Carter makes bedside visits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is breaking out of his long, self-imposed isolation in the nation's capital to make bedside visits to the five American military men injured in the ill-fated rescue mission in Iran

The president's trip today to Texas was the first time since Oct. 29 — 182 days ago — that he has ventured farther than the presidential retreaf at nearby Camp.

David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

A White House spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the Texas trip was strictly a brief hospital visit to the injured commandos. No public appearances or political activities were scheduled and Carter was to be accompanied by only a small pool of reporters. The president was scheduled to leave Washington at mid-morning and return in late afternoon.

But the trip comes at a time when Carter, described by Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd as a hostage to the Iranian situation himself, is under growing pressure to abandon his stay-at-home politics.

Texas holds its Democratic primary on Saturday, and word of the presidential trip was relayed to Bexar County Democratic Chairman Joyce Peters before it was confirmed at the White House late Sunday night.

Carter has said repeatedly he will not hit the campaign trail until the 53 American hostages in Tehran are released.

But instead of marking the end of the crisis, today's trip was a journey born in the failure of last week's dramatic rescue raid to bring the hostages home.

Eight American military men died when a helicopter and a transport plane collided on the ground in the darkness of the Iranian desert as the rescue squad prepared to retreat after the mission was scrubbed because of mechanical malfunctions.

Carter had been scheduled to discuss Iranian developments in a speech shortly before noon to the annual meeting here of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Peters said the Texas itinerary called for him to fly to Kelly Air Force Base and go to the Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio to visit the four commandos who were badly burned in the Iran crash. He then was to see the fifth serviceman. Airman 1st Class William Tootle of Walton Beach, Fla.

at Wilford Hall Hospital at Lackland Air Force Base.

Army hospital officials said there is a "better than 50 percent" chance that the four burned servicemen will recover.

TEL AVIV. Israel (AP) — An Israeli professor working on a U.S.-financed turbine engine project said today the American rescue attempt in Iran may have failed because fine desert dust clogged the helicopters' turbine engines.

Prof. Benjamin Gal-Or of the Haifa Technion, Israel's Institute of Technology, said he was not surprised that three of the eight Sikorsky RH-53D helicopters in the rescue mission broke down on their way to a refueling stop deep in Iranian territory.

"With the helicopters flying at low altitude, through a dust storm. I am surprised they got as far as they did," Gal-Or said in a telephone interview. "That dust can ruin an engine in 10 minutes."

Gal-Or is working on a new filtering system suitable for Middle East desert conditions. He said the five-year-old project is financed by the U.S. Army and the General Electric Corp.

SAN ANTONIO. Texas (AP) — President Carter arranged a visit to Texas today to visit the five servicemen injured during an ill-fated attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran. the White House has announced

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the president would leave Washington in mid-morning, arrive here in early afternoon and return to the White House before dark.

Bexar County Democratic Chairman Joyce Peters said the White House called her Sunday night to tell her of Carter's plans.

Carter's itinerary called for him to fly to Kelly Air Force Base, then go to the Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio. Four of the commandos, burned in the crash of a helicopter and a transport plane in the Iranian desert, are at Brooke.

Several of the servicemen spent Sunday visiting family members and reading newspaper accounts of the aborted rescue mission that killed eight of their comrades.

The five received a hero's welcome upon their return home before they were whisked to hospital beds Saturday.

After lengthy examinations, the director at the Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit said there is a "better than 50 percent" chance all four servicemen who sustained burns will recover

A Brooke spokesman Sunday reported Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph J. Beyers III, 37, Charleston, S.C., in critical condition: Marine Maj. Leslie B. Petty, 34, Jacksonville, N.C., in serious condition: Air Force 1st Lt. Jeffrey B. Harrison, 26, Warren., Ohio, in satisfactory condition: and Marine Maj. James H. Col. Basil A. Pruitt said he planned to move two of the burn victims to a convalescent floor at the unit today because they require a lesser degree of care. They probably will remain hospitalized eight to 10 days, he said.

Pruitt would not discuss individual injuries, although he said he was satisfied with the progress of the four men.

Beyers' step-brother. Robert Hobbs, of North Augusta, S.C., said doctors reported Beyers suffered second-and third-degree burns over 40 percent of his body.

"He will be all right, they say." Hobbs said. "He'll live."
Beyers was a radio operator stationed at Hurlburt Field in Florida.
Hobbs said he and other family members brought the Marine's five children to San Antonio to be close to their father.

Beyers is divorced and has custody of the children, ages 10-16, Hobbs said. Despite his family responsibilities. Hobbs said he thought Beyers volunteered for the mission in Tehran because he is a career soldier and he felt it had to be done. We're real proud of Joe."

Vance resigns after Iranian flop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus R. Vance, a tireless voice for moderation and conciliation inside the Carter administration, is quitting as secretary of state following his solitary opposition to the ill-fated attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran.

Vance's resignation, confirmed Sunday night by two high administration officials, came as a shock even though he had planned to leave at the end of President Carter's current term. It left a vacancy in the management of U.S. foreign policy at a time of considerable international turmoil, with the nation embroiled in disputes involving Iran, the failed rescue mission and the Soviet move into Afghanistan.

One U.S. official, who declined to be identified, said Vance was the only member of the National Security Council who opposed the rescue operation as too risky. "They had a good relationship," the official said of Vance and Carter, "but both concluded it was impossible for him to function as secretary of state."

Earlier, another official, who also declined to be identified, said that while Vance was troubled recently with the flu and gout, he intended to quit as a result of policy disagreements. "Anything can happen at the last minute, but that's the way it looks now," the official said.

It was not known who would replace Vance, but speculation centered on Warren Christopher, the deputy secretary whose role grew as Vance's declined.

Over the past 3¹2 years Vance has seen some of his priority *projects, including arms control and detante with the Soviet Union, pushed to a back burner as the administration hardened its stance toward Moscow. His principal antagonist in the struggle for Carter's ear was Zbigniew Brzezinski, the national security adviser with pronounced anti-Soviet views.

The disclosure that Vance disagreed with the military rescue attempt was, in itself, surprising. Usually, once a presidential decision is reached — particularly one that doesn't work out — the ranks around him close with no one acknowledging disapproval.

Characteristically. Vance favored in most overseas ventures a careful approach based on compromise in preference to confrontation. His attitude was shaped partly by his Wall Street lawyer background and also the U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, which Vance as deputy secretary of defense first supported and then began to doubt.

He was impassioned about a transition to black rule in Rhodesia.

But his support of a new stretegic arms limitation with the Soviet Union was subsequently overshadowed by renewed superpower tensions. The treaty was signed but never submitted to the Senate for ratification.

Earlier this year, amid considerable political embarrassment.

and saw that fulfilled through with British diplomatic intervention.

Vance stepped forward to take responsibility for a U.S. vote against Israel in the United Nations Carter disavowed the vote, which was attributed to a mixup in communications between Washington and Ambassador Donald McHenry.

Vance, who put in long hours at his 7th floor desk at the State Department, has curbed his overseas travels and Washington press conferences in the last several months. And he was all-but-invisible following the rescue attempt.

The night the failure became known. Vance worked quietly in his office overseeing the dispatch of cables abroad and briefing key congressional figures by telephone. But Carter, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Brzezinski were up front speaking for the administration on television. Briefings at the State Department were conducted by others.

Vance's style of quiet diplomacy appeared to be appreciated in allied capitals abroad and also in the Soviet Union, where he was seen as more understanding than Brzezinski.

Whatever the cliche, there are times when everything happens at once, and this weekend it happened to the Pampa Police Department.

At one time during the weekend. Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said, the city jail held 13 prisoners.

Patrolman Rocky Ferguson, he said, was involved in a scuffle with a prisoner arrested in the early morning hours today for disorderly conduct. Ferguson ended up with a badly sprained foot and won't be on patrol for about a week.

Another officer was helping a person whose vehicle had stalled at the underpass at Foster and Hobart, when a routine check showed the man was wanted in New York state for burglary and auto theft charges.

The driver, 37-year-old Louis Joseph Larose of Germantown, N.Y., was arrested and is presently awaiting extradition to New York in the attraction facilities.

York in the city jail facilities.

Four persons were arrested for possession of a controlled substance after police detectives served a search warrant at 1048

Huff Rd., at 7:45 p.m. Saturday.

About six pounds of marijuana seeds and residue were discovered in the search, Cpl. Lynn A. Brown said. When asked about the value of the confiscated illegal weed. Brown said the seeds could probably be planted in about 300 acres and the street value would equal 300 acres of marijuana.

Arrested in connection with the discovery were Edward Holt. 28. of 613 Plains: Terry Holt. 33, of 1048 Huff: Michael Burnley. 26. of 1206 Jim Hall. Borger: and Pamela Allen. 28. of 1223 Roberts. Amarillo.

The four were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford, and bond was set at $2.500 each.

Sunday. 23-year-old Terry Lynn Young of 707 E. 4th St., Lefors was arrested and charged with delivery of a controlled substance in connection with a drug trafficking bust made April 14. Brown said. One other suspect is still being sought at this time, he added.

Young was arraigned before Lunsford who set bond at $7.500.

The earlier bust involved the arrest of two Pampa women on drug delivery and possession charges and the confiscation of two vehicles used for delivery purposes

Two other Pampans were arrested at 12:20 a.m. today for a burglary attempt. Bruce Allan Clark. 23. and Blaine C. Clark. 20. of 314 N. Doyle were arrested for the attempted burglary of 312 N. Doyle. The two are presently in city jail waiting arraignment.

Rabies warning issued

The incidence of rabies in this area has again surfaced with warnings from the Texas Department of Health

"The rabies epidemic which made 1979 the worst year for the disease in Texas is still going strong in 1980." according to the Dr. Keith Clark, assistant zoonosis control director. Texas Department of Health.

"There have been four documented cases of rabid skunks found in the area. One case was reported from McLean, one from Miami, one from Pampa and one from Samnorwood," according to John Galbreith Regional Veterinarian, Texas Department of Health, "it appears that there is a "hot spot" of rabies in this

Rabies affect wild animals such as skunks, foxes, and racoons as well as domestic animals such as dogs and cats.

As a result of skunk attacks, two dogs in the Miami area had to be put away. "The skunks emit a saliva and we recommend that any unvaccinated animal be put away as a precaution." Galbreith said.

After contact with a rabid animal. "A pet owner can try to save the unvaccinated dog, but the requirements are a six month quarantine with a veterinarian. For vaccinated animals a 90 day quarantine is recommended." Galbreith explained.

In the McLean case a rabid skunk was found very near the city limits. "So close that one mansaid it was in the city and one man said it was across the street from the city limits," Galbreith said.

Residents of all areas are warned that handling of any live or dead animal could be dangerous because of the rabies threat.

There are two main ways to help eliminate the

There are two main ways to help eliminate the rabies cases from entering the local towns

The Texas Department of Health pinpoints the most effective measures as 1) vaccination of all domestic animals, and 2) controlling the domestic animal population

Vaccination is just a matter of seeing a veterinarian at the regular periods for the rabies shots.

Controlling the animal population is of great importance according to Galbreith. "Don't let animals stray far from your home. We like to form a buffer zone between the wild animal population and the domestic animals. When a domestic pet wanders out to where the wild animals are, the chances of bringing rabies into the populated areas increases greatly."

"If you control the animals you will control the rabies," Galbreith said.

AWAITING EXECUTION. Thirteen former top government officials of the Liberian government await execution by a firing squad of riflemen and machine-gunners late Tuesday in the wake of a coup led by a 28-year-old master sergeant. Thousands of soldiers and civilians, gathered on the beach in Monrovia, cheered loudly as the officials died.

City accepts bond election results

City commissioners met in special session early today and accepted the results of Saturday's street bond election in which Pampa voters defeated the proposed $4.8 million for a capital street improvement program.

Election results were canvassed by the commission, and a resolution accepting the results was passed.

According to election records, Proposition 1 calling for $320,000 for sewer improvements received 1,489 votes against and 1,156 votes for the insure Proposition 2 — $4.480.000 in street improvements — had 1.754 voting against and 877 indicating their approval of the proposition.

Also approved in today's meeting was first reading of a resolution allowing Southwestern Public Service Company's (SPS) request for $31.9 million in increased rates for the coming year.

SPS representative Joe Gidden reported to commissioners that the rate would mean an increase of approximately 14 percent to the residential electric customer.

Once approved by the Panhandle cities, the utility company will submit the request to the Public Utility Commission in Austin. SPS officials expect to have the increase in effect by the May billing period.

In final action, commissioners decided to meet in a special meeting Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. to hear final reading of the resolution accepting the SPS rate increase request.

Calculate inflation rate

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer Are you winning or losing the war against inflation? One way to figure out where you stand is to calculate your own inflation rate and compare it to the government's Consumer Price Index. You'll be able to tell at a glance which areas of your budget are rising faster than everage and where you need to cut spending. Start by determining your spending patterns. Collect receipts for spending over a fixed period of time in seven basic categories: food, housi transportation, medical, clothing, entertainment and miscellaneous. Do not include income taxes, Social Security, life insurance, gifts or any type

Add up the bills and figure out what portion of the total went for each category. It's easier if you have a calculator, but you can work it out with a pencil and paper if you must. Simply divide each category by the total sum to get the percentage. Suppose, for example, you spent $3,000 in the first quarter of the year. Assume $600 went for food, $1,450 for housing, $400 for transportation, $200 for clothing, $125 for medical care, $75 for entertainment and $150 for all other goods and services. Your percentages or personal weights are: Food, 20 percent; housing, 48 percent; transportation, 13 percent; clothing, 7 percent; medical care, 4 percent: entertainment 3 percent; and other, 5 percent. (The approximate national averages for urban consumers, according to the Labor percent; housing, 44 percent; transportation, 18 percent; clothing, 6 percent; medical costs, 5 percent; entertainment, 4 percent; and other, 5 percent.) For the next step, you'll need the individual indexes that make up the CPI. Each category has its own index. You can use the national figures or you can contact the nearest office of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and ask to be put on the mailing list for the more localized, regional index.

At 4 p.m. every Wednesday, in Pampa, there is a group a young Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and 4-H members who voluntarily stand before a group and make a speech.

Making a speech has been named one of the ten most frightening situations Americans face.

Because speech-making is such a disaster to most of the population, the Pampa Toastmasters Club, through Doreen Miley. educational vice-president, has initiated a program called Toastmasters Youth Leadership Program.

Students who take the after-school class are learning how to conduct a meeting in an orderly fasion. how to relay information to a group, and hardest of all. how to speak in public.

Crack group practices unconventional warfare

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) - They call themselves Charlie's Angels. Their mission: to fight the forces of evil. Their territory:

These are the men of the Blue Light, a select top secret, anti-terrorist squad that military sources say President Carter called upon when he decided it was time to try to rescue the Americans held hostage in Tehran.

They are all volunteers, patriotic, intelligent, strong, proud and above all, tight-lipped. Their commander is described as a man who doesn't mind shedding blood or seeing it shed. He's tough, tall, daring some say arrogant — a soldier with 28 year's experience.

But exactly who Charlie's Angels are and what they do in the remote woodlands of Fort Bragg are shrouded in secrecy. Their headquarters here are in a refurbished prison stockade. It's off-limits to visitors.

"If there's anything at Fort Bragg you can't find out about, it's Blue Light," said Rick Thames, a military writer for the Fayetteville

Blue Light, based at this sprawling Army post, was formed in 1978 and modeled on crack Israeli and West Germany anti-terrorist commando teams. The unit, some 200 to 300 men, is said to have an unlimited budget and access to sophisticated equipment and Neither Fort Bragg nor Pentagon officials would confirm that the commandos were from Blue Light, but sources said they were.

Operating with - or perhaps as part of - Blue Light was the Air Force 8th Special Operations Squadron based at Hurlburt Field in Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

The squadron, which had previously conducted air commando rescue missions in Vietnam, is designed to "conduct counter-insurgency, psychological operations and unconventional warfare," according to an unofficial base directory.

The 90 commandos who swooped into Iran had exhaustive training that began when the Americans were taken hostage in November. But there was a report that some units were sent to "an area near Tehran" within 72 hours of the Nov. 4 embassy takeover.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said much of the training for the mission was conducted in the desert Southwest, where the terrain resembles the treacherous salt desert where eight Americans died after the Iran rescue was called off due to equipment problems.

Just how the Blue Light would have taken the hostages from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was unsaid, but one Pentagon source specifically noted that the special force had training in the use of gases like CN, which causes violent nausea.

Col. Charles A. Beckwith is thought to have led the strike force on the mission, said base sources who asked not to be identified.

There are two type of men who will go with Charlie Beckwith. those that follow him and those that curse him." an acquaintance who once fought with Beckwith said Friday.

"He has a reputation for operating on the reckless side," said one acquaintance. "Some said when they heard Beckwith was leading the mission, they'd rather be shot than volunteer.

Beckwith, 51, is no stranger to in-and-out rescue missions. He led Project Delta, a team that conducted long-range raids into North Vietnam during the Vietnam war to rescue prisoners

Blue Light has also been known as the Delta Team because its missions are similar and because Beckwith was fond of the name, a

Beckwith is a hard man to like and a tough man to work for, acquaintances say. A stern-faced man who rarely smiles, he has a soldierly bearing, stands 6 feet tall and wears his hair closely cropped. Acquaintances say he is arrogant, with a dominating voice. His men, who volunteered for the mission, are "super-patriotic and have a liking for action," said one military source here. "They picked people who are highly intelligent, in good physical condition and who could keep their mouths shut," a source said.

Some relatives of the men who died in the collision of a helicopter and a transport plane in the Iranian desert say they knew of a special mission, but had been told no details.

Sallylu Holmes, whose son George, a 22-year-old Marine, was killed, said, "We've known since November that it probably had something to do with the hostages situation. We realized it might come to something like this.

"We feel no ill will, no grudges. George chose to do this, so we were for it," she said from her home in Pine Bluff, Ark.

Charlie's Angels consider themselves several notches above other highly trained soldiers, and according to one source, even refused to wear uniforms. When Blue Light was formed two years ago, the Pentagon was seeking 200 to 300 volunteers from all branches of the military services, and none were below the rank of sergeant.

Blue Light is linked to John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance at Fort Bragg, which is headquarters for the Green Berets, but its orders come from the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington and it answers to the National Security Council.

Beckwith is said to answer to Maj. Gen. Jack. V. Mackmull, commander of the JFK Center, located in an area of the base known as Smoke Bomb Hill Soldiers were generally supportive of the mission, but at interviews on the base officers would tell them not to speak or would stand by during the converation. Some said the action would take the United States one step closer to war.

HOUSTON (AP) - Talking to a former prisoner of war "helped the most" during a two-day briefing held by the State Department for relatives of 14 American captives in Iran, said a hostage's wife.

Cherlynn Hall. 29, wife of Army Warrant Officer Joe Hall, 31, of Bend, Ore., said hearing Navy Capt. Richard Stratton, who was held prisoner in North Vietnam for more than six years, "gives me hope."

"He helped the most," she said Sunday. "He was in the same situation my husband is in," she said. "I need to know what he (my husband) is experiencing. That gives me hope

The attractive brunette, who was preparing to go to Tehran last November to join her husband when the embassy was captured, said the briefing sessions were beneficial despite the aborted rescue effort.

"I feel more comfortable," she said, adding that the rescue attempt had not caused her to be more concerned.

Aborted rescue attempt causes political split among hostage families

HOUSTON (AP) - After six tense months of restraint in an effort to appeared unified, last week's aborted rescue mission in Iran seems to have opened a split among relatives of the 53 American hostages.

A routine weekend State Department briefing here took on added significance when news of the ill-fated commando mission that left eight servicemen dead was publicized Friday.

After the briefing — described by one hostage's father as less informative than television newscasts - individual politics seeped into discussions of the failed rescue attempt.

"I don't want to sacrifice my son for the national interest," said Dr. Ernest Cooke of Memphis, Tenn. They talk about an 'acceptable level' of casualties in such-and-such an operation. Tell me what an acceptable level is.

Cooke and his wife, Susan, parents of Richard Cooke, 25, one of those being held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, have opposed any military action from the start.

He said the mission has caused "a division" of opinions held by the families, but said most have kept quiet. But they both backed a statement released by the family

Corpus taxpayers vote to cut taxes

Down in Corpus Christi recently the people approved a taxpayers-association-sponsored proposal, called Proposition 14. which will cut the city's tax rate from 74 cents to 68 cents per $100 valuation. Also, the proposal limits annual valuation increases to a maximum of 6 percent

And now that the taxpayers have complete their first thrust at lowering city taxes there, they plan to go after a second, even larger taxing agency, the school district. The taxpayers group wants to cut the school district's tax rate by about 10 percent, from 86 cents per $100

Already there has been some squirming in the City Hall of Corpus Christi, but there also has been some voiced cooperation: "We'll just

We have noted that, through the months since the passage of Proposition in California which set the stage for a nationwide struggle against government tax burdens, some governmental entities (cities, schools, etc.) are going ahead spending, just as if there were no tax complained but have expressed intent to make the most of the cut.

Taxpayers, hard pressed by inflation, are growing acustomed to doing without what they once considered essentials, and they are, in pushing the fight to lower taxes, volunteering in essence to expect a more austere service from the governmental entity involved.

But despite the mood of the people and the willingness of some public officials to accept the mandate for lower taxes, the state and local tax burden in the United States jumped $75 in the fiscal year 1978 which included a part of 1979, sending the average paid by Americans to state

Alaska and ranged from a high of $1.871 in that state to a low of $555 in Arkansas, according to the Commerce Clearing House in its report of the latest U.S. Census Bureau data.

ith $1.308. The District of Columbia ($1,245) nosed out California ($1.277) for third place. Five other states — Wyoming ($1.156) Massachusetts ($1.098), Hawaii ($1.059), Nevada ($1.040), and Minnesota ($1.001) — also had per capita tax burdens in excess of

Its tax burden for that fiscal year was $707, up from $637.

No matter how hard the fight to lower taxes, no matter the successes in that fight, the individual's tax burden grows even heavier. There is a reason for this, and it is valuations. Those who spend the tax money

A deadly lesson taught by Soviets

In a solemn ceremony in Moscow on April 10, 1972, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko signed a treaty prohibiting the Soviet Union and 86 other nations from developing or otherwise acquiring biological warfare agents or toxins. The treaty wa signed simultaneously in Washington by then-Secretary of State William P.

The signing completed, there was good-natured banter in both capitals. The then-Soviet president, Nikolai V. Podgorny, declared: By limiting the sphere of this arms race, this agreement can also serve as a good example for solving other pressing problems of disarmament. Indeed.

Recently, the Carter administration disclosed what it has learned about the ghastly accident that occurred less than a year ago in Sverdlovsk, a large Soviet city normally closed to foreigners. An explosion at the factory on the outskirts of Sverdlovsk released a deadly cloud of biological toxins. Within hours, as many as 1,000 of the city's residents were dead, victims of their own government's violation of the international convention banning production or possession of biological warfare agents.

As might be expected, the Soviets have a convenient cover story for the deaths in Sverdlovsk. But unless Moscow can produce compelling evidence that this disaster was caused by a "food-handling" mishap. the claim is no more credible than the lies employed to justify the invasion of Afghanistan.

If, in fact, the Soviet Union is secretly producing and stockpiling biological weapons, it is an action consistent with the recent use of poison gas in Afghanistan and Indochina. The military use of lethal chemical agents is no less illegal under international law than the production and stockpiling of biological toxins.

At the moment, the United States has no known defenses against biological weapons nor any means to retaliate in kind should an attack occur against U.S. military forces or the civilian population. Former President Nixon unilaterally renounced the use and possession of biological weapons in 1969. Since then, this country has relied on the 1972 treaty that supposedly ended forever the threat of biological warfare.

The deadly results of that mysterious explosion in Sverdlovsk tell us what we need to know about the folly of entrusting our security to arms control agreements with the Soviet Union.

Khomeini and company

By Don Graff Credit him at least with consistency.

In declining to nudge the Tehran hostage crisis toward a resolution, Ayatollah Khomeini was true to the refusal to deal directly with the situation that has been his form throughout the six months since seizure of the American embassy.

The only thing really surprising in the latest dashing of hopes is that anyone of consequence in Washington actually thought there might be a possibility of coming to reasonable terms with the Iranians. You don't negotiate with chaos, and that is still the best description for the Iranian revolution with its powerless president, venomously divided Revolutionary Council and irresolute iman who has proven himself infinitely better at th seizure of power than its exercise.

So now it is back to more nerve-straining watching and waiting, at very likely some political cost to Jimmy Carter despite the only go so many times to the well without bringing back water before washing out your own credibility.

But likely also at some cost to Iran and Khomeini. Iranians, to be sure, have responded with heightened revolutionary fervor, as they have each previous time the malevolent United States and satanic Carter have been rebuffed. The old David and Goliath bit.

The highs, however, must be getting progressively lower as the same confrontation script is repeatedly replayed. Instead of producing the shah or anything else of substance, they are pre-empting attention and sapping energy argently needed elsewhere, for the resuce of a disintegrating economy and the construction of a political system operating on some basis other than whim.

Khomeini has been remarkably successful to date in letting others take the all-new get-tough policy on Iran. You can falls for his repeated failures to provide post-revolutionary Iran with much more than rhetoric. But there is a question as to how long it can continue.

The continuing support for Khomeini within Iran is, however, much less suprprising than continuing efforts by some quarters outside Iran to explain him in rational, even sympathetic terms.

Such as the recent first-person report of an American minister who came away from an audience with the news that Khomeini is not the "lunatic" envisaged by most Americans. How could he tell? Well, in response to the oft-asked question as to how the holding of hostages could be reconciled with Islamic injunctions to protect the foreigner, Khomeini responded with a "hard" question of his own. How could Western followers of a Christ concerned for the downtrodden remain silent as on the plight of the contemporary world's oppressed?

of Course I Heard He Was

HIDIN' IN THE ROSE GARDEN,

BUT I THOUGHT IT WAS OUST

Well, there are various definitions of "lunatic", one of which is "given to extravagant folly," wich might fit. But that aside. Khomeini's question neither answered the original query nor was it "hard." It primarily demonstrated his inability or unwillingness to comprehend the world outside his own very narrow

There are, of course, multitudes in the West, practicing Christians and otherwise, who care deeply about the world's disadvantaged and persecuted and attempt to do something for them, individually and through numerous organizations. As examples of the latter, name Amnesty International, Oxfam, Freedom House, the International Resuce Committee and you've only started.

Their area of concern is broad enough to include Indochina's refugee masses, harassed Soviet dissidents, South Africa's repressed black majority, the victims of authoritarian Latin American regimes, racial minorities in the United States still striving for full economic and political equality and even, pre-Khomeini, many Iranians who suffered for their opposition to the shah.

Their concern often leads to conflict with government policy. This is a plurality of principle and purpose that may not always be easily accommodated but is comprehended in Western democracies.

Not, howeve, in Khomeini's Iran. His comprehension is that of many in history before him who smilarly claimed a monopoly on truth. That there is no reality and no other right than his own. And as a result, their rule becomes not a revelation of truth, but a despotism of lies.

Now that, unfortunately, is consistency. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

financial scandal in the history of the federal government could be under way right now - but law-enforcement agents lack the resources to stop the potential theft of billions of dollars.

"It's a relatively new field," says one Secret Service official in admitting that his agency can't cope with the sophisticated criminal technique. "You can safely say that nobody's got a handle on it.

The stakes are truly enormous because the amount of money susceptible to fraud, embezzlement and other forms of unlawful conversion exceeds $500 billion per year the entire annual federal budget

Although almost none of that money is in cash. Virtually all of the funds are disbursed through computer-generated Treasury checks, highly negotiable financial instruments that regularly authorize six-and seven-figure cash

The key to gaining illegal access to that money is computer fraud. Although multiple safeguards are built into the federal system to prevent improper disbursements, those measures already have been foiled in at least three instances.

A federal grand jury in Baltimore recently indicted an employee of the Social Security Administration on charges of manipulating that agency's computer to pay herself and two accomplices more than $500,000 in unauthorized disability benefits.

The accused governme worked at the agency's headquarters in the Baltimore suburb of Woodlawn, Md. Her office, only a small part of the vast Social Security bureaucracy, processed more than $1 billion in government disability payments every month.

In an earlier case, a supervisory clerk in Chicago was accused of feeding into a government computer false claims for federal benefits, producing aproximately $100,000 worth of unauthorized welfare checks for herself and accomplices.

The most widely publicized of the federal computer-fraud cases involved an employee of the Department of Transportation assigned to the Washington headquarters of the Urban Mass Transportation Administration.

He devised a computer-fraud scheme to divert into his bank acount more than $850,000 earmarked for construction of Atlanta's new subway system, then spent the money on a dozen new cars, a new home, a swimming pool and gambling junkets to Las Vegas.

Information about these cases is available because criminal charges have been filed against the alleged embezzlers in federal courts. The Secret Service responsbile for protecting all Treasury funds, will not discuss dozens of similar cases in which investigations still are

The government is neither the only target for computer thieves nor the source of the largest known embezzlements.

An employee of the Security Pacific National Bank has been convicted of defrauding the Los Angeles bank of $10.2 million by manipulating a computer to transfer the money to his personal bank accounts in other cities.

In another Los Angeles case, more than a dozen officers and employees of the Equity Funding Corporation of American have been convicted on charges of using a computer scheme to create $2 billion worth of fraudulent life-insurance policies.

But the government's computers pose special problems because so much money is involved and because safeguards remain inadequate. One General Accounting Office study found "serious weaknesses" in security systems and "increasing potential for fraud, abuse...and economic loss.

In both the Social Security and Transportation Department cases, the schemes were uncovered not through internal controls but rather because bank employees became suspicious of large deposits in the form of Treasury checks, followed by large withdrawals of cash. With increasing economic woes tugging at American pocketbooks, it seems live theater might feel the pinch sooner than other leisure-time activities.

But Mary Ann Smith, a Dallas actress, says the shows in New York are running full capacity, even with a $30 per show

"Usually during depression times and all, people want an escape," says Mrs. Smith, who appeared last weekend in a one-woman show for the Pampa Fine Arts

"But this was before television," she adds. "I don't know what it's going to be with TV and all the good shows available."

"Roar Like a Dove," an English comedy, was a hit on the London stage during the '60s. With seven characters in Mrs. Smith's performance, she says, "You have to characterize each one of them so definitely that the audience will not be confused with

The characters in Leslie Storm's three-act play, which Mrs. Smith edits into short, meaty scenes, range from a Scottish lord and his American wife to relatives on both sides, with a servant thrown in for good measure. Standing alone in the spotlight, with no props or costumes, Mrs. Smith portrays each part.

"We never have known what to call my show," laughs the actress. "It's an odd thing. It's a one-woman dramatic interpretation of an English or Broadway

In search of material, she heads for New York several times a year and also includes trips to London in her preparations. She selects two plays each year - one new one and one to revive and usually spends the summer working on the script. Her season includes performances for clubs, conventions and other groups throughout Texas.

After her education, the actress made her debut in Dallas. She then married Eugene Bragg Smith, who owns Moody Farms in Gray County, and became a

After an award-winning high school drama career, she studied seven years at the Cocke School of Drama and went on to the University of Texas and Southern Methodist University. Although some performers doing similar one-man shows use prompting notes, she doesn't. "Learning lines was incidental with Mrs. Cocke," says the actress. "After you learned the lines, then you started interpreting."

"Before you could graduate, you had to have a six-weeks course in Shakespeare, Browning, Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, psychology and mythology. Her purposae was to instill a great love of literature in people.

"The children were still fairly young when I started doing the plays for clubs." says Mrs. Smith, who's been on the circuit about 17 years. Her home base is still Dallas, where she and her husband have a home in the city and a ranch near Dallas. "I live the best of two worlds," she says.

The actress, a former Dallas Woman of the Year, is an entertainer in the domestic sense of the word as well as the professional. A friend of numerous recognizable personalities, she and her husband regularly host parties for friends who visit Dallas. David Hartman, host of ABC's "Good Morning, America," learned to ride horseback at their ranch a number of years ago. Mrs. Smith's friendship with Mary Martin, another Texas actress who just happens to be the mother of actor Larry Hagman, has grown to include cast members from the television show "Dallas."

In high school and college speech competition there is an event called dramatic interpretation - an individual's performance of a piece of literature containing several characters. It is a difficult but exciting technique rarely seen outside competition.

Saturday evening, however, the Pampa Fine Arts Association viewed dramatic interpretation at its finest. Mary Ann Smith of Dallas had the audience with her every line as she performed the British comedy, "Roar Like a Dove," by Leslie Storm.

Lord Robert Dungavel, desirous of a male heir for his farm in Scotland, wants his wife, Emma, to try just one more time. But Lady Dungavel, nee Chadwick of Concord, Mass., has a nursery full of six girls and is unwilling. "If you want a son, you can jolly well go out and get one in a rafsle!" she tells him.

Relatives, friends and servants get into the act as an impending divorce is forestalled, giving way to the eventual and happy birth of a

The tempo was snappy. Characters rarely enter and exit; instead, they rush in and dash out. The humor is just as dry as one expects to find in an English comedy and the characters are hardly fresh, but these common elements combined to create an uncommonly entertaining piece of literature.

Mary Ann Smith deftly edited the script, paring it down to the essentials, leaving the comedic meat intact. Without the aid of props or costume pieces, the light characters - American, Scot and English — were crystal clear and generally easy to follow. Only the rapid scene transitions gave the unaccustomed ear difficulty in

This week we have cause to celebrate A woman who wrote to us a year ago about her addiction to a prescription drug is now free. The drug was a combination muscle relaxant and pain reliever. Her doctor had given her an open-ended prescription for the medication which made her feel "relaxed, confident and

She reported that during a period of about six months she had taken more than 600 pills. What had started as a simple solution for a "tense neck due to nerves" had turned into a nightmare. She had begun taking three or four at a time, then eight, then 12.

At the end of that letter a year ago she said, "I am psychologically addicted - feel as though I couldn't live without this compound nor do I want to. How dangerous is this medication? God, I pray I can get myself off this.

Needless to say, this letter distressed us greatly. Her doctor's unsupervised prescribing and her vulnerability to drug dependency combined to produce a serious abuse problem. At those doses it was clear to us that the phenacetin in this preparation could lead to kidney damage or worse.

The package insert for the particular drug. Soma Compound, states clearly that "Phenacetin, if taken in large doses for long periods in combination with other analgesics, is associated with severe kidney disease and with cancer of the kidney." Unfortunately, this woman's physician failed to mention this problem when he provided the prescription. Our recommendation was that she seek immediate professional help and we did our best to locate a physician in her area who could provide some assistance in this battle. After that we heard not another word

Just last week, though, a second letter arrived that lifted our spirits and demonstrated again that with hard work and support it is possible to become untangled from the web of addiction.

The woman who wrote about her problems with Soma Compound wanted us to know that after 12 months of hell - pulling her hair in disgust that she'd never kick it - she made it! Although it took great courage and lots of support from friends and professionals she finally was able to stop taking the drug.

We've never received such a beautiful letter. It made the waiting worthwhile

Dependency can occur with legitimate prescription drugs as well as with illicit ones. Sometimes it takes a long time for researchers to realize that a particular medication has the potential for abuse.

There is nothing special about Soma Compound. It is no more dangerous or addictive than other prescription pain relievers, anti-anxiety agents or sleeping pills such as Darvon (Propoxyphene), Valium (diazepam), or Dalmane (flurazepam). Many readers of this column have related tragic stories of drug dependency and distressing withdrawal symptoms after prolonged reliance on medications like these Doctors who provide open-ended prescriptions for powerful medications are not doing their patients any favors. Some people are more susceptible to drug habituation and need to take precautions to avoid it.

Physicians and patients alike must become more aware and cautious in dealing with commonly prescribed products such as pain relievers, muscle relaxants, tranquilizers and anti-anxiety agents.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - About 16 years ago, when I was 35, I had a hysterectomy but my ovaries were not removed. did not have the artificial change of life but about five years ago, when I was 46, I started experiencing dreadful hot flashes and started taking Premarin. When I don't take it I again experience those unpleasant hot flashes.

I would like to know how long the hot flashes continue? Is there a time when I will no longer experience them?

DEAR READER - I wanted to include your letter in the column because it illustrates the point that many women seem to forget. You can have your uterus removed as you did at an early age and that will not affect your normal hormone cycle. As long as the ovaries haven't been damaged and are not diseased, such a woman will continue to form normal amounts of female hormone as in your case. That means that when such a woman reaches the normal age for menopause, she'll have one. At that time, she'll begin to experience symptoms and may want some medicine

As I've indicated to other women who have written in about this question, if you don't have a uterus you can't possibly get cancer of the uterus and that removes one of the major concerns about taking female hormones. The other question, of course, concerns the breasts.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: APPALLED IN K.C. wrote that she was upset because her married daughter planned to let her 3-year-old son and 19-year-old unmarried sister witness the birth of her second child. My reply: "There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. A 3-year-old should find it a fascinating and educational experience.

Well, after that letter hit print, Ernie, my dear, devoted mailman, was threatened with a double hernia from schlepping those 40-pound sacks of mail into my office!

The letters are running 100 to 1 against my answer. Today, a sampling of the pros. (Tomorrow, the cons.):

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had our second child naturally. Our daughter, then 2 years 9 months old, witnessed the entire birth, coaching me with, "Push, Mama, push!" It was a truly joyous occasion! If children are informed properly throughout the pregnancy with visual aids (books, films, etc.), they will be accepting and knowledgeable about the event. There is no need to hide the truth from a child. To experience reality now is to be

PATRICIA GONZALES, SANTA MONICA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I was in a natural childbirth program at Illinois' Masonic Hospital in Chicago. My husband and Sarah, our 2½-year-old daughter, watched the delivery. (The child was told what to expect.) My parents also watched, and were moved by it. Nobody got "sick." We also filmed the whole procedure, and we treasure those films. We often watch it together to relive a great moment in our lives. Our children will grow up to respect the miracle of pregnancy and childbirth as a sacred gift from God instead of something to get rid of.

C.M. AND FAMILY, CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for your open-mindedness regarding making childbirth a family affair! Birth is a normal, natural human function that should be celebrated by the entire family. Siblings who are prepared for what is happening will be more understanding and loving to the new baby they "helped" to bring into the world. There is so much more unity in the family that has "birthed" together. When one considers its beginning, no wonder the American family is disintegrating. Mom is in the recovery room, Dad is pacing the corridor, the baby is in the nursery and the siblings are shuttled off to Grandma's. The family never had a chance; it wasn't even born together.
PATRICE GEDDES, BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Last December I gave birth to a healthy, beautiful boy. Both my husband and mother-in-law were present during my labor and delivery. My husband and I took childbirth education classes, which prepared us well for the birth. I delivered completely naturally, without drugs or medication. My mother-in-law later said she learned more from witnessing my son's birth than she had from giving birth to four of her own children.

PROUD MOTHER IN TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: Our 4-year-old son attended childbirth classes with us and he also witnessed the birth of his little brother. Because of this experience there has never been any jealousy between the siblings. Childbirth has nothing to do with modesty. It is God's greatest miracle. Since we all came into this world the same way, why should anyone find it disgusting or loathsome? No name, please. My husband is a

Steelers pick headed for mixed feelings

NEW YORK (AP) - Somewhere in the United States, there is a football player who, about 24 hours from now, will experience what is known as mixed emotions. He will be selected by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the first round of the National Football League draft.

He'll be joining a four-time Super Bowl winner, a dynasty of sorts. Very nice. The only problem is, what's he going to do when he gets there?

The Steelers have an all-pro player at virtually every position, which leads to a lot of lounging around for the rookies. Last year's No. 1 pick, for example, was Greg Hawthorne, a running back. He carried the ball all of 28 times for 123 vards in 1979 - not much more than a routine game for Franco Harris.

Not that being a No. 1 draft choice by the Steelers is a ticket to oblivion, mind you. Far from it. Consider, if you will that among Pittsburgh's first-round selections since 1969 are Harris, linebacker Robin Cole, tight end Bennie Cunningham, wide receiver Lynn Swann, quarterback Terry Bradshaw and defensive tackle Joe Greene

An educated guess is that the Steelers, unless they trade to improve their drafting position (28th, last in each round) or to pick up a veteran in exchange for their first-round pick, will come away with a defensive lineman. Among the candidates are ends Jacob Green (Texas A&M). Jim Stuckey (Clemson), Rulon Jones (Utah State) and tackles Bruce Clark (Penn State) and Doug Martin (Washington)

A few hours before the Steelers complete the first round, the Detroit Lions will start it. Also barring a trade, they'll be taking Billy Sims, the Oklahoma running back. In the past few weeks, Sims' agent, a former Houston dentist named Jerry Argovitz, has been talking about extracting something in the neighborhood of $750,000 a year from the Lions' bank account to get Sims' name on a contract. The Lions have been mentioning numbers about one-third that

The order of drafting (again, barring any late trades) is Detroit, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Green Bay, Baltimore, St. Louis, Atlanta, New York Giants, Minnesota, Buffalo, Kansas City. New Orleans. New York Jets, New England. Cleveland, Oakland, Seattle, Washington, Chicago, the Jets from Denver (in the Matt Robinson-Craig Penrose deal), Miami, Tampa Bay, Philadelphia, Baltimore from Dallas (for John Dutton). New England from Houston (for Leon Gray), Green Bay from San Diego (for Willie Buchanon). Los Angeles and Pittsburgh. In all, there will be 12 rounds covering two days of drafting, wheeling and dealing. Besides Sims and the aforementioned defensive linemen. high-priority candidates for the first round include running backs Charles White (Southern California) and Curtis Dickey (Texas A&M), tight end Junior Miller (Nebraska), wide receiver Johnny "Lam" Jones (Texas), and offensive linemen Brad Budde and Anthony Munoz (both Southern Cal)

row, is a winner It didn't come easily, but it came with the authority that has made

Watson the outstanding player in golf.

"I was just hanging on." he insisted after a front-running, two-shot triumph Sunday in the New Orleans Open.

But hang on he did. And he did it in a fashion that served as the ultimate discouragement to any would-be challengers.

The leader all the way. Watson made one mistake in the final round. He hit into the water on the eighth hole. It cost him a double bogey. Coupled with Lee Trevino's birdie, that meant the little pond on the Lakewood Country Club course had just swallowed three shots of his four-stroke lead.

"That brought me right back to the field," Watson said. "The game

It's the sort of thing that can, and has, destroyed a less accomplished, less experienced, less confident, less courageous

Watson responded by holing a 40-foot birdie putt on the next hole.

No one ever caught him. He finished with a 1-over-par 73 that put him at 273, 15 shots under par. and he was a wire-to-wire winner for the second consecutive week. Trevino was second with a 69-275. Mike Reid, never really in title contention, shot 71-276. Defending champion Hubert Green, who took himself out of it with a bogev-double bogev-bogev lapse, and

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tom Watson, for the second week in a Larry Nelson were next at 277. Green had a closing 74 and Nelson a 72 that included a double bogey on the last hole

The victory only served to confirm Watson's stature as the game's outstanding performer, added to his already-impressive statistics and put him in position to write some new records into the books. At the moment, he's completely dominating the game.

No one has ever won Player of the Year four times in a row. Watson has won it the last three years. With four victories, twice the number of anyone else in the game this year, he's far in front

No one has ever led the money-winning list four years in a row. Watson has led it the past three seasons. He collected $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000 in this one and pushed his earnings to $246.525 with the season less than half gone. It's almost twice as much as anyone else and puts him in line to break his own one-year

No one has ever won the Vardon Trophy, that coveted award that goes to the man with the low stroke average on the tour, four years in

Watson won it the past three years. With 18 birdies and an eagle for his week's work in New Orleans, he reduced his stroke average for this season to 69.9, lower than any winning figure in 16 years.

For this season, he has won four times in 10 starts and has been 10th or better in three others:

'Too Tall' open team offers

NASHVILLE. Tenn. (AP) — Giving a 10-count to boxing. Ed "Too Tall" Jones says he would like to play professional football again for the Dallas Cowboys, but is open to other teams' offers. "I consider myself a free agent." said Jones, a No. 1 draft choice from Tennessee State in 1974 who developed into one of the National Football League's top defensive ends. "I'll leave it to my attorney to get me the best deal I can. My first choice will be with the Cowboys, but I'm not saying for sure I'll go back to them. I'll just wait and see what kind of offers I get." the 6-foot-9, 270-pound Jones said Saturday. Jones, of Jackson. Tenn. said he had no regrets about trying boxing. His ring career spanned 10 months and six heavyweights fights - all of which he won. "I would definitely do it again if I had a chance to repeat history." he said of his original goal to become heavyweight champion. "It was always something I had to try "I think the experience will make me a better football player because I know that's what I'm best at. With boxing behind me, my concentration on football will be better Jones said he pondered his decision to get out of boxing for about three months. finally making up his mind a few weeks ago. Reports had circulated about his probable return to football but, until Saturday, Jones had denied them.

announce he would become a boxer. He said nothing would stand in the way of his goal of becoming heavyweight champion. Saturday. however, he said simply he had changed his mind.

"Boxing wasn't what I thought it would be." Jones said. "Boxing is something that if you can't enjoy it, then you should get out of it ... and I decided I didn't enjoy it any longer.'

Although his boxing career was a winning one, it was something short of spectacular. Jones had punched his way past a half-dozen unranked opponents and, at the end, was said to be having trouble booking fights.

Still. Jones said it was his lackluster attitude about boxing more than anything else that made him decide to quit. "I'm not disappointed in my boxing career. But I'm not sorry it's Research underscores MERIT as proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Results of the newest wave of smoker research are in. The conclusions: undeniable.

MERIT Sweeps Latest Tests.

Once again, extensive testing with thousands of smokers across the country has solidly reaffirmed MERIT as a proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

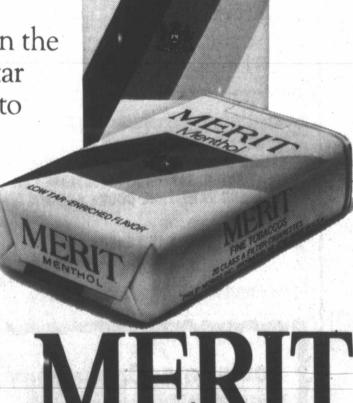

Kings: 8 mg''tar,'' 0.6 mg nicotine—100's Reg: 10 mg''tar,'' 0.7 mg nicotine—100's Men: 11 mg''tar,'' 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec.'79

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.
