Rolling along to the sea

BY SHEILA ECCLES
OF THE PAMPA NEWS

Who's that guy roller skating in the street? Its the question Ron Mossler, 20-years-old has heard since May 7, the day he started skating for muscular dystrophy, from Los Angeles.

Arriving in Pampa at 3:30 p.m. Friday, Mossler looked as though he had taken just a short stroll. The 60 miles from Amarillo was short, in comparison to the 1,000 miles he has already covered.

The idea to raise contributions by making the 7,000 mile turn-around - cross country skate for muscular dystrophy, came to Mossler last September.

"It just seemed like the thing to do, so I started calling people and putting the 'Rolling-Ron for Muscular Dystrophy' skate together."

"I would like to see all the children with the disease someday be able to skate as I do," Mossler said.

Mossler spent Friday evening at the Coronado Inn, but at 6 a.m. Saturday, he was off again. Destination: (60 miles at a time) Oklahoma City.

The overall plan has Mossler arriving in Philadelphia on July 4, and returning, by skate, to Las Vegas on Sept. 1. All contributions will then be presented to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Mossler passes out pledge sheets to those interested in contributing. The contributions are then sent to a Los Angeles office Mossler has set up. "My parents are taking care of the office," Mossler said.

The legalities of skating on public roads had Mossler worried before the trip started. "However, skating is legal on the highways with the exception of interstate highways," Mossler, laughing at his own confidence said, "at least they (police authorities) said it was, and if it isn't, I'm sure there will be someone there to let us know about it."

A thousand miles by roller skates has had some interesting moments for Mossler and his 22-year-old companion, Steve Watson.

Watson is along to see that everything is covered. "If I fall he is supposed to be there to pick me up," Mossler said.

Watson has some good rolling credentials of his own. In 1975 Watson was fourth in the world freestyle skateboarding championships. This trip, the tan Californian can usually be observed riding a regular Beach cruiser bicycle slightly in front of the skating Mossler, or in the camper driving slowly along the side of the roadway.

Texas residents are rated by the skater as the friendliest of all. "But there were a lot of strange looks," Mossler said.

The Panhandle offered Mossler a variety of unique weather conditions including sunshine, rain, thunderstorms, hail and high winds.

"We decided to go from Tucumcari to Amarillo in one day. That 112 miles was the longest distance we had ever done. The usual is 60 to 70 miles. But, suddenly in Vega it started looking very strange, and the winds were pushing and pulling at us. The rain felt like the hailstones I experienced somewhere in New Mexico," Mossler said.

As a reward Mossler stayed two days in Amarillo, recuperating.

There have also been some bad experiences along the way, Mosler said. "Some people have actually tried to run us off the road, and they have called us some unflattering names.

The one pair of Reidell skates Mossler has used are still in top condition. "But there are two more pairs in the camper, somewhere, just in case," Mossler said.

Mossler is also tracking a cross country course to be used in a roller skating relay for the entire nation.

"Someone has to start getting people together. I would like to see a bottle of Atlantic Ocean water passed, hand to hand, by a chain of people across the U.S., to the Pacific Ocean," Mossler said.

"Sounds kind of crazy, doesn't it," he added.

At the end of the 7,000 mile skate, it will be back to college for Mossler. A UCLA student, Mossler is majoring in economics and interested in psychology.

"Well, one thing for sure, it hasn't been all hard work," he said.

"So, when you see us skating along the highway, wave, and holler," he added, as he rolled off.

Kurds wreak havoc in Iranian province

By The Associated Press

The Kurds' centuries-old struggle for self-rule is sapping the strength of Iraq's military forces, damaging President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's efforts to restore the economy and spreading destruction throughout the northwestern Iranian province, according to reports from Iran.

Yet Abdulrahman Ghassemloo, who heads the Kurdish Democratic Party, has been quoted as saying: "The war hasn't really started yet."

The Kurdish problem is not new to Iran or its revolutionary government.

During the past several hundred years, the estimated 8 million Kurds living in Turkey, Iraq and Iran have battled all three countries for their own homeland, and Iran's 2 million Kurds briefly set up their own republic in the mid-1940s before Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi crushed it.

Now, the Kurds, traditionally nomadic herdsmen, are warring for the same rights against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the shah's bitter enemy and the new leader of Iran.

Fighting erupted again two months ago and has continued since, with only a brief lull in early April when Iranian government troops were preoccupied with fears of an Iraqi invasion.

Khomeini has said the Kurdish rebels must be crushed. Bani-Sadr has said he's willing to accept some of the Kurds' demands - but only if the guerrillas put down their arms.

The Kurds have refused, saying they would be swallowed up if they stopped fighting before negotiating, and negotiations have broken off.

So the fighting goes on. The mortars thump, the machine-guns rattle, the Phantom fighters bomb and strafe, and the death toll mounts. Some estimates say 1,000 persons died last week in fighting between Kurdistan rebels and Iranian government troops.

And conditions in the mountainous Kurdistan region, already desperately poor, are reported growing worse.

Islamic Republic minister choice comes as surprise

By The Associated Press

The head of the Islamic Republic Party, which controls the Iranian Parliament, surprised observers Saturday by endorsing the nation's little-known transportation minister for prime minister.

Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti was quoted by a Tehran newspaper as saying the Revolutionary Council was debating his proposal to nominate Mousa Kalantari, 32.

Sources said Kalantari, described by Beheshti as a "revolutionary and believer" in Iran's Islamic regime, is related to the wife of Iranian revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The parliament, which met for the first time last week and is to decide the fate of the 53 American hostages, has responsibility for selecting a prime minister. It is not expected to consider the question of the hostages for several weeks. Saturday was the hostages' 210th day in captivity.

Last week, a government-owned newspaper reported that Hassan Habibi, Iran's education minister and council spokesman, would be the new prime minister.

But the report was denied by Habibi and Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who is a political rival of Beheshti and the hard-line clerical party.

In other developments:

—Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh conferred in Tehran with Syrian Dr. Adib Daoudy, the representative of U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, about the contents of the report by a U.N. Commission that investigated the deposed shah's regime.

—Ghotbzadeh was quoted by a Tehran newspaper as saying he thought Moslem rebels fighting the pro-Soviet regime in Afghanistan should be allowed to operate from bases in Iran, at Afghanistan's western border, but said they were not now doing so. He also was quoted as saying Iran, Pakistan and Afghan rebels were setting up a commission to coordinate aid to the rebels.

—The three-man committee appointed by the Islamic Foreign Ministers to pursue an end to the fighting in Afghanistan will hold its first meeting in Tehran on Wednesday, Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi said in Islamabad.

—Iranian officials prepared for Monday's opening of a four-day "Crimes of America" conference. Bani-Sadr proposed such a conference to seek international condemnation of the United States for its aborted attempt last month to rescue the American hostages.

Sources in Tehran said the meeting would be attended by the ruling political parties of Syria, Algeria and Libya but that no national governments would be represented officially.

—The official Pars news agency reported that Iraqi forces opened fire on at least five Iranian border posts in the western province of Ilam.

New quakes rattle California

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Another large earthquake rattled this Sierra Nevada resort town early Saturday, but residents were reportedly taking the new shock in stride.

"Everything shook a little bit but no problems," said Deputy Dwayne Petite at the Mammoth Lakes sheriff's substation. "We haven't had any damage reported at all, no phone calls or anything."

Petite indicated that residents were becoming used to the quakes, which started last Sunday with two earthquakes that registered 6.0 and 6.1 on the Richter scale. Two hikers were seriously injured in rockfalls triggered by one of the shocks.

"Nobody even calls in unless there's like some major damage or something," he said.

Carl Johnson of the United States Geological Survey said the 8:16 a.m. jolt measured 5.2 on the Richter scale.

"It's an aftershock in the Mammoth Lakes area again," Johnson said.

Since the current series of quakes began, residents have been shaken by more than 300 lesser tremors recorded at 4.0 or more.

Mammoth Lakes, situated near Yosemite National Park about 45 miles west of the Nevada border and 200 miles east of San Francisco, is being shaken by what geological survey investigators say is activity along the Hilton Creek fault on the eastern side of the Sierras.

Searchers evacuate man and dogs from side of Mount St. Helens: lava rises

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A hotly glowing dome of lava continued oozing upward Saturday in the crater of Mount St. Helens, and authorities announced they had evacuated a 74-year-old man and four dogs from an ash-dusted cabin 10 miles from the volcano.

The death toll from the eruption stood at 22, with 53 persons missing.

Ray Jennings had refused to leave his cabin on the south side of the volcano before and after the mountain exploded May 18.

"I was too much of a chicken to go in and drive him out," said Tom McDowell, fire chief of Yacolt, Wash. "We took a helicopter (Friday) because we could get out fast."

"We don't know what is going to happen with that mountain. Finally one of his relatives was able to convince he'd be better off away from it," he added.

Although the cabin was away from the northbound blast of the eruption two Sundays ago, McDowell said Jennings probably would have had trouble driving his car out through the 3 inches of engine-clogging ash in the area, McDowell said.

Man and dogs were in good health, McDowell said.

Jennings was evacuated the day after air searches were formally suspended. Ground searching was scheduled to continue through Sunday.

Crews of U.S. Forest Service planes flying above the volcano's crater Saturday noted seven bright spots about 10 feet in diameter and three more up to 30 feet in diameter.

'Wide open spaces' intriguing to Holland farmers

BY SHEILA ECCLES
Of the Pampa News

It was the "wide open spaces," that thoroughly intrigued the European farmers who toured two Pampa area farms during the Memorial Day weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Jan Jensma of Friesland, Holland, were invited to this area by their American friend, Pampa native Jay Baker.

The history of the Jensmas' U.S. farm tour started in 1971 when Mr. and Mrs. Baker were stationed in Germany with the U.S. Army.

"An Austrian ski holiday provided the setting for the meeting of the Jensmas and the Bakers, and a friendship was started immediately," both families said, talking at the same time.

The Jensmas, Jan and Aukje, could pass for Pampa natives if the thick Dutch accent wasn't present to accompany every word.

Young and successful farmers, the Jensmas decided to take advantage of Jay Baker's farm tour invitation.

"We planned this holiday to see our old friends and to tour the Texas farms," Jan Jensmas said.

First stop on the Jensmas' U.S. visit was Denver, the current home of the Bakers.

"The mountains were beautiful, but Denver was so big and seemed smelly," Aukje Jensma said.

"We are farmers, and the mountains in Colorado hid the horizon. It was nice but only for a holiday. Texas is much better. At least you can see the wide open spaces," Jensma added.

"In Texas we feel at home. The people here are much like those in our small town of Friesland," according to the Jensmas.

The impressive difference noted by the Jensmas between Friesland, Holland, and Pampa, Texas, was the water situation.

"We don't have oil, only water," the Jensmas said.

The Netherlands is a country below sea-level, making water removal one of the problems for farmers. The Jensmas' fields are surrounded by canals, used as holding stations for the excess water.

"We have to pay for the removal of the water, not for the use of it," Jensma said.

The Jensmas' own farming operation consists of a 157-acre farm that has been in the family for 78 years, located in the northernmost Netherlands.

"By comparison our Friesland farms are small. However, our farming methods are intense; and we utilize all the land, all the time," Jensma said.

A farm of 170 acres in Friesland produces an income equal to a farm of 2,000 acres here in the U.S. Aukje's brother-in-law raises 90 to 100 dairy cows on 130 acres of land, Jensma said.

The Wiley Reynolds Ranch and the Skeet Roberts Farm were chosen for the Texas farm tour.

The Jensmas had never seen cattle worked, so the Wiley Reynolds Ranch provided as much information as the visitors needed.

"On our farm we have some sheep and cattle, but they are used for milking and for the wool," Jensma said.

The Bakers were anxious for Jan Jensma to explain how cattle are branded in Holland.

"In Holland, the cattle are identified by sketches made of every one of the animals. Each Holstein is sketched with its different black and white markings. When the cattle is sold, the sketch goes with the sale," Jensma said.

The sight of artists drawing cattle all over Holland drew the loudest laughter of the tour, Mr. Baker said.

"Sometimes dairy farmers with large herds tag the cattle with numbers to quickly identify their animals," Jensma said, "and it seems like a very good idea."

Among the products made from cow's milk in Friesland is Kaas, or cheese, and the main type is the excellent Edam cheese. The milk is also used for the making of butter, Aukje said.

"I use the wool from our sheep, and I give classes in the art of woolmaking and embroidery work," she added.

"We use the older techniques of weaving and needlework to make modern things," Aukje said.

One of Mrs. Jensma's proudest achievements was the use of 3,000 pink roses in an arrangement for a church service.

The Jensmas' grow Holland's national pride, tulips, on their farm, mainly for the bulbs, which are exported and also sold within Holland.

On the Jensma farm sugar beets, seed potatoes, wheat, onions and grass seed are the main crops. Much of the crops is exported to Algeria, Spain and France.

The rich farm land in Holland can support the intense farming methods. Although prices for farm land are extremely high, the price can be recouped by the many crops raised on the small acreages.

In the interest of progress, Jay Baker, while in Germany, provided some Texas grains, namely triticale and maize, to the Jensma farm.

"Due to the rich soil in Friesland, the triticale grew to the tremendous height of eight feet, but the heads were very small. However, the maize did not take at all. We now use only the hybrid grains, previously proven successful in our area," Jan said.

"We have seen a lot of land here in Texas that is not in use, and we were amazed at the waste of land," Aukje said.

"Our farming machinery is smaller and must be kept inside all of the time to avoid the rust, caused by the sea water. The farm machinery we saw in Texas is cheaper than what we must pay for it. In fact, our machines cost at least twice as much, a tractor here is $20,000, for me, $40,000," Jan added.

There were no wooden shoes seen on the Texas farm tour, and Aukje explained that her husband still farms in the wooden shoes.

"They are cool in the summer and warm in the winter. In fact, he wears out at least five pairs each season," she said.

The nice weather conditions in the Texas Panhandle were among the most impressive things the Jensmas experienced.

There are usually only two days a year when you can sit outside in Holland, Baker explained.

The Jensmas were to leave the Pampa area just before the tornado watches and storm warnings were issued earlier this week.

Trustees will review TABS scores Tuesday

Results of the first Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests will be presented to the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Carver Education meeting.
 An analysis of the aggregate school test results will be given by Bob Phillips, district superintendent, with the assistance of district staff members.
 Also to be presented at the meeting will be summary reports and information designed to inform the board on area's in the district which could be improved.
 Particular emphasis will be given to plans already underway to work on improved programs for both individual schools and individual students during the next year, Phillips said.
 "Our purpose is to develop more effective ways of serving children," he said. "With this objective in mind, we believe the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills will give us the specific data we need to better meet student needs."
 Much of the planning and advanced work to be completed this summer, Phillips said, will point toward specific remedies and other changes expected to be implemented next September.
 Individual student results were released the week of May 12 only to the student, parents or guardian, and school personnel directly involved, Phillips said.
 The test was stipulated by Senate Bill 350 — enacted during the 68th Texas Legislature.
 The purpose of the examinations to fifth and ninth graders was to carry out two key functions:
 1) Inform parents and other citizens of the progress students are making toward minimum competency in reading, writing and mathematics.
 2) Improve instruction to get better achievement results.
 Other business for the June 3 meeting will include the presentation of a resolution by the Pampa High School Student Council, the awarding of construction-renovation bids and an executive personnel session.

School official charged

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Randy Ingle, 53, who rose from his job as a school custodian to become director of transportation for the city's schools, faces an indictment accusing him of two counts of theft.

Prosecutors said Ingle was implicated in a series of schemes that has robbed taxpayers of more than $500,000. District Attorney Tim Curry said at least 11 more related indictments were expected.

The grand jury that indicted Ingle Friday has spent three months investigating allegations of irregularities in the Fort Worth school district's transportation department.

Ingle is specifically accused of stealing six airplane tickets in 1976 and an air conditioner in 1978. But details of the accusations were scarce. Prosecutors declined to discuss the circumstances, saying they do not want to jeopardize their case against other possible defendants.

Couple faces fraud charges

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Dallas couple has been charged with allegedly bilking at least 80 oil-related firms in a fraudulent charity sponsorship scheme.
 Harold McCarthy, 58, and Diann Long, 32, are charged with conspiracy in connection with a charity fraud scheme that involved luring firms to sponsor youths illegally to a high school rodeo finals in Dallas.

Oklahoma will bid for east-west corridor of defunct Rock Island

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma will bid to buy portions of the Rock Island Railroad not bid upon by private companies and especially segments of the defunct railroad's east-west line, state transportation planners said.

State officials believe the east-west corridor between Texas and Arkansas is important for the future of rail service in the western part of the state.

The state's plan calls for bidding on a Rock Island spur between Geary and Okene, a spur between Chickasha and Mountain View and a spur between Enid and Ponca City.

What the state buys will depend on what other railroad companies do and how much money it will have to pay.

The Legislature is considering appropriating $12 million for the Department of Transportation to submit bids.

The measure passed the Senate last week, but was held on a motion to reconsider because the leadership did not have the votes to pass the emergency provision.

The emergency would allow money to become available immediately instead on 90 days after adjournment.

A two-thirds vote, or 32 senators voting in favor, is necessary to pass the emergency.

The measure has passed the House.

Senate President Pro Tem Gene Howard, D-Tulsa, feels the emergency is needed in case the bankruptcy court administering the Rock Island places a deadline on bids.

But Monty Murphy, assistant transportation director for planning, said he doubts a deadline will be set.

North - south line will open

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission has paved the way for long-idle trains to begin rolling this week on more than 900 miles of Rock Island track in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The ICC ruling also means good news for about 300 former Rock Island workers who will be called back to the rails within the next two to four weeks, said Harry Dimmerman, vice president of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad.

Dimmerman said the first train on the main line will start north on Tuesday.

Veteran labels television news 'comic strip medium'

By ALAN SAYRE

Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Calling his profession a "comic strip medium," veteran television correspondent Hughes Rudd told Texas broadcasters Saturday that he has "no idea why TV news has been so successful."

Speaking at the annual convention of Texas Associated Press Broadcasters, Rudd said television news can be nothing more than a "headline service."

"It's not as satisfactory as the old newsreel or newspapers," he said. "Any complicated or serious subject can't be explained on TV."

The native Texan, who joined ABC last August after a 20-year stint at CBS, expressed comic frustration at the intricacies of videotape editing.

"As a writer it causes problems. If you have a smart-alec remark and don't have a picture of it, they cut it out," he said.

Rudd, now primarily a feature writer, said the emphasis on video is vital for holding an audience.

"The television audience is not stupid . . . but they don't have a long attention span," he said.

But Rudd said television still performs "amazingly well" and added that intervention by network officials into news decisions are rare.

"We could certainly do better. We do amazingly well . . . considering we're big business," he said. "Network officials are amazingly lenient with their news divisions."

Saying that many skilled writers would "bomb out" on television, Rudd used now-retired CBS correspondent Eric Sevareid's spoken essays to make a point.

"Sevareid, when people listened to him, made them mad. Mostly the people he made mad were CBS officials," Rudd said.

The gravel-voiced Rudd also took a poke at CBS reporter Dan Rather and his recent book "The Camera Never Blinks."

"I didn't read the book," he said. "I admit I went into a bookstore and looked up the references concerning me. He got every one of them wrong."

Reynolds - AWUI settle on contract

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A spokesman for Reynolds Metals Co. said the company signed a new three-year labor agreement Saturday with the Aluminum Workers International Union.

The AWUI represents about 7,500 Reynolds employees at plants in 15 cities. Reynolds has an extrusion plant in Corpus Christi, Texas.

A statement issued by Reynolds said the agreement runs until May 31, 1983, and provides general wage increases of 60 cents an hour over the three years, including an increase of 25 cents an hour June 2, and increases of 20 cents an hour in the second year and 15 cents an hour in the third year.

Increases between job wage grades were increased 2 1/2 cents an hour during the term of the contract.

Quarterly cost of living adjustments will continue at 1 cent an hour for each .3 increase in the consumer price index, but in the third year will change to a new rate of 1 cent for each .26 increase in the consumer price index, the company said.

It added that the contract also provides improved pensions for current and future retirees and improvements in medical insurance benefits.

The agreement covers AWUI members at the following plants: Baton Rouge, La., coke plant; Bellwood, Va., extrusion plant; Corpus Christi, Tex., extrusion plant; Listerhill, Ala., reduction, seat and plate, and wire, rod and bar plants; Longview, Wash., reduction and cable plants; Louisville, Ky., foil, rolling and packaging, powder and paste, and extrusion plants; Massena, N.Y., reduction plant; Richmond, Va., north and south foil rolling and packaging plants, and St. Louis, Mo., printing plant.

Brilab jurors recess

HOUSTON (AP) — Grand jurors investigating the FBI's Brilab sting operation will take a recess of nearly two weeks instead of meeting Monday as previously scheduled, U.S. Attorney Tony Canales has announced.

Canales said the postponement was caused by scheduling problems and has nothing to do with the June 7 Democratic primary runoff election in Texas. Grand jurors are now scheduled to reconvene June 12.

"There is nothing sinister or evil in it," he said Friday. "It's summertime, and it's hard to get people together. You should quit being mistrustful of your public officials, especially U.S. attorneys."

IT'S YOUR MONEY!

The U.S. Treasury Department is asking Congress to pass a law requiring that 15% of the interest you can earn on your savings account be withheld before you ever see it.

It would also reduce the total return on your savings because when this portion of interest is withheld and sent to the government, you lose part of the compounding effect that helps your savings account return a higher yield.

The Treasury claims this withholding is needed to reduce tax evasion through failure to report interest and dividend earnings. We know that you pay taxes on the interest you earn and none of us condones evading our fair share of taxes but withholding or savings is unnecessary. The I.R.S. already receives a copy of Treasury Form 1099 - the Information Return sent to you at the end of each year detailing your savings and interest earned during the year - and can use that to check on those who don't pay their taxes.

Though the Treasury Department says it will develop an exemption plan for some taxpayers, you would be required (if eligible) to file an exemption form with each bank, savings and loan association, and every other source of interest or dividend income you have and keep all that paperwork current.

What this proposal would mean to you (and others who receive other forms of interest and dividend income, including earnings from stocks and bonds) is a whole new set of tax forms, procedures, and requirements and in most instances (the average savings account) the tax sums involved would be inconsequential.

Rather than impose a tax withholding plan, and reduce the interest your deposits will earn, our nation need further incentives to build savings. That is the source of capital and jobs that are the basis of a sound, non-inflationary economy.

It would work a special hardship on the millions of people on fixed incomes who depend on the interest from their savings account to help meet daily living expenses.

We urge you to write your U.S. Representative and both Senators - now - and ask them not to complicate further our already overcomplicated tax system and not to penalize savings and thrift any more. Ask them to vote against the withholding proposal.

OPINION PAGE

Strange tenacity of Alger Hiss

In 1950 Alger Hiss, a prominent member of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, was convicted of perjury. A federal court found that this man, who was involved in the highest levels of American foreign policy development, had lied under oath during an investigation of charges that he passed on government secrets to a Soviet agent in the late 1930s. This convicted perjurer is now practicing law in Massachusetts and lecturing on university campuses throughout the United States.

In his day Alger Hiss was a powerful man. Throughout the war years he worked his way up in the foreign-policy pecking order and by 1945 was picked to accompany President Roosevelt to Yalta. He was an important figure in establishing post-war international monetary cooperation and served as acting secretary general at the San Francisco organizing conference of the United Nations. This same man, according to his accuser, less than ten years earlier, passed secret documents to the Soviet Union.

Hiss's prestige began to crumble when Whitaker Chambers, the man who served as his conduit to the Soviets, stepped forward to testify against him. Chambers, unlike Hiss, was pertinent about his espionage activities. In a classic confrontation Chambers accused Hiss at an emotion-filled meeting of the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1948. Hiss committed perjury trying to refute that testimony.

Demonstrating an absurd sense of loyalty, many members of the Eastern intellectual community — at least that is how they like to think of themselves — never stopped supporting Hiss. Over the years they have portrayed Chambers as a villain and Hiss as a victim. The respectability Hiss now seems to have attained is a product of that warped perception.

As for Hiss, he has never stopped proclaiming his innocence. During his many self-serving speeches he refuses to answer specific questions about the case, but never hesitates to make statements that leave false impressions with his university audiences. In the mid-1970s author Allen Weinstein, convinced of Hiss's innocence, decided to write a book about a miscarriage of justice. Weinstein investigated the evidence and conducted some primary research on his own, including interviewing former Soviet agents in Europe. In his book Perjury: The Hiss-Chambers Case, Weinstein concluded that Hiss was indeed guilty as charged.

The status of this perjurer on university campuses is questionable, but even more serious are the implications of his role in history. It appears that at an important time period a man of doubtful loyalty had incredible influence on the direction of American foreign policy. It should be a reminder, if nothing else, that people can never have total trust in government. And that includes the conducting of foreign affairs.

Favors like this we can do without

Thank heaven for those guardians of the public interest at the U.S. Department of Energy. But for their vigilance, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) might have succeeded in a devious scheme to hold down the price of its gasoline.

The roots of this shameful conspiracy go back to the late 1960s. Sohio, forecasting a petroleum shortage, gambled every nickel in its till on the development of Alaskan oil fields and the construction of an 800-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Now that this investment is paying off in the form of a steady flow of Alaskan crude, Sohio and its parent company, British Petroleum, are selling their gasoline in Ohio for an average of 10 cents to 12 cents per gallon less than the competition.

Naturally, Sohio-BP stations are doing a land-office business in that state and have won a 30 percent share of the market. Disgruntled competitors, incensed at this demonstration of free-market economics, appealed to the Department of Energy to do something.

DOE's proposed solution was this: Sohio would place $14 million, an amount equal to 10 cents for each of the 140 million gallons of gasoline the company expects to sell during the month of May, in a government escrow account. Under the department's edict, Sohio could have reclaimed its $14 million only by hiking the price of its gasoline approximately 10 cents a gallon.

Sohio's competitors, relieved of the pressure to reduce their own prices, would have been delighted. Sohio would have recovered its $14 million, although it might have lost a portion of its market share. And the bureaucrats at the Department of Energy no doubt would have taken some pride in having devised this Solomon-like solution, which included a vague commitment to search for some way to rebate the $14 million to those who purchased Sohio gasoline in May.

The department had no sooner issued this order than it was canceled. An even more inspired formula is, we are told, in the works.

This is just the sort of public service that gives us a warm feeling whenever we think of the $10 billion it costs American taxpayers each year to keep the Department of Energy in business.

This firm humanizes employment

By Oscar Cooley
Should an employer go out of his way to keep his employees healthy?
Some say no. They brand this as paternalism and say it amounts to meddling with people's private lives. They claim it is welfare in place of wages. Others say yes, it is good business to keep workers in good health so they can work well, just as it pays to keep cutting tools sharp and machines in good repair.

Among the latter is the Scherer Brothers Lumber Company, Minneapolis, which goes so far as to deny its employees salt because it hardens their arteries. However, if a Scherer employee craves salt on the free lunch that the company serves him daily, he is welcome to bring his own shaker.

Following the same tolerant philosophy, although the company supplies no cigarettes or even a cigarette-vending machine, you can bring your own smokes and pollute your lungs at will in a company-provided smoking room. Presumably the line is drawn on intoxicating drink and marijuana, since these might incapacitate the worker.
The free lunches feature salads but no high-fat foods. Even butter is missing. No candy bars are to be had on the premises, but fruit juice is available in vending machines, and workers can help themselves to apples, oranges and bananas. There's coffee, but it is decaffeinated.

It seems the company is not wholly altruistic in the many things it does for the employees' welfare. It wants its workers to come to work every day and to be on time, so it gives the employee two hours extra pay each month he has not been absent or late. The firm's daily absenteeism rate is only 0.3 percent, far below the 3 to 4 percent that is said to be prevalent in other lumber companies. Tardiness, too, is much less, three-quarters of the Scherer crew arriving at the yard a half hour before the 7 a.m. starting time.
The worker health program costs the company an estimated $10,000 a year but is deemed so well worth it that it is to be expanded. A gymnasium where off-duty employees and their families can play basketball and racquetball, take sauna baths, etc., is being planned.

As one may guess, Scherer is not a big concern but is substantial for a building materials retailer. It has 135 employees and annual sales of about $30 million. It is 50 years old.

There are hundreds, maybe thousands, of such companies in the United States. They have the advantage over the GM's and the Excons that their modest size makes it possible for the firm to recognize the individual employee and to make the working environment so agreeable to him that he becomes not merely a 9 to 5 worker but an interested partner in the business.

Loyalty of worker to employing firm is an asset of the latter, intangible and immeasurable in dollars and cents, but real nevertheless.

Some Scherer employees may feel that the company is out of order when it tries to influence their salt-eating or cigarette-smoking ways. So long as it does not try to force the dietary or behavioral prejudices of its proprietors on the workers, they can hardly object seriously to its obviously well-meaning efforts to improve their health and happiness. Our guess is that Scherer has no difficulty in finding and hiring enough competent people to do its work.

What happens when it has to lay one off, as every employer sooner or later has to do? A natural course of action in such a "family firm" would be to ease the separation by a frank statement of the firm's position, saying why it no longer needs the employee, in fact would be wasting money and putting the welfare of all its work force in peril by continuing to employ and pay him. The most humane employer cannot always dodge the slackening of business that makes a lay-off unavoidable.

Without knowing, my guess is that the Scherer employees are not unionized. The antagonism that normally exists between employer and unionized employees can hardly be present in this firm.

It would be interesting to know if there is any Scherer employee on the board of directors of the firm. Certainly it would be far more logical than Douglas Fraser's presence on the Chrysler board, where, as he has admitted, he will represent the adversary stance.

"Thank you ... now very carefully wash the windows."

Garage sale fantasy

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — All over America people are holding garage sales. I don't know about you, but I can't pass one up. What drives people like myself to garage sales is that we all have fantasies that somewhere in the flotsam on display is a treasure that the owner doesn't know he's got.

Here is my favorite garage sale fantasy: I go to a garage sale at the Kruegers. It's all junk, but, as I'm about to leave, my wife whispers, "You have to buy something or they'll be very insulted."

"There's absolutely nothing here I want to have in the house," I whisper back.

"Why don't you buy that painting?"
"It's the ugliest picture I've ever seen."
"Yes, but we can always use the frame."
"But they're asking $15 for it," I protest.
"Offer them $10. It's five o'clock and you can see they're desperate."

I offer Krueger $10 and he says, stiffly, "$12.50, and all sales are final." I'm about to call him a crook, when my wife nudges me in the ribs, and I pay him the $12.50. "Do you have any newspaper to wrap it in?" I ask.
"We don't wrap," Krueger says. "You bring your own wrapping to a garage sale." I stick the painting under my arm and say to my wife, "Hurry up or we'll miss the N-2 bus."

We get on the bus, and seated across the aisle is a man in a pin-striped morning suit. I figure he's just been to a wedding.

He looks at me, and then casually at the painting I have leaning against my knees. Suddenly his eyes bug out.

"I beg your pardon. May I examine that painting?" he says.
I think he's going to make fun of me and I say, "What for?"
"Forgive me," he says, handing me his card. "I am from Sotheby Park Bernet's, the art auction house, and I could swear that picture is an original Applebaum."
"You are correct," I say. "It's been in my family for years. My Aunt Ada left it to us in her will."

The man from Sotheby's gets on his hands and knees and says, "It's the most magnificent Applebaum I've ever seen. We've known of its existence, but we were unable to trace it after it was sold by the J.P. Morgan estate."

"The Morgans and my aunt were good friends," I say.

The Sotheby man takes a magnifying glass out of his pocket.

"It's simply fantastic. Do you know the history of Applebaum?"

"A little," I reply. "But our family has so many great paintings, we can't keep track of them all."

"Applebaum lived in Alaska, and spent 40 years painting nothing but dog sleds. He never painted the dogs — just the sleds. For years he was ignored by the art world. But in 1950 he was rediscovered, and every museum in the world considers its collection incomplete unless it has one Applebaum hanging on its walls. What makes this picture so unique is that the dog sled was painted in the spring, when there was no snow on the ground."

"That's why my Aunt Ada bought it," I say. "She never did like snow."

"What are you planning to do with it?" the man from Sotheby's asks.

"Put it in our playroom with our Cezannes and Renoirs," I tell him.

"You wouldn't consider letting us auction it off, would you?"

"I don't know. We never like to part with a painting. How much do you think it would fetch?"

"We'd put a ceiling of $2 million on it, but it wouldn't surprise me if it brought over $5 million. To my knowledge it's the last Applebaum still in private hands."

"Well, then," I say, "it would be very selfish of me to keep it just for the family. I'll bring it to your offices tomorrow morning."

In my fantasy, the picture sells for $6.87 million — the highest price ever paid for a painting of a dog sled.

But the best part of my dream is when Krueger reads the papers and finds out what I got for his painting, and starts banging on the front door, calling me a thief.

The last thing I say to him before I wake up is, "When you have a garage sale, all sales are final."

Disaster at hand?

By Robert Walters
MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (NEA) — The Pennsylvania Dutch country stretches east from here, the Civil War battlefield at Gettysburg lies to the southwest — and in this community is the newest attraction on the central Pennsylvania tourist circuit.
Its name: Three Mile Island Nuclear Station Unit 2.

Prior to March 28, 1979 — the date of this country's most serious accident in the history of commercial nuclear power — only about 1,400 visitors stopped each month at the TMI Observation Center to view the sprawling generating station.

Today that number has more than quadrupled to 6,000 monthly tourists, who can watch a 20-minute film about the accident, buy souvenir T-shirts in town and enjoy a family picnic on the banks of the Susquehanna River.

What most of those sightseers don't know, however, is that the crisis at TMI-2 is far from over. "We have a disaster waiting to happen in central Pennsylvania," says Joseph M. Hendrie, a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Hendrie has come to regret the severity of that warning, uttered at an NRC meeting in Washington earlier this year, but officials of both the commission and the General Public Utilities Corp., the firm that owns the generating station, have become increasingly concerned about the damaged plant.

Item: Prolonged exposure to high levels of radiation, excessive humidity inside the TMI-2 containment dome and a lack of even the most rudimentary maintenance have rendered most of the facility's instruments inoperative or unreliable.
NRC and GPU officials have been forced to rely on "inference" and "extrapolation" — euphemisms for educated guesses about what's happening inside the containment building — because instrument failure has left them bereft of crucial data.

Although there are eight monitors to measure activity within the reactor's damaged core, "only one instrument channel is operating," warns an NRC report. "If this instrument fails, there will be no direct measurement to provide assurance that the reactor core is not going critical again."

Item: Because of an irreparable leak in the "primary loop," the system that provides indispensable cooling water to the reactor core, more than 1 million gallons of highly radioactive water lie 8 feet deep on the floor of the containment building.

The water continues to rise at a rate of 150 to 300 gallons per day, and one internal NRC memo warns that it passed the "red-line" level in early March.

As the water level reaches electrical equipment, it shorts out vital valves, relays and switches. By the end of this month, the plant will lose the power needed to operate its pressurizer heaters. By late October, a pair of crucial valves to isolate decay heat generated in the core will become inoperable.

Item: The fans used in the building's air cooling system "were qualified for three to four hours of continuous operation," according to an NRC study — but they now have been operating 24 hours a day for more than a year without any maintenance.

The air-cooling system is critical because it maintains the TMI-2 reactor building atmosphere at a "negative pressure," slightly below the 14.7 pounds per square inch that occurs naturally in the outside atmosphere.

"These fans can reasonably be expected to fail at any time," says the NRC report. In that event, building pressure will exceed atmospheric pressure and all of the debate about venting radioactive krypton gas will become irrelevant.

That's because the higher inside pressure will, slowly but surely, force the krypton-laden air through the building's thick containment walls and into the surrounding countryside.
Finally, GPU President Herman Dieckamp warns that the reactor core might again become "critical." This time, an uncontrollable nuclear reaction could be produced.

"The unknown core configuration poses a small but incalculable risk," adds R.F. Wilson, the GPU official in charge of TMI-2. "The possibility of the failure or malfunction of equipment increases as time passes without preventive maintenance."

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 1, the 153rd day of 1980. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1944, the siesta was officially abolished in Mexico.

On this date:
In 1533, Anne Boleyn was crowned as queen of England.

In 1943, British actor Leslie Howard was killed when a German warplane shot down his civilian Lisbon-to-London flight.

In 1968, the American writer Helen Keller, who was both deaf and blind, died.

In 1973, Premier George Papadopoulos of Greece declared the Greek monarchy abolished.

Ten years ago, Argentine terrorists announce they had tried and sentenced former President Pedro Eugenio Aramburu.

Five years ago, police in the white-ruled African country of Rhodesia killed 11 blacks in a clash with rioters in Salisbury.

Refugees becoming bitter, restless as processing lags

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press Writer Dan Sewell, who covered the arrival of nearly 90,000 Cuban refugees at Key West, Fla., last week toured federal resettlement centers in three states to examine reports of unrest among the new arrivals.

By DAN SEWELL

Associated Press Writer

A grateful, misty-eyed Roberto Sanchez bent and kissed U.S. soil as he stepped ashore from the "Freedom Flotilla" boat that brought him to Key West.

But that was a month ago. Now an embittered Sanchez paces restlessly behind barbed-wire fences inside a refugee processing camp in northwest Florida. He says life isn't much different from that in the Cuban prison he left behind.

"They told us it would take three days for the processing, then we could go out and look for jobs and start earning money," said Sanchez, a diesel mechanic who started a four-year Cuban prison term last year for missing work. He left a wife and three children at home and wants desperately to bring them here.

"I need to earn money to send for them," he said. "I was very happy when I arrived at Key West. Now I feel depressed."

Sanchez is not alone in being disillusioned; although the government says more than 40,000 refugees have been resettled in this country, more than half remain in processing camps waiting for clearances.

A tent city at Eglin Air Force Base in the Florida Panhandle holds nearly 8,000 in an encampment dubbed "Camp Liberty." And there are nearly 19,000 refugees each at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. A new facility opened Thursday at Fort McCoy, Wis.

As weeks passed in the crowded camps, the rosy cheer of the first days faded to raw impatience among some of the Cubans. Camp Liberty has been the scene of almost daily disturbances since last weekend, when a rock-throwing melee was followed by a series of escape attempts. Three refugees have attempted suicide.

Fort Chaffee, which received its first refugees May 9, is filled with tension aggravated by frustrated Cuban-American relatives and wary Arkansas residents.

Fort Indiantown Gap is relatively calm. Its refugees have been there less than two weeks.

Time seems to be the key factor. The refugees say they thought reaching the United States meant instant freedom.

"They were so happy to come to the land of democracy, but they thought they could come here and start doing anything they want. I tell them we do have some rules," said Al St. John, a Panama-born soldier trying to south Fort Chaffee refugees.

The great majority of the Cubans already resettled were able to link up with relatives awaiting them in the Miami area.

Those with relatives in northern communities were flown to the holding camps where volunteer agencies and federal officials work to track down their families.

The task is often difficult. Refugees say Cuban police stripped them of all pieces of paper before they left. Few know their relatives' addresses or telephone numbers by memory. A few outsmarted Cuban authorities by tattooing vital information on their bodies.

Government interviews with some 31,000 refugees found 88 percent had relatives in the United States. Many were in the Dade County area around Miami.

For those with relatives elsewhere, or with no relatives in the United States, resettlement has been a frustrating process.

Those with no relatives, such as Sanchez, could wait two months or more while volunteer agencies find appropriate sponsors.

A three-step resettlement process — health clearance, security clearance and sponsorship — has admittedly taken longer to swing into gear than federal officials expected.

"This isn't the type of thing we usually deal with," said Tom Casey, heading Cuban refugee operations for the Federal Emergency Management Agency. "A disaster is usually a static situation — the hurricane comes through, then you go in and find this many homeless, this many roads out, this much damage. But this is unpredictable. We don't know what we're going to have."

The federal government didn't take over resettlement from the state of Florida until more than a week after the boatlift began. The first small groups of refugees began leaving Eglin just two weeks ago, and Fort Chaffee released its first on Wednesday.

The political and bureaucratic snags are lost on the refugees.

The Eglin camp is a scene of squalor.

Foul air hangs heavy over the clustered tents in the Florida heat. Most refugees lie listlessly on their cots. Some read the 5,000 copies of the Spanish-language newspaper Diarios de Las Americas donated daily by its publisher. Others wait impatiently to play dominos.

Every body deserves a good night's sleep!

When shopping for a waterbed, the most important item to consider, is what kind of mattress you get. Since the mattress is what you actually sleep on, it is important to make sure that it is designed to provide maximum comfort. It should also be of the highest quality construction.

Shallow Waterbeds, we use only the finest quality mattresses. All beds include a "T" corner mattress, manufactured by Liberty Vinyl.

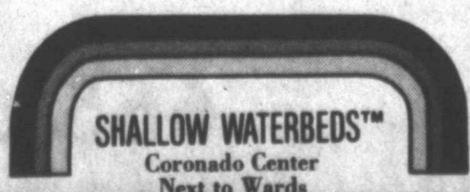

The "T" corner comes with a fifteen year warranty, so you know it's built to last, and as for comfort, the unique corner design allows the mattress to fit your frame properly, creating a perfectly flat surface, that will completely conform to your body. The result is comfort beyond compare.

Shallow Waterbeds also carries "waveless" mattresses. These are constructed with a series of baffles, which run lengthwise, inside the mattress. The result is a mattress that provides equal support, with hardly any motion.

So drop on by Shallow Waterbeds for a closer look, at waterbed mattresses.

After all, don't you deserve a good night's sleep.

Students receive Cabot scholarships

Three 1980 Pampa High School graduates are recipients of Cabot Corporation scholarships.

Michael Don Butler, Scott E. Grayson, and Amy Denise Lewis are the winners of this honor. Another recipient among the twenty-five total winners is Kevin K. Gantz, a Pampa High School student until the summer of 1979 when his family relocated with Cabot to Georgia.

Each year on a competitive basis, Cabot Corporation makes a total of twenty-five college scholarship awards to children of its employees in the United States and Canada. Each winner receives a $1,000 award renewable yearly based on scholastic achievement for a four-year total of $4,000.

Mike Butler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Butler of 1237 Russell. He plans to major in Engineering at West Texas State University and later at the University of Texas at Austin. Mike enjoys music and during his high school years, was a member of the "Pride of Pampa" band, serving as vice-president during his senior year. He has been a member of the All-Region and All-Area Band. He is also a member of the National Honor Society and ranked in the top ten of his class.

Prior to entering college this fall, Mike has a summer job at Cabot Research and Development.

Scott Grayson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Caylor of 1717 Charles and Mr. and Mrs. Buster Grayson of 1700 Christine. His high school activities include Student Council, swimming, Key Club, FCA, and Concert Choir. He is ranked within the top ten percent of his graduating class and is a member of the National Honor Society. Scott has been active in Boy Scouts and Explorers, serving this year as the president of the Medical Explorer Post. Prior to college, Scott will be employed with the State Highway Department for the summer.

Amy Lewis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Lewis of 2215 Beech. She plans to major in Elementary Education at West Texas State University. She is a member of National Honor Society and is ranked within the top ten of her class. She is also a member of the Concert Choir, serving this year as historian. Amy plans to work for the summer at McDonald's.

Kevin Gantz of 881 Mimosa Blvd., Roswell, Geo., is the son of Mr.

KEVIN GANTZ

MIKE BUTLER

SCOTT GRAYSON

AMY LEWIS

KEITH BAKER, right, a West Texas State University senior from Lefors, receives a $200 scholarship check from Dr. James Davis, professor and head of the WTSU accounting department.

SHERRY LYNN SMITH, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Raymond V. Smith of 608 N. Somerville, is the recipient of a scholarship award presented by the Pampa Chapter of the Women of the Moose. She is enrolled at Angelo State University where she plans to work toward a BSN degree in the field of nursing. The Loyal Order of Moose, Pampa Lodge No. 1385 also contributed to the scholarship fund.

Borg, King advance in French Tennis Open

PARIS (AP) — Bjorn Borg and Billie Jean King tamed a swirling wind Saturday and moved forward in the French Open Tennis Championships on a day cut short by rain.

Borg, defending champion and favored to win the men's title, demolished Pascal Portes of France 6-3, 6-0, 6-1 and reached the last 16. King, who got the worst of the conditions earlier, overcame freakish gusts and clouds of red dust to eliminate fellow American Leslie Allen 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Corrado Barazzutti of Italy, Manuel Orantes of Spain and Peter McNamara of Australia were the other third-round winners. Guillermo Vilas of Argentina was well on the way to victory when the rain returned and ended play.

Meanwhile, the Association of Tennis Professionals stepped up its disciplinary drive and slapped fines totaling $1,250 on John McEnroe for incidents in Friday's dramatic match in which he lost to Australia's Paul McNamee.

The American was fined $250 for using obscenities to spectators, $500 for "verbal abuse" and $500 for failing to attend a press conference. Under ATP rules, all players must go to the interview room after their matches if the press asks for them.

The ATP, which has four supervisors watching the tournament under the leadership of American Dick Roberson, had fined Jimmy Connors $1,000 for obscene remarks and gestures two days earlier.

The rain delayed play for almost five hours. The grounds of Roland Garros Stadium, thick with jostling spectators most of this week, was comparatively empty. But a full house of 18,000 appeared around the center court when Portes, a local hero, tackled Borg.

They had a brief spell of excitement when the young Frenchman broke Borg's service and pulled up from 1-4 to 3-4 in the first set. But the Swede took complete charge from then on.

Borg said afterward it was a matter of experience.

"In this wind the best way is to play safe and keep the ball in play," Borg said. "He went for the lines and often missed."

King, 36, said she had played in worse conditions only twice previously — once in a Wightman Cup match at Chicago in 1961 and once in Tasmania in the late 1960s.

Allen hit some heat angled volleys and had her share of success in the freakish conditions, playing King for the first time.

King, seeded No. 2 behind defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd, commented, "Sometimes I hit the ball from the baseline and it never reached the net. Next time I would hit it higher and it would be long."

"It was almost too bad to play, what with mouthfuls of dust and everything. But I just thought to myself: The poor referee has to get through the matches as best he can, so I went out and made the best of it."

Barazzutti ousted Belus Prajoux of Chile 6-2, 6-4, 6-3; Orantes, seeded No. 15, trimmed Bruce Manson of the United States 7-6, 6-0, 6-3; and McNamara overcame Christophe Roger-Vasselin of France 6-7, 6-2, 7-6, 6-4.

Vilas, who won the Italian Open title a week ago, was leading Britain's Buster Mottram 6-2, 6-2, 2-2 when rains sent the player racing for shelter.

Vilas is seeded No. 4 and is rated one of the strongest threats to Borg. He might have wrapped up the match before the weather broke. But in the third set Mottram altered his tactics and started slow-balling and keeping rallies going for 40 and 50 strokes on the slow clay court.

Olympic funds may be used

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The "Olympic Solidarity Fund" may be made available to National Olympic Committees that lose government financing because of decisions to compete in the Summer Games at Moscow.

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Thursday the possible use of money from that fund would be discussed at the next IOC meeting in June.

During a news conference, the Olympic official restated his regret that the United States-led boycott of this year's Moscow Games was preventing athletes from competing.

"Governments should fight their battles in some other arena," said Killanin, referring to the U.S. sponsorship of the boycott movement in protest of the Soviet's military intervention in Afghanistan.

"I wish to reiterate a protest on behalf of the athletes that they should be made to make sacrifices," he said.

Killanin added it was beyond his scope to comment on political matters, but said Moscow was awarded the Summer Games because of its ability to organize them. The IOC president said he would not be a party to any breach of the six-year-old contract with the Soviet National Olympic Committee.

Just as binding, he continued, was the agreement to stage the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles.

Killanin also confirmed there has been consideration given to staging future Summer Games on an agreed, permanent, politically neutral site.

Yarborough wins pole position

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S.C., may have won the pole position for today NASCAR 400 stock car race at Texas World Speedway, but he's far back in the field in trying to win the sympathy vote.

Yarborough toured TWS' two-mile oval at 170.709 mph to earn the No. 1 spot for Sunday's $186,700 race but complained of bad luck earlier this season and of rough track conditions at Texas World Speedway.

"Yeah, Cale only qualified three miles per hour faster than he did last year," countered a TWS official. "This track is in fine shape."

Yarborough disagrees but he's getting little sympathy from other drivers. Yarborough goes into Sunday's race in third place in current NASCAR point standings behind Dale Earnhardt and Richard Petty.

Yarborough won the Carolina 500 at Rockingham, N.C., March 9 and has seven finishes in the top 10 through 13 NASCAR events this year. A victory Sunday could put Yarborough into the point standings lead.

But poor little Cale Yarborough is crying all the way around the track.

"We should have won five races by now," Yarborough said. "We've been having little things go wrong that normally don't go wrong."

The week after winning the Carolina 500 Yarborough was leading the Atlanta 500 race when a 50-cent rotary button on his distributor cap broke. "Now how many times have you heard of a rotary button breaking?" Yarborough asked.

Two weeks ago in the Maxon-Dixon 500 Yarborough's rear end housing cracked.

Dallas interested in Brown

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — UCLA basketball coach Larry Brown says he's "just scared to death" about the Dallas Mavericks' interest in him as their first coach and added he's giving serious consideration to it.

Brown, here as an assistant coach with the Olympic training camp, went to Dallas recently when Mavericks vice president Norm Sonju asked him to come for an interview.

"I wasn't that excited about it when I went down there. In the back of my mind, I knew what an unbelievable experience I had at UCLA in a positive way," Brown said.

"But I was impressed with their (Dallas) enthusiasm. They showed me a lot of things I could get excited about," he told the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram in a telephone interview. Brown is reportedly at the top of Sonju's list to head his expansion team.

"I rank pro coaches in five categories," Sonju said last week.

There are three coaches in category one, and I would rank Larry Brown right there. Don Carter and Doug Adkins (Mavericks' owner and other top executive) also like him. There would be no guesswork with him."

Brown, who coached Denver's NBA team before taking over at UCLA and coaching the Bruins to the national championship game, will be tied up with the U.S. Olympic team until June 7 in Rhode Island and in Colorado. The U.S. team will play NBA all-stars in a five-game series later in June.

"Sonju told me he would get back to me, and I trust him to fulfill that commitment," Brown told the Star-Telegram.

Jabbar nabs MVP award again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar feels that at the age of 33, he's not getting older, he's getting better.

"I think I've changed as a person and as a player the last couple of years, and I'm proud of the change," said Abdul-Jabbar, who was named the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player for a record sixth time in his brilliant 11-year career.

"I've matured as an adult," he said. "My roots may be in the 1960s, but this is 1980 and I hope I've matured since then."

"I know I've improved as a basketball player. I'm more aware of all facets of the game now than I ever was. And as long as I can maintain the standards I've set for myself, stay in shape and stay healthy, I'm going to keep on playing."

That's good news for the Los Angeles Lakers, who rode the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar's brilliant pivot play to the championship.

"Kareem means everything to us," said Lakers Coach Paul Westhead. "He is the Man on this team."

But Abdul-Jabbar says the team is more important than the man.

"As an individual award, it's wonderful to feel that your contributions were more important than those of any other player," said Abdul-Jabbar. "But this is a team game, and what the Lakers accomplished as a unit overshadows this. We proved we were the best. We got to hang the banner in the Forum that says, 'World Champs,' and that's the big thing."

"We were like the Three Musketeers — one for all and all for one. I wouldn't be here without the help I got from my teammates."

The NBA presented three other awards Thursday at a special luncheon during the annual summer meetings of coaches and general managers, and all three went to members of the Boston Celtics.

Forward Larry Bird was named Rookie of the Year, Bill Fitch was named Coach of the Year and Red Auerbach was named Executive of the Year following the Celtics' turnaround from a 29-53 record in 1979 to a 61-21 mark last season.

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar received 147 votes from the 221 cast in the balloting of NBA players, easily outdistancing forward Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, who was second with 31½. George Gervin of San Antonio was third with 19 and Bird was fourth with 15.

In winning the Maurice Podoloff trophy, Abdul-Jabbar surpassed the five MVP awards won by Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics.

"That's nice, that's beautiful, but that's really hard to appreciate right now," said Abdul-Jabbar. "That's something I will really appreciate when I retire from the game and look back on my career."

Abdul-Jabbar is the 16th consecutive center to win the MVP award. The last non-center to win was guard Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati in 1964. Moses Malone of Houston won the award last season.

"Few people have the ability to dominate a game, offensively and defensively, as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has throughout his career," said NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien in presenting the award. "And this year he demonstrated the leadership qualities that the Lakers needed to win the championship."

Bird was a lopsided winner of the rookie trophy, which was named this year after Eddie Gottlieb, the league pioneer who died in December at the age of 81. Bird received 63 votes from the panel of three writers from each league city to just three for Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers.

The voting for Rookie of the Year, as for the other awards, was conducted at the end of the regular season. Thus the brilliant playoff performance of the Lakers in general, and Johnson in particular, did not weigh in the balloting.

Fitch, who spent nine seasons in Cleveland before coming to Boston last summer, is the first man to win Coach of the Year twice, having also taken it in 1976. He received 37 votes to 18 for runnerup Paul Westhead of Los Angeles from a panel of writers.

Milwaukee clobbers Red Sox, 19-8

BOSTON (AP) — Paul Molitor had four hits and Ben Oglivie, Jim Gantner and Robin Yount had three apiece Saturday as the Milwaukee Brewers withstood a Boston home run barrage for a 19-8 victory over the Red Sox.

The Brewers clobbered four Boston pitchers for 22 hits, including seven doubles and Robin Yount's eighth homer and Molitor's fourth. The Brewers' 19 runs and 22 hits set club records.

Molitor, who singled on the game's first play, had a double in an eight-run third inning, a three-run homer in the six-run seventh and an RBI-single in a four-run eighth. Oglivie had a run-scoring single in the third and an RBI-double in the seventh before beating out an infield hit and scoring in the eighth.

Every Milwaukee starter had at least one hit, with Cecil Cooper, Dick Davis, Mark Brouhard and Charlie Moore collecting two apiece.

Angels defeat Tigers, 6-1

DETROIT (AP) — California's Tom Donohue and Bert Campaneris each cracked two-run homers to back the combined four-hit pitching of Bruce Kison and Dave LaRoche as the Angels defeated the Detroit Tigers 6-1 Saturday.

Kison, 3-4, was masterful in the early innings, giving up a two-out single to Steve Kemp in the first inning and then retiring the next 13 batters in order before walking Kirk Gibson to start the Detroit sixth.

The Angels got one run in the first when Rick Miller worked Tiger starter and loser Pat Underwood, 0-3, for a walk, went to third on Dickie Thon's double and scored on Carney Lansford's grounder.

Orioles bomb Twins, 11-1

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rich Dauer drove in four runs with two singles and a sacrifice fly and Baltimore took advantage of five Twins errors as the Orioles bombed Minnesota 11-1 Saturday.

Minnesota outfielder Ken Landreux went 0-for-4 and had his major league-leading hitting streak stopped at 31 games. Landreux's streak was the longest in the American League in 31 years.

Minnesota committed three errors in the first two innings as Baltimore provided Scott McGregor with a 5-0 lead. McGregor, 4-2, scattered eight hits and struck out three batters.

Three-pointer here to stay?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The three-point goal, a popular success in its trial run during the 1979-80 National Basketball Association season, is on the verge of becoming a permanent feature of the program.

The league's Competition and Rules Committee, acting on the urging of NBA coaches and general managers, voted to recommend to the Board of Governors that the three-point goal rule — awarding three points for shots made from beyond an arc that ranges from 22 feet to 23 feet, 6 inches from the basket — be kept on a permanent basis.

The move came Friday at the final session of the annual summer meetings of NBA coaches and general managers. The final decision will be up to the Board of Governors, one representative (usually an owner) of each of the 23 NBA franchises, which begins its summer meetings Tuesday in Coronado, Calif.

In another major action, the Competition and Rules Committee chose to table a motion to return to the use of three referees per game, which had been tried during the 1978-79 season but dropped last summer.

"The coaches, general managers and the Competition and Rules Committee all believe in the concept of three officials, but the problem is we're not quite ready," said committee chairman Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the Phoenix Suns.

"We need to develop an overall program for the recruitment and development of officials. We don't want to put the cart before the horse."

As part of this effort, the recommendation was made for increasing the NBA's recruitment and development of officials. This would be in conjunction with "renewing and expanding the NBA's contract with the Continental Basketball Association," said Colangelo, with that minor league being used as a developmental place for officials as well as players and a testing ground for rules changes and new equipment.

"We want to be able to look people in the eye and say, 'We're ready for three officials. We've got the people who can get the job done,'" said Joe Axelson, the NBA's director of operations.

That might not be enough to satisfy the referees' union. If the board, which voted out the third official last summer, also decides to table the question of restoring the third official, it could lead to a major confrontation.

The NBA officials' contract with the league expired at the end of the playoffs earlier this month, and union leader Richie Phillips had said earlier that a return to three-man refereeing crews would be one of his key demands in negotiations for a new contract.

Other recommendations included going to 12-man rosters next season from the present limit of 11, making the first round of the playoffs best of five games instead of best of three and experimenting with collapsible rims during training camps and the exhibition season.

"We also recommended that a committee be formed to look into the drug problem, if there is one," added Colangelo.

McEnroe upset in French Open

PARIS (AP) — When he was good, he was very good, but when he was bad, John McEnroe was horrid. And an even-tempered Australian named Paul McNamee made him pay dearly for it.

McNamee, a scrappy 25-year-old right-hander who simply refused to be beaten, ousted second seeded McEnroe 7-6, 6-7, 7-6, 7-6 Friday in a stunning upset at the 1980 French Open tennis championships.

"I knew I had a good chance," McNamee said after winning the fourth tie-breaker game in the 4-hour 18-minute match.

"I was always mentally strong. There was no point when I felt the match was swinging against me. In fact, I felt I was getting a little stronger."

McEnroe's defeat dramatically changed the battle to keep Bjorn Borg from winning his fifth French crown. Barring more upsets, Borg's major rivals will be No. 3 seed Jimmy Connors and No. 4 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

Apart from Borg, Vilas has been the most impressive so far this year on the slow courts of Roland Garros Stadium, where he has shown the kind of consistent, aggressive form that brought him the Italian title last Sunday.

He whipped Brazil's Thomas Koch on Friday 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. Connors settled down after a scare this week from Frenchman Jean-Francois Caujolle and defeated Antonio Zugarelli of Italy 6-4, 7-5, 7-5 in another match Friday.

Vitas Gerulaitis, Chile's Hans Gildemeister and Poland's Wojtek Fibak also advanced to the final 16 of this two-week tournament, as did France's Yannick Noah. Runnerup to Vilas in Rome, Noah proved too strong for Eliot Teltscher of the United States, winning 6-3, 6-4, 7-6.

French fans, turning out in record numbers at newly expanded and refurbished Roland Garros, have been going wild for Noah, who will meet Connors on Sunday in what promises to be one of the great matches of this tournament.

With Tracy Austin, Martina Navratilova and Evonne Goolagong Cawley skipping Paris, the women's competition has been fairly lackluster, with defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd so far facing little challenge. She made short work of Friday of Pam Teeguarden 6-1, 6-1.

Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia eliminated Roselyn Fairbank of South Africa, 6-1, 6-2 and advanced to the final 16 with Virginia Wade of Great Britain, Kathy Jordan of the United States and Australia's Diane Fromholtz.

In the day's biggest match, McEnroe at times did not seem to be concentrating very well and he was clearly uncomfortable on the slow clay courts. But when he was good, he was often brilliant.

SPORTS

Tennis program starts June 9

The junior tennis development program is set for June 9-July 14, and youngsters interested may contact instructor David Martin at 669-9349 for more information.

Entry forms, listing the entrant's name, address, phone number and previous playing experience, may be sent to Martin at Box 178, Pampa, Tex., 79065.

Entry fee is 60 dollars for 40 hours of instruction. Students will receive a wooden junior racket, junior development t-shirt, manual and rule book, and a tie-breaker instruction pamphlet. Each student will also have their strokes on video tape.

Vance Hall Sporting Goods is offering a 15 percent discount on all tennis items to any program participant.

Kris Douglass, a former Pampa High tennis standout now playing for the Texas A&M women's team, and Mark Elliott, a varsity Harvester player, will assist Martin with the program.

"Sign up today and let your son or daughter be a part of some great fun that will have a lasting effect," Martin said.

Entry deadline is June 8.

National League roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Vida Blue is king of the hill in his town. On a team that has been having as many ups-and-downs as the streets of San Francisco, Blue is providing the Giants with classic consistency.

The "stopper" of the San Francisco staff halted another losing streak Friday night, hurling a five-hitter as the Giants defeated the Houston Astros 3-2.

"The team plays well when I'm out there," said Blue, who stopped a three-game San Francisco slide this time. "I wish we could put it together and be as responsive when the other starters are pitching."

Blue's victory improved his record to a sparkling 8-2. The other San Francisco pitchers have a cumulative mark of 11-24.

A bunt by Johnnie LeMaster scored Terry Whitfield in the sixth inning on a suicide squeeze play to break a 2-2 tie and give the Giants their winning run.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the Atlanta Braves 8-4; the Montreal Expos routed the St. Louis Cardinals 10-4; the New York Mets turned back the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1; the Chicago Cubs outscored the Philadelphia Phillies 10-7 and the Cincinnati Reds trimmed the San Diego Padres 5-3.

Blue won his sixth straight game, giving up both the Astros' runs on homers in the fourth inning by Jose Cruz and Art Howe, which tied the score at 2-2. Before the fourth, he had not allowed a homer in 64 innings.

The Giants had four hits and two runs in the first inning off Ken Forsch, 5-4. Willie McCovey drove in a run with a double and scored on a single by Darrell Evans. Dodgers 8, Braves 4.

Dusty Baker slugged a three-run homer and Bill Russell drove in two runs with a bases-loaded double to lead Los Angeles over Atlanta. Burt Hooton, 5-3, earned the victory, but gave up three homers, including two by Gary Matthews, his third and fourth. Chris Chambliss hit his fifth homer for the Braves. The Dodger starter needed late-inning relief help from Rick Sutcliffe. Expos 10, Cardinals 4.

Ellis Valentine and Chris Speier each drove in three runs, Andre Dawson added a homer and sacrifice fly and Gary Carter also homered as Montreal whipped St. Louis.

Scott Sanderson, 5-3, scattered nine hits as the Expos won for the 11th time in 14 games. Jim Kaat, 0-3, a 41-year-old southpaw making his first start of the season, surrendered the first six runs and took the loss for the sliding Cardinals, who have dropped 16 of 18 games.

Mets 5, Pirates 1. Steve Henderson smashed two doubles, driving in three runs behind the three-hit pitching of Pat Zachry, as New York beat Pittsburgh in a game called after 5 1/2 innings because of rain.

Zachry, 1-2, held the World Series champions to two singles and a solo home run by Mike Easler.

New York pounded Pirate starter John Candelaria, 2-4, for four doubles among seven hits in the early going, taking a 5-0 lead after two innings. Cubs 10, Phillies 7.

Mike Vail socked four hits and Tim Blackwell's first major league home run capped a six-run first inning as Chicago outscored Philadelphia.

Rick Reuschel, 4-4, was the winner, turning in a complete game despite yielding 13 hits. Dan Larson, 0-1, victim of four unearned runs in the first inning, suffered the loss. Reds 5, Padres 3.

Rookie left-hander Charlie Leibrand, aided by a four-run second inning, gained his first victory since May 9 as Cincinnati beat San Diego.

Leibrand, 4-3, surrendered three hits and a pair of runs in the first inning, then settled down to hold the Padres at bay until Dave Winfield hit his sixth homer in the eighth.

Kuhn played quiet role during baseball talks

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

There has been considerable conjecture and some criticism, as well, of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's role in the recent baseball contract negotiations.

Kuhn's first public appearance in the talks came at 5 a.m. last Friday when the settlement between management and the players was announced. Some people, including the keeper of this corner, wondered out loud where he had been until then.

The questions came mostly in the countdown stage of the negotiations when it seemed almost certain that a strike would interrupt the baseball season. There were calls of desperation by observers reaching for any straw, any hope that peace could be made between the twosides.

A week later, given the luxury of time to reflect with no strike deadline pressure bearing down, it becomes obvious that Kuhn couldn't have done much more than he did. His view of the commissioner's role in this kind of labor showdown makes very good sense.

"I believe the quiet, internal approach is the most effective from where I sit," Kuhn said the other day. "I appreciate that creates questions but I must follow my own judgment to work hard but quietly."

Because he wasn't born yesterday, Kuhn realized long ago that the players and owners were on something of a collision course that spelled trouble. The same thing, after all, had happened in 1976 when management refused to open spring training camps, locking out the players in a demand for a contract settlement. At that time, Kuhn ordered the camps opened, perhaps saving the season. Why then, didn't he take some similar definitive action this time?

"I don't think my role is always to be as subtle as I was this time," he said. "In 1976, I disagreed with the Player Relations Committee's position and I overruled it and ordered the camps to open. This time, in no way did I disagree with the committee's position. I believe strongly that compensation for free agents is needed. There was no collision between myself and the Player Relations Committee as there was in 1976."

Given that circumstance, Kuhn couldn't very well play the impartial middleman role in these talks. Besides, that job was capably performed by Kenneth Moffett of the Federal Mediation Service. What then could the commissioner do?

Divorce suit dropped

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for Toni and Helga Fritsch gave no reason why Mrs. Fritsch dropped a divorce suit she filed the day after Fritsch was involved in a fatal car accident.

"I moved to dismiss the suit because my client asked me to," Clifford Weinstein, Mrs. Fritsch's lawyer, said Friday. He declined to say more.

Mrs. Fritsch initiated divorce proceedings on May 28, asking custody of the couple's two children — Hans Markus, 14, and Melissa against Toni Fritsch

Alexandria, 8 — and $2,000 monthly child support and temporary support payments.

On May 27, Fritsch's Volkswagen went out of control on a north Dallas freeway, jumped the median and smashed into an oncoming car. Neida Burks, who was the lone passenger in the Volkswagen, was killed.

The divorce petition alleged that on that day, the Fritschs ceased to live together as man and wife.

Deadline for Open is near Entry deadlines are right around the corner for the Pampa Open scheduled Thursday through Sunday at the high school and country club courts.

The junior entry deadline is Monday while the adult deadline is Wednesday. Fees are six dollars for singles and 12 dollars per doubles team.

Listed among the scheduled events are men's and women's A and B division singles and doubles in the adult category and boy's and girl's 14-18 singles and doubles in junior play. Among the special events are A and B mixed doubles.

Entries should be mailed to David Martin, Box 178, Pampa, 9065. Entry checks should be made payable to the Pampa Tennis Club. Entries should also include the entrant's name, city, address, phone, date of birth in the junior category, and vent entered. Doubles partners for each event should also be listed.

The tournament is sponsored by Fathree Insurance Agency.

TAKE ON TOUGH TERRAIN WITH THE TIGER.

Like its namesake, this self-propelled Tiger is at home on uneven terrain. It's quick to respond. And response begins in the palms of your hands.

For instance, release the DriveMaster control lever and the mower can be pulled backward almost as easily as it moves forward.

The overriding clutch makes "free wheeling" turns without scuffing the grass.

Hahn's exclusive left side trimmer notch lets grass spring up so the blade can trim close, clean and beautifully.

See our riding Tigers and lawnmowers soon. You won't go in the tall grass without one.

SPORTS

Attention softball coaches!

Coaches or scorekeepers in the Pampa Softball Association may turn in game information to the Pampa News by calling the sports department at 669-2525 or by slipping a written account of the game into the mail slot at the newspaper building. Names of the pitchers and those players who had hits should be included in the story, along with any other tidbits such as outstanding defensive plays, won-lost records, etc. League officials should submit team standings at least once a week.

Mahaffey leads Kemper Open

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — John Mahaffey coaxed in a long, double-breaking birdie putt on the final hole, finishing off a 3-under-par 67 that gave him the third round lead Saturday in the $400,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

"I kind of surprised myself on that putt," Mahaffey said of the 25-footer which had two breaks to it. The dramatic putt, holed well after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day, completed a no-bogey round and gave him a 207 total.

That's 3 under par for 54 holes over the 7,654 yards of hilly countryside that make up the famed Congressional Country Club course which is proving to be the most difficult layout the touring pros encounter.

Lee Trevino shot a 69 in the hot, humid, hazy weather and was second alone at 208 in the event that was transplanted this year from its long-time home in Charlotte, N.C. to the northern suburbs of the national capital.

The group at 209, and the only others under par for three rounds, were Australian Open champion Jack Newton, Mike Morley and Dr. Gil Morgan. Newton, who challenged for the Masters title early this spring, shot a 69. Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist, matched par 70 and Morley fought his way to a 71.

Hale Irwin, rounding into the form that won him two U.S. Open titles, and young Jeff Mitchell, a winner at Phoenix earlier this year, were at 210. Irwin shot 70 and Mitchell followed rounds of 71 and 70 with a 69.

"I've improved one shot each day," he said. "I'd sure like to do it again tomorrow."

Tom Watson, who has collected five titles and more than $346,000 in money-winnings this year, struggled to an erratic 73 that left him six shots back at 213.

J.C. Snead, the rangy guy who had led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, slipped to a 77 and was at 214.

Play was held up for 42 minutes by an early-morning shower that hit the course well before the leaders got away. It softened the rock-hard greens and made them easier to hold. But it also dampened the fairways, eliminating roll on the drives, and made the long, long course play even longer.

"It may have been just a little easier, but it's still a very difficult golf course," said Mitchell.

OSU wins NCAA golf crown

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Oklahoma State's Cowboys captured their fourth NCAA Golf Championship on Saturday by firing even par for the final round on Ohio State's par-72, 7,104-yard Scarlet course.

The Cowboys, who finished four strokes ahead of Brigham Young, had started the final round in a three-way tie with BYU and defending champion Ohio State at 865 for 54 holes.

The host Buckeyes, however, slipped with a final round 299 to fall into a fourth place tie with Texas Christian, six strokes behind third place Oral Roberts. TCU's final round of two-under par 286 was the best team round of the tournament.

The individual battle between Utah State's junior Jay Don Blake and Centenary senior Hal Sutton went four extra holes before Blake sank a 12-foot birdie putt to win the title.

Blake, who had led from the opening round, had to sink a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the Saturday round for an even par 72 and a four-round total of five-under par 283 to deadlock Sutton, who had finished earlier with a two under par 70.

The two players then had to play numbers 17 and 18 twice in a sudden death playoff before Blake's birdie putt brought him his biggest title.

This was Blake's first NCAA appearance and he had little national exposure until coming into this 83rd NCAA event. He never lost his cool, however, leading the tournament with Oklahoma State's Bob Tway with a 69 after the first round and following with rounds of 71, 71 and 72.

Sutton, who had won five intercollegiate tournaments this season and 16 in his career, had rounds of 72, 71, 70 and 70 to force the playoff. Sutton made the cut in this year's Masters tournament with a pair of 73s and said that experience bolstered his confidence.

Blake said, "I knew I was behind today at the 14th tee when I was two over par and Hal had already finished with his 70. I knew then I had to do something."

He two-putted the par five 14th for a birdie, saved a par at 17 with a 25-foot putt after missing the green to the left and then forced the playoff with a 12-foot birdie putt which he then duplicated in the sudden death playoff for medalist honors.

Oklahoma State Coach Mike Holder said, "It was just a fine round by everyone for us today. Our players did not let anything distract them. We started rather slowly, but then finished strong. Winning this title was our ultimate goal, and it was the toughest win we ever had considering the strength of this course and the competition."

Texans share NAAI golf honors

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — A pair of Texas golfers — Tom Albright of Sam Houston State and Danny Mijovic of Texas Wesleyan — shared individual honors with a final score of 284 as the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics golf championship concluded Friday.

Albright's finish enabled Sam Houston to win the team championship for the third consecutive year. Sam Houston eclipsed 36 competing colleges with a team total of 1,172, a whopping 22 strokes under Texas Wesleyan and Indiana, Pa., which tied for second at 1,194.

Host Saginaw Valley State was the top Michigan finisher. The Cardinals were fourth with 1,198 — one stroke better than Guilford, N.C. over the 6,610-yard, par 71 layout at Bay Valley Golf Club.

Finishing third was Jay Kennedy of Guilford with a 288 total. Kent Stauffer of Indiana, Pa. placed fifth at 290.

Tech's Segrist honored

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech's surprising Red Raiders, who made their first Southwest Conference post-season baseball tournament, landed three players on The Associated Press all-league team and Coach Kal Segrist.

Segrist, who had the original idea for the post-season tournament, was picked as Coach of the Year by his fellow mentors.

Red Raiders on the first team included shortstop Brooks Wallace, outfielder Bobby Kohler, and utility infielder Jimmy Zachry.

Arkansas' power hitter outfielder Kevin McReynolds, who hit .430 with 10 home runs during the SWC season, was named Player of the Year.

Pitcher of the Year was a tie between Arkansas' Steve Krueger and Texas' Keith Creel.

Texas A&M's Robert Slavens, who was 7-0 in league games, was the Newcomer of the Year.

Other players on the All-SWC team included Houston first baseman Mike Breslin, who hit .364, second baseman Dean David of Texas, .348, third baseman Fritz Connally, Baylor, .314, Wallace of Tech, .333, catcher Gene de los Santos, Baylor, .416, Zachry, .348, designated hitter Ricky Nixon, Texas, .392, and outfielders McReynolds, Mike Zatopek, Texas, .377, and Kohler, .374.

Astronaut family

HOUSTON (AP)— It took Dr. William Fisher two years to do it, but now he has joined his wife, Dr. Anna Fisher, as an astronaut.

Anna was selected for the space program two years ago. William Fisher was chosen as an astronaut candidate Thursday.

Both Anna, 30, and William, 34, are physicians, sharing the speciality of emergency medicine.

Fisher said he and his wife both applied two years ago, but she made it and he didn't. He said he wasn't upset, but began to better prepare himself for the next opportunity, such as earning a master's degree in biomedical engineering, and earning his pilot license.

Anna said she hoped to help her husband during his one year of training by guiding him in setting priorities.

"And one of the neat things about Bill being selected is that we will have more time together," she said.

Piglet makes unusual pet for Sharla and the Salisbury family

Isn't a precious sight to see a child outdoors romping with "Spot" or "Fido"? Or to see a youngster asleep softly cuddled with "Kitty"? These are sights one love to see and do spot quite frequently. However, if you were to go by 2101 N. Lea, you might spy something a little different. You could possibly see two-year-old Sharla Salisbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Salisbury, riding her tricycle or playfully frolicking with "Oinky" — her pet pig.

According to Mrs. Salisbury, the female piglet, only a few weeks old, was the runt of a litter belonging to Martin Brooks. "She wasn't getting any milk at all so they gave her to us to feed until she is able to eat solid food. Then she will go back with the rest of her litter." The small pink creature, who has only been "domesticated" for a week now, follows the family members wherever they go, plays with the children and even rides the youngest child's tricycle.

Turn it on with GAS OUTDOOR COOKING

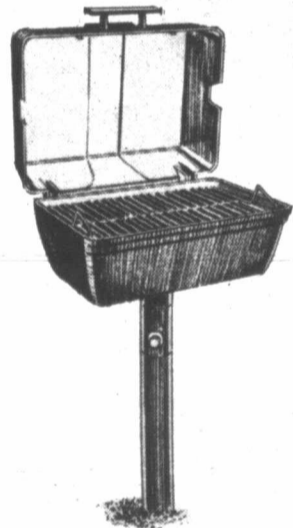

Sizzle a steak. Grill a burger. Bake a potato. Nothing turns on summer fun like outdoor cooking. And no outdoor cooker can compare to a gas grill. You can cook full family meals, everything your indoor range or oven can cook, and all with that great outdoor flavor.

Just look at the advantages of a gas grill:

- solid, sturdy construction for many summers of cooking enjoyment
- no charcoal, no lighter fluid and no wait
- gas grills reach cooking temperatures fast
- controlled heat for perfect cooking everytime
- new features for more efficient energy use
- keeps your house cooler because the heat is outdoors
- and, if you buy before August 1, 1980, you'll save 20% off the purchase price.

Good fun, great taste and savings. Turn it on with a gas grill on the patio.

Hurricanes are coming, oceanic officials warn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hurricanes are coming! And if you're not careful, they'll kill you.

"I appeal to all Americans who live or visit in vulnerable areas to take this matter seriously," Richard A. Frank, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Thursday.

The hurricane season begins Sunday and Frank pointed out the potential for disaster is enormous. He said there were no major hurricanes during the 1970s and as a result millions of Americans who have moved into fast-growing areas on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts have never experienced a really bad storm of this type.

That leads to apathy, Frank warned, so that when a serious hurricane does come people may not be prepared or may be unwilling to evacuate if necessary.

Historically, the United States has experienced an average of two serious hurricanes every three years. Although there is loss of life and property damage almost every year because of hurricanes, there has not been a major storm since 1969.

However, the normal pattern can be expected to resume at any time, Frank warned. "The lack of major hurricanes was fortunate for the 1970s, but it will not be fortunate for the 1980s, when the hurricanes come and we are not prepared," he said.

Most endangered are heavily developed coastal areas, many of which have limited access, which would cause problems if an evacuation were needed.

Thanks to improved methods of prediction in recent years, forecasters can now give about 12 hours warning of a hurricane and as a result death tolls have been declining.

But at the same time property damage from the storms has been growing, largely because of increased development in vulnerable areas. He projected losses of $15 billion or more in the 1980s if it is merely a normal decade for these storms. "If the storms are frequent and severe, that figure could go higher," he said.

The storm surge, the wall of water pushed up ahead of a hurricane, can tower up to 25 feet high when it comes ashore and winds may be 150 miles per hour or more, Frank said.

He pointed out that more than 60 million Americans now live in hazardous coastal areas, a total nearly equal to the population of the whole country in 1900, the year of the nation's worst hurricane disaster. That year, a hurricane roared out of the Gulf of Mexico and swept over Galveston, Texas, taking 6,000 lives.

Prison convict writes comedy, jokes

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Anderson is a convict who likes to write comedy. He says there's nothing funny about prison, but he can always get a laugh by remembering the day he became a criminal.

Determined to collect on a debt, Anderson borrowed a gun he didn't know how to use and went to a Champaign restaurant where the debtor worked. While there, he decided to help himself to the till. It soon became evident he was no John Dillinger.

"I tried to rip the phone off the wall but I couldn't," he said in a telephone interview. "I told everybody to lie down but nobody would."

"When I left, the gun went off and knocked out the power across the street. And then the guy who was driving the getaway car out front drove off without me."

That was four years ago, and Anderson has yet to do his first prison joke.

But there is plenty of funny fodder around for the writer with time to think it up. Anderson, whose calls the Sheridan Correctional Center home, has had the time.

For sometimes 10 hours a day, he sits at a typewriter pounding out one-liners, gags and television scripts. In less than a year he's sold jokes to comedian Joan Rivers and begun work on a screenplay.

Anderson, a high school dropout who said he was the worst English student at Danville High School, said he didn't have any goals in mind when he started a six-year sentence for armed robbery. Writing comedy was initially an escape, he said in a telephone interview. "It was to alleviate depression ... to liven things up."

At times, being in prison helps sell material, Anderson said. "People will say, 'Hey, this guy's in prison and he's doing something.'" Others, he said, won't have anything to do with him.

One joke he wrote for Ms. Rivers deals with inflation and goes like this: "The prices of food are so high, I went to the supermarket and the cashier asked me if I'm paying with cash, a check or a house mortgage."

Charges against 'Death Angel' dismissed

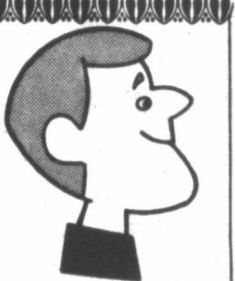

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The murder indictment against nurse Jani Adams in the "Death Angel" case at Sunrise Hospital was dismissed today by a judge who said there was insufficient evidence to suggest that she — or anyone — had committed a crime.

Ms. Adams had been charged with one count of open murder in the death of Vincent Fraser, who died March 4 in an intensive care unit at the hospital.

District Court Judge Michael J. Wendell, in a brief statement, said two things must be established before a person can be charged: the death of the victim and the "criminal agency" of the person who is to be charged.

The judge said the death of Fraser was not disputed, but that "what is disputed is that the criminal agency of another caused that death."

Wendell said one doctor had accurately predicted before Fraser's death that he would die within 12 hours.

Two hundred and eighty-seven wide-eyed seniors reached the peak of their school days Thursday night as they walked forward to accept their hard-earned diplomas. Some laughed - and some cried. Parents and family sat tall and proud as they realized their "babies" had finally grown up.

Following the time of pride comes the time of celebration. Pictured on this page is the view of graduation ... through the eyes of a graduating senior.

Upper right - WOW, THIS SURE CREATES SOME FUNKY LOOKING DIGITS! - Seniors Brad Mathis, Casey Carter, Ken Crossman and Betty Laflin experiment with 3-D glasses while playing bingo at the Senior All-Night Party, sponsored by parents of the graduates.

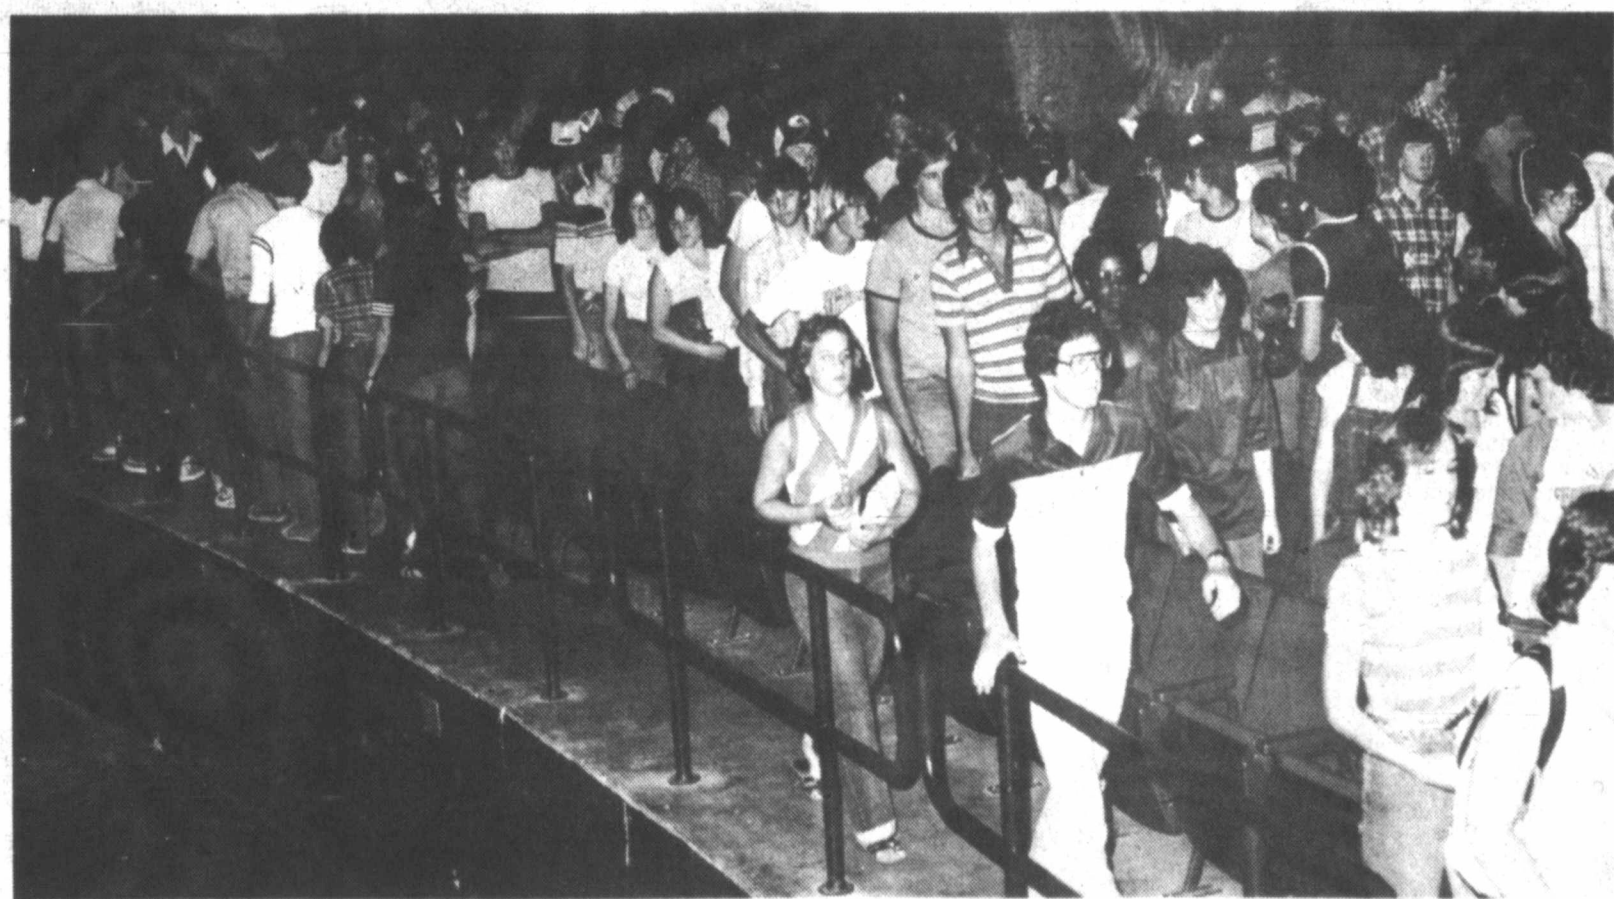

Right - YOU FINALLY MADE IT, KIDDO... - Kim Gattis tearfully embraces a friend following the commencement exercises in the field house.

Middle right - REHEARSALS, REHEARSALS, AND MORE REHEARSALS! - Seniors rehearse the recessional for the Vespers service, held at M. K. Brown Auditorium Wednesday evening.

Lower right - BOY, WHAT A DAY! - Exhaustion strikes Judy Rogers following the presentation of diplomas as she collapses on the hood of a parked car.

Lower left - I WONDER IF MOM IS UP THERE? - Lori Rosenbach gazes into space before her name is called for the diploma presentation.

Middle left - IS THIS A CELEBRATION?! - Theresa Baird seems to be collecting her thoughts as she eats cotton candy at the All-Night Party.

Day, Viscount to appear as PCB guest artists

The Pampa Civic Ballet, with guest artists Angela Day and William Martin-Viscount, will be featured during the Beaux Arts Dance Studio's annual review, slated Monday at 7:30 p.m. in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The two will perform Vivaldi's "Guitar Concerto," choreographed by Viscount, director and founder of the Southwest Ballet Center in Fort Worth. They will also perform the original choreography of "Peasant Pas de Deux" from "Giselle," with music by Adam.

Miss Day began her studies in Pampa at the age of 4 with Jeanne Willingham, artistic director of the Pampa Civic Ballet and director of the Beaux Arts Dance Studio. Miss Day studied 14 years with Mrs. Willingham and received scholarships through the Ford Foundation, Skidmore College in New York, Viscount Workshop in Fort Worth, The School of American Ballet in New York, and Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

A charter member of the Pampa Civic Ballet, she was awarded a scholarship in 1977 by the Pampa Fine Arts Association. She danced in the musical drama "TEXAS" for two seasons.

Miss Day, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph

Day, 1115 Mary Ellen, is a senior at the University of Oklahoma, where in December she will receive a bachelor of fine arts degree in ballet performance. She is a member of the Oklahoma University Ballet Company and the University Ballet Touring Program. She has taught in Pampa and in Duncan, Okla., and hopes to dance and choreograph professionally.

William Martin-Viscount, who will dance with Miss Day, stepped in as guest artist at the last minute, according to Mrs. Willingham. The scheduled artist, Randy Molina, recently signed with the Zurich Ballet in Switzerland and leaves this week for Europe.

Viscount, who performs throughout the United States and abroad, is a native of Winnipeg. He also studied at the Royal Ballet in London and at the Royal Danish Ballet in Denmark.

Members of the Pampa Civic Ballet who will perform with the guest artists are Delinda Bigham, Kim Chittenden, Anita Day, Melissa Harris, Tammy Johnson, Jami Kirkwood, Cindy Kohler, Debi Mack, Georgina Milum, Anna Riehart and Leah Sikes.

The Pampa Civic Ballet, a non-profit corporation, is directed by Mrs. Willingham, who holds company auditions each September.

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Dr. Wallace: About six months ago a lady who lives near me wanted to get rid of her horse. My mom said I could have the horse if it was free. I talked to the lady and she said the horse was mine. She told me the horse was mean and had many bad habits.

I was really thrilled. We have five acres of land and an old barn so the horse would have a good home.

For the first few months the horse gave me lots of trouble but it didn't take me long to realize that he acted this way because of the treatment he received from his previous owner.

Finally, my horse began to trust me and became so gentle that my little sister could walk right up and pet him.

I discovered my horse was an excellent jumper and I entered him into several shows. In his last two, he won first prize. When the former owner discovered this she wanted my horse back. Of course, I told her no but she insisted that she really never gave me the horse but was only allowing me to keep the horse for a while.

My parents want me to return the horse and they will buy me another one. I don't want another horse, I want to keep mine. I convinced my parents to let me write and hear what you have to say. — Debbie, Elizabethtown, Ky.

Debbie: The horse belongs to you and if I was your father I would do everything possible to see that you keep him.

No other horse can take his place. Giving the horse back to his previous owner would be a grave mistake.

Dr. Wallace: My best girlfriend misses a lot of school. Last week she told me that she would not miss another school day, but this week she missed four days. What can I do? I hardly ever see her. — N.L., Sulphur Springs, Texas

N.L.: Chronic school absences can usually be traced to permissive parents. Unfortunately there is little you can do except to keep setting a good example.

MRS. KEN McINTOSH

Eulaine King weds in garden ceremony

Miss Lois Eulaine King of Fort Worth became the bride of the Rev. Ken McIntosh in a garden ceremony at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Meers, who live north of Pampa.

Officiating was the Rev. Roy King, the bride's father. The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. King of Visalia, Calif. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Chinnubbie McIntosh of Tulsa, Okla.

The bride wore an empire gown of chiffon over taffeta. The V-shaped neckline was overlaid with ruffled layers of chiffon. The neckline and waist were accented with lace appliques.

Attending the bride were Lori Sunden of Fort Worth as maid of honor and Mrs. Lynn McIntosh of Tulsa, Okla. Michelle King of Visalia was junior bridesmaid and Heather Roberts of La Mesa, Calif., was flower girl.

Best man was Charles Goss of Fayetteville, Ark. Robert McIntosh of Tulsa was groomsman.

Mrs. Dan King and Mrs. H.L. Meers assisted at a reception in the Meers' home.

The couple took a wedding trip to Oklahoma. The bride attended the University of Southern Mississippi and Texas Christian University. The bridegroom attended the University of Arkansas and Brite Seminary at TCU. He is campus minister at Bemidji State University in Bemidji, Minn., where the couple will live after July.

MRS. THOMAS CHANEY

Rhonda Hart weds Thomas Lon Chaney

Miss Rhonda Jean Hart of Abilene became the bride of Thomas Lon Chaney of Skellytown in a recent garden ceremony in Abilene. Glen Owens, Church of Christ minister, officiated.

The bride wore a white formal gown featuring a Queen Anne neckline and lace-covered bodice. The cuffed sleeves were of lace, which also adorned deep flounces at the hem of the gown. She wore a veil of illusion trimmed in lace appliques.

Attending the bride were Patricia Hart as matron of honor and Cindy Adams as maid of honor. Both are from Abilene.

Best man was Terry Allen of College Station. Randy Mills of Fritch was groomsman and Michael Hart of Abilene ushered guests.

Music was provided by eight vocalists. Friends and family members assisted at a garden reception.

After a wedding trip to Fort Worth, the couple will live in Abilene.

The bride, a 1973 graduate of Abilene High School, received a degree in recreation from Abilene Christian University. The bridegroom, a 1975 graduate of White Deer High School, attended Frank Phillips College in Borger and received an education degree from West Texas State University.

Phi Epsilon Beta has final meeting, party

Kathy Topper recently hosted the Phi Epsilon Beta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi for its final meeting and end-of-the-year party.

The proposed budget was presented and accepted. The group plans a garage sale in June for a summer ways and means project.

Three-star chapter charms were presented to members. Those with perfect attendance also received charms.

An award for the best program of the year went to Kathy Topper and Jamilou Garren. They presented the final program, "Name That Tune." Treasa Shaw won the award for best dressed to a song title.

Hostess of the year awards went to Cathy Scribner and Karen Lang.

Secret sisters were revealed and new sisters were drawn for next year. The scrapbook committee presented mementos to Kathy Topper, outgoing president, and Alberta Jeffries, advisor.

A farewell honored Cathy Scribner, Jamilou Garren, Donna Sexton and Suzanne Slanton, who progress to the Ritual of Jewels degree.

Kansas City has monumental mayor

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — This midwest city has a new downtown landmark, a statue of former Mayor H. Roe Bartle created by sculptor Felix W. de Weldon.

Bartle served as Kansas City mayor from 1955 to 1963, a period in which the city annexed about 235 square miles of land, built the Broadway Bridge, and became the home of the Kansas City Chiefs football team.

In addition to the bronze and black granite Bartle statue, de Weldon is perhaps best-known for "The Flag Raising on Iwo Jima" monument in Washington. His other sculptures include those of former U.S. presidents such as Harry S. Truman in the Truman Library, in Independence, Mo.

Burrell receives $500 Altrusa award

The Altrusa Club of Pampa, which recommended Sarah Walker Burrell for an award from Altrusa International, recently presented her with the $500 honor.

The Founders Fund Vocational Aid award will be used by Ms. Burrell for a second year of study in interior design at Texas State Technical Institute.

FFVA awards of $50 to $500 are authorized by the Foundation for training to qualify for employment in a vocational field, retraining to move to a better job, the purchase of equipment needed for self-employment, or other assistance to work and earn.

according to Mary McDaniel, president of Altrusa Club of Pampa.

In Altrusa's fiscal year 1977-78, 174 applicants received $53,494 in awards. More than half took practical nursing and registered nursing training. Other areas pursued by applicants included nuclear medical technology, accounting, data processing, cosmetology, police science, machine shop training, electronics and secretarial science.

FFVA is financed by voluntary contributions to the Altrusa International Foundation, says Mrs. McDaniel.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

MRS. DOUGLAS WALLIN

Stovall-Wallin vows said

Miss Linda Lee Stovall and Douglas Wallin exchanged wedding vows Friday evening in the First Baptist Church of Pampa. The Rev. Claude Cone, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Stovall, 1825 Christine. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wallin Jr., 521 Lowry.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over bridal taffeta, featuring a sleeveless empire bodice, an embroidered yoke trimmed with rachele lace, and a chapel-length train edged in matching lace. She wore a veil of white organza gathered on a halo of flowers and seed pearls.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Alfred Sharpton of Pampa. Other attendants were Mrs. Jerry Brazile and Mrs. Hank Jordan, both of Pampa.

Bobby Burns was best man. Clay Rice of Pampa and Donnie Stewart of Odessa were groomsmen. Ushers were Michael Price and Brian South, both of Pampa.

Candlelighters were Robbye Cunningham and Cindy Gage, both of Pampa.

Eloise Lane was organist. Heidi Allen was vocalist.

Assisting at a reception in the church parlor were Lee Ann Shults, Jo Linda Lowery, Kelly Bruner, Mrs. Travis Swindle, Mrs. Michael Vickery and Mrs. A.L. Prigmore. Mrs. Michael Price registered guests.

After a trip to New Mexico, the couple will live in Pampa, where the bride, a 1977 graduate of Pampa High School, is employed at First National Bank. The bridegroom, a 1977 PHS graduate, is employed by Northern Natural Gas Co.

Not too long ago this column asked whether you readers would stick by a mate who was guilty of a punishable crime and was sent to prison. Your replies were about even. Half avowed enough love to forgive, to wait out the jail sentence and to accept the spouse wholly when he or she was released. The other half expressed bitter rejection. Therefore this seems to be a problem that every suffering mate must work out alone.

In the replies there was a letter that presented a conviction crisis of a different kind. Here it is:

DEAR LOUISE: I can't help but offer a response to your column about crime in the family. A trauma. I would like to shed some light on this and give you some food for thought.

The statement you made about being shocked when the arrest was made and when the person was proven guilty — let me insert something here. Have you ever stopped to think that even though a jury reaches a verdict of "guilty" that innocent people do get convicted? Or have you ever heard of jurors who decided to vote "guilty" because the defendant appears to act "cocky", even though the four words they heard throughout the trial from the defendant were "Not guilty. Your Honor"? Have you stopped to think how a defendant's spouse and family feel when an innocent man is convicted and there is no recourse for the family?

You mention trauma. To love a person deeply and to see that innocent person convicted brings about so much heartache and grief. Not only must the family members endure being separated from their loved one, but they have to take in stride the finger-pointers and whispers as they do their daily tasks. Then too, you write the person that has been convicted, daily and assure him that everything is fine, when in reality you are completely torn apart and very bitter about what has happened.

I know that you won't print this article, but I couldn't help but respond to your sentence that said proven guilty. It is a crying shame that things like this happen in our modern world today. F.W.

DEAR F.W.: I agree with you. No innocent person should be convicted. Let's ask other readers how they would handle this trauma.

In such a case, what would you all do? If you truly believed that your mate was wrongly convicted — because you knew he could not have committed the crime, because he convinced you of his innocence or because you considered the evidence to be circumstantial — would you remain true to your marriage vow, "Till death do us part?" I believe you would. I know I would.

I'll await your replies. Meantime let me cite a case from my youth.

A much-loved banker had always been over-kind to the townspeople and area farmers of our community. He helped all who needed assistance. He made unsecured loans, juggled books when requested to, financed risky investments in the hope of raising his lending status, and broke other banking laws.

When the crash of 1929 took his bank under, he was arrested and sent to prison. We all knew he had gambled everybody's money, but we said his only sin was that of being too good to his people. We declared that he was innocent by reason of compassion.

More than half the town signed a petition asking the court to commute his sentence. But he went to jail for the remaining 10 years of his life.

His wife and children never uttered a word in public against him, visited him as often as was permitted and lived in the happy hope that he would be reunited with them, which he would have been if he had lived. Their love was strong enough to survive the separation.

Of course this was easier to endure than the case of F.W. When a court and a community convict a completely innocent person, the trauma of the spouse is close to unbearable. I'm sure. If the couple is middle-aged and has been happily married for many years, the grief must surely be the greatest of all.

But I hope you would never desert an innocent mate. Desertion in addition to unjust conviction could be too much.

HOMEMAKERS NEWS

By Elaine Houston, CEA

LIVING WITH INFLATION — SPENDING PLAN:

Make and use a spending plan to help live with inflation. Living with inflation is expensive since prices increase as buying power of the dollar decreases. This means that you must change your level of living or add additional income and/or other resources to maintain or improve your level of living.

Living with inflation, though not easy, is possible. Start by cutting corners and changing spending patterns. Rethink the budget. It's helpful to know that about 30 percent of the income goes for housing, 25 percent goes for food, and so on.

However, don't include the total expected earnings in the spending plan. Base the plan on 85 percent or even 90 percent, if possible. This will leave some leeway for the unknown which the month ahead may hold. Food costs may take a jump, utility bills go up, gasoline prices increase or taxes may rise.

Make a flexible spending plan, but do use it. To assist in developing a spending plan, a publication entitled "Your Spending Plan" (L-1352) is available from your County Extension Office or call for additional help.

You really can stretch dollars, if you use shopping "sense". This starts with a major step: gather enough information BEFORE you shop, so you can make a wise choice. Before you shop, do three things:

- 1) decide what items you need and want;
- 2) keep up-to-date — know what's available and where you can buy the product;
- 3) make a shopping list — you're less likely to buy items you don't need.

Once you start shopping, look in several stores. Compare prices, quality and services offered by the different stores. By shopping around and comparing prices and features of a product, you'll also avoid some of the high-pressure sales methods. Learn to ask questions. Find out all you need to know before you buy. Be sure to find out what the warranty covers, where you can call for service, and what's the store's exchange and refund policy.

As a buyer, be aware of advertising appeal. Ads are intended to draw your attention to a product or service and make you want to buy it.

Be careful about "bargains" too. A "bargain" is only a real bargain when it meets four criteria:

- 1) when you really need or can use the item;
- 2) when the price is lower than at other nearby stores;
- 3) when the price is lower than usual for the item in that store; and
- 4) when the item is right for your needs in size, color, quality, price and storage space.

USE "SEAM ROLL" TO PRESS SEAMS:

Use a "seam roll" to press seams. Because of its curved surface, it prevents imprints of seams from pressing through to the surface — when you use it in place of the ironing board's flat surface. It is also excellent for pressing seams in hard-to-reach areas, such as sleeves.

Seam rolls are available commercially, or you can make one at home. To make a seam roll at home, follow these instructions:

- Roll one large magazine or several smaller ones together tightly so that there is a roll about two inches in diameter.
- Tie the roll together in several places with heavy thread or several strands of lighter thread. Make sure that the roll is very solid with little or no air space in the center and does not flatten when mashed with fingers.

— Next, wrap several thicknesses of muslin or two thicknesses of wool felt tightly around the roll and hand stitch in place. If using muslin, turn raw edge under to give a finished edge.

— Turn in fabric on ends of roll and hand stitch. Or, use a rolling pin. Cover as above or use without a cover. One side may be flattened to prevent rolling while using.

KEEPING FROZEN FOOD SAFE:

Consumers should be aware of the safety of frozen food from the time they first look into the display case in the store. Be careful to buy frozen foods stored in commercial freezer cabinets only if they are stored under the line marked for safety level. Buy frozen or refrigerated foods last, then take them directly home to the freezer. Home freezer temperature should be kept at 9 degrees Fahrenheit. Labels on many frozen foods tell whether the product can be refrozen. It's not a good idea to refreeze unless the label says this won't harm the food.

When using frozen foods, plan ahead so they can be defrosted in the refrigerator. Thawing foods at room temperature for long periods can permit bacteria to grow, producing illness. Thaw foods in the refrigerator.

CHECK HOME-CANNED FOODS FOR SAFETY:

The art of home canning enjoyed a revival last year as homemakers tried to beat rising food prices. This renewed interest in home canning makes it especially important to be sure the foods are safe to eat. Check your cans to make sure there are no bulges (lids should be concave), no off colors and no off odors. A can with any of these characteristics should be discarded.

All home-canned foods should be cooked at boiling temperatures in an open saucepan for 15 minutes. This insures that if harmful bacteria are present, they will be destroyed and the food will be safe to eat.

FARM FORUM

by Gary Sutherland

During the 1870's, an observer of the farm scene said: "An Illinois farmer can die oftener, come to life and recuperate quicker than any other class of men I ever knew. Give him one good crop, with fair prices and he sits up and gets saucy." This observation could apply to most farmers anywhere in the country. Farmers are a unique group of businessmen. By the very nature of their work, they constantly meet new situations, new problems and find new solutions. A farmer's life is one of trying to meet each challenge before it gets around the corner. By meeting these challenges, farmers know the feeling of accomplishment. They know they have accomplished something worthwhile; worthwhile, not only to the farmer and his family, but also to you and me. Farmers are businessmen who provide much of the "good life" which is so important to you and me.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Shop Pampa

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a very handsome, successful business executive I'll call Mike. Mike hired a secretary about three months ago. (I'll call her Nora.) I saw Nora only a few times at Mike's office. She's middle-aged, slightly overweight and very plain looking. She's a divorcee. Mike said she was very competent.

Yesterday Mike told me that Nora had come to his apartment on the previous Sunday afternoon, unannounced, saying she had something very important to talk to him about. He invited her into his apartment, without the slightest idea what she wanted to discuss. She then said she was very nervous and would Mike please pour her a drink. He said he gave her a drink and had one with her to make her feel more comfortable.

Then Nora told him that from the first moment she saw him she had a schoolgirl crush on him, and would he make love to her just once before he got married?

Abby, can you imagine such a request? Mike said he politely told her that he didn't think that was a very good idea, and she had better leave because he had an engagement.

What do you think of Nora? And what do you think of Mike?

SPEECHLESS IN ALBANY

DEAR SPEECHLESS: I think Nora is pathetically in need of a man. And Mike has a very big mouth.

DEAR ABBY: At age 76, this is my first letter to you. Ten years ago I had surgery for an enlarged prostate. My doctor told me that it would not affect my desire for sex or my ability to perform.

After the surgery, both were affected. I have no problem because neither my wife nor I miss the sex, but my question is, Was the surgeon wrong, or am I the exceptional case? I am sure there are many men and women who are interested in knowing, but if you use this letter, sign me...

WIMPY FROM PA

DEAR WIMPY: Much depends on the extent of your surgery. Perhaps the surgery was more extensive than the surgeon thought it would be. There is also the possibility that your inability to function sexually is due more to psychological than surgical reasons.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine has an oil painting of a naked lady hanging in her den. She claims it is a work of art, but it looks like pornography to me.

This friend entertains many religious and elderly people who avoid going into her den because they are embarrassed by this obscene painting.

Abby, if this woman is so fond of that painting, don't you think she should hang it in her bedroom where it wouldn't embarrass anyone?

RED-FACED IN GREEN BAY, WIS.

DEAR RED-FACED: Your friend has the right to hang whatever pleases her in her home. Pornography — like beauty — often lies in the eye of the beholder.

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets: Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

DR. LAMB

by Laurence E. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 4 feet 11 and I weigh 170 pounds. I went to a doctor for pills or something but he said no pills, just stop eating. I did not eat for a week. Then I broke and ate everything in sight. So far, the office price of $12 and that advice was a waste. I tried other diets and fads and pills but they either make me sick or dizzy. Please send a useful diet for me and people like me. I feel good but I'm much too fat.

DEAR READER — I strongly suspect that you had a communications problem with your doctor. I can't believe that he didn't want you to eat anything at all. I do not recommend starvation for anyone on their own. Anyone who is starving to lose weight should be in a hospital environment or very closely monitored by a skilled medical team used to dealing with starvation as a means of weight control.

My guess is when he said stop eating, he meant the same thing that lots of other people do. He meant for you to cut down. But it will be useful for you to have a diet so I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you stick to a sensible balanced diet like the one I'm sending you and maintain a steady sensible level of physical activity, you can lose weight. Some people have difficulty because they're not very active physically. That means they have to do it all by diet. If you're dealing with a relatively small person such as your height suggests, that's sometimes rather difficult. So don't forget to use exercise as well as diet.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Do you think we get too many vitamins because they're added to our bread and cereal like vitamin D in milk, vitamin C in our drinks and so forth?

DEAR READER — When vitamins and minerals are added to foods, they are food additives. Fortunately, the water soluble vitamins, which include all of the different B vitamins and vitamin C, are not stored in excess amounts in the body. Vitamin C is a good example. There's a limited amount which can be carried in the blood. If you absorb more than that amount, it's quickly eliminated in the urine. That's also why taking excess quantities of the B vitamins and C vitamins often is a useless exercise unless you want to produce vitamin-enriched urine.

Use of freezer determines if it's a money, time saver

Can a food freezer save you money? Or is it primarily a means of saving time and giving more menu variety? It's quite possible that a freezer can help you save money along with valuable time, but much depends on how you use it," says Pauline Church, a home service adviser at a manufacturer of frozen containers and bags.

Factor you have to consider is the cost of owning and operating the freezer itself. This will add to the actual cost of the food stored in it. In times of current inflation rates, the amount may become less significant, especially in the case of food bought at bargain prices.

Another factor that brings up a pitfall for the new freezer owner must be to avoid the temptation to buy too much of a good thing. Ms. Church pointed out, "Your freezer is so loaded with food that you have to pass up buys on other foods, for example, you have a problem."

Some general guidelines for using a freezer effectively, both in economy and convenience, she offers these suggestions:

- Watch for worthwhile buys on foods your family likes and stock up — with small amounts — when you are in good supply.
- Check freezing space in your freezer to be sure you prepare, package and freeze promptly. Freeze no more than three pounds for each cubic foot of total freezer space in a given 24-hour period.
- Freeze only fresh, quality foods. Freezing improves quality, only if done properly.
- Prepare and package foods properly.
- Follow the manufacturer's instructions for maximum efficiency and safety of frozen foods.
- Allow 24 hours before using new packages for deep freezer contents to be easily selected and controlled.
- Rotate freezer inventory by using older packages first. For greatest economy, all foods should be used and replaced within a year's time.

An inventory system is helpful in achieving that goal. Marking each package with recommended maximum storage time is also a good idea.

"Some of the recommended procedures for preparing and packaging foods may seem troublesome, but resist the temptation to take shortcuts," advises Ms. Church. "The whole object is to prevent loss of quality in frozen foods and thus protect your investment. So follow all directions to the letter."

Among the factors that affect food quality are enzymes and air, which cause changes in color, flavor and texture. Another hazard is evaporation of moisture, which results in the condition known as freezer burn.

"That's why proper packaging is always stressed," the home service adviser explained. "Unless containers and wraps are moisture-vapor resistant and specifically designed to withstand the rigors of low-temperature storage and frequent handling, they won't provide adequate protection."

221 BUSHELS

221 BUSHELS!

Well, you've heard of good corn yields but this is the king of them all, Funk G-4507. 221 bushels dry corn per acre average on 380 acres produced by L.V. Woody on the W.L. Price farm in Sherman county. Yes, that's right, 221 bushels dry corn on 380 acres. This G-4507 has made 202 bushel average on 814 acres, too.

G-4507 is the king, but from our new comprehensive breeding program we have developed two super-kings — G-4673 and G-4519. Spread your risk and try all three. G-4573 and G-4519 have outyielded all others in test plots!

IN AGRICULTURE

By JOE VANZANDT
GRAY COUNTY WHEAT DAY:
 Mark June 5 on your calendar as the date for a local wheat field day on the Leon Daugherty farm (Bender Place) located 3 miles east and 1 1/2 miles north of Pampa. We have both a dryland and an irrigated variety demonstration planted containing a total of 14 varieties. Dr. Frank Petr, Area Extension Agronomist will be present Thursday afternoon from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. to discuss varieties. It is a come and go affair to enable farmers to work it in with a busy afternoon schedule. Come by for an informal visit with Dr. Petr on the characteristics of the varieties.

These fields have received some hail damage recently and freeze damage also apparently affected some areas in the demonstrations. This will give you the opportunity to observe what several varieties can do under adverse weather conditions. Also, you can see some TAM 105 for the first time. Everyone is invited to attend.

PASTURE WEED CONTROL:
 Weed control on rangeland and improved pastures is a practice that is becoming more expensive each year. Yet increased grass production should more than pay for the spray expense. On one demonstration last year, grass production more than doubled where weeds were controlled with a spraying of 2, 4-D.

Also, the presence of Goldaster weeds on many pastures is becoming more of a problem each year. These are perennial weeds found on many sandy land pastures that grow in small clumps and they have a yellow flower about mid-June. These weeds suppress grass growth and are literally taking over many pastures that may even be understocked with cattle. To date our demonstration work locally has been given good results by using 3/4 pound of 2, 4-D low volatile ester and 1 gallon of diesel in an oil-water emulsion or Banvel Weedmaster in an oil-water emulsion. Apparently it is very important to add diesel to the chemical. Anyone with questions about these control materials should give me a call. Also, the spray should be applied when the weeds are in the bud stage of development. Where Goldaster weeds are present, a good spray job should give grass production a tremendous response.

ELM LEAF BEETLE CONTROL:
 Elms, particularly Siberian elms, can be severely damaged by the elm leaf beetle unless control measures are taken. Most of the elm trees in Gray County are Siberian Elm, but are mistakenly labeled Chinese Elms.

The foliage of elm trees around homes are often heavily damaged by midsummer. Elm leaf beetle eggs are now present on the leaves of the elm trees. The eggs are now present on the leaves of the elm trees. The eggs are deposited in groups of five to twenty-five and they hatch within a few days after being deposited. The small black hairy larvae (worms) then begin to skeletonize the tree's leaves.

After two to three weeks of feeding the larvae migrate to the trunk and completes the pupal stage which requires from seven to fourteen days, to change from larvae to adults. Several generations of elm leaf beetles are produced each year in the High Plains.

To protect elm trees, apply to the soil 15 percent granular disulfoton in late May or early June when the eggs are hatching. Spread granules uniformly from trunk to dripline on all sides of the tree. Work into the soil and water thoroughly. Use 2.5 ounces per inch of trunk diameter. One application should protect trees all summer. When using any pesticide, always follow directions.

CATTLE MANAGEMENT:
 Many times cattlemen forget or put off small things that can cost them a lot of money in the long run.

Blackleg can cause deaths to calves and yearlings when they thought they were protected through vaccination. When young calves, less than 3 months of age, are vaccinated their immunity will probably not last. Therefore, calves need to be re-vaccinated when 4 to 6 months of age. A lot of people use a 3-way vaccine (CCSN) to protect their calves and yearlings grazing grass wheat, alfalfa and other improved pastures. You may want to visit with your veterinarian on your vaccination program to fit your situation. Vaccines are cheap insurance and preventing one death will pay for a lot of vaccine with today's cattle prices.

Implant growth stimulants are another way to increase net cattle profits. Research has shown that implants improve daily gain 8 to 12 percent in stock and feedlot cattle.

It is also time for cattle grub control, another proven money-making management practice.

4-H CORNER

By CARL GIBSON and DEANA FINCK

GRAY COUNTY 4-H COUNCIL:

The Gray County 4-H Council met May 21 to elect new officers and discuss the Gray County 4-H program. Clubs represented at the meeting were: Four Clover, Mann, Top 'O Texas, Lefors, Grandview, and Baker.

Officers for 1980-81 include: Chairman -- Teresa Woods; First Vice-Chairman -- Deb Crockett; Second Vice-Chairman -- Amy Brainerd; and Secretary-Treasurer -- Penny Miller.

Teresa and Deb will represent Gray County as members of the District 14-H County Council.

TEXAS 4-H FOUNDATION STATE CITATION AWARD:

Clyde Carruth of Pampa has been selected to receive the Texas 4-H Foundation's State 4-H Citation Award for his outstanding service and contribution to 4-H youth in Gray County. Clyde will attend the State 4-H Roundup in College Station and receive his award during the 4-H Roundup opening assembly on Tuesday, June 23 before the entire roundup delegation of 4-H members, adult leaders and extension agents.

JUNE IS 4-H ROUNDUP TIME:

June is "Roundup" time in Texas -- 4-H Roundup, that is. The 34th Annual Texas 4-H Roundup will be held at Texas A&M University June 3-4. More than 2,000 4-H members, volunteer leaders and coaches will invade the College Station for 40 action-packed hours of competition and fun.

Six Gray County youth will participate in roundup this year. Clint Miller, Doug Youree and Steve Thurman will participate in the rifle contest. Rhonda and Teresa Woods will compete in a horse demonstration and Sally Youngblood will compete in pork demonstration.

Roundup is the culmination of competitive events which began at the local community level months earlier. Winners at county and district levels will be vying for top honors in the statewide competition.

4-H members 14 to 19 years of age will present method demonstrations and illustrated talks in 25 contest areas ranging from electricity to sheep. They will also use their skills in eight judging and evaluation events from meats identification to soils judging. And 4-H'ers will demonstrate their skills in marksmanship in the rifle contest, in speaking before groups in speaking contest, and in entertainment techniques in the share-the-fun contest.

Other events which are a part of the roundup include the state food show and the state project show. The food show allows members to exhibit food dishes which they have prepared and to answer questions about nutrition as posed by the judges. The project show involves hundreds of members in displays and exhibits depicting their particular project interest, from aerospace to crafts of all sorts.

One of the highlights of roundup will be the awarding of Texas 4-H Foundation Scholarships. This year, 71 4-H members will receive college scholarships worth $30,000 or an average of $4,789 per recipient. These scholarships are made possible by friends of 4-H from business, industry and organizational representatives of the private sector.

Family Land Heritage program qualifiers sought by Ag Dept.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is looking for Plains farmers and ranchers that are descendants of the earliest area settlers.

The property of these early settlers may qualify in the Family Land Heritage Program.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan B. Brown acknowledged that it will be some years before there are many applicants from the Plains and West Texas areas because they were settled late.

"We want people to be aware of the program in case there are some whose families have been farming or ranching for a century," Brown said.

The registration period for the 1980 program opened this month and will extend through August 15.

The Department is entering its seventh year in sponsoring the program to honor those who have maintained continuous agricultural production on the same land for 100 years or more.

So far there have been 1,294 families who have qualified. The county farthest west in the program is Howard, Brown said. The Roberts Ranch in Big Springs qualified in 1977.

Those who qualify are honored in state ceremonies and receive a certificate and a copy of the Family Land Heritage Registry, in which are printed old photographs of the family and homes as well as a brief history of the land.

"We have had excellent cooperation from county historical commission chairpersons and from county judges who have helped to locate people in their areas who might qualify," Brown said.

Basic requirements include the following: Continuous agricultural production on the same land for 100 years, ownership of the land remaining in the family, complete operation or supervision of the farm or ranch production by family members, and a size of at least 10 acres with a minimum of $250 income from farm or ranch products.

If all of the land has ever been rented out, the property is ineligible. Timber and recreational leases do not qualify. The Texas Department of Agriculture is the final judge of eligibility.

Persons who meet the basic qualifications and wish to enter the program can obtain an application from the county judge, county historical commission chairperson, the nearest Texas Department of Agriculture district office or they may write the Department, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

Of interest to farmers

The U.S. has announced its intention to fulfill its part of the five-year grain agreement with Soviet Russia despite the embargo.

The fifth year of the agreement begins on October 1, 1980. The Soviet Union is expected to buy 3 million metric tons each of U.S. corn and wheat, and may buy an additional 2 million tons of either grain.

The U.S. is permitting grain exports to the Soviet Union of 8 million tons during the current year, which is the fourth year of the agreement.

The USDA announced on May 2, that old reserve agreement wheat may no longer be removed from the grain reserve without penalty since the national average mid-month price for April is $3.40 per bushel, 10 below the $3.50 reserve release level.

The parity ratio based on 1910-1914 figures, is reported on April 15, at 60 percent.

This figure is designed to measure the relationship between what agricultural producers purchase and what they sell. The April 15, 1980 figure at 60 percent, is three percentage points below what it was in March 1980, and 13 percent points below what it was on April 15, 1979.

Adjusted parity ratio, which includes government payments to agriculture producers, was 61 on April 15, 1980, three points below the April 15, 1979 figure.

The ratio of the index of prices received by farmers to the index of prices paid including interest, taxes and farm wages was reported a 81 in April 1980, compared to 85 in March 1980 and 99 in April 1979.

Farm land value in Texas, on the same basis and during the same period, advanced 16 percent.

Jenner calls it a good first try

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "It's no Oscar-winning performance," admits Bruce Jenner of his movie debut in "Can't Stop The Music," "but for a first try, I think it was pretty good."

Critics may differ, but you get the impression that negative reviews won't matter to Bruce Jenner. The self-assessment is what counts. That was true during his grueling four-year training for the 1976 Olympic Games. The same kind of control has gone into his post-Olympics career. He has maintained the media exposure and the monetary rewards that eluded another gold medalist, Mark Spitz.

"Can't Stop The Music" is no mere walk-on for Jenner. He plays the role of a tax lawyer who becomes enmeshed with Valerie Perrine, romantically as well as financially, in her scheme to promote a new singing group, the Village People. The film was produced for E.M.I. Films by Allan Carr and directed by Nancy Walker.

It has been almost four years since Jenner won the decaathlon at the Montreal games. Since then he has been visible as sports commentator, first for ABC and now NBC; as TV pitchman for a breakfast cereal, camera and sports clothes; as highly paid speaker at conventions; as author of an autobiography "Decathlon Challenge: Bruce Jenner's Story"; as a sponsor of the Special Olympics and other causes.

Acting also has been one of his goals. Why did it take so long? "Because I wanted to find the right role," said Jenner, who recently turned 30. "I had a few offers for cameo spots as an athlete, but I didn't want that."

Two years ago he met Allen Carr at a party. Later they had a conference and the producer said, "I'd like to do something with you." Months went by, and Jenner concluded it was so much Hollywood talk. Then one day, Carr invited him to a meeting with Jacques Morali.

Morali is the fellow who dreamed up the notion of taking six young men from New York's Greenwich Village scene and transforming them into a singing group. The result: millions of copies sold with such titles as "Macho Man," "Y.M.C.A." and "Live and Sleazy."

More than nudity dictates film rating

By Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: In the new movie, "Little Darlings," the rating is R. Why? There isn't any really bad profanity or nudity. JACK CARLSON, Portage, Mich.

Movies can be given R ratings — as in the case of "Little Darlings" — because of the overall theme of the film. This film deals with a couple of teen-age girls (Tatum O'Neal and Kristy McNichol) having a contest at summer camp to see which one can lose her virginity first. That's hardly proper subject matter for little kids, is it?

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me where we could write to see why all of the TV shows have to have such loud music. We can't hear what the actors and actresses are saying. Why do they need music way out in the desert or in the mountains? REBA M. GUSTAFSON, Battle Ground, Wash.

In the first place, I think you exaggerate somewhat — the music is never so loud over at my house so I can't hear what the actors are saying. (Maybe, on second thought, it should be.) Actually, music is intended to create a mood, and moods can be just as necessary in desert or mountain scenes as anywhere else. If you have to write to get it off your chest, write to the heads of the three networks.

DEAR DICK: Could you settle an argument for me? Did Chad Everett ever play the part of Dr. Welby's assistant? I think it was always played by James Brolin. Which doctor did Chad Everett play on TV? TERRY DORR, Joplin, Mo.

You're right. Brolin was the only assistant Robert Young, who played Marcus Welby, ever had. Everett was an entirely different doctor, his name, on "Medical Center," was Dr. Joe Gannon.

DEAR DICK: I read a book some years ago called "The Fountainhead," by Ana Rand. I have heard of a movie with this same title and wondered if they were one and the same. DOUG FARLEY, Dixon, Ill.

The 1949 film, "The Fountainhead," which starred Gary Cooper and Patricia Neal, was indeed based on the book, which was written by Ayn — not Ana — Rand. It is often seen on late night TV and, if you want to see it, ask your local station to program it.

DEAR DICK: Lately, Jamie Farr (Cpl. Klinger) on "M.A.S.H.," has been wearing a blue baseball cap with a red bill and a white letter T. This looks to me like the cap the Texas Rangers wear. But the Rangers weren't formed until the early '70s, at least 15 years after the Korean conflict. Has the "M.A.S.H." costume designer forgotten the setting, or am I mistaken? CARL T. CLICK, Vancouver, Wash.

You must be an ex-Texan. They think Texas is the only place in the world that starts with a T. Actually, Farr (who comes from Toledo) is wearing a cap that used to be worn by the old Toledo Mud Hens of the American Association.

DEAR DICK: My teacher and I are having a discussion and disagree upon the fact that Mikey, on the Life cereal commercials, died. We'd like you to clarify it for us. M.B. TUSING, Leesburg, Ind.

No, that was just a rumor. He's still alive and eats cereal every day.

DEAR DICK: Someone wrote in asking about whether Frank Albertson was in "The Enemy Below," and you said no. I must tell you you were mistaken. Indeed that marvelous actor, bon vivant and great fellow, Frank Albertson, was in the picture, with myself and Al Hedison (later David Hedison) and others. I played the executive officer on the ship, and it was in Honolulu, my first location. Enjoy your column. ALAN DEXTER, Port Hueneme, Calif.

Thanks, Alan. I agree with you about Albertson's talent and class — but he needed a press agent. His bio does not list him in "The Enemy Below," and the movie's cast list omits him, too.

Standards are most important

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — "Apocalypse Now," which was virtually ignored in the Academy Awards in April but will probably be remembered long after "Kramer vs. Kramer" has been forgotten, contributed a gallery of wonderful acting portrayals.

In the justifiable choruses of praise for the work of Martin Sheen and Frederick Forrest and (to a lesser extent) Marlon Brando, the work of Albert Hall was often overlooked. Hall is the black actor who played Chief, the Navy man who commands the river boat taking Sheen upstream to search out and destroy Brando.

Hall is a serious man, not given to flamboyance or publicity, and, hence, there have been few drums beating on his behalf. That doesn't in any way detract from his performance, which, for the first half of the film, holds it all together.

Since he finished "Apocalypse Now," Hall has only done two television films. His co-stars have gone on to bigger, brighter and more remunerative work, but not him. That is his own choice.

He admits that he is a very choosy actor. He would rather not work than do work he doesn't believe in or doesn't feel is right for him.

"Sometimes," he says, "my wife will work, if I have to go a long time between parts. She feels the way I do about my career — that it isn't good for me to do something I don't feel right about."

The two TV movies he has done include one that has already aired and one probably coming next fall. In CBS' "Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones," Albert Hall played Otis Jefferson, one of the first of Jones' converts.

He has also completed something called "Sophisticated Gents," a four-hour NBC movie in which he plays a cop on the take. He co-stars in that production with some big names among black actors: Paul Winfield, Raymond St. Jacques, Bernie Casey and Rosie Greer.

Hall comes originally from Alabama. He joined the Navy as a teen-ager, and that was his springboard to college. At San Diego City College, he discovered acting. He went on to study acting at California Western University, and he added a master's degree from Columbia.

TV show costumes donated to theater group collection

By Dick Kleiner

NEW YORK (AP) — One dog (white), four mice (gray), two plush bunnies with pinafores, one fat-cat suit, baseball, football, track and hockey uniforms, apparel for Cinderella and Sleeping Beauty, and Rita Moreno's ball gown and jogging suit.

These outfits and many more are now available to theater troupes across the country, thanks to the donation of five years' worth of costumes from the Children's Television Workshop production, "The Electric Company," to the Costume Collection of the Theater Development Fund, a private, non-profit organization devoted to helping the American theater.

"The Electric Company," an innovative series devised to help meet problems of reading failure among school children, debuted in 1970. It has been out of production since 1976 but, according to producer Samuel Y. Gibbon, it has remained the second most popular PBS daytime program ever during its current three-year rerun cycle.

The costumes from the show will be familiar to millions of elementary school students since "The Electric Company" also remains the most frequently used educational television program in schools, he says.

The costumes for the show were particularly imaginative since much of its teaching was done through humorous skits, Gibbon said. "That's why we felt that much of the clothing would be valuable for theatrical groups."

The cache of costumes, 45 cartons' worth, does fill many gaps for the Costume Collection, says its administrator, Whitney Blausen, including materials for a brand new "athletic department."

The new array of clothing also provides a fresh supply of uniforms — for doctors, nurses, a zookeeper, a delivery man, even a safari suit, Ms. Blausen notes. "The fanciful characters range from elves and genies to Count Dracula. There's also a Spider Man suit, complete with web, and all sorts of wonderful animal outfits."

Two costumes she predicts heavy demand for are a shaggy white dog ("perfect for Nana in Peter Pan") and the winsome mouse suit worn by Rita Moreno, one of the stars on "The Electric Company."

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your home is a fun place to be today because you make everyone who enters feel not only welcome but an interesting part of your life. They may not want to leave.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Direct your mental abilities today toward projects involving creative or original thoughts. The ideas you come up with will be progressive and logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Making the best and most out of what you have can prove exciting today. Instead of feeling short-changed, you'll be able to see several new ways to grow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You have a way of managing things today that is best for all concerned. Others will appreciate your exercising this talent on their behalf.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Stow your past today and you may be able to glimpse insights not visualized by others. What you grasp could be extremely useful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could experience a need today to mingle with many different types, because of a strong desire to broaden the base from which you get ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Dare to be original when pursuing your goals today and you'll have better luck at achieving them. If one thing doesn't work, try another.

Student admits crime spree

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 16-year-old high school student who said he "got in with the wrong kind of people" has admitted to shooting at a passing car and five incidents of burglary. Juvenile Court Judge Scott Moore sent the teen-ager, who had no previous criminal record, to a reformatory until he is 18.

"I guess I got in with wrong kind of people," the youth told Moore Thursday during a court appearance.

The student admitted participating in the burglary of two businesses and three homes. Police said one of the youths put a booby-trapped bomb at Paschal High School in hopes of triggering a racial incident at the school.

Prosecutors said the teen-ager's confession allowed him to escape prosecution in adult courts, and added he has become the state's key witness against another 16-year-old student who faces adult certification proceedings next month.

The two boys, along with a girl, operated a burglary ring, police said. When police broke it up, they found a .45-caliber pistol, bogus ID cards, a .45 caliber semi-automatic rifle, and $30,000 worth of silverware.

The trio also tried to extort $100,000 from Texas Christian University professor after his home was burglarized, police said. However, the professor went to police.

Moore asked the youth who confessed how he could have led a trouble-free life before February, when the crime spree began, and told him it was up to him to "straighten your life out."

"It's clearly up to you what path you take in the future," the judge said.

NM judge fails to allow ABC into riot-torn prison

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga says he is not convinced the news media has a constitutional right of access to the riot-scarred New Mexico State Penitentiary.

Burciaga made the comment Thursday at the end of a hearing on a suit filed by ABC-TV, which wants to film a documentary at the prison where a riot Feb. 2-3 left 33 inmates dead and millions of dollars in damage.

"I'm not satisfied the press has a constitutional right to access," Burciaga said.

However, he reserved ruling on a state motion to dismiss the ABC complaint. He scheduled an evidentiary hearing for next Thursday.

The network wants preliminary and permanent orders that would bar the state from preventing ABC-TV crews from filming inside the prison and conducting interviews with inmates.

Kenneth Harrigan, an attorney for the state, said the network does not have automatic right to access.

"The constitutional right the plaintiff is claiming to have been violated does not, as a matter of law, exist," he said. "The penitentiary is not a public place."

Prison operations and security would be affected by the presence of ABC, Harrigan said.

"You have to realize how volatile the situation is," he said.

Rekindling the emotions of the riot by allowing the documentary filming could lead to another riot, Harrigan said.

However, J.E. Gallegos, one of the Santa Fe attorneys representing ABC-TV, said prisons and jails are public institutions, tax-supported like schools and courts.

"The New Mexico penitentiary has been getting by on the apathy and ignorance of the public," he said. "Because of what happened (during the riot) there is no more apathy, so the (state's) remedy is to maintain the ignorance."

An absolute prohibition of access is a violation of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, Gallegos said.

"There's an erroneous assumption that the public's rights are nil," he said. A lawsuit by citizens to inspect the prison and talk with inmates could not be stopped, Gallegos said.

"All the press is asking is that same right," he said.

Harrigan said it is untrue that the state is trying to deny public access. And he said letters to and from inmates are permitted as well as visits from relatives and friends.

It is the state attorney general, who is investigating the riot, and not ABC that is the guardian of the public's interest, he said.

THE TEXAS TWISTER, one of nature's most destructive forces — a killer, a destroyer. It can strike anywhere and at any time. A plan to avoid injury for the city's school children has been planned and is being taught to the students in a special program given by Civil Defense Coordinator Steve Vaughn.

DON'T PANIC is one of the safety tips students learn in the tornado safety program. Shown above is a Pampa Middle School class watching a film on tornadoes. Below is Steve Vaughn, city civil defense coordinator, preparing the film for viewing. The program provides information on the school emergency plan and safety tips in the event of a tornado.

Children prepared for tornado season

A tornado — that winding, roaring twister — can happen any place, at any time. However, the conditions which spawn the destructive, circling winds are most likely to occur in the midwest, south and central states during the spring and summer months of the year. One can almost "feel" tornado weather. It's usually a hot day — humid with a southerly wind. As the evening approaches, dark, billowing clouds appear in the southwest. The greenish-black clouds sometimes appear to be bulging down instead of up, an hour or two before the tornado strikes. Torrents of rain pour down, often accompanied by large hailstones. Suddenly, a white, swirling funnel cloud dips down from boiling clouds. This is a whirling column of water vapor that hangs down from the thunderhead. When it touches ground, then it's officially a tornado. Most tornadoes spin counter-clockwise, moving forward at a speed of 25 to 35 miles per hour. The wind speed of the twister, itself, may reach as high as 500 miles per hour. Latest research indicates the right side of the tornado has a higher windspeed than the left side, with the difference as much as 100 miles per hour. The wind speed — both inside and outside the tornado — is the most destructive part of the storm, scientists believe. Research has proven the worst effect on a building comes from the winds. The higher up in the funnel, the stronger the winds. For this reason, rooms on upper floors facing south and west will sustain the most damage and are unsafe for use as shelter. Although not as destructive as the winds, the pressure system of a tornado is also dangerous. As the tornado passes a building, there is a moment when the inside pressure is higher than the outside causing an explosion — the roof flies off and walls are blown out. This phenomenon is the reason cafeterias, auditoriums, gymnasiums and any large open space with a roof are the most dangerous place to take shelter. Most of the injuries received during a tornado are inflicted by flying debris, particularly glass. Any hall or corridor can become a wind tunnel with gravel, dirt, glass and trash hurtling at the speed of the wind. Then, in a few minutes, it is over. The storm passes.

FINDING PROTECTION from flying debris is the primary concern when a tornado is imminent. The PMS students are shown kneeling in the school hallways, heads between their knees as they were instructed. Should a tornado hit the school, the position will help cut down on serious injury from glass, dirt and other dangerous objects which could hurtle down the halls. School children are safest following the school's emergency plan, Vaughn said. He particularly stressed the fact that more people are killed in their vehicles in an attempt to get home or go to the school to get their children when a tornado strikes.

ELUCUBRATE! Jacques Bailly of Denver, Colo., holds the trophy he won in Washington Thursday by correctly spelling the word "elucubrate" at the National Spelling Bee competition. The word means, "to write about scholarly" or "to work or write laboriously." It is the second straight year that the Rocky Mountain state has turned out a winning speller. (AP Laserphoto)

Denver boy wins spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps it's something in the mile-high air of Denver that produces good spellers. Whatever the reason, the Colorado capital has produced the national spelling champion for the second straight year. Jacques Bailly correctly spelled all his 14 words to win $1000 and the 1980 National Spelling Bee, the World Series of Spelling. The 14-year-old took top honors Thursday when he correctly spelled elucubrate, defeating 111 young persons from around the nation in the contest organized by the Scripps-Howard Newspapers and sponsored by more than 100 newspapers. Last year, Jacques finished second in the regional competition to Katie Kerwin, who went on to win the national title. The money will go for records and fishing equipment, said Jacques. After two days and 10 rounds of spelling, five contestants remained. That field was quickly whittled down to Jacques and 12-year-old Paige Pipkin, a seventh-grader from El Paso, Texas.

'Real People' a development in TV history.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's hard to imagine "Real People" as a seminal development in the history of television — but that's the way it looks. "Real People" has turned into a genuine hit for NBC and has spawned a gaggle of imitators. ABC followed with "That's Incredible," which became a hit even faster than the original. The creators of "Real People" came up with "Speak Up America," and ABC has inked into next fall's schedule a clone called "Those Incredible Animals." More imitations are in various stages of development, and CBS reportedly is readying its own version. As nearly everyone knows by now, these programs have become showcases for real but unusual people. Such as: the guy who serenades turkeys, the official witch of Salem, Mass., a woman who lives out her food fantasies, a team of geriatric cheerleaders, and a man who walks backwards and another who rides his bicycle looking where he's been. Not actors, not paid performers, not celebrities, but real folks like the people next door. Well, almost. Some critics say they're really sideshows that offer us voyeurism and exhibitionism and exploit a parade of — to quote Newsweek — "weirdos, loonies, cranks, and screwballs." "I think there's a hunger for something new and different," says George Schlatter, the creative force behind "Real People" and "Speak Up America." "I think we've been bombarded with so many of the same type of shows, that have gone through the same process of testing, and all come out the same. I think that in 'Real People' there is a sense of genuine affection for the people and they appreciate the fact that these people are just like they are." Schlatter, who was also largely responsible for "Laugh-In," the trend-setting show of the 1960s, has little patience for the critics: "I think anybody who can look at 'Real People' and say it's exploitive isn't looking at the front of his set." "That's Incredible" varies from "Real People" in that it also incorporates a sort of Ripley's "Believe It Or Not." It has things like a yogi who twists himself into a tiny box, an escape artist who performs his amazing feats while skydiving, a woman who raises tarantulas, and a man hit seven times by lightning. The show's supervising producer, Woody Fraser, whose career up to now has been with talk shows, sees actuality television as an inevitable outgrowth of the talk show. He calls it merely the next "evolutionary step." "It's no secret that the talent pool for talk shows is shrinking," says Fraser, "while the number of talk shows is growing. There isn't enough talent coming up. There are just no more Jack Bennys and Totie Fields."
