PAMPA - Over 300 students at Travis Elementary School have been working to earn over 1,000 reading points during National Reading Challenge Week, ending today.

The students typically earn 600 reading points each week using the Accelerated Reader reading management program, said Katie Hupp, first grade teacher at Travis.

A "Big Banana" all-day party is set for May 10 to celebrate the challenge and year-long reading program.
According to Hupp, the national goal is for U.S. schools using the Accelerated Reading program to read one billion books by May 17.

Students earn reading points based on the reading level and difficulty of the books they've read and the number of questions answered correctly on computerized book tests.

AMARILLO - Panhandle area Masons will host the state Grand Master Robert P. "Bob" Walker of Beaumont at a regional conference set for 7 p.m. Friday, May 3, in Khiva Temple at Amarillo.

Charles Beach of Borger, conference coordinator, said some 35 area Masonic lodges are expected to be represented at the event, which will include a meal starting at 5:30

Walker, an attorney by profession, serves as 279th District judge in Beaumont. He has been a Master Mason since 1954, and has held a number of state Masonic offices. He is past Potentate of the El Mina Shrine Temple in Galveston.

As Grand Master, Walker leads more than 150,000 Texas Masons.

PAMPA — The Pampa High School Class of 1966 will be having its 30th year reunion on June 28-29.

Senate votes to overturn rules on asylum-seekers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Just one week after new rules limiting asylum-seekers' rights to enter the country became law, the Senate voted to overturn them.

"People coming in with false passports, claiming persecution ... don't get a hearing," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who authored the amendment to the immigration bill that would eliminate the new rules. "They get an interview by whoever is there at the border and they can get kicked out."

Leahy, whose amendment to the immigration bill passed 51-49, said people in fear for their lives from their own governments cannot be expected to obtain legal documents from those governments in order to flee.

"This is a tremendous victory for our nation's tradition of rescuing the persecuted," said Angela Kelley of the National Immigration Forum.

The Senate rejected fears of big government intrusiveness as it upheld provisions authorizing development of standardized, counterfeit-proof birth certificates and other state-issued identifying documents as well as pilot projects to help employers ensure that the people they hire are eligible to work here.

Worker verification is crucial in weeding out half the nation's illegal alien population, those who come in legally and overstay their visas, said the immigration bill's chief author, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

By voice vote, the Senate approved an amendment to make mutilation of female genitalia a federal crime punishable by up to five years in prison. But it would not make the threat of such mutilation a basis for an asylum claim.

An immigration appeals board is scheduled today to hear the case of 19-year-old Fauziya Kasinga, 19, of Togo, who is seeking asylum to escape forced genital mutilation. The Immigration and Naturalization Service believes such mutilation should be considered for granting asylum under certain circumstances on a case-by-case basis, said INS spokesman Russ Bergeron.

The immigration bill's primary emphasis is cracking down on illegal aliens. It would nearly double the border patrol guards, who now number more than 5,000; increase penalties for document fraud and alien smuggling and deny welfare and other government benefits to illegal aliens.

The Senate was expected to complete work on amendments to the immigration bill today, although the timing of a final vote remained uncertain.

On asylum, the lawmakers rejected Simpson's arguments that the streamlined rules were needed to stop foreigners who routinely show up with fraudulent or no documents and falsely claim persecution in order to enter the United States, get jobs and disappear.

Such people "abuse the compassion of the American people," he said. "The American people suffer compassion fatigue.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the government has already eliminated that problem by detaining asylum seekers and withholding green cards until their claims are verified.

Under the new rules, Leahy said, victims of persecution could be subjected to summary deportation on the say-so of a lone immigration official at a port of entry. His amendment called for reinstating the current system, which allows asylum seekers a hearing in the immigrant courts system.

The Justice Department supports Leahy's amendment in

The asylum provisions were in the anti-terrorism bill President Clinton signed April 24. The expedited exclusion procedures appeared as a whole only when House and Senate conferees completed a compromise bill, and Leahy tried to block parts of it on April 17.

PJ party at school

Though it may look like he's at a slumber party, Chad Norris is actually in class this morning, reading Curious George Goes to the Hospital. Norris and his classmates in Sharon Carter's first grade class at Travis Elementary School had a pajama party to celebrate surpassing their reading goals. Carter explained that every student in her class more than doubled their goal in the Accelerated Reading program.

House GOP adds billions to defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Setting up another confrontation with the Clinton administration, a key House committee is adding $13 billion and a raft of conservative social policies to the 1997 defense budget.

The House National Security Committee completed work late Wednesday on a $267.4 billion version of the 1997 defense budget, a substantial increase over President Clinton's request. Committee approval came at the end of a day that devoted far more time to abortion, AIDS, homosexuality and pornography than to tanks, planes and ships.

In a series of votes, the committee supported a ban on abortions at overseas military hospitals, the involuntary discharge of service members with the AIDS virus and a return to the outright ban on gays in the military.

The panel also voted to ban the sale of adult videos and magazines on military bases.

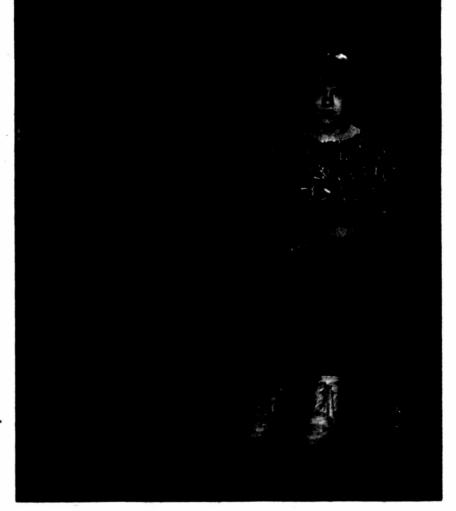

The measures were aimed at what Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., called "the culture of degradation." Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., said the question was whether the military should be held to a higher standard.

"This debate and this provision," Hunter said, referring to the ban on gays in the military, "is not about (prejudice), it's about values ... tradition ... the American fighting man's having a stainless character."

But even some Republicans wondered why the GOP was picking another ideological fight with the White House only months after completion of the 1996 defense bill, a job greatly prolonged by disagreements over social issues.

"Why are we debating social issues over and over again," asked Rep. Peter Torkildsen, R-

Social issues aside, the bill would add $13 billion to Clinton's budget request of $254.4 billion. If approved, it. would result in a defense budget roughly equal to this year's, when adjusted for inflation. Most of the increase - $7.5 billion - would go for weapons.

Emily Elliott, an eight-year-old home school student, won second place in the third grade competition for the Texas Panhandle. The contest was open to children in grades K-3. The station received 407 entries from its viewing area and selected a first and second place winner for each grade level. On the third grade level, students had to write a story that contained 100-250 words and at least five illustrations. Entries were judged on originality, creative expression, storytelling and integration of copy and Elliott's story, "Skitter's Runaway Day," follows the adventures of a hamster on the loose from a mall pet store. Her story contained 239 words and six illustrations. Her real-life hamster, Skitter, and the escapades of three previous hamsters provided the inspiration for the story.

Elliott received a $25 gift certificate from Hastings and a certificate of recognition signed by series host and co-executive producer LeVar Burton.

Elliott and other Panhandlearea winners read their stories recently in front of KACV cameras. The stories will be broadcast during breaks around regular programming during the

Three U.S. warships move toward Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) -Three U.S. warships with some 2,000 Marines on board moved toward Liberia's shores today after fierce fighting erupted on a strategic bridge in the capital.

The ships moved closer to the coast in case they were needed to protect the U.S. Embassy, which is not far from the Johnson Street Bridge, said a Marine officer speaking on condition of anonymity.

Earlier today, Charles Taylor, a top government official and rebel leader, called off a cease-fire and ordered his troops to prepare for a major assault on a military barracks held by his archrival.

"We do not wish to take power by force of arm," Taylor said on his radio station, KISS-FM. But "there will be no cease-fire until the situation is arrested."

Taylor also warned the United States to stay out of the internal affairs of the West African country, whose capital has been engulfed in its worst fighting in six years of war.

Rebel factions moved their battles away from the U.S. Embassy and into Taylor's neighborhood on Wednesday, a day after Marines guarding the embassy shot to death three Liberians who fired toward the compound during heavy fighting.

"We regret that Americans had to kill Liberians the other day,' Taylor said. "We do not want any trigger-happy situation anymore. This government does not want any military confrontation with the U.S."

Despite his repeated calls for U.S. financial assistance for Liberia, Taylor insisted today that the Americans should not get involved in the country's politics or in the current fighting. That, he said, should be left in the hands of the Liberians and other west African nations who have contributed peacekeeping troops and attempted for years to mediate an end to the conflict. In today's broadcast, Taylor called on fighters of his National Patriotic Front of Liberia and an allied faction to gather at a military barracks in a suburb north of the capital.

He vowed to take control "by the weekend so Liberians can be able to bring their lives back to normal."

African peacekeeping troops had been preventing armed rebels from entering the city by two main bridges. Thousands of gunmen poured over the bridges Monday and Tuesday, before peacekeepers closed them, and were still in the central city.

Witnesses said today the peacekeepers withdrew from the Family defends young suspect

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -The mother and grandfather of the youngest child in the nation ever charged with attempted murder broke their silence to defend the 6-year-old suspect in the beating of an infant.

"Nobody knows what actually happened, but I know that my son is not evil and running around threatening people like the media says," the mother said Wednesday. She spoke to KPIX-TV on condition that she be identified only as "Lisa."

Her son, whom she described as learning disabled, is in juvenile detention in the April 22 attack on Ignacio Bermudez Jr. of Richmond. Doctors have said the baby suffered two skull fractures and may have permanent brain damage.

Police said the beating occurred after the 6-year-old recruited 8-year-old twin boys to help him steal a Big Wheel tricycle from a neighbor's home.

The grandfather said his grandson has been unresponsive when questioned about the attack, but could have unknowingly attacked a baby if it was bundled in blankets.

"He probably just thought it was an object and just kicked it ... like kids do kick things," said the grandfather, who asked that he be identified only as

Nation briefs

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A government witness testified that Gov. Jim Guy Tucker's $1.2 million purchase of a water and sewer utility was based on an inflated appraisal.

Real estate appraiser Michael Pyron testified Wednesday that the appraisal done by Robert Palmer prior to the 1986 purchase relied wrongly on an engineering estimate of how much it would have cost to replace the system.

Tucker, who was not in office at the time, and a business partner borrowed $150,000 from Hale's Capital Management Services Inc. for the down payment. They bought the system from Madison Financial Corp., an arm of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association, which was owned Tucker's co-defendants, James and Susan McDougal.

Prosecutors contend the utility was worth $450,000 and that the price was inflated to generate a sizable sales commission for Mrs. McDougal.

NEW YORK (AP) — Swiss banking officials and Jewish leaders have reached an agreement to search for millions - and possibly billions - of dollars deposited in Switzerland by Jews killed in the Holocaust, The New York Times reported today.

The Times quoted officials close to the negotiations as saying the agreement would give independent auditors "unfettered access to all relevant files' in Swiss banks to identify the accounts of the dead. A committee of seven - including a chairman, three people appointed by Jewish organizations and three by Swiss bankers - would oversee auditors' work. Any funds not claimed by Holocaust heirs would be donated to charities.

Black leaders ignore slavery

"If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong," wrote Abraham Lincoln. Although slavery has declined in recent years – especially in the nations of the former Soviet Union – it is increasing sharply in one area: the Sudan, an impoverished, war-torn country in eastern Africa.

As has happened so many times in their history, the victims are blacks, in particular the natives of Southern Sudan who are Christians or believe in their native religions.

But now the world is beginning to notice, spurred by a chilling, first-hand report in Reader's Digest by Brian Eads. He wrote: "Slavery has returned to Sudan, Africa's largest country. Behind the cloak of a brutal civil war, tens of thousands of people have been abducted from their homes and sold like chattel ... Some are bought by individual owners to serve as field workers, household servants, or concubines. Others, confined in camps, work on government farms, or are leased to large private landowners. There are frequent and consistent reports that slaves are being exported to Libya and countries on the Persian Gulf."

How can this be happening? Hasn't slavery been outlawed everywhere? Yes, but many countries still don't operate under the rule of law. Although Sudan's law officially prohibits slavery, the country's dictatorship is intent on imposing its particular brand of Islamic extremism on the southern, non-Islamic part of the country. The dictatorship's weapons are military conquest and slavery.

Since the Reader's Digest article appeared, Congress has held hearings on the new slavery. Those testifying included Charles Jacobs, head of the American Anti-Slavery Group in Somerville, Mass.

He said, "We're trying to build a grassroots movement, but have been unable to to rekindle the anti-apartheid movement," which successfully brought an end to South Africa's racist system. "We pretty much have failed because the black leadership is AWOL. Congressman Donald M. Payne of New Jersey, the head of the Black Caucus, is on our side, but no black leader has said publicly to his own constituency that this is an issue that needs support." Jacobs tried and failed to get the Rev. Jesse Jackson to Join the anti-slavery cause, repeatedly sending him information

Nation of Islam Minister Louis Farrakhan has been even worse. According to Eads, "Last October, Mohamed Athie of the International Coalition Against Chattel Slavery asked for time to speak on behalf of enslaved Africans at Farrakhan's 'Million Man' March on Washington. Farrakhan's group ignored the request."

In all their harangues against the injustice of American slavery, Jackson and Farrakhan seem to have no time to denounce the slavery of blacks going on right this minute in Africa.

But this issue isn't going away. Just as the abolitionist movement of the early 19th century began small, then soon spread across the world, outlawing slavery in most countries, so the new anti-slavery movement will continue to grow. It's time to end what John Wesley called "that execrable sum of all villainies."

A better option for the dying

There are plenty of doctors to see if you're looking for a cure. Michael Preodor is one to see if

On a warm and sunny spring morning in Chicago, Preodor is taking care of dying patients. It is not easy or happy work, but as medical director of Horizon Hospice at St. Joseph's Hospital he has the satisfaction of knowing he is providing something his patients need and want - and that most such patients don't get.

That something is a comfortable and dignified end to their lives, which Horizon's doctors, nurses and volunteers try to achieve by treating pain, assuring all needed care and assistance, and letting patients live out their final days at home if they possibly can. Today, Preodor and a Horizon nurse are on their way to visit a 42-year-old man with AIDS and a 62-year-old man with cancer of the larynx, both of whom are still living at home, surrounded by their families.

The hospice's mission is a departure from standard medical care, which puts far more resources into overcoming disease than helping patients whose illnesses can't be overcome. It is also a reproach to a fashionable new idea: giving doctors the freedom to help suffering terminal patients commit suicide - or even kill patients who can't do it themselves.

Pain is a huge but invisible public-health problem. It is particularly prevalent among terminal cancer victims, 80 percent of whom encounter serious pain before they die.

The good news is that this pain can always be controlled, usually without significant side effects. Morphine and its sister drugs are extremely effective in making these people comfortable, and if treatment is begun early, they can be administered so as to leave the patient awake and fully alert - not sedated or confused.

Says Preodor, "I had an AIDS patient who needed 1000 mg. of morphine every hour" - about 300 times the dose typically required for patients after painful gall-bladder surgery. "He was doing better with crossword puzzles than the nurses." In some 90% of his cases, patients can stay at home.

The bad news is that most people facing the end don't get the help they need. Studies suggest that despite medical advances in this area, only 20% to 50% of terminal cancer patients receive adequate phine prescriptions, a concern that may be justified. pain treatment. Most are underendorsed by doctors who fail to take such discomfort seriously enough or mistakenly fear the consequences of the most effective drugs. So at least a quarter of a million cancer vietims have to endure serious and unnecessary pain in their passage from this world.

Patients with this burden are prone to depression, making them susceptible to the lure of suicide. Medical professionals involved in hospices fear that legalizing physician-assisted suicide will distract attention from the need for better palliative care by providing a cheap shortcut. Supporters of assisted suicide, in fact, often argue that it spares patients from what amounts to physical torture. Their option, however, would shorten the lives of those who would rather die quickly than endure unremitting agony but who could be spared either fate.

Preodor says he has never had a patient commit suicide, though some talk about it. "Most are receptive to staying alive once they know they'll be taken care of," he says. What hospice personnel have learned, he says, is that "if we control the pain, we can allow patients what they need to go through with their families, friends and churches.

Allowing access to assisted suicide without first assuring the availability of good palliative care is addressing the problem backward. The tools for treating terminal cancer pain have been available for decades, yet doctors have made no apparent progress in using them.

They assume that patients will become addicted to morphine, which turns out not to be a danger. They fear that morphine will hasten death, which it doesn't when given properly. They worry about scrutiny from the government if they write too many mor-

And they generally place too little emphasis on helping patients who cannot be saved. Preodor says that 95% of articles published in medical journals on cancer care deal with possible new cures, not methods to minimize the suffering of terminal patients. Likewise with AIDS. Research dollars are allocated in roughly the same proportions. "It's a societal thing," he says. "We value conquering disease."

Yes, we do, and when we can't stop disease, we are tempted to preempt it by using artificial means to hasten death. Good palliative care offers an alternative: not prolonging life pointlessly, but making the most of the time each dying person has left. Better to kill pain than to kill patients.

those ubiquitous Washington organizations that studies the news for hints of bias and subversion and that sort of thing, has just published a report stating that CBS correspondent Eric Engberg is "the most negativistic campaign reporter" in the business. This is nothing short of an outrage.

Nowhere in the report does this excuse for a think tank even suggest that Joe Spear was considered for the accolade.

I work my tail off week after week, struggling to be the most negative news person around, and I don't even get an honorable mention. I am deeply hurt. My self-esteem has been dealt a mighty blow. I am losing my sense of identity. I am becoming uncentered. I think I'm going to need some Prozac. I think I might even have a lawsuit here. Deliberate infliction of emotional stress, or something along those lines.

What makes the thing even harder to swallow is that I have published naught but positive remarks about the Center for Media and Public Affairs. A review of my files indicates they have had one mention a year, on average, and depending on how you interpret the words, of course, they were generally favorable.

Joseph Spear

I know what you're thinking. You're thinking, Joe, they studied TELEVISION news. They rated CAMPAIGN coverage. They did not do columnists who write about general stuff.

But I ask: Do you really think the public at large is soing to make that distinction? Most people think It pains me to go on with this, but in the interest of "media" and "press" are the same thing. They're giving the full story, I suppose I must. What the center thinking, where the hell was Spear? to rating negative reporters he's not even on the list. As long as I am on this subject, there was another recent event that bears analysis. The Freedom Forum, yet another group that concentrates on media issues, sponsored a survey of 139 Washington journalists and reported that 89% voted for Bill Clinton, only 4% are registered Republicans, 50% are registered Democrats, 37% are independents and 91% describe selves as "liberal or moderate."

In the interest of fairness, I should probably ask what's so bad about being a moderate. I should also point out a minor inaccuracy: All those reporters did not vote FOR Bill Clinton. They voted AGAINST George Bush, and whether that is a demonstration of bias or good sense I will

In any case, this sort of finding does not sur-Engberg was the crabbiest correspondent, with prise Republican leaders like Newt Gingrich, who recently admonished the nation's newspaper editors to clean up their acts. "I unequivocally believe ... that the core of the news media is biased, that the bias is amazing," he said. If they didn't believe him, they could go ask "any set of serious conservatives in America ... whether or not they think the media is slanted."

Talk about your impartial juries.

Despite some anxiety about losing your respect, I point out that Mr. Gingrich also did not name Mr. Spear as the worst of the bunch. After all the nasty things I've said about him in the past few comments in your column about junk mail, I had to share my experience with you. It all started in Vancouver, where my wife ordered a sweater for me from the landlady who ran the bed and breakfast inn where we were staying. The landla-dy wanted to be paid only for the yarn, not her time. She suggested we give what we felt it was worth to our favorite charity.

When we received the sweater at home in Pennsylvania two months later, my wife sent a check to the landlady and asked her to put her favorite charity on the check. Soon my wife was getting pelted with financial support letters from Jimmy Swaggart's ministry. Finally, I wrote DECEASED on one of the solicitations and returned it. Presto! She no longer got mail from Jimmy Swaggart.

My brother-in-law, a doctor in Miami, heard how I got rid of my "junk mail" and put "deceased" on all of his junk mail and returned it to sender. A few weeks later, he realized that he was not receiving important mail that he was expecting. He then found out that his postman had seen "deceased" on his mail and, assuming that he was indeed dead, had put "deceased" on his first-class mail and sent it back, too. My brother-in-law then discovered that he'd been mourned by his Harvard classmates and was no longer a member of some of his clubs and associations.

His remark to me was, "The next time you get a smart idea, don't tell me about it!"

> AN ABBY FAN IN LAKE WALES, FLA.

P.S. About 30 years ago, I wrote you about my wife not being interested in sex. You suggested we see a sex therapist, only we couldn't afford to go because I was starting a new business. This year, when things went from bad to worse, we started going to a therapist - and we wished we had taken your advice years ago!

DEAR FAN IN LAKE WALES: Better late than never.

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before, but I read the letter from "Wondering in Missouri," about the lady who wanted to know if she should give her children things that were special to her before she passed away. Yes, yes, yes - please do!

My mom died earlier this year and none of her wishes were obeyed. For years and years, she had been telling everyone the things that she wanted her children and grandchildren to have. Well, after she was gone, her husband ignored her wishes, refused to pay one cent for the funeral, and treated us worse than anyone could ever begin to imagine. He kept everything she wanted her loved ones to have.

I and her granddaughters are devastated. We not only have to live every single day with the grief of losing her, but we have nothing of hers that she wanted us to have. Mother would be so very sad.

Her husband destroyed her will and did not even give us the courtesy of seeing her last words. So, if you have loved ones who are special to you — then please, please give them the things that you want them to have before you die. We can't even get a lawyer to try and fight this injustice because we can't afford it. My heart is broken. BROKENHEARTED IN OREGON

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: I have often said, "Do your giving while you're living, and you'll be knowing where it's going."

NEW YORK (AP) -Gheorghe Muresan of the Washington Bullets today won the NBA Most Improved Player Award, receiving 50 of a possible 113 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Muresan, the NBA leader in shooting percentage at .584, also averaged career-highs in points (14.5), rebounds (9.6), blocked shots (2.26), assists (0.7), steals (0.68). His scoring average went up 4.5 points per game and his rebounding average improved by 2.9 per game. Muresan was eighth in the league in blocked shots.

The 7-foot-7 center from Romania started the first 76 games for the Bullets before a right knee injury ended his season. He shot better than .500 from the field in 58 games and blocked two or more shots 43 times.

George McCloud of Dallas was second in the balloting with 23 votes and Cleveland teammates Danny Ferry and Terrell Brandon shared third place with six votes each.

Eighteen players received votes. They were Terry Murray of Toronto (4), Brian Williams of the Los Angeles Clippers (4), Elden Campbell of the Los Angeles Lakers (3), Shawn Bradley and Chris Childs, both of New Jersey (2), Alan Houston of Detroit (2), Bobby Phills of Cleveland (2), Dennis Scott of Orlando (2), David Wesley of Boston (2), Greg Anthony of Vancouver (1), Vinny Del Negro of San Antonio (1), Matt Geiger of Charlotte (1), Juwan Howard of Washington (1) and Jayson Williams of New Jersey (1).

AUTO RACING

Winston Cup races at Talladega Superspeedway have begun to resemble traffic in a construction zone at rush hour, except that these guys are commuting at over 190

This isn't just a bunch of guys going fast. They are racing, dodging in and out, up and down the 33-degree banking of NASCAR's longest and fastest oval, sometimes threeand four-wide.

"Anybody that tells you it's not the most nerve-wracking place we race, they haven't been up in that lead pack and been part of what goes on," said Dale Jarrett, a two-time Daytona 500 winner. "Two eyes, a mirror and a spotter aren't nearly enough to keep up with everything that's going on around you out there.

It's obviously a crowd pleaser. The throngs at the rural track, which is 40 miles east of Birmingham and 110 miles west of Atlanta, just keep getting bigger.

Last Sunday, more than 155,000 people came, the biggest estimated crowd in the history of the 2.66-mile track, which opened in 1969. And many were standing most of the afternoon, awed by the sights and sounds emanating from the big track during the Winston Select 500.

There were two terrifying crashes on Sunday.

One of them was a single-car incident that left 1988 Winston Cup champion and Talladega's all-time speed king Bill Elliott with a fractured left thigh. Elliott, who once qualified at Talladega at over 212 mph, spun into the infield grass, where his Ford soared into the air, nearly flipping over on its top. It came back down hard on its nose, bounced back into the air and flattened onto its four wheels, shaking its helpless driver like a rag doll.

Unbridled's Song works fast, draws outside post had a fast workout in the earlymorning rain Wednesday, then drew the outside post in the field of 20 3-year-olds.

"I feel like I've already won," jockey Mike Smith said after Unbridled's Song zipped a halfmile in 46 seconds in the Churchill Downs mud and galloped out in 59.

Unbridled's Song didn't fare well in the post-position draw Wednesday night. Trainer Jim Ryerson tried to put on a good face on the bad draw.

"The real speed is just inside of us and not down on the fence," he said. "If they (Skip Away, No. 17; Matty G, No. 19, and Unbridled's Song) take off (together) they can put a little distance on the rest of the field. Maybe we have the kind of horse — I hope we do — that can overcome this."

Added Smith: "If they (Skip Away and Matty G) were way inside, maybe they would be gone, but they're outside with us and we can follow them. Unbridled's Song likes to run and I won't have to hold him."

The gelding Clyde Van Dusen, in 1929, was the only winner to start from the No. 20 post.

Unbridled's Song, winner of the Florida Derby and Wood Memorial, was made the early 8-5 favorite, followed by Blue Grass winner Skip Away, 7-2, and the Overbrook Farm entry of Editor's Note and Grindstone, trained by D. Wayne Lukas, at 6-

Away for his wife Carolyn, was not pleased with his colt's No. 17 post for Saturday's race.

"I think it was a lousy draw," Hine said. "I'm amazed, the best three horses in the race (Skip Away, Unbridled's Song and side posts."

There have been 157 starters from post 15 to 23 in the auxiliary

Unbridled's Song worked Wednesday with what is called an egg bar shoe on both front feet. Ryerson said it was recommended the colt wear two bar shoes to improve his balance in case he has to race in them.

While Skip Away was awe-some in the Blue Grass April 13 at Keeneland, several trainers wonder whether he can come close to duplicating that performance Saturday.

It also seems the gray colt doesn't have the proper dosage. The dosage index is a way of measuring Derby performance through blood lines.

"Now if they made him the favorite, that would be three strikes against us," Hine said. "Then, if I didn't know any better I'd pack up and go home." Shane Sellers will ride Skip Away, owned by Hine's wife, Carolyn.

Team Lukas is composed of Editor's Note, loser of seven straight, including a third in the Blue Grass; Grindstone, second in the Arkansas Derby; Honour and Glory, second in the Santa Sonny Hine, who trains Skip Anita Derby; Prince of Thieves, second in the Lexington; and Victory Speech, second in the Jim Beam.

Team Two downs Team Six in Lady Harvester softball

PAMPA - In Lady Harvester softball action, Team Two defeated Team Six, 13-7. For Team Two, Kimberly Clark picked up the mound win, allowing two walks and striking out six in two innings pitched. Amanda Potter got her third save of the season, pitching the final three innings. Potter allowed four hits, all singles, and walked six. Team Two held Team Six to just one run through the first three innings and led, 9-1, going into the top of the fourth. Four errors in the fourth inning by Team Two allowed Team Six to score five runs on just two hits.

In the fifth inning with Team Two leading 13-6, good defensive play limited Team Six to just one run. Meredith Hite snagged a fly ball to keep Team Six from conting from behind.

Team Two had eight hits for the contest. Leading hitter was Jennifer Quintana with a triple and single, followed by Clark with a double and single. Potter had two singles and Nicole Barnes and Holly Liu had one single Base hits for Team Six were recorded by Erin Cobb, Lisa Silva, Heather Mitchell and Lucinda Silva, one single each.

Team Two's record is 5-0 on the season. Team Two's next game will be Thursday at 6 p.m. against Team Three at Hobart Street Park.

Rangers nip Mariners

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Four months ago Jeff Russell wasn't sure he would pitch again.

He underwent surgery to repair a herniated disc in his back on January 17th and said "I had some doubts after surgery if I would be back."

Russell proved he is back Wednesday night by pitching three innings of scoreless relief to help the Texas Rangers to a 5-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

It was his first win since May 8, 1995 at Oakland. His three-inning stint was his longest since May, 1992 at Kansas City. Russell wasn't overwhelmed by his performance:

"I'd say it was a 7 out of 10," he said.

"The hardest part was trying to get through the minors and not get burned out over the last month." Will Clark homered in the seventh inning to give the Rangers the win over Seattle as Mariners starter Randy Johnson had his shortest outing since 1993. Johnson, bothered by tightness in his right calf, lasted only two innings, allowing six hits and four runs. It was Johnson's field wall against Steve shortest stint since July 23, 1993, when he Avery (2-2). It was his ninth home trapped Jones in a lasted 1 1-3 innings in a 9-4 loss to home run of the season. Cleveland. This was Johnson's 73rd start

Johnson, the AL Cy Young Award winner who has won 11 straight games, complained of lower back problems in his last start at Milwaukee. He will be examined Thursday when the team returns to Seattle.

Pampa's Duane King (above) had a base hit and scored a run in the Harvesters' 7-2 win over Borger on Tuesday. The Harvesters host Caprock at 1 p.m. Saturday in the final home game of the season.

Astros shut out Braves, 3-0

HOUSTON (AP) - Mike Hampton opened the Bagwell homered as the loaded the bases for Bell. Houston Astros beat the Atlanta Braves Wednesday night.

Hampton (3-2) allowed only three singles, walked two and struck out five. He retired the first eight hitters of the game, and set down 10 in a row between the third and seventh innings. Bagwell led off the fourth with a drive over the left

Avery gave up one run on seven hits in seven hitter Javy Lopez hit a line innings. He walked none and struck out six. Derek Bell hit a two-run single off reliever Brad inning-ending

Hampton pitched a three-inning with a single, Brian hitter for his first career Hunter had an infield hit complete game and Jeff and a walk to Bagwell The Braves had only two

3-0 baserunners until the seventh, and two outstanding defensive plays by Bagwell in the inning preserved the shutout. Chipper Jones led off with a walk and Fred McGriff singled. Dave Justice hit a sharp grounder toward first base that Bagwell moved to his right to field, and his throw rundown.

Two pitches later, pinchdrive to the right side, but Bagwell caught it and threw to second for an Clontz in the eighth. play.
