SEN. BROOKHART THREATENS TO FORCE EXTRA SESSION FIVE OIL COMPANIES PROTEST OKLA. PRORATION IN COURT

The Pampa is ignorant, but he is not without good company in regard to wondering how much longer it will be necessary to have our marines shot down in Nicaragua. Trying to keep our favorites in office in South and Central America has proved a very expensive and at times embarrassing job.

Somebody ought to start a drive to get all the Christmas decorations around the homes torn down by Easter Sunday.

Few attorneys of Texas envy Jimmie Allred in his new job. It is a man-sized task, if ever there was one in this state. Veasing is a mild term to use in describing some of the complex suits which are pending.

Many of the problems in this country are liquid. The "distress" oil is one; booze is another.

Face lifting may be a great science, but a man lifting his face to shave his chin is not a picture of anatomical grace, to say the least.

Dave Shanks, Perryton editor of a personal organ, quotes Dr. Charles Mayo as follows:

"You can get along with a wooden head. The physical value of a man is not much. Men as analyzed in our laboratories is worth about 50 cents. Seven bars of soap, lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop, phosphorus enough to cover the heads of a thousand matches, is not so much, you see."

That quotation recalls to the Pampa an occurrence several years ago when the anecdote about a man's worth, repeated by a Teachers college professor and printed in the Canyon college paper, was "picked up" by an international news service and sent around the world. The item is more than 50 years old, but it holds up every year and is repeated as original, often to the discredit of the scientist who uses it and who sees himself erroneously quoted as the author.

Speaking again of Mr. Shanks: He at last has hit the keynote of this discussion of athletics in general. He says: "I have not yet decided just what I will have the world do about athletics, but as soon as I decide I will let you know and the change will be immediately forthcoming. I can't say that I am in love with our present 'system' of athletics, but as I know nothing better for the present I'll keep my big country mouth shut."

We plan to be cooperative this year. We won't print anything on Chicago—unless Chicago keeps on being as naughty as she was on New Year's day. We won't say anything bad about Berger—unless we have to. But remember—we print the news; we don't make it.

The Pampa tried to buy a lugey whip at a hardware store the other day. They didn't have it, but they had the patent dingus which holds the whip to the dash. Pampa is so up-to-date that Old Dobbin hasn't a chance.

It is easy to get back to Pampa from the South plains. Gasoline wars are raging down where the cotton grows and you can buy enough miles-juice to drive home with for four bits. Up here where we make the stuff, however, it is a different proposition.

Today's fable: Once there was a man who read all the annual reviews and newspaper folk dish out with so much effort.

Our New Year's wish, if we had but one, would be for an oil tariff. We are not interested in the welfare of Venezuela, and we fancy the people there are not worrying because our market for crude is glutted.

The Higgins News suggests saying a kind-word. Why not? And a give-a-man-a-job month.

Our almanac says this week-end will be unsettled and partly cloudy. And it probably will.

INJUNCTION IS APPLIED FOR TO PREVENT ENFORCEMENT

PRICE KEPT IN EXCESS

CHAMPLIN TESTIFIES BEFORE COURT IN CURB CASES

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Jan. 2.—Five oil companies attacking proration had their say in federal court here today before a tribunal of three judges.

All evidence for the companies applying for an injunction to prevent the state corporation commission from enforcing its proration orders was presented today. Evidence for the commission will be presented and the case argued tomorrow. Frank B. Burford, attorney appearing for the attorney generals' office in defense of proration, said the defense testimony would be brief.

Price Too High Proration has kept the price of crude oil in excess of its real value considering the available supply. H. H. Champlin, president of the Champlin Oil and Refining company, stated in an affidavit before the court.

Champlin charged the producers who have wells in Oklahoma and also in other fields are using the corporation commission as a shield for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act by restricting interstate trade.

Officials of the other complaining companies—Century Petroleum, Oils Inc., Marco Oil and Refining, and Capitol Oil and Refining—presented affidavits assailing proration on various grounds.

Roy M. Randerson, Century president, and Reuben M. Roddie, Marco head, said proration would mean ruin to their companies if continued. Roddie declared his company would not have been financially able to litigate the case if it had not violated the commissions orders.

These and other company officers testified they had potential outlets for their wells which they could satisfy without waste.

CHILDREN'S SHOES MOST NEEDED FOR CITY'S UNFORTUNATE

Children's shoes are the articles of wearing apparel needed most among the needy who apply at the room in the city hall where the clothing is given out to the needy families under the direction of the Welfare board, Mrs. W. H. Davis said yesterday.

Eight Given Jobs By Bureau Agent

Registrations at the employment bureau had increased to 608 yesterday afternoon. There were 21 persons who registered at the bureau Thursday and Friday. Three men, two boys, and three women were given employment yesterday. The boys secured jobs delivering hand-bills, and the women's jobs were housework. One of the women secured a job that is expected to last two weeks.

GUATEMALA'S THIRD GOVERNMENT—WITHIN A WEEK

Significant figures and scenes in the bloody course of Guatemala's government are shown in these first pictures to reach the United States. The present chief executive, General Manuel Orellano, is seen in the upper picture, right center, with his staff. Miguel T. Alvarado, lower left, new Minister of Government and Justice, and Dr. Carlos Padilla y Padilla, lower right, were leaders in the movement which resulted in a bloody coup d'etat and the establishment of Orellano as the third president of the Central American republic within one week. When President Lazaro Chacon resigned because of illness, he was succeeded by Benito Palma, who was recognized by the U. S. Four days later, however, General Orellano, supported by troops, ousted Palma during fighting in which 57 persons were killed or wounded. One of those slain was General Mauro de Leon, Minister of War, and the center picture shows the crowd that attended his funeral at Guatemala City.

SMALL HEARS OIL CONDITION

DATA PREPARED FOR SENATOR BY MEN AT MEETING

"Pampa is an active, up-and-coming city," Senator Clint C. Small stated at the luncheon given at the Schneider hotel yesterday. "I know of no other city that has developed as rapidly, or has as bright a future," he said. C. W. Warwick, A. C. Johnson, and G. Warwater, were other legislators who were to have been present, but were unable to attend.

The meeting was for the purpose of instructing the senators as to the true conditions of the Panhandle oil fields.

Senator Small is well acquainted with Gray county oil fields a trip that had been planned was eliminated.

Ivy E. Duncan, chairman of the oil committee of the E. C. D., presided at the meeting. P. S. Bailey of Amarillo, highway engineer of this district, and Mr. Gaines, superintendent of maintenance, were special guests at the luncheon. Nearly every member of the board of directors of the E. C. D. was present.

Jack Elliott of Amarillo and J. M. McDonald of Pampa, oil and gas supervisors, presented the facts in regard to the oil situation to Senator Small.

A resolution passed by the Kiwanis club during their meeting in their luncheon at the Schneider, that was held at the same time as the luncheon for Senator Small, was presented to the senator asking that the buffalo on the Goodnight ranch, that are reported as going to be killed, be taken by the state and placed on game preserves.

Senator Small stated that he believed a movement was on foot to introduce a bill in the net session of the state legislature to place a tax on gas, since many of the natural resources of Texas were being taken out of the state without adequate return.

Should such a bill be introduced, Senator Small said that he would favor a fair tax only.

THREE BANDITS LOOT STATION

ATTENDANT IS STRUCK ON HEAD—ROBBERS TAKE CASH

Three unmasked bandits overpowered A. Nix, attendant of the Texas Service Station at 843 W. Foster at 11 o'clock last night and took $10 in money from the station's cash register. The men escaped after they had floored Nix with a blow on the head.

The men drove up in a light touring car and two of them entered the station with guns leveled on Nix. A third man remained in the car until after Nix started to scuffle with the two in the station.

CONGRESS WILL MEET MONDAY TO RESUME ACTIVITIES

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—New threats to force an extra session of congress in the spring were heard at the capital today but senate administration leaders countered with expressions of confidence business could be completed by the March 4 adjournment.

Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, threatened to force an extra session if the house fails to pass the senate's resolution to block railway consolidations. He is opposed to the proposed merger of the eastern railroads into four units.

Administration leaders have believed the pending business could be cleared away by March 4 if there was definite assurance of the senate for consideration of the world court. There was an impression tonight the president would state his position shortly.

Man of "Chi" Had "Brace of Heat," He Says

District Attorney Raymond Allred received instruction in English as it is spoken in Chicago from a prisoner who hailed from the Windy City, according to a story he was telling to the deputies last night.

Recently Allred asked a prisoner where he was from and was told "on the lam from Chi."

"What were you doing down in this part of the country?" "I was tryin' to muscle in on the alcoholic racket an' they caught me with a brace of heats on 'em," the gangster responded.

"Well, you all was in on it, weren't you?" "Say, where do youse guys get dis you-all stuff? I was the only one!"

All of this, being interpreted, meaning that the prisoner was running away from Chicago, had been trying to collect his share from bootlegging operations, and had been carrying two pistols.

"In their own way, these crooks are plenty smart," Allred said. "They have to be, living by their wits, to avoid being caught by the police. They have a good memory for faces and names. And you could listen to their lingo by the hour and never know what in the world they were talking about!"

REVOLUTIONISTS TAKE REIGNS OF PANAMA, ALL IS QUITE

By A. V. McVEAGHY PANAMA CITY, Jan. 2. (AP)—A swift, vigorous revolution today brought the government of the republic of Panama crashing down on the head of President Florencio Harmodio Arosemena. He resigned and appointed Dr. Maximo Arias, one of the leaders of the revolt, to form a new government.

Ten persons were killed in sharp fighting that started near the presidential palace. Among the injured was Hartwell F. Ayers, American newspaper correspondent. Of the dead, eight were police officers and two civilians. Fifteen were wounded.

Tonight the city was outwardly calm, with armed civilians and red-shirted firemen directing traffic and a complete halting of business, there was nothing to remind of the crash of firearms that resounded in the streets early in the day.

Criticized Chief The rebellion was sponsored by the "Accion communal," a patriotic organization which has violently criticized what it termed the "corruption."

Suddenly, without warning, a group of men this morning stormed the headquarters of the national police, who also served as Panama's only standing army. There were a few outbreaks of firing and the station fell into the hands of the rebels.

Simultaneously other attackers swarmed on the palace, where after a brief resistance, the defenders gave way and the rebels swept in. President Arosemena was confined to his quarters with several other government officials, including Arch-baldo Boyd, governor of the province of Panama, and Ricardo Arango, head of the police.

Arias Appointed After a consultation for several hours with the revolutionary leaders, President Arosemena appointed Dr. Harmodio Arias premier of Panama, then resigned as president, leaving Arias at liberty to form a new cabinet.

With the police headquarters and the palace in their hands, civilians associated with the revolutionists patrolled the city under the direction of General Manuel Quintero. Shops remained closed, there was no bus service and automobiles dashed through the city, carrying armed men who were posted as guards on police duty.

T. E. Rose is chairman of the committee, and Marvin Lewis is secretary. Other members are C. S. Barrett, W. J. Brown, W. L. Davis, B. W. Rose, and R. L. Champion.

The report follows, in part for the period from July 1 to December 31, 1930:

At the time the committee was organized, a resolution was passed asking for full cooperation of the church treasurer, board of deacons, and for authority from the church in all matters pertaining to debts and church finances. The request was granted. At once the committee, without reserve, set itself to save the church from the greatest crisis in its history.

At all times the church has given its approval and support in a way that gave heart and encouragement to the labor of these men. Some of the meetings have been long and taxing, lasting an entire afternoon or until 11 o'clock at night. The obligations outstanding previously assumed by the church were a large total. It is true the largest single debt had been underwritten by individuals, but an amount of $20,000 had been signed by members who had withdrawn from the church, still others had moved from the community, or had reversals that made payment impossible. The budget was not bringing in enough money for current expenses.

Nothing was being paid to missions or benevolences. Creditors were pressing hard for payments and satisfactory adjustments of open accounts. Past due taxes and annual interest payments were to be considered. The exact amount was not known at the time the church delegated authority to the committee to work out an amicable adjustment of the building.

ENROLLMENT DATES SET

L. L. Sone, principal of Pampa high school, said that students who expect to enroll in the high school for the second semester, should enroll between January 12 and 16, make out their schedules, so as to be ready for classes on January 19. The first semester ends on January 16.

About New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK
NEW YORK—John Jacob Astor was one of the first New Yorkers to recognize the potential value of flute-playing.

Astor sent a young flutist to buy furs in Montreal. Here the young man would play his flute each evening when the trappers and traders gathered around the camp fire.

The harmonious notes struck the fancy of Indians and each in turn would want to trade some peltries for the instrument. The young man reported this to his employer with the result that Astor sent several dozen barrels of furs to be exchanged for furs; also assigning the young flutist to teach the Indians.

MUSICIANS FOR FUN
 Flute players in New York number several hundred. Most of them are members of the New York Flute Club and attend regular meetings. Once a month they get together and give concerts.

Prominent among the nation's amateur flutists are Col. William Rand, head of the city bar association; Charles G. Dawes, who has composed music for the instrument; William J. Wellman, San Francisco grocer; Davina C. Miller, a Cleveland scientist, and William Tamilton, who invented the voting machine used in New York.

Miller has a fine collection of flutes and Hamilton has retired from business to devote more time to his playing.

But Georges Barrere, a professional, is generally conceded to be the foremost flutist in America. "The reiser of the flute," he is called.

Barrere was born in Bordeaux, France, in 1876 and came here 25 years ago. He received his final papers making him an American citizen last October. His pupils are in many of the country's orchestras.

CORRECT TIME
 An instrument that has made itself seen, if not heard, lately is the electric clock, run and regulated by ordinary lighting current.

Electric clocks are given away here with radio and to new depositors by some banks. The association of the clocks with radios is a close one.

Listeners in have become time conscious, through hearing the time announcements over the air, dealers say.

The regulation of the clocks is interesting. The timepieces are synchronized with the frequency of electric impulses of alternating current from the power house. The current frequency is 60 complete impulses, or 120 polar impulses a second, and is kept constant at this rate.

One man at the power plant has nothing else to do but watch this flow. He sits at a desk, facing an ordinary pendulum clock, which is regulated by the Arlington time signals. On the desk is a red button and a blue one. He watches the pendulum clock and also a master clock that regulates the station frequency of current.

If the master clock is behind the pendulum clock, he presses the blue button and master clock speeds up. If it is too fast, he presses the red button to slow it. Both clocks are always within a fraction of a second of correct time.

Scientists are perfecting arrangements now to perform this task automatically.

J. M. Simpson, representing Clarke and Courts company of Dallas, was a business visitor here Friday.

The first marriage license to be issued in Gray county this year was granted yesterday to Salvador Moreno and Concepcion Martinez, both of Pampa.

J. F. Heifenstine was dismissed from the Pampa hospital Friday. Mrs. R. A. Hicks was admitted to the Pampa hospital Thursday.

W. F. Neely of Plainview was in Pampa yesterday on business.

WILD BEAUTY

by MATEEL HOWE FARNHAM

SYNOPSIS: Fanny Frost is unhappy living in the home of her dissembling, hostile mother-in-law, David, her husband, is too busy to give her the sympathetic understanding she needs. As a result she becomes friendly with Bob Daniels, married to David's rich cousin, Leila. Bob is unhappy with his wife, but loves Fanny. He plans to run away from Leila the night of Halloween. Fanny attends a costume ball with David that night, but a quarrel has left both in a bad humor. Fanny has had a good deal of champagne to fight her depressed feeling. Bob, arriving late at the party, persuades Fanny to run away with him. On the way he telephones the news back to Leila. David learns of it when he arrives home.

Chapter 26
THE LIGHT OF DAY
 Fanny, laughing, urged Bob on as the roadster flew down the straight cement roadway.

For the next hour they roared over bridges, clattered through sleeping hamlets and made corners on two wheels. Only once did they slow down—for gas at Crawfordville. By that time Fanny was dozing and hardly noticed.

At a crossroads abruptly loomed a milk car. Bob swerved, ran into the rough, righted his car barely in time. Fanny, bumped into sudden wakefulness, sat up and shivered apprehensively. The moon had gone down. The stars were beginning to dim. A thin mist shrouded the fields.

Where was she? What was she doing so far from home? She rubbed her eyes sleepily. Suddenly she remembered—she was running away with Bob.

"I think we'd better go back now," she cried, clutching Bob's arm.

"We can't now, it's too late. I telephoned Leila the news from Crawfordville. It'll be all over town by now. We've got to go on."

Fanny stared at him with horrified eyes. Sobered she shrank as far as possible away from him into her corner.

"It's all right, sweetheart. Trust your Bob. You're cold, that's the trouble. I know a place a mile or two ahead. We'll stop there and get warm."

A few minutes later Bob stopped before a small hotel on the main street of a little factory town. The place was dark but Bob seemed to be at home there. He rang the night bell and presently a surly porter, in shirt sleeves, let them in, carried Bob's bag upstairs. Fanny in a panic begged to stay in the car, but Bob soothed and coaxed, urged her not to make a scene, asked her in a hurried tone if she did not trust him, half carried, half prodded her up the stairs.

It was a cheerfully ugly room, bright lights, red and pink and green carpet, pink and green chintz, a bathroom gaily with white paint. The room was warm, but Fanny stood by the door, her cape drawn closely about her, staring pitiously at Bob. Suddenly she turned and made for the door, tumbling with trembling hands at the lock. Bob caught her, slammed the door and locked it, put the key in his pocket.

"Bob, take me back. I have to go back."

"All right, I will. There's no reason for a scene. If you insist I'll take you back as soon as it's daylight."

"But why not now? Why did you lock the door?"

"Because I didn't want you dashing downstairs, out in the street like that, creating a disturbance. You look like a ghost."

"I think—I think I am going to be sick."

He led her to the bathroom, left her mercifully alone. When Fanny came out she was entirely composed, had washed her face and straightened her hair. Bob stood by the window smoking.

"Bob, I want to go home this minute."

"For God's sake, why did you come? Do you think this is any way to treat me—an hour ago you were crying in my arms? What have I done? What's your grievance?"

"You haven't done anything. I don't know why I came. I have to go back."

"Very well, I'll take you. But not until you have had a little rest and some hot coffee. You're hysterical, not yourself. You're in no state to decide what you want to do, and this is terribly important. There's no reason to hurry."

"There's every reason to hurry!" Her hurried eyes fell on the telephone; with a bound she was across the room and had it in her hands.

Bob swore under his breath, but did not interfere. Whether it was out of order or the operator of duty was never determined; at any rate there was no answer to Fanny's repeated rattling of the hook.

Bob shrugged his shoulders.

"You seem to forget," he said sulkily, "that I have already telephoned. We've been gone two hours. We couldn't get back before daylight. Do you think if I took you back they would let you in?"

"David will."

"Suppose he does. Leila has spread the news through the family long before this that you and I have gone off together. Do you imagine any of the family will believe anything but the worst?"

"David will believe me."

"For heaven's sake, have a little sense. You haven't had such a happy time in the family so far. What do you think your position will be hereafter, even if David believes you, takes you back out of pity. It sounds brutal—but you might as well face the situation now as later. David won't want you, now. And you're done for in Cloughbarre. You can't go back."

"I have to go back to David."

Fanny huddled against the wall, looking up at Bob like a child expecting a blow.

"Why did you telephone Leila?" she asked dully.

"Why? Because I was so madly happy. Because you told me you loved me and I wanted the world to know, wanted to shout it from the rooftops."

"This was a party treat. It was also true that Bob had been wildly impatient to make certain that Fanny would never leave him.

Now he abruptly changed his tactics, stopped trying to bully her and humbled himself, begged her forgiveness.

"We might as well get on with this," he flung at her. "If you're still determined to go back we'd better start."

She held out a placating hand but Bob took no notice, clumped down the stairs ahead of her. Leaving a bill of fare on the desk he found his car, sulkily laid the door open for Fanny to get in.

Silently they drove back to Cloughbarre.

As Bob, with a grinding of gears and a protesting shriek of brakes, brought the car to a jolting stop, Fanny was out and tearing up the walk, not even waiting to say good-bye. She had no key, rang and rang, seized the knob in both hands and rattled it fruitlessly. Then the door was opened. Mrs. Frost stood before her, barring her way to David.

"What do you want?" she demanded shortly, as if Fanny were an intrusive beggar.

"I want to come in. I want to see David."

"David does not want to see you; he never wants to see you again," said Mrs. Frost evenly. Fanny was certain her tone and her eyes were exultant. The door was closed in Fanny's face—not angrily, but relentlessly.

Then the door opened again. It was David. It seemed he must hear the joyous homing cry of her heart. She looked up at him and smiled.

"It's all right," she assured him quickly and would have thrown herself in his arms. David held the door open but stepped back and away from her. It was Leona who put a tender arm about her and led her into the library, made her sit down. Of a sudden Fanny's teeth began chattering. Leona lighted the fire. By its light Fanny saw David standing before her, his mother beside him.

"Well?" David asked coldly.

David was not glad to have her back.

By HERBERT PLUMMER WASHINGTON—Let the subject of ships or shipping be mentioned on the floor of the United States senate and it's a pretty safe bet that you'll hear from the senior senator from Florida.

For it is a subject which lies very close to the heart of Duncan Upshaw Fletcher. During the more than 20 years he has been a senator he has made this subject his legislative hobby.

He prides himself on that. Nothing apparently pleases him more than to have the opportunity to discuss the subject. It was Fletcher who, immediately after the world war, advocated establishment of regular routes to keep engaged the great war-time fleet of merchant craft.

Next to the merchant marine in his interest is inland waterways. The Gulf-to-Maine inland project was one of his dreams and he saw it become a reality. He also proposed the building of a canal from the mouth of the Mississippi river to the Atlantic ocean and has worked untiringly for the project.

Sen. Fletcher also interested himself in rural credits and was the chairman of the United States commission on this subject appointed by President Wilson. It was after the findings of this commission that the farm loan act was passed in September of 1916.

CHURCH (Continued From Page 1) and satisfactory payment of all debts. This explains inaccurate statements previously made. "The following were the obligations July 1, 1930: "Mortgage Company of New Orleans, La. $53,422.82 (Principal & Interest to Jan. 1, 1931) "Heating Plant $6,200 (Not yet accepted) "Church Pews $5,398.57 "First National bank note $3,300 "Stucky Construction Co. $2,514 (Paving) "G. C. Ragland note $6,293 "Insurance $2,134 "Taxes for 1929 $217.27 "L. H. Sullins $222.55 (Plumbing) "Other open accounts $188.25 "Total $79,600.56 "The indebtedness January 1, 1931, is: "Mortgage Company of New Orleans, La. $37,000 "Stucky Construction Co. $2,000 (Paving) "Church Pews $3,500 "Heating Plant $4,700 (If accepted) "Loan made Dec. 28, 1930 $2,500 (For 6 months) "Total $50,700 "The total receipts of the church for these six months have been $46,117. It should be noted here that Siler Faulkner marked an account of $100.00 paid. There was also an interest adjustment of $348 made and furniture to the amount of $757.15 was returned. A total reduction of debts, though money was not handled, of $1,205.15. During this time $950 has been given to Missions $425.00 for benevolences and $450 for Christian education. There has also been $2,001.00 spent for Sunday School equipment and permanent improvements, all of which is paid.

We enter the New Year with all current bills paid, a small balance in the bank and a budget operating that brings $1,300 into the treasury each month. The fixed charges in operating the church including salaries, Mission, and all local current expenses is $700 per month. All above this amount accrues for payment of debts and improvements. The church has given assurance of financial support, regular and systematic giving, that will enable the committee to meet every obligation as it matures in the future."

MARKETS GRAINS SOAR LATE By JOHN P. BOUGHAN (Associated Press Market Editor). CHICAGO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Prices of all grains soared late today, with corn showing nearly a 4 cent jump, the leader. The main reason was active purchasing by corn speculators who believed the market had become oversold and switched from the selling side. Renewal of industrial demand for corn to be used at once was a factor, giving impetus to buying of future deliveries. Corn closed buoyant at the day's top figures, 3 1/2 to 3 3/4 cents higher, wheat a shade to 3 1/2 cents up, oats 1 1/2 to 2 cents advanced, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents down. Activity of grain buyers and boosting of values chiefly in the final hour. Earlier, corn in particular had run into selling on price bulges, and had averaged lower, even when prices showed a tendency to advance. Wheat, rye and oats moved up owing mainly to corn strength, with corn trade volume much exceeding that of wheat. Need of moisture over domestic winter wheat territory was noted, and there were reports that low prices for wheat were not reflected by lower costs of bread. Provisions were easier because of scattered selling which found support only fair. Closing indemnities: wheat: May 81, 81 1/4; July 64 1/2 to 67, 67 1/2 to 68. Corn: March (offers) 71 1/2; May 70 1/2 to 73, 73 1/2; July 71 1/2, 74 1/2.

(AP)—After starting the new year, quilled and declining 11 to 12 points during the morning owing mainly to the predictions from Washington, cotton staged a rally. This upturn, accompanied by more activity, was attributed to more favorable weekly statistics. The market again bulged in the late trading and made fresh highs 33 to 36 points above the lows. The close was 4 to 5 points under the best, the general market closing steady at net gains for the day of 14 to 18 points.
