Texas ranchers call for hard line against coyotes

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Texas sheep and goat industry spokesman called Thursday for Congress to take a hard line against coyotes.

"It doesn't matter to us how or what tools are used as long as a protective program is conducted that is as good as what we had before 1965," Martin Wardlaw, president of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association, testified before a House agriculture subcommittee.

"If it takes the National Guard, then fine. However, it is evident that to get the job done, 1080 will be required," he said.

The chemical compound 1080 was banned in 1972.

Last fall, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus called a halt to further research and experimental use programs designed to show whether the ban was justified.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and several Texas congressmen have introduced bills that would legalize research and use of the powerful poison.

Wardlaw, of Del Rio, said compound 1080 was used successfully before the ban in poisoned bait stations that served to create a buffer zone around the West Texas sheep and goat country.

"One very important point that must be remembered is that a sheep and goat man cannot tolerate even one coyote in his pastures," he said. "We have enough predators to contend with ... without coyotes."

A spokesman for an environmental coalition testified at the same hearing that the reintroduction of the banned chemical would be unlikely to help the sheep and goat industry's economic troubles.

John W. Grandy, executive vice president of Defenders of Wildlife, said 20 years of predator control programs have provided livestock producers only a false sense of security even while compound 1080 was still in use.

He said records of sheep and goat grazing on National Forest Service land show a steady decline since 1940.

Grandy said the level of losses to predators, given as a percentage of the total number grazed, declined sharply when 1080 was introduced but returned to its earlier level even before the chemical was banned.

"The economic problems, coupled with a lack of adequate labor to perform proper husbandry practices, have led directly to another phenomenon - the coyote has become both a scapegoat and a visible symbol of the distress of an economically troubled industry," he said.

The hearing is before the House agriculture subcommittee on oversight, investigations and research chaired by Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas.

Grandy said a federal program to help train shepherds and solve the labor shortage on the range would be more worthwhile than a predator control program based on lethal techniques.

De la Garza replied that much of a shepherd's skill derives from an inherited love for animals and the range.

"There ain't no more of those people, and I don't think you can train them in a Department of Labor training program," he said.

Grandy said efficient shepherds, the use of guard dogs and tase aversives that discourage coyotes from attacking livestock, and other non-lethal techniques have demonstrated positive results.

The coalition he represented included the Environmental Defense Fund, the Friends of Wildlife, the Sierra Club, the Friends of the Earth and the Animal Protection Institute.

Sheep and goat producers have pointed to increasingly severe losses from predators, particularly coyotes, as a major factor in their economic troubles.

L. Charles Howard, a rancher from Meridian, Texas, said his use of compound 1080 in a "toxic collar" testing program has reduced his loss of goats to predators.

City fathers debate zoning issue

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

City officials are having trouble making a decision concerning the controversial re-zoning of a western portion of the city to allow for mobile homes.

"Commissioners are debating the matter," City Manager Mack Wofford said today. "They (the city commission) want to be fair," he said.

An appeal of a city zoning board decision to deny the re-zoning of the 400 to 600 blocks of Wells, Sumner and Faulkner streets was brought before the commission last February by Mrs. Bernice Rippetoe, 601 N. Nelson.

A public hearing on the matter was conducted during the April 8 meeting of the city fathers. Approximately 40 people directly concerned with the request attended the meeting.

Wofford and City Attorney Don Lane researched state zoning laws, transcribed testimony from the public hearings on the zoning and read petitions for two and a half hours this week, he said.

"We could not find any decisions by the Texas Supreme Court on mobile home zoning," he said.

The two officials also discovered that the pro and con groups are very close in number. "An almost equal amount of people signed the petitions," the city manager said, "and 13 signed both petitions."

The zoning was protested by 96 persons, he said, while 79 residents signed the petition for the re-zoning. Of the people who attended the public hearings, 33 were against and 28 were for the change.

A decision will probably not be reached at the next meeting, he said, since three-quarters of the commission must approve the rezoning in order for it to pass.

Commissioner O. M. Prigmore — who has been absent for the past three meetings — is expected to be absent during the session on April 22. According to Mayor Ray Thompson at the last commission meeting, Prigmore is in Austin serving on a governor's committee. Wofford said he did not know exactly what committee it was.

Mrs. Rippetoe's appeal of the zoning board's February decision has brought to the city father's attention that the city ordinances do not adequately provide for this situation and it will probably result in an amendment of city ordinance No. 690, the city manager said.

"It (Ordinance 690) will probably be modified for an appeals board of adjustment to preclude this type of situation," he said.

Should an amendment be passed, he said, the board will be appointed by the commission.

Prison site purchase considered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State officials will meet in emergency session here Tuesday to consider buying a 5,292-acre Lower Rio Grande Valley farm for a prison. Starr County officials, however, say they will fight having the new prison in their county.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong confirmed Thursday the three-member Approval Board which must OK purchases of land for a prison will meet Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. — hours before the April 23 deadline set by owners of the La Casita Farm.

The Approval Board — Armstrong, Gov. Bill Clements and State Board of Corrections Chairman James Windham — will meet a half-hour after the prison board considers the purchase.

Armstrong said the General Land Office appraised the property at $7.5 million, including $550,000 in farm equipment. He said two outside appraisals were done at Clements' insistence.

Windham said the prison board is considering other sites, but Armstrong said his office was asked to appraise only the La Casita site.

The Starr County farm was also the only one visited by two Texas A&M agricultural economists, who gave it high marks.

Armstrong said his appraisal and the two independent appraisals were within $300,000 of each other.

"There are no red flags," he said, after discussing problems which killed a 1978 deal to buy a farm in the Edinburg area, about 30 miles away from La Casita Farm.

Hearing slated on SPS rate hike

A representative from the steering committee appointed by area cities to study the proposed rate hike for Southwestern Public Service (SPS) will be present to answer questions at the public hearing on the increase during the April 22 city commission meeting.

"A representative of the steering committee will appear at the meeting," City Manager Mack Wofford said, listing Bill McMorris, consulting engineer from Amarillo or Wayne E. Brown, a local certified public accountant as possibilities.

A compromise settlement of the proposed increase was reached by the committee and SPS last month decreasing the original request for $42 million to $38 million.

The new increase is presently in limbo pending the acceptance by sixty-six Panhandle cities and approval of the Public Utility Commission in Austin.

A recent release by the Environmental Action Foundation, may put a "wrench in the works", however, after it stated 100 utilities — including SPS — were "hoarding" 2.7 billion in federal income taxes not paid in 1978 by using "phantom tax" loopholes.

According to the EAF survey, SPS charged its customers over $18 million to cover federal income taxes, yet received $4.3 million in their 1978 refund.

Utility officials deny this, however, saying they only received $1.5 million in tax refunds that year and the money was used to the advantage of its customers.

SPS uses a deferred tax practice, SPS Secretary-Treasurer Doyle R. Bunch II explained, which means a straight-line method of depreciation is used and an equal amount is deducted each year for the life of its assets.

By doing this, he said, more money is taken from the consumers for income taxes than is actually required, and the utility ends up with a surplus or deferred tax account.

A requirement by the Public Utility Commission, however, demands the utility to deduct the amount of the deferred tax account from its assets, reducing the base on which utility rate increases are calculated.

The city manager said he believes the deferred tax issue may have a bearing on the Panhandle cities' acceptance of the new rate.

"I think it will have something to do with it," he said, "but what the city's got to do is decide ... can the city of Pampa reach a better compromise than we already have."

'Pride of Pampa' arrives in Atlanta

ATLANTA — The Pampa High School band arrived safely in Atlanta, Ga., about 7 p.m. Thursday, according to Pampa News reporter-photographer Ed Sackett accompanying the band.

"There were a few cases of motion sickness and a few sore throats, but nothing serious," Sackett said.

He said the band's concerts during the Six Flags Over Georgia invitational contest will be conducted at 8 p.m. tonight for the concert band and 9:30 p.m. tonight for the symphonic band.

The band was greeted at its Atlanta hotel by former Pampans Gary Goosman and daughter Kristi Goosman, a former band member. Goosman was transferred to Atlanta with Cabot Corporation.

Band members viewed the mighty Mississippi in a stop-over in Memphis, Tennessee, and got a look at Elvis Presley's Graceland Manor on their way.

Band members were in rehearsal this morning for the contest.

Pampa News wins conservation award

The Pampa News will be honored for outstanding contributions to the Texas Soil and Water Conservation program at a Region I awards banquet Friday, May 2, at West Texas State University.

Region I consists of 51 counties in the Texas Panhandle and the South Plains. The Pampa News' entry was judged best in providing up to date and in depth coverage of local soil and water conservation efforts.

The competition included entries from weekly newspapers, daily newspapers, radio and television stations.

The Pampa News entry was submitted by the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District for its leadership in covering conservation news that affects our local agricultural economy.

"We are proud of our local newspaper's accomplishments and we are grateful for their support of the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District as well as the State Association of Soil and Water and Conservation Districts," said Neal Stovall, chairman of the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District.

Categories in which awards will be presented include: Outstanding Conservation District, Resident Conservation Farmer-Rancher, Absentee Conservation Farmer-Rancher, Business-Professional Man or Woman, Conservation Teacher, Wildlife Conservationist, Conservation Homemaker and the Public Media Award.

Three SWAT members resign

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A total of four officers from one of three police Special Weapons and Tactics teams have resigned because they receive no extra pay for the voluntary, but often hazardous duty, according to a police official.

Inspector Edward Foresman said Thursday that the resigned officers will continue their regular duties as patrolmen.

Foresman confirmed that members of the elite SWAT teams receive no extra money, unless SWAT duties lead to overtime.

But many SWAT officers feel they should get extra money for the duty, which requires they be called in during especially difficult, dangerous situations.

George Vidal, one of the officers who resigned, was the first SWAT officer through the door of Ira Attebery's motor home during last year's Fiesta parade sniping, officials said.

ABOUT 50 persons greeted Chairman Hilmar Moore, right, of the Texas Board of Human Resources as the board met in Austin Friday. The picketers were protesting Moore because of his recent statement calling for the sterilization of mothers on welfare.

Sterilization remark draws pickets

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Approximately 50 persons interrupted a meeting of the Texas Board of Human Resources today, chanting "No more, Hilmar Moore — throw the racist out the door" and demanding his resignation as board chairman.

"We'll accept it now," shouted one woman.

"I hate to disappoint you, but you're not going to get it," replied Moore.

"Hitler!" screamed another woman in the group that stood in front of the large table at which Moore and others were seated.

Moore had said the demonstrators would have 20 minutes on the lengthy agenda but apparently their time was to come at the end. Shortly after the board meeting started, however, the group, which included men and women, marched to the front of the room, chanting and waving signs.

The demonstration was a response to Moore's earlier comment that people give up their right to have babies when they cannot support them.

After the demonstrators spoke for about 20 minutes and filed out of the room, Moore said, "I apologize to those of you here on state business that my personal remark off the top of my head caused this demonstration."

The demonstrators indicated they want to appear at the board's next meeting, May 14 in Beaumont.

Betty Anne Duke of the Women's Action Group called for Moore's resignation last month and urged a postcard and telephone campaign to get him out of office.

Ms. Duke distributed a statement to reporters today that said, "It is outrageous that Mr. Moore is allowed to spread the reactionary idea that welfare recipients are to blame for the country's economic crisis. We would like to see Mr. Moore support himself on $33.41 a month. That is the average AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) payment per person."

The statement from a coalition of Austin women demanded Moore's resignation.

"Moore's recent statements calling for the sterilization of welfare mothers make him unfit to be in a decision-making position regarding the treatment of poor people in this state. His 'personal opinions,' which are both racist and sexist, cannot help but influence his decisions as a powerful member of this board," the statement said.

The statement said 23 groups joined in the call for Moore's resignation.

What triggered the furor was Moore's remark to a radio reporter after a Feb. 26 board meeting that "I have always felt when you cannot support yourself or your family that you give up certain rights. One of those is to bring in more children."

Moore says the public response to his remark has been overwhelmingly favorable.

Four members of the group held up a long banner in the meeting room, which said, "Forced sterilization equals genocide."

Readable car insurance policies eyed for Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board indicated Thursday it is ready to take action on a "readable" car insurance policy to replace the 9,590-word document that only a Philadelphia lawyer could understand.

Chairman Bill Daves said he would schedule a hearing as soon as a committee of board staffers and insurance men formally file the policy form for approval.

Daves said during a break in Thursday's "progress report" on the readable policy that he was "very, very receptive" to it.

"At times, we feared that we could never convince the board that so revolutionary an idea as a readable insurance policy would ever be adopted or even seriously considered," Clem Spalding, chairman of the committee, told the board.

The policy would become standard throughout Texas if adopted by the board. It is similar to one used in 31 states.

It has 6,251 words instead of the 9,590 in the present Texas auto policy and replaces technical terms and legal jargon with colloquial English.

Instead of "named insured," for instance, the new policy simply says "you." The stilted term, "the company," is transformed to just plain "we."

Reagan trail crosses Texas

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — For too long, the United States has worried too much about what people in other countries think of us, Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan says.

"Now is the time to realize we don't care if the world likes us or not. We've got to do what's right for us," Reagan told a rally of 800 supporters Thursday night at a downtown Houston hotel.

The former California governor spoke earlier Thursday to an airport rally in Nederland, Texas, before flying to Houston. He was to continue to San Antonio after further campaign appearances in Houston today.

A Dallas television station, KDFW-TV, said in a copyright report Thursday night that Texas Gov. Bill Clements is one of three persons at the top of Reagan's list of candidates for his vice presidential running mate, should he get the GOP nomination.

Although Clements is not actively seeking the vice presidential bid, he privately welcomes the possibility, KDFW-TV said.

Reagan also is seriously considering Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker and Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar, the station said.

Reagan's Texas campaign manager, Ernest Angelo of Midland, earlier Thursday had announced plans for Reagan and Clements to hold a joint news conference in Austin next Thursday before going into a "private working lunch."

Reagan is scheduled to visit Clements in Austin after appearing Wednesday night on a nationally televised forum with other Republican candidates in Houston.

At stake in the May 3 Texas primary are 80 delegate votes, which four years ago went solidly to Reagan in his battle against Gerald Ford.

Reagan is hoping to whip his chief rival for the GOP nomination, George Bush, in Texas, where Bush has lived for many years.

The former California governor was welcomed at the Houston rally with a cry that was heard throughout the 1976 Republican convention from the Texas delegation: "Viva Ole."

Reagan criticized President Carter at every turn Thursday. He blasted Carter's domestic policies, especially the rate of inflation, and his foreign policy, especially in "yielding to other nations."

Many of those attending Reagan's Houston rally wore mink coats and tuxedos. But members of a motorcycle club, wearing black leather jackets, also were on hand.

Reagan drew cheers from his Houston audience when he called on the United States to get out of the energy business and give oil companies a chance to look for more oil and natural gas.

"There is more oil and natural gas to be found in the United States than we have ever used in the past," Reagan said.

Reagan was introduced at the rally by former Texas Gov. John Connally, who withdrew from the Republican presidential race several weeks ago.

Connally, now a Houston resident, called Reagan "the best qualified man in this country, now, to be president. We have to rebuild our economic strength and our moral commitments. The only way to do it is change the leadership in the White House."

Reagan told the airport rally at Nederland that the United States triggered the hostage situation in Iran by not standing by the shah of Iran, who he said had been an ally of every U.S. president from Harry Truman to Jimmy Carter.

Parents are responsible in vandalisms

FORT WORTH (AP) — Parents are liable for damages of up to $5,000 each for each act of vandalism committed by their children, an appeals court here has ruled.

The Fort Worth Court of Civil Appeals ruled that Clifford Buie and Mrs. Marion Stephens owe $15,000 in damages and more than $4,000 in attorney fees because their 12-year-old daughters damaged three newly completed homes Nov. 30, 1975.

Court records showed that the two girls caused damages estimated at $22,473 when they closed drains and turned on faucets in the newly completed homes.

In making the ruling Thursday, the appeals court rejected claims that a new provision of the Texas Family Code was unconstitutional.

The new provision specifies that "a parent or other person who has the duty of control and reasonable discipline of a child is liable for any property damage" resulting from willful or malicious conduct.

The provision applies to any child in Texas who is at least 12 years old and not yet 18.

The owner of the property is entitled to recover "actual damages not to exceed $5,000 plus court costs and reasonable attorney fees," according to the provision.

Buie argued that the $5,000 limit should be placed on all acts committed during an episode of vandalism.

But Associate Justice Joe Spurlock agreed with the earlier ruling by State District Judge Harold Craik that the $5,000 applied to each act, not all acts committed during a single episode of vandalism.

Buie had argued that a child could bankrupt a parent by damaging numerous buildings during a destructive episode.

The volunteer military can work

During the recent congressional debate on draft registration several innovative ideas emerged which deserve more serious consideration than Congress is likely to give them. One of these, offered by Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Los Angeles, suggests the use of tax incentives to attract quality personnel to the armed forces. If nothing else, his idea is immeasurably better than reinstating conscription.

In a nutshell, Dornan's idea is to offer a lifetime tax credit to anyone willing to enlist voluntarily and serve in the military. His bill, H.R. 4080, provides a 5 percent tax credit to any person serving two years and a 10 percent tax credit to four-year enlistees. The credit would be applicable on all future taxable income for those who complete their full term of enlistment and are honorably discharged.

Dornan's tax credit concept has merit. First, it makes military service a lifetime investment, as the congressman likes to say. Today military pay, especially for first-time enlistees, has been permitted to slip far behind what it would be expected to be had it kept in line with inflation. Bringing that pay level up to a level necessary to compete with the private sector will offer potential recruits an incentive for today. The tax credit idea will add to that incentive the potential that they will benefit for the rest of their lives because of the decision to serve today.

The tax credit idea might also solve one of the military's hardest problems: attracting quality men and women to do the highly skilled jobs needed by a technically sophisticated military force. Today the more income someone expects to make in the future the greater sacrifice it is to spend four years in the military. Dornan's idea will make it profitable for those with high intelligence and the expectation of better-than-average future income to serve in the armed forces.

There are many who believe that a profit motive should not be a factor in attracting recruits to the armed forces. They talk in lofty terms of patriotism; inexplicably they are often the same people who are calling for resuming the military draft. It strains logic to figure out why people who believe it distasteful to induce people to volunteer by the promise of monetary reward at the same time support the notion that young people should be dragged, kicking and screaming, into military service against their will. It is hardly something that encourages patriotism.

Milton Friedman has pointed out that the all-volunteer force is not a failure. What has been a failure is Congress; it has permitted the pay level of recruits to slip so low, because of inflation, that young people no longer want to join. Now these same members of Congress, who have permitted their own tax-supported salaries to be eaten away by inflation, are calling for resumption of an institution that was long considered inconsistent with the basic ideals of the nation — military conscription.

Dornan's tax credit idea offers a method of maintaining an all-volunteer force without raising taxes. It would likely encourage those who join the military to stay for at least four years, thereby cutting down training costs. Instead of offering recruits more federal handouts, in the form of veterans' programs, Dornan's proposal offers them more future freedom to keep and spend their own money. It is a good idea.

Failure at the Fed

Over the past several months, we've paid particular attention to the actions of Paul Volcker, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. One reason is that he's probably the best hope in Washington for returning some semblance of sanity to the way the current administration spends and prints money.

Although appointed by Jimmy Carter, Volcker is actually not part of the administration. His independence at the Fed is why he, more than anyone else, should be resisting the politicians' wastrel ways. For a while last October, it appeared that he was going to do that, holding the money supply steady no matter how high the government's borrowing drives interest rates. But his record since then hasn't lived up to his promise — the dollars continue to be printed at an alarming rate — and his acquiescence in Carter's latest budget balancing act and credit card sidishow is barely short of an impeachable offense to the cause of wise management.

Volcker is not exactly an outsider to the manners of government and its auxiliary elite. His credentials include, for those to whom this matters, membership in the Trilateral Commission. So he would not be expected to represent a radical departure from the statist bent of modern federal policies. What was hoped, when he arrived from the presidency of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, was that he might bring some hard-nosed principles of the financial community to replace the laxness of G. William Miller, his predecessor at the Fed.

Well, Jimmy Carter announced his proposed budget cuts (which when plotted against unexpectedly higher outlays for this fiscal year and next — a few budget bombshells that went off in the last two months — show the two-year total to be just what it was planned to be last January) and his tax and credit flogging of us. And there was Volcker, figuratively at his side, praising the president's policies. He'd better like them, because he's going to have to live with them. Analysts have noted that with the federal borrowing binge not relenting, it is Volcker's Fed that is going to be on the inflation front lines, enduring the political heat for higher interest rates if the money machine is not turned on full blast. If

The despair over Volcker's unwillingness to insist that Carter make the kind of fiscal commitment to control the Washington express that the 6-foot-7 Fed chief stated on the monetary side when he took office has reached the point that Lindley Clark, the Wall Street Journal columnist, hints that Volcker is "a rather timid giant" after all.

If that's so, the economy may be in such straits by next January that it won't matter who, if anyone, has replaced Jimmy Carter, or what that person intends to do.

Dual missions in conflict

By Robert J. Wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) - It is often said that various segments of the federal government work against each other. This is only too true.

Consider, if you will, the Department of Energy, whose sworn mission is to cut our nation's dependence on foreign oil by demanding that the automobiles on our roads achieve better and better gas mileage each year. Consider, at the same time, the Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, whose equally dedicated mission is to make those automobiles ever safer.

Do these missions conflict? Consider this example:

Renault is one of Europe's major car manufacturers. Its products are the industry leaders in France and it has a major share of other European markets.

Of all the auto makers in the world, probably no other has a greater commitment to safety. So committed is Renault, in fact, that the company has a whole department that does nothing but work with the French police to study any accident in which there was a fatality involving one of its cars, including computer modeling of the accident to see if something can be learned to make its cars safer in the future.

Recently, Jacques Provensal, Renault's director of structural safety, came over from Paris to testify before a NHTSA hearing on a proposed rule that would require cars sold in the United States to have increased side protection to guard occupants from a lateral impact. Afterward he noted:

"I am very concerned about what effect this rule will have on the overall design of our small car which we market in your country. To meet the proposed requirement, we will have to insert cross rails in the side of the car. This will add significant weight to the car.

"Then our studies have shown that even if you were in a tank, if it is struck you will be injured unless surfaces are properly padded. So, we will have to add specially designed interior padding to both door sections of our cars. This, in turn, will add still more weight.

"But more importantly, it will cut down on the interior dimensions of our cars about 4 inches on each side. We have designed our cars to be competitive in the marketplace and one of the most important features in a small car is interior room. So, if we lose 8 inches from new padding, we will have to increase the width of the car by 8 inches. Now we really start to add weight.

"First, you will have additional structural steel. Then, since the car is now considerably heavier, we will have to put in a slightly larger engine to power it and larger brakes to stop it. This, in turn, will add additional weight. All told, we believe that to meet the proposed new side-impact standard, we will add some 100 kilos (220 pounds) to the car.

"Then, since the car is wider, it will have a larger (and heavier) glass area and will be less wind resistant. Given the combination of more weight and less wind resistance, our studies show that the redesigned car will lose 7 percent fuel economy."

Provensal went on to describe studies done by Renault showing the relatively low number of fatalities resulting from side impacts. While deaths do occur from such impacts, the Renault studies show that they are very infrequent and that the proposed rule would virtually eliminate a few of them.

"In Europe, with gasoline selling at well above $2 a gallon, fuel economy is a passion with auto makers," Provensal continued. "People will not buy your product unless it is the most fuel efficient possible."

"We spend millions a year in research trying to increase fuel economy even by a half a percent. So you can imagine we are rather startled when we see your regulation makers putting in one which, while it will make the car a little safer, will do so only at such a cost in fuel economy."

With our energy people demanding ever more fuel-efficient cars while our safety people are demanding ever more safe cars, Provensal sees dual missions that are at least partially in conflict. "We learned long ago that we can build the absolutely safest car or we can build the most efficient car, but not both. Some compromises have to be made. I wonder when your regulators will discover this."

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, April 18, the 109th day of 1980. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 18, 1775, American Patriot Paul Revere made his famous midnight ride to warn the Massachusetts countryside that the British were on their way from Boston.

On this date:

In 1906, San Francisco was hit by an earthquake, which set off fires that destroyed half the city.

In 1945, famed war correspondent Ernie Pyle was killed in fighting on a Pacific Island off Okinawa.

In 1955, Albert Einstein — who wrote the theory of relativity — died at the age of 76.

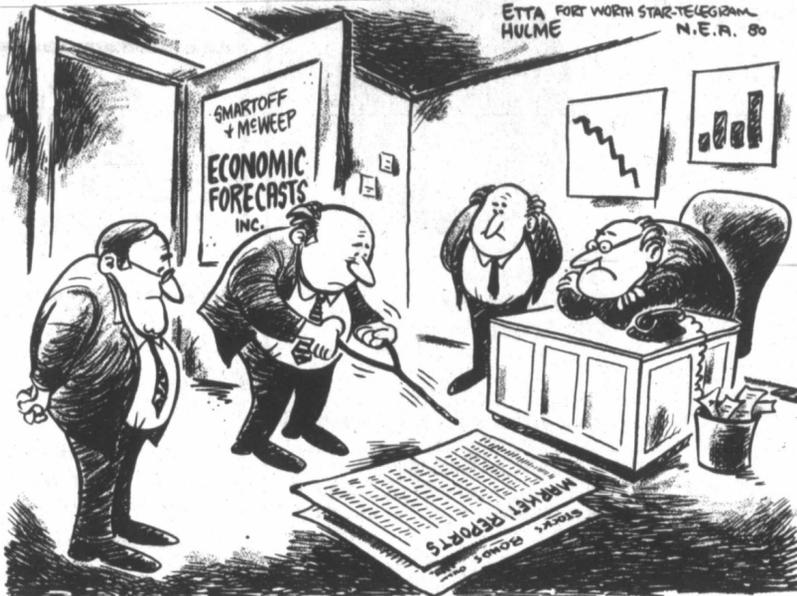

In 1977, Alex Haley won the Pulitzer Prize for his best seller tracing his roots back seven generations to an African village.

Ten years ago, President Richard Nixon greeted the Apollo 13 astronauts in Hawaii after their harrowing, aborted attempt to make the third moon landing.

Five years ago, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved $200 million to aid the Vietnamese.

Last year, actor Lee Marvin was ordered to pay his former live-in companion, Michelle Marvin, $104,000 to help her adjust to life without him.

Thought for today: The nation will find it very hard to look up to leaders who are keeping their ears to the ground. — Sir Winston Churchill (1874-1965)

The unfunny politicians

by Paul Harvey

Every political year voters are likely to be sidetracked and some candidates derailed — by peripheral issues.

Frequently, recently, by candidates telling jokes which were construed as ethnic slurs.

We have become so hypersensitive about ethnic that there is no way an Abraham Lincoln could be elected today. He loved to tell stories about Irish and others.

Other Presidents since have enjoyed ribald humor, often at the expense of some religion or nationality. Nowadays, however, candidates are subjected to closer media scrutiny than ever before. Now the stories, heretofore told in private, are on tomorrow's front page.

Every election for the last half dozen some candidate of prominence has had to apologize for or try to explain away some remark he made which somebody considered offensive.

Mostly, they are stories one hears about Aggies in Texas, about the Polish in Chicago, about South Dakotans in North Dakota — the same stories with only the target creed or clan substituted to suit the geographical situation.

Ron Reagan's recent story about the Pole, the Italian and the Mafia was just plain dumb. Certainly it was unworthy of a professional entertainer and inappropriate for a professional politician. Archie Bunker can get away with overt bigotry — if he keeps it funny.

On the other hand, a member of the federal government's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission — in a recent Denver speech — laced his remarks with inexcusably bad taste.

Armando Rodriguez though he could get away with Mexican-American jokes because he is Mexican-American — but his stories were as crude as relating to the relative cleanliness of female sex organs.

Or take the new yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture. Somebody had the bright idea that this document should be enlivened with some jokes about farmers and farming.

"Ever wonder why farmers use cows to keep the grass cut?"

"Because they are good lawn moo-ers."

Ouch!

Another: "When might those same cows wear bells?"

"When their horns don't work."

End quote.

That editor underestimates the farm audience which is now obviously more sophisticated than is he. But even quality humor would be inappropriate in that informational publication.

Bureaucrats, like politicians, rarely have a real talent for humor. This is partly because we are accustomed to taking seriously what they say. We want to be able to take seriously what they say. From their lips fiction, for whatever purpose, is disturbing.

The government's case of DT's

By Butler D. Shaffer

I was up the night before, praying for the strength to sit through watching the White House babbling bozo present his "get tough on inflation in order to not get wallpated at the polls" election year message. You will remember, no doubt, how his predecessor, Gerald Ford, had similarly gone on television four years earlier to do the same thing. Ford's solution was a simple one: distribute "Whip Inflation Now" buttons. But Jimmy didn't bring his buttons with him — at least not all of them. We had already been forewarned of the contents of his speech and, since I had just gotten over the flu, I took an extra dose of Pepto Bismol and began listening.

It didn't take long for any of us to discover that Jimmy's solution to the problem of inflation was the same one always trotted out by the establishment ignoramuses: attack the victims of inflation. Those who actually believed Carter's carefully contrived neo-Populist gush in 1976 might have twinged a bit when he began lambasting the consumers of America — you and me — for having caused inflation. One newspaper characterized his talk as one of "a strict father (speaking) to spendthrift children."

My God, does this man truly believe this kind of patented nonsense or is he, in the spirit of another election year, only gearing up on his rhetoric of lies, deceit, and misinformation. We consumers have done the very best we could just to be able to survive at an inflation rate on the fast gallop toward (if not over) 20 percent per year. "Inflation is fed by credit-financed spending. Consumers have gone into debt too heavily," he mumbled. But why have we gone into debt? Is it not because most of us are unable to earn an additional 20 percent each year in order just to keep up with inflation? Have most of us not found it rather difficult to pay gasoline and public utility prices that have more than doubled since Carter took office, or even to pay for food and housing that has increased at rates faster than our incomes. In most families, either both spouses must work or the money must be borrowed just to stay afloat.

But Jimmy says that we profligate consumers must mend our ways. We must "discipline" ourselves and be prepared to make "sacrifices" and give up our "fairly tale" beliefs. Does this man assume that any nation wishes enough to elect him president is equally gullible when it comes to swallowing this kind of economic swill? What does he think caused inflation, if not the federal government running up, for well over a decade, a string of unbalanced budgets whose excesses were paid for by the expedient of printing more money? Just who is it that needs to be "disciplined," to make "sacrifices," and to abandon "fairly tale" economic theories?

What is the nature of the "sacrifice" to be? Certainly the federal government will not "sacrifice." Oh, indeed, Carter gurgled on about having a "balanced budget," to be paid for, however, out of a 10-cent per gallon increase in gasoline fees which comes on top of a recently passed "excess profits" tax on oil companies. The fee increase is designed to bring billions upon billions of additional dollars into the treasury. Nor will the sacrifice come from the banking interests which, because of their government-granted privilege of creating new money, have contributed to inflation. In addition to a prime interest rate already moving toward 20 percent, the banks and other institutions issuing credit cards will be permitted to raise interest rates on such credit card accounts to approximately 30 percent. Once again, it is clear that the American people will not be asked to sacrifice, they will be sacrificed for the benefit of all the institutionalized moneysuckers who have been responsible for fostering inflation. Having already derived their benefits from the inflationary cycle, they now seek to interfere with our efforts to adjust our lives to what they have caused.

When I heard Jimmy berating the consumers of this nation for having caused inflation, I was reminded of cousin Willie. Cousin Willie like to booze it up a lot, and for many years of practice he took ill. The doctor told him he had cirrhosis of the liver and would have to give up his wild living. The doctor even tried to get him to join Alcoholics Anonymous and take the complete "cure." But cousin Willie knew what he liked and he knew who was to blame for his ills, too; it was the distillers and the "saloon-keepers." They — not Willie — were the cause of it all. And until the day he died, the only "cure" that ever managed to cross Willie's mind was trying to find a magic pill that would get him over his next hangover.

Area residents attend Methodist Conference

Ten Panhandle area residents are attending the 1980 General Conference of the United Methodist Church presently in session at Indianapolis, Ind.

Traveling to the Indiana city for the ten-day conference are four ministerial delegates: Ted Dotts, former Pampa district superintendent; Clifford Trotter of Amarillo; R. L. Kirk of Plainview; Charles Lutrick of Midland. Attending as first alternate is Jim Pickens, former pastor of the Pampa First United Methodist Church.

Lay delegates are led by Jim Waterfield of Canadian, Jere Lawrence of Sweetwater; Robert Bumgardner of Brownfield and Ray Orson of La Mesa. First alternate is Tom Kim, president of McMurry College in Abilene.

Julius Early, minister of the First United Methodist Church of Shamrock is the official news correspondent for this area.

The General Conference meets every four years as the highest law and policy-making body of the United Methodist Church.

It rotates its site among the church's five geographical jurisdictions in the U.S. — previous conferences have been held in Portland, Ore.; Atlanta, Ga. and Dallas.

Included in the conference will be revision of the law of the church as stated in "The Book of Discipline", adoption of a Statement of Social Principles and resolutions on various current issues and final determination of plans and budget for church-wide programs for the next four years.

A PRE-TOUR CONCERT BY BILL COMBS, second from left, will be presented at 6:30 p.m. in Lively Hall of First United Methodist Church in Pampa. The public is invited to attend the presentation which is a prelude for the Pampa High School student's overseas tour which begins in June. Accompanying the young vocalist will be drummer Donna Conway, left, Mats Kristiansson, flute and guitar, and director of music for First United Methodist, Ann Peele Thomas, at the piano. ## Commission studies rights

AUSTIN (AP) — Complaints against security guards might be reduced by prohibiting them from carrying handguns when off-duty, says the staff of the Sunset Advisory Commission.

Companies — would be eliminated, while security guard, armored car and courier companies would continue to be regulated.

"This will give the staff direction in drafting the final report and at a later date we will take a formal vote on the matters," said Sen. Ed Howard.

Presidential politics join in San Antonio's 1980 Fiesta

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — There's a new major parade and a dash of 1980 presidential politics to spice San Antonio's massive, 10-day Fiesta bash this year. But tragic memories linger from last year's deadly attack by the Battle of Flowers parade sniper.

Fiesta, which dates back to 1891, is expected to generate some $45 million for San Antonio merchants this year. That compares to $25 million brought in by the tragedy-marred 1979 Fiesta, officials said.

The addition of the fourth parade and seven other new events also is expected to push the total attendance figure for all events to four million, says Davis Burnett Jr., executive vice president of the Fiesta San Antonio Commission.

But Major Lila Cockrell has expressed fears that publicity about Ira Attebery's deadly attack last April 27 will tarnish the city's tourist image and hurt Fiesta.

Attebery, 64, a heavily armed recluse with a history of mental problems, fired from his parked motor home into thousands of spectators awaiting the start of Fiesta's biggest and most colorful parade.

Two spectators were killed and some 50 injured, more than 30 by Attebery's gunfire. Six police officers were among the wounded.

After a gun battle with police, Attebery took a revolver from his 15-gun cache and fatally shot himself in the head.

The parade was canceled, but Fiesta went on. The nighttime Fiesta Flambeau parade was held the next night on the same route.

About a week ago, Mrs. Cockrell privately appealed to local news executives to focus Fiesta publicity on this year's activities and not dwell on Attebery's attack.

"There would be a natural tendency to recall rather vividly the events of last year, when a sniper brought havoc and death at the start of the Battle of Flowers parade, resulting in a tragic day in our history," she wrote.

"I feel it is especially important this year to put the tragedy behind us," she said.

Contacted Thursday, Mrs. Cockrell had a terse "no comment" when asked about the letter or her fear of bad publicity.

Dallas firm can sue Pemex

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that SEDCO Inc. can seek damages from its two co-defendants if claims filed because of the Ixtoc 1 oil spill are upheld.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor agreed with SEDCO in issuing his ruling Thursday, which allows the Dallas-based firm to sue Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex) and Permargo (Perforaciones Marine Del Golfo S.A.).

All three companies were named as defendants in more than $371 million in suits filed since Ixtoc 1 blew out June 3 in the Bay of Campeche.

The suits came from South Texas fishermen, local governments, property owners, the state of Texas and the U.S. Justice Department.

Mexican friendship advocated

EDINBURG (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says businessmen and local government leaders in Texas border cities should help forge a "strong and lasting new relationship with Mexico." Clements has met recently with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and governors of Mexican border states and has been criticized for invading federal policy making territory. "We well know that our role is not to determine foreign policy for the United States and that is not what we are trying to do," Clements told a symposium Thursday on U.S.-Mexican business ventures. Clements' remarks to South Texas businessmen came at the end of a two-day visit to border cities.

Louisiana flood damages grow

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gov. Dave Treen has declared six southeast Louisiana parishes disaster area and says a state of emergency exists in four others because of widespread damage from last weekend's rains — 14 inches and more in some areas. Meanwhile, the Slidell area was getting soaked again by an overflowing Pearl River.

The governor's proclamation Thursday was a necessary step in getting federal disaster assistance for the flood-stricken areas. Listed as disaster areas were Assumption, Jefferson, Lafourche, Orleans, St. Bernard and St. Charles parishes. A state of emergency was declared in those parishes as well as in Ascension, Livingston, Terrebonne and St. Martin.

Treen said the six parishes declared disaster areas sustained a total of about $50 million in property damage from flooding. Studies are not complete in the four where emergencies exist.

He said that in the six parishes, some 5,300 homes and 120 businesses were damaged by floodwaters. He said state and local governments will spend about $4 million helping flood victims.

The governor said about $25 million will be paid victims on flood insurance claims, and he asked the federal government for almost $27 million in disaster assistance to help with losses from flooding.

New Orleans officials reported Thursday that flood damage estimates to private and public buildings totaled $25 million. Some 1,200 homes and 500 businesses were damaged, authorities said.

The reports came as another flood crest rolled past Slidell on the Pearl River, which overflowed its banks and flooded some 500 homes in St. Tammany Parish two weeks ago.

The Pearl hit a crest of 18.6 feet, six feet over flood stage, Thursday and started dropping. Although some streets were covered with backwaters, most homes remained dry.

In Jefferson Parish — which got the worst of the New Orleans-area flooding over the weekend — residents of one subdivision hustled signatures for a law suit against parish officials.

"Jefferson Parish didn't help us, Civil Defense didn't help us... It seems like nobody cared," said Jim Tressit of Woodmere subdivision, where water from the Harvey Canal spilled over levees Sunday night.

In a related development, the new West Jefferson Tidal Levee District voted Thursday to levy a five-mill property tax for flood protection in the area.

Joe Lauricella, elected president of the district, said the property tax millage should provide $1.25 million the first year, but those revenues won't be available until next January.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor Warner, hospitalized in Washington, D.C., for three weeks for treatment of a salivary gland infection on the left side of her face, is about to leave the hospital.

The actress came down with a cold when she helped her husband, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., launch the U.S.S. Vinson in Newport News, Va., on March 15, the Daily News said in today's editions.

She has had problems with her salivary gland for some time and the cold aggravated the condition, the paper said. She was hospitalized March 26, and her condition was complicated by a reaction to antibiotics.

A spokesman for the movie queen said Mrs. Warner should be released from the Washington Hospital Center over the weekend. She is to fly to London on May 6 to do her next film, Agatha Christie's "The Mirror Crack'd."

in the business don't like me, directors, producers..." the outspoken actress and author said at a news conference this week. "I think the only obligation I have in the theater is to the audience."

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Barry Manilow is suing a Syracuse, N.Y., company for $15,000 over customizing work done on the singer's van.

The vehicle, refurbished last year by Nilo Auto & Van Interiors, apparently didn't satisfy associates of the singer when the job was completed.

Company owner Nick Cua described the van as having "everything under the sun on it, only it's got too much on it for a van."

The trial is to start May 5 in state Supreme Court.

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. (AP) — The widow of Boris Karloff doesn't like monster movies and never saw her husband in "The Bride of Frankenstein" or "The House of Frankenstein."

Says Evelyn Karloff, "I didn't even see the movie 'Frankenstein' until 10 years after we were married. I never liked those kind of movies, and I still don't."

Karloff died in 1969 at the age of 81. His wife of 23 years, who lives in England, visited this week with friends Milburn Stone, who played Doc on the "Gunsmoke" TV series, and his wife in this ranching town 20 miles north of San Diego.

Congressional officials optimistic on draft vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders predict the House will approve draft registration of men, but a White House poll shows the outcome is not yet certain and that opponents have a slim chance of stopping the program.

The House Appropriations Committee voted 26-23 Thursday to approve spending $13.3 million to begin registering young men this summer.

That cleared the way for the matter to be debated in the full House next week, probably Tuesday.

"I would be surprised if it were defeated," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

O'Neill revealed that a White House poll of House members found 206 representatives supporting registration, 86 opposed and the remainder of the 435 members undecided.

If that count is accurate, opponents would have to pick up almost all the undecided votes to prevail in the House.

In the view of many critics of registration, the best chance of killing it is in the Senate, where Republican Mark Hatfield of Oregon has vowed to wage a filibuster.

The vote by the full House committee overturned the decision of an Appropriations subcommittee seven weeks ago to approve funds only for a standby system in which registration would not start until the president ordered mobilization in an emergency.

Twice during its deliberations, the full committee shouted down proposals to register women along with men, as suggested by President Carter at one point.

But the committee's vote approving money for registration of men was a key victory for Carter.

Census takers dispute report by Clements

DALLAS (AP) — Census officials in Dallas say Gov. Bill Clements' isn't even close with his claim that only 55 percent of Texans have returned their census forms.

"I don't know where the governor gets his figures," said Jane Sumner, public information coordinator with the regional census center in Dallas.

Ms. Sumner said she spent Thursday verifying that the Texas return rate is only slightly lower than the national rate of 86.6 percent.

Clements had said Wednesday that Houston officials had confirmed reports he received that the Texas return rate was only 55 percent, a rate far below the national average.

"The federal census bureau does not seem too excited about the problem. I think it's serious," the governor said at a Wednesday news conference in the Rio Grande Valley.

Foursquare Gospel Church

Rev. Chuck Boyle and his wife Martha will return to Pampa to speak at the Foursquare Church Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. The Boyles pastored the Foursquare Church at 712 Lefors St. eighteen years ago.

Rev. Boyle is presently the chaplain for a non-profit organization in Lubbock called MBFA Foundation, and he serves homeless children, hospitals, nursing homes, and retirement homes.

First Freewill Baptist Church

The youth of First Free Will Church will have an outdoor service Saturday night, April 19, at 5 p.m. Anyone enjoying volleyball and hot dogs are invited to come out to 326 N. Rider Street.

First Baptist Church

First Baptist Church at 203 N. West will kick-off their revival this Sunday with a free barbeque lunch. The day is termed "Miracle Sunday." A goal of 1392 in Sunday school is set, which is over the average attendance of 1000.

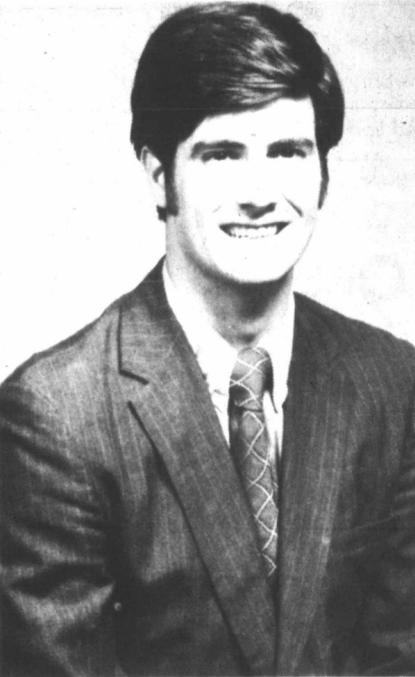

The evangelist for the week will be Dr. John A. Wood, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Paducah, Ky. Dr. Wood has preached in thirty-three countries, and has been on programs of the Pastor's Conference of the Southern Baptist Convention.

C. Truitt Roberts, minister of music at the First Baptist Church in Starkville, Mississippi, will be leading the music.

There will be noon luncheon services and services nightly at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Everyone is invited to attend.

PAMPA NATIVE TERRY SIMMONS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Condo of Pampa, has been cast among the additional twelve members of the Wayland Baptist College production, "GODSPELL." The big running off-Broadway musical success story based on the gospel of St. Matthew is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. each evening April 24, 25, 28 and 29 with a special matinee performance slated for 2:00 p.m. Saturday, April 26. For information on tickets, which will be available from noon until 5 p.m. beginning April 21, call (806) 293-3515.

FORMER PAMPAN, KEN SPOOR, will direct the singing at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ during the Homecoming Service April 20. Ken and his wife, Kathy, and family now live in Burkburnett, Texas where his is the youth and music director of the Church of Christ. Everyone is cordially invited.

Hi-Land Pentecostal Church

The Resurrection Sound will be at the Hi-Land Pentecostal Holiness Church, 18th and Banks, April 20 at 7 p.m. Pastor Ferguson and congregation cordially invite the public to attend.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life, in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."
PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

DOING A ... MAN SIZED JOB

Heat ... sweat ... fatigue ... blisters ... aches ... Dad says its all a part of "carrying my share of the load." He also says that, "it's important that I help make provisions for the present and near future." But he says "that it is even more important because I am preparing for the days ahead when I am a full grown man." Sometimes I think that my Dad has the wisdom of Solomon, that's this king that I learned about at church ... and that's another thing that Dad says is important ... "that I go to church regularly, so that I can learn about God, and prepare my spiritual life for the future, too." You know ... Dad must think it's important ... He goes to church, too.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv. Ser.

High Plains eyes water from Ogallala Aquifer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Four routes will be studied in a multibillion-dollar proposal to divert surplus water in High Plains states and funnel it uphill hundreds of miles to thirsty areas.

The High Plains Study Council Thursday asked the Army Corps of Engineers to study the feasibility of transferring surplus supplies in the Missouri, Arkansas and White Rivers, and some tributaries, and sending it in channels or pipelines to areas of Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma where shortages are or threaten to disrupt the economy.

Meeting in Omaha, the council acted after making a change to end the concern of Nebraska officials who said they feared the study would begin before Nebraskans are informed of the implications, benefits and detriments.

Lemons bank robbery

WAURIKA, Okla. (AP) — Bobby Ray Lemons faces a 20-year stretch in the state penitentiary for a bank robbery he says he can't fully remember.

Lemons, 44, was sentenced Monday after pleading guilty to the March 24 armed robbery of the Terral First National Bank.

"I'd been drinking pretty heavily at the time and I may have had a partial blackout," Lemons said.

"I remember going into the bank but the rest is sketchy," he said.

Lemons, being held in the Jefferson County Jail, puffed on a cigarette and recapped in an interview how he robbed the Terral bank at gunpoint — a robbery witnesses contend was done by a drunken man wearing a bag over his head.

The routes will be studied as a key part of the $6 million study under way to determine what can be done to overcome the effects of depletions in the Ogallala Aquifer, a massive layer of water under large portions of Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

So much water has been pumped out of the aquifer in some areas that farmers are being forced to end center pivot irrigation and resume less productive dryland operations.

The council has looked at six possible places to divert water and store it en route to areas where it would be used.

Gov. John Carlin of Kansas, council chairman, stressed in the meeting at the Airport Ramada Inn that only surplus water would be diverted — if the plan gains approval and money from Congress.

Controller suspended in diversion attempt

MIAMI (AP) — An air traffic controller at Miami International Airport has been suspended pending a federal probe of charges he deliberately tried to divert an airliner toward a thunderstorm, a newspaper reported today.

The controller, who was not identified, made references during the incident to Braniff's policy of refusing controllers free rides, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker told the newspaper Wednesday.

TEXAS BRIEFS

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth youth has been jailed here on charges involving the theft of a horse, sheriff's deputies said.

Deputies said they stopped John Clifford Cates, 19, while he and another man were leading two horses across a river bridge on El Paso's west side.

The other man rode off, deputies said. The second horse was found along the Rio Grande banks.

The horses, valued at $2,500, were taken from a boarding stable, officers said.

Cates was being held at the El Paso County Jail Tuesday on $10,000 bond.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Closing arguments were to be presented this week in the trial of a 17-year-old youth charged with raping a teen-age girl and shooting her in the head.

The 17-year-old girl remains partially paralyzed from the Sept. 15 attack. She testified she and a friend were on their way home from a Fort Bliss dance and walking near an El Paso schoolyard when they were attacked, raped and shot.

Defendant Victor Allen testified one of the two girls he said he and two other youths met on a street voluntarily submitted to sexual intercourse.

William Medauss, a neurosurgeon who operated on the wounded girl, testified she "cheated death several times" while hospitalized after the shooting.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The Tin Can Lady finally won.

Mildred Smith, known locally as the Tin Can Lady, has lobbied for can recycling for the past nine years.

The El Paso City Council this week endorsed voluntary recycling of cans and paper and directed the Sanitation Department to devise a plan to collect the items.

"Can't we understand that future generations are going to need (the metal in cans) and we are going to have to mine the dump?" Mrs. Smith asked the council.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state district court jury has ordered Cessna Aircraft Co. to pay $2.2 million to families of two men killed in a 1976 airplane crash.

State District Judge Pete Lowry could reduce the award, however.

The award was in favor of the survivors of Benjamin A. Smithson, 31, an instructor, and James E. Parker, 34, a student, who died Oct. 19, 1976, in a crash near Texico, N.M.

Smithson was from Clovis, N.M., and Parker was a feed dealer in Stephenville. The suit was tried in Austin because the airplane was bought here.

At issue was how well the plane was built to withstand the impact of a crash. Lawyers for the families said Smithson and Parker would have survived if legs on the Cessna 150 trainer's two seats had not buckled.

A Cessna attorney said, "I suspect we will appeal."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The city has successfully marketed $100 million in bonds to finance a low-interest mortgage loan program for families with annual incomes of $30,000 or less.

Brokers had failed the first time around to find buyers for the bonds on the New York City market because of a 10 percent limit on interest the city could pay investors.

Individual loans will be restricted to $70,000.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR LAMB — I am a 64-year-old female and I've had quite a few attacks of pain under the rib cage and in the abdominal area. These pains last from four to six hours. I was once X-rayed for ulcers and for my gallbladder and everything was all right. I was wondering if this could be a spastic colon. I also am overweight and would like a good diet to lose weight. What would you suggest for a spastic colon — diet or medication?

DEAR READER — You did the right thing to have a medical examination. It's impossible to tell what's really causing pains without a thorough examination. Yes, you're right, you can have such pains from a spastic colon. But I caution you that fact doesn't mean that a spastic colon is causing your problem. That diagnosis should only be made if your history of bowel movements and digestive disturbances is consistent with it.

Often the way this happens is the colon, which is a long muscular tube, will go into spasm. When it does this, gas will be trapped behind the area of the spasm. The gas distends the colon just like an inflated balloon.

The colon is really a horse-shoe-shaped tube that runs around the outer edge of the abdominal cavity, so it does come up and bend underneath the right rib margin, then passes across your upper abdomen, bends again under the left rib margin and descends down your left side. Gas tends to accumulate where the colon makes a sharp bend under the liver just under the right rib margin and also where it bends again on the left side just underneath the ribs.

To give you more information about the spastic colon so you can have a better idea whether that's applicable to you, I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Frequently, individuals with a mild spastic colon can control most of their symptoms by changing their diet and developing good bowel habits, all of which is discussed in the issue of The Health Letter I'm sending you. The chemical laxative habit is a poor idea for such people.

As you requested, I'm also sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. If you decide to lose weight, you're going to have to be careful to include enough foods in your diet that contain bulk. If you don't get enough bulk while dieting, that can contribute to constipation and colon problems. Eat lots of raw, leafy vegetables and be sure that you have enough cereal that has bran in it to help provide some bulk.

New solutions sought to kidnapping dilemma

By JIM BOARDMAN
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — At age 3, Christopher Ascarte has been kidnapped twice. His mother, Lorie Kesler, is accused of snatching him at a California supermarket and spiriting him away to the little Utah town of Beaver.

Three months later, two men grabbed the boy out of her car on Main Street.

With police in pursuit, the men sped four miles to an air strip and jumped in a plane that Christopher's father, Max Ascarte, had kept idling. The police car, siren blaring, chased the plane down the runway, coming within 10 feet of the aircraft.

It was "right out of the movies," says Earl Dorius, who is handling the case for the Utah Attorney General's office. Both parents face criminal charges of child snatching — he in Utah and she in California.

But with as many as three child snatchings in Utah in one month alone, and national estimates of 25,000 to 100,000 each year, authorities in several states are trying to find civil rather than traditional criminal remedies for what is sometimes called custodial interference.

"There's been quite a dramatic increase in the last five years of child-stealing extraditions. It's a rather common occurrence and a widespread problem in the country," said Dorius.

"We're trying to work out a harmonious solution without trying to put two parents in jail," he said. "They get really ugly. A lot of emotions run very high."

The states' efforts to solve the problem seem at variance with a bill currently under congressional consideration. The measure would make child snatching a federal crime, with a penalty of six months in prison for parents who kidnap their children.

The Carter administration opposes the bill because of the cost — an estimated $200,000 a year for investigators from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare — and because it would put the FBI in the midst of domestic squabbles.

Utah has joined 17 other states in passing an act that establishes uniform criteria for "which is the best court to resolve the issue of custody," Dorius said. "It requires courts of different states to work together rather than have this battle of judgments with spouses going to court in different states."

Tina Falvo, extradition secretary for Gov. Scott Matheson, said the case of Christopher Ascarte was already in the criminal courts, with both states seeking extradition, when Matheson stepped in and sent letters to both parties.

"I am personally opposed to the use of the extradition process in criminal proceedings to resolve what I perceive to be a highly emotional, domestic dispute," the governor wrote. "The preferred remedy of course would be a full hearing of the issue of custody where both parents are present and can testify. Criminal prosecution of each parent would hardly be in the best interests of the children."

In another case — this one resolved — A Colorado woman snatched her 12-year-old daughter who had become "distraught and despondent" living with her father, Dorius said.

The mother "snatched the child from school, pulled up roots and came to Utah and settled here," he said. The father sought extradition of his former wife, but Utah authorities explained the "mother's side of the story" to the Colorado prosecutor, who then withdrew criminal charges.

In a third case, Matheson refused to honor an extradition request from California where a district attorney wanted to prosecute a Utah man for child snatching against the wishes of the man's divorced wife, from whom the child had been taken.

Dorius said the woman had initially asked for the prosecution, but then changed her mind. "My children think I'm a wicked person for wanting to put Daddy in jail," Dorius said the woman had told him.

After studying both sides of the issue, Dorius said, "We felt the equities were on the father's side and he should not be prosecuted. We tried to get the DA to back off."

In all cases, "We start with the premise that the child's interest is paramount," Dorius said. Lowell Isom, child welfare supervisor for the Family Services Division in Salt Lake County, said the child who is snatched by one parent from another is likely to have severe readjustment problems.

Also, "what one parent says about the other" is often hurtful and difficult for the child to understand, Isom said.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently to celebrate a 70th birthday (mine), a group of couples went to a very fine restaurant. Our middle-aged waitress was wearing a tight black skirt slit up to her waist. Each time she came down the short stairway she showed a very shapely leg. We all remarked about it during dinner.

Upon leaving — meaning to compliment her — I said quietly, "That's a pretty decent exposure," whereupon she shouted so all could hear, "Why, you dirty old man!"

My wife, coming up behind me, demanded, "Did you pinch her?" Everyone in our party and most of the people in the restaurant had a good laugh — at my expense.

I quickly went back and pocketed the generous tip I had left for her. Abby, if they flaunt it, shouldn't they be complimented? And was I wrong to have pocketed the tip?

TIPPED OFF IN TACOMA

DEAR TIPPED: When they flaunt it, even if you enjoy it, ignore it. You shouldn't have pocketed the tip. If the waitress served your party well, she earned it — even if she does have a big mouth.

DEAR ABBY: When my mother-in-law handed me my Christmas gift last year she said, "You don't seem like the type who would like this, so if you don't want it, please give it back to me because I love it!"

Abby, I was in a no-win situation. As I unwrapped it, I was hurt to think that she would give me a gift she knew I wouldn't like. Well, she was right. It was a gaudily decorated trinket box, in terrible taste and about as useless as anything could be. It was obvious that she wanted me to give it back to her. Well, I'm not in the habit of telling people I don't like their gifts, so I told her I thought it was "interesting" and kept it. She seemed surprised and disappointed.

15 students apply for Altrusa aid

Fifteen applications have been received for the annual Altrusa scholarship, reported Ruby Royse at this week's meeting of the club.

The $750 scholarship will be awarded to a graduating female student from Pampa High School. Mrs. Royse is chairman of the Vocational Services Committee.

Mary McDaniel, president, conducted the business session at the noon luncheon. She announced that several Pampa Altrusans recently attended a Leaders' Training Seminar for Area III, District Nine, in Big Spring. Glyndene Shelton, district director, arranged the seminar, which was attended by Joyce Shelton, Sandra Maune, Leona Willis, Geneva Tidwell, Mary McDaniel and Ruby Royse.

Jane Gattis reported on progress made in establishing an Altrusa Club in Perryton.

Leona Willis conducted a quiz on Founders' Fund Vocational Aid, an international project that providing grants to women wishing to enter the work force.

Mika Moore and Karen Motley were introduced by Rena Belle Anderson as Girls of the Month.

Sharon Caldwell was introduced as a new member. The group honored the late Irene Cox, an Altrusan, with a moment of silence.

Dr. Wallace: I need help fast. My parents are divorced and I live with my father but I always visited my mother and we were great friends. Lately my mother has been seeing an alcoholic and has started drinking.

Now whenever I see my mom on the weekends we get into a big fight over her alcoholic friend. — Pat, Seymour, Ind.

Pat: Your mother knows how you feel about her friend so forget fighting about it every time you see her.

Mother needs lots of love and especially from you. Be cheerful and set an example. When you feel that Mother needs encouragement and guidance, give it to her but be gentle and don't start an argument. Your mom needs you now more than ever before. Be a great example and comfort to her and leave a few Al-Anon booklets with her to read.

Dr. Wallace: I live in Seattle and travel quite a distance every day to attend a private school. I like this school but I really want to attend the local public school.

Because of the private school, I have no friends in my neighborhood so I'm totally alone and bored every weekend and the entire summer.

My parents went to a lot of trouble to get me into this private school but I know that I would feel more at home in a public school.

I'd like your point of view. — Sandra, Seattle, Wash.

Sandra: Unless there are very unusual circumstances I do not believe that teens should be going to a private school unless the teen AND the parents both agree on it. In your case, I would permit you to attend your local public school.

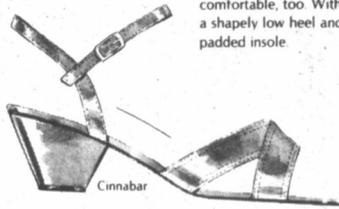

Some private schools are better academically than the public schools, some are not. But regardless of the institution, it's the individual who dictates the amount he or she will learn.

Will NFL lose the battle of Oakland?

THIS PHOTO of Colorado State University basketball coach Jim Williams was taken Thursday afternoon as Williams waited outside a conference room at the University of Southern Colorado as the OAKLAND, Calif. (NEA) - The enmity between the commissioner of the National Football League, Pete Rozelle, and the owner of the Oakland Raiders, Al Davis, has never been more apparent - though they've been bitter rivals since the NFL-AFL war of the 1960s when Davis was commissioner of the younger league.

Saying he is tired of Rozelle's "dictatorial" and "arrogant" methods, Davis charges, "He's a liar, and I say it unequivocally." Strong words, those.

They're prompted by the legal hurdles erected by the NFL to block Davis from moving the Raiders to Los Angeles (and making himself a few million more bucks). Actually, the legalities have become an impenetrable obstacle course. It takes a battery of lawyers to hack through the snarl of court maneuvers that have enveloped the proposed franchise switch.

At the last count, there were nine major actions on various state and federal dockets in northern and southern California, many of them tending to obfuscate the central issue - which is whether Davis, in the grand American tradition, has the right to take his business where he wants it.

"I don't feel they can stop me," he says stridently, "unless I want to be stopped." Nevertheless, there is a strong possibility that delayed court decisions will force the Raiders to remain in Oakland for the 1980 season.

The key case is the anti-trust action brought by the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, future home (perhaps) of the Raiders, against the NFL. The Coliseum maintains that Section 4.3 of the NFL Constitution and By-Laws, which Rozelle and the other owners would invoke to prevent Oakland's move, is invalid and in restraint of trade.

Originally, Judge Harry Pregerson of the federal district court in Los Angeles granted an injunction prohibiting the National Football League from invoking Section 4.3. So the Raiders set up shop in the Southland. But the injunction was stayed by the U.S. Court of Appeals, Ninth District.

The week of May 5, in Pasadena, Calif., there will be a hearing on those rulings by a three-judge panel of the same federal appeals court.

On its decision will hinge the immediate future of the Raiders.

The problem is that no one knows for sure when the judges' panel will hand down its ruling. It could come in a week - the Raiders hope. It could come in six months.

Meanwhile, pragmatically, the Raiders must know by July 1 where they'll be playing in order to get ready for the season. So, an educated guess is that they'll do business as usual, meaning in Oakland, in 1980 and then shuffle south to Los Angeles in 1981, a trail of legal smoke following.

The NFL seems determined to block the move, and the Raiders have retorted with their own $160 million anti-trust suit against the league.

"I'm working against the most powerful machine in America today," says Davis. "But I'm not worried if the judges rule against me. I've got something else in mind."

His reasons for wanting to move are obvious. He has already projected that being in Los Angeles for the next decade would yield a minimum of $45 million in extra revenue because of the bigger market and the better stadium deal with the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Davis feels he needs the added revenue because he foresees true free agency coming to pro football after the current management-players agreement expires in 1981. That would mean a dramatic escalation in salaries since pro football players now make less than half as much, on the average, as basketball players - $68,000 to $141,000.

There is even a greater stake in the battle - the sanctity of the existing NFL structure, particularly its constitution. The league, which accuses Davis of anarchy, is taking a chance on having its foundation ruled illegal by going to court.

A significant meeting was held in October 1978. Until then, a franchise move required unanimous approval of all 28 owners. Wary of anti-trust implications and to pave the way for Carroll Rosenbloom to move the Los Angeles Rams to Anaheim, the league amended Section 4.3 to require only 21 of 28 votes for a franchise switch. The tally for the amendment change was, however, not unanimous. It was 27-0. Oakland abstained.

Davis claims he reached an oral agreement with Rozelle: "I would allow the 27-0 vote to be announced as unanimous if he agreed that I reserve the right to move my football team. If he didn't agree, the vote was illegal."

Davis further claims that minutes recorded by one of the teams present back him up. Now he ascribes a personal motive for Rozelle's opposition on the move to Los Angeles. "He wants it for himself," claims Davis. "I know so. I've offered him Oakland." (Rozelle has heatedly denied such self-interest.)

The irony is that none of the haggling about the Oakland Raiders moving south would have come about if the Oakland Coliseum Commission had protected its flanks the last three years.

The Oakland Coliseum has had little or no improvement since the Raiders became its first tenants in 1966 (when it was built for a piddling $26 million). Charlie Finley moved his baseball A's there two years later, got receipts from parking and concessions (the Raiders didn't), and also became owner of the scoreboard and the stadium club.

Tight race in Petroleum League

The race for first place appears to be going right down to the wire between The 4 and Johnny's Angels in the Petroleum Women's Bowling League at Harvester Lanes.

The 4 leads Johnny's Angels by a slim two-game margin heading into the final two weeks of league activity.

Bowling on The 4 squad are Gwen Tidwell (165), Stormy Urbaneyk (140), Knoxine Cotham (130), and Cyndy Thompson (159). Johnny's Angels are Amy Wuest (149), Melissa Justice (136), Shirley Duke (144), and Carol Furrh (159).

The Four has an 82½-33½ won-lost record while Johnny's Angels are 80½-39½.

High team game (697) and high team series (1933) belong to The Four while Tidwell has bowled the high series (591) in league play this season.

Jean Patton of Circulation Inc. bowled a 240 for the league's high game.

There were 44 games in the National Football League in 1979 in which 300 yards or more were gained by passing.

The machine the U.S. Golf Association uses to test balls at its Far Hills, N.J., headquarters is called "Iron Byron."

Baseball's schedulermakers don't make doubleheaders like they used to. The national pastime's version of the two-for-the-price-of-one sale is in jeopardy.

In Los Angeles, the Dodgers are scheduled to play all 81 of their home games on single dates. If there are rainouts, a doubleheader is possible. But waiting for rain is like waiting for a subway in L.A.

Baseball fans caught a big break last Saturday when NBC gave us a near doubleheader as the Houston-Los Angeles game went 17 innings and lasted 5

Harvesters host district track meet Saturday

The District 3-AAAA boys' track and field meet gets underway Saturday morning at Randy Matson Field with Pampa having the most inexperienced squad in the five-team field.

However, Pampa coach Mike Brent isn't counting his Harvesters out. He looks for them to score points in every event they enter.

"Experience-wise, we just don't have as much as the Amarillo schools, but anything can happen in track," Brent said. "If we can put together some good relay times combined with our strong field events, we could figure right in there at the top."

Out of 25 athletes on the roster, only five are seniors.

"It's been a good year. The kids have built a lot of pride in themselves and they've had fun doing it," he added.

Prelims and field events start at 10 a.m. while the finals are scheduled for 3:30 p.m. The top seven qualifiers in the prelims of each event advance to the finals.

Pampa's lineup looks like this:

400 relay (sprint)-James Borchardt, Kevin Coleman, Randy Slaybaugh, and Gary Dabbs.

800 relay-Joe Murray, Rick Kupcanas, and Ray Mendoza.

100-James Borchardt, Gary Dabbs, and Leroy Kuhn.

200-James Borchardt and Randy Slaybaugh.

400-Steve Kotara and Kevin Coleman.

Mile-Mike Wheeler.

Mile relay-Steve Kotara, Kevin Coleman, Raymond Mendoza, and Ricky Kupcanas.

Shot put-Danny Buzzard and Randy Slaybaugh.

Discus-Danny Buzzard and Doug Kennedy.

High jump-Kyle Bradford and Brad Mathis.

Long jump-Kyle Bradford, Randy Slaybaugh, and James Borchardt.

"I want to urge everyone to come out," Brent added. "It should be a nice day and people will have a chance to see some very good runners."

hours 35 minutes. NBC showed every out, which is a sharp contrast to last year when the network pulled away from a game in the eighth inning to show the National Sports Festival.

Baseball and baseball fans squawked then, and now it's fans of the immortal "B.J. and the Bear" who are doing the griping. NBC's New York switchboard received 210 calls from irate fans of "B.J." which is about a monkey and a trucker.

"Switching to the Sports Festival was a little different," said Arthur Watson, president of NBC Sports. "The score was 8-1 and the Festival was the beginning of our Olympic buildup."

Does that mean there are exceptions to the contractual provision that NBC must show a baseball game to its conclusion?

"No," said Watson. "We had conversations with the commissioner's office (They were called on the carpet). We said in the future, we would show baseball to its conclusion. It's a contractual commitment and we have since proceeded accordingly."

NBC had two shows in its late-night schedule taking priority over B.J.—a preview of Monday night's Oscar presentations, and "Saturday Night Live" with Burt Reynolds.

NBC would rather alienate the monkey than a big box-office star like Burt Reynolds. But it cost NBC nearly $1 million in advertising, sources said, to pre-empt B.J.

Baseball's sponsors pay $25,000 for a 30-second spot, much lower than prime-time rates. When the game went into prime time, the baseball sponsors came along for the ride—at bargain rates.

NBC has planned to pay $90 million for Saturday afternoons games, and seven prime-time games during the next four years.

ABC has paid an estimated $85 million for four years of Monday night games and late-season Sunday afternoon contests. It starts June 2.

In all, baseball is making an estimated $185 million—a 100 percent increase from the last agreement—for its network TV contracts.

ABC's prime-time broadcasts are exclusive. Prime-time, regular season baseball ratings have never been as high as football, the Olympics or entertainment programming, but they would be even lower if fans could choose between the national game or their local team.

On Saturdays they have that choice. And to NBC's dismay, fans in Chicago watch the Cubs, in New York the Yankees and in Los Angeles the Dodgers, even if a big game is on the network.

The bottom line on all this is that ratings winners can charge more for hawking beer, cars and jeans between innings.

National League roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Just when the Los Angeles Dodgers needed a hit man, Ron Cey began to gun down National League pitchers.

The stumbling Dodgers dropped five of their first six games as Cey got off to a dismal 2-for-23 start. But the stocky third baseman unloaded two singles and a double and drove in two runs in a 10-4 triumph over the San Diego Padres Wednesday night and ran his streak to seven hits in a row Thursday with a two-run homer and a pair of singles, including a tie-breaking two-run hit in the eighth inning that gave Los Angeles a 6-4 decision over the Houston Astros in the Dodgers' home opener.

"I've played long enough and I've been through these things before, so I wasn't worried," Cey said. "I wasn't swinging the bat for the most part like I was capable. We opened against the Astros and they got me out with good pitching. My timing was off, I was being over-anxious and not being as selective as I wanted. I wanted to get out of a rut."

It's a good thing he did because the Dodgers already are five games off the pace in the NL West as the unbeaten Cincinnati Reds made it eight in a row with a 4-1 victory over the winless Atlanta Braves. Elsewhere, the San Francisco Giants stopped San Diego 7-3, the St. Louis Cardinals outslugged the Pittsburgh Pirates 12-9 and the Chicago Cubs downed the New York Mets 4-1. Montreal and Philadelphia were not scheduled.

Cey, who homered in the third inning to cap a four-run burst against Nolan Ryan, delivered his game-winning single off rookie Dave Smith.

Reds 4, Braves 1

Frank Pastore fired a five-hitter while Dan Driessen and Ray Knight belted two-run homers off Phil Niekro in the fourth inning. The triumph moved the Reds within two of the major league record for victories at the start of a season.

Giants 7, Padres 3

Willie McCovey, a 42-year-old survivor from the San Francisco lineup in Candlestick Park's first game 20 years ago, drove in the first three runs to help the Giants and Vida Blue win their 1980 home opener after opening the season with a 1-6 record on the road. Blue, who is 7-0 against San Diego, lost his shutout in the ninth on Gene Tenace's three-run homer. Cardinals 12, Pirates 9

George Hendrick drove in six runs with three singles and a homer as St. Louis pounded out 17 hits. They battered John Candelaria for nine hits and eight runs in the first two innings. Garry Templeton also contributed four hits while Bobby Bonds drove in three runs with a single and double. Hendrick homered in the eighth off Rod Scurry, the fifth of six Pittsburgh pitchers.

Cubs 4, Mets 1

Rookie Carlos Lezcano's first major league hit—a two-run homer in the fifth inning—and a solo shot by Mike Tyson in the seventh powered Dennis Lamp to his second victory in the Cubs' home opener. Lamp scattered seven hits over eight innings and Bruce Sutter worked the ninth.

American League roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

In the sixth game of the 1975 World Series, Carlton Fisk hit the shot heard 'round the baseball world.

It ruined Sparky Anderson's day. On Thursday, Fisk hit a similar game-winning blast in extra innings.

And guess who was managing for the other team? That's right—Sparky Anderson.

"There's really no comparison because that World Series homer meant so much, a once-in-a-lifetime shot," said Fisk after his 11th-inning homer gave the Boston Red Sox a 5-4 victory over Anderson's Detroit Tigers. "However, it's a big thrill everytime you hit a game-winning homer."

Anderson, of course, was manager of the Cincinnati Reds when Fisk hit his 12th-inning homer in Fenway Park five years ago. In retrospect, Anderson has little to regret about that shot, since his Reds went on to win the Series.

Fisk knew he had really nailed the pitch from Aurelio Lopez Thursday. However, because of the wind, blowing left to right, he didn't know if the ball would stay fair.

"I actually stayed around the plate longer than I should have," he said. "I would have looked awfully foolish just standing there if it had been off the wall. But, no, I didn't try to pray it fair, or give it any body English. It didn't stay up there long enough."

In other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Kansas City Royals 5-2, the Chicago White Sox whipped the New York Yankees 8-6, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Milwaukee Brewers 1-0 and the Seattle Mariners beat the Minnesota Twins 4-3.

Richardson enters regionals

Kellye Richardson, who has proven her excellence on the basketball court as well as in track, represents Pampa in the Region 1-AAAA girls' track meet today at Lubbock.

Richardson, a senior, won the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 15.2 in the District 3-AAAA meet to qualify for regionals.

Field events at the Texas Tech track started at 9:30 a.m. today while running prelims are scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m. The top two finishers in each event advance to the state meet May 3.

The rest of the field events and all the running finals are scheduled Saturday.

The Region 1-AA girls' track meet also gets underway today with Canadian standing the best chance among Panhandle area schools of winning a team title.

Alicia Hobby and Teresa Morehead are the top point-getters in the individual events. Hobby is entered in the 220 and high jump while Morehead competes in the triple jump and 220.

Other Canadian qualifiers include Mary Parnell, 400; Tonia McLanahan and Nena Barber, 1600. All three Canadian relay teams (400, 800, and 1600) are entered in the regionals.

Olympic hockey star fading celebrity

SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) — Some day soon, Mike Eruzione will return home to Winthrop, Mass., to stay, and life will regain some normalcy.

He'll decide then what he's going to do — whether he'll go into coaching or into teaching. He has his bachelor's degree in physical education from Boston University. Or some other opportunity might come his way.

Meanwhile, Mike is basking in the glow of achievement that comes once in a lifetime, of finding a momentary celebrity, of finding that people react gloriously to what he and 19 other young men did one momentous week in February.

Mike, you see, was the captain of the U.S. hockey team that did the impossible by beating a squad from the U.S.S.R. that was generally acclaimed the best in the world, amateur or pro.

And the Americans did it with an éclat and emotionalism that lingers even now among the individual players who won the hockey gold medal for the United States.

The night before the American team was to play the Russians in the decisive game, Mike remembers trying to sleep in his small room at the Olympic Village in Ray Brook, N.Y. "Every hour," he recalls, "I saw the clock ... 12 ... 1 ... 2 ... 3 ... Maybe some time around 6 I missed a couple. But you know, when I got up at 9, I felt good, like I'd had a full night's sleep. I was ready."

In the game that night, with the score tied at 3, with exactly 10 minutes remaining to play, Eruzione fired the puck past Soviet goalie Vladimir Myshkin to give the United States its sensational 4-3 victory.

Since then, a whole new world has opened up for the short (5-foot-9), stocky, black-haired, intense but friendly Italian from New England.

He was older than the others at 26. Most of them were right out of college, but Mike had played a couple of years of minor league hockey with the Toledo Gold Diggers. And in the summers he did some house painting and substitute teaching.

Under the weird rules of amateurism, he was still simon-pure though he had attended two National Hockey League training camps and had played six exhibition games with the New York Rangers and some others with the Colorado Rockies.

But unlike 11 of the U.S. Olympic hockey team who chose to capitalize on their instant fame by signing professional contracts — for example, Mark Johnson with Pittsburgh, Steve Christoff with Minnesota, Dave Christian with Winnipeg, goalie Jim Craig with Atlanta; all of them guaranteed at least $225,000 for three years — Eruzione decided that playing hockey for a living wouldn't be his bag.

"I felt I had accomplished everything I ever wanted to accomplish as an athlete," says Mike, revealing he turned down five NHL offers. "I'm not gifted. I have to work my tail off to excel at anything. I couldn't have brought the same emotionalism and hard work to it that I had in the Olympics. I lost 10 pounds there."

Nevertheless, the aftermath of the Olympic Games has been incredible to him. A computer firm signed him for a month of speaking engagements to talk about his Olympic experience, and he has visited Florida, Chicago, Los Angeles, northern Michigan,

San Francisco and New York.

"I go to dinner," he says wondrously, "and I meet Walter Cronkite. I talked to President Carter on the phone. Those things don't happen to the everyday person. And I am THE everyday person."

In Los Angeles, he visited a boyhood friend who worked as a page at the NBC studios. The friend took him around several sets until they came to one where "Hollywood Squares" was filming.

"The producer," recalls Mike, "recognized me. He said, 'Put on a shirt and tie. You're going on the show.' The people in the audience applauded."

"Now, I said, 'I can't go on.' Well, they pushed me on as a guest, not a contestant, and Peter Marshall and Arty Johnson came over and talked to me. The show will be on May 2."

Mike also came away with a swag of $1,000 in parting gifts.

What really has impressed Eruzione, however, is the gut response of the public. "The people," he says earnestly, "keep telling me how patriotic they feel because of what we did. They never felt it before. They didn't know where the country was going. They were crying because we won. They've all been so sincere."

They respond instinctively to Mike Eruzione's own sincerity as evinced on the victory stand in the Olympic Arena at Lake Placid, that unforgettable moment when he stood there as the representative of the American team and then signaled the rest to join him, mobbing the podium.

"That's what I remember most — about the Olympics," says Mike. "Winning. Then standing there with the other guys and getting the acknowledgement of the crowd."

Baylor signees

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor has announced the signing of four junior college transfers to basketball scholarships.

Two of the signees — 6-8 Ozell Hall of McLennan Community College and Ronnie Blake of Kilgore Junior College — will have three years of eligibility remaining.

The other two, 6-10 Tommie Tamaat of Dodge City (Kan.) Junior College and 6-6 John Copeland of El Camino (Calif.) Community College will be eligible for two more years.

Blake was considered by many as the outstanding high school player in Texas when he led Lufkin High School to the Class 4A state basketball championship in 1979.

Questions and answers

Q. In football, if there is a bad call by one of the referees and another ref disagrees, can they ask for help from the cameras? — Scott Eaton, Eldred, Pa.

A. No. The subject of NFL instant replay has been brought up increasingly the last couple of years. And just as quickly it has been spiked by Commissioner Pete Rozelle because it's too expensive, too cumbersome and sometimes too indecisive. Right now, they use a communal policy to settle disagreements, the various officials huddling on the field to decide which one had the best view and, ergo, determines the call. No one official has arbitrary right of veto.

Q. When is Pete Rozelle going to display a little courage and outlaw the spiking of the ball after an NFL touchdown? Wouldn't you agree that it has gotten out of hand? — E.J., Salisbury, Md.

A. On the contrary, I think there's a backlash. Some players are going for much more restrained behavior after scoring. You don't see Earl Campbell spiking the ball. At any rate, I don't think Pete Rozelle should be regulating the mores of players in this instance. The competition committee of the NFL could do it. Or, more likely, restraint will come from respective teams and coaches. Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings, for instance, doesn't tolerate spiking the ball.

Q. Why doesn't the United States use professional basketball stars in the Olympics instead of the college players? Has this been discussed and will there be a change? — Juan Chastang, Mobile, Ala.

A. Not until they change the whole concept of the Olympic Games, which is, theoretically, to bring together amateurs in a spirit of peaceful play, emphasizing the individuals. Of course, we all know what a sham that is. The Soviet-bloc teams are really composed of professionals in that their sport is all they're committed to for a living. I think the Olympic movement got in trouble when team sports and unofficial national scores were overemphasized, traducing the original intent of the Games.

Q. What percentage of starting major league professional football players are black? — William Laster, Philadelphia.

A. Records on that score aren't kept. But I can tell you that as of now 47 percent of all the players on active NFL rosters are black. That same percentage would be pretty close for starters, too. In the Super Bowl, 11 of the 22 Los Angeles offensive and defensive starters were black; Pittsburgh had 14 of the 22.

Worner into regatta races now

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It's hard to visualize our old friend, Ted Worner, getting involved in anything as dignified and society-oriented as yacht racing, but here he is, all lathered up about something called the International Dinghy Team Regatta.

It sounds like fun, all those little two-man boats — 140 sailors from 10 countries — scampering around Long Island Sound for a week, starting next Sunday, with nothing to gain but some trophies and a tin to put gin in.

But Teddy beating the drums for it? It's hard to believe. We are inclined to associate him more with horse racing, baseball, lotteries and sweepstakes.

He is a promotional genius of the old school without the flamboyance of Cash 'n' Carry Pyle or the malarkey of a P.T. Barnum. With his perpetual vest and pencil-thin mustache, he is strictly Madison Avenue with a dash of Hollywood. His forte: Imagination.

Worner, an ex-reporter, used to feed material to Walter Winchell and other Broadway columnists. He was a partner of the late Jackie Robinson in an exhibition tour of black baseball stars. He staged the major league baseball lottery for the game's 1 millionth run (Bob Watson, then of the Houston Astros, won it by scoring four seconds ahead of Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion, who hit a home run, should have circled the bases faster.)

Now Worner, in a very subtle way, is attempting to get the public interested in the regatta just off Larchmont, N.Y.

This was the beginning of "Frostbite Racing." It is a sport that originated on Long Island Sound — "Made in USA."

Such captains as Cornelius Sears, Jr., and Bus Mosbacher credited the "Frostbite Kids" with preserving the American tradition of never having 'lost the bottomless old jug first win in 1851.

"It's going to be fascinating," Worner said. "There will be 15, 10-man teams from 10 countries, England having three teams, the U.S., Ireland and Holland two each and the others — Canada, Australia, New Zealand, West Germany, Norway and Denmark with one."

"They will race seven hours a day, five boats from one country facing five boats of another."

Watson leads T of C tournament

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson had just completed what he called "the finest round I've played all year." He's shot a 7-under-par 65. He'd missed the course record by a single stroke.

And he's looking for improvement.

"Hopefully," he said with a mischievous grin, "I'll do better tomorrow."

Actually, the 65 that set the first round pace Thursday in the $300,000 Tournament of Champions could have been a little better.

"What I did was turn a 62 or 63 into a 65," Watson said. "I feel it could have been a very, very good round."

He one-putted 10 times and missed four other birdie opportunities from 6-8 feet.

It's all the result of a tiny correction he made in his swing, Watson said. "It's a matter of weight distribution," he said. "I was hitting too much off my right side, moving my weight too much to the right on the backswing."

The swing problem, which Watson said he'd "been fighting for a month or so," had produced a less than successful Masters for the man who has been the outstanding performer in the game for the past three years.

The correction, he said, had his game back where he wants it.

"I hit the ball very well," he said.

"The missing confidence is back. It's nice to have."

As the first man off the tee in the exclusive event that brings together only the winners of pro golf titles from the past 12 months, Watson got his score on the board first and forced the rest of the 30-man field into a catch-up position.

It produced some exceptionally low scoring on the tough, 6,889 yard La Costa Country Club course.

They get rained on, yelled at, chased by dogs, cold, late and taken for granted . . . .

Celtics open against 76ers in NBA East finals tonight

By the Associated Press

The Boston Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers open one playoff series while the Milwaukee Bucks hope to end theirs against the Seattle SuperSonics when National Basketball Association action resumes tonight.

The Celtics, who finished just two games ahead of the 76ers in the Atlantic Division during the regular season, meet Philadelphia at Boston Garden to open the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

Celtics Coach Bill Fitch, for one, feels the pressure of the 76ers' regular-season chase produced more pressure than the playoff meeting.

"We felt pressure ... coming down to the wire, trying to win the pennant," he said of his Celtics, who jumped from a 29-53 record in 1978-79 to a league-leading 61-21 in 1979-80.

"No team I ever coached in 27 years had the same regular-season pressure we had," said Fitch. "If we won by 40 points, every time we'd look at the paper, Philly won by 50."

The teams split their regular season series, each winning three times at home. The Celtics went on to sweep Houston in four games in their conference semifinal while Philadelphia ousted Atlanta in five.

Sixers Coach Bill Cunningham says the ease of Boston's early-round triumph may work to Philadelphia's benefit.

"They may have been lulled in Houston and think they're in a cake walk," he said.

Celtics rookie Larry Bird said he wasn't so sure.

"All games to me are the same. There's just as much pressure in the regular season as in the playoffs," he said.

The pressure in the Milwaukee-Seattle series is on the defending champion SuperSonics, who are one game away from elimination.

Milwaukee's 108-98 victory in Seattle Tuesday night gave the Bucks the home-court edge for Game Six of the Western Conference semifinal, and that's just fine with Coach Don Nelson.

"We don't want to go back there (to Seattle)," said Nelson. "You don't have a chance too often like we have — to do it right here."

If they don't do it in Milwaukee, a deciding game would be played in Seattle next Tuesday. The winner would meet the Los Angeles Lakers, who ousted the Phoenix Suns to advance to the Western Conference final.

The Bucks likely will have to do without Junior Bridgeman, the NBA's highest-scoring reserve. Bridgeman landed hard on his lower back after a collision with Seattle's Jack Sikma Tuesday night and was hospitalized.

Milwaukee forward David Meyers also was injured, suffering a bruised and hyperextended knee during a third-quarter collision Tuesday, but may be available for duty.

Stars stun Canadians

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The Minnesota North Stars and New York Islanders have been doing damage to the oft-expressed theory that the "home-ice advantage" is of crucial importance in National Hockey League playoff games.

The North Stars, making only their second playoff appearance in seven seasons, won their third consecutive road game Thursday night by stunning the defending champion Montreal Canadiens for the second time in a row.

Steve Payne scored twice and goalie Gilles Meloche continued his goaltending magic with 40 saves as Minnesota ran its Stanley Cup winning streak to five games with a 4-1 triumph. That sent the North Stars home to Bloomington, Minn., needing two more victories to score a stunning upset in the quarterfinal series.

Yvon Lambert scored his seventh goal of the playoffs for Montreal, which was shut out 3-0 in the series opener.

"We came here wanting to win at least one," said Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor. "To take both is just incredible. I'd be a liar if I said I wasn't the most surprised guy around."

Sonmor might have some competition from the crowd of 16,156 at the Montreal Forum, where the Canadiens haven't lost consecutive playoff games since the 1966 final series against the Detroit Red Wings.

"Our mistakes have cost us, but Meloche is hot," said Montreal goalie Denis Herron. "When a goalie gets as hot as he is, everything seems to go right."

For the Islanders, everything has been going right in overtime recently. Three of New York's last four games have gone into overtime: All three have been on the road and all three have resulted in Islanders triumphs.

The latest was a riveting 5-4 victory over the Bruins, thanks to Bob Bourne's 60-foot slap shot after the New York left wing intercepted a Terry O'Reilly pass at the Boston blue line 1:24 into extra play.

The outcome came on the heels of a victory at Los Angeles in the preliminary round on Ken Morrow's goal at 6:55 of overtime Friday night and Clark Gillies' tally at 1:02 of overtime Wednesday night in the series opener with the Bruins.

Two other teams also took 2-0 leads as the quarterfinals continued: the Buffalo Sabres made Scotty Bowman the winningest coach in playoff history by beating the Chicago Black Hawks 6-4 and the Philadelphia Flyers beat the New York Rangers 4-1. Sabres 6, Black Hawks 4.

Danny Gare and Ric Seiling scored two goals apiece to pace the Buffalo victory. The triumph was the 101st of Bowman's coaching career, one more than the total of former all-time leader Dick Irvin, who coached the Canadiens, Maple Leafs and Black Hawks in his 24-year career.

Flyers 4, Rangers 1

Goals 14 seconds apart by Paul Holmgren and Bill Barber in the second period helped Philadelphia beat the Rangers for the second consecutive night.

Holmgren finished a perfect give-and-go passing play with Ken Linseman at 10:25, then Barber powered a rebound over New York goalie John Davidson. Rick MacLeish made it 3-0 before Ron Duguay ruined the shutout bid of Flyers goalie Pete Peeters.

Mike Douglas retaliates in 'Group W' decision

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is discord in Afternoon Talk Show, U.S.A., that sleepy realm of infinite hype, idle chatter and singing hosts. Mike Douglas has proven unforgiving in the matter of his nasty split with Group W, which resulted in old-hand Douglas being replaced by young and shiny John Davidson.

Douglas has a new show and a big new deal, with which he would like to blow Davidson out of the water. Nothing against Davidson, says Douglas. Much against Group W.

Douglas was fired by Group W, the Westinghouse broadcast system, last January after 18 years on "The Mike Douglas Show." Word was that Douglas — and his audience — were too old to warrant the kind of money Douglas was looking for in a new contract.

"That," says Douglas, "is so much... compost, that's a good word for it. I've got the youngest demographics on television."

Douglas, who comes to this interview with his wife and two publicists, whips out a Group W memo.

"This is their paper," he says, brandishing copies of monthly ratings research reports. Across the corner of one sheet is a note from Joe Goldfarb, a Group W salesman, to Ed Vane, Group W president. "Best November ever," it says, in reference to the performance of Douglas's show last November.

The Douglases believe that the Group W firing gave the public the impression that Mike Douglas was through. Douglas, they say, learned of his firing in the newspapers.

Ed Vane, of Group W, disagrees. "We feel we acted very honorably. It was a business judgment, and there were a couple of factors in the decision."

Vane wouldn't say that Douglas was too old, only that: "Most important was the availability of John Davidson for doing a variety musical talk program. He represented Westinghouse's best long-term interests."

"In addition, there were money differences of opinion with Mike, and there were statements from certain large markets that they'd not continue with the 'Mike Douglas' program but would continue with a 'John Davidson Show.'"

Douglas has signed a new deal with an outfit called Syndicast, and he says his new show will air in as many markets (beginning in September) as his old Group W show. Not only that, but at least one Westinghouse TV station is passing on the Davidson show and going with Douglas. Others, says Douglas, will soon follow suit.

"They dug the grave, but the grave is empty," he says. "There'll be other bodies in the grave, though, because somebody will have to answer for this. 'The Mike Douglas Show' is the only program that ever made a plugged nickel for Group W. They'll (Westinghouse executives) go down the line, heads will be rolling all over the place."

Cessna ordered to pay in suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district court jury has ordered Cessna Aircraft Co. to pay $2.2 million to families of two men killed in a 1976 airplane crash.

State District Judge Pete Lowry could reduce the award, however.

The award was in favor of the survivors of Benjamin A. Smithson, 31, an instructor, and James E. Parker, 34, a student, who died Oct. 19, 1976, in a crash near Texico, N.M.

Smithson was from Clovis, N.M., and Parker was a feed dealer in Stephenville. The suit was tried in Austin because the airplane was bought here.

At issue was how well the plane was built to withstand the impact of a crash. Lawyers for the families said Smithson and Parker would have survived if legs on the Cessna 150 trainer's two seats had not buckled.

A Cessna attorney said, "I suspect we will appeal."

"FACE IT! I'M THE REAL THING." If you drove past a trailer in the 600 block of Wells Street Wednesday, your eyes did not deceive you. There really was a bear in that trailer on the street. Apparently, someone likes their "teddy bears" to be authentic. This stuffed bear was tied in a trailer, probably waiting for his new home, or maybe on his way back from a visit to the taxidermist.
