PAMPA - Steven Lee Cannady of Akron, Ohio is in 31st District Court today facing charges of aggravated robbery stemming from an April 20 episode in Shamrock in which an elderly woman was robbed in her home.

It is alleged Cannady entered Patti Scott's Shamrock home on April 20 and took her wallet containing less than $5 and pulled telephone lines from the wall.

Cannady allegedly fled her home in a stolen GMC van which was subsequently recovered after a second burglary in Groom and highspeed chase in Carson County.

Cannady pleaded guilty to the Carson County charge of burglary and received a 12year prison sentence in exchange for the guilty plea.

The case is being heard in Pampa on a change of venue motion from the defense.

Israel-Hezbollah battles expand to Palestinian targets

By HUSSEIN DAKROUB Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Israeli helicopter gunships rocklargest Lebanon's eted Palestinian refugee camp today, hitting the home of a dissident guerrilla leader who escaped unscathed.

The attack on the camp of Ein el-Hilweh near the port city of Sidon was the first on a Palestinian target during Israel's six-day-old war against Shiite Muslim militants.

Police said three Cobra gunships fired six rockets before dawn, hitting the house of Col. Munir Makdah. Two of his bodyguards and the wife of one them were wounded, police said.

Makdah opposed the 1993 peace accord between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel, and broke away from PLO leader Yasser Arafat to form his own militia.

He later struck an alliance with the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, whose cross-border Katyusha rocket attacks on northern Israeli towns triggered the Israeli offensive that began Thursday.

Israel hopes the air raids, which have forced 400,000 refugees to flee north towards Beirut, will pressure Lebanon and Syria, the dominant power tains on the southern edge of the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley.

Shells hit a U.N. peacekeeping position in the village of Qana today, but there were no casualties, said Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon.

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres said his country was prepared to discuss peace but would not initiate talks. The intensity of the Israeli campaign against Hezbollah has been colored in part by Peres' desire to prove to Israeli voters before May 29 elections that he is not soft on security.

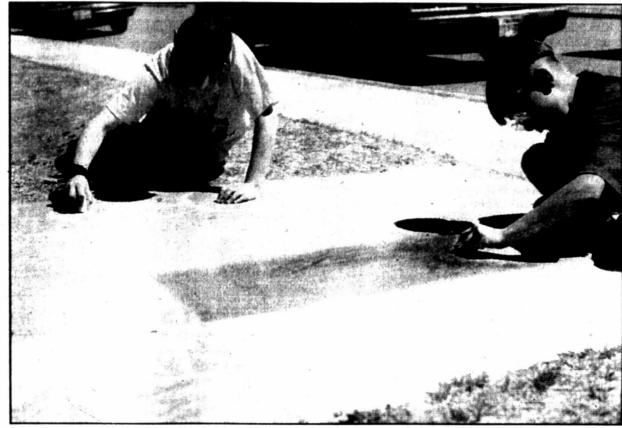

Meanwhile, Hezbollah guerrillas said they fired a new barrage of Soviet-designed Katyusha rockets on Israel's northern Galilee panhandle. Israel army radio said the projectiles crashed in northern Israel, causing damage but no casualties.

Hezbollah proudly announced its first fatality of the offensive, saying a guerrilla was killed Monday. That brought the day's toll to eight killed and 23 wounded. Eleven Israelis were slightly wounded by Hezbollah rockets.

Two Lebanese soldiers were killed in an air raid Monday on the village of Bazouriye southeast of Tyre, security sources said.

All told, 39 people have been LAKETON - An accident just before 10 p.m. Monday claimed the life of 55-year-old man after his Geo Metro collided head on with a truck tractor trailer 20.3 miles east of Pampa on Texas 152, according to Department of Public Safety trooper Robert Grimes of Childress.

Billy Ray McDowell of Mannford, Okla. was rushed by emergency helicopter to Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo, where he died at 1:46 a.m., said Grimes.

Investigating officers were unable to determine whether McDowell was wearing a seat belt because the car door was ripped off, he said.

McDowell's passenger, Ada Jones, 54, also of Mannford, is in good condition at Coronado Hospital with non-incapacitating injuries, Grimes said.

She was wearing a seat belt at the time of crash.

The driver of the 1995 Freightliner, Clarence Curtis Conway Jr. of Oklahoma City, was uninjured.

Grimes explained the Freightliner was eastbound on Texas 152 when it collided head on with the 1994 Geo. The truck swerved into the right ditch to avoid collision, but clipped the front of the Geo with its side, Grimes said.

AMARILLO-Buckner Children and Family Services, a part of Buckner Baptist Benevolence, in conjunction with First Baptist Church of Pampa, will provide a new service to Pampa and the surrounding area.

Dierk Milum, a family therapist from the Buckner Children and Family Services, will provide family and individual counseling at First Baptist Church from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursdays beginning April 18.

The service is free. To schedule an appointment or for more information call Dale Moreland or Janice Tucker at First Baptist Church, 669-1155.

more testimony today in a novel case of one church volunteer suing three others plus his church after a fall from a step ladder in 1992.

Loel Box and his late wife, Louise Box, sued New Life Worship Center, 1435 N. Sumner, deacon Ernest Berry, elder Raymond Thornton, and seminarian Terrell Welch after a fall which occurred as the four removed a sign from their rented church meeting place on Cuyler Street. The lawsuit was filed June 23, 1994. The fall occurred July 1, 1992.

Commissioners renew airport contract

Gray County commissioners renewed Monday get to allow her purchase computer software for renewed a four-year contract with Ron Unruh, fixed base operator, at Perry Lefors Field.

Unruh, who bought the lease in 1991, has been operating the airport without a contract with the county since its last renewal in 1989. Terms of the renewed contract were changed to eliminate a $.025 cent per gallon fuel commission and a change in hours. He is to continue to pay a $1,250 per year lease fee.

The fuel fee and $150 monthly rental fee are current as of yesterday, said county treasurer Scott Hahn. They were three months in arrears until yesterday.

The court expressed concern the house at the airport was not being used.

The greatest myth is that Medicare will pay for long term care. This is absolutely and totally WRONG. Medicare is only a health insurance program, it doesn't pay for any nursing home costs or long term care benefits. The other myth is that Medicaid will pay for such care. This is true, but not until you have exhausted nearly ALL of your own assets to pay for such care. Medicaid steps in only after you are basically BROKE.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tobacco lawsuit raises questions

The recent announcement by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales that the state is suing the tobacco industry to recover more than $4 billion spent on tobacco-related illness raises a number of interesting questions:

Since state coffers benefit from the sales tax collected on the sale of cigarettes and other tobacco products, doesn't that sort of make government a business partner in the marketing of sickness and death? Does that mean the state should quit collecting the sales tax while the suit is being resolved? Or should those tax revenues be put into a separate fund to help pay the health care costs of people whose illnesses can be directly attributed to tobacco use? If that sticky wicket ever could be resolved, how does the state justify a lawsuit seeking damages from an industry that markets a legal product? Shouldn't Texas be required to declare the sale of tobacco products illegal in order to have any sort of case?

- If the state seeks to recover damages for health care of tobacco victims, what about the costs of treating other kinds of victims? Does that mean that Texas should sue the major car manufacturing companies for the money spent on traffic accident victims? Could the gasoline refineries that supplied the fuel for those vehicles be included as a defendant? Even more, considering the number of people suffering in some form or fashion as a direct result of imbibing, shouldn't liquor and beer makers and marketers be just as liable for lawsuit as the tobacco industry?

— And while the questions are flowing, isn't the state - a place where tort reform is a big issue[#] indulging in a bit of that speculative litigation that is coming under fire across the nation? Isn't it true that this is just a nuisance lawsuit containing a lot more zeros than anyone has even a glimmer of a chance of collecting?

OK, OK, enough of the questions. The point has been made. The tobacco industry doesn't exactly have a shining image that should be

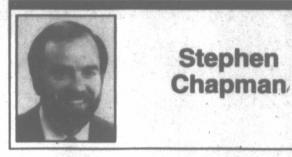

Lawsuit takes aim at free speed

In 1992, James Edward Perry ordered a book pub-lished by Paladin Press called Hit Man: A Technical Manual for Independent Contractors. Fourteen months later, he entered a house in Wheaton, Md., and killed Mildred Horn, her son and his nurse. Police say he was hired by Horn's husband.

Perry is now in prison awaiting execution on a murder conviction. Paladin Press, for its part, is in the dock, sued in federal court by Mrs. Horn's family for its alleged complicity in the crime. The lawyer for her estate, Howard Siegel, thinks the case is open and shut: "If you knowingly help perpetrate a criminal act, you are as responsible as the person who pulls the trigger."

Siegel says that Perry followed no fewer than 26 steps suggested in Paladin's do-it-yourself volume, from using a silencer to making the crime look like a burglary to shooting two of the victims in the eyes. "If you sit down with somebody and he says, 'I want to commit a murder,' and you train him, that's clear aiding and abetting," he says. In Siegel's view, putting the instructions in book form is no different and no more deserving of constitutional protection. For staunch defenders of the First Amendment, arguing for Paladin Press' right to publish Hit Man is not quite as exhilarating as, say, taking the side of The New York Times and The Washington Post in the Pentagon papers case. The regrettable fact of life, though, is that constitutional liberties have often been advanced by people who are exceptionally loathsome - like the Nazis who wanted to march in Skokie, Ill. If freedom were only for those whose opinions and activities are pleasant and appealing, it wouldn't mean much. However commonsensical Siegel may sound, holding the publisher liable would do little to prevent crime but much to endanger the rights we value. Paladin would be the first victim of this new doctrine. It wouldn't be the last.

The helpful advice contained in Hit Man, after all, is not a state secret. Anyone with a rudimentary acquaintance with police blotters and mystery novels could figure out many of the steps it suggests. For that matter, the same information might appear in a manual for police detectives. There's nothing illegal about revealing such methods.

The Day of the Jackal, Frederick Forsyth's best-selling novel about an attempted assassination of French President Charles De Gaulle, offered detailed stepby-step guidance on how to kill a political leader. If police had found that book in Perry's home instead of Hit Man, would Siegel have sued Bantam Books? If John Hinckley had read it, would the publishing house be liable for his attack on Ronald Reagan?

If you're impatient with hypothetical scenarios, here's a real one. Last year, a New York subway clerk was killed by two robbers who doused him with lighter fluid and set him afire - replicating a scene that appeared in the film The Money Train. The city transit agency blamed the moviemakers. Should Columbia Pictures pay?

Siegel says Hit Man is different because of the publisher's intent - which, unlike that of novelists and film directors, is not to entertain but to facilitate crime. What makes him so sure? Lots of people buy Paladin books - which include volumes on how to make bombs and how to dispose of unwanted corpses - purely for diversion. Twisted diversion, maybe, but diversion nonetheless. If the only market for Hit Man were real hit men, most of whom don't learn their trade from books, Paladin would have gone out of business a long time ago.

Fred and Joe, sitting in a bar, might have a conversation about how to get away with murder and Joe might then go out and kill someone. But unless Fred knew that Joe was seriously contemplating homicide, Fred can't be held accountable, even if he was irresponsible enough to give the killer lots of useful information. Paladin is no more guilty of abetting a murder than Fred. The publishing company may be foolish, callous and contemptible - just as Fred may be - but it is not genuinely culpable for Mildred Horn's murder.

Will the courts buy Siegel's argument? Not likely. The Supreme Court has said freedom of speech includes not only the right to advocate violence but the right to advocate the bloody overthrow of the government. The courts even allowed The Progressive magazine to publish an article on how to build an H-bomb after the information found its way into other publications.

By Siegel's logic, Palidin could sell a book on how to construct and detonate a nuclear warhead - as long as it didn't give instructions on how to carry out a murder for hire.

If we were to ban every book that carries some danger, we would have nothing to read but cereal boxes. For the courts to hold Paladin Press responsible for Horn's death would be a step in that direction.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 16, the 107th day of 1996. There are 259 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On April 16, 1789, President-elect Washington left Mount Vernon, Va., for his inauguration in New York.

On this date:

In 1862, a bill ending slavery in the District of Columbia became law

In 1879, St. Bernadette, who had described seeing visions of the Virgin Mary at Lourdes, died in Nevers, France.

In 1889, comedian and movie director Charles Chaplin was born in London.

In 1912, Harriet Quimby became the first woman to fly across the English Channel, using a Bleriot monoplane to travel from Dover, England, to Hardelot, France.

I'M SORRY WE DIDN'T PULL OVER SOONER, OFFICER ... BUT WE WANTED TO MAKE SURE OUR CAMCORDER WAS READY defended from those nasty state lawyers. But as long as the product it is producing, no matter how annoying and potentially dangerous, remains legal, there should be no cause of action. Suing someone for selling a legal product is something that only could happen in an America that has totally turned its back on its own Constitution.

The judicial system should not be used to punish an industry that is merely catering to the bad habits of individuals who have a choice of what the y do to their bodies. It is unfortunate that taxpayers have to pick up the tab for some of the aftermath, but it is hardly the job of the state to try to drive a private industry out of business while using the taxes it collects from that industry to finance its legal harassment.

But in such strange times, it makes us wonder if the state might somehow sue us for the stress and mental pain and suffering that will result from trying to answer all our questions.

Searching for the truth about AIDS

Charley Reese

Some months ago I wrote about a book that detailed Peter H. Duesberg's theory that the HIV virus is not the cause of AIDS. Most of you could not find a copy of the book. Don't feel bad. I couldn't find the publisher. Now I know why

According to the Publisher's Preface in a new of AIDS." book; Inventing the AIDS Virus by Dr. Peter Duesberg, Regnery Gateway says the other book was self-published by Duesberg's former research assistant, who became impatient with Duesberg's insistence on documentation. Regnery Publishing sued, won and got an injunction against the earlier book

So now, if you are interested in a full, documented account by Duesberg himself of what is probably the greatest scandal in the history of science, you can find this new book at your bookstore. If your store doesn't have it yet, it can order duction: the book from Regnery or the distributor, National Book Network.

The introduction by Kary B. Mullis, who won the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1993, is worth the price of the book. If you can't afford the book, stand in the aisle and read the introduction.

Mullis says that while working as a consultant at Speciality Labs in Santa Monica, Calif., setting up analytic routines for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, she casually asked a colleague for the scientific reference that is the basis for the statement, "HIV is the probable cause tors prescribe a toxic drug called AZT ... to people

No one could give it to her. No problem, Mullis writes, a computer search would probably turn it up. It did not. The next step, over a long period of time, was to ask scientists at various AIDS meetings about where the reference was that establishes HIV as the cause of AIDS. None could give it to

She finally confronted Dr. Luc Montagnier of the Pasteur Institute, who discovered the virus. He also couldn't provide any reference. Here are the Nobel Laureate's own words from the intro-

"There weren't any (references). No one had ever proved that HIV causes AIDS ... I like and respect Peter Duesberg. I don't think he knows necessarily what causes AIDS; we have disagreements about that. But we're both certain about what doesn't cause AIDS. We have not been able to discover any good reasons why most of the people on earth believe that AIDS is a disease caused by a virus called HIV. There is simply no scientific evidence demonstrating that this is true. We have also not been able to discover why doc-who have no other complaint than the presence of antibodies to HIV in their blood. In fact we cannot understand why humans would take that drug for any reason.

Mullis concludes by writing, "We both know to err is human, but the HIV/AIDS hypothesis is one hell of a mistake. I say this rather strongly as a warning. Duesberg has been saying it for a long time. Read this book.4

If indeed there is no proof that HIV causes AIDS, what's going on? Well, what's going on is a multi billion dollar business. To paraphrase a British thinker, money corrupts, and lots of money corrupts lots of people.

People should get over the notion of the doctor or scientist as God. They put their pants or skirts on just like everybody else. They are subject to the same temptations, the same bad habits, the same ego trips, the same inclination to rationalize as every other human being.

I know some people go through life looking for father figures to tell them what to do and what to think, but one really ought to grow up and think for oneself.

In the case of an HIV infection, listening to the wrong authority figure can kill you. The fact is that as long as virologist claim that HIV causes AIDS, they get the grants, allegedly to find a cure or vaccine. If it's not a viral disease, they lose the grants. Read Duesberg's book. It could save your life.

linton does a good Nixon impres

For a person with a Yale law degree, Bill Clinton sure does some dumb things.

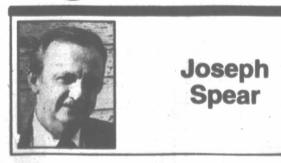

Take his unceasing campaign to emulate Richard Nixon.

It has only been 22 years since Nixon was driven out of town. Clinton was an adult at the time, and you would think he would have some recall. Even if he doesn't, you would think someone around the White House would remember how Nixon got in trouble and perhaps advise Clinton on how to dodge the pitfalls.

One of the lessons, for example, might be that a president should avoid turning a relatively minor incident, like a third-rate burglary, into a constitutional crisis, like Watergate, by covering up. But Clinton has aped the master by stonewalling a backwater real estate deal into a thing called Whitewater.

Another lesson might be that you should accept leaks to the media as the price of living in a free nation and you should avoid, at all costs, the urge to plug them. Richard Nixon made this mistake and set up "a little group" he called the Plumbers, and we all know how they got their pipes crossed. Now comes Clinton with orders to the Justice Department to find the scoundrel who leaked the details of how he urged Boris Yeltsin not to impose a proposed Russian ban on U.S. chicken imports.

The conversation with Yeltsin is a highly sensitive state secret because 40% of American poultry is produced in Arkansas, and it might appear to those who are unfamiliar with the pristine nature of Bill Clinton's principles that he was trying to that his top aides sign affidavits of allegiance. Ronald help his political pals at Tyson Foods. So White House spokesman Mike McCurry took the podium to condemn the Washington Times, which published the confidential information. The newspaper "appears to be illegally in possession of a classified document," he said, and the feds would investigate. This was a misstatement of fact, as it is not illegal for the press to publish classified information. McCurry was apparently informed of his mistake because he later told a Times reporter he had misspoken. "We're a free press," he said, "and you're entitled to print whatever falls into your hands.

The probe, however, continues. With luck, it will fizzle like other leak probes launched by presidents in recent years.

No, Richard Nixon was not the only one.

Jimmy Carter regularly exploded when subordinates slipped stuff to the press. Once, according to an eyewitness, he "went off the ceiling" and demanded

Reagan once declared he had "had it up to my kiester" with leaks. On another occasion, he said his White House was leaking so badly that "I address some things in the Cabinet meetings to the chandelier. I'm sure it must have a microphone in it." George Bush launched a witch hunt for the cad who had leaked his plans to get together with Mikhail Gorbachev for a "nonsummit summit" meeting.

As a muckraker who worked for Jack Anderson for 20 years, I like to think of myself as a connoisseur of leak probes.

Among my favorites are these:

 The Clarence Thomas case. When the press got wind of Anita Hill's charges against Thomas, the Senate hired a New York lawyer named Peter Fleming to unearth the fiends who had leaked the story. He hired staff, interviewed 200 people, pored over hundreds of documents, subpoenaed four reporters and filed a 171-page report in which he confessed he found nothing and allowed that "the American media is (sic) addicted to leaks." Cost to the taxpayers for this morsel of wisdom:

$550,000.

• The Mudhen Project. This was a 1972 CIA probe of the Jack Anderson shop. The agency assigned 20 agents to the task of finding our sources. After three months, they summarized their efforts thusly: "The operation failed to establish the existence and/or identity of any individual who might have been supplying Anderson (and staff) with classified government data." I wish Bill Clinton similar success.

Toddler abducted from bedroom, teen suspected

POTTSBORO (AP) - A 15year-old boy who said he saw two men kidnap a toddler from a house next door is in custody today on a murder charge after her body was found in a storm cellar about a block away.

An autopsy was scheduled this morning for Tabitha Baker, who apparently was taken from her bedroom before dawn Monday, two weeks before her second birthday. Her body was found in a cellar in the back yard of a nearby home in Pottsboro, a town of about 1,100 residents near the Red River, located 70 miles north of Dallas.

"I saw the body," Grayson County Attorney Bob Jarvis said. 'It was not very pretty.'

Firefighters remember Chernobyl disaster; conflagration's 10th anniversary approaches

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) - Anatoly Naidyuk's deep, steady voice faltered only slightly as he recalled the moment 10 years ago when he stood on the roof of Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor as it melted beneath his feet.

"There was graphite falling everywhere." He closed his clear blue eyes. "We couldn't see anything.'

He paused, trying to maintain his fearless firefighter composure.

"Yes, I was afraid."

Naidyuk was one of the first firefighters on the flaming scene of the world's worst nuclear disaster, at the Chernobyl nuclear plant on April 26, 1986.

Battling the blaze for hours dressed only in standard-issue Soviet firefighter uniforms, none were aware of the massive, and in many cases fatal, doses of radiation they would receive.

As the 10th anniversary of the blast approaches, those firefighters who survived are still grappling with the physical, emotional and economic legacy of that night.

Though few are over 40 years old, most are ail-ing. Only a handful are able to work, and their bonus pensions from the Ukrainian government have diminished to about $50 a month.

Of the eight people on Naidyuk's shift that night, only one other is still alive.

The families of those who died, meanwhile, are still trying to comprehend the monster that ate their loved ones, the accident that scientists still haven't been able to explain.

Volodymyr Pravik, the chief on duty at the plant's fire station, also was among the first to arrive after the 1:23 a.m. explosion. He immediately climbed on the reactor's bubbling roof to assess the situation.

lead the action, directing his colleagues to put out fires even as other blazes erupted around them.

By 4:00 a.m., he was in the hospital in the adjacent town of Prypyat. Fourteen days later in a irregular heartbeat.

Moscow clinic, he died of severe radiation sickness

"When my neighbor first said there had been an accident, I called her a liar," said Pravik's wife, Nadezhda, in her Kiev apartment. "I told her such things were impossible in our country."

When she heard of her husband's death, she was similarly incredulous. "My heart stood still... I screamed at them for lying,' she said, her fair complexion red from crying. She was left with a 4-week-old daughter and a Hero of the Soviet Union award for her dead husband.

"And once a year, around April 26, people remember us," she said. "And then they forget again."

Now 31, she and her two daughters get about $70 a month from the Ukrainian government. She sews her own clothes and prays for her health to hold out. But she refuses to complain.

"It's much worse for some people." Stroking old photos from their courtship, she said, "I understand what's worth crying about."

Nikolai Kachan was standing guard that night at a Prypyat fire station less than a mile from the reactor. He was one of few to actually witness the blast.

"It was a dull, deep thud," he said. Then a flash, then the cloud, mushroom-like, slowly drifting toward nearby Belarus.

He recalled only one thought: "I was sure I would be gone in five minutes.

For the rest of the night, Kachan helped in the cleanup. Though he did not fight the fire itself, doctors later told him he absorbed considerably more than the 300 rems of radiation considered a lethal dose.

Kachan, now 36, is a "Group 2 Chernobyl For the next 2 1/2 hours, the 23-year-old helped Invalid," meaning he has enough medical problems to make him unable to work. He spends a few months a year in the Institute for Radiology near Kiev for treatment for his weak lungs and Large doses helped male athletes build twice as much muscle as exercise alone, according to research presented to biologists meeting in Washington Monday.

"If you take HMB and a bag of potato chips and sit on a couch, you're not going to see any effects," cautioned Iowa State veterinarian Steven Nissen.

But combined with exercise, 3 grams of HMB a day - the amount derived if anyone could stand eating 500 grams of meat (about four hefty hamburgers) - helped men develop more muscle and lose more fat, he said.

Researchers have long touted high-protein diets Everybody who eats protein naturally produces the for athletes, and specifically a protein amino acid one Nissen believes causes leucine's muscle-building effects. A metabolite is a substance produced by or taking part in metabolism.

"We're becoming more sophisticated" in searching for muscle-building aids, said Elizabeth Applegate, an expert on dietary fads at the University of California, Davis, who had not yet seen Nissen's results.

"First we eat meat, then we take amino acids, now we're taking metabolites of amino acids."

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) -Women make up 52 percent of the U.S. population but are involved in only 15 percent of front-page newspaper stories, according to a survey sponsored by Women, Men and Media.

Man Of Letters Feels Lost In 'Modern' Communication

DEAR ABBY: What has happened to communication in America? When I write to someone, I discuss what is going on in my life, inquire about the health, happiness, and what is going on in the lives of mutual friends. I generally try to carry on a written conversation that will delight the reader.

If I receive a reply, it is usually on a scrap of paper, or written to be mailed to 20 other people, and starts out, "Hi, just a short note to keep in touch .

Maybe they should just say, "Hi, just a short note to say I can't be bothered to formulate a real letter. I am too lazy, illiterate, insensitive, or all of the above.'

Abby, are people's lives so shallow they have nothing to say? Or are they so busy that they have nothing to give of themselves in simple written language?

Is it possible in this modern age that communication has been disconnected or is no longer in service? KYLE

DEAR KYLE: The sample letter you offered is better than nothing (almost). The most I can say for it is: The recipient will know that the writer is still among the living.

In my view, it's not a matter of communication "no longer in service"; it's just different. Times have changed and people are busier now. Short notes, form letters, faxes or quick phone calls are time-savers. And for those into computers, electronic communication is the "in" thing.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a disagreement with a friend and we have decided to let you be the judge. If a couple are engaged to be married, and the woman decides to end the engagement, should she return the engagement ring?

B.A. HEITKAMP, CINCINNATI

DEAR B.A.: The ring goes back. When a woman accepts an engagement ring, she is also making a promise to marry the man who gave it to her. If she changes her mind, the ring should be returned. Occasionally, when the man breaks the engagement, he may offer to let the woman keep the ring, but he is not obligated to do so.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter you had some time ago about sleeping in the nude: In the late '40s, I worked for Dr.

Karl Menninger at the well-known clinic in Topeka, Kan.

He always recommended sleeping in an extra-large gown or nothing. His theory was that tight nightwear (pajamas included) tends to nudge one's nerves, making for a restless night.

My husband always said, "Nightgowns should be on the floor near the bed in case of fire." We have been married for 46 years.

FOOTBALL

IRVING, Texas (AP) -Dallas Cowboys safety Brock Marion and linebacker Darrin Smith will wear silver and blue another season.

The exclusive negotiating rights to the two defensive starters returned to the Cowboys after the league deadline to sign offer sheets as restricted free agents lapsed at midnight Monday. The players' agents expected that neither would receive an acceptable offer.

"Darrin will come back to the Cowboys for one vear, and then he'll probably play for another team because they'll never pay Darrin the numbers he wants for a long-term deal," said Smith's representative, Brian Ransom.

Last year, a contract dispute resulted in Smith missing the first seven weeks of the season before finally signing. He will consider missing the first part of this season unless the team meets his demand of $1.3 million for another season, Ransom said.

The Cowboys offered Smith a $765,000 one-year contract.

Dallas has exclusive rights to the two players through June 15 and can keep those rights by offering 110 percent of what the players made last season. The team's offer to Marion was $365,000.

"Our thoughts have been that we would not sign with another club unless it was a very good deal," Marion's agent, Jordan Woy, said. "We decided we'll play this year with the Cowboys on a one-year basis."

Kenya, German runners claim Boston Marathon

By JIMMY GOLEN AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) - A record field of more than 38,000 waited at the starting line to begin the 100th Boston Marathon. And yet real race began. Tanui pulled away from three-time defending champion more minor injuries. Cosmas Ndeti as they left Heartbreak Hill, then finished off Ezekiel Bitok three miles later. Although the breakaway pack of Kenyans chatted in early on, the Newton hills signaled the end of the niceties.

"We feel that was the start of to the finish-line computer. the race," said Tanui, who cramped on the 187-foot climb last year and placed second to Ndeti by one minute. "We can talk while the race is still young. ... But after (20 miles), it depends on the individual."

The world record holder in the half-marathon, Tanui earned his Kenyans took the first five places would set a new course record. in the men's race and seven of the top eight.

Another Kenyan led the women's race by 30 seconds at the 24-mile mark before slowing dramatically. Germany's Uta Pippig overcame an upset stomach and menstrual cramps to win her third consecutive women's race.

So ill was Pippig that she had to literally wash herself off in the see a doctor today to figure out what was wrong.

"I felt not nice. I was thinking because it hurt so much," she said before flashing the smile Marathons. that, has made her a local favorite. "But in the end, I'm OK and sheep. We normally run to because I won."

Pippig finished 85 seconds third.

WHY ARE THESE PEOPLE SMILING?

Because they're members of the National Association of Senior Friends, an organization for people age 50 and over interested in wellness, travel and fun. Senior Friends members receive a number of great benefits including:

- Emergency response system
- Educational programs
- Social activities
- Travel opportunities
- Annual convention

- Lunch bunch, bowling, bridge, crafts, line dancing, golf
- Free health screenings
- Local business discounts
- Hospital VIP benefits

Magazine subscription

- Local newsletter
- Wellness classes

Healthcare claim filing services
Volunteer opportunities
Aerobics classes

Come to a free get-acquainted brunch, learn about our programs, get a chance to win prizes, and enjoy entertainment provided by the Big Texan Dancers. Our guest speaker will be Kathy Mills RN, Senior Friends Advisor from Columbia Augusta Regional Medical Center.

Thursday, April 25 9:00 A.M. - 11:00 A.M. M.K. Brown Auditorium

For reservations and more information, please call (806) 669-0208 by Tuesday, April 23.
