Tornado leaves Altus reeling

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — Strong straight winds, possibly spawned by numerous funnel clouds, ripped out power lines and damaged businesses and homes in this southwestern Oklahoma town Thursday night.

The police department and the local Oklahoma Highway Patrol headquarters building were about the only lighted spots here during the pre-dawn hours today. Both offices were provided power by emergency generators.

The winds blew and sucked glass from numerous businesses, tore the canopies from several service stations and drive-in restaurants, and overturned at least one mobile home.

There were no deaths and no serious injuries reported as a result of the storm, a Jackson County Memorial hospital spokesman said. Several persons were treated and released after they suffered minor injuries such as cuts from flying glass.

Electrical power throughout Altus, a town exceeding 27,000 population, was knocked out by the storm. Other southwestern Oklahoma towns that experienced power blackouts included Mangum, Blair and Eldorado.

A Public Service Co. spokesman said crews were attempting to wire around approximately 50 miles of damaged cables south of Altus.

He said it would be late morning before electricity could be restored.

"I don't know if it was a tornado or not, but it was sure a strong wind," said John Barton, owner of the Park Main Pharmacy.

Wind gusts clocked as high as 80 mph damaged the northside shopping center where Barton's store is located. He said he estimates damage to his inventory at $40,000-$50,000.

Barton refused to guess about building damage, saying he would need to look at the structure in the daylight today. He said the roof was heavily damaged and most of the glass was sucked out of the windows.

Several other stores in the shopping center also were damaged, but owners were waiting until later today to complete estimates of their losses.

Altus police department dispatcher Jim Hughes said the storm hit about 8:15 p.m. He said local residents had enough warning they were able to go to storm shelters or other secure places.

The high winds were accompanied by heavy rain and a brilliant display of lightning. Rainfall amounts as high as four inches were reported in the area. Several streets and intersections that had been blocked late Thursday were passable early today but torrents of water were still running swiftly in roadside ditches.

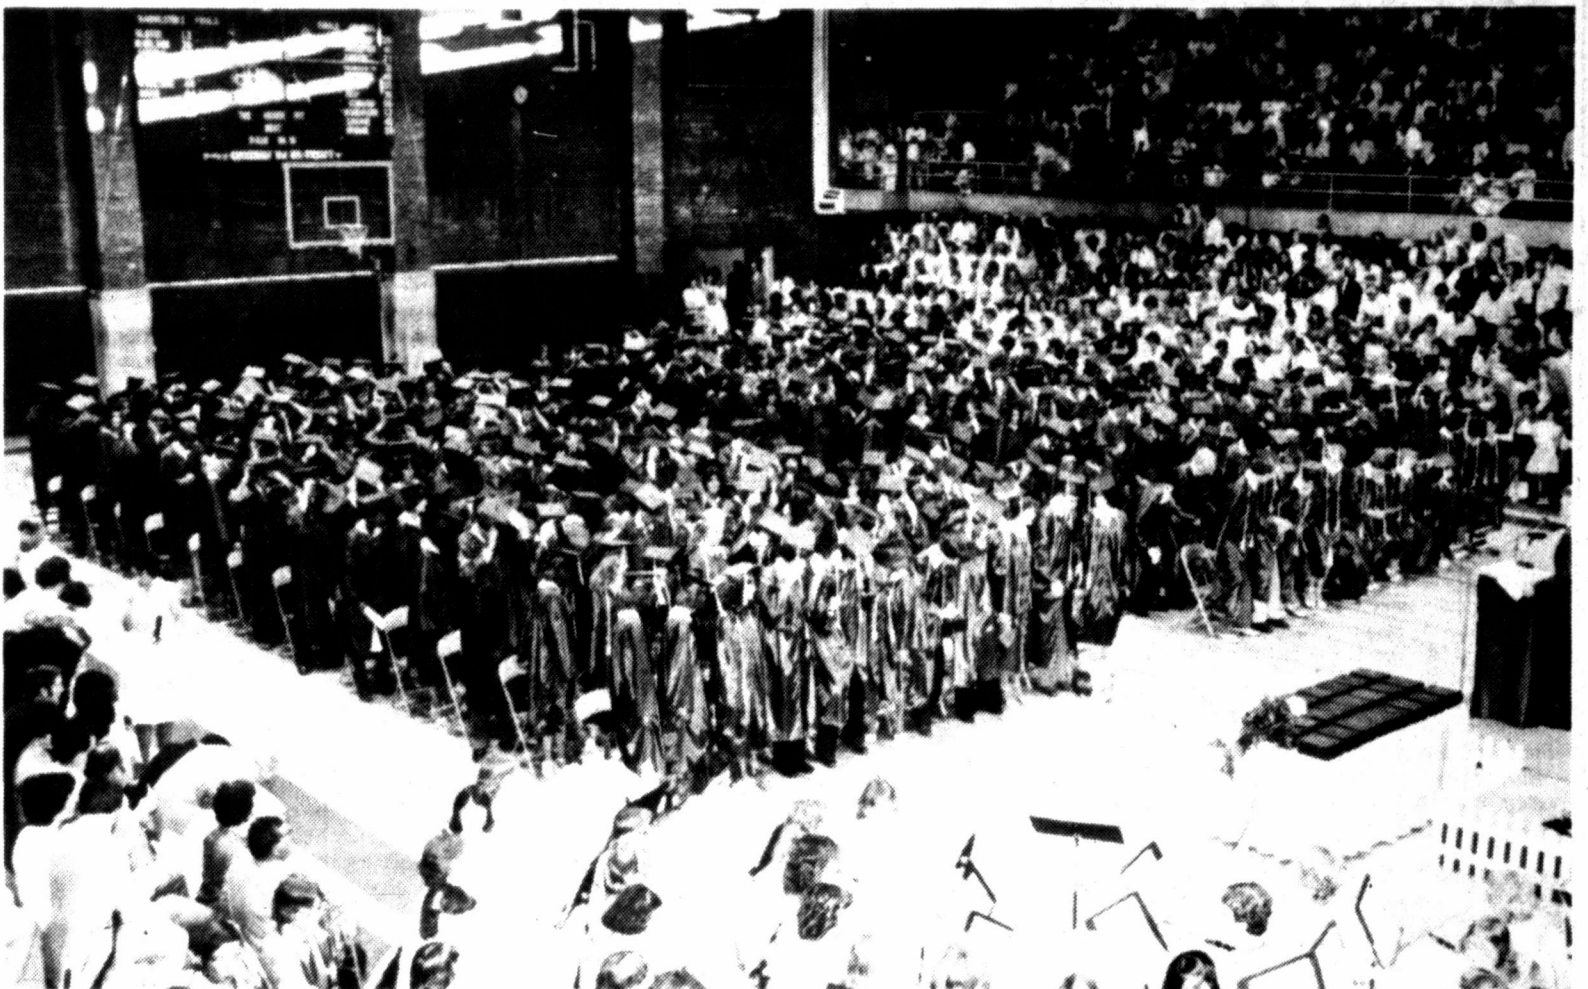

Police Chief Hoyt Benedict had threatened to arrest sightseers late Thursday night when heavy traffic began making it difficult for his officers to check damage and take injured residents to the hospital.

Extra police officers had been called to duty immediately after the storm but they were sent home early today. The patrolmen who are normally on night duty made frequent rounds to check damaged businesses to prevent looting.

In some residential areas, high water and limbs that had been stripped from trees made driving hazardous.

Altus Air Force Base officials advised only "essential personnel" to report for the midnight shift Thursday as high waters made the main gate impassable for several hours.

Winds from the Thursday night storm cells also overturned a mobile home and damaged barns and outbuildings near Wynnewood.

Funnels sighted after tornado hits Wellington

By The Associated Press

Funnel clouds moved across North Central Texas along the Red River early today as a thunderstorm system moved eastward out of the Texas Panhandle.

Several funnels were sighted around Electra, Iowa Park and Wichita Falls a few hours after a tornado touched down at Wellington in the Texas Panhandle, damaging some homes, tearing up some trees and knocking down some utility lines.

No injuries were reported at Wellington, a town of 3,200. The storm struck about 6 p.m. The sightings in North Central Texas came about 6 hours later.

Wellington was without electricity and telephone service early today, authorities said. Wellington was the third Panhandle town to be struck by a tornado in less than 24 hours. Earlier twisters struck at Tulia and Allison.

Wichita Falls had high winds and heavy rain as the storm passed. There were some reports of brief street flooding. The city got 1.95 inches of rain in a brief period of time.

Forecasts called for more scattered mostly afternoon and evening thunderstorms in West Texas and along the Red River into North Central Texas. Forecasters are warning that some of the activity in eastern sections of the Panhandle may be severe.

Scattered showers were forecast for South Texas.

The entire state was to have continued warm, humid weather. Highs were to be mostly in the 90s with extremes ranging from the middle 80s in the Panhandle to near 100 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Most of the state had cloudy skies before dawn today. Skies over West Texas, however, were mostly clear. Some fog developed along the lower Texas coast.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 48 at Dalhart to 78 at Brownsville.

Seniors told to face unknown, find peace

Three graduating seniors urged their fellow classmates to face the unknown head on, to have a positive attitude towards life and to find peace in this world — "our survival is at stake" — during graduation ceremonies in a packed, standing-room-only fieldhouse Thursday night.

Emotion and sadness, cheers and happiness, the fanning of programs against the heat, the flash of cameras and the occasional cries of hot, tired baby brothers and sisters marked the ceremonies in which 287 Pampa High School seniors received their diplomas.

To the traditional sounds of "Pomp and Circumstance," performed by the "Pride of Pampa" band, the seniors marched into the fieldhouse to take their places in the gymnasium.

The invocation was given by Greg Quarles, followed by a farewell performance of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the Pampa High School band and choir and their conductors, Jeff Doughten and John Woicikowski, who have both resigned from their positions.

Salutatorian Mary Skoog in her salutatory address urged seniors to "face the unknown head on."

"Isn't it a great feeling to know that we have completed 12 years of school?" she said.

"Now, we all face some type of unknown," she said.

"We continually regard a new experience as a nuisance and sometimes a threat. We must have the courage and faith to meet it head on," she said.

"We must challenge the unknown or risk the possibility of staying in the same place," she said.

"We must keep faith in our hearts and climb until our dreams come true."

Senior class president Steve Kotara said, "No matter what we all do in life, we all want the same thing — happiness."

"We all need to have a good, positive attitude towards life," Kotara said.

"Look for the stars — not the mud," Kotara urged his fellow classmates.

Valedictorian Pam Homer said, "The important thing is that we do what will make us happy. We will receive much advice for the future. We must be allowed to use our own judgment and make our own decisions."

"We must accept that people don't all think alike," she said.

"Somehow, we must find a way to bring peace to our lives and our homes. It's up to us — our survival is at stake," she said.

Cheers from the audience highlighted the presentation of diplomas, and Pampans extended special applause to foreign exchange student Matt Christianson.

Kim Gattis and Kellye Richardson directed the senior class in its final singing of the Alma Mater. The benediction was given by Mary Skoog, and the recession was performed by the Pampa High School band.

Truck drivers die in head-on near Groom

GROOM, Texas — Two truck drivers were killed Thursday night in a head-on collision on Interstate 40 near the intersection of Highway 70, the third head-on accident in that area within a month. The two victims were identified as Bernard Lee Chappell, 35, of Springdale, Ark., and Wade Ronald McHone, 47, of Daytona Beach, Fla.

Clarendon Department of Public Safety officers, who investigated the accident, said the accident occurred about 8 p.m. in a construction area where the highway narrowed from four lanes to two lanes about 12 miles east of Groom.

Officers said the westbound 1980 Kenworth semi-tractor trailer rig, driven by Chappell, veered off the right side of the highway, and Chappell apparently overcompensated in trying to bring the vehicle back to the highway. Investigators said the Chappell truck struck the eastbound semi-tractor trailer rig, driven by McHone, head on.

Officers said Chappell was trapped in his vehicle after the collision and was removed from the truck with the assistance of the "jaws of life" tool, provided by the Gray County Fire Department. The fire department was called to the scene at approximately 9:15 p.m. Fire departments from McLean and Clarendon also were dispatched to the scene.

Justice of the Peace E.W. Kent of Clarendon ruled both men dead at the scene of the accident.

Funeral services for Bernard Lee Chappell are pending with Robertson Funeral Home in Clarendon.

Funeral services for Wade Ronald McHone are pending with Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors in Amarillo.

Weather conditions call for a 40 percent chance of afternoon and evening thundershowers today, possible becoming locally heavy with damaging hail. It will continue to be partly cloudy and warm today through Saturday with highs in the mid 80s.

Cabot Machinery Division bought by Ingersoll-Rand

The Cabot Machinery Division has been sold to a New Jersey machinery and equipment manufacturing company. Cabot officials announced in a press conference at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce shortly before press time today.

The final negotiations were completed Thursday. Division Vice-President Vic Raymond said.

Ingersoll-Rand of New Jersey purchased the machinery division at a price of $130 million in cash, he said.

Also included in the sale, he said, was the assumption of certain liabilities by the purchaser.

The turnover should be completed in two months, he said.

"Basically," he said, "there will be no change." The computer system from the Hughes building and the personnel involved with it will be moved to the Machinery Division located west of the city on Highway 60.

Officials of the division are pleased with the sale and optimistic for the future of the division, Raymond said.

"We expect to grow at a rate even greater than (we did) with Cabot," he said.

The division will run as before, he said.

"We will continue as before with a high degree of autonomy," he said, with the guidance of Ingersoll-Rand.

Ingersoll-Rand is an international company with its headquarters located in Woodcliff Lakes, N.J. The 1979 sales of the corporation were in excess of $2.5 billion.

The sale, Raymond said, is seen as a major step in establishing Ingersoll-Rand in the oilfield equipment manufacturing industry.

Also, he said, with the purchase there will be continued development of the special application potential for high performance alloy steels.

Bob Sharper and John Cabot, corporation officials, are expected to be in Pampa next week, he said, with further details on the transaction.

This is the third major turnover in the local Cabot corporation, Raymond said. He listed the move three years ago of the Oil and Gas Division to Houston, the transfer of the Carbon Black Division to Atlanta, Ga. and the most recent move of the Engineering Division to St. Louis.

Miranda found guilty, sentenced to 20 years

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

A sentence of 20 years in the state penitentiary was handed down to Felipe Miranda after he was found to be guilty of the stabbing murder of a 20-year-old Pampa man in 31st District Court Thursday.

The seven man — five woman jury pronounced the 27-year-old Miranda guilty of "intentionally or knowingly" causing the death of Roy Dario Rosalez by stabbing him with a knife, at 429 N. Starkweather on April 19.

The jury arrived at the guilty verdict after retiring for 20 minutes. The punishment phase lasted two and half hours with one rest break, before jurors agreed on the 20-year prison sentence asked for by Assistant District Attorney Penny Burt.

A notice of appeal by defense attorney Rowdy Bowers was given to Judge Grainger McIlhenny after the sentencing.

"If the sentence is in excess of 15 years," District Attorney Harold Comer said, the subject must still go to jail and later be transferred to the penitentiary. With the longer sentences, the convicted person cannot be allowed out on appeal bond, he said.

Miranda offered testimony in his own defense Thursday morning, after a delay while it was determined whether a Spanish interpreter was necessary.

The primary contention of the defendant was that Rosalez had the knife while sitting in the chair and when Miranda entered the room, the victim rose to attack him. The two struggled for the weapon and Rosalez was accidentally stabbed in the fight.

Also, the defendant said, he had never spit on the floor as the testimony of eyewitness Robert Palmateer of 214 N. Cuyler indicated in Wednesday's proceedings.

The fight, he said, was over a mutual friend the two were trying to find.

Miranda also contended he had won the fist fight between he and Rosalez when he kicked the victim in the groin. The injuries to his head and nose, the defendant stated, were made while the two were returning to the Starkweather address and Rosalez attacked him from behind.

After the stabbing, Miranda told the jury, he returned to his home to watch television until the police arrived.

During Wednesday's testimony of state's witness, Palmateer, he demonstrated by diagram what he saw after hearing a "slapping sound and a gasp" coming from the direction of the recliner where the victim was sitting.

"Felipe (the defendant) was standing by Roy (the victim)," he said. "He pulled the knife out (from the victim's chest) and said, 'He kicked my a--. Do you want to do something about it?'"

In the state's final argument, Assistant District Attorney Burt asked the jury to consider if the eyewitness Palmateer did the stabbing why are there no witnesses to say he did? Also, she said, if the defendant did it in self-defense, why did the victim find a knife in an unfamiliar house. If Rosalez had done that, she said, why did he not stab Miranda while the two were alone in a car or during the fist fight? Why would he do it in front of a room full of witnesses and from a sitting position as well? she asked.

The defense's final arguments centered around the fact that the state presented only one eyewitness, Palmateer out of the room full of people who were present at the stabbing.

"The state has not proved its case," he told jurors.

In rebuttal to the defense's argument, Burt said, "Palmateer was the only witness present, who was not a relative to the defendant."

Miranda is presently in county jail waiting for transfer to the penal facilities in Huntsville.

When asked how it felt to win her first murder trial, Burt answered, "There's really no win or loss to this."

"A man is dead and another will spend 20 years in prison," she said. "I think the state had a case that was appropriate, though."

GOP leaders predict convention repeat

IRON LADY MEETS WAX LADY. Britain's Prime Minister, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, often called 'The Iron Lady', meets her likeness in wax at Madame Tussauds, London, after sculptor Ian Hanson captured her likeness from sittings at No. 10 Downing Street. For those fooled by the similarities, the real Mrs. Thatcher is on the left.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan will get all of Texas' 80 national convention votes, state party leaders say.

This would be a repeat of the sweep he made of Texas' nominating convention delegates in 1976 against President Gerald Ford, who later became the nominee but lost Texas to President Jimmy Carter.

Throughout Texas, GOP delegate selection committees will meet Saturday in the 24 congressional districts to carry out dictates of the May 3 presidential primary.

At least 19 of Texas' national GOP convention delegates will carry the George Bush banner, but Bush's state campaign headquarters said Thursday they are pledged to support front-runner Reagan.

Bush quit last Monday as an active candidate for the GOP presidential nomination but he retained the delegates he has won and said he would not release them until the Detroit convention voting begins.

Bush's headquarters in Houston said his 19 Texas delegates would go to Detroit July 14-17 as Bush delegates but at the convention Bush will ask them to vote for Reagan on the first ballot.

"These people stuck their necks out for me, and I won't just leave them hanging," Bush said Monday as he acknowledged Reagan has won.

According to the May 3 presidential primary, which was binding in selection of national convention delegates, Reagan got 61 delegates, Bush 19 and none uncommitted.

Seventy-two of the delegates will come from the selections made Saturday in the 24 congressional districts. Earlier in the week, eight at-large delegates were picked, all for Reagan since he carried a majority of the statewide vote.

The statewide delegates include Gov. Bill Clements, Texas' first GOP governor this century; Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo, Reagan's state campaign manager; former Gov. John B. Connally, an unsuccessful aspirant for the GOP nomination who now supports Reagan, and State GOP Chairman Cheter Upham, Mineral Wells.

Another statewide delegate is Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who remained neutral until Reagan had the race in hand.

ICC approval today would put trains on RI Line

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad plans to begin service early next week on the main north-south Rock Island line in Oklahoma if the Interstate Commerce Commission gives its approval today.

Thomas Todd, Katy operating vice president, said he expects to operate one train per day in each direction starting June 3 or 4 until the grain harvest begins in earnest, and then increase service.

He said the railroad will not be able to start service right away on the Enid to Billings spur and on some spurs in Kansas because the tracks need repairs.

Todd said he expects the rest of the track to be in operating condition and will meet Federal Railroad Administration standards.

An FRA spokesman said the agency has not given any instructions to the Katy about track repairs.

"The railroad as far as I know was an operating railroad through March and should still be in that condition," he said.

Harry Dimmerman, Katy vice president, said if the tracks don't meet FRA standards, the Katy could get a waiver from the FRA for the wheat harvest to temporarily operate trains at low speeds.

The FRA spokesman said the agency understands the track is good enough to operate trains at 40 miles per hour from Dallas north about 100 miles. The rest of the line can only be operated at 10 miles per hour, he said.

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The attorney for three California men accused of illegally hunting peregrine falcons says the state's case is illogical.

The defendants, charged with hunting the rare birds that visit the Texas coast during their migration, claim they came to Texas to see last year's Mexican spill and to help clean any birds blighted by the oil.

In closing arguments, defense attorney Richard Roth said Thursday the government's case was purely circumstantial and that prosecutors asked jurors to reach illogical conclusions.

"Peregrine falcons migrate on the West Coast. Why even come here in the first place if you're going to trap them illegally?" Roth asked.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles Lewis said if the men were really concerned about helping birds they would have brought more cleansing liquid and would not have hidden falcon-trapping equipment in sand dunes near the beach.

Bob Stratten, manager of the Laguna Atascosa Wildlife Refuge near here, testified Thursday that it would take 1 1/2 to 2 gallons of concentrated cleanser to treat a "partially oiled bird" and that the defendants had only one quart of cleanser in their van.

Booklet for refugees offers advice to ease culture shock

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Children without diapers aren't appreciated at restaurants. Don't haggle over prices at supermarkets and department stores. Avoid walking alone at night down dark, empty streets.

These and other dictates are among rules set out in a soon-to-be-distributed guide for the Indochinese newcomer to American shores.

"What may appear to be basic rules of living in modern America are positively exotic things to many Indochinese refugees," says Frank Redding, a U.S. refugee official who helped prepare the illustrated, 46-page booklet, entitled "You're On Your Way."

The guide advises the refugee from the moment he buckles his seat belt aboard a U.S.-bound aircraft to the time he must fill out his social security card.

It includes instructions on the use of flush toilets and warnings not to stick fingers into light bulb sockets. The refugee is urged to respect American punctuality and not to fear saying a blunt, "No," or "I don't understand" — behavior which doesn't come naturally to many Indochinese.

The booklet also hints that new immigrants may not always receive the warmest welcome: side-by-side photographs show a smiling, open-faced woman and another with tightly sealed lips, sunglasses and a long nose pointing skyward.

The booklet is intended for simple villagers, more and more of whom are among the approximately 14,000 Indochinese refugees being accepted by the United States every month.

Although more than 360,000 refugees from Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam have already been resettled in the United States over the past five years, some refugee officials here believe more should be done to smooth the sometimes traumatic transition between cultures.

Redding, who works for the U.S.-based International Rescue Committee, says many of the guidelines in the book came in response to some of the following incidents:

— Some refugees flying to the United States went hungry for as long as 24 hours, believing they had to pay for the meals served.

— One old Indochinese couple was placed in a lovely home by sponsors who neglected to tell them how to use a telephone. When her husband had a heart attack, the woman had no way to summon emergency help. Alternatively, some refugees instructed in telephone use are unaware of long distance charges and accumulate huge bills calling relatives all over the United States.

A villager may be accustomed to throwing trash out the door of his hut or having his young children relieve themselves just about anywhere. Toilets aboard refugee aircraft have been fouled by toilet paper strewn on the floor.

Emergency room team qualifies for space training program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill and Anna Fisher, who have shared emergency room duties as physicians, want to fly into orbit together as the first husband-wife astronaut team — and the space agency has given them a chance to do it.

Two years ago both applied to be astronauts, but only Dr. Anna Fisher was picked by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Dr. William Fisher applied again, and on Thursday, he was one of 19 new astronaut candidates picked by NASA.

"Bill never gave up," Anna said in a telephone interview from the Johnson Space Center in Houston where she is training. "We knew the selections were going to be announced by the end of the month, and we've been nervous about it for a couple weeks. I was so thrilled when the phone call came this morning."

Asked about the chance they may fly together, Anna replied: "There's always a possibility. It's really hard to say. There are a lot of flights to go before that could happen. But it's something we can hopefully look forward to sometime in the future."

"We'd like to someday," Bill said. "Right now we're looking forward to working together on the shuttle program."

Anna, 30, will probably make a flight aboard the space shuttle before Bill, who is 34. She completed a year of training that qualified her as an astronaut last July and now is in advanced training and planning for shuttle missions, which are to start next March.

She said Thursday that members of her astronaut class probably will start flying in about three years, but she had no idea when she'd finally get into orbit. Bill will start training July 7.

Of the 19 new names selected Thursday, eight are shuttle pilot candidates and 11, including Bill Fisher, are mission specialist candidates. One of the mission specialist candidates is the first Hispanic picked for the program. He is Dr. Franklin R. Chang, a native of San Jose, Costa Rica, who is a physicist at the Charles Stark Draper Laboratory in Cambridge, Mass.

NASA said the 19 were picked from 2,880 mission specialist applicants and 585 pilot applicants. Pilots will fly the shuttle, while mission specialists will conduct experiments and deploy, retrieve or service satellites.

They will join 62 other American astronauts waiting for assignments on the re-flyable shuttle. Thirty or 40 shuttle flights a year are planned by the mid-1980s, with as many as seven astronauts on a mission.

Turner art brings $6.4 million

NEW YORK (AP) — After a six-minute bidding war between an American millionaire and an anonymous buyer, J.M.W. Turner's painting, "Juliet and her Nurse," was sold for $6.4 million, the highest price ever paid for a single work of art.

The painting by the 19th century British artist was bought at auction Thursday at Sotheby Parke Bernet Inc. by a man said to be a dealer representing Amalia Le Croze, the widow of an Argentine industrialist.

Why the selection of Edmund Muskie

President Carter's curious decision to nominate Sen. Edmund Muskie as Secretary of State astonished nearly everyone. But given Carter's insufficiently appreciated penchant for surprise — remember the Cabinet purge last year? the Muskie move is not all that strange. Obviously it makes sense in the politically conscious White House.

Politics, indeed, shared heavily with foreign policy considerations. Carter can anticipate achieving two political objectives with this nomination: He pleases and placates Congress by naming one of its own, and he deftly bids for support from the liberal, Kennedy-dominated wing of the Democratic Party.

Had Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher been nominated as Cyrus Vance recommended, or nearly anyone else, the confirmation hearings on Capitol Hill might well have exploded into an acrimonious airing of the Carter administration's incoherent foreign policy. This likely would have centered most embarrassingly on the frustrated attempt to rescue the U.S. hostages in Iran. As it is, Muskie's old friends on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will see that he doesn't even get a fast ball. Let alone a curve.

The White House undoubtedly envisions Secretary of State Muskie as a stabilizing ballast against the liberal gales, for he's a liberal's liberal. Most importantly, he is a New England liberal who has stood with the president against the challenge of Sen. Edward Kennedy.

When he talks economy and balanced budgets, as he often has as chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Muskie means the Defense Department and not welfare transfer payments. Almost a decade ago he was advocating economy by killing the anti-ballistic missile system and the Minuteman III program. He helped to wipe out the new B-1 bomber program and he fought the Trident submarine program. He fought President Ford's naval ship-building program and, more recently, he has been a leading Senate opponent to the development of the neutron bomb even as he was a leading proponent of the SALT II treaty.

Until President Carter reportedly finally saw the Soviets in their true and threatening light after their invasion of Afghanistan, Muskie could be said to be the administration's spear carrier in the Senate against a strong defense posture.

Despite pro-forma praise, our allies can find little comfort that such a confirmed apostle of military weakness should become the U.S. Secretary of State in times like these. And they must be further discomfited by Muskie's lack of diplomatic and negotiating experience, and, even more disconcerted perhaps, by his reputation for temper tantrums and emotional instability.

This is not to say that he is without redeeming qualities. He has been described as one of the most intelligent members of the Senate. It is to say, however, that by the time Muskie learns how to manipulate the levers of the State Department's complex machinery and works out his difficult arrangements with the National Security Council and White House adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, the Carter administration will be nearing the end of its first term, and quite possibly the end of its road.

Still, with all these largely negative considerations, Muskie promises to be tougher and more assertive than his bland and colorless predecessor. Moreover, the strange affinity that has existed between the Southerner, Jimmy Carter, and the New Englander, Edmund Muskie, could produce a more cohesive U.S. foreign policy in the months ahead.

Texas is where it's happening

We have yet to see what total effect the looming recession will have on Texas retail business, but so far as industry is concerned the state is doing all right and the wheels are turning favorably for the economy.

According to Labor Department figures unemployment rates for April leaped sharply in most industrial states, but the Texas jobless rate declined from 5.8 percent to 5.4 percent. The department's analysts said the figures reflect the general health of the Texas economy which may not be immune to national business trends but is better able to withstand downward turns than most other states.

Texas is not anti-business as are so many areas in the nation today, and the attitude is paying off for all concerned.

A Labor Department analyst pointed out that the Texas economy is broad-based, is diversified and is "still able to produce more jobs, relatively, than most areas." The analyst said, too, that Texans and big business have a mutual admiration.

"Texas recently has been discovered as having a favorable business climate," the analyst said. "Local governments are willing to extend themselves toward business, which is not the case in a lot of other states."

Among the things the analyst said contributed to the state's relative immunity to recessions is the fact Texas has no corporate income tax. Also, the Texas right-to-work law which prohibits closed union shops has generally been credited with keeping payrolls lower than other states without such laws.

The analyst was quoted by The Associated Press: "You have to remember the position Texas is in. It's got this diversified industry because it's considered a desirable place to be right now. It's considered one of the few areas where 'it's going to be happening' in the 1980s. Surveys have been conducted asking business leaders where they expect the most opportunities, where they see the most action, and Texas cities are always at the top of the list."

That impression is great for Texas, and right now it is a perfectly true picture, but there are forces at work in the state, some inspired by leftist elements from out of the state, to eliminate some of the very things that make the state so attractive to industry. There continues to be a drive to make the state's right-to-work law ineffective, and there also are elements that would put big business — and even small business — in a bad light. Some liberal legislators favor imposing a corporate income tax. Only the vigilance of thinking Texans will keep the state attractive to business and industry, the major providers of employment.

Caught with no defense

By Robert Walters
MIDDLETOWN, PA. (NEA) — The legacy of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant now has become painfully apparent. Nobody died, but countless people in central Pennsylvania continue to suffer severe psychological damage.

The March 1979 incident in which TMI Unit 2 temporarily became uncontrollable was unlike other traumatic events that produce stress, including relatively common occurrences such as divorce, the death of a relative or an auto accident.

Most people have psychological defense mechanisms that allow them to cope successfully with such events, especially because those events usually are of finite duration, relatively short-lived and comprehensible to a layman.

But the TMI experience was different because the stress it induced has lasted for more than a year and there remains the terrifying fear of the unknown.

The long-term health effects of radiation are unknown, the levels of radiation to which the local population has been exposed are unknown and the chances of another accident occurring at the generating station are unknown.

Two psychiatrists at the nearby Hershey Medical Center, Dr. Joyce Kalen and Dr. Enos Martin, interviewed several hundred local residents, then tentatively concluded that the TMI accident has caused "massive collective stress."

Other psychiatrists talk of "chronic stress" in a community living in constant fear. One local farmer is worried about "people who are on the verge of cracking up mentally," while another resident says,

"I see violence erupting...It's a fight for survival down here now."

Robert W. Coleman, coordinator of the Community Psychology Program at the Pennsylvania State University campus in Middletown, says that "people in the area have experienced a loss of control over their own lives."

In addition to "absolute distrust" of all public officials, Coleman says long-term stress is being manifested through depression, irritability, agitation and other anxiety symptoms.

When the Nuclear Regulatory Commission recently held public hearings in this community, nearby Elizabethtown, Pa., and Washington, D.C., normally rational people repeatedly interrupted the proceedings by shouting, crying and cursing.

"How in God's name do you people sleep at night?" one member of the audience shrieked during the NRC hearing in Elizabethtown.

NRC Chairman John F. Ahearne offers a blunt assessment of those meetings: "There was anger, frustration, bitterness, fear, a complete mistrust of anyone who is in an official position."

Another manifestation of the continuing trauma: Local residents cite a frightening array of real or imagined biological abnormalities — including stillbirths, unexplained deaths and mutant offspring — in their dogs, cats, goats, pigs and sheep.

Much of the anxiety now is focused on opposition to a plan to purge from the TMI containment building and vent into the atmosphere a krypton gas residue containing about 57,000 curies of radioactivity.

The General Public Utilities Corp., operator of the plant, presents a compelling case that clean-up and maintenance workers must be allowed access to the crippled plant as rapidly as possible to prevent additional accidents.

Unless the krypton is removed, argues the company, those employees will be severely hampered by both the bulky clothing and short exposure times necessary to protect them from the radiation.

Moreover, the 57,000 curies of radiation are almost insignificant compared with the 13 million curies of radiation, most of it in the form of xenon gas, the NRC belatedly admits was vented to the atmosphere in the 10 days immediately following the accident. (Other estimates place that figure at 20 million curies in the first two weeks.)

But it's precisely because neither the NRC nor the company was especially candid about those releases last year that local residents no longer trust outsiders. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

What if it's Reagan?

by Paul Harvey

What if it's Reagan? It's impossible to know for certain from a candidate's promises what kind of President he will be. From his past performance, however, we can get a pretty good idea.

Jimmy Carter, for example, is running the White House very similar to the manner in which he ran the Georgia statehouse.

So let's look backward and forward in the career of Ronald Reagan and see what kind of President he would most likely be.

Ronald Reagan's political hero is Dwight Eisenhower. He seeks to emulate Ike's "chairman of the board" style of administration.

As governor of California he filled key jobs with the most qualified people he could find; even went outside his own party for some of them.

Perhaps significantly, no major scandal touched any of his political appointees.

He was masterful in media appearances and prepared himself carefully for news conferences which he held regularly once a week.

His charismatic potential might make him the most persuasive politician since F.D.R.

When Fortune magazine recently evaluated the debits and credits of his California record, it found that he had, in fact, improved the state's finances. He wiped out the $194 million deficit which he had inherited and restored top bond ratings and within eight years accumulated a budget surplus of $554 million.

Fiscally, he is sound, is the only candidate around with a degree in economics.

However, the record must also include the fact that state spending during his terms increased 26 percent and the number of state employees increased from 163,000 to 204,000.

Albeit, that was a slower rate of growth than had been the case before he took office.

Significantly, the businessmen who are most enthusiastic about his candidacy are California-based businessmen who know him best.

Sometimes on the campaign trail he sounds like an actor in need of a better scriptwriter. There is nothing in his record as governor to indicate either dubiousness or duplicity.

His economics advisor, Milton Friedman, says, "Reagan is a man of principle, which you want; he is not a rigidly principled man; that you don't want."

That translates, "He is not one to tilt with windmills."

So — if past is prologue — and if promises are kept.

As President, Reagan would freeze all federal hiring by executive order.

Would ask Congress to cut personal tax rates 30 percent over three years and eliminate taxes on estates and on interest — and reduce taxes on business.

He would start developing the B-1 bomber or something better.

He would deploy neutron warheads in Europe or something better.

He would seek to immediately try to dismantle completely the departments of Energy and Education.

He would seek legislation to transfer federal welfare programs to states.

He would encourage a better volunteer Army — with better pay and benefits — and without a draft.

The military draft and limitless immigration, issues on which he clearly disagrees with Carter, could get him elected.

Uncommon problems

By Don Graff

Perfidious Albion strikes again. Or so Britain's major associates in the European Economic Community are inclined to view the pass to which the organization has now been brought.

The news out of a spate of recent meetings of the community's prime and foreign ministers has been dominated by Iran, Afghanistan, the Olympics and the search of solidarity in the strained alliance with the United States.

But those are short-term issues compared with a matter of surpassing importance that also has been under discussion. And that is the devising of an equitable formula for shared responsibilities and benefits that will permit the nine-member community not only to survive but to thrive.

What is immediately at issue is the size of the British contribution to the community pot. As London reckons it, this works out to a net $2.4 billion more paid in than the nation gets back in the form of benefits from community programs.

This is primarily because these programs overwhelmingly favor agricultural interests — three-quarters, $14 billion out of a total $19.7 billion, of this year's proposed EEC budget is earmarked for farm price supports — that primarily benefit continental members, in particular France, whose politically potent farm population relies heavily on the subsidies.

Britain, one of the community's poorest members in terms of per-capita wealth, is its largest net contributor. And this, in the British view, is an unequal sharing of the community burden that must be righted.

The British make a strong case. But so do their continental partners, which historically have good reason for caution in their cross-Channel dealings. Through centuries of bolting alliances and manipulating other powers, Perfidious Albion — the epithet is attributed to Napoleon — acquired a reputation for fickleness and undependability.

Rabies threatening Texans as outbreak grows in state

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Animal rabies — at its highest point in 27 years — will threaten the lives of Texans until local governments get tough about controlling animals, state health officials say.

Not since 1953, when local mass immunization clinics had to be established along the Mexican border to cope with rabies carried by dogs, has the situation been so bad.

Dr. Jerome Greenberg of the State Health Department told a House subcommittee Thursday 1,195 cases of animal rabies were confirmed in Texas last year, twice as many as in 1978 and 25 percent of the total number of cases in the United States.

Health department figures submitted to the subcommittee on rabies showed that of the 1,195 animal rabies cases, 857 — or 72 percent — involved skunks.

William Brownlee, a wildlife management expert with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, suggested the upsurge in rabies among skunks may be linked to an increase in the price of coonskins.

He said trappers killed 500,000 raccoons last year as the price of a single pelt went as high as $45 in late December and January. He said skunks and raccoons have similar diets, and when trapping reduces the population of raccoons, skunks "tend to fill the vacuum."

Brownlee said the price of raccoon pelts has now dropped by one-half, "and in the next year or so will not approach what it was."

Dr. Foy McCasland, chief of the Bureau of Veterinary Public Health, suggested the Legislature set up a $100,000 fund to lend money to small communities to build animal shelters.

In response to a question from Rep. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, McCasland said by "animal control" he did not mean establishing public "neuter-spay clinics" to control the animal population.

Greenberg said, "Rabies is important not because of the number of cases in man, but because it is almost invariably fatal. In the past three years, there have been only three cases identified in Texas — all fatal."

"Rabies diagnosis and control cost the state at least $528,000 in 1979," Greenberg said. "Had all of the biting (domestic) animals been vaccinated against rabies, that is the amount of money which would have been saved. The better our rabies control program at the community level, the more money will be saved and the fewer children and adults who will need painful rabies injections."

"Until local governments decide they want animal control, we're not going to have much rabies control," said McCasland.

After glancing at county-by-county statistics, Uribe said, "I always thought rabies was a border problem. It's mind-boggling to see it is a statewide problem."

Greenberg, however, offered a bit of good news for rabies victims: The series of 23 shots now administered is going to be replaced soon by a different type series of four to six shots.

Although the new series could cost up to $240, or three times as much, "It definitely will be much more effective," he said.

Polygamist's murder trial goes to jury

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Polygamist leader Ervil LeBaron — convicted of murdering a rival — has been denied one motion for a new trial but the judge will view a videotape of a television interview broadcast after the jury's verdict was returned.

A 12-member jury convicted LeBaron Wednesday evening of first-degree murder in the 1977 execution-style slaying of Dr. Rulon Alford, as well as conspiracy to kill his own brother, Verlan LeBaron.

The jury reconvenes Monday to decide whether LeBaron will be executed by firing squad for the Alford murder, or be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Special prosecutor David Yocom said he would try to introduce evidence that LeBaron's followers raised $80,000 to bribe Mexican appellate judges in a 1971 murder case.

Third District Judge Ernest F. Baldwin said he would view Monday a tape of a KUTV interview in which polygamist Siegfried Widmar, an associate of Verlan LeBaron, said he knew of eight murders which had been committed during a 10-year history of fighting between polygamist groups headed by the LeBaron brothers.

Other news organizations also have carried Widmar's remark, previous news stories have reported authorities' attempts to link LeBaron with other slayings, and the prosecution said it will attempt to introduce evidence of such links Monday.

Baldwin denied a number of defense motions Thursday, including a motion for a new trial, but told defense attorney John Hill to subpoena the KUTV interview Hill contended could prejudice the jury.

"We'll take a look at it, and see what was said, and whether any of the jurors saw it," Baldwin said Thursday night in a telephone interview. He said he had not seen the interview and had not formed an opinion on whether it might be prejudicial.

Throughout the two-week trial, Baldwin has given strict instructions to the jury not to read newspapers or watch television reports of the case. He said if he feels Widmar's comments affected LeBaron's chances of receiving a just sentence, he will ask the jurors whether they saw the interview.

During the penalty phase of the trial, the jury will determine whether there were aggravating circumstances which call for the death penalty, or whether mitigating factors warrant life imprisonment.

Yocom said if the judge allows it, he also will call witnesses to testify LeBaron ordered followers to kill polygamist Robert Simons, self-proclaimed prophet to the Indians, whose body was found in 1978, three years after he disappeared in the Grantsville area. A follower tried for the Simons slaying was acquitted.

Yocom also said he had witnesses to testify LeBaron ordered Vonda White, one of his dozen wives, to kill former follower Dean Vest in San Diego. Ms. White has been sentenced to life imprisonment for the slaying.

"If we could put all that before the jury, it would be all she wrote" for LeBaron, said Yocom, who prosecuted four LeBaron followers last year for the Alford slaying and conspiracy to kill Verlan. The four were acquitted.

Plot thickens in Corpus Christi council suit

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — First the City Council sued everybody in town to challenge a new tax relief measure. Now angry taxpayers are mounting a recall campaign "to throw the bums out."

More than 150 members of the Corpus Christi Taxpayers Association voted overwhelmingly Thursday night to seek the removal of Mayor Luther Jones and the six other council members.

"We want to throw the bums out. That, in a nut shell, covers the situation," said Joe O'Brien, co-chairman of the petition drive.

The 400-member association needs about 9,400 signatures to force the recall election. According to the city secretary's interpretation of the city charter, the taxpayers must do it by June 12.

"It is going to be almost an impossible task," O'Brien told the group.

Later, association president Lewis Lovelace said, "From the enthusiasm of the crowd tonight I think we can get more than 10,000 signatures."

"If they keep up with the demagoguery, they can be successful," said Councilman David Diaz, who attended the heated meeting but did not get the chance to speak.

At the heart of the bitter battle in this scenic coastal city of 240,000 is Proposition 14, a city tax relief amendment approved April 5 by a vote of 10,049 to 7,045.

That measure trimmed the property tax rate from 74 to 68 cents per $100 valuation, set the ceiling at 68 cents rather than the $2.50 allowed by state law, and limited annual increases in property appraisals to 6 percent.

Diaz, an attorney, said Proposition 14 is unconstitutional because of a conflict with state law. He said state law requires that ad valorem taxes be based on true market value, which traditionally appreciates more rapidly than 6 percent.

Diaz said city leaders also fear the new 68 cent ceiling would make it virtually impossible to sell city bonds, because jittery investors shy away from such low ceilings.

Police union article enrages chief

HOUSTON (AP) — Police Chief B.K. Johnson — enraged by an article in the Houston Police Patrolman's Union newsletter — says he will fight the group "down to the last tooth and nail."

He characterized as "trash" the article, which was critical of Houston Police Department policies.

"I don't think there's any place in law enforcement for a union," Johnson said Thursday after the article, entitled "How to Defeat a Bad Policy," appeared in the newsletter.

"If that's the kind of trash they're going to put out, you better believe I'm gonna fight them down to the last tooth and nail," he said.

The story said "ill-conceived and ill-advised" departmental policies were fostered by administrators' failure to listen to patrolmen. To do so would require them (administrators) to admit they are not all knowing."

Union president Bob Thomas said parts of the story were "written horribly," but stood by the contents of the unsigned article.

Thomas, whose union is battling the Houston Police Officers Association to represent Houston police, said Johnson's statements show that there is an effort by the HPOA and administrators to destroy the union.

"The administration wants to control the employees," Thomas said. "They're opposed to us because they know they're not gonna control us."

The article advised officers not to reduce response time by violating the response code policy and to tie up more units by calling for a backup unit in situations where one would not normally be needed.

Debt ceiling battle coming down to wire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government checks, possibly including some Social Security benefits due next week, could be held hostage to a congressional effort to repeal President Carter's controversial dime-a-gallon gasoline fee.

Foes of the gas fee succeeded late Thursday in linking the energy issue to debt-ceiling legislation needed to extend the government's borrowing authority.

An effort to put the borrowing bill back on the track was rejected today — first before the Rules Committee and then on the floor.

And Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., was keeping the Senate in session — despite an earlier plan not to meet today — to vote on the debt-ceiling bill should it be approved by the House.

Without the crucial measure, the government's power to pay some of its bills will expire at midnight Saturday.

However, such deadlines have been missed before and there are a number of stop-gap measures officials can take to keep the money flowing — at least for a week or so.

Congressional leaders were redoubling their efforts to win approval of the bill increasing the debt ceiling — minus the gasoline-fee-repeal measure — but major difficulties loomed.

Even if the House separates the two issues, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has indicated he will try to rejoin them in the Senate.

And both chambers have now indicated in test votes their overwhelming opposition to the gasoline fee — already blocked from taking effect by a federal judge.

Count ants or try to fool a llama

EDITOR'S NOTE — Looking for something a little different to do on your vacation this year? Earthwatch can find you some work to do, helping scientists with menial — but worthwhile — tasks all over the world. How about counting ants? Or recording the habits of the spotted hyena?

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — For $1,000 or so, people buy the opportunity to lie on their bellies in 150-degree heat and count ants. Or, if it seems more attractive, they find out whether they can fool wild llamas by lugging their dung heaps back and forth.

This year, about 1,300 people will actually lay down cash for this kind of thing. For the price of a comfortable vacation, they will live in tents, ward off bugs and do the sweaty, tedious, exhausting things that scientists would rather avoid.

They are the clientele of Earthwatch, a sort of non-profit scientific Peace Corps that staffs expeditions all over the world. Anybody between the ages of 16 and 80 who has the time and the money can go along.

"We see ourselves as a service to scientists," says Mary Blue Magruder, one of Earthwatch's 20 full-time staff members. "But we also want to counteract the idea that scientific research is only for Harvard types. If you are a truck driver from Iowa, you can help a biologist in Kenya."

Earthwatch does get truck drivers from Iowa, along with school teachers, advertising writers, doctors, engineers, farmers, salesmen and lots of other people who don't get much chance to play scientist.

"It's a new version of Tom Sawyer," says Ms. Magruder. "We're getting 1,300 people to paint the fence and buy the paint as well."

This year, Earthwatch is sponsoring 65 expeditions to Africa, Asia, Europe, North, Central and South America and sundry islands in between. Each jaunt is headed by a professional scientist, who gives the helpers orders for pushing wheelbarrows, picking dirt and driving trucks.

Volunteers this summer will dig for man's ancestors in Swaziland, analyze monkeys on St. Kitts, unearth a pagan cemetery in England, track horseshoe crabs in Florida, interview retired school teachers in Vermont, compile genealogies in Eastport, Maine, and survey the natural resources of the out islands of New Guinea.

Each year, scientists who want help with their research make about 200 requests to Earthwatch's headquarters at a mansion in Belmont, a suburb west of Boston. Then Earthwatch picks the projects that volunteers will most likely be interested in.

Most of the expeditions are two or three weeks long, and many of them, especially the more exotic excursions, cost over $800, not including plane fare.

For their money, the volunteers get a place to sleep (probably a tent), meals (which they may have to cook themselves) and a chance to see the world from the scientist's perspective. All their expenses, though, are tax deductible, and they include a contribution to the general expenses of the scientific work.

These people are buying adventure, and their kind of fun is not for folks who would rather sit in a cabana with a pina colada.

People interested in signing up for a search for humanoid fossils in the Libyan Sahara are warned that daytime temperatures level off at 100.

George Karl, 50, a regional manager for British Airways in Chicago, says he and his wife, Eleanor, consider themselves to be conservationists, so they picked a bird banding trip to Panama last year.

"We wanted something where we could actually participate actively ourselves," says Karl. "It was the most unpleasant one we could find, because it was in the wet season in the jungles of Panama with no housing or toilet facilities. But if we are really as ardent as we think we are, this would be the proof."

Before sunup each morning, Karl and his companions groped into the jungle ravines by flashlight to hang up 15-foot-long mesh nets. Then, once an hour, they ventured back out into the torrential rains to identify, weigh, band and then free the captured birds.

"It was very hard, but very, very pleasant and exhilarating," says Karl.

Secretary shortage solutions suggested

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — With the Department of Labor predicting for 1985 a nationwide shortage of 250,000 secretaries, "Personnel Journal" in a current article suggests these ideas for increasing the supply: Hiring men, who at present represent 1 percent of the profession; higher pay; higher status; to increase pride in work; clear job descriptions; flextime and job sharing; development of in-house training programs.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A great big thank-you from all the soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines in the U.S. Forces in Korea! You have helped to relieve the loneliness of over 20,000 military personnel stationed in Korea by providing them with a glimpse of home through a stranger's eyes.

It all began when a soldier named Allen wrote to you about the depression many GIs feel as they walk away from mail call empty-handed.

You ran his letter asking your readers to write to those forgotten kids half a world away, and you gave the address: Commanding General, Eighth Army, Seoul, Korea; APO, San Francisco, Calif. 96301.

Letters came in by the thousands, cutting a broad swath through America's heartland. Envelopes bearing postmarks from Canada, Puerto Rico and each of the 50 states came in by the bundles!

There were letters from children. One boy sent his week's allowance ($1) so that a serviceman would be able to buy stamps.

Another youngster sent a letter and enclosed five rare and valuable 3-cent stamps. Obviously someone in his household was a stamp collector. (We returned the stamps.)

There were letters from mothers and grandmothers, opening with "Hello, Son!" They told of their experiences in wars of a different era; some told of their relief when their sons came back from Vietnam — or of their emptiness when no one returned to them.

Many letters carried news from home. They wanted to make sure we knew that the U.S. hockey team had beaten the Russians. They were proud of their country, and proud of us for serving in the military.

School children wrote to express their feelings of loneliness, fear, doubt and hurt — feelings they couldn't share with their parents or friends. But somehow they felt a serviceman would understand.

What a morale-booster those letters were! What happy excitement you created here.

So, Dear Abby, we send our thanks to you and all those generous American people who wrote. Thanks, on behalf of every serviceman who has ever been lonely. Sincerely,
THE U.S. FORCES IN KOREA

DEAR U.S. FORCES: God bless each and every one of you in every corner of the world, working to defend our great country.

DEAR ABBY: I have a job I really like. It pays well, and my boss (whom I'll call Mr. R.) is the greatest.

During the daytime he never makes a move toward me, but when I work evenings he gets a little too friendly. Mr. R. is married and I'm not, but I do have a boyfriend. And even if I didn't have one, I wouldn't be interested in Mr. R. because he's old enough to be my father.

Last night while working late, he turned on the stereo and asked me to teach him how to disco. I told him I had a sore toe (not true). Then he said I didn't have to worry about his wife walking in on us because she lives in the suburbs and doesn't drive.

Can you give me a few suggestions on how to keep Mr. R. in his place? I don't want to hurt him — just discourage him.
WORKING GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Tell him you like your job and don't mind working nights, but your boyfriend holds a black belt in karate, doesn't live in the suburbs — and he does drive.

DEAR ABBY: Every year I make a donation to the American Cancer Society in honor of my father.

No, he did not die of cancer. He had cancer, but recovered after undergoing surgery and treatment.

If more people would celebrate their loved ones' recoveries in this manner, even more lives might be saved in the future.
THANKFUL

DR. LAMB

By Laurence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 26-year-old female and I have endometriosis. I found this out when I was 19. At that time I had one ovary removed. Ever since then I seem to lack the energy and motivation to lead the kind of active life I would enjoy. What is this disease and are there possible emotional side effects from having an ovary removed? If there are any side effects, what can be done to treat them?

DEAR READER — The lining of the uterus is called the endometrium. It is made up of specialized cells. They enlarge because of hormone stimulation during the menstrual cycle and to prepare for possible pregnancy. They are shed during the menstrual period. These endometrial cells are sometimes displaced outside their normal location lining the uterus. They may be in the tube or the ovary or even be scattered in areas over the abdominal cavity.

In view of your story I presume that some of the tissue was in the ovary. When it enlarges during part of the cycle it may cause pain and it may result in destruction of the ovary and that's probably why the ovary was removed.

As long as the other ovary is normal and functioning properly, you should have a normal amount of hormones like any other woman. Your doctor can test you to see what your hormone levels are if you wish. If you happen to be low on hormones, he might want to give you some medicine but the probability is that you do not need it.

Your lack of energy is probably related to something entirely different. There are many reasons why people feel fatigued or don't have the get up and go that they'd like to have. About 80 percent of the people that complain of fatigue have no real medical reasons for it. In these instances, there are usually psychological factors involved rather than medical factors.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-6, Fatigue: Feeling Tired and Weary. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O.

Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, many people are tired because they are bored and others are tired because they are depressed. The best way to combat fatigue, if it's not caused by medical factors, is to get yourself involved in things you enjoy and like to do. It's amazing how much energy people have when they're doing the things they want to do instead of things they feel they have to do.

Since about 20 percent of people who suffer from fatigue do have a medical cause, it is important to have a complete medical examination. Fatigue can be caused by any number of infectious diseases. When tuberculosis was common that was a more frequent cause of fatigue. Chemical disturbances associated with fat dieting is a common cause of temporary fatigue. Although severe anemia can cause fatigue, iron poor blood is seldom the real cause of fatigue.

DEAR READER — When a hernia has been adequately repaired and the tissues are healthy, the likelihood of it recurring is remote if it's been a year or more after a successful repair. Of course, if you have weak muscles to begin with, which may have contributed to the development of the first hernia, there's always a chance a new one might develop in a different area.

There are two things you can do that are practical. First, learn to lift correctly. It doesn't make so much difference which hand you use, but you should be using your legs instead of your back. That will also help protect your back muscles and prevent back problems. When you do heavy lifting, bend your knees and hips to pick up the weight and then straighten your legs rather than using the other approach.

The other thing you can do is to stay lean and maintain good abdominal muscle tone. A major contributing factor to hernias is abdominal obesity. So stay lean and do some exercises such as sit-ups and leg lifts to help maintain strong abdominal muscles.

Stress-to-vision relationship studied

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Pacific University College of Optometry researchers took glasses away from nearsighted patients and, they report, these people could see better without their glasses, for short periods of time.

Stress management techniques were used in the effort to improve the patients' vision.

This fact is significant for many of the estimated 20 to 50 million nearsighted people in the world today, says Dr. Rocky Kaplan, the Pacific professor in charge of the research.

"It points up that there is a strong relationship between the body and mind tension," he says. "Stress makes people see less clearly."

Kaplan's research has used stress management techniques of taped suggestions of general relaxation, hypnosis, yoga techniques, visual feedback and vision training to help nearsighted people see significantly better with weaker eyeglasses.

Pacific University College of Optometry fourth-year students working with Kaplan are Hal Hagge, St. Paul, Minn; Alan Homestead, Seattle, and Jim Ruch, Britton, S.D.

Kaplan and the students are continuing their research with some 30 patients. They are investigating whether nearsighted patients can be taught to see more clearly for longer and longer periods while wearing weaker and weaker lens prescriptions. The relationship between nutrition and vision is also under study.

Kaplan says that some optometrists and psychologists are using these techniques. But he adds that little research has been done, until now, on patients' managing stress so that they can learn to see better and eventually not be totally reliant on glasses.

The law and women: knowledge is power

By Liz Mitchell
American Library Assn.

* How can a woman retain her maiden name after marriage?
* Is a wife responsible for her husband's debts?
* Can a woman file for the continuation of alimony payments after her ex-husband dies?
* Can a creditor ask a woman about her childbearing ability and intentions?
These questions show there is a great deal a woman needs to know about the law. "Knowledge is power," says Martha Pomroy, lawyer and former TV newscaster. From that premise, she has written a book that teaches us "a little law."
"What Every Woman Needs to Know About the Law" (Doubleday, 416 pages, $14.95), focuses particularly on issues that concern women, but it should prove helpful to laymen as well.

Pomroy's discussions concentrate on the areas most ordinary citizens need to know about: family, working, housing, money, dealing with government bureaucracy for such matters as social security and taxes, and an array of topics concerning a woman's person — rape, battered women and personal injuries.
This book is not light night-stand reading, but it is a well-arranged, helpful reference work. It gives easy access to valuable information both through an extensive index and logical arrangement of chapters and sections.

You'll want to have it on hand when contemplating such decisions as marriage, divorce, buying a house, making investments or planning your estate. If you're faced with specific problems with tenancy, job discrimination, taxes, making a will or a consumer complaint, Pomroy can help.
There is also much information here you will want to be acquainted with before you need it. For example, in "Until Death Do You Part," Pomroy advises, "Read this chapter long before you need it." She goes on to explain: "It's best to make arrangements long before there is any likelihood of death. At this time you and your husband can make very practical decisions about the amount of money you have available for your funerals." She then details each legal step a widow must take, and shows which of these tasks can be provided for ahead of time.

Because the body of the law has been built up over centuries, it is not always as easy as a reader might hope to get at a legal problem — to define it and find legal precedents or statutes. For example, you'll find no reference in the index to "premarital contracts," "prenuptial agreements," "marriage; prenuptial contracts," "agreements, prenuptial," or "contracts, prenuptial."
However, in the chapter on divorce, under the rule "The agreement may not induce divorce," there is information about premarital agreements in a discussion of separation agreements: "Agreements made prior to marriage seeking to control property rights in the event of divorce are never honored, since these openly promote divorce."

And in the chapter on marriage there is this interesting discussion under the rule, "Any agreement modifying your marriage is not really binding": "Judges reason that the law is there to protect you, and they refuse to allow you to give up your protection. If you pledge to support the children, the judge may admire your spirit, but he'll still hold your husband responsible. That is the law."
"By the same token, a judge doesn't want to be bothered with a suit stemming from your special contract with your husband wherein he promises to hire a baby-sitter so you can work. By the law, it is your job to care for the children. If your salary doesn't pay for the sitter, you'd better find a cheaper sitter or a better job."

Three new guides, on related subjects, for women include: "Women's Handbook of Independent Financial Management" by Steven James Lee and Karen Athena Hassay (Van Nostrand Reinhold), "Everything You Want to Know About Your Husband's Money ... And Need to Know Before the Divorce" by Shelley Aspaklaria and Gerson Geltner (Crowell), "Divided Children: A Legal Guide for Divorcing Parents" by Michael Wheeler (Norton).

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: My cousin in Scranton, Pa., used to weigh 135 pounds last summer but she now weighs 85 pounds and really looks sick. I saw her last week and I was shocked. Her father says that she is starving herself and he doesn't know how to make her stop. This is really weird. My mom thinks she has a disease that strikes teen-agers called anorexia nervosa. Is there such a disease and is it contagious? — Tim, York, Pa.

Tim: Anorexia nervosa is a baffling psychophysiological disease of self-starvation which seems to be on the rise but is not contagious. Since I have had several inquiries asking about self-starvation, I'd like to devote the entire column to enlighten my teen readers.
The foremost anorexia symptom is substantial weight loss — at least 25 percent of the body weight — often accompanied by the loss of menstruation in girls. It is most often found in middle-class white female teens, though a small percentage are male, and in rare cases, black.
Many anorexics have been overweight at one point, but once they start dieting, they can't stop. Their attitude about their body becomes distorted so they deny being ill or too thin, no matter how skeletal they become. Even an anorectic who weighs a gruesome 70 pounds still sees her stomach as fat.

Ironically, anorexics are often ravenously hungry, obsessed with thoughts of food. They sometimes succumb to wild eating binges. These cause such feelings of self-disgust that they may vomit or take boxes of laxatives.

"A typical patient is a teen-age girl who is depressed, weepy, hostile, frequently agitated, and seems to be in constant motion," says Dr. Joseph A. Silverman, associate clinical professor of pediatrics at Columbia University, and a noted expert on anorexia. "She usually wears heavy sweaters and slacks — not only to mask her emaciation but also to keep warm. All complain of severe constipation."
Still other physical symptoms include rough, darkened skin, the loss of hair from the scalp, and an uncommon growth of long, fine body hairs.

Many doctors feel there is no one cause of the disease, that in each case it results from a complex blend of emotional and physical circumstances. Others are studying the possibility of biological predisposition to anorexia.

Most experts agree, however, that our cultural obsession with thinness has some influence.
Anorexics tend to be "model teens": extremely obedient perfectionists, often overachievers, who cannot even conceive of misbehaving and who don't go through the natural period of rebellion most children experience.

This exaggerated goodness by teens is unnatural, and probably unhealthy. Some doctors believe that by refusing to eat properly or "according to Mom's directions," an anorectic is trying to overcome a lifetime of slavish obedience and take control.

"In their blind search for a sense of identity and selfhood, anorexics will not accept anything that their parents or the world offers," says Dr. Hilda Bruch of Baylor College of Medicine, in Houston, Texas, a psychiatrist who is an expert on anorexia. "They would rather starve than continue a life of accommodation."

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Religion in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Not many Christian congregations make special efforts to include mentally retarded people in their worship services. But one of the rare congregations that does so is under fire for not doing more.

"What we can't understand is why we're getting all the heat for trying to keep the program manageable," says the Rev. Donald J. Koehn, pastor of St. Luke United Methodist Church in Wichita, Kan.

Ironically, the success of the program is what produced the problem.

The congregation had developed an extensive and outstanding program for integrating the mentally retarded into its activities, something national and international church bodies have increasingly urged.

However, such programs have not been the going pattern for most congregations, despite the emphasis of Jesus on caring for the rejected and outcasts.

But it had become a big operation for the St. Luke congregation, so much so that the work was considered too big, getting out of hand, and some limits were put on it. That's what caused the furor.

"We've got a good thing going, and the congregation is solidly behind it, with no intention of abandoning the program," Koehn said in an interview. "But we seem to be taking the heat from all those that aren't doing anything."

What happened, he said, is that the number of mentally retarded at services grew and their unpredictable behavior increased to the point that "the situation became unmanageable. The acceptance base was eroding."

After a committee study, the congregation's board acted in mid-March to restrict the number of unattended retarded persons to 20 to 25, not counting those accompanied by an "advocate" (supervising adult).

This brought charges of "discrimination and rejection" by teachers of a Sunday school class of mentally retarded. The couple, Chet and Virginia Jackson, resigned from the church in protest.

"We cannot support a church which takes an official policy such as this," Mrs. Jackson says. "I understand some people are uncomfortable around mentally retarded persons, but the mentally retarded can't help who they are. The uncomfortable people can do something to change their attitude."

Publicity about the case drew a barrage of criticism, Koehn said, adding, "I challenge any congregation our size to take more than 25 unpredictable MR's (mentally retarded) and maintain an effective, inclusive ministry. We're saying we can handle that many but not any more."

The 585-member church has average attendance of 176. The 25-limit on MR's does not apply to those with parents or supervisors.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of Joy..." PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

I need the Answers to some SERIOUS QUESTIONS

Why am I here? What shall I do with my life? Where am I going? This young man is at the threshold of his adult life, and needs the answer to some serious questions. Perhaps you find yourself pausing to take stock of your life and groping for direction.

The Church of the Living God tells the truth about man's life, death, and destiny. The truths learned there will set you free to live a more abundant, meaningful, and creative life. "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

John 8:32.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

SPILL SITE. Though the "safety performance" sign at the Mobil Chemical Company's fertilizer plant in DePue reads that there has been over 200 days since last-time injury, the situation in this small company town is much different. A cast iron pipe at the plant ruptured, spilling 1,000 gallons of hydrochloric acid into the city's sewer system, causing noxious fumes that killed one lady and forced the evacuation of eight blocks near the plant. ## Citizenship eludes women

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Mary Marvich is 107 years old, and for 40 years she's been trying to become an American citizen. But her last wish is being denied because she can't remember the name of the wooden sailing ship that brought her to New York Harbor in 1889.

Her daughter, Betty Nicoletti, says Mrs. Marvich, who emigrated from what is now Yugoslavia, has had numerous citizenship applications rejected by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"It was always the same story. Without the name of the ship she couldn't become a citizen," Mrs. Nicoletti said. "We've tried again and again to remember the name of the ship. But she was only 16 years old when she arrived and she was sick to death on that boat for 12 days and 12 nights coming over."

Robert A. Hallowell, who heads the immigration service in West Virginia, said the ship's name is needed to assure that Mrs. Marvich entered the country legally. The case is being investigated, he said.

Several local and state political leaders volunteered their help after Elizabeth Gill, a Marion County commissioner, learned that Mrs. Marvich was not a U.S. citizen.

MRS. Gill said she had recently asked Mrs. Marvich what she wished for most and was startled to learn that the old woman was not a citizen.

"It's her one wish before she dies. I think it would be the happiest day of her life to have that piece of paper," Mrs. Gill said.

Mrs. Marvich worked in a cigar factory in New York before moving to Pennsylvania where she met her husband. They moved to Fairmont, W. Va., where she has lived for 83 years and raised nine children, Mrs. Nicoletti said.

Local residents call Mrs. Marvich "grandmother." She began seeking citizenship before World War II. But after failing several times to remember the name of the ship or get an exemption to the regulation, she gave up, Mrs. Nicoletti said.

"Her pride was hurt. We just didn't try anymore," she said.

At Mrs. Marvich's 107th birthday party last weekend, Mrs. Gill told friends and community leaders of the wish. No one knew that Mrs. Marvich was not a citizen, Mrs. Gill said.

West Virginia Secretary of State A. James Manchin and former Gov. Arch More, who attended the birthday party, are among state political leaders who have written to the immigration service and President Carter asking that Mrs. Marvich be made a citizen.

Exotic dancer concedes career is stepping stone

HANOVER, Pa. (NEA) — Don't call Frank Torino a go-go dancer. His proper title is exotic male dancer.

Though he concedes his dancing is a "career stepping-stone," he is not the least ashamed of what he does.

What he does is perform five shows a night before crowds of up to 300 women who yell such things as, "Take it off!" And he does — at least, down to a G-string.

The Philadelphia man began working full time as an exotic dancer last September, when the band in which he sang and played broke up after losing $25,000 of equipment to robbery and fire. He first tried exotic dancing four years ago at a friend's club — after gulping "a couple of shots of whiskey to give me the nerve."

Torino has since invested more than $3,000 in costumes and equipment for his five shows. That investment seems to have paid off, as he is already booked solidly through the summer.

Among his shows is one in which he comes out as mild-mannered Clark Kent, starts to dance, then peels off his staid garb to reveal a Superman costume underneath.

Another show has him coming out in a black-and-white suit dancing to Elvis Presley's "Jailhouse Rock." A flash goes off and suddenly he is in black leather, dancing to the twist with the ladies.

Then there is what Torino calls his "X-rated show." "I don't get lewd," he explains. "But I do Burt Keynolds-type poses. I give them a horizontal view of me."

His favorite seems to be the show in which he comes out dressed in balloons and lollipops.

"They go crazy," he says of his audience. "The whole idea is audience participation. ... They pop my balloons and I give out Sugar Daddies to a song called 'Come to Poppa.'"

It was this number that got him into his only trouble yet with an angry boyfriend in the audience. The fellow almost started a fight when Torino offered his date a lollipop.

As a result of that experience, Torino no longer approaches couples unless the man indicates that he is welcome.

One of Torino's funniest experiences occurred at a club where the women suddenly moved onto the dance floor and started dancing and singing with him.

"They all held hands and danced around me," he recalls. "Then, one at a time, they would come up and dance with me. I felt I was going to be attacked."

Different women react to his shows differently.

"Some are shy, some are very scared," he says. "When I see that, I'll just whip them until they see me with other girls having a good time."

One of the things Torino likes best about being an exotic dancer is the chance to interact with his audience. As it explains it, "They're the ones who are entertaining me."

Perhaps his oldest fan is Betsy, who describes herself as "over 70." When asked why she was seeing the dancer for the third time, she replied, "I'm blue over another guy."

But Torino's relationship with his audience ends with the night's final show. His manager-costume designer also happens to be his fiancée, Nancy.

"His show is based on comedy and making the women relax," she remarks. "He's not going to bite them. It's a clean show — good, clean fun."

Now that Torino has hit the big time, he says that even his mother is proud of him. She has never seen the show, but at his request she watched a similar exotic male dancer on a cable-television show.

"I called her up and she said, 'Oh, he was terrific,'" reports Torino. "So I told her, 'Well, Mom, that's exactly what I do.'"

Despite his recent audition for one of Atlantic City's major gambling casinos, Torino plans to remain an exotic dancer for only a few years. He hopes his following will eventually support him in a return to singing.

Whatever his act, Torino definitely wants to stay in show business.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — She's met Leonid Brezhnev and the leaders of China. She has a master's degree and "so much more going" for her that she'd be a better first lady.

So says Joan Kennedy, whose husband is badly trailing President Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In an interview Wednesday in Women's Wear Daily, Mrs. Kennedy, 43, explained why she was better qualified than Rosalynn Carter.

"I'm a very sophisticated lady. I just have so much more going for me. And I can make so many more contributions."

She also said the Massachusetts senator would make a better president than the incumbent. "I've got nothing against Georgia, but I'd prefer to have Ted in the White House listening to the best brains in our country on matters like foreign affairs."

NEW YORK (AP) — Dressed in a black lace blouse and long skirt, Louise Nevelson quietly supervised the installation of "Frozen Laces — One 1979-1980," at the Fifth Avenue and 60th Street entrance to Central Park amid a throng of onlookers.

Shrugging away autograph hounds, the 60-year-old sculptress sat in the shade Wednesday as a giant crane and five workmen hauled pieces of the 15-ton sculpture into place.

Her attire only coincidentally paralleled her "lace" black steel creation, she insisted.

NEW YORK (AP) — Although she explained "it's not really an injury," Natalia Makarova, prima ballerina of the American Ballet Theater, was unable to complete a nationally televised performance of the Russian Ballet "La Bayadere" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

After dancing the first act Wednesday, Miss Makarova was replaced for the remainder by Marianna Tcherassky, who had performed in the role on Monday.

ABT spokesman Charles France said Miss Makarova had hurt a knee several days ago and could not continue the performance on the Public Broadcasting Service.

"It's not really an injury. I just need a few days rest," Miss Makarova said later.

Sharecropper's shack moved into Institute of Cultures

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The historians at the Institute of Texan Cultures strive for realism in their exhibits — even to the point of moving an entire sharecropper's house onto the exhibit floor.

The two-room, 1900-vintage shack, which the historians feel symbolizes the roots of many black Texans, is the focal point of the institute's black history section. That new display was opened Wednesday.

The process of moving the shack 200 miles from its original site in Navasota to the institute and then onto the exhibit floor took more than six months.

"The rural experience of Afro Americans in Texas is one of the most common shared experiences in Southern America," said Phil Hewitt, the institute's floor manager. "A lot of blacks have those kinds of roots, so we felt it was necessary to share this bond with all Texans."

"As far as we know, that house is the origin of the homes lived in by rural blacks and some urban black," said John Davis, the institute's research director.

"It is similar to the frontier log cabin of the Anglo pioneer, which is also on view at the institute. This house is representative of the black sharecropper experience," he added.

"This was the start of it all. If it hadn't been for sharecropping, blacks would not have been able to survive the end of the Civil War. It is the setting of the first triumph for blacks," said Davis.

Researcher Melvin Sance added, "Sharecropping represents an economic fact of black life that can't be overlooked. It was a bridge between slavery and contemporary life."

The small wooden shack, built about 80 years ago, was located last year in Brazos County in Southeast Texas.

What makes Grete Waitz run?

NEW YORK (NEA) - The daily routine seldom varies for Grete Waitz. Each morning she dons her running outfit and jogs through the streets of Oslo, Norway, on the way to her training sites.

Sometimes she runs on a track and other days she pushes herself to the limit in cross-country workouts on the outskirts of the Norwegian capital.

While her husband, Jack, works at his accounting job with an Oslo newspaper, Grete spends her time running... and running.

Mrs. Waitz is the best woman long-distance runner in the world. She holds the women's world records in the marathon and the 10,000 meters.

Oddly, she is more at home in America than Norway when it comes to setting records.

She arrived in New York in October 1978, relatively unknown to the American track community. She left a few days later as the champion of the New York Marathon (women's division) after establishing a world record of 2:32:30 for the distance of 26 miles, 385 yards.

Last year in the L'eggs Mini Marathon in New York Mrs. Waitz set another world record, finishing in 31:15.4 on the 10,000 meter course. (She was training to run again on May 31 in the 1980 L'eggs Mini Marathon.)

Mrs. Waitz, a 10-year veteran of the Norwegian national track team, knows she has to practice seemingly endless hours to maintain her top rank in the world of international sports.

A high school teacher, Mrs. Waitz, 26, is taking a one-year leave of absence from her job in order to train for competition with the best athletes amateur sports has to offer.

But top-flight competition is nothing new to Mrs. Waitz. She is a seasoned Olympic performer. After failing to win a medal in the 400 meters in both the 1972 and 1976 Summer Games, the Scandinavian track star is now concentrating on longer races — for both political and personal reasons.

Norway followed the lead of the United States recently and announced it will boycott the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow. The decision means Mrs. Waitz can't be a three-time Olympian. "Personally I don't care," says Norway's premier runner.

Prior to Norway's decision, Mrs. Waitz was in doubt whether to attend the Moscow games. A self-proclaimed long-distance runner, she was forced to run intermediate races in the Olympics. "They don't have my event in the Olympics," notes Mrs. Waitz.

"Her inclination not to compete in Moscow Games was based also on the desire to avoid the minute planning and strategy required to win an Olympic medal. 'I know I can run a good 100 meters if I'm lucky,' asserts Mrs. Waitz. "But the Olympics have too much tactics."

Athletics hasn't always been easy for Grete. Grete's athletic career began without fanfare. She wasn't instantly recognized as a potential world-class athlete.

Track and field attracted Grete when she was 12 years old. She tried her hand at several different events including the long jump, high jump and the shot put. "I was not especially good," recalls Mrs. Waitz about her introduction to sports. "I did it because it was fun and I liked to do the sport."

Two years later Grete had discovered running, and began racing in short events. Soon she was taking part in cross-country races, and winning medals for her efforts.

Mrs. Waitz credits the coach of her club for guiding her into the long distance events. "My coach understood that longer distance was the event for me and he began to adopt a training program for the 400 meters," says Mrs. Waitz.

When Grete was 15 she began running in 400- and 800-meters races. A time of 2:17.2 for 800 meters was good enough to attract the attention of national coaches. And Grete soon found herself on the national team.

Several months into 1980, the Norwegian trackster had won every race she had entered.

Carr picked by Mavericks

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran guard Austin Carr, who has been with the Cleveland Cavaliers longer than any other player, has become a Dallas Maverick, but says he will continue to live in the Cleveland area.

Carr was chosen by the Mavericks off the Cleveland roster on Wednesday in the National Basketball Association expansion draft that was conducted to stock the Dallas team.

"It's kind of hard to leave after nine years... to leave all your friends," Carr said after learning he was picked by Dallas. "I will not be moving, though. I will commute. My friends and business are here."

Carr, 32, was the college player of the year at Notre Dame in 1971 and the first collegian picked in the NBA draft that year. He is Cleveland's second all-time scorer, trailing only Bobby "Bingo" Smith. He has a career average of 16.2 points a game.

"It's going to be funny not playing with the Wine and Gold," Carr said. "But when I come back here, I'll come back to win."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Codex scored a 4 1/2-length victory over Genuine Risk in the $250,000 Preakness at Pimlico, ending the Kentucky Derby-winning filly's quest for the Triple Crown.

Codex, $7.40, had to withstand a claim of foul lodged by Jacinto Vasquez, who rode Genuine Risk.

Carew leads all-star voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew, who has received more votes than any other player since fan balloting for the All Star game resumed in 1970, leads all players in early American League balloting announced today.

Carew, the California Angels' first baseman, has polled 382,170 votes in the first accounting announced by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. That gives him a substantial early lead over Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, who has 182,870.

Going into this season, Carew had received 22,858,453 All Star votes and his 1977 total of 4,292,740 stands as the highest total for any player.

Carew is one of three California players leading in the early voting. Other Angels in front are shortstop Freddie Patek and second baseman Bobby Grich. Patek, signed as a free agent last winter, has 176,067 votes to 166,867 for Boston's Rick Burleson. Grich leads Frank White of Kansas City 211,062-160,180.

Boston also has three players leading in the first results. Catcher Carlton Fisk has a lead of about 75,000 votes with 304,639 to 229,277 for Darrell Porter of Kansas City.

For 2700 years of age; mummy is in good shape

By Tom Tiede

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (NEA) - If there were anything to the stories that suggest a curse on those who disturb a mummy's slumber, Richard Rosenbaum would be impaled on an obelisk.

The stamp and coin merchant keeps a 2,700-year-old Egyptian priest under wraps in a cluttered back room of his shop.

A fly strip hangs near by. Clerks eat their lunches there.

And if that's not enough to make Boris Karloff roll in his sarcophagus, Rosenbaum is trying to peddle the mummy - fully bandaged - in the hope of turning a profit on the crusty old corpse.

The dealer says the 62-inch preservation may be the only privately owned property of its kind in the Americas. He has no doubt it's the only mummy for sale in the nation today.

Price: $75,000. And cheap at that, Rosenbaum insists. Given the laws of supply and demand he says the mummy is priceless. Besides, it's in remarkably fine condition. Well, a couple of toes have snapped off over the centuries, and the nose has gone the way of all flesh. Otherwise it, ah, looks good for its age.

Marianne Timko, a University of Michigan Egyptologist who has studied the remains, says the mummy is that of a male who died of natural causes, probably at age 50, seven or eight centuries before the birth of Christ. She says his name, as printed on his leg plaque, is Ir-r-w, or, roughly, "Irrw."

Irrw shaved his head, which may or may not mean he was a priest. At any rate he probably was well-to-do. Mummification was a pleasure of the elite in ancient Egypt, expensive and something of a philosophical bauble. The Egyptian rich prepared for an important death; the poor just collapsed.

In other words, Irrw didn't think dying meant the end. The idea was to retire to a place where the soul would be immortal. The soul would require a home, so what better temple than the body? Therefore the priest had himself embalmed, dried, and wrapped in white linen for the ages.

Like other optimists of the period, however, he was not to rest in peace. Archaeologists and grave robbers have been exhuming mummies now for generations. No one knows when Irrw was unearthed. Rosenbaum got him from a salesman, who got him from a museum. Anything prior to that is a mystery.

But, however the mummy returned, it remains complete and undisturbed. It wears a face mask and chest plaque, for instance; both are nicely gilded, ornamented and inscribed with hieroglyphics. Besides this, the body rests in a 6-foot sarcophagus - a coffin on which a human form is painted.

Rosenbaum, ever the trader, says the package is one of the best preserved in the galaxy. There has been some retouching, but the mummy's circumstance is largely original. Furthermore, it's not so ghastly as it might be. Irrw's face is relaxed to a degree where Rosenbaum says that it's smiling.

It should be noted here that others wonder what Irrw has to smile about. He's been snatched from his tomb, and homeland, and is presently little more than investment chattel. A spokesman at the Egyptian Embassy in Washington says the idea of marketing the old fellow is gross, not to mention impious.

Traditionalists hold that a person is a person, dead or alive, regardless of age and eventualities. So Rosenbaum has been criticized for poor taste by some, and barbarism by others. Even some prospective mummy buyers say the man's pitch can be indelicate. "A sale is a sale," he shrugs.

For his part, Rosenbaum refuses to be lectured. He says he's a retailer. He once sold a pair of shrunken heads as bookends, and did not worry for a moment if they'd belonged to missionaries. "If people are concerned about the mummy," he suggests, "maybe they should buy it and give it a good home."
