AUSTIN (AP) — More than 3,000 Texas Employment Commission workers have been handed more job security by the federal government. The state government workers, who provide employment services throughout the state, had been worried about layoffs since the Legislature created the Texas Workforce Commission and encouraged communities to take control of job training.

The state had proposed allowing local boards to keep these employees for up to 18 months. If they were kept longer, they would have to become private vendors.

The House, by a 411-10 vote, agreed to sell 32 billion cubic feet of helium that has been stored in an abandoned gas field in the Texas Panhandle for three decades and to dismantle the operation.

Under the legislation, which must be considered by the Senate, the government would sell the helium over 20 years, and the proceeds would be used to pay off a $1.4 billion debt the helium program has accumulated. The operations of the facility would be phased out over 18

Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., called the program a "poster child of government waste" that has survived despite repeated attempts over the years

The Clinton administration also favors the sale. President Clinton in his State of the Union address cited it as an example of an outdated, unnecessary government program.

The National Helium Reserve, with its helium processing and storage facility near Amarillo, Texas, was created in the 1920s to assure the lighter-than-air gas was available for military blimps and observation balloons. In the 1960s, the Interior Department borrowed $252 million to expand the stockpile.

Because the program, which supplied helium to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and military users, has not made a consistent profit, the debt to the U.S. Treasury has "Privatization of the program never been paid off and, with

While the bill has widespread congressional support, Rep. Mac Thornberry, R-Texas, said the 18-Republicans and Democrats month phaseout would not give workers at the facility enough time to make the transition to new jobs.

Thornberry also criticized a requirement to sell the helium at above-market prices to pay off the debt, saying it would shut out several local businesses interested in buying the facility.

Nevertheless, he said the sale 'appears to be inevitable" and expressed hope that some of his concerns might be eased in negotiations with the Senate.

Supporters of the helium program have argued over the years that it doesn't cost the taxpayer anything directly, since it does not receive government funds to operate, and in some years has returned money to the Treasury from helium sales to the Pentagon, NASA and other

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) -African peacekeepers blocked bridges leading into Monrovia with tanks today to keep more gunmen from entering the Liberian capital, as the latest truce collapsed in a frenzy of bullets and shelling.

Twelve days after warlords agreed to a cease-fire, the streets of Monrovia were back in the hands of gunmen. Bodies piled up across the city today, and thousands of civilians fled in panic amid the fiercest fighting since battles first broke out April 6.

The exodus came as fighting entered the residential neighborhood of Paynesville, several miles east of downtown Monrovia, and inched toward adjacent Congo Town, home to warlords Charles Taylor and Alhaji

Aid workers and residents contacted by radio said shelling and gunfire were extremely heavy today in Paynesville, which has long been controlled by Taylor's faction.

Sporadic shooting also occurred in the Mamba Point diplomatic section, where U.S. Marines shot to death three Liberians who fired their weapons toward the compound during heavy fighting Tuesday.

Battles were also being waged around Monrovia's besieged Barclay army barracks, whose

On Tuesday, rocket-propelled grenades smashed into the grounds of the camp as doctors worked, bringing wails of fear and pain from civilians who thrashed on the floors or on flimsy stretchers.

Warlord Roosevelt Johnson has been holed up inside the barracks with hundreds of armed supporters since April 6, trying to evade arrest on murder charges for clashes in March. The government troops trying to arrest him include fighters loyal to Taylor and Kromah, members of Liberia's six-man ruling council. All sides had agreed April 19 to a truce negotiated at the American Embassy, but fighting reignited Monday as government leaders attempted to meet at government headquarters.

George Moose, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, had planned to hold talks Tuesday at the American Embassy with government, peacekeeping and faction leaders. But mortars, machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades forced him to cancel the meetings.

Tuesday when they fired on gunmen shooting toward the embassy, which is guarded by about 230 Marines. "We don't know what (the attackers) were aiming at," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said in Washington. "Fire came in and it was returned."

Three Liberians were killed and a fourth was wounded by the American troops, who are stationed throughout the sprawling compound. Witnesses said the dead Liberians were Johnson fighters who were running toward the embassy firing their weapons while pursuing rival gunmen.

By Tuesday night, at least nine bodies were seen in the area. The once-plush neighborhood is now blighted by looted United Nations offices, burned-out cars and ramshackle dwellings sheltering homeless civilians.

Opinion

Use of embargoes comes under fire

The United Nations recently announced that it is rethinking its policy of imposing economic embargoes on unpopular leaders.

The international organization is reviewing the practice of cutting off supplies to countries after seeing the practice fail with Iraq. That country has been under a complete U.N. embargo for 4 1/2 years, but the action has not loosened the grip of dictator Saddam Hussein.

While some members of the U.N. Security Council - including the United States - continue to support the embargo, other nations are increasingly questioning the strategy. They believe, and we agree, that such measures hurt a country's citizens more than the rulers at which they are targeted.

"I don't think it will ever happen again," Nabil El-Araby, Egypt's U.N. ambassador, says of the total embargo. "It was too harsh and it affects the people, and we don't want to affect the Despotic rulers feed themselves first. Any wealth generated within their countries strengthens them and their hold on power, leaving the remainder of the population to languish in the difficulty created by international embargoes. These leaders are often able to win favor with these same impoverished citizens by promoting an us-vs.-them mentality in their countries. They demonize the countries that are imposing the sanctions and creating strife, and successfully call for unity in the face of a common Cuba's Fidel Castro has used this tactic successfully for three decades. Despite the harsh conditions in the island country, many Cubans continue to support their leader and blame the U.S.-led embargo for their plight.

It's clear that economic sanctions haven't loosened Castro's grip on power, just as they have had little effect on Saddam in Iraq. The U.S. embargo on Cuba is now being rendered more impotent by the fact that other nations have given up on the strategy and reopened trade with the country.

It's hard to know if economic sanctions have ever served to change a country's leaders or policies. South Africa was an international outcast for years due to outrage over the white minority's racist policies. But many argue that the modernization of the country, the education of the black majority and social pressure did more to dissolve apartheid than the international boycott.

One tactic at the other end of the spectrum has been used with mixed success - dropping supplies to the people. The Berlin Airlift of 1948 remains a celebrated achievement in the face of the city's closure, but it didn't break the communist hold on the city. Similar actions in Somalia and Croatia in recent years have also helped the people, but their success in prompting governmental change is questionable.

It appears that citizens' revolt over despotic leaders is not driven entirely by economic factors. This is why embargoes do little more than make the victims of oppression suffer all the more. Sanctions don't seem to move the people any closer toward revolution, and by stopping the flow of supplies it could even retard any uprising.

The U.N. members are right to re-evaluate the imposition of economic sanctions on countries run by despots. The United States, which continues to cling to an ineffective boycott of Cuba, should follow the international organization's lead and assess its own policies.

Ralph Nader, nonpartisan?

Extremism defined the recent Republican pri-maries, or so the media insisted. Phil Gramm was "hard right," Pat Buchanan was "far right," and Sen. Bob Dole - well, Dole "pandered to the extreme right." In the spirit of balance, there should be a burst of journalistic attention to the extremist nature of Green Party presidential candidate Ralph Nader.

After all, this is the man who defines the fringe that demands labels like "far left," "hard left" and "extreme left." Imagine the paper trail of radical anti-capitalist writings. Think of the profess: the man who never met a trial lawyer or class-action lawsuit against business he didn't like.

But, then, we would be making the foolish mistake of assuming there is such a thing as a standard of balance - that the media will fairly evaluate the ideological poles in politics. No, in the media's eyes, the great battles of our time consist of the extreme right vs. the compassionate mainstream.

For years, Nader has been repeatedly, fastidiously referred to as a "consumer advocate," a "consumer activist" and a "consumer watchdog" no labels, just the vague perception of advocacy for the common man. On the March 24 "The World Today" broadcast on CNN, Martin Savidge parroted the mantra: "Consumer advocate Ralph Nader says he'll be on California's presidential ballot this fall as the Green Party candidate."

That morning, Tim Russert invited Nader on Meet the Press and clung to the "consumer advocate" label on five occasions, even when comparing him to Buchanan: "Will conservative commentator Pat Buchanan bolt the Republican Party? And why is consumer advocate Ralph Nader planning to run against President Clinton?" Later, Russert announced: "Joining us from San Jose, conservative commentator turned presidential candidate Patrick J. Buchanan." Then, he announced: "Coming next, consumer advocate Ralph Nader."

Russert did note the Green Party platform was "very liberal," a noteworthy exception. But Nader denied he was running on it, and Russert never noted that Nader's own ultra-regulatory ideology puts him in the same "very liberal" category as the Greens. What about print coverage? A Nexis search of Time, Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, The Washington Post, The New York Times and USA Today reveals a vast desert of labels. Only the March 25 U.S. News & World Report timidly labeled Nader a "liberal alternative to Clinton" making our president the leader of the compassionate mainstream, one supposes.

So, will Nader suffer the glare of investigative scrutiny as, say, Jerry Brown did over charges of drug use in 1992? Let's not forget CNN actually vetted on the air the marriage of Bob Dornan, someone the media insisted was not a serious candidate.

There is plenty to investigate. It was Nader's Public Citizen Litigation Group that referred to lawyers at Arnold and Porter the litigious prisoner named Brett Kimberlin, a convicted drug dealer and perjurer also known as "The Speedway Bomber." In 1988, Kimberlin was briefly placed in solitary confinement after charging that he sold marijuana to Dan Quayle in the 1970s. Nader's group referred him to friendly attorneys so he complete story.

could publicly smear Quayle, their most outspo-ken anti-regulation opponent. So much for those "public citizens" who seek to clean up politics.

Nader is running for president with the arrogant self-confidence that none of his personal or political actions will be scrutinized. This is a man so secretive that nobody knows how much his organizations bring in or how much he makes - his own employees don't know even where he lives! Isn't this odd and deserving of media scrutiny? Yes and yes, but do you remember the questions ever being asked? If the Nader coverage stays in its current mode - as a horse-race curiosity with a nonpartisan patina - it will truly be a spectacle to behold.

"Hands off" has never been the investigative stance toward Republicans, and Dateline NBC is on the prowl. In a memo to federal agencies, producer Eric Koli is invoking the Freedom of Information Act and demanding copies of any and all correspondence from Sen. Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich. No Democrats.

Why is Dateline looking for letters from only Republicans Gingrich and Dole? Quite simply, they are looking for dirt, any dirt, on the GOP standard operating procedure for this show. Right after the '94 elections, Tom Brokaw hounded Gingrich on Dateline about his ties to GOPAC, his college course and even his personal life. This is the same network that ignored - for more than a year - Gingrich's complaint that Speaker Jim Wright had abused his office for personal gain.

NBC's defenders point out that in 1992, Koli (then with ABC) made the same FOIA request to federal agencies about Bill Clinton and Al Gore. Back then, there was a reason. It was called Whitewater. How much attention did ABC devote to Whitewater that year? Four mentions, not one

new strategy for term limits

Few proposals for political reform have demonstrated their popularity as convincingly as term limits for state and federal legislators. Opinion polls report overwhelming public support for them. More to the point, voters have already passed, in 21 of the 23 states that allow such a procedure, initiatives limiting the number of terms their members of the U.S. House and Senate can serve.

But, to the immense relief of most members of Congress, the Supreme Court in May 1995 ruled, in a cliffhanger 5-to-4 vote, that all such limits are unconstitutional. If congressional terms are to be limited, therefore, it will take a constitutional

Now, the traditional way to ame d the done, is by having both houses of Congress pass a proposed amendment by a two-thirds vote, after which it must be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states. You can imagine how slender the chances are that two-thirds of either house will ever give such an amendment their

But U.S. Term Limits, the largest group supporting term limits, has been dipping into the history books, and has come upon a fiendishly clever way of forcing an amendment through.

A century ago, much the same problem was faced by those who wanted to amend the Constitution to provide for the direct election of senators (rather than their election by the state legislatures). The Senate refused even to bring the itself. proposal up for a vote.

William Rusher

Supporters of direct elections thereupon turned to a never-used but perfectly legitimate alternative way of proposing a constitutional amend-Constitution, and the only way it has ever been ment: Have the legislatures of two-thirds of the states call (as provided in Article V) for a constitutional convention to draft and pass it. Thereafter, as usual, three-quarters of the state legislatures would need to ratify it. But Congress would be entirely out of the loop.

To give added momentum to the demand for popular election of senators, initiatives were also passed in various states providing for a non-binding primary to select a senatorial choice by popular vote. If a legislator then voted against that choice, that fact would be noted beside his name when he himself ran for reelection. Thanks to this and other pressures, so many states were soon calling for a convention that the U.S. Senate knuckled under and approved the amendment over the next two years to support new state initiatives that will instruct the state legislatures to call for a constitutional convention to propose a term-limit amendment. The initiative will also provide that legislators who fail to vote for such a call will have a notation placed beside their names when they run for reelection reading, "DISREGARDED VOTER INSTRUCTION ON TERM LIMITS." In states not having the initiative procedure, heavy lobbying will be undertaken for equivalent laws.

Few state legislators are likely risk their necks by inviting such notation, just to keep other politicians in office. When the number of states calling for a convention nears the magic two-thirds, the betting is that Congress will crumple (as it did in 1912, on the Senate question) and pass a termlimit amendment itself, to keep from being drastically upstaged.

There is nothing in the least unconstitutional about putting information concerning a candidate's record on the ballot, if the law so provides. Of course, supporters of other causes may want to use the same technique, but what's wrong withthat if they can get enough support to pass the necessary law?

Some conservatives are fearful that a Constitution-amending convention might "get out of hand" and adopt all sorts of ill-advised amendments. But they forget that all the convention can do is propose amendments; to pass, each must be ratified by the legislatures of three-quar-

How age factors into the equation

Because Bob Dole is no kid, age is going to be a serious issue in this election. Accordingly, we ought to try to talk about it seriously, at least some of the time. We've already heard that the "Dole 96" campaign button does not refer to his age. CBS News correspondent Jacqueline Adams reported, semi-humorously, on a study by neuropsychologists at the University of Pennsylvania. The team, headed by Dr. Ruben Gur, reports that as we age, brain cells shrink almost three times faster among men than among women. Here's how part of the conversation went:

DR. RUBEN GUR: Men, as they age, make more

JACQUELINE ADAMS: Gur's tests show that as they age, men lose brain cells in their frontal and temporal lobes, and as a result, they can't concentrate or reason as well, and they tend to forget simple things.

are aging men, and that's something we may want to keep in mind.

ANDY ROONEY: Testing things can prove anything they want ... They can prove that old men are grumpier if they want to, or they can prove that they're sweeter if they want to. ADAMS: At 72, presidential candidate Bob Dole hopes to defy limits on old age. DOLE: There must be exceptions ...

There are. I called Dr. Gur, who said that CBS tor, Biology of Aging, National Institute on Aging, excised from the interview a most important Dr. Elizabeth Cobbs, director, Division of Aging caveat. "Experience may well compensate, or more than compensate, for lost cognitive powers," he told me.

Quite so. Winston Churchill served as England's prime minister until he was 81; Charles De Gaulle was the president of France until age 80; Konrad Adenauer was Germany's DR. GUR: This may explain the belief that older men get grumpy ... Men are still at the heads of governments throughout the world. And these ed, won't Bill Clinton be a better president at 51 than at 47?)

We should also ask whether we want a gimpy president or a sweet one: I think we need one who kicks ass, early and often. (And by the way, wasn't Andy Rooney grumpy when he was 30?) A recent "Think Tank" program on public tele-tion: "Are older people getting younger?"

The panel consisted of Dr. Richard Sprott, direc-

vision (which I moderate) dealt with this ques-

Studies and Services, George Washington University Medical Center; Dr. David Gutmann, professor of psychiatry and education, Northwestern University, author of Reclaimed Powers: Men and Women in Later Life; Betty Friedan, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, author of The Fountain of Age.

There was heartening unanimity among the panel. More of us are living longer, with fewer disabilities, with better medicines on the way, with more active and successful elderly people as role models and with society slowly catching on to the idea that age is not a sickness. Elderly, are lifting weights, making love and making policy. Betty Friedan says the AARP ought to change its name to the "American Society of Resurgent Persons."

Gutmann says: "Young people are good at the quick processing of information - they recognize trees instantaneously. In later life, the brain works more slowly, but can construct forests from the clumping of trees.

I'm not saying this is the choice this year, but if it were, would America be better served by a president more likely to see forests or trees? Do we want a president with knowledge or wisdom?

Anyway, there's another reason to cut out the ageism. There are 31 million eligible voters over age 65, and they are more likely to vote than the rest of the population. Accordingly, it's not a great idea to describe them as shuffling off to the polls with their shrunken brains, trying to remember why they are going there. They might get grumpy and elect Andy Rooney.

Erickson Memorial Concert series began in May of 1990 as an annual event in Perryton. It was established by the family and friends of the late Joseph Erickson, a long-time Perryton citizen and patron of music.

Although several of the concerts have featured guest performers on a church pipe organ, the Memorial Concert was set up to feature a wide variety of instrumental music.

Frankie McWhorter, former Texas Playboy in the Bob Wills band, will be performing with musicians Jack Bailey, Don House, Ronnie Hoeweiller, Lee Barlow, and special guests John, Kris and Mark Erickson. Music will range from hoedown fiddle to waltzes.

McWhorter, leader of the Western swing band "The Over the Hill Gang," was born in Memphis, Texas, not more than 20 miles from the ranch where Bob Wills lived when he played the fiddle at his first dance. He was a big fan of Bob Wills and listened to his recordings religiously. McWhorter bought his first fiddle in 1949 with cowboy wages earned on the famous JA Ranch in West Texas.

McWhorter toured with Wills him, Wills "made us play over our heads." Off the bandstand, He was one of many former tory. Congressmen propose ban on sale of X-rated magazines on military bases

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) - Some things about mines military families and national defense. Army life never change: camouflage, crew cuts, featuring nude centerfolds.

That explains why a proposal to ban the sale of magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse on U.S. military bases was met with disbelief at this Army base south of Seattle.

"When we got out of basic training, that was the first thing everybody went for - get a Playboy or Penthouse," Spc. Alan McDonald, an Army Reservist from Portland, Ore., said Tuesday as he emerged from the base commissary with a bag full

"I don't know if it's just something to do or if it's something that's been pent up for two months,"

Several Republican congressmen are sponsoring a measure to be taken up today by the House National Security Committee that would ban the sale or rental on the bases of any sexually explicit material, including audio or video recordings, Maryland Rep. Roscoe Bartlett, New Jersey Rep. big guns and lonely soldiers peering at magazines Chris Smith and California Rep. Bob Dornan wrote colleagues last week that taxpayers are subsidizing the sale of the magazines because they are discounted along with other goods sold on the

> "Uncle Sam should not be subsidizing smut," Bartlett said.

> Under the proposal, Smith said service members could still buy the magazines outside the base.

> The lawmakers sought to bolster their case by releasing a letter to Smith from Bobbi Obal, the wife of a serviceman at McGuire Air Force Base, near Wrightstown, N.J.

> "As the parent of three children, one 11-year-old boy, I have complained at how carelessly these magazines are laid around but have never seen any change in the handling of them," she wrote.

Former school trustee. associate indicted

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas school trustee Dan Peavy has been indicted on charges he received more than $450,000 in bribes to help a business associate win board contracts.

The 42-count indictment returned in Dallas Tuesday charges Dan Peavy, 49, with conspiracy, bribery of local officials, extortion by public officials, money laundering and filing a false income tax return.

Peavy's associate, Dallas insurance executive Eugene M. Oliver, also is named in the indictment. Oliver is charged with conspiracy, bribery of local officials and money laundering.

"This case represents a betrayal of public trust," said U.S. Attorney Paul E. Coggins. "The school district could have hired 15 teachers for a year with the $459,000 that went into Mr. Peavy's pockets."

If convicted, Peavy faces up to 501 years in federal prison and $8 million in fines. Oliver could receive up to 305 years in federal prison and $5.25 million in fines.

Austin City Council approves settlement in nuke suit

AUSTIN (AP) — After seven weeks of trial and more than a week of jury deliberations, a lawsuit over a 14-month shutdown of the South Texas Nuclear Project has been settled out of court.

The Austin City Council met in emergency session Tuesday night to approve the settlement, which calls for Houston Lighting and Power Company to pay the city of Austin $20 million and step down as manager of the plant.

Attorneys arranged the deal as a jury in Houston remained deadlocked in its deliberations.

After a seven-week trial, the jury began its deliberations on Monday of last week, but on Thursday told the judge it was deadlocked. The judge told jurors to keep trying.

The city of Austin is a part owner in the project and sued HL&P for $120 million for damages related to a 14-month shutdown of the nuclear plant in 1993 and 1994.

Eugene Helm, 26, shown fixing his niece Darnisha's hair in March, was recently married. Helm gave up the pursuit of a college education to raise two nieces and three nephews. They are the children of deceased siblings and a sister who is a drug addict.

Fairy-tale wedding caps story of young uncle raising nieces and nephews

By LAURA GRIFFIN The Dallas Morning News

ROCKWALL, Texas – A few minutes before his wedding ceremony Sunday, Eugene Helm had a serious talk with the nephews he has been raising for several months.

"Today is a very special day; it's our family day," he said as he adjusted one of the boys' red bow ties. "God has blessed this family, and we need to stay strong as a family unit. I'm proud of you all."

Helm, 26, dropped out of college in Chicago last year to raise his three nephews and two twin nieces after his mother, who had been caring for them, died. Now he'll have some help – his new wife, Taneen, 25. The two had originally planned to marry in July, but after Helms' story appeared last month in The Dallas Morning News, life became so hectic that they decided to move it up. All of sudden, he was swamped with calls from the news media, well wishers and people providing money and job offers. "I really needed her to be with me," he said. "It's a blessing that everything's come together and fell Exodus Ministry for letting them live in a two-bedinto place." And The Wedding Cottage in Rockwall made the convicts, they feel they need a larger wedding possible, donating a ceremony with all new environment for the children. Helm is not an the trimmings.

"I was so touched by what he was doing - that someone that young would sacrifice so much, " said Ann program for drug use and was later arrested. Williams, owner of The Wedding Cottage. "I thought, Let's give them a great start and some memories."

After Mrs. Williams started planning the wedding, other people wanted to pitch in.

By the end of last week, the photography, the flowers, the tuxedos, the cake, the bridesmaids' dresses and the wedding gown were all donated.

Helm had worried that his family and his bride's family would miss out on the big day because they're in Chicago. But American Airlines donated tickets for about 15 to 20 family members.

The 4-year-old twins were flower girls and his he said. "We want them to have a strong family. I nephews – 12, 10 and 7 – were "groomsmen."

Helm said he has been overwhelmed by the response to his story.

He has received hundreds of letters, many with donations of between $20 and $100, most of which he has put in a trust fund that was set up for himself and the children. As of last week, that account had grown to about $72,000.

He has also received two vehicles – a mid-1980s Buick Century and a used van that needs some work - which are keeping him from having to rely on public transit.

In the past month, Helm and children have been on "The Today Show," "Hard Copy" and "Good Morning Texas," and they were flown to Chicago for a brief appearance on the "Oprah Winfrey Show." Black Entertainment Television gave the family $5,000.

Sunday night, the couple's families planned to take care of the children so the two could have one night alone. On Monday, they planned to look for a house or large apartment to move into.

They said that though they were grateful to the room apartment at its program for homeless explace and a ex-convict, but Exodus let him stay with the children after the twins' mother was kicked out of the

"We're not going to take a honeymoon, because we need to get everything settled," said Mrs. Helm. "These kids need a stable environment, and if we can give them that, there's nothing they can't do. We can always honeymoon later."

The family has seen its share of hardships, Helm said. The boys' mother died more than a year ago; her death was followed by the death of their grandmother. They have lived in neighborhoods where they have become familiar with violence and drugs. They're just kids, and they have seen to much,"

Scholars discover Louisa May Alcott manuscript

BOSTON (AP) — A beautiful but penniless governess discovers she is an heiress. Her pure heart wins her the love of a dashing English lord.

Louisa May Alcott wrote this romantic tale when she was 18, but few knew about her unpublished first novel until two Alcott scholars found the manuscript in the stacks at a Harvard University library.

The manuscript, titled The Inheritance, was found along with a note from Alcott claiming authorship of the story, which apparently was miscataloged years ago.

Dying Woman Leaves Behind Her Plea For Assisted Suicide

DEAR ABBY: I am forwarding this letter to you from my mother, who recently died from ALS (Lou Gehrig's disease). She wrote it almost one year before her death. when she was diagnosed with this terminal disease. She left it for us to send to you because she wanted people who are against issues such as assisted suicide to feel what she was going through. She asked for open-mindedness and understanding. Her words are better than any of ours, for only she truly knew what she had to face.

KRISTIN BULL, MADISON, WIS.

DEAR KRISTIN: Please accept my sympathy at this sad time. Your mother makes a powerful argument for her point of view:

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever faced death with someone you dearly loved? Have you watched a loved one go through excruciating pain or helpless and hopeless suffering. because it's obvious the end is near?

I would like to spare my husband, daughters, parents, family and friends, as well as myself. I'm not so much scared to leave this life as I am of the journey that's in store for me. After being diagnosed with ALS, I have prayed for the strength to go with dignity. How can one be dignified while struggling with breathing, swallowing and all other muscular functions of the body?

I would love to have a Dr. Kevorkian with me to ease the way.

FOOTBALL

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) Six college students have proposed a marketing plan for the Houston Oilers when they relocate, and the new name of the team would be the Tennessee Tigers.

NFL Properties, league's marketing arm, says it's interested in the ideas of the Belmont University students.

"It might be one of those under consideration, granted that the dominoes fall into place," spokesman Brian McCarthy said.

NFL owners Tuesday approved the Oilers' move to Nashville during a meeting Atlanta. However, the Oilers intend to honor their Astrodome lease, which runs through 1997.

The relocation is contingent on Nashville residents approving a May 7 referendum, and it is expected to pass easily.

The marketing plan was assembled by students Melani McConnell, Adam Bishop, Amy Ray, Scott Ryan, Pat Nelley and Patrick Materna.

They used their own money and devised a name, logo and advertising campaign to satisfy their Marketing 402 semester project, which they unveiled Monday.

The Tigers' name comes from the saber-toothed tiger that once lived in Tennessee. Bones of one of the carnivores were found in Nashville in 1971 when workers excavated a site for a bank building.

"We wanted something with a fighting spirit, with a high testosterone level," McConnell said. "That's what football is all about."

The logo shows a growling tiger head with long teeth using the colors burnt orange, kelly green and

The students spent $1,021 on 12 T-shirts, one black football jersey, a football helmet, radio commercials and printing costs.

"We knew this probably wouldn't provide any money but would look awfully good on the resume," McConnell said.

The package will be submitted to NFL Properties, which controls the league's 30 team names, logos and colors.

Pampa youngster is taking athletic ability overseas for soccer tourney

PAMPA — Blake Helms is taking his athletic ability overseas. The Pampa fifth grader was selected by Sports Challenge International to play in an international soccer tournament in Vienna, Austria. Blake is an athletic sports-minded youngster, who started playing soccer at 5 years of age. He's already collected a dozen soccer trophies. Blake also plays baseball and basketball and would like to be a coach when he grows up.

The main purpose of the tournament, according to SCI, is to give athletes a chance to experience international competition and have a cultural experience at the same time. This is the organization's second year of sponsoring international soccer tours. Last year, 130 athletes, parents and coaches traveled to Belguim and competed for a week in Antwerp

Blake will represent the United States as part of a team comprised of players from across Texas. There were no tryouts for the trip and Blake must come up with $1,750 to go, but he says the fund-raising effort will be worth it.

"I think this will be good for my career because I'm hoping to learn a lot from the teams of other countries, which should help me in years to come in sports. Also, it can help me to someday be a good coach," Blake said.

The trip begins in Dallas on July 2 and ends there July 9. The Texas squad will be joined by other teams from Oklahoma and Ohio. In addition to Austria, teams from Croatia Poland, Germany, Hungary and the Czech Republic have been invited.

Each team is guaranteed to play five games in the tournament. Blake, who is 12, will compete in the 12-14

Yankees rally to beat Orioles in longest nine-inning game

By The Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles and inning, allowing an unearned lew York Yankees seemed to be run, and John Wetteland got New York Yankees seemed to be playing in slow motion.

"If you're going to stay out there that long, you might as well win," Yankees reliever Scott Kamieniecki said Tuesday night after the Yankees won 13-10 in 4 hours, 21 minutes, the longest nine-inning game in major Field, 14 of 17 overall. league history.

The previous record of 4:18 was set by the Los Angeles Giants on Oct. 2, 1962.

"It felt like two days and 17 hours," Orioles first baseman ahead run with a sixth-inning Rafael Palmeiro said, "It was particularly tough because it was so cold."

Tino Martinez broke a 9-9 tie with a three-run homer in the seventh off Keith Shepherd (0-1) as New York rallied from a 9-4 deficit.

"We're a little short of pitching right now," said Orioles manager Dave Johnson, who watched the final hour or so in the clubhouse after home plate umpire Terry Croft ejected him.

In other AL games, Cleveland beat Chicago 5-3, Minnesota routed Kansas City 16-7, Boston beat Detroit 13-4, Toronto beat Milwaukee 9-8, California beat Oakland 7-3 and Seattle beat Texas 8-0.

At Camden Yards, Paul O'Neill and Jim Leyritz also homered as 10th loss in 13 games. New York Red Sox 13, Tigers 4 had 17 hits and nine walks, including four by O'Neill.

Jeff Nelson (1-0) pitched one three outs for his fifth save. Indians 5, White Sox 3 Jim Thome homered and drove in three runs as Cleveland stopped Chicago's seven-game winning streak. The Indians have won eight straight at Jacobs Dennis Martinez (4-2) allowed three runs and three hits in seven innings, and Jose Mesa finished Dodgers and San Francisco the four-hitter, getting three outs for his ninth save in nine tries. Julio Franco drove in the gosingle that ricocheted off Brian Keyser. Kevin Tapani (2-1) gave up four runs, nine hits and four walks in 5 1-3 innings. Twins 16, Royals 7 Marty Cordova's bases-loaded triple highlighted a 10-run fifth inning at the Metrodome, and Minnesota finished April with a winning record (13-12) for the first time since 1987.

Minnesota had 16 hits, raising its league-leading average to .301. The Twins had just five hits in the fifth, taking advantage of five walks by Julio Valera and Mike Magnante (0-1).

Cordova matched his career high with four RBIs. Denny Hocking drove in a career-high three runs, and Chuck Knoblauch was 3-for-4 with three RBIs and three runs scored.

Dan Naulty (2-0) allowed one the Yankees sent Baltimore to its run and two hits in 3 2-3 innings.

runs and Mo Vaughn also homered, sending visiting Detroit to its 11th loss in 12 games.

Tim Wakefield (2-3) snapped Boston's three-game losing streak despite allowing four runs and six hits in five innings, including home runs by Mark Lewis and Travis Fryman.

Jose Lima (0-1) allowed eight runs — seven earned — in four innings.

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 8

Carlos Delgado drove in the winning run with a two-out single off Marshall Boze (0-1) in the bottom of the ninth at the SkyDome.

Delgado went 4-for-5 with three RBIs and Ed Sprague homered twice as the won for just the second time in six games. Tim Crabtree (1-1) pitched two hitless innings. Angels 7, Athletics 3

Jim Edmonds went 3-for-4 with a homer, and Mark Langston (2-1) allowed eight hits in seven innings as visiting California stopped a four-game losing streak

Ariel Prieto (1-2) was tagged for seven runs and 10 hits in fourplus innings, allowing three. homers.

Chili Davis and Garret Anderson also homered for the Angels.

Mariners 8, Rangers 0 Chris Bosio (3-1) allowed four hits in six innings and Paul Sorrento homered, giving Seattle a major-league record 44 in April. Kevin Gross (3-3) was tagged for five runs and nine hits in 3 2-Reggie Jefferson hit two home 3 innings.

King, Bonds close April with power

By TOM WITHERS AP Sports Writer

April's shower of power ended with Jeff King and Barry Bonds adding their names to some exclusive home-run lists.

King hit a solo homer and grand slam in a nine-run fourth inning Tuesday night in the Pittsburgh Cincinnati.

inning of his career, and it allowed King to join Willie McCovey and Andre Dawson as the only players to accomplish the feat. Meanwhile, Bonds tied the major-league record of 11 homers in April by hitting two - a tworun shot and a grand slam — as the San Francisco Giants rallied to beat the San Diego Padres 9-4. Bonds joined five other 11 players to hit 11 homers in April, including Florida's Gary Sheffield and Baltimore's Brady Anderson, who also did it during baseball's first month. The others are Bonds said. Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell in 1971, Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt in 1976 and the New York Yankees' Graig Nettles in 1974.

first baseman. He hit a career-high total this season. It was the second two-homer 18 homers last season, including two in one inning against San Francisco on Aug. 8, and has nine already this year. "It's a strange game, to say the least," King said. "I would have been happy with a couple of base hits tonight. I haven't been swinging well. I'm as surprised as much as anybody."

Bonds hit both of his homers off Bob Tewksbury (3-1). His fourth grand slam capped the six-run fifth and his two-run homer in the sixth

"They were wrong pitches,"

At Miami, the Marlins gave Pat power hitter, really wasn't sure Rapp some unusual offensive punch. Greg Colbrunn hit a three-run homer for the Marlins, who rank last in the majors in runs scored and batting average. Charles King's latest two-homer effort Johnson also homered and drove Pirates' 10-7 win over the Reds in continued a two-year tear for the in three runs, doubling his RBI

The game was played before 15,252, the smallest ever for a Marlins home game.

Rapp (1-3) allowed seven hits before leaving after losing his shutout in the ninth when Jim Eisenreich hit a one-out RBI double. Kevin Jordan had two hits for the Phillies, who had their winning streak stopped at five games. Mike Williams (0-2) took the loss. Braves 7, Astros 5

At Houston, Chipper Jones broke a tie with a ninth-inning single and Fred McGriff homered on the next pitch as Atlanta won for the sixth time in seven games.

John Smoltz (5-1) allowed five hits in eight innings and struck out 10, increasing his league-leading total to 51. Smoltz has held batters to a .171 average, best among NL pitchers.

Since cheerleader uniforms don't even come close, they can't be worn in classrooms.

Some students aren't happy. Two weeks ago, the campus newspaper, The Spitfire, bashed the handbook adopted by the school board.

Head cheerleader Jenn Smith agreed. "I cheerleaders to raise spirits - but not hem- think it's going to ruin school spirit just a little bit. Every sport has its own way, and that Principal H. Lynn Russell says the school's has been the tradition for cheerleaders," she
