Hospital construction begins

Despite inclement weather and an alternate indoor setting, groundbreaking for the new Coronado Community Hospital was officially accomplished Tuesday to mark the beginning of construction of the $13.7 million new hospital north of the Pampa Mall.

Hospital Corporation of America officials from both Nashville and Dallas were on hand for the ceremonies and to acknowledge their commitment to community health care.

William G. "Gerald" White, HCA senior vice-president of marketing, told the group assembled, "It is our goal to provide quality health care services at a reasonable price. We hope to re-attract a lot of business that has been going out of Pampa for health care. We are offering a first class facility with first class services."

It was Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy who offered a challenge to the medical staff of the new Coronado Community Hospital. "The Hospital Corporation of America has offered us the best of facilities, equipment, and guidance. It will be up to you, the medical staff, to ask for the best and to make sure that is what you receive."

"As a part of the Gray County Commissioners Court, I know the effort the court made to choose the right corporation to represent our medical needs. It was from the employees of other HCA facilities that we got the impression of well being, friendliness, and the overall local management left to the individual facilities that helped the court decide on HCA for our community," Kennedy added.

State Representative Foster Whaley said, "When the Pampa Mall was built, some of the citizens and businessmen asked if a town the size of Pampa could support such a facility. I wondered myself. However, the results of such a venture are shown in the parking lot. The cars represent all the surrounding towns. We can and will support the new businesses in Pampa, and I believe the same thing will happen with this new hospital."

Construction of the Coronado Community Hospital will begin immediately with completion expected in 16 to 18 months. The facility will be located on 50 acres of land north of the Pampa Mall on Perryton Parkway at the intersection with Duncan Street. Opening of the facility is slated in November 1981. It will be one of the 152 HCA-operated hospitals in 28 states and several foreign countries.

The hospital will have approximately 102,330 square feet and will feature a contemporary design, according to HCA official Jim Dalton, vice-president of Division VII, which includes most of the Texas hospital facilities managed by HCA.

Employees of Pampa's Highland General Hospital expressed some of their thoughts about the new HCA management corporation.

Robert Ingham, physical therapy director, said, "They care about us here in the hospital, and they are not here to control our services, but to work with us. I am enthused about the move."

Geneva Gobin, director of nurses, said, "It will be the first time I have ever worked in a new hospital facility. It will feature the newest and most modern floor plan available, and it will save our nurses many steps. We are in the team-nursing planning stages, a system to most efficiently utilize our present personnel. The architect's hospital plan is exciting."

Gene Savage, pharmaceutical director, said, "The most positive thing as an employee that I can see would include the faith that the HCA is committed to spending the resources necessary to build a first-class hospital facility. It is very important to have a hospital that employees are proud of. We are already receiving new equipment."

According to Archie Henager, director of environmental services, "We are really proud to have this kind of corporation running our hospital. They will be a great asset to the employees and to the health care of the community."

Laboratory director Gene Reed said, "We have good thoughts about the new management corporation. The laboratory is one of the most important parts of a hospital, and the new laboratory will be fully automated and the hospital will be accredited."

According to HCA officials, the company is committed to continued expansion to serve an increasing number of patients and to further improvement in its operations at every location.

Seniors receive diplomas Thursday, vespers slated tonight

Graduating seniors are making final preparations for the conclusion of their tenure as students in the Pampa Independent School District.

As part of the graduation ceremonies, vespers services will be conducted at 7 p.m. tonight in M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Father Francis Hynes of St. Paul's Catholic Church, speaking on the topic "Finishing the Race," will be the keynote speaker for the event.

Special music, "A Hymn For

Our Time," will be provided by the Pampa Concert Choir and the Pampa High School Band for tonight's services.

A reception for the seniors and their families will be held immediately following the services by the Junior Class mothers, headed by Mary Lynn Case. The reception will be in the Heritage Room of M. K. Brown.

The graduation exercises for the 287 Pampa seniors are scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday in the Pampa High School Fieldhouse.

Brief speeches will be given by Valedictorian Pam Homer, Salutatorian Mary Skoog and Class President Steve Kotara.

A stirring rendition of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" will be performed by the band and choir.

Paul Payne, PHS principal, will present the diplomas to the graduating seniors with the assistance of Pampa Independent School District Superintendent Bob Phillips.

The performances by the band and choir will be under the direction of band director Jeff Doughten and choir director John Woickowski.

Besides being the last appearance of the 1980 Seniors as students, Doughten and Woickowski will also be conducting their final performances as music directors in the school district.

Both have led their respective branches of the high school music department to an outstanding level. Under their direction, the band and choir have received several high awards including many sweepstakes trophies, overall outstanding awards and gold medals.

A senior class "all night" party, sponsored by the senior parents, is scheduled to begin following the graduation exercises with a disco dance in the Heritage Room of M. K. Brown and bingo in the lobby of the auditorium. Prizes will be furnished by Pampa merchants. Next, a three-dimensional movie will be screened in the auditorium.

Later, students will be served breakfast at the First Baptist Church, sponsored by First Baptist women.

Geologists locate 15-mile crack along fault line

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Geologists have found a 15-mile-long crack along the Hilton Creek Fault near where three major earthquakes and more than 70 aftershocks have hit this week, but haven't determined whether it is responsible for the tremors.

The third and largest of the earthquakes hit this High Sierra resort Tuesday, injuring at least seven persons. It also touched off a gas explosion, triggered landslides and caused widespread minor damage.

Scientists from the U. S. Geological Survey and the California Institute of Technology have set up a base in this east-central California area near the Nevada border to pinpoint the fault responsible for the quakes, according to USGS geophysicist Carl Johnson.

The Hilton Creek Fault, which is still active, caused similar series of quakes in 1927 and 1941.

'Pride of Pampa' band director resigns

Jeff Doughten, director of the "Pride of Pampa" band, announced his resignation Tuesday after a brilliant seven years with the Pampa High School band in which the band achieved 32 first places in 33 contests.

Doughten said he will be taking over farm operations at his farm in Plainview and working for Travel Advisors of Anaheim, Calif., accompanying bands and choirs on international trips.

His wife Wanda will be an assistant professor of business at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview this fall and will begin work on her doctorate at Texas Tech University, Doughten said.

"I've always been a gypsy," Doughten told the Pampa News Tuesday. "The longest I've been in any one place is Pampa and that was seven years. It's time to do something new."

The moving van will pull away from the Doughten home Saturday morning, he said.

During his tenure as director of the "Pride of Pampa," the band has attained numerous awards — taking 32 first places in 33 contests.

Doughten joined the school system in 1973, and in 1974, the band performed at the Buccaneer Music Festival in Corpus Christi. In 1975, the band performed at Six Flags over Mid-America in St. Louis, Mo. In 1976, the band performed at Six Flags Over Georgia in Atlanta, and in 1977, the "Pride of Pampa" marched in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin, Ireland. In 1978, the band performed in the Worlds of Fun band contest in Kansas City, Mo., and on New Year's Day 1979, the band marched in the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, Calif. This year, the band was named the most outstanding band at Six Flags over Georgia in Atlanta.

Under Doughten's leadership, the band is slated to perform in a band contest in Hawaii next year.

In both Georgia contests and in the St. Patrick's Day Parade, the "Pride of Pampa" was named the most outstanding band.

Doughten said the three most prestigious non-military parades are the St. Patrick's Day Parade, the Tournament of Roses Parade and the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City. Doughten said the band marched in two of those and could have marched in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, "but it falls at such a bad time of the year — on Thanksgiving — when the kids want to be home for the holidays."

The band was named the official band for President Gerald Ford when he visited Amarillo. The band has performed by special invitation for Texas Governor Dolph

Briscoe, for news commentator Paul Harvey when he visited Pampa, for Art Linkletter, for Abigail Van Buren, "Dear Abby" columnist, and for Jerry Clower of "Nashville on the Road."

Doughten said since he has arrived in Pampa, the band has marched 65 consecutive halftimes at football games without being snowed or rained out.

"Of course, there were some close calls . . ." Doughten said.

"My seven years in Pampa have been some of the most meaningful and rewarding years of my career. I'm leaving with many fond memories and with no hard feelings towards anyone. It's been a real super-super seven years, and I wish the band the best. It's just time for a change," Doughten said.

Doughten said he has gained lots of experience for his job with Travel Advisors, helping bands and choirs on trips. Doughten speculates that he may have the opportunity to accompany the Pampa High School band to its 1981 Hawaii contest, "but that's not confirmed yet."

"I didn't make my decision to do this until 7 a.m. this morning," Doughten said Tuesday. "I'm going to miss everybody and Pampa, but it's time for a change."

TEXAS WEATHER

In a matter of hours, residents of Olney were evacuating their homes here as a fast-moving thunderstorm slobbered more than six inches of rain and hail on the North Central Texas city.
 Police agencies and the National Weather Service said between four and seven inches of rain fell here in a three-hour period Tuesday evening. The town's two creeks flowed out of their banks and into the streets and the downtown area was under at least six inches of water, a police dispatcher said.
 No one was injured in the flooding, but power lines snapped and the city was almost completely without phone service, said dispatcher Mary Braddock of nearby Graham.
 "They've had four inches of rain and some golfball-sized hail," Ms. Braddock said Tuesday night. "They're having an awful time and it's getting worse. Their radios are out and we are helping with the evacuation."
 "Some of the roads are flooded and they (police) can't even get in there."
 Most of the roads into Olney were closed because of flooding, but Texas 79 was reopened early today and other roads were being reopened to traffic as the water receded, officials said.
 A ham radio report monitored by KSWA radio in Graham said water swirled to the tops of cars in some areas of town. The radio station also said a car reportedly had washed off Texas 14, which was closed because of the flooding, but officials were unavailable for confirmation of the washout.
 Department of Public Safety troopers said a bridge on Texas 79 on the north side of Olney had washed out.
 Police and fire officials were sent from Graham to Olney to help evacuate 30 families from low-lying areas, but were called back to Graham when foul weather and runoff from Olney caused some flash flooding there.
 The storm was part of a sweeping thunderstorm system that rolled across Northwest and North Central Texas Tuesday afternoon. Wind gusts up to 50 miles per hour were reported at Abilene and some hail pelted Canyon, just south of Lubbock.
 There also were heavy downpours reported at Abilene, Amarillo, Dumas and Stratford.

minor accidents

No minor accidents were reported to the Pampa Police Department during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

NATIONAL

One official called it all part of "a typical Texas spring" — thunderstorms, hail, tornados and floods.
 More than a dozen twisters touched down in northern Texas early this morning after heavy rain and hail pummeled the region Tuesday night.
 Police agencies and the National Weather Service said between four and seven inches of rain fell during a three-hour period Tuesday evening in the area of Olney, forcing the rapid evacuation of numerous families. The town's two creeks overflowed their banks and into the streets and the downtown area was under at least six inches of water, a police dispatcher said.
 "It's just a typical Texas spring," said a state trooper in Lubbock.
 There were also heavy downpours and gusts up to 50 mph reported at Abilene and Lubbock.
 Elsewhere in the nation today, thunderstorms were reported over the Plains, along with a few showers over Florida and parts of the Southeast.
 Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 33 in Concord, N.H., to 81 in Brownsville, Texas.
 Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions from selected cities:
 Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 72 fair; Boston 55 fair; Cincinnati 56 fair; Cleveland 56 partly cloudy; Detroit 62 cloudy; Miami 78 partly cloudy; New York 62 fair; Philadelphia 60 cloudy; Pittsburgh 51 fair; Washington 64 partly cloudy.
 Central U.S.: Chicago 67 fair; Denver 60 windy; Des Moines 68 fair; Fort Worth 75 cloudy; Indianapolis 55 fair; Kansas City 67 fair; Louisville 60 fair; Minneapolis-St. Paul 69 fair; Nashville 68 fair; New Orleans 77 hazy; St. Louis 73 fair.
 Western U.S.: Anchorage 45 rain; Los Angeles 58 cloudy; Phoenix 75 fair; Salt Lake City 50 fair; San Diego 60 partly cloudy; San Francisco 52 fair; Seattle 51 cloudy.
 Caribbean: San Juan 78 rain.

Pampa students bring home Special Olympics gold medals

Pampa Special Education and Satellite School students brought home five gold medals from the State Field and Track competition of Special Olympics conducted May 20-22 in Austin.
 Gold medal winners included Mark McMinn, softball; Stanley Barnett and Tommy Miller, 100 meter; and Aaron Young and Steven Counts, 50 meter. First in class in frisbee throw was Rickey Caughey.

Other winners from the Pampa group included Rhonda Farar, silver medal; Jennifer Roden, silver medal and Debbi Ellis, bronze medal; all in the softball competition.
 Martin Brookshire participated in the mile run.
 Silver medal winners in the 100 meter run were Velvie Biggs and Terry Gillis. Tronda Wells won a bronze medal in the same event.

Greg Bowers, Randy Sewell, Greg Counts and Dickey Don Hendricks were silver medal winners in the 50 meter run, and bronze medal winners were Will Wells and Rickey Caughey.
 Trent Loter placed third in the frisbee throw. Other third place winners in the frisbee event were Jenifer Roden and Rhealene Sober.

Twenty-five students from the Pampa group participated in the state meet which precedes national competition.

Geologists watching all volcanoes

BY SHEILA ECCLES
 PAMPA NEWS STAFF WRITER

While residents of Washington state may have been surprised by the volcanic rumblings of Mount St. Helens, which startled them this spring after a silence of more than a century, geologists have been keeping their eyes on it and other volcanoes for years.
 The last eruption from Mt. St. Helens came in the 1850's and geologists are at a loss as to why it has again become active. They, like the rest of Washington state residents, must wait and watch.
 For no matter how long a volcano has been quiet, explains the current issue of International Wildlife magazine "There is no such thing as an extinct volcano."

"There are some 600 known active volcanoes across the globe; even more are hidden beneath the seas, reports the National Wildlife Federation's report.

Volcanic eruptions take place all the time, all over the world, usually with out inflicting much damage or injury. But sometimes the unexpected eruption of a volcano—which happens when extreme pressure in underground reservoirs of molten rock and gas force their way to the surface through cracks in the earth's crust—is deadly and destructive. The most violent volcanoes usually give little warning of their impending explosions.

"Over the past two centuries, volcanic activity has taken more than 100,000 lives and the dangers are not likely to disappear with advances in predicting eruptions," according to International Wildlife.

Ancient history abounds with examples of havoc wrought by volcanoes. The name itself comes from Vulcan, the Roman god of fire who forged thunderbolts for Jove and weapons for Cupid.

Some of history's most disastrous volcanic eruptions have been recorded to include the following:

One of the earliest known explosions occurred about 1470 B.C., when the Aegean island of Thera erupted. Its violent effects were felt throughout the Mediterranean world.

In A.D. 79, after many years of inactivity, Mount Vesuvius

Court rules in favor of widow's suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today affirmed a $233,000 judgment against Southern Pacific Transportation Co. in the death of a track foreman whose motorcar derailed near Burke in Angelina County.

Violet Jo Evans of Livingston sued Southern Pacific for $700,000 in the death of her husband, Paul Evans, 49, alleging the motorcar was defective. There were no witnesses to the fatal accident on April 18, 1976.

The trial judge granted a default judgment to Mrs. Evans after Southern Pacific failed to respond to his Sept. 2, 1977, order to answer written questions within 30 days.

The September order stated that if Southern Pacific did not respond within 30 days, its pleading would be stricken and it would not be allowed to present grounds for its defense.

buried two thriving Roman towns, Pompeii and Herculaneum, so completely that their remains lay undiscovered for another 1,700 years.

In 1669, 100,000 Sicilians were left homeless and a few thousand were killed by Mount Etna's greatest eruption.

By far, one of the most powerful volcanic explosions in modern times occurred in 1883 on the island of Krakabotoa, west of Java, in the Indian Ocean. "The force was equal to that of about 26 powerful H-bombs, the tremendous roar stamped sheep as far off as Australia, which is more than 1,000 miles away," reports International Wildlife. Krakatoa's eruption and subsequent tidal waves killed 36,000 people.

A more recent catastrophic eruption was Mount Pelee's on the Caribbean island of Martinique in 1902. It demolished the town of St. Pierre, with a loss of about 30,000 lives.

Even today, volcanic eruptions remain an ever-present threat to millions of people. In Guatemala alone there are ten active volcanoes, and three are currently in eruption. In Ecuador, the 19,37-foot snow capped volcano named Cotopaxi has erupted more than 50 times in the past 50 years, killing many in floods and mudslides.

Iceland has had three major eruptions in the past decade. Indonesians sit on 128 active volcanoes, including Merapi, which erupts virtually every year. Japan is the home of 72 active volcanoes.

There has been no eruption on the continental U.S. since 1971, when California's Mount Lassen subsided after three years of activity, but there are three years of activity, but there are three potentially active volcanoes in northern California, and six in Washington's and Oregon's Cascade Mountains.

Just last year, 20,000 people were evacuated from the northern end of St. Vincent in the Caribbean, and just in time. La Soufriere on the St. Vincent Island exploded, sending up a great cloud of hot gases and steam, showering the countryside with ash and lava fragments. At one point, the volcano blew a mushroom shaped cloud more than 40,000 feet in the sky.

Volcanoes create themselves out of the lava, ash, and dust they spew out of the ground, explains International Wildlife. The simplest type of volcano is the cone, which may appear overnight. For example, in 1943, a farmer plowing his field about 200 miles west of Mexico City watched as the earth opened and material poured out of the fissure. By the next morning the volcano was 30 feet high. After a week it was 460 feet high. Eventually, the volcano, named Paricutin, rose to a height of 1,300 feet.

Another type of volcano is the composite cone which is composed of successive layers of lava flows, ash and cinders. These volcanoes may rise 8,000 feet high.

Washington's Mount St. Helen

is a composite cone. Less steep-sided and more gentle in behavior is the shield volcano, formed almost entirely of lava flows that spill out in all directions from central and lateral vents. Hawaii's Kilauea is an example.

A fourth type of volcano is the lava dome, which is formed out of highly pasty, viscous lava. When the lava hardens, it forms steep, craggy knobs. Examples are Lassen Park and the Mono domes in California.

Volcanologists-geologists who study volcanoes, can sometimes issue a reasonable accurate warnings by monitoring such signs as seismic activity and increasing water temperature.

International Wildlife warns, "Too often, the clues are ignored, a small earth tremor may be dismissed as a passing truck, or not understood. There are still many areas, including parts of the U.S., where there is not adequate monitoring of volcanoes."

The danger from large volcanic explosions is far greater today because of increasing populations.

Watergate tapes available to public today

By MIKE FEINSLBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now the public can hear, dirty words and all, the tape-recorded conversations about Watergate that caused Richard Nixon to resign as president and sent his close associates to jail.

Starting today, 31 of the 950 tapes secretly made by Nixon are available to the public at the National Archives. But only about 100 listeners a day can be accommodated at 24 listening posts.

What they will hear are the tapes heard by the jury that convicted H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, John N. Mitchell and Robert C. Mardian in 1975 of conspiring to obstruct justice and the jury that acquitted former Texas Gov. John B. Connally of accepting a bribe from milk producers.

Ultimately, the government hopes to make available here and in archives facilities in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Denver, Fort Worth, Texas, Kansas City, Mo., Los Angeles, Bayonne, N.J., Philadelphia, San Bruno, Calif. and Seattle most of the tapes in its possession. They cover 6,000 hours of talk.

Nixon is fighting that plan in court, contending it would be an invasion of his privacy.

There is no indication how long the court battle might drag on. Until it is resolved, only the 31 tapes introduced as evidence at the various trials will be available — and those only in Washington.

According to Associated Press reporter Harry F. Rosenthal, who heard the tapes during the trials, listeners will hear hard-to-follow conversations often muffled by the sound of a lawnmower, a band playing or a cup hitting a saucer and punctuated by expletives — "hell" or "damn" and an occasional barnyard epithet.

"The half-second it took to get the tape reels to gather speed often blotted opening sentences," Rosenthal wrote. "Invariably, the voice of Nixon behind the desk was less distinct than that of the person talking to him. People spoke in half-sentences, interrupted one another and often spoke at the same time."

Archives officials expect big crowds to line up every morning for tickets. Visitors will be given printed transcripts, but they will not be permitted to make recordings.

Donning earphones, they can listen to some of the conversations between Nixon and his associates as they evolved the Watergate cover-up — the plans to conceal White House involvement in the June 17, 1972 break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate building.

Not included, because it was not introduced in evidence at the trials, is the most famous tape — the one containing an 18½ minute erasure of a conversation Nixon had with Haldeman on June 20, 1972, three days after the Watergate break-in.

The batch made public today — it would take 12½ hours to hear them all — includes a tape made April 25, 1973 revealing how vulnerable Nixon felt.

PAMPA CHAMBER of Commerce members, Artie Aftergut (standing) and Lois Howard (seated) heartily approve of the final membership drive tally as compiled by Lois Steward (Chamber secretary). The final check showed 27 new members were welcomed into the chamber. The membership drive ran for two weeks and 65 chamber members were involved. # Bandidos not ruled out in federal judge slaying

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bandidos motorcycle gang members aren't prime targets of the investigation into the 1979 assassination of a federal judge, although they haven't been completely ruled out, says a top federal prosecutor.

First Assistant U.S. Attorney Fred Rodriguez commented Tuesday on a published report in which an admitted informant said Bandidos leaders plotted the deaths of federal judges three months before the May 29, 1979, slaying here of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

"They haven't been completely discounted in the investigation," Rodriguez said of the Bandidos. "However, we are not nearly as firm in our belief about them being involved in the Wood case as we are about them in the Kerr case."

FBI documents released in court have identified two current Bandidos and one former club member as the prime suspects in the 1978 attempted assassination of then-Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

There have been no arrests in either case. Prosecutors feel both attacks were drug-related.

Rodriguez said he put little stock in the story informant Benton "Cowboy" Parrish told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. The story was published Sunday.

Rodriguez said he had never before heard of Parrish or the story Parrish claims he told a San Antonio federal grand jury last year.

"All that information which is considered significant in the Wood case is run by me. And that story is new to me," said Rodriguez, one of several federal prosecutors and judges here under constant armed guard since Wood's slaying.

Rodriguez would not discuss the primary targets of the Wood investigation.

Kerr, who escaped serious injury in the attack, had selected Bandidos out of a police lineup as closely resembling those who riddled his car with gunfire.

Rodriguez and U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd both believe the two attacks were ordered by those with a multimillion-dollar stake in Texas' lucrative illegal drug traffic. Kerr and Wood had been involved in numerous West Texas drug cases.

Boyd was vacationing Tuesday and unavailable for comment. Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck, who also has been working on the case, was named by the Fort Worth newspaper as one who wrote a confidential letter in Parrish's behalf. He would not comment on any aspect of the Wood case.

Parrish, who says he is hiding in Fort Worth, is seeking federal protection in exchange for his testimony and says he fears Bandidos will kill him.

U.S. Marshal Rudy Garza said Parrish has never been placed under federal protection in the Western District of Texas.

Rodriguez was puzzled by Parrish's willingness to talk about his alleged role in the Wood case.

"I don't know what this guy's game is. But if he's got a death wish, he's got a good way of going about it," said the prosecutor.

ABC says tax not equal to collection

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state now spends more than it takes in at liquor tax collection points on the Mexican border, and the Alcoholic Beverage Commission has come up with an answer — stop collecting the tax at some points.

Mike McKinney of the ABC told a House committee Tuesday tax collections have dropped because of rising Mexican liquor prices and decreased automobile travel at the border. Inflation has sent expenses soaring.

McKinney proposed an end to one tax collection point, and a cut in service at several others. Motorists would "just drive right on across" without paying the tax, he said.

He said signs could be put up to tell motorists taxes are still due, but he predicted few voluntary payments by mail.

In the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, the state spent $1.6 million to collect $1.7 million in liquor import taxes. Figures for the current fiscal year show decreasing revenue and even higher expenses, resulting in the first-ever deficit.

McKinney proposed closing the tax collection station at Los Ebanos and going to part-time collections at Presidio, Fabens, Falcon, Rio Grande City and Armatistad.

He said it cost $37,000 to collect $8,000 in taxes at Presidio.

"Because of the low traffic volume, we feel like we can reduce our staff by about 30 percent," he told the Liquor Regulation Committee.

Such a reduction — about 31 jobs — would make it possible for tax-free liquor to be brought across at certain points.

ABC inspectors would remain on duty during peak times at the smaller crossings, he said.

However, no taxes would be collected at Los Ebanos, a Lower Rio Grande Valley crossing featuring a hand-powered ferry. The tiny ABC station on the wrong side of the road at Los Ebanos collected $91.97 in taxes in fiscal 1979.

U.S. Customs officers would enforce quota limits when ABC agents are off duty, according to McKinney.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said such a plan is an uneven tax levy. She predicted some motorists would drive out of their way to get booze across tax-free.

McKinney said the current plan is not equitable — some persons bring across more liquor than they declare.

Closing arguments expected today in LeBaron hearing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Closing arguments are today in the murder and conspiracy trial of Ervil LeBaron, accused of ordering the deaths of rival polygamist leaders.

Jury instructions, listing alternative verdicts, were drafted by 3rd District Judge Ernest F. Baldwin as he met in chambers Tuesday with special prosecutor David E. Yocom and defense attorney F. John Hill.

Fifty witnesses have been called in the 10 day trial to determine whether LeBaron was responsible for the shooting death May 10, 1977, of Dr. Rulon C. Allred, leader of more than 2,000 polygamists in the United Apostolic Brethren.

The 71-year-old naturopathic physician was gunned down in his office by two women.

LeBaron, 55, having more than a dozen wives and leader of the Church of the Lamb of God, also is charged with conspiracy in an alleged plot, never carried out, to kill LeBaron's brother Verlan during Allred's funeral. Verlan leads another polygamist group.

Hill tentatively rested his case Friday but said he might call another witness for brief testimony before the closing arguments.

Yocom alleges LeBaron ordered Rena Chynoweth, one of his wives, and Ramona Marston to execute Allred, a father of 40.

Ms. Chynoweth was among four LeBaron followers acquitted in a trial a year ago, before LeBaron's capture. Ms. Marston jumped bail and still is at large.

Defense witnesses claimed two other followers had usurped LeBaron's power.

Allred is charged with first-degree murder, the prosecution contending the slaying was committed for personal, material or pecuniary gain and because lives of others allegedly were endangered.

Allred could be found guilty of first-degree murder — punishable by a possible death sentence — or of a lesser charge or he could be acquitted.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Why the budget appears balanced

The superficial appearance of what happened in Congress recently is that the lawmakers finally got tough on inflation and balanced the federal budget. This is the impression that millions of Americans who get their news from television or from headlines will come away with, and is precisely what scores of congressmen running for re-election want us to think. Unfortunately for our nation and for the economic well-being of most of us, that is not what happened.

Instead, the House chose and the Senate eyed as a preliminary budget goal for fiscal 1981 a minor surplus; that is all they did. There's something to be said for that, of course — the $612 billion spending package is less than some of the way-out statisticians would like to have had. It's encouraging that the Democratic leadership of both houses and the president realize that after years of uncontrolled deficits that bred 20 percent inflation it is time to restore some semblance of order. But as of now their self-styled austerity is merely a symbol, and, worse yet, the black ink at the bottom line is the product of another monstrous tax increase on the American people.

Here, then, is what has happened: In the first round of budget planning for next year, the House and Senate are aiming for a total expenditure about 9 percent greater than this year's and some $15 billion less than President Carter had proposed last January, before he realized what a volatile political issue inflation was to become. Last week's votes in Congress set in motion the formal budget-drafting process that will transpire in its various committees for the next several months. In the past, the initial budget goal has turned out to be a hoax: the committees went right ahead and spent like there was no tomorrow. This year the House sought to tighten the latches by directing the panels not to exceed the limits. We shall see whether that move can hold back the tide of pressure-group legislation that moves in this time of year. That is the first big question mark in this balanced budget. The second is whether automatically increasing expenditures already written into law will balloon during the incipient recession, as transfer payments are wont to do, and scuttle the dream of fiscal responsibility. Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Maryland, one of Congress's most alert and economy-minded members, is so convinced that the balanced budget will fall victim to these predators that last week he labeled it a "sham".

Certainly there is reason still to doubt that Congress has its heart in reducing government. Repeated attempts in both houses to make meaningful cuts in the 1981 total, to reduce it below $600 billion by curtailing many of the pork-barrel social programs instead of merely holding back their growth, were beaten back. So were similar moves to prune the current 1980 budget, which you might remember wasn't too far off balance at this stage a year ago but is now awash in $43 billion of red ink. (Keep in mind that such a debacle is occurring in a year that promises to be far more healthy economically than the one coming up.) In the cases of both 1981 and 1980 spending, it should be pointed out, most Republicans voted for real reductions; the Democrats did not. This held true for our local representatives, and is something voters hard-pressed by inflation might want to consider this November.

Of equal concern ought to be the rapidly rising taxes we will be paying to the federal government, both directly through our paychecks and indirectly through the price we pay for everyday necessities. For it is truly the case that if the 1981 budget is to be balanced at all, Congress and the president will have done so through a series of extraordinary tax increases on us all. Next year we may be paying about $80 billion in additional taxes; on oil imports, on domestic production of oil (the "windfall profits"), through proposed withholding of interest and dividend income, and by the continuing, insane thrust into higher tax brackets that accompanies keeping up with the cost of living. All this is on top of the massive Social Security tax increase imposed last year to keep that system afloat temporarily. At a time when investment capital (read that: savings) is so desperately needed to restore national productivity and combat price increases, Americans will be paying a greater share of their gross product in taxes than at any peacetime in our history. In that context, a balanced budget is a Pyrrhic victory.

There is talk of some sort of productivity tax cut being included in the 1981 budget if all the present calculations work out. Don't count on it. We can look forward to the president spending the next six months buying votes with promises of such things as jobs programs and other anti-recessionary aid (which of course never arrives until the recession is over, and even then is squandered). Pitted against that sort of imaginary free lunch, the idea of a tax cut for greedy businesses and their wealthy stockholders will hardly have much appeal to Jimmy Carter and the constituency he must attract.

Alas, Rep. Bauman is correct. This balanced budget, indeed this whole war on inflation, is a sham.

The consumers win

The Commerce Department's ruling that Mexican farmers are not dumping tomatoes on the U.S. market is not only a victory for the consumer but a tonic to ailing U.S.-Mexican trade relations.

The decision confirmed an earlier Treasury Department ruling favorable to the Mexican growers, but it was by no means a foregone conclusion. The Commerce Department assumed responsibility for anti-dumping cases from the Treasury in January with a reputation as a pushover for domestic protectionists.

Florida growers had asked the government to put an import duty on Mexican tomatoes, peppers, squash, cucumbers and eggplants. They claimed this protection for their own crops on the grounds that growers in Mexico were selling produce below cost, in the American market. The Commerce Department agreed with the Treasury that the produce market fluctuates daily and that selling below the cost in times of market glut is a business necessity.

The ruling, although still subject to appeal, will breathe new life in trade relations which faltered when Mexico rejected the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trades and scuttled a U.S.-Mexico bilateral trade agreement last December. The Mexican government had been watching the dumping case closely and a decision crippling its growers would scarcely have improved trade relations.

American consumers, who need Mexican oil more than tomatoes, may benefit doubly from the ruling.

Turning point for tax revolt

By Robert J. Wagman
LOS ANGELES (NEA)—As tax revolt swept California two years ago, voters easily approved the now-famed Proposition 13 offered by businessmen Paul Gann and Howard Jarvis. Last year, Californians overwhelmingly approved Gann's Proposition 4, which limited growth of the state budget and closed loopholes in "Prop. 13." So, it is easy to understand why experts predicted that Jarvis's new measure would pass easily on the June 3 primary ballot. But the initiative now is so clearly in trouble that the natural question must be whether the tax revolt has run its course. It hasn't, but California taxpayers appear to have grown more discriminating in the kind of tax revolt they will support. Officially, the new measure is known as Proposition 9. Unofficially, it is called "Jarvis II," or more commonly as "Jaws II." While Proposition 13 cut property taxes in half, Jaws II seeks to make the same kind of cut in the state income tax. If adopted, a family of four earning $25,000 a year would have its annual state income tax cut from the current $600 to about $285. In the state where the tax revolt received its biggest boost and where Jarvis continually proclaims "it is stronger than ever," such an initiative should be a shoe-in. Shortly after the measure qualified for the ballot, statewide polls showed it winning by 30 percent or more. But opinion has reversed as opponents have put their arguments before the voters. One recent poll showed 52 percent against the initiative, 38 percent in favor and 10 percent undecided.

Many people who supported Proposition 13 two years ago are opposing Jarvis this time. Among them are Gann and Roland Vincent, one of Jarvis's key aides in 1978, who is co-chairman of the main anti-Proposition 9 organization.

Another opponent of Jaws II is Los Angeles Controller Ira Reiner, who also backed Proposition 13. "This measure is a rip-off," says Reiner. "It will favor the wealthy at the expense of the middle and lower classes who depend on the kind of state and local services that will be affected if the measure passes."

The evidence supports this. The progressive nature of California's income tax means that more than half of the resulting savings would accrue to the 4 percent of California taxpayers whose incomes are more than $40,000 a year.

And there is little doubt state and local services would have to be reduced if the measure passed. Estimates are that state income would be cut from between $3 billion and $5 billion in the first year under the revised tax structure. Many California school districts receive much of their operating funds from the state; they say passage of Proposition 9 would require such radical actions as elimination of kindergarten and the last year of high school.

Similar predictions of doom were made during the Proposition 13 campaign and failed to come true. But then the state had a multi-billion-dollar surplus. That surplus has decreased each year and may disappear altogether if the current recession is severe.

The same polls that show Proposition 9 behind also show that voters really believe essential services will have to be slashed if the initiative passes. More than 75 percent of those saying they will vote against the measure cite that as their reason potential cuts in services.

That is why Gann, economist Milton Friedman and others argue that spending limits, which index growth in state spending to growth in citizens' personal incomes, are a far more effective method of tax reform than what some have called Jarvis's "meat ax" approach. Indeed, such limits have frequently been approved in states where Proposition 13 measures have failed.

Not the least of Proposition 9's problems appears to be Jarvis himself. He became a kind of cult figure during the Proposition 13 campaign, but he had grown increasingly shrill and crude as things have gone against him. He regularly calls opponents "idiots," "nuts," or worse. This seems to be wearing thin on voters.

But if the polls are correct in finding that California voters now realize a certain level of government services are worth paying for, perhaps the Proposition 9 election will mark a turning point in the tax revolt. It won't end it, but it will set it on the Gann-Friedman course toward spending limitations.

Invasion by immigration

by Paul Harvey

From the mailbox: "Dear Paul Harvey News: I telephoned my senators and congressman to protest the new immigration invasion and was told by their secretaries that I was the first person to complain. Apparently you and I are the only two who care."

There's a P.S. to the letter: "Please don't use my name in connection with this: I can't take the heat you take."

An employer in our community was telling me the other day about his experience in seeking workers able and willing to work.

He's had to import some from overseas. Chicago, understand, has more so-called "unemployment" than the national average - 7.4 percent.

Yet this employer cannot find anybody willing to do work-work without seeking overseas. And incidentally, after trying several ethnic categories of immigrants, he says his most diligent, most dependable and most willing workers are "Polish."

So - when these paragraphs refer to "invasion by immigration" they do NOT refer to our nations historic importation of specific quotas of outsiders. The traditional overlap of cultures has tended more to strengthen than to weaken our country.

The recession is measurable now. In the housing industry, in the automobile industry.

We are told that next comes increasing unemployment.

That is when the jobless are going to begin noticing and resenting the millions of jobholders who are illegally in the United States.

And the longer we wait to close the door, the more potentially explosive that situation becomes.

The latest Roper poll on the subject shows that 91 percent of Americans want a stop to illegal immigration and 75 percent want legal immigration curtailed.

Yet the floodtide of immigrants, legal and illegal, continues - 600 thousand legal last year and nobody knows how many illegals. Because a million illegals were apprehended, one can assume that several million were not.

A Kettering Foundation survey reveals that a third of everybody in Latin America would like to get out, 90 percent of them to come here.

A South Korean newspaper says half of all South Koreans want out.

Ninety percent of Vietnamese refugees want to come to the United States.

Until recently our nation's laws managed the immigration flow, limiting it to what numbers we can absorb.

Presently we are hearing that those laws are inenforceable. That our authorities are no match for the smugglers, the document forgers, the exploiting employers.

The world's lifeboat is about to be swamped.

As Miami goes?

By Don Graff

How swiftly time passes and how easily we forget - or relegate events to the dimmer recesses of our collective recollection.

The era of dreaded racially "hot summers" is a decade and more behind us and the details of Watts and Detroit - even more the full roll of the cities that underwent trial by fire and looting - are hazy at best.

The civil-rights movement of which the summers were the violent aspect was overtaken and submerged in the tide of opposition to the Vietnam War, after that by the neglect, benign or otherwise, of post-Watergate apathy.

And then comes Miami. It comes as a surprise, for several reasons. It follows more than a decade of civil-rights legislation, of desegregation in education and employment opportunity, of the steady expansion of political rights irrespective of race, color and the rest.

And it comes in a city which, although geographically Southern, has a minimal black community as the nation's urban concentrations go - some 12 percent.

Miami in this sense may be different and the spark that touched it off - the acquittal of white police on trial for the beating death of a black - a local issue. But the basic situation is not unique - broad dissatisfaction of the racial minority with what the law says is equality but that personal experience reveals still falls far short of it. To Miami as recent settings of discontent add Philadelphia, Memphis and Mobile.

But it is Miami that has exploded, and now joins the roll with Watts and Detroit - Cleveland, Newark, Harlem and Washington. In its frightening demonstration of fury still simmering beneath the surface of American society, it is giving rise to some concern that more uncomfortably warm summers could be ahead.

Even should it not come to that extreme, it is a reminder that what has passed is not all that past. Or as the French would put it, the more things change the more they are the same.

Which is precisely the point many blacks have been making for some time now.

While the president who never promised us a Rose Garden because he apparently wanted to keep it all to himself has been sticking close to his crisis command post, a collection of surrogates has been out campaigning for him.

Rosalynn Carter and Walter Mondale to name two. And there are some out here who are commencing to think that either one might be a more effective choice for the presidential nomination than the candidate himself.

Particularly the last-named. So much so that a syndrome that might be labeled the "Mondale alternative" is spreading among liberal Democrats.

The thinking is that handicapped by the Mideast mess and dragging economy, Jimmy Carter might be persuaded to step aside and allow the convention to nominate Mondale, thereby carrying on the banner of the administration in which he served while still giving the electorate a fresh choice.

But to those who know the two men well, it is definitely wishful thinking. Mondale, who has played every bit as meaningful a role in the Carter administration as originally promised, is reported to be particularly anxious to squelch speculation on such an alternative.

And he has the enthusiastic assistance of campaign director Robert Strauss and party chairman John White, among others. All together, and providing the Carter handicaps do not prove to be of the uncontrollably proliferating variety between now and the Democrats August rendezvous in New York, they may be successful in squelching too vocal speculation, if not wishes.

Now about Rosalynn...

Letters to Editor

To the Editor:

I'm writing this letter because I'm deeply concerned and troubled. In April I (and others) noticed a black and gray dog in the fields north of Harvester Street. It was there all month. On April 30, I called the police station to report the dog. The girl who answered the phone said someone would be right out! I waited, but no one came. I then left town for a week and when I returned, the dog was still there.

A few days ago two more stray dogs appeared. They were in my neighbor's yard and when he tried to go to work one morning they growled and barked at him. He called the police. They said that someone would be right out! No one came. My neighbor went by the police station two or three days after he got off work and told them about the dogs. He was told that someone would be right out! No one came.

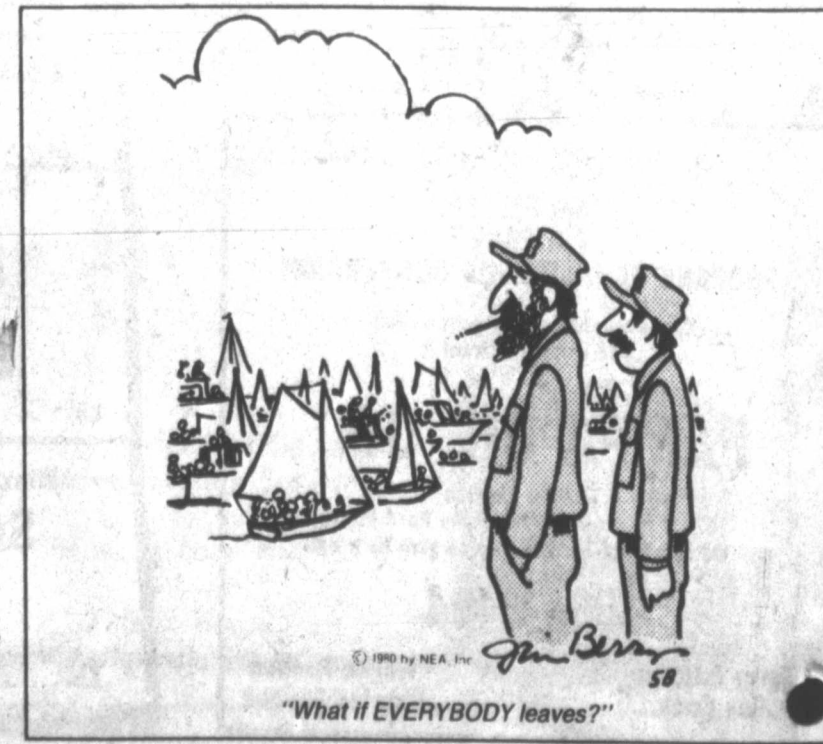

I have a trailer behind my home and the two dogs took up permanent residence there. One day, as my son was coming down the alley, they barked and growled at him. He called the police and was told someone would be right out! No one came. He waited 1 1/2 hours. I called again the following day - same thing.

On May 25, the black and gray dog was in the alley and the other two were in my mother's yard. She called the police. He said someone would be right out! She told him that we had been told that a number of times but no one showed up. He assured her that someone would be there quickly! No one came.

I realize that our police force is kept busy 24 hours a day and are trying to do a good job. However, sometime ago there was a rabies scare concerning some skunks, and citizens were told to call the police and report any stray animals. That's what we have done and I don't know what else to do. Someone could get bitten, and not knowing who the dogs belong to, would have to undergo the painful rabies shots. If this should happen, who will be to blame?

Retirement time goes into making cradles and dolls

Retirement created the opportunity for Mable Crossland and her husband, Clay, to show off their talents at art shows in the Pampa area. Their creative efforts with dolls and cradles will be displayed this weekend during the Top O' Texas Poor Boy Show, scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Pampa Mall.

The couple works jointly on their projects, she says, with her husband constructing the cradles from hardwood and staining or painting them. Mrs. Crossland sews and stuffs a mattress and pillow for each cradle and sews or crochets a coverlet to complete the doll's bed.

Handy with a needle, she also sews dolls, animals and toys, embroidering features and making appropriate accessories. Some projects take only a few hours to complete, while putting the hair on one doll may take up to four hours.

"I work on an assembly-line process," says Mrs. Crossland, who says that she worked on one during the war. She may spend one day cutting out dolls, another day stitching them up or stuffing them, a day embroidering faces or making doll clothes, and another day making shoes.

A new project the couple is working on is a doll-sized canopy bed—painted, accented and ruffled to compete with any life-size furnishing.

Mrs. Crossland, who says she's always been "crafty," has made up many of the patterns she uses, and is eager to try out some English patterns, recently given to her by her daughter-in-law.

"I think anybody who's kind of creative can take a basic pattern and do things with it," she says.

The couple has lived in Pampa since 1950. Clay Crossland is semi-retired from a local oil company and his wife worked as a fabric store sales clerk before retirement. They have two sons, Butch and Gary, and four grandchildren.

Pets still popular

NEW YORK (AP) — Approximately 55 percent of the nation's households support at least one pet, with many having more than one, estimate officials at the Pet Information Bureau.

Dogs and cats continue as the nation's favorite pets. Sales of dog and cat products increased almost 200 percent in the past 10 years.

Birds, fish and small animals such as hamsters and gerbils have greatly increased in popularity during recent years, the bureau notes, in large part because of smaller living quarters.

DOLLS AND CRADLES have provided hours of post-retirement pleasure for Mable Crossland, right. Her husband, Clay, constructs the cradles while she sews bedclothes and dolls. The couple will exhibit their artistic talents Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the second annual Poor Boy Show, to be displayed in the Pampa Mall.

More than 60 artists and craftsmen from Pampa and the Texas Panhandle will be featured this weekend at the second annual Top O' Texas Poor Boy Show.

Hours for the show, which will be displayed at the Pampa Mall, are Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m.

The show, coordinated by Wayne Cox and Loyd Waters, was set up last year to urge local artists to display their talents.

A Pampa businessman, Cox teaches watercolor at Clarendon College, Pampa Center. Also a student, he studies with Danny Gamble, Scott Williams and Jon Birdsong. Cox has worked in watercolor for about six years, using the scenery of the Texas Panhandle as the subject of most of his paintings.

He has shown his works in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico, and has a studio at his home. He and his wife Jeannette live at 1311 Christine.

Waters, athletic director at Pampa High School, also works in watercolors. Formerly dean and director of Clarendon College, Pampa Center, he recently moved back to Pampa from Clovis, N.M.

Rural scenes of the Panhandle and eastern New Mexico are the subject matter of many of his paintings. His works have been displayed in several shows and galleries in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma.

Waters has studied under Wayne Cox, Birdsong and Gamble. A native of Pampa, he and his wife, Thelma, live at 2526 Christine with their two daughters.

Other Pampa artists showing their creativity will be: Mary Noel, ceramics; Lois Minnick, oils and puppet birds; Linda Nowell, oils; J.F. Clark, carpet scrap rugs; Will Braezeale, photography; Paula Gilbreath, tile and macramé; Pam Dittberner, ceramics; Ed and Janice Sackett, photography, pottery and painting;

Sallie Schmidt, painting on glass, crockery pots; Billie Reddell, stuffed toys and crafts; Mimi Gross, watercolor miniatures; Jan Pyne and Cori Lee Heckman, oils and watercolors; Dale Robbins, rocks and gems; Wayne Cox, watercolors; and Loyd Waters, watercolors.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: An attractive, blonde, 53-year-old divorcee is renting our small guest house. We heard that she was involved in a scandal back East, so she left her home and family and came West to live on a limited income.

The last six months she has been chasing our 92-year-old neighbor—a very wealthy widower who is alert, lively and in remarkably good health.

It all began when she started taking him special foods and phoning him several times a day. Now the affair has progressed to where she has been spending most of her nights at his place!

This lovely man has given up most of his old friends, and his faithful, Old World housekeeper of many years is so shocked, she is quitting.

Half of my family says there's no fool like an old fool and if she takes him to the cleaners, he asked for it. The other half is so disgusted by this blatant fortune hunter that they want us to throw her out of the rental. They say that by not doing so we are a party to it.

Please give us your opinion.

TURNED-OFF LANDLORDS
DEAR TURNED OFF: Your tenant's private life is none of your business. Furthermore, if you should throw her out of your rental, the lovely, lively 92-year-old widower will probably take the poor, homeless lady in!

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one of those "Never thought I'd write to Dear Abby" persons.

I have a daughter-in-law who never calls me to extend a dinner invitation. She always has our son do the calling, which irritates me, as there is no reason why she can't call me personally.

This seems to be a common problem among mothers-in-law. I truly want a good relationship with my son's wife and will abide by your decision. If you print this as a help to other mothers-in-law in the same boat, sign me...

IRRITATED
DEAR IRRITATED: If you truly want a good relationship with your son's wife, you will not make an issue of who does the calling. Just be grateful for the invitation. Most mothers-in-law seldom see their sons unless Mom does the inviting.

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on the controversy concerning bullfighting. What surprises us Spanish people is that Americans condemn bullfighting but see nothing wrong with the outrageous savagery of their so-called sport, "boxing."

How can you condemn bullfighting and approve the brutality of two human beings beating each other with the ultimate purpose of knocking the opponent unconscious, which at times has caused fatal results?

It is inconceivable to us that a civilized country permits such inhumane contests causing swollen eyes, bloody noses and faces beaten to a bloody pulp!

Abby, please be less concerned about our bulls, and show more compassion for your fellow man by trying to outlaw boxing.

DAVID FRONSECA, EAST RIDGE, TENN.

DEAR DAVID: At the risk of opening another bull session, I'll repeat my comment: "All sports in which blood (animal or human) is spilled should be outlawed." However, in boxing, the boxer comes into the ring voluntarily, of his own free will. In bullfighting, the poor bull has no choice.

DR. LAMB

SHOP PAMPA

DEAR DR. LAMB—I wish you would clarify the difference between Rh positive and Rh negative parents. Isn't it true that two Rh positive parents can have an Rh negative child? Both my husband and I are Rh positive and we have an Rh negative daughter. I wouldn't want either my daughter or my husband to think I had been unfaithful.

DEAR READER—You're absolutely right and you can rest easy. However, if an Rh positive mother under these circumstances should have an Rh negative baby it will not cause the typical Rh problems that are usually discussed. That occurs only when the mother is Rh negative and the baby is Rh positive. It is true that if both parents are Rh negative then they will have only Rh negative children. It's rather complicated but here's the explanation. We have two genes that determine whether we're Rh positive or Rh negative. The Rh positive gene is big D. The Rh negative gene is little d. If both genes are big D (DD) such a person is homozygous Rh positive type. If both genes are little d (dd) that person is homozygous Rh negative. Now what if a person has one big D gene and one little d gene (Dd)? That person still types out as Rh positive (called heterozygous Rh positive). If both parents are heterozygous (Dd), the laws of chance say that one out of four of their offspring will have a pair of big Ds (DD), one will have paired little ds (dd) and two will be heterozygous (Dd).

If both genes in both parents are positive (DD), all of their offspring will be Rh positive.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

May 28, 1980

Some unproductive alliances you formed will go by the boards this coming year. New associations you make will be stronger and more mutually beneficial.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be a peacemaker, not a troublemaker, where family discussions are concerned today. A serious rumble could ensue if your judgment is biased. Getting along with other signs is one of the sections you'll enjoy in your Astro-Graph Letter, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is not the day to try to shift your responsibilities to others. You could become enraged if someone attempts to do so to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be very careful of whom you take advice from concerning things that could cost you money. You'll deeply resent it if such counsel proves faulty.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Avoid situations today where you know the odds are stacked against you. It's folly to think you can beat the percentages.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Even though you may feel strongly that you have a good idea today, others might not be equally enthralled. Listen to their criticism without becoming angry.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Because you're always willing to pay your fair share, freeloaders annoy you. You may become especially disgusted with them today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Steer clear of individuals whose purposes are not in harmony with yours. Wrong associations could cause big complications.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a chance that you may become involved with someone in a venture where you both make mistakes. Share the blame equally instead of pointing fingers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is not a good day to poke your nose into the affairs of another. You could be drawn into a sticky situation from which you'd have difficulty extricating yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Family problems are best kept within the home today. Airing them in public could cause others to think less of all involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be very careful of how you deal with coworkers today. Problems could arise over how things should be done. No one should be overly insistent upon having his or her way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be careless with another's possessions today and don't permit them to be careless with yours. Something unfortunate could happen in either case.

Nicholas hits 29 at Amarillo

If there's anything to reincarnation, Juanita Nicholas of Pampa could have been Annie Oakley in a previous life.

If not, well, Mrs. Nicholas is still blessed with the same unerring eye and steady hand of the famed marksman on Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

During the Hunter's Pistol Metallic Silhouette Match last weekend in Amarillo, Mrs. Nicholas shot an outstanding 29 score to outdo both female and male sharpshooters.

She also won the the Amarillo traveling trophy for the highest score by a woman. She keeps the trophy until someone betters a 29.

Mrs. Nicholas is a national champion, having won the women's pistol silhouette title last year in Wichita, Kansas. She whipped the top women shooters in the United States.

Mrs. Nicholas wasn't the only female winner from Pampa. Diana Tidwell registered a 14 in Ladies Class A to bring home first-place honors at Amarillo.

In the men's category, Steve Barnes of Pampa shot a 5 to win the Junior Class title while Dick Blain, also of Pampa, placed fourth in Class AA with a 21.

Ninty-one shooters enjoyed perfect weather during the match. Nine shooters were from Pampa.

Fritsch involved in fatality

DALLAS (AP) — A grand jury will be asked to decide whether charges of involuntary manslaughter or reckless homicide should be filed against Toni Fritsch, Houston Oiler kicker who was involved in a fatal automobile accident Monday night.

John Feinglas, an investigator for the Dallas Police Department, said Fritsch had been drinking, but was not legally intoxicated, at the time of the accident at 9:23 p.m.

Nelda K. Burks, 41, of Plano, Texas, a passenger in a rented 1980 Volkswagen Rabbit driven by Fritsch, was killed when the car went out of control on busy North Central Expressway in the north Dallas suburb of Richardson.

Fritsch was taken to Parkland Hospital in Dallas with a broken jaw, broken shoulder and three broken ribs, officials said. Mrs. Burks, the former wife of a Texas Ranger, was pronounced dead at Parkland at 10:40 p.m. of massive head and chest injuries.

Police said Fritsch was southbound on a service road when he missed an entrance ramp. The car crossed the shoulder, two lanes of southbound traffic, crossed the median into the northbound traffic lanes and flipped into a northbound vehicle, officers said.

Seven persons were injured in that vehicle, but all were released except for a 67-year-old woman who was listed in serious condition Tuesday with a broken wrist, cracked ribs, head injuries, severe lacerations and a bruised chest.

The accident will be referred without charges to the Dallas County grand jury, police said.

"This is a routine referral because the woman who was killed was a passenger in the car that was in violation," investigator Ray Hawkins said.

"Had somebody in another car been killed, he (Fritsch) would probably have been put in jail and a charge of involuntary manslaughter referred," Hawkins said.

No tickets were issued by police.

WTSU placed on probation

CANYON, Texas (AP) — The president of West Texas State University accepted the 2-year probation slapped on his school Tuesday by the Missouri Valley Conference and said changes have been made to correct the irregularities.

"Even though some of the violations might be considered minor and technicalities, my characterization is they're all serious, and where we've not done something right, we need to see that we don't do it again," said Max Sherman.

WTSU teams will be prohibited from participating in bowl games or NCAA post-season championship play in five sports during the probation period.

The sports are basketball, football, golf, tennis and track.

The school was ordered to forfeit all victories in the 1979-80 school year in which 25 athletes in five sports participated. The list of games involved is still being tabulated, league commissioner Dave Price said.

The MVC cited the school for recruiting violations in basketball and for failing to meet academic eligibility standards in other sports.

"The matter of determining eligibility for athletes has been taken out of the hands of the athletic department and given to the registrar, where it should have been all along," Sherman said.

"In not only basketball, but all sports, the coaches have been admonished to know what the rules are, to have a copy of both the NCAA and Missouri Valley guidelines, and if you're in a gray area, to ask first and not get in this problem afterward," the WTSU president added.

"It's something you wished hadn't happened, but we can benefit from it by getting our own situation in better shape," Sherman said.

The Buffs will be unable to take part in the league's TV basketball games or share in the receipts the conference gains from them.

The MVC said the violations included practice and playing by ineligible students, illegal financial aid, insufficient hours of passing classwork, pre-paid airplane tickets for athletes from their homes, excess number of visits to a recruit, and the purchase of a hamburger and soft drink for a prospective athlete when a recruiter visited him.

The conference said it would turn its findings over to the NCAA for whatever action it wishes to take.

Four basketball players were given pre-paid airline tickets through a travel agency from their homes to Amarillo, near Canyon where WTSU is located, the MVC said. The student athletes later paid for the tickets.

"I don't know all the specifics on the recruiting allegations. I know there were different interpretations on what happened, but there was enough of a question about the way it was handled," Sherman said.

"You can't treat an athlete different than you can another student. In other words, would you do the same thing for a nursing student, and that's one of the things you get into."

The league also said "a high degree of probability" existed that member of the basketball staff transported a prospective student athlete to enroll at Amarillo Junior College for the 1979 fall semester.

Many of the athletes ruled ineligible were so declared not because of poor grades but because they practiced or played before a final determination on their eligibility had been made, Sherman said.

"The NCAA requires a high school athlete to have a 2.0 average before he can compete.

DANNY BUZZARD of Pampa has been chosen to play in the annual Texas-Oklahoma Oil Bowl football game Aug. 8 in Wichita Falls. Buzzard, a 230-pounder who plays both ways at tackle, reports for workouts Aug. 1. Buzzard, who graduates this spring, is headed for Texas Tech on a football scholarship. Danny is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark A. Buzzard.

NL baseball roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSESEN
AP Sports Writer

Don Sutton of the Los Angeles Dodgers threw six good pitches in the third inning Tuesday night and struck out the first two Cincinnati batters.

Then he threw eight bad ones, walking Dave Collins and Dave Concepcion.

Then he threw three worse ones, resulting in consecutive home runs by Ken Griffey, George Foster and Dan Driessen.

Finally, Sutton recovered his touch and delivered three more good pitches, striking out the side.

But the damage — five runs worth — had been done and the Reds went on to defeat the Dodgers 6-1 behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike LaCoss.

"I just threw three bad pitches to three guys who can knock the ball out of Yellowstone Park," Sutton said with a shrug.

In other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in 13 innings, the Houston Astros nipped the San Diego Padres 4-3, the Chicago Cubs downed the Montreal Expos 4-2, the New York Mets trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 9-5 and the Atlanta Braves defeated the San Francisco Giants 6-3.

By losing, the Dodgers saw their lead in the NL West sliced to two games over the Astros and Reds, who are in a virtual tie for second place.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2
Pinch hitter Mike Easler singled home the winning run in the 13th inning as the Pirates snapped a three-game losing streak and reclaimed first place in the NL East by one game over the Phillies.

Bill Madlock opened the 13th with a single off reliever Dickie Noles' glove and was sacrificed to second. After Phil Garner struck out, the Phillies elected to walk pinch hitter Ed Ott but Easler spoiled the strategy with a single that snapped Philadelphia's five-game winning streak. Pittsburgh's Jim Bibby took a five-hit shutout and a 4-0 lead into the bottom of the ninth but Bake McBride drew a one-out walk and Mike Schmidt blasted a two-out, two-run homer, his 13th of the season, tops in the majors.

Astros 4, Padres 3
A two-run triple by Jeff Leonard in the fourth inning and a run-scoring single by Jose Cruz in the eighth rallied Houston. Cruz' two-out single scored Craig Reynolds from second to break a 3-3 tie. Reynolds had walked and stolen his first base of the season to move into scoring position. A single by Cruz and Enos Cabell's triple tied the score 3-3 in the sixth. Unbeaten reliever Frank LaCorte won his third game by pitching two shutout innings, lowering his earned run average to 0.27.

Cubs 4, Expos 2
Ken Henderson, making his first start since coming off the disabled list last week, followed Jerry Martin's double with a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning, leading Chicago over Montreal. Gary Carter's home run helped the Expos to a 2-0 lead but the Cubs tied it in the third when Lenny Randle doubled and Ivan DeJesus homered.

Mets 9, Cardinals 5
Unbeaten rookie Mark Bombard allowed six hits in 7-1/3 innings for his third victory and contributed a two-run double to a 14-hit New York attack as the Mets handed the Cardinals their 14th loss in 16 games. Jerry Morales and Steve Henderson also drove in two runs apiece for the Mets, who were helped by two St. Louis errors and a misplayed fly ball which fell for a triple.

Entry deadline draws near

Tournament chairman Bob Blake and tournament director David Martin are both looking for a record number of entries in the Pampa Tennis Open June 5-8.

Tournament proceeds will go toward construction of new indoor tennis facilities at the Pampa Youth and Community Center.

Amarillo's Mike Loftin and Kim Clark are expected to return to defend their titles.

Loftin downed Pampa High tennis coach David Martin to take the men's trophy last year while Clark defeated local favorite Kris Douglass to aim the women's title.

Douglass, who was top-seeded last summer, could win it all this year after an impressive second-place finish in the prestigious Coca-Cola Open last month in Houston.

Douglass won four of five singles matches and teamed with Terri Smith of Dallas to capture the doubles crown.

Douglas is a freshman member of the Texas A&M tennis squad this spring.

Entry deadline is June 2 for juniors and June 4 for adults. Entry fees are six dollars for singles and 12 for per doubles teams. Checks must be mailed payable to Pampa Tennis Club and entries mailed to tournament director David Martin, Box 178, Pampa, Texas. Participants should list the events they are entering and the name of their doubles partner on the entry.

The junior division begins play at 9 a.m. June 5 at the high school tennis courts while the adult division gets underway at 9 a.m. June 7 at the same location.

Scheduled events in the adult division are men's and women's A and B division singles and doubles along with men's 35 singles and doubles.

In the junior division, 14-18 boys' and girls' singles and doubles and 12 boys' singles are among the listed divisions.

Pigeon results

Jim Cantrell had the top flyer in the Top of Texas Racing Pigeon Club last weekend.

Cantrell's pigeon was timed at 1688.22 yards per minute from Organ, New Mexico to Pampa.

Margie Moore had three fliers that placed second (1661.92), fourth (1624.84) and sixth (1618.09).

Other placings went to Marion Waldrop, third, 1654.19, and V.C. Moore, fifth, 1620.18.

The weather was clear and calm at the starting gate, but the 59 pigeons encountered southwesterly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour on the 400-mile trek.

Greg Manning of Maryland had a 90.8 free-throw percentage and was 64.3 from the field in the 1979-80 college basketball season.

Thursday's Games

Chicago at Minnesota
 Only game scheduled
Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 4
 Carl Yastrzemski, a late-inning replacement for ailing Jim Rice, hit a two-run homer in the ninth to lead Boston past Toronto.

Yastrzemski, who replaced Rice in left field at the start of the seventh when the Boston outfielder complained of dizziness, lined reliever Tom Buskey's first pitch into the Fenway Park bleachers beyond the Toronto bullpen in right field for his sixth homer.

Yastrzemski scored behind Carlton Fisk, who had walked on a 3-2 pitch hotly disputed by Buskey.

Earlier, Lloyd Moseby's two-run homer capped a three-run fifth to give the Blue Jays a 4-2 lead at the time. Rick Burleson's RBI single in the bottom of the fifth cut Toronto's lead to 4-3.

Yankees 9, Tigers 6
 Jim Spencer drove in three runs and Reggie Jackson two in an eight-run second inning that boosted New York over Detroit. Led by Spencer's two-run single and RBI double, the Yankees got nine hits in their big second inning off Dan Petry and reliever John Hiller.

Mike Griffin pitched 5-3 innings for New York before he was shelved out in a four-hit, five-run Detroit sixth highlighted by Rick Peters' grand slam.

Indians 7, Orioles 6
 Tom Verzer's RBI single with two out capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning, leading Cleveland over Baltimore.

Toby Harrah had tied the score for Cleveland with a one-out homer off Dave Ford and Joe Charboneau followed with a double. Tim Stoddard relieved Ford, and after Cliff Johnson grounded to the mound, Verzer lined his game-winning hit.

The Orioles had taken a 6-5 lead in the sixth on Rich Dauer's RBI single.

Brewers 4, Mariners 1
 Rickey "Buster" Keeton, making his first major league appearance, and Bob McClure teamed up to pitch a three-hitter while Sixto Lezcano smashed a two-run double in a three-run first inning to lead Milwaukee over Seattle.

Keeton, 23, called up from Vancouver Sunday, gave up two hits in the first inning and later retired 16 of 17 batters over one stretch. A gangly sinkerball specialist, Keeton allowed three hits before McClure relieved after seven innings.

Gervin asks to be traded

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Unhappy three-time NBA scoring champion George Gervin wants to be traded because of an impasse over a new contract. But San Antonio Spurs officials say they have no immediate plans to put Gervin on the market.

Gervin "reluctantly" made the trade demand Tuesday after rejecting what was described as the team's final offer for a new contract, said Gervin attorney-agent Pat Healy of Tacoma, Wash.

Spurs President Angelo Drossos confirmed Tuesday night that the team plans no more offers, and noted that the 6-foot-7 All-Star guard has three years remaining on his current contract.

"George will continue to be a member of the Spurs until we find some reason that a trade would be to the best interest of the Spurs," said Drossos. "We are not seeking a trade, nor do we plan on seeking a trade."

Healy had said earlier Tuesday that the two sides were at a "total contractual impasse," leaving Gervin no choice but to demand a trade.

But Healy left open a "remote hope" that the situation could be resolved if Spurs officials are willing. His prepared statement also was carefully worded and less harsh.

"It does not appear that the difference between the Spurs and George can be resolved," Healy said in the statement. "Therefore, considering the contractual impasse, that the Spurs are coachless and that the expansion and college drafts are pending, George would reluctantly accept a suitable trade."

Gervin, 28, was out of town and unavailable for comment, but Healy has served as Gervin's spokesman throughout the controversy.

Spurs officials agreed at the end of the season to renegotiate Gervin's contract — after Gervin averaged 33.1 points per game and won his third consecutive NBA scoring crown.

Gervin has three years remaining on a contract reportedly paying $350,000 per year, which he complains is only a third of what other top NBA stars earn. That contract also is not guaranteed.

"George Gervin has a contract," Drossos said Tuesday night. "That contract will be fulfilled by the Spurs, and we expect it to be fulfilled by George."

Drossos had broken his own team rules last month and announced that the Spurs had given Gervin a choice of a 5-year, $2.85 million deal or a $5.3 million contract spread over 35 years.

Gervin, who was seeking a 7-year deal worth $1 million per year, had rejected both Spurs offers before Drossos made them public.

Healy said Tuesday's "final offer" was "a very minimal change upward" from the original $2.85 million offer.

"George is willing to come down substantially from a million dollars because he wants to stay in San Antonio," said Healy. "There is a total contractual impasse. What's left for us? We're going nowhere. Everyone is frustrated."

Naber, Rudolph remember feats

By HAL BOCK
 AP Sports Writer

The moments are frozen in their memories, magic moments when they were the very best in the world at what they did best.

No Olympic boycott can ever take those moments away from swimmer John Naber and sprinter Wilma Rudolph.

In 1976 at Montreal, Naber captured four gold medals and a silver. Sixteen years before, in Rome, Rudolph became the first American woman to take home three golds.

For both of them, and for the rest of us as well, they were moments to remember.

"I think the race I remember best, the one I'm fondest of, was the 100-meter backstroke," Naber said. "It is the race that sticks in my mind."

You would think that in the Olympic pool, with water splashing around you, adrenalin would take over and a swimmer would rely on his instincts, not terribly aware of the kind of show he was putting on in any given race. But that's just not true. At least it wasn't for Naber.

"Swimmers have something we call 'the catch,'" he said. The catch involves a swimmer's stroke and how he moves through the water. "Well, in that race, I had perfect catch," Naber continued.

"Every stroke was perfect. I knew it was going very well."

So did the other swimmers. After the race, Roland Matthes of East Germany, the defending champion who had to settle for a bronze at Montreal, paid tribute to Naber. "If I could have, I'd have stopped halfway and applauded," he said. It was the ultimate compliment from one athlete to another.

Naber later struck Olympic gold again in the 200-meter backstroke and a pair of relay races.

Rudolph's magic moments came in 1960 when she ran right through the women's track competition at Rome, winning the 100 and 200-meter dashes and anchoring the USA's gold medal 400-meter relay team. Her memories of the individual races are mostly funny, though.

"I was scared," she said, "a nervous wreck." Why? "Well, you know the commands before a race: 'On your mark...Get set...Go!' Well, I couldn't remember the commands in Italian."

But somehow Rudolph overcame the handicap to win her golds.

The medals are nice, of course, solid evidence that they were the very best. And yet the other things these Olympians remember overlap the races they won. There is more to competing in the Games than merely winning, you see. There are the memories, magic moments that Naber and Rudolph can hang on to forever, memories America's 1980 Olympians won't have.

Naber and Rudolph are touring the country as part of an Olympic project sponsored by Minute Maid, the Coca Cola Company's food division.

The corporation is determined, boycott notwithstanding, that America's 1980 Olympians will not be overlooked. It will present special awards to athletes who qualify for the team and establish training funds in the names of America's top performers in each of the 23 Summer Game sports.

Swim, baton lessons offered

Pampa Youth and Community Center is still enrolling youngsters for the summer swim lessons to be offered during June, July and August.

The morning-hour sessions are scheduled from June 2-13, June 16-27, June 30-July 11, July 14-25, July 28-Aug. 8 and Aug. 11-28.

All phases of the age group lessons will be offered, including polywogs (4-6 years), but not in first grade this year; beginners (6 years and up), advanced beginners, intermediates and swimmers.

Youngsters can be enrolled at the youth center during open hours.

The center also plans to offer baton lessons to youngsters.

Lessons start June 9 and run Monday, Wednesday and Friday for eight weeks. Classes start at 1:30 p.m. with beginners, followed by advanced classes of dance or routine.

To enroll, a child must be a youth center member or have a balanced baton.

Conner, Talavera claim top spots

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Bart Conner, one of the best gymnasts in America, says he plans to compete long after the 1980 Olympic Games are over.

"When we came down here, we knew full well that we weren't going," said the 22-year-old University of Oklahoma student, who captured the No. 1 spot on the men's Olympic gymnastics team Tuesday night.

"I plan on competing long past the Olympic games (this summer), maybe one or two more Olympics," he said. "I treated this as just another important competition. I don't think of the ramifications of the team that won't go."

Conner said he adjusted his attitude throughout the boycott controversy from one of disbelief into one of acceptance.

"You say 'Okay, what's important to me?' I decided to compete... I can still hang on. For some of the guys who are marginal, this was the crowning blow."

Conner, 22, who finished competition Tuesday with a torn muscle in his right bicep, had led the men's event going into the final.

Tracey Talavera led 21 competitors for the six spots on the women's national team.

Talavera, a slim 13-year-old who captured the hearts of the 8,068 fans who packed the Jacksonville Coliseum, said she had been inspired by Romania's star Nadia Comaneci, who dominated the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

"The whole Romanian team was good and Nadia Comaneci — she just hits all the time," said Talavera after winning the top overall spot on the team.

"I'm just glad it's over," added the 4-foot-9, 74 1/2-pound athlete. "Even though we're not going to Moscow, it's an honor to make the team, and everybody wants to be on it but only six can."

Joining Conner on the men's team are Jim Hartung, 19, of Nebraska; Peter Vidmar, 18, a UCLA freshman; Ron Galimore, 21, of Iowa State; Philip Cahoy, 18, of Nebraska; Larry Gerard, 25, of Nebraska, and one alternate, Mike Wilson, 23, of the University of Oklahoma.

Joining Talavera on the women's squad are Kathy Johnson, 20; Marcia Frederick, 17; Luci Collins, 15; Amy Koopman, 13; Julianne McNamara, no age available; and Beth Kline, 13. The hometowners and schools of the women were not available.

Talavera scored 76.95 to win the overall title, followed by Johnson at 76.50 and Frederick at 76.150.

Conner wound up with 57.20 points in the optional competition for a total of 115.20, while Hartung followed close behind with 114.30. Vidmar was third at 114.25.

Although the U.S. team will not go to Moscow, the athletes will compete in various international meets, including events in West Germany and the Netherlands. The team also will tour the United States.

Two medical philosophies merge to insure patient care

GROVE CITY, Pa. (AP) — Grove City was a little town with two little hospitals, neither of which could fill its beds.

Solution: merge the two. Simple enough, except that one was run by medical doctors, the other by osteopaths, whose schools of medicine have rivaled each other for the past century.

But the merger went through, and the new United Community Hospital symbolizes a rather remarkable alliance between two old antagonists.

"Years ago, there was a lot of strong feeling," recalls long-time Grove City resident Alvin Schell, who is also board chairman of United Community. "You were a Republican or you were a Democrat. You went to an osteopath or you went to a medical doctor."

United Community is the result of the 1978 joining of Grove City Hospital, which practiced traditional (allopathic) medicine, and Bashline Memorial Hospital, an osteopathic institution.

"We put aside a lot of our biases," said Dr. Ray Saloom, an osteopath and chief of staff of the new hospital in this Mercer County community about 60 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Osteopaths, to their chagrin, often are confused with chiropractors, who do not have medical degrees.

Osteopaths receive the same training as medical doctors. They perform surgery and prescribe drugs, but they also believe in manipulating the body for proper alignment and blood flow and in treating the body as a whole.

Since the merger, United Community has operated in the buildings of the two old hospitals, less than one mile apart. By the end of 1981, a new $17.5 million complex approved by the regional health planning agency is expected to be ready, and the old buildings will be sold.

Construction — slated to begin this fall — depends on the sale of $14 million in bonds. In addition, $900,000 was raised privately.

"It was a landmark achievement...the fact that together the two groups would spend millions of dollars building a new hospital," said Tom Travers of the state health department, who reviewed the building plans.

The new hospital will have 128 beds, 50 fewer than the old hospitals had together. The figure was based on regional health surveys. The work force will be trimmed through attrition, said Administrator G.B. Serrill.

Separately, Bashline and Grove City operated at barely 54 percent capacity. Services were duplicated. Neither could get government approval for capital improvements needed to meet state and professional safety and health codes. And since the population of the four counties they served had stabilized, no relief was in sight.

"It was difficult to attract top-notch physicians because there wasn't enough at one place to keep them busy," said Saloom.

United Community's present staff has 15 medical doctors, 11 doctors of osteopathy and one doctor with both degrees. Saloom said the anticipated disputes between osteopaths and allopaths never materialized.

"Twenty or 25 years ago, this would never have happened," said Schell, who recalled an incident when he was injured playing high school football. Although he had been examined by the school physician, an M.D., his parents insisted on taking him to an osteopath for reassurance and confirmation.

residents, where there are no bars and life is dominated by a 102-year-old Presbyterian college.

As staunch patient loyalty to one medical philosophy or the other faded, and the staffs of the two hospitals began to mix, all it took was a final financial push to get the institutions to merge.

The change in Grove City seems to reflect a larger trend. The American Medical Association and the American Osteopathic Association profess mutual respect these days, even though the two branches of medicine largely maintain separate hospitals and state licensing boards.

The 14 osteopathic medical colleges in the country, for instance, are approved by the AMA. In California, voters approved a referendum to do away with the distinction between M.D. and D.O. But the state Supreme Court later ruled that an osteopath be prevented from using his title.

About 75 to 80 percent of osteopaths engage in general practice, compared to 25 percent for medical doctors.

Many people don't know the difference, but the nation's 18,000 osteopaths do.

TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Clark Bolt was named Tuesday as information director for the Texas Animal Health Commission.

Bolt has been farm editor of the Waco Tribune-Herald since 1949 and has 25 years of experience in radio and television farm programs, said Dr. John Holcombe, executive director of the commission.

TOM BEAN, Texas (AP) — Former residents of this small North Texas town will gather for a reunion the weekend of June 1.

Tom Bean is named after its founder, Col Tom Bean, a 19th-century Bonham surveyor and landowner who donated 50 acres and a railroad right-of-way to start the settlement.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Nobel Prize-winning Harvard physicist Steven Weinberg said Tuesday he will join the University of Texas next fall as a visiting professor.

Weinberg said the one-year appointment might be extended to a permanent post on the faculty here.

The scientist has been at Harvard for seven years and was actively courted by UT officials. UT physics professor William Drummond said the addition of Weinberg makes the physics department "without question one of the best in the country."

Weinberg shared the 1979 Nobel Prize with two other physicists who developed the Weinberg-Salam Theory of Weak Interactions. The hypothesis explains electromagnetism and nuclear force as manifestations of a common principle.

Look to NEW HORIZONS

With anticipation and hope, let's move onward and upward, using the future as our stepping stone to greater accomplishments. For through past achievements and continuing advancements in every field, we have the proven potential to see even our farthest goals become a reality.

There is no "impossible dream" when hard work, dedication and foresight exist. For that's what Progress is... non-stop energy, enduring optimism and far-sighted inquisitive people who never take "no" for an answer.

We're making Progress every step of the way... each and every day. Let's look to new horizons with the prospect of brighter tomorrows, greater achievements and envisioned dreams fulfilled.
