Brownsville in South Texas was broken Saturday with 45 degrees. The previous record low for Saturday's date was 47 degrees in 1974, the National Weather Service said.

Authorities said five people died when their automobiles slid out of control on the sleet, snow and rain triggered by a Canadian cold front's collision with warm, moist Gulf air and an upper-level disturbance.

Snow and sleet in North Texas was the first for the Dallas-Fort Worth area in April since 1938, said Jim Stefkovich, a weather service meteorologist in Fort Worth said.

The amount of snow even surprised forecasters.

"This is clearly the most significant event we've had this late in the season," said Mike Young, another weather service meteorologist.

"This is quite unusual to see this kind of snow event this late in the season," Patrick Eynon of the private forecasting service WeatherData said. "Even this time of the year, it's not strange to see temperatures yo-yo. But this is taking it to a bit of an extreme."

During the hazardous driving conditions reported in 29 counties in northwest Texas Friday, two separate wrecks killed five motorists.

Law officers said four people died about 4:30 p.m. Friday when two cars slid into each other about two miles east of Bridgeport on U.S. 380.

Two of the dead were identified by Precinct 4 Peace Justice Clay Poyner as Fred and Gloria Martinez of Bridgeport. A Dallas man and a woman also died, but they had not yet been identified.

An 8-year-old girl in one of the vehicles was taken to a Decatur hospital.

In a separate wreck, 34-year-old Ira Wesley Stoores Jr. of Cleburne died late Friday when the car in which he was riding skidded on Interstate 35W about four miles south of Burleson and collided with a pickup, said Department of Public Safety trooper David Wisniewski.

The rains, which began Thursday, were a relief for farmers and ranchers.

"The drought across West Texas screeches to a halt," read a statement Friday from the weather service office in San Angelo.

The weather service said Wichita Falls recorded the coldest high temperature ever for Friday. The reading of 49 degrees was the lowest maximum for April 5 since records began in 1897.

Up to four inches of snow fell Friday in the foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains, with visibility near zero from winds of 30 to 40 mph through the mountain passes.

Hail up to golfball-size fell Friday in the Houston-Galveston area and Hill and Navarro counties. Hail up to 1.75 inches in diameter covered the ground in Waller County, while marble-sized hail drifted six inches deep in McLennan County, near Leroy.

COMMON BREAD, COMMON CUP

Traditions vary among local congregations

By LORALEE COOLEY
Guest writer

Today is Easter. It is the culmination of what Christians call Holy Week, which began on Palm Sunday, celebrating Jesus' entry into Jerusalem, riding on a donkey.

Holy Week continued on Maundy Thursday when Jesus and the twelve disciples celebrated the Passover meal.

Immediately following this meal, Jesus was betrayed by Judas, brought to trial before the Roman procurator Pontius Pilate and crucified on Friday, now called Good Friday.

The final event is Easter, the Day of Resurrection, when the gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John all tell of Jesus rising from the dead.

Easter falls on the first Sunday of the month when many congregations observe the Lord's Supper, also known as communion, or Eucharist. This is the special meal Jesus instituted on Maundy Thursday at the Passover Seder which commemorates the Jews liberation from Egyptian slavery.

In 1996, the two great festivals of Jewish Passover and Christian Holy Week come at the same time. Holy Week began March 31 and continues through today. Passover began at sundown last Wednesday and continues through sundown next Wednesday.

The Rev. I.L. Patrick, pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church, is clear in his understanding of the connection between the Lord's Supper - as his congregation calls it - and the Passover.

"We go all the way back to Exodus and come up to the point where we are today. It was that night in Egypt. That was the first Passover. And I teach on it every first Sunday night of the month when we take the Lord's Supper, about the significance of the blood that served as a covering ... when they put the blood over the door post and the death angel saw the blood from the lamb that was without spot or blemish, he passed over those houses where they were the people of God with the sign of the blood," he said.

Another connection to the ancient sacrifices of the Hebrews after the time of the Exodus, was made by Betty Henderson, an elder of First Presbyterian, "You think about the blood when they were killing the animals ... and the priest had to do the sacrifices, and the priest had to represent the people. There is no longer the old Mosaic law of animal sacrifice, when forgiveness of sins was never finished. For now there is a new covenant with Jesus' blood. By this sign, God signifies the bestowal of salvation upon His people, sealed and paid for by the blood of Christ."

Bishop Roger Rounly of the Pampa Ward of the Church of Latter-day Saints, explains they understand "the Jewish Passover foreshadowed and was symbolic of the sacrifice of the Savior, whose death was the atonement for all people. The Mosaic law was to prepare people for the Savior."

Area congregations observe this celebration in different ways. Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians call it either the Lord's Supper or communion. The Rev. Scott Raef of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, says for Catholics, it is always called the Eucharist, a Greek word for thanksgiving. This term, he explained, comes from a New Testament Greek word eucharista, which was a translation of the Hebrew word for blessing berakah.

The Eucharist, for Roman Catholics and Episcopalians is a sacrament. For Mormons, the terms is used for the observance itself. The sacrament meeting is the most important service of the LDS church and the sacrament is taken every Sunday during that meeting, Rounly said.

"This always comes at the first of the service. We call the whole service the sacrament meeting because everything starts with our observance. We have an opening hymn, announcements, then there is a hymn for the sacrament. There is a blessing of the bread and it is passed to the congregation. Then there is a blessing of the water - which is what we use - and that, too, is passed to the congregation," said church member Lisa Smith.

Rounly tells the elements of bread and water are provided by men of the church, starting as young as age 12. They bring the bread from home - whatever happens to be available - and prepare the elements before the service. Afterwards, they clear everything away.

Raef describes the order of the Mass.

"When we come together, we place ourselves in the presence of God. Before we can come to the table, we ask that we be forgiven and we pray for one another. Then we go to the liturgy of the word, which consists of usually an Old Testament reading, a Psalm, a New Testament reading and a reading from the gospel. Then there is a homily or sermon. After that, there is the confession of faith, the creed. Next, we have petitions for the world, for the local community, for the sick, for the dead and for the church. This signals the end of the liturgy of the word and the beginning of the liturgy of the eucharist.

"Now comes the time when the gifts are brought up. The collection of the monies which the people have given, as well as the bread and the wine, are brought up in procession. Then ... begins the Eucharistic prayer, the high point of the mass. And that Eucharistic prayer includes praise, thanksgiving, calling down of the Holy Spirit, the words of institution, 'On the night before Jesus was betrayed, he took bread ...' And at the end, we, as the celebrants, hold up the gifts and we say the doxology and every body gives their assent to what we are doing.

"Then begins what really is the preparation to come forward and receive communion. We pray the 'Our Father' together, we ask again for God's forgiveness and then we exchange the sign of peace with one another, which goes back to the scripture that says that before you come to the altar, if you are not reconciled with someone, you should leave your gifts, go be reconciled and return, forgiven to the table. Then there is the breaking of the bread and pouring of the wine. It is important that all can see this, that from this one bread, from this one cup, we pour and break and distribute.

"Then the people come forward and they take the bread either on the tongue or in their hands, and sip from the cup," Raef explained.

Dr. Edwin Cooley, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, describes ways the Lord's Supper can be celebrated in his church.

"We observe it on the first Sunday of each month and on many special events, as well. We observed it by the intinction method on Maundy Thursday and for Easter - partly because it is the first Sunday of April - we will celebrate it again. This time, we will serve the elements to people in the pews," he said.

The intinction method, Cooley explained, means everyone who wishes to participate comes forward.

"I stand with the plate of bread, and an elder on either side of me holds a cup. One of the cups contains wine; the other contains grape juice," he said.

"Each person takes a piece of bread, as I say, 'The body of Christ, broken for you.' They then take their piece of bread and dip it into one of the cups, as that elder says, 'The blood of Christ shed for you.' They immediately consume this and return to their pews," Cooley said.

For Patrick and Raef, unleavened bread is always used. For Rounly, the type of bread is not an issue.

Cooley said Presbyterians use either depending on the fashion in which the Lord's Supper is to be celebrated.

Wine or grape juice is another matter. For the more liturgical churches, wine has historically been used. Most evangelical or Pentecostal churches prefer grape juice.

Presbyterians stand somewhere in between.

Why do some churches, such as Catholic, Lutheran, Episcopal and Methodist, have congregants come forward, and others such as Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Church of Christ, serve the people in the pews?

Cooley explained different customs relate to different interpretations of the priesthood. When the people come forward to be served in by the priest, it is much like in the days of the Hebrews, when the priest was the intercessor between man and God. When the people are served in their seats, it is an embodiment of the New Testament doctrine of the "priesthood of the believer."

Patrick described the practice of communion at Macedonia.

"The deaconesses prepare the bread. They make it out of flour and water, no baking powder, no salt. They roll it so thin that they don't have to bake it, it'll just dry itself. Then they'll get the glasses and the communion trays all ready. They'll put the bread on the silver plate. They put all of that on the communion table, and they'll cover it up. And they leave it there. There's a little white cloth on the bottom and a white cloth on top. They don't pour the wine; I do that. We have the little bread..." and then I skip to where it says, "But let a man examine himself a so let him eat of this bread and drink of this cup, for he who eats and drinks in an unworthy manner, eats and drinks judgment to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." And I'll try to explain to the congregation that we're not supposed to be thinking of anything but the meaning of the death of Jesus Christ and what that mean.

"Then we'll have a moment of silent prayer, and then the brothers will remove the cloth and I'll have a little teaching period. Then I had the bread to one brother, and the wine to another brother. They'll go down together and pass the bread first to one member on the front seat and they'll pass it on around, and then the wine, until we get all the people in the congregation served. Then they bring it all back up to me, when I serve them like Jesus did the disciples.

"Then I go to Luke 22. That's the scripture that tells the whole story about how Jesus and his disciples prepared to observe the Passover. After I finish that scripture, we sing another song. Then we go on, where it says, 'That same night, he took bread and when he blessed it, he gave it to his disciples saying, 'Take eat.' And we all eat together. 'For this is my body that was given for you.' Also the cup in like manner, 'This blood is the New Testament in my blood.' And we all drink together. Then we have another prayer.

"At the end, we all form a circle. And we thank God that our circle has not been broken. And the Bible says they sang a hymn. We don't know what kind of hymn they sang, but we know the kind of agony and suffering that Jesus was going through, as he went to the garden of Gethsemane that night. And we might sing a hymn like 'I Come to the Garden Alone.'

The meaning of the service to many of those interviewed indicates they find communion to be an integral part of their spiritual life.

"Communion is a remembrance of God's covenant, and a pledge on our part to obedience. It is a sign of the power and the presence of God. And through this sacrament, God renews the believers as 'people of God.' As we participate, we remember the death of Christ, and his sacrifice as the atonement for sins," said Henderson.

Garden center features bromeliads

"The Bromeliad: A Fascinating Flora" is presented by the Amarillo Garden Center, Inc. The exhibition runs April 2 through May 5. The exhibition is in the gallery at the Garden Center located at 1400 Streit Drive (in the medical center), Amarillo. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Live specimens are courtesy of Perry Ladd of Ladd Farms. Specimens are available for sale.

With orchids as their daily companions in nature, over 1800 species of bromeliads are at home in the tree tops of the rain forests, on the terrestrial floors of the jungle, along the ravines and crags of mountains, and in the xeric habitat of the desert. Bromeliads can be found in Florida and the Southwestern United States, through Mexico and Central America down to Brazil, Columbia, Venezuela, Argentina, Chile, and the West Indies.

Most members of the family are epiphytic, that is, "an air plant that scarcely roots but grows upon other plants, without being parasitic."

Wolf Hybrids Don't Easily Become One Of The Family

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband's sister told me she bought a wolf-dog puppy from a couple she knows who raises them. The pup is about 3 months old and is 75 percent wolf.

I have expressed my concerns to her about the safety of keeping such an animal as a pet. She has two sons who are 13 and 15.

She says a lot of people keep wolf-dogs as pets in her state (Arkansas), and there doesn't seem to be any problem with them.

She is open to any information I can find for her on the subject, and she's told her sons that if there is any problem with the animals, she will get rid of the puppy.

That's fine, but I'd hate to have one of her children attacked and injured.

I have children her sons' ages, and have told her they are not allowed to go near this animal. She's coming to visit us next summer and plans to bring her wolf-dog along.

Abby, do you have any information or advice on these wolf-dogs? Thanks for any help you can give me.

WORRIED IN VISALIA, CALIF.

DEAR WORRIED: Although owners may argue that some wolf-dog hybrids are less aggressive than some breeds of dogs, the experts are nearly unanimous that owning a pure wolf or a hybrid is a bad idea. After reading your letter, I located an article by Jack Hope in the June 1994 issue of Smithsonian magazine. It states that as most wolves and wolf hybrids approach sexual maturity (at about 2 years of age), the vast majority begin behaving as the pack-hunting predators their wild genes have predisposed them to be.

Abigail Van Buren

"As all owners agree, the animals treat humans as other wolves. But, genetically programmed for the ongoing struggle with pack mates for food and leadership, they have no compunctions about challenging the dominant householder — usually the male — with warning growls and a flurry of bites (usually not deep bites) for his steak dinner or easy chair, or even for the attentions of his spouse.

"How to curb unwanted behavior is a subject of debate. When only swatted or yelled at, the wolves may not turn tail but growl and bite instead. Disciplined with a severe beating, they'll retreat — but, wolflike, will attempt the same challenge an hour or a day later — in an endless contest for dominance.

"Banished to the back yard, the wolves or wolf hybrids usually break free of all but the sturdiest chains or enclosures. Without food, confused, they may prowl the neighborhood attacking cats, rabbits, goats, dogs, even horses, all of which they see as prey. Their predatory instincts can also be triggered by humans, especially if those humans happen to be small or infirm, or if they flee or emit a frightened sound.

"Since 1986, nine children in the United States, from toddlers to a 12-year-old, have been killed (and in one case, partially eaten) by wolf and wolf-dog pets. Many more people, both children and adults, have been maimed. While relatively few of these animals actually kill, most of the former owners interviewed for this article report having been bitten."

Melissa Joan Hart Has Magic Touch In 'Sabrina'

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

When other girls went to Brownies, Melissa Joan Hart went to auditions, filmed TV commercials and landed stage roles alongside William Hurt and Martin Sheen.

A few years later, when she got the title role in Sabrina the Teenage Witch, Hart found much to identify with: a youngster trying to fit in but feeling somehow ... different.

"I had a lot of frustration when I was a teen-ager," says Hart, who technically is still a teen-ager for three more weeks, but you know what she means.

"Everyone else was so cool and knew what to wear," she says, recalling life as an outsider in the Long Island town of Sayville. "I just had no clue. I didn't know what was wrong with me. I think a lot of that was also true of Sabrina."

Based on the Archie Comics' character, this light-hearted and (literally) charming Showtime film finds Sabrina spending a year with her eccentric aunts in the fictional town of Riverdale. There she discovers her teen powers as a witch as she tries to make new friends at a new high school.

Sabrina may be back this fall as a weekly series on the ABC schedule.

It won't be Hart's first series, of course. For four years, she played the title character — a precocious teen — in Nickelodeon's Clarissa Explains It All (it's still seen in repeats every weekday).

As for her stage appearances, she was in The Crucible on Broadway with Sheen and in a Circle Repertory production of Beside Herself with Hurt.

No wonder Hart can play teens that other teens (and their parents) love: Turned out for her interview in a peasant dress and sweater, she is pretty and perky, says "cool" a lot, and has a dusting of freckles across her nose.

All the better, my dear, that she is playing a menace to society on her next project, a TV movie called Twisted Desire, also starring Daniel Baldwin, that airs on NBC in May.

"It's my first evil role," she says with satisfaction. "I start out as a sweet, innocent teen-ager like I usually play, and then my boyfriend breaks up with me. I get another boyfriend, but my parents don't want us to be together. So we plot to kill them."

Hart seems exhilarated by this new twist in her career. After all, she's spent too many teen role-model.

"Everyone thinks they know you from TV," she notes, "and then everyone's so shocked to learn that I have a belly ring and eight earrings."

Which, now that she mentions it, she sure does. Yet, make no mistake, even with a bit of discreet body jewelry, Hart is no Courtney Love.

"But people still criticize and judge you," Hart says, a bit bemused. "Someone called me 'Metallica'!"

Maybe it's just another part of growing up, which currently finds her torn between a number of paths — most notably school and career.

Her enrollment at New York University has been on-again, off-again the past two years.

Much of that absence has been due to work. But not all.

"I was having a tough time at school," she admits. "I was overwhelmed. I couldn't talk in class at all. I was just a mess. I Still, college is part of her plans. "I'm still doing a lot of exploring, kind of figuring myself out," she says, and thinks back to those days when, a bit lonely, she was starting the process. "I'm glad I didn't conform then. If I had known how to, I probably would have. But I didn't."

Ag briefs

AUSTIN — Crosbyton resident Lance D. Morris was elected recently to serve a three-year term on the Farm Credit Bank of Texas Retirement Committee.

The seven-member committee provides guidance on retirement and related benefit issues for nearly 1,400 Farm Credit System employees and retirees in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico and Texas.

Morris is the mayor of Crosbyton and a partner in several farming operations in Dickens, Floyd and Crosby counties. He also is a director on the board of Rolling Plains Production Credit Association (PCA) based in Stamford.

The PCA makes short- and intermediate-term operating loans to farmers and ranchers in 38 counties. Morris is one of two PCA representatives on the committee.

With nearly $4.3 billion in assets and $3.8 billion in loans outstanding to farmers and ranchers across Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico and Texas, the Farm Credit Bank of Texas and its affiliated associations comprise the largest agricultural lending network in the five-state region.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — As many as 20 percent of grain handlers who fail to wear protective masks will develop asthma, bronchitis or some other breathing disorder, University of Iowa researchers conclude.

"From our observations, the riskiest situations are at country elevators where industrial hygiene seems to be the worst," said Dr. David Schwartz, an associate professor in the College of Medicine.

He said farmers generally do not have enough exposure to grain dust for it to be a health problem, and workers at grain mills generally already wear masks.

"Wearing a simple paper dust mask is an excellent means of respiratory protection," he said.

The research team examined 200 grain handlers employed at elevators and grain mills.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tight supplies of apples, pears and strawberries are expected to keep grower prices for fruits and nuts above last year's levels, the Agriculture Department says.

Higher retail prices for fresh apples, grapefruit, lemons and grapes were a factor in the January rise in the Consumer Price Index. Consumer prices may be nudged up again because of the just-ended harsh winter.

"It is still too early ... to detect the damage to the new 1996 noncitrus crops," USDA said. "Growers are concerned about lower fruit sets and lighter crops in 1996."

Last year's noncitrus crop was worth $6.6 billion, up 6 percent from 1994. Apple production dropped 4 percent, which, coupled with strong domestic and export demand, pushed grower prices 29 percent higher.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tariff-rate quota for imports of raw-cane sugar has been raised by 200,000 metric tons.

The Agriculture Department said the increase will push the quota for the 12 months ending Sept. 30 to 2.017 million metric tons.

Tight grain supplies push up exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farm exports hit a record $5.5 billion in January as tight grain supplies pushed up prices sharply.

The value of farm exports was 3 percent higher than a month earlier and up 24 percent compared with January 1995, the Agriculture Department said. Agricultural imports rose 7 percent over December, to $2.7 billion, leaving the nation's farm trade surplus at $2.8 billion.

The Market Forecaster
By George Kleinman

WHEAT - (BULL)

Outlook: Crop worries are resurfacing. The drought may be back in Texas and Oklahoma — one good rain doesn't make a crop. Plus, I'm now hearing reports of problems in areas not hit by the drought.

Winterkill damage to the new soft red winter crop could be higher than originally thought. This crop is grown in Missouri and Southern Illinois. Some farmers are telling me their crop, just coming out of dormancy, isn't greening.

This winterkill is funny stuff. The crop may be killed by bitter temps and lack of snow cover, but the effects may not be seen for weeks or months. They're being seen now. Continuing crop problems, in conjunction with a very strong new crop export line-up and tight supplies, prompts us to replace the bull back into the wheat box.

Strategy: Hedgers: Recent strength in cash and futures points out the advantages of our hedging approach. As mentioned in past issues, when we perceive the trend of the market to be up, or even when it's uncertain, put options are a better way to go than short futures, hedge to arrives or other methods of cash forward contracting.

The reason has to do with no limits on 75 percent upside potential. Yet a floor price is still assured should the market break. Our program is now 75 percent complete with purchases of July Chicago 420, 430 and 450 puts for 19 cents. The puts lock in better than $4 wheat on 3/4 of anticipated production, but if new crop wheat eventually has a 5 in front of it, the put user will reap the bulk of these gains.

Traders: Last week, we bought July Chicago wheat at $4.62 1/4. We used the buy stop method, which takes advantage of market momentum. Risk to $4.47. The ultimate objective in $5 or above.

CORN - (BULL)

Outlook: The rationing job is not being accomplished. Exports running at an average pace of 50 million bushels per week just won't do it. Many livestock producers have prepared themselves for high corn prices and haven't cut back much. The poultry industry is the one exception. They have cut production, but from record high levels.

My sense is [to be confirmed on the Hogs and Pigs Report] that pork production has actually increased. This is because forward futures contracts offer nice profitability, even with current corn prices. Bottom line, at current usage rates the projected ending supply looks to be intolerably tight. I look for old crop prices to move higher yet to ration this unsustainable level of demand. New crop prices, on the other hand, will totally be a function of weather.

Strategy: Hedgers: Old crop: Our current hedging advice encompasses the ownership of May 360 calls, purchased for approximately 10¢/bushel. We've also previously collected over 40 cents per bushel in paper profits. This strategy of paper ownership involves the sale of cash corn with option purchases as a replacement. With options you can limit your risk to the cost of the options, something you cannot do with corn in storage. Upside price potential remains intact.

New crop: Last week, you were able to sell 25 percent of anticipated production above $3.15 in December futures. Add an additional 25 percent above $3.25.

Traders: We still own July futures at an adjusted price [includes March profits] of $3.30 per bushel. Raise the stop to $3.66. The objective remains $4.

CATTLE - (BULL)

Outlook: Readers of this column know I've recently been bullish cattle. The reasons have to do with the aggressive level of feedlot marketings over the past month. Heavy marketings lead to a leaner, meaner inventory situation. Since demand should actually improve as we enter the barbecue season, the cattle feeder is now in a much better bargaining position.

The one diversion here is the "Mad Cow" problem. Thus far, there's no indication the publicity will hurt domestic demand. Let's hope it doesn't. Assuming this to be the case, it appears to me the packer will just have to pay up for what should be a smaller supply of market ready cattle during April. Look for futures prices to reach the upper sixties by the end of the month.

Strategy: Hedgers: Put options remain our preferred hedging tool in bull markets. They offer downside price protection — it may be needed but we're hoping not. They'll never limit upside potential. We currently own the June 64 puts and August 63 puts for longer term protection.

Cow/calf operators: We've been using at the money put options, and in some cases short futures, for downside price protection in feeders. While a stronger fat cattle market will help stabilize feeder prices, we still look for higher feed prices longer term so insurance is recommended. Look to expand protection, but only on good rallies.

Traders: Last week, you should have been able to buy June futures at our recommended entry price — under 6350. Risk to 6207 for a profit objective of 6697. There is risk in this trade, but if achieved, it would result in a profit of about $1300 per contract.

Entries wanted in grain sorghum contest

This year marks the 12th year for the Grain Sorghum Yield and Management Contest which is sponsored by the National Grain Sorghum Producers.

Each year, growers from across the United States compete to see who can produce the best sorghum yield for their county and state. State first-place winners go on to compete for national honors.

In the sorghum contest, yields are compared to the county's five-year average yield as estimated by the National Agricultural Statistical Service. The contestant's score is the number of bushels the contest plot produced over that average.

The contest is divided into four divisions: dryland conventional tillage, irrigated conventional tillage, dryland no-till and irrigated no-till. Based on scores, state and national winners are named in first, second and third places in each division.

The only change in this year's contest is that high-tannin, bird resistant sorghum seed varieties will no longer be accepted as entries in the contest. Producers who are uncertain about the tannin content of their seed can contact their local seed dealer for more information.

Producers may enter as many contest plots as they wish. A $35 entry fee must accompany each entry. Contestants must be a member of the association; however, membership dues may be sent in with the entry.

Entry forms are available from the National Grain Sorghum Producers office. Producers who are interested in entering the contest can call the office at (806) 298-4501 or write P.O. Box 530, Abernathy TX 79311.

In other matters, the National Grain Sorghum Producers board of directors elected officers during its meeting prior to the Sorghum Conference held in San Antonio in February.

Heading up the slate of new officers is Bill Kubecka of Palacios, Texas. Kubecka replaces outgoing president Gary Bright of Melrose, N.M., who will serve as the immediate past president.

The other new officers for 1996-97 are Leo Bindel of Sabetha, Kan., vice president for legislation and service; Jack Cobb of Plains, Texas, vice president for foreign market development; Bernie Hynes of Holstein, Neb., vice president for domestic market development; Ken Rose of Keyes, Okla., vice president for research and education; and Kenny Tevis of Hugessville, Mo., secretary-treasurer.

The National Grain Sorghum Producers is a membership association for U.S. grain sorghum producers. Its purpose is to promote the profitability of sorghum production through legislative and regulatory representation, research, education and market development.

TCPB funding research on drought, soil studies

DIMITT — Drought and heat stress, poor soil fertility and inefficient irrigation can quickly increase production costs for Texas corn producers. But new corn production research hopefully will allow growers to put some of that lost money back in their pockets.

The Texas Corn Producers Board (TCPB) has approved more than $35,000 in drought tolerance, soil fertility and limited irrigation studies which should benefit High Plains growers, says Jerry Don Glover, TCPB member and interim executive director.

The research is part of some $190,000 in corn production, insect and disease research approved by TCPB for 1996. "And TCPB is confident this production-oriented research will help growers improve their corn crop management in the long run," says Glover.

In drought-related studies, Dr. Henry Nguyen, professor of plant genetics and breeding at Texas Tech University, hopes to develop corn hybrids with improved drought and heat stress tolerance.

Working in conjunction with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock, his continuing program evaluates large numbers of corn lines and hybrids in field experiments. Under full irrigation conditions, he will examine plants for pre and post flowering drought stress this summer as in years past.

He will also collect data on plant silking and leafing rates, plant height, kernel weight and grain yields. Additional greenhouse studies will look at plant traits related to drought stress.

In a soil fertility study, Dr. Bob Glodt, a research consultant with Agri-Search Inc. in Plainview, looks to determine if phosphorus fertilization can be reduced or eliminated in soils with high residual phosphorus carryover without reduction of yields.

Glodt will also determine at what level yield reductions occur when phosphorus is added to soils with a high residual. Banding application tests are also part of his program. They are to determine if banding the fertilizer over high residual soil will increase yields. He will study the effects of iron on corn yields and other fertility related measures.

A second year study of irrigation on short and full season corns is under way at the Texas A&M research farm in Etter. Dr. Brent Bean, Extension agronomist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Amarillo, says short season hybrids with no more than 105-day maturity have shown promise in limited irrigation situations. The research will answer additional questions about the feasibility of using shorter season corns.

For more information on corn production and other checkoff-funded research, contact TCPB at 218 E. Bedford, Dimmitt, Texas 79027, or call 800-647-CORN.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

At this time of the year, most religious people celebrate the events leading up to and including the resurrection of Christ from the dead. The observance of "Easter" is purely a man-made observance having no scriptural basis whatsoever. Like the human traditional observance of "Christmas" is an effort to celebrate the birth of Christ, so "Easter" is an effort to celebrate His resurrection. However, if God had desired and intended man to celebrate either Jesus' birth or His resurrection on a certain day of the year, I feel certain he would have given us the specific instructions in His word for each observance. Since He has not given such instruction then we must conclude that such things are without divine authorization.

The scriptures very boldly affirm that Jesus lived, died, was buried and raised from the dead the third day (Jn. 2:19-22; I Cor. 15:1-3). The entire hope of salvation depends upon the deity of Jesus Christ and His complete and absolute authority (Jn. 20:30-31; Heb. 1:1-9; 5:5-10; Phil. 2:5-11). The resurrection of Jesus from the dead proves and establishes Him as the only begotten Son of God (Rom. 1:1-7). By virtue of the fact that He is the Son of God, He has received the authority to dictate the conditions of salvation (Matt. 28:18-20; Heb. 5:9).

The apostle Paul wrote: "But now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of them that are asleep. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, so also in Christ shall be made alive. But each in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; then they that are Christ's, at His coming. Then cometh the end, when He shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, when He shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power." (I Cor. 15:20-24.) So then, as Christ was raised from the dead never to die again, so will the resurrection of the kingdom of God upon this earth as the kingdom will be delivered back to God.

The hope of the resurrection of the faithful children of God be in the last day. That will be the end of the existence of the kingdom of God upon this earth as the kingdom will be delivered back to God.

The hope of the resurrection of the faithful to eternal life is the greatest of all hopes. This hope is made possible by the resurrection of Christ.

Tobacco farmers planting slightly more acreage

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farmers are expected to plant 720,000 acres in tobacco this year, up 7 percent from 1995. Consumption is forecast to decline slightly. The Agriculture Department said well over half the acreage, 398,000 acres, will be in flue-cured tobacco, up 3 percent. Burley will account for 280,000 acres, an increase of 14 percent. An average crop this year would total 1.6 billion pounds, compared with 1.3 billion pounds last year. Government price supports will rise 0.4 cents per pound for flue-cured and 1.2 cents for burley. Supports for other types will rise by 1.7 to 2.7 cents a pound. U.S. cigarette production rose 5 percent last year to a record 760 billion cigarettes, with exports accounting for the increase. U.S. smokers consumed 487 billion cigarettes, with annual consumption per adult down by 7 to 2,515 cigarettes, USDA said. Consumption of cigars, chewing tobacco and snuff increased again last year but use of smoking tobacco fell. USDA expects to see growth in use of cigars and snuff but a decline in consumption of other tobacco products.

After half a century, King County farmer ready to hang up his plow

By MACK HARRISON
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

GUTHRIE (AP) — Three John Deere tractors stand by the farmhouse as two large dogs roam the yard, wagging their tails in greeting to a visitor.

Various pieces of farm equipment — planters, seed dispensers, plows, hay bailers, cultivators, strippers and cotton trailers — sit parked in orderly rows next to the empty fields.

After more than half a century of farming, Raymond King is hanging up his plow. This Friday, the King County farmer will auction off his farm equipment and retire.

"I decided to quit," he said. "Fifty years of it."

King and his wife, Minnie, sat in their farmhouse living room, its walls lined with family photos. As they spoke, each one often elaborated on what the other spouse says, finishing the partner's thoughts on a subject.

Since they will no longer be raising crops on their rented farm, the Kings will have to leave their home of the past five decades.

"I imagine I can adjust," Mrs. King said.

"We'll survive," her husband said. "But when you've been in a place 50 years, it seems like home. That's a big part of your life."

The farmhouse, barn and storage shed stand in the once-thriving community of Finney, about 11 miles north of Guthrie on FM 193. Finney's population has shrunk over the years, from 35 families decades ago to five households today.

"There used to be a store and a (cotton) gin," King said. "We used to have a schoolhouse and churches. There's nothing left out here any more."

The tractors and other farm machinery on display for the auction are a far cry from the agricultural practices of 60 years ago.

"When I first came out here, before I got married, we farmed with mules," he said. "When we were first farming, we pulled cotton with our hands. We had 70 people pulling cotton for us. Now it's a lot quicker, of course."

King came to the area in 1936. He was born near Muskogee, Okla., in 1917 and lived all over the eastern part of that state before arriving in Texas.

"I had a married sister who lived here," King said. "I came to visit and went to work on a farm and just stayed here."

He had left Oklahoma with only one year of high school under his belt. At his sister's urging, he completed his education at a school in the nearby community of Grow and at one in Paducah, about 16 miles north in Cottle County. That's where he met his wife-to-be, Minnie Ratliff.

"We went together three or four years," she said. "After he went into the service (in 1942) I went to him. We were married in San Antonio."

The couple had only a few months together before King was sent to the South Pacific, where he served in an Army chemical warfare unit attached to the Air Force.

In 1946 there was little farmland on the market, so the couple began renting the land on which they grew crops: mostly cotton, wheat, hay and some milo. The landowner, who had 28 pieces of property in the area, required the people who farmed there to live on the property as well. The house did not have electricity until 1949 or phone service until 1957. Through the years, the farm has endured floods, tornadoes and — worst of all for farmers — drought.

"We didn't have any cotton at all in 1953," Mrs. King said.

"We planted 300 acres — and we usually planted 600 — and it didn't come up," her husband added. "It didn't rain 'til July. I got a job at the gymnasium in Guthrie (for income)."

King said that despite some hard times, he and his wife have enjoyed their half-century on the farm — especially their independence.

"Being free of the time clock — to me, it's the best life in the world," he said.

For 50 years, the Kings lived and farmed in Finney. They raised three boys: James, 46, Kevin, 40, and Darrell, 36. The Kings have six grandchildren, ranging in age from 4 to 20 years.

The Kings aren't sure what they want to do once they leave the farm.

"We haven't made up our minds yet," King said with a laugh. "That's been our big worry."

"The whole community is worried," his wife added. There are no vacant houses in the area for the couple to move into.

The couple's children are also worried about where their parents will live.

"Oh yeah, we're concerned about it," said their youngest son, Darrell, a mechanic at a copper mine in Arizona. "I'm trying to get them to move out here. ... Wherever they'd be happiest, that's what I want."

The Kings said they plan to stay within the state, even if they're not sure exactly where they'll end up.

"We're just kind of leaving it up to them," said Kevin, the middle child, who manages a medical clinic in Childress. "We're wanting them to move to either Childress or Arizona. ... We're all sad about them having to quit."

The oldest son, James, drives a truck at the same copper mine as Darrell.

"It's an emotional thing for them," James said of the impending move. "This would sort of get them away from it. I'd like to see them come out here."

The couple have land of their own in Texas, but none of those parcels have houses on them.

"I'd hate to live anywhere else but Texas," King said.

"Since I have to move, I don't want to live anywhere the sand blows," Mrs. King said jokingly. "I think everything will work out."

"The Lord's been good to us this long," her husband added. "I don't think he's gonna quit just yet."

Southwest Dairy Field Day set at Comanche

COMANCHE — The 1996 Southwest Dairy Field Day will be held May 9 at the Ray Johnston Dairy in Comanche from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Programs will include heat stress, BST management, parlor equipment evaluation, silage management, ration particle size evaluation and composting dairy waste. Informational exhibits will be displayed throughout the day.

The host operation includes 1,590 cows with a rolling herd average of 25,600 pounds of milk, 818 pounds of protein, and 894 pounds of fat on 3 milkings per day. Cattle are grouped according to age and production and milked in a modern double 20 parallel parlor. The herd is on DHIA test.

The operation has taken several steps to increase cow comfort in the summer heat, including the addition of misters and fans in the holding area and a freestall barn for high producing cows. The ration base includes corn silage, alfalfa hay and coastal Bermuda grass.

Dry cows are managed in groups, with all cows within 30 days of calving being primed for the next lactation. The operation includes 1,000 acres of crop land, with approximately 350 acres in corn, 150 acres in small grain and 570 acres in coastal Bermuda grass.

Emphasis on the breeding program allows this operation to raise a majority of the herd's replacement heifers, with a few additional animals being purchased. All animals are bred using artificial insemination.

Ray is joined in the management of the operation by his wife Debbie (who manages the books) and his father Thomas, who helps oversee the day-to-day farming operation, and Brad Barnett, dairy manager. Other family members involved include Ray and Debbie's daughters, RaeAnn and Ruth.

The dairy is located north of Comanche. From Highway 377 in Comanche, go north on Highway 36 1.5 miles to the first gravel road and turn left to the dairy. Signs will mark the route.

The Southwest Dairy Field Day is co-sponsored by Texas Agriculture Extension Service, Production Credit Association and Monsanto. Lunch will be provided to all attendees, courtesy of the industry sponsors.

Dairy consultants to attend nutrition conference

DALLAS — Dairy consultants attending the Mid-South Ruminant Nutrition Conference May 2-3 at the Holiday Inn South, Dallas/Fort Worth Airport, will be served an 8-course balanced nutrition program, according to conference chairman and president of the Texas Animal Nutrition Council, Dr. Chris Woelfel.

"Our sessions will focus particularly on the issues of on-farm feed quality, rumen function and heifer nutrition," Woelfel said. "The Mid-South Ruminant Nutrition Conference is an educational program aimed at helping consultants ensure the best nutritional recommendations for their client's herds and is sponsored jointly by the Texas Animal Nutrition Council and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service," Woelfel said.

Nationally-known speakers include Dr. Keith Behnke of Kansas State University, who will discuss "Mixing and Nutrient Uniformity Issues in Ruminant Diets;" Dr. Michael S. Allen of Michigan State University, "Fiber Requirements for Dairy Cattle;" Dr. Charles G. Schwab, University of New Hampshire, "Amino Acids and Their Application in Formulating Diets for Cattle;" Dr. William H. Hoover, West Virginia University, "Feeding for Maximum Rumen Function;" Dr. James Morrill, Kansas State University, "Nutritional Management of the Young Dairy Heifer;" and Dr. C. Reed Richardson, Texas Tech University,

"Quality Control in Feed Production."

Bringing an industry perspective to the program will be "Heifer Development: A Healthy Start to Future Profits," by Dr. Perry Durham of Farmland Industries, and "What Are Your Heifer Replacement Goals?" by Dr. Mark Engstrom, Hoffman-LaRoche.

April 21 is the deadline for early registration ($65 fee includes lunch, breaks and one copy of the proceedings). Registration fees ($75 after April 21) should be mailed to Texas Animal Nutrition Council, c/o Dr. Ellen R. Jordan, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, 17360 Coit Road, Dallas, TX 75252-6599.

Texas Angus Association plans open house May 4

EUSTACE — The Texas Angus Association has planned a day of fun and educational activities for both commercial and registered cattle breeders during the Angus Open House at Watson's Fly Bar W Ranch, located east of Eustace, on Saturday, May 4.

Cattlemen of all ages can test their evaluation skills at the judging contest scheduled to start at 10 a.m. Winners will be recognized in both junior and adult divisions. Local 4-H clubs and FFA chapters are encouraged to compete as well.

A Certified Angus Beef lunch will be served at noon. Awards for the judging contest and the "guess the weight of the bull" contest will be announced, as well as door prize winners. The scheduled luncheon speaker is Bear Clark, commercial cattleman from Breckenridge. Clark runs an 8,000-cow commercial herd and will tell the group how they can profit from using Angus bulls in a commercial cow-calf operation.

Participants will have the afternoon to look at exhibits and live cattle displays. The Texas Angus Association board of directors will also meet at 3:30 p.m. at the ranch.

Watson's Fly Bar W Ranch is located approximately two miles east of Eustace on FM 316 North. Take highway 175 to Eustace east from Dallas or west from Athens.

Dow Chemical official urges businesses to write President Clinton on tort measure

HOUSTON (AP) — A Dow Chemical Co. official has urged business leaders opposed to multimillion dollar jury awards to speak up before a measure limiting punitive damages is vetoed by President Clinton.

David Buzzelli, a vice president for the Midland, Mich., company made the appeal before about 300 members of the Rotary Club of Houston Thursday.

"There's still time to weigh-in with the president to encourage passage of this critical legislation," Buzzelli said after relating Dow Chemical's experience with years of breast-implant litigation related to subsidiary Dow Corning Corp.

Dow Corning, which no longer makes breast implants, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in May, citing the costs of defending itself against thousands of lawsuits over implants and its insurers' refusal to help.

Dow Chemical and Corning Inc. each own a 50-percent interest in Dow Corning. Many lawyers for women suing over alleged faults in the implants have named Dow Chemical as a defendant, claiming that early tests on silicone were performed in Dow Chemical labs.

Under a House- and Senate-approved measure now before President Clinton, punitive-damage awards in faulty-products cases would be limited to no more than double the compensatory damages with a maximum punitive award of $250,000.

For businesses with fewer than 25 employees, juries could award only the lesser of either $250,000 or double the compensatory damages.
