Republicans to probe wiretap

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican Chairman Bill Brock said today the party is investigating evidence of possible electronic eavesdropping involving the office of the GOP's No. 2 official.

Brock said the party will conduct a full investigation of security surrounding the office of Republican National Committee co-chairman Mary Crisp and also planned a full sweep of the GOP's Capitol Hill

The party chairman said he learned of the possible bugging Friday night after a private electronics expert hired by Ms. Crisp uncovered concealed wires and evidence of a magnetic field, which could indicate electronic surveillance, in her office.

Brock said, "I frankly don't think it's anything to worry about yet. But when a question like this is raised, you obviously check it out.

He refused to discuss who might have been responsible for any eavesdropping. "If there's anything there, we will, of course, pursue it."

The Washington Post reported in late editions that Ms. Crisp said she heard beeps on her office telephone and called in the investigator on Wednesday to find out whether her office was under surveillance.

After the investigator reported his findings, Brock said, party officials notified the FBI and District of Law enforcement authorities declined immediat comment on the case.

"We're going to check it out with professionals." Brock said. "Beyond that, I don't think anybody is up tight about this yet." The Post identified the private investigator as Richard E. Govignon, a security specialist from Baltimore and onetime U.S. Army Reserve intelligence officer. Ms. Crisp also suspected that her apartment telephone at the Shoreham Hotel had been wired for eavesdropping, the newspaper said.

Govignon could not immediately be reached for

Iranians arrested in alleged overthrow conspiracy

By The Associated Press

At least 27 members of the Iranian armed forces were arrested Saturday on charges of conspiring with 250 other soldiers to overthrow the government, the head of the army's Revolutionary Tribunal was quoted as saying.

According to Hojatoleslam Mohammad Reyshahri, head of the tribunal, 100 men have been convicted or are awaiting trial in connection with the alleged mass plot and 150 others are still being sought.

Among those reported implicated was Admiral Ahmad Madani, who finished second to Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in Iran's presidential election earlier this year. Madani has spoken out against the holding of the 53 American hostages who spent their 231st day in captivity

His successor as commander of the Iranian navy, Admiral Mahmoud Alavi, was reported to have been arrested in February and to have appeared in court three weeks ago. Reyshahri was quoted as saying: "Admiral Madani

Admiral Alavi since Madani's name was often mentioned by the accused (Alavi).

Revshahri also was quoted as saving seven Iranians currently on trial have all confessed links to pro-shah generals; to Iraq. Iran's western neighbor with which it has had several border clashes; or to autonomy-seeking Kurds in northwestern Iran but that the overwhelming majority in the armed forces supports the government.

"Just a few days ago the wife of an army officer came and was a member of the American CIA," he was quoted as saying. The leader of the Moslem fundamentalist party, which has sought to limit Bani-Sadr's power and is expected to play the key role in determining the fate of the American hostages, was quoted as saying any solution to the hostage standoff should not be aimed at establishing ties with the United

ruling Revolutionary Council, was reported to have said in southern Iran:

"It was after a great struggle that the Iranian nation had succeeded in severing its ties and stopping its dependence on the United States. This policy should be followed and pursued in the future. The economic policy of the country should be directed in such a way that the Iranian nation should not get involved again in depending on the United States and Soviet Union and all other powers," he

Woman officer finds police work rewarding

By DEBORAH BRIDGES

PAMPA POLICE OFFICER Patty Williams fills out police reports by the light of her patrol unit during a night on duty. Mrs. Williams says she enjoys police work but says it's definitely not "Charlie's Angels." A veteran of the force for two years, she is the only female patrol officer.

Of The Pampa News It's midnight. The city patrol car pulls up in front of small, shabby house in response to a complaint of loud music coming from the Anticipating a routine warning call, the officer steps from the police unit. At the door of the residence, the policeman bends down to pat the dog curled up next to the porch. With a growl, the animal lunges at the patrolman. Surprised, the policeman backs up and with appropriate expletives falls into a spare tire, arms and legs flying. Peals of laughter fill the still night.

Climbing from the tire, still laughing, the officer meets the inhabitants who came out to see what the ruckus was. With a warning to keep the dog chained and the volume down, the officer returns to Turning to this reporter waiting in the police vehicle, the officer said, "Now that's what police work is really like." Occurences like this are not unusual for Officer Patty Williams the only female patrolman on the Pampa police force.

A two-year veteran in the department, Williams says she did not believe any of the myths about police work.

"I don't think I've had any big shock since I've started (as a policeman)." she says.

After spending two years studying police science in Amarillo College. Williams said the officers made it a point to tell her all the negative things about the job.

'I came into this job thinking it was worse than it really is," she "It's not a glorious job," she adds, "definitely not like 'Charlie's

'It gets into your blood,' she says, "because it sure doesn't pay that much

"I never wanted a monotonous job," Williams explains. "I like not knowing what you're going to run into next. "Of course." she adds, "there's the seriousness of knowing you can get blown away any minute.

The danger, the times of taking one boring report after another, eight hours on the midnight shift, "getting sleepy," do not deter her.

"I don't feel like I can do anything else," she says. Williams carries her own weight around the department, according to her male cohorts. She changes her own tires, makes her own arrests and handles whatever situation comes her way

"Patty is good," Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said. "I wouldn't trade her for another male officer.'

If it comes to a fight, several of her co-workers said they would like to have Officer Williams beside them.

At the police station, she is treated like "one of the guys. This includes the risque talk and well-known practical jokes all the officers indulge in to let off some of the pressure of the job. "This job gets real pressuring," Williams says.

"A lot of the pressure is administrative — wanting to please the brass," she adds "There's just pressure everywhere with people," she says, sometimes it creates conflicts at home.

Patty is wearing a bullet-proof vest her husband had bought for her. "It was really nice of him," she says. "It bout chokes me,

Her job doesn't bother her spouse too much, Williams says. "He's real supportative," she says.

"He believes I can handle the job and realizes that I need it." With a wink, she adds, "I think he gets a kick out of telling people his wife is a policeman.

"Disrespect is one thing that bothers me," she says. "I want to be taken seriously

The greatest problem she has encountered as a female policeman, she says, is getting respect.

"I get the impression when someone calls the police they are uncomfortable when a female answers the call," Williams says. "People just don't respect me as much as males.

Despite this problem, she says she has never been involved in a situation she could not handle.

There was one call Williams answered, however, where she felt powerless

She was the first to arrive on the scene of an accident involving a child run over by a relative while playing in the street.

The child was already dead," she remembers. "I felt literally helpless. . . I wanted to do something, but there wasn't anything you could do

'There's not anything much that bothers me in this work." she says, "but little children. They're so innocent.

A noticeable quality shows up while Officer Williams is on duty. She has an ability to be compassionate but firm with the people she

One night she arrested a person who was obviously intoxicated The drunken man was staggering down an alley. He had obviously urinated on himself.

Williams searched and arrested the man. While handcuffing him. she said to this reporter, "He's as big as my husband!

Turning back to the person, she asked, "How tall are you?

In answer, the man slurred, "Six feet, four-and-half-inches." 'Wow!" she answered, "You've got a half inch on my husband."

During the processing of prisoners early one morning, she carried on conversations with each one about their work, their family. She helped an alcoholic who had gone off the wagon after two years contact the local Alcoholics Anonymous group.

In one instance, she backed down a belligerent man, larger than herself The fellow had decided to check out a parked pickup on a service station lot at about 1:30 a.m. Seeing the person in the vehicle, Williams pulled up to check it out. The man stepped from the pickup, refusing to leave and telling her

- in "straight-forward" language - he "could look at that pickup" if he wanted to. The only indication of Officer Williams' feelings could be seen in the straightness of her back and her clenched hands. In a no-nonsense manner, she instructed the man to leave Spouting expletives, he finally left. It's sometimes hard to be "hard-core military," then go home and soften up, Williams says.

"On my days off and when I go somewhere," she says, "I wear a dress whenever I can, but I still feel kind of funny."

Whatever the problems or excitement she may encounter each day as a policeman. Williams has basically the same attitude

"I just do my job the best I can," she says. "I don't worry about it.

At least twenty cases of suspected parvovirus in dogs have been reported in Pampa, primarily within the last two weeks, according to Pampa veterinarians, and they urge pet owners to have their pets vaccinated against the disease.

The veterinarians said actual confirmation of the disease has been verified in three of the "Confirmation of the disease is costly to dog owners and results are often slow in getting back to the veterinarian's office. For this reason, many of the pet owners are reluctant to take the extra step. They know their pet is ill and that is their main concern," one veterinarian said.

Parvovirus, according to the Texas Veterinary Medical Association (TVMA), is thought to be a mutant cat distemper virus and is highly

The prime candidates for the virus, according to the TVMA, are dogs that have contact with other dogs and puppies, ages six to eight weeks. The time from exposure to the disease, until the symptoms occur, is from seven to 14 days. The TVMA outlines the course of the disease with the first symptoms being depression, loss of appetite, accompanied by feverish symptoms. A fever cannot be detected in a dog by feeling the nose. A cold or warm nose is often the result of weather conditions or humidity readings. A dog's body may feel warm or the animal may act listless as the result of a fever. The second signs are vomiting and diarrhea. Bloody diarrhea may occur.

Death in the affected animals can occur quickly, possibly within 24 hours. Dehydration of the animal is the primary concern in the treatment.

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) - Firefighters pressed on with their battle Saturday to control 36 blazes in the Gila National Forest and another in Carlsbad Caverns National Park that have scorched at least 2,150 acres

The fires were touched off by lightning storms that have menaced the areas since Wednesday. 'We're winning a few battles and losing a few battles, but we'll win the war eventually," said Tom Davis, district ranger with the U.S. Forest Service at Carlsbad Caverns National Park. The largest fire, burning on the northwestern portion of the park, has blackened at least 2,000 acres since it began Wednesday, Davis said. The park is in southeastern New Mexico. "It's primarly burning in rugged terrain with heavy grass, juniper, oak and shrub," he said. "It's burning in rocky, steep canyons, and narrow ridge tops. The terrain is incredibly About 140 firefighters and three helicopters ferrying in supplies and additional fire crews battled the blaze early Saturday, Davis said. On Friday, the helicopters dropped buckets of water on the

Party unity elusive goal of Demos

WASHINGTON (AP) - Party unity remained an elusive goal Saturday as Democrats began debating a proposed 1980 platform that all but guarantees a convention showdown in August between President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

The 158-member platform committee, dominated by Carter partisans, convened for the first of four days of meetings to review a proposed Democratic policy guide that pays glowing tribute to the president's record during his first term and urges that his major domestic and foreign policies be continued.

The platform is equally one-sided in rejecting the major proposals that Kennedy has promoted during his campaign for the party's nomination, including his calls for a $12-billion anti-recession program, wage-price controls and gasoline rationing.

The Kennedy forces were outnumbered by about 2-1 on a subcommittee that drafted the platform last week. Kennedy is outnumbered by about the same margin on the full committee, but his aides insisted they will continue fighting to change the platform more toward their likeing over the next three days.

But the prospect that Kenndy would score any significant victories before the full committee appeared unlikely, and supporters of the senator said they were determined to carry the fight to the floor of the party convention, which opens in New York on Aug. 11.

Speaking to reporters following Saturday's opening session. former Rep. Patsy Mink of Hawaii, a Kennedy backer who sat on the drafting subcommittee, blasted the platform as simply an enshrinement" of the Carter administration's performance and "a repudiation of traditional views of the Democratic Party.

particularly its commitment to combat rising unemployment. South Carolina Gov. Richard Riley, a Carter man who chaired the drafting subcommittee, told the full committee in an opening address that while major differences between the two camps remain. "I'd like to emphasize the similarities."

In a pitch for party unity, Riley said: "At some point, we must beat our swords within the party into plowshares and go out and plow the fields together. Privately, however, each camp accused the other of being intractable on the major issues in dispute and virtually ruled out any chances for meaningful compromise before the August convention. There were some things we were prepared to give in on but didn't because we weren't given a chance," said one Carter aide who did not want to be named. "They (Kennedy people) weren't willing to

"They (Carter people) have the votes," countered Mrs. Mink. "It's up to them to indicate if they are willing to compromise.

Delta pilot misses Tampa airport

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - The Boeing 727 broke through the low-hanging overcast, bumped to an easy landing and rolled to a stop. "Welcome to Tampa International Airport," a smiling attendant told the 90 passengers. But Delta Air Lines' Flight 604 was at McDill Air Force Base, eight miles to the south. "We have inadvertently landed at McDill," the pilot announced after a few minutes on the ground Friday afternoon. No one was injured and a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said no "safety factor" was involved in the mistake, which a Delta spokesman blamed on the weather. The flight from Atlanta had been routine until the 5:36 p.m. landing, which came after the aircraft had been cleared for landing at the last minute that the plane was heading for McDill.

McDill Staff Sgt. Mark Goldstein said the landing took the base by surprise. He said base controllers were used to having commercial jets fly over on final approaches to Tampa and that no one knew anything was amiss until the aircraft was nearly on the runway. Emergency vehicles and air policemen, not knowing what was going on, rushed out to meet the plane as it rolled to a stop. "They converged on us like we were aliens," said Gandolfo.

J.D. Seale, Tampa airport tower chief, said his controllers realized

About 45 minutes later, the plane took off again with all passengers and finished its flight

Gandolfo said that as the plane landed at the right airport, the passengers gave the pilot a round of applause.

Texas Republicans blast Carter

Associated Press Writer HOUSTON (AP) — The state's top Republicans, to the delight of 3,875 GOP convention delegates, laid it on President Carter Saturday, saying the Democratic incumbent must be beaten in November to insure the future of the nation and Texas.

Carter was blasted by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, by Anne Armstrong, former ambassador to Great Britain, and by Gov. Bill Clements, the first Republican ever elected the state's chief executive.

It was a quiet state convention, and one where all the speakers called for party unity in an aggressive campaign in behalf of Ronald Reagan to bring the state's important 26 electoral votes into the Republican column.

The only thorn in the otherwise rosy convention was a proposed resolution that a human life amendment be passed that would, in effect, outlaw abortions except in certain cases of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is in danger Clements told the delegates, "We must seek what is right for Texas

Education and the Department of Energy 'We can take no more of a man who doesn't know what he's doing or where he's going, so I say it is high time that we tell him where to go - right back to Georgia.

The governor added, "The people of Texas are not crazy. We're going to turn the tables. We're going to tell Jimmy Carter something. We are going to tell him that we don't want him as our president any more. We have had it."

Couple purchases home in 'reverse' auction

By EARL BOHN Associated Press Writer PITTSBURGH (AP) - Donna and William Boyd wanted a quieter place to live and got it with the wave of a hand Saturday at an auction where prices on 70 properties went down instead of up. Taking advantage of the current buyers' market in real estate, the young couple bought a $30,000 townhouse at $4,000 off list price. "We were just hoping for a good deal, and you can't do better than that," Mrs. Boyd, a 33-year-old nurse, said as her husband, a free-lance photographer, signed sale papers. The auction was among the first in the nation in which homes were sold "Dutch" style, a system in which bidding starts at the asking price and falls, said auctioneer Bill Fox. It was the idea of a Pittsburgh-area real estage agency, Wonderly Weston Associates. Only two other homes were sold by the time bidding closed, said a

They are bacteria, microscopic organisms that have lived on

The high court said General Electric had a right to patent protection under existing law for an oil-eating organism it developed to combat oil spills. Scientists and industry say the decision will give added impetus to the commercial application of genetic engineering, which at this stage means manipulating the basic makeup of bacteria to make them do things they normally wouldn't. The legal victory may be more a psychological boost to industry rather than one removing a big obstacle. Even without patent protection, research has progressed with companies treating new discoveries as trade secrets. Analysts say many may continue this strategy to avoid revealing their secrets. However, industry spokesmen say the ruling does not answer all the questions about protecting new organisms. Much will depend upon its interpretation by the U.S. Patent Office and other courts. "For instance, will a patent apply to only one species of organism at a time or will it include other organisms developed from that parent organism," asks Irving Johnson, vice president for research at Eli Lilly and Co., the pharmaceutical firm. Thomas D. Kiley, vice president and general counsel of Genentech Corp., of San Francisco, which has several genetic patents pending, said the decision covers organisms that are the product of gene

But he wondered if the ruling would apply to other hybrid organisms made by other methods. He cited the example of "hydridomas," a fusion of a tumor cell and an antibody-producing cell that makes a specific antibody to a disease.

He said Carter had committed "five unforgiveable sins against Texas" and listed them as follows:

"The so-called windfall profits tax against the oil industrty. "The natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 that placed intrastate natural gas under federal control for the first time in history. "The tremendous damage he has done to our relations with

- "The federal suit against our Texas prison system in an effort to degrade what many experts considered to be the best prison system in the nation.

- "And the recent attempt to lump all Houston area school districts into one desegregation plan.' Tower said the president "has brought about the humiliation of the United States. Since Jimmy Carter has been in office, it has become more dangerous to be a friend of the United States than an enemy. The senator said, "I have never seen the Republican Party more united, but don't take it for granted we can carry Texas without a lot "I remember in 1976," Tower said, "when the president told Americans he would never lie to them. That was his first lie.' Archer and Armstrong followed the same pattern, lashing out at the president for the high rate of inflation, the high rate of unemployment, a weak defense program and an even weaker foreign-Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., told a news conference that he believed the Republicans should take no definite stand in the party platform on the Equal Rights Amendment or the abortion issue. He also said it "is nice to be mentioned as a possible vice presidential candidate, but I certainly don't expect it to happen.'

Because of a May primary, Reagan already has claim to 61 national convention delegates and George Bush has 19. Although Bush has left the race, he is going to keep his delegates in an effort to get another federal campaign grant to pay off his debts. Bush has said he will ask his delegates, once the national convention is under way, to go for Reagan on the first ballot.

North Dakota farmers fighting dry spring

DICKINSON, N.D. (AP) — There are no waving grain fields in many parts of North Dakota this summer. Farmers in the state that produced 252 million bushels of wheat last year are fighting the driest spring they've seen since the '30s.

Scattered showers have brightened their faces and their pastures in the last few days. But rainfall still is far below normal, with the best areas averaging less than 3 inches. Usually, more than 5 inches falls between April and mid-June.

In southwestern North Dakota, hard red spring wheat that usually stands knee high is less than half that now. Farmers who seeded wheat in late spring find only a dry dirt crust.

"My dad went through the '30s, but I've never seen anything this bad," said Gordon Pavlicek, a tall young farmer who has worked 1,600 acres with his father outside this community of 12,500 for 10

Pavlicek was forced to sell 45 head of cattle because he had no feed for them. "The alfalfa doesn't look like it will make anything," he said. "Even if it does, it will be a light crop. And I didn't feel at $90 a ton, hay was worth buying." His wheat fields, which could yield 30 bushels an acre, might not make even 15 this year. And he'll be hard-pressed to pay for the $75,000 tractor-tiller he bought last fall. "I sure hit that all wrong," he said. "If I'd waited until spring it might have been a different ball game. Interest went up 5 percent for me. I borrowed thinking I was going to pay 10-12 percent and it turned out to be 1634. Pavlicek expects federal crop insurance and disaster payments to bring him about $60 an acre — only about 60 percent of what he would get from a crop, but maybe enough to break even. National Weather Service officials say this is the driest spring in the area since 1936. Although the long-range forecast for mid-June to mid-July calls for above normal rainfall, that would be too late for SHERMAN OAKS. Calif. (AP) - Critically burned comedian Richard Pryor "is no better." but watching the Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran fight on television and chatting by phone with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy boosted his spirits, hospital spokesmen said.

A top kidney specialist will join the team of about a dozen pecialists caring for Pryor, hospital spokeswoman Nona Egan said Friday. The hospital declined to name any of the doctors or say when the examination would take place.

Kennedy called Pryor several times at the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital before being put through to the burn center Friday night, Ms. Egan said. The comedian cannot receive calls, "but this was special and he Later, actor Marlon Brando was in the hospital and arranged a closed-circuit television hook-up to allow Pryor to watch the welterweight title fight in Montreal, Ms. Egan said.

'TEXAS' promises great entertainment

By DEBBIE DUKE

Of The Pampa News
A lonely rider charging the rim of Palo Duro Canyon, exciting special effects, singing and dancing, dramatic and humorous portrayals and a spectacular fireworks-enhanced finale were among the factors that made this year's opening of 'TEXAS' again a delightful night of entertainment beneath the stars.

The show, which is in its fifteenth season, opened Wednesday evening in the Pioneer Amphitheatre in the Palo Duro Canyon.

'TEXAS,' Paul Green's musical romance of Panhandle history, is the story of the cattle baron-homesteader struggle for settlement of the land. Leading man Danny Alford portrays Calvin Armstrong, a young homesteader determined to develop and settle the land that he and his mother loved. Alford, a Wayland Baptist College senior who understudied the part last season, shows strong talent in acting and singing and carries the part extremely well.

Playing opposite Alford is leading lady Wryn Anderson, who portrays Elsie McLean, a young and spirited city lady from the East. Miss Anderson, who understudied the part last season, is also strong David Yirak portrays Uncle Henry, a wealthy rancher desperately trying to put a halt to Armstrong's homesteader development craze. Henry, who also is the lovely Elsie's uncle, is determined to stop the railroad from being constructed across his ranch.

Other strong portrayals were those by Carla Swatzell, who played Kate Lucas, a red-dressed ex-barroom entertainer, and Jerry Williams, who steals the show as Tucker Yelldell, a salve-seller turner prospector who wants Lucas's love - and ends up getting it. Williams is in his twelfth season as 'Ole Tuck' and is an asset to the cast and crew. Swatzell is an extremely talented vocalist and gets to show off that talent during a campfire sing-along at the opening of the second act.

Special effects in the canyon amphitheatre are astonishingly realistic and sometimes frightening.

Much dancing is required of these young performers, and they performed well throughout the show, although opening dance routines were a little unpolished. In one scene, the performers portray a prairie fire in modern dance, complimented by red costumes. We felt as if the prairie had indeed gone up in flames. The overall chorus was excellent, with the soprano parts being the strongest. We could tell that many talented and well-trained singers were used. Again, opening songs needed some improvement. However, the chorus did loosen up after the first couple of performances.

We must applaud costume designer Charlotte Rugel Brantley on her wonderful and colorful costumes. Mrs. Brantley is the wife of Royal Brantley, who has worked with the show since it opened fifteen

'We've got a good suspect in the case, but we've got a problem he's a juvenile,'' said Cooke County Attorney Chuck Bartush

Investigators questioned a 16-year-old boy Saturday, but Bartush said the youth had not been arrested. The victim, Robert Pearman, of Thackerville, was stabbed Friday night about 9 p.m. and pronounced dead at Gainesville Memorial Hospital, Bartush said. 'Apparently what happened was the boys were driving down the street, they saw each other, words were exchanged, so they pulled their cars over and a fight ensued," he said. Bartush said several people witnessed the the fight

O. What is Recruitment?

A. Recruitment is when a small increase in sound is perceived to be a great increase in sound. Quicker cracker breakthrough

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) -Frank Sugihara, one of the food sleuths who exposed the secret of San Francisco sourdough French bread, has now cracked the mystery of the common soda cracker. He's found a way to make a quicker cracker.

The discovery could revolutionize the business, he says, by saving cracker makers money and energy while boosting their profits and improving quality. So far, it has

A few years ago, Sugihara and fellow scientists at the Department of Agriculture's Western Regional Research Center at Berkeley shook up the baking industry by exposing the secret of what makes the famous San Francisco sourdough French bread so distinctive

They found that a previously unidentified bacterium, subsequently named Lactobacillus sanfranciso, gave the bread its unique flavor

After 21/2 years of research, Sugihara developed a procedure - also involving the isolation of bacteria - that reduces the time it takes to make a batch of soda crackers from about 24 hours to eight

"It is technically feasible to make this process continuous,' he said, "... plants could produce approximately the same amount of crackers in one eight-hour shift as is required for three shifts now.'

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me
This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Government sets the sharing trap

One of the major points of argument in the consideration of the federal budget has been on revenue sharing, that great giveaway program which has lured many local and state governmental agencies into a position of dependence on federal funds.

When President Carter suddenly decided it would be politically feasible to have a balanced budget in this election year, one of the first programs to be looked at with the idea of elimination was revenue sharing

This is the program, of course, in which the federal government has "given" large chunks of dollars to local and state governments to do

The money was to be used for programs that were not a part of the regular budgeted operations of the governmental units. It was to be used for "extras," things which officials felt were needed but for which the money was not available.

Revenue sharing was a good political tool, as the politician could point out in dollars and cents just what he had been able to "give" his constituents over a given period of time.

But what far too many people failed to realize was that this was not "surplus" money in the federal coffers. It was money that was taken from the individual taxpayer in the states, sent to Washington, and there it was divided as Congress saw fit. The money was doled out onthe basis of population - and that is one reason so much emphasis was given to the recent census.

In this manner, the money did not return to the local agencies in the same proportion that it was collected. Naturally, the richer areas of the countries subsidized the poorer areas.

When the program began, there developed three reactions on the part of local agencies.

First, there were some few places in which the money was actually refused. Now that threw the bureaucracy into turm oil. They simply did not know how to react to refusal of "free" federal money.

Secondly, there were those communities which used the money wisely. They set it aside for projects which were not a part of the regular budget.

Then there was a third category — the group which allowed the federal revenue-sharing money to filter into the regular operational budget. When this happened, the money became a necessity, and the community was trapped. They were dependent on the federal subsidy doctor know? in a short time for routine, day-to-day operations that should have been financed through the regular budget. hard thing to prove.

It was the third category which panicked when the word came down that the manna from Washington was about to be eliminated. It would mean tax increases — some sharp increases in some areas — or the elimination of services which the people had come to look at as necessary

The sharp tax increases would have doomed many local politicians who had allowed themselves to be trapped by the federal dollar.

It was this group which cried loudest when the word came that funds were to be cut off, and the result is that some of the money will be restored to the budget in its final form.

But it should have been eliminated completely. In fact, it should never have been in the budget in the first place, and local and state agencies would not have been able to become dependent on that money.

Equal pay ruling a fitting decision

The zeal of the federal government in prosecuting discrimination cases apparently was kept a secret from at least one federal

The decision of a federal judge in Washington, D.C., awarding some $16 million to women employees of the Government Printing Office, is an embarrassment to the federal drive for equality in employment. U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey said that 28 women in the agency's bindery did the same work as male employees - at a salary some $10,000 less. He ordered that they share $6 million in back pay. The judge also ordered that 296 women be allowed access to higher paying jobs previously reserved for male employees, a move expected to cost the agency about $10 million in future salaries.

The suit filed by the women six years ago covered the period from 1971 to the present.

Details of the case, including testimony and the text of the judge's ruling, presumably will be recorded for posterity in publications produced and bound by the Government Printing Office.

It is fitting.

Sensible alternatives to stamp hike

It seems pay increases and high labor costs are still a way of life with the Postal Service.

And because the service's financial needs are ever-rising, Postmaster General William F. Bolger is seeking a boost in the cost of stamps. He would like to see the cost of mailing most letters go from 15 cents to 20 cents early next year - a boost that amounts to 33.3 percent. Higher rates also are sought for second and third-class mail and parcel post Bolger says his requests, which will be considered and are expected to be approved by the Postal Rate Commission, are conservative, and more funds

Most American would agree that reducing costs rather than raising rates should be the goal.

Even now, Congress is looking into the possibility of eliminating Saturday delivery - a move not appreciated by the letter carriers union. And there is growing demand for the halting of junk mail that arrives at each household, unsolicited, unwanted and most often tossed out unread.

First-class mail was boosted from 13 cents to 15 cents two years ago. The new request comes along too soon and is too excessive.

Canceling mail deliveries and increasing junk mail postage rates would make more sense.

Freedom, man's best hope

By Oscar Cooley Have you noticed that whenever somethings needs to be done, it is "the government" that should do it? It is becoming a national habit to pass the buck to Washington.

Inflation? Only "the government" can save us from these high prices. Unemployment? Why doesn't "the vernment" create more jobs? Energy? It will get scare unless "the government ... The weather? Washington ought...(awkward pause) Americans seem to have resigned themselves to the conclusion that life is so complex only our greatest single power, the government, can organize it for us. Is Society has two ways of organizing itself: the economic and the political. The political way is through government. People do what the government tells them to. The government, so the theory goes, knows better what each should do than he. So he is directed by legislators and bureaucrats. The entire national community is run like an army. That is the way they do it in Russia, China, Cuba.

The economic way is simply to leave all people free to do as they will (so long as they do not prey upon one another, using force and deception; to prevent this, government acts as a police force). This is the way the United States functioned during its first 150 years, and it was remarkably successful, rising from nothing to be the wealthiest if not the est country in the world.

The present danger is that we Americans, becoming more and more politically minded, will neglect the way that has proven itself - the freedom way that we love - and will switch our faith to the political way - which, incidentally, has been amply tried by Soviet Russia as well as throughout history back to the time of the "bread and circuses" of Rome and has not worked. The United States, too, may be measure was a bill to tax every buyer of soline 10 cents more per gallon. This addition to the cost would cause people to use less gasoline, he said, and so the supply entering its period of "decline and fall." Not only is every Tom, Dick and Harry turning to some branch of the government for aid - aid which can only come from his neighbors as taxpayers -- but at the very top, in the White House itself, faith in the free economic system is lacking. For months, President Carter's pet energy would be conserved.

But the free economic system has its way of conserving. That is by price. When a good is scarce, its price rises, and this causes less to be consumed, more to be produced, until the scarcity disappears. This occurs automatically. No law need be passed, no tax extracted. And the price increase operates, not in just one direction, on the buyer, but in two, on both buyer and seller. It is prompt, sure and accurate. Further, the price rises as much as is required, no more and no less, to bring about an equilibrium between the demand and the supply. There is no guesswork about the amount of charge required. Sources of energy, such as petroleum are not unlimited in supply. As the oil wells, one by one, dry up and new ones are not found because there is no more oil in the ground, the price will rise to the point that equals other more costly ways of producing energy, such as the sun, the heat of the ocean, geothermal heat, etc. Then these sources will be tapped, their energy replacing that of the exhausted oil.

This is the free-market, economic way to solve the energy shortage problem. No fees nor taxes need be levied, no special laws enacted. The government has no need to concern itself with energy.

Some will say I have over-simplified a complex problem. But it is just because the energy problem is complex that it cannot be solved by decisions emanating from the center. Note how President Carter wrestles with great issues and how powerless he is to solve them. Only a system that solves its own problems will do

The economic way is the only solution to the energy problem. If we look to the political way, it will not be solved. There is a very real danger that our children, when adults, will be living on black bread without butter, potatoes but no meat, as many in Soviet Russia are reported to be doing

American experience proves hat freedom works to dispel scarcity. It w uld seem only common sense to use it. The free-marke' yy is man's best hope.

Dear Sir

I want to send a letter of thanks to the people of Pampa for the kindnesses and courtesies recently extended to me and my children during a recent visit to Pampa. am an ex-Pampan and probably like a lot of young people, I was very anxious to leave the Panhandle. Every year I am amazed at the growth and development of Pampa mall and the new fast food services rank with many other much larger towns for the variety they offer. What really impresses me now that I have lived in another part of the country for several years is the greatest asset, the people. The desk clerk at the hotel I stayed at, the waitresses who constantly seek to help, and even a manager at a grocery store who asked if I was finding everything, are truly Pampa's pride. The majority of the times we go out up here, we have to ask to be helped, or to even have someone take our money when we select our purchases. The fun and enjoyment is taken out of any excursions by many rude people. The general attitude seems to be, "Well if you don't want it, someone else will." There are a lot of Texans up here in the energy field, and many differences between us

COLLEGE STATION - Results of the standardized tests like the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills (TABS) test recently conducted among the state's fifth and ninth graders are throwing the entire educational system into an uproar, educators say.

Rather than using the findings to evaluate the needs of individual students, some taxpayers, parents and even misinformed school board members are interpreting the TABS scores to evaluate the success of classroom programs.

"The results became public record in May when the Texas Education Agency which administered them turned the scores over to district superintendents and their staffs," said Professor John Hoyle.

Hoyle is an evaluation specialist in the College of Education at Texas A & M University and a member of the state commission for school

"That's when the witch hunt began," he said. People began comparing districts without keeping in mind the original intent of the tests." The test was designed to determine the minimum reading, writing and math competency of the students, he said.

The objective of the tests was to measure the essential objectives in the three areas, not measure the effectiveness of the entire curriculum, he added.

Results of the TABS tests should tell teachers and administrators if their students are learning what they should in each grade, he said.

If the students demonstrate they have less than adequate skills, Hoyle added, then perhaps the tests will spark curriculum reform and lead to the expanded use of teaching techniques like mastery learning.

The adopting of these tests, he said, is evidence of the bottom-line attempt by legislators and citizens in 37 states to find out why some children can't read, write a sentence or keep a job.

The test may turn out to be a double-edged sword, giving administrators a handle on how well students have learned basic skills, but also giving unskilled interpreters statistics with which to play, he said.

"We only understand numbers in our society," Hoyle said. "Parents and school administrators too many times only want to see A, B, C and D's and numbers that show children are competent.

"These tests are to help us improve schools, not to prove something is wrong and should not take away local districts' autonomy," he said.

ILE BIZARD, Quebec (AP) - Bob Gilder, a journeyman who has won only once in five years of PGA Tour activity, had the lead but some of golf's biggest guns were in position to take a shot at him in the last two rounds of the $550,000 Canadian Open Golf

"I like my position," said defending champion and three-time Canadian Open winner Lee Trevino. "I'm playing good and I think I've worked out something with my putter.

"I don't like to be behind - I'd rather be in front every time - but there's a lot of golf left and you can make up some shots on this golf course. "I'm in position to give it a run," said Jack Nicklaus, who is seeking to add his first Canadian national championship to the fourth U.S. Open title he won last Also in a contending position is a star-filled group that includes Hale Irwin, Gary Player, Johnny Miller and Ben Crenshaw

Gilder managed a 3-under-par 67 in cold, wind and rain Friday to set the pace at 134, six shots under par on the rain-soaked, 6,628 yard Royal Montreal Golf Club

Big George Burns, who held the first round lead with a 66, had to make a 15-foot birdie putt in steady rain on the final hole for a 71 that left him in second at 137. "I'm very fortunate to be where I am," said Burns, winner of the Bing Crosby earlier this year. "But I must improve my iron play immensely to be a threat.

Donald were next at 138. Donald had a 68, and Nelford matched par 70. Trevino was among the late players who were held up for one hour, 23 minutes by very heavy late-afternoon rains that flooded some greens.

"In cold and rain I have to keep moving," Trevino said. "Everbody out there thought I'd gone 'round the bend. There I am walking up and down in the rain on the 18th tee. I must have walked two miles. I've got a little path worn out there just to the right of the tee. He finished off a 67 after the long delay.

Nicklaus, Player, Miller, Irwin, Crenshaw, Jim Dent and Bill Kratzert were at 139. Nicklaus shot a 68 that he called "a very good round of golf today. Actually, I'm amazed there were any good scores at all. The wind blew very, very hard.

The players also had to contend with chilly temperatures that sent them struggling into layers of sweaters and foul-weather gear, and the rains that ranged from drizzle to downpour. Kratzert and Crenshaw had 70's, Irwin 71 despite a double bogey, Dent also had a 71 and Miller shot 72 without making a birdie.

Tom Watson, the year's leading money-winner and winner of five 1980 titles, took a 73 that left him at 142.

National League baseball roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets were one strike away from beating the Los Angeles Dodgers - but wound up beating themselves instead

"When there are two outs in the ninth inning with nobody on base it's supposed to be automatic," said Mets Manager Joe Torre after watching his pitching staff turn a 3-2 lead into a 4-3 loss in the ninth inning.

There were two out and nobody on base when Jay Johnstone and Steve Garvey singled off Mets starter Pat Zachry. Jeff Reardon replaced Zachry at this point and worked the count to 3-2 on Dusty Baker before he lined a two-run double up the gap in left-center for the winning runs.

"That," said Torre, "was our toughest loss of the year.

"As soon as he hit it I knew it would score both runs," said Reardon. "I wanted to get the pitch to the outside of the plate. Instead, I threw it right over the plate.

Noted Baker, who has driven in 19 runs in June: "I knew I hit the ball well. I was trying to drive it to the big part of the park. You can't make it much closer than that." In other National League games, San Ken Forsch and Joe Sambito combined on a seven-hitter and Rafael Landestoy deliverd a bases-loaded triple in the second inning to lead Houston over Pittsburgh.

U.S. Olympic field trials get underway

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) - Selection of the U.S. Olympic track and field team began Saturday, and the squad may yet have a chance to flex its muscles in a meet in the United States this summer:

The Olympic track and field trials are at the start of eight days of competition at the University of Oregon.

The coach of the American squad, Jimmy Carnes, says the team chosen during the trials still might be featured in an international meet in Philadelphia on July 17. Because the United States is boycotting t Moscow Games, U.S. officials had hoped the American squad could face alternate competition in a series of meets in this country. But meets scheduled for Philadelphia and Berkeley, Calif., were canceled this week. The Philadelphia meet was scrubbed because it would have occurred July 23-24, during the Moscow

The International Amateur Athletic Federation prohibits such competition during the Olympics.

"We are still negotiating with the athletic director at the Penn and trying to get the meet held there," said Carnes.

He said the West German team has agreed to compete in a one-day meet in Philadelphia on July 17. Attempts also were being made to attract athletes from Canada, China and "several other countries," Carnes said Edwin Moses, the world's top 400-meter hurdler, said a meet in Philadelphia would carry no special meaning.

"There is no replacement for the Olympics," Moses said. "All the athletes feel we've lost. All we can do is compete as Carnes said a major attraction to Olympic hopefuls is the federal funding of the U.S. squad's tour of European meets this summer. Carnes said normally only about 30 athletes from the United States would be able to compete in the European meets, but this year the entire 120-member U.S. squad will be able to.

The No. 1 thing is they will become a U.S. Olympian, and I think that is a great honor." Carnes said. "The second thing is they will have some expenses paid to a lot of competition - which will be a first," he

Carnes said he expects the Americans to face several Moscow Olympics champions in European meets following the games in Russia

Whatever happens, the trials will proceed as scheduled with about 1,500 athletes and some 400 reporters and photographers on hand.

Finals were scheduled Saturday in the women's shot put, pentathlon and men's 20-kilometer walk. Sunday's events include finals in the men's triple jump and 100 meters as well as the opening of the two-day decathlon competition.

Boeka leads Pamcel Golf Open

Amarillo's Jerry Boeka, aided by an eagle on a 500-yard par five hole, shot a two under 68 to lead after 18 holes Saturday in the Pamcel Open.

Steve Lacrone and Jerry Larsen both shot 70s to share the runnerup position in the championship flight while David Mooring came in third with a 71.

Gary Tolbert, Doug McFatridge and Frank McCullough share first-fight honors with a 63. Gary McCarrell and Delbert McWharten follow

The final round tees off at 8 a.m. today at the Celanese course located six miles west of

It's Gene Autry week in Los Angeles

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - This will be Gene Autry Week in Los Angeles, and the one-time singing cowboy responds in typical style: "I'm very thrilled, but I can think of a lot of performers who deserve it a heckuva lot more than I do.' Today the 72-year-old Autry does most of his performing in corporate board meetings or in the president's box of Anaheim Stadium, watching his California Angels play baseball.

Fifty years ago, he was a 22-year-old out of Tioga, Texas, by way of Oklahoma, and he landed his first permanent job: singing and playing his guitar every day on Sears and Roebuck's Chicago radio station WLS ("World's Largest Store"). The job lasted until 1934, when

Autry came to California and soon was the screen's favorite cowboy. The golden anniversary is being celebrated this week by civic functions, including an exhibit of Autryiana at the California Museum of Science and Industry. The Museum also will present 13 weeks of Saturday matinees featuring Autry movies plus chapters of one of his two serials, the 1935 "Phantom Empire."

Duran wins unanimous decision over Leonard

MONTREAL (AP) — Roberto Duran's hands of stone beat a steady tatoo on Sugar Ray Leonard and carried the popular Panamanian to the World Boxing Council welterweight championship with a unanimous 15-round decision Friday night.

It was a marvelous, memorable bout that lived up to all of its expectations.

Promoter Don King, who controls Duran's boxing fortunes, said that he would prefer to see his man fight Pipino Cuevas, the World Boxing Association champ, to unify the welterweight crown. Cuevas, however, has an Aug. 2 title date with unbeaten Tommy Hearns.

Duran and Leonard gave the record Olympic Stadium boxing crowd of 46,317 a tremendous show, slugging it out for 15 tough rounds. Both men fought brilliantly and they saluted each other after the gruelling, often brutal bout.

"He is the best I have fought," said Duran, who had said before the fight that he had no respect for Leonard. "He hit me hard a couple of times, but I was never in bad shape. He was pretty good, but he had to be because he was fighting me."

Leonard was humble in defeat.

"It was a very tough fight," he said. "I give Duran a lot of credit. It was one of the toughest fights of my career."

Duran set the tone for the fight at the very start, rushing Leonard, crowding the champion and never letting him use his two best weapons — his speed and reach.

"He had to slug with me," said Duran. "But I had to show I could box, too. A lot of people thought I was just a heavy puncher, but tonight, I was the boxer." Leonard seemed perfectly willing to fight flat-footed and slug it out with Duran.

"I might have surprised some people with my tactics and strategy to take the so-called big punch," he said.

"I had no choice. I fought the way I felt I could beat him. I did my best to hold on to my title and I have no

At first, it was announced as a majority decision with judges Harry Gibbs (145-144) and Raymond Baydelrou (146-144) voting for Duran and judge Angelo Potelli's card announced as a draw at 147-147. But about 30 minutes after the fight ended, it was announced that Potelli's card had been added wrong and that he had voted for Duran 148-147, giving the Panamanian the unanimous nod.

The Associated Press card was 144-141 for Duran.
The decision set off a wild demonstration by some 2,000 of his countrymen who had come here to see Duran become just the third man in boxing history to win both the lightweight and welterweight crowns. The others were Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong.

In the semifinal bout, Canadian heavyweight champion Trevor Berbick knocked out ex-WBA champ John Tate at 22 seconds of the ninth round. Earlier, Leonard's older brother Roger, scored 10-round decision over Clyde Gray. Eddie Melo and Fernand Marcotte fought a 10-round draw and Gaetan Hart knocked out Cleveland Dennis in the 10th round.

Dennis was removed from the ring on a stretcher and taken to a local hospital. Early Saturday morning, a spokesman for Maisonneuve Hospital said Dennis was unconscious and in critical condition. Doctors scheduled several tests this morning, including a brain scan.

The Leonard-Duran fight had all the earmarks of greatness, the kind of memorable fight that the lighter weight classes have not seen since the days of Sugar

Ray Robinson and Rocky Graziano.

Asked what the difference between him and Leonard had been, Duran grinned and tapped his heart and his head.

"I was too slick for what he was doing," the new champion said.

Perhaps as important as what Duran did during the fight, was what his 73-year-old trainer, Freddie Brown, did before the bout. Brown talked briefly with referee Carlos Padilla.

"I just told the referee to let this guy fight," said Brown.
The Duran camp had been concerned about Padilla's

The Duran camp had been concerned about Padilla's tendency in other bouts to break the fighters quickly. They felt their man could score well inside and hoped te referee would let him do his work there.

Padilla did and and it helped Duran.
"I thought I won easily, convincingly," said Duran.
Leonard wasn't so sure.

problems

Jenkins.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)-Fergie Jenkins was so upset in the Texas Ranger club house Friday night he had difficulty enjoying his victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and the fact he had passed Cy Young on the all-time strikeout list.

The Rangers prevailed 5-2 but Jenkins was still upset by the lack of run support.

"You just can't relax out there with this team ... you've always got to play under pressure," said Jenkins, whose five strikeouts gave him a major league total of 3,204. "This is ridiculous. We've got to start going out there and beating people."

Jenkins was unhappy about Ranger hitters leaving runners on base.

"Why can't we get some runs early so the pitchers can relax?" said Jenkins, who allowed Toronto five hits as he evened his record at 5-5.

Jenkins was also miffed that

Ranger Vanager Pat Corrales yelled at Bump Wills for not moving the runner over. "There is enough pressure out there without him doing that,"

Jenkins said.

Jenkins almost wasn't around at the end because he was sapped by the Texas humidity.

"I told (pitching coach)
Jackie Brown to get somebody ready because I was done," said Jenkins. "I was tired and my arm was tired.'

Who would have thought it would take a bottle of stomach upset medicine to heal the breach between Yankee boss George Steinbrenner and his pugnacious ex-manager, Billy "The Kid" Martin?

A waiter comes up and gives the suffering manager a bottle of the pink remedy.

"Think I'll take a swig of this," says Billy, raising the bottle to his lips.

Suddenly another figure heaves into the background. Why, it's none other than George Steinbrenner, owner of the Yankees who last Oct. 29 gave Martin the boot for slugging a marshmallow salesman. "Billy," chides Steinbrenner sternly, "use a spoon." A look of exasperation crosses Billy's face. He shrugs his shoulders and raises his arms as if say, "Oh, no, he's still bossing me around."

Cut. Fadeout

This is not an imaginary scene. It's real live drama But it's only make believe - taping of a commercial next Friday in a New York studio.

The event presents a bizarre twist. It is the first reunion of the two volatile personalities whose relations were shattered eight months ago in a wave of acrimony that galvanized into sensational newspaper

Steinbrenner compared Martin to an Old West gunslinger who constantly had to prove his was the fastest gun. Martin countered that Steinbrenner was "born rich and thinks everybody could be bought," vowing: "I'll never put on Yankee uniform as long as he (Steinbrenner) is there.

After such a bitter exchange, how was it possible to bring the two together again? Don't underestimate

Madison Avenue. "Billy Martin had done an athlete's foot commercial for us back in 1977," said Don Howard of Norwich-Eaton Pharmaceuticals. "It was very successful. We found Billy related to the public. "So we picked him for our stomach upset commercial. Benton and Bowles (advertising) was brought into it. We have been working on the script. Someone suggested using Steinbrenner. He accepted.

"Billy approved of the idea."

During a lull in their tempestuous association, Steinbrenner and Billy did a beer commercial in which they argued: "It tastes good." "No, it's less filling." "It tastes good." "No, it's less filling." It ended with George saying, "Billy, you're fired!" And Martin sighing, "Not again."

With the A's invading Yankee Stadium Friday for a three-game series including with the annual Yankee Old-Timers game, Howard said Friday was the first opportunity to get the two together.

By SAUL PETT Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the days following the missile crisis of 1962, two men, one American, the other Russian, were negotiating the details of the withdrawal of Soviet weapons from Cuba.

In an informal moment, out of the earshot of others or the reach of hidden microphones, they were sitting on a fence at a Connecticut farm house and talking. It was a moment for candor, and Vasily Kuznetsov of the Soviet Union said to John McCloy of the United

"All right, Mr. McCloy, we withdraw the bombers, just as we've withdrawn the missiles, but I want to tell you something. This is the last time the United States is going to be able to act like this towards the Soviet Union.

A few years later, McCloy told the story to President Johnson. The third man in the room was Richard C. Helms, then director of American Central Intelligence and head of the CIA. Now retired from government service. Helms tells the story to illustrate what he regards as the central fact of danger in the world today: the relative decline of American military power. He questions whether the United States could now force the Russians to turn back their missile-carrying ships as it did in that fearful high noon of 1962. They turned back then, he says, because the United States was first in nuclear missilery and conventional military equipment, and they knew it and we knew it.

"But now that the Russians have a very large strategic force, the shoe may be on the other foot ... President Carter said he's going to see to it that the Russians don't take over the Persian Gulf, where our oil lifeline is attached. But I don't know what he's going to protect the Persian Gulf with.

Helms is quick to point out that he is "not entirely up to date on what the United States has and what the Soviet Union has." He says he has no continuing connection with the CIA (which he left in 1972), that his information these days comes from newspapers and "some friends around town. One assumes that a man who worked in intelligence 25 years and headed it for six and also served as U.S. ambassador to Iran for five them back, when even the Russians were saying it was terrible to take diplomats as hostages.'

In the ensuing weeks and months, he says, we should not have made the hostages the prime preoccupation of our foreign policy every day at the White House and State Department and every night

"We gave the Iranians an opportunity to bargain with us, to denigrate and humiliate and deceive us. We gave them a tool to beat

"It seems to me the better way - it's hard to say but I don't know another way to say it - would have been to seem to turn our backs on the hostages, to regard them as prisoners of war and simply left them with no value to the Iranians. If they had no value, I think the Iranians eventually would've come up with some device for letting

As an example, the former CIA chief recalled the seizure of the Pueblo and its men off North Korea in 1968. "They sort of faded in the background but the government never forgot them. It continued to see what it could do quietly and finally a device was found and they were let loose and that was that. By hyping the hostage situation in Iran, we insured they'd be kept a long time.

Helms thinks the rescue attempt, while risky, might have worked, might have freed "a lot of the hostages," but some people probably were going to get killed. In such matters, said the man who specialized in clandestine operations, "you can't believe in the Immaculate Conception." Richard McGarrah Helms is now 67, fit, tall, thin, carefully groomed, carefully controlled, a polite man who invites neither small talk nor knowing him. Master spies in fiction are frequently brooding men suffering from bad memories. This one seems content with his past and his principles. Othersawt. They see him as a man of shadows and controversy, who lied to Congress.

He runs a one-man consulting firm in which he advises American companies on business prospects in the Persian Gulf area. Casting about for a name, he didn't think "Helms Associates" sounded particularly good. He called it the Safeer Co., using the Arabic and Persian word for ambassador.

On the broader scale of his concerns, Helms sees the 1980s as a time when the Soviet Union will be stronger than the United States in nuclear and conventional weapons.

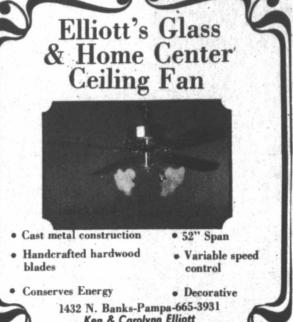

"And that is a period of danger, at least to those of us who have spent our lives at this and understand that that kind of primacy can be translated into aggression, movement, takeovers of countries.'

"when most governments would have understood our efforts to get Russians reason to pause and American allies reason to feel protected.

Unless it is backed up by superior power, he says, Carter's threat to protect the Persian Gulf with force is "worthless because in this day and age countries know what other countries have, at least in gross numbers. And they're not about to believe something that doesn't exist. "This is the time for leadership in the real sense of the word. I don't mean the kind of thing we've had recently of leading by following, finding out what the people want through a poll and giving it to them. ... I mean leadership of concepts, of ideas, of directions, of things we should be doing. "We're bickering with each other. We are loaded with special pleaders. ... We are dividing into bits and pieces and taking our eye off the main thing, which is our survival as the kind of society the world envies, admires and respects. Instead, we're wallowing. We seem to have no rudder.

Helms does not go public often but in a recent interview he spoke passionately about the American condition at home and abroad, the decline of strong leadership in the White House, a society fragmented vested interests, about "false prophets" in government and industry, the weakened state of the CIA and the aborted rescue of the hostages in Iran.

The rescue, if tried at all, should have come in the first month of No diplomacy, he says, "is worth anything unless it's backed up by years has well-informed "friends" here and abroad. SPACE VEGETABLES PROPERLY FOR HIGHER YIELDS: If your spring garden is making good growth, but looks crowded, maybe it's time to do some thinning. Thinning vegetable plants can mean more fresh produce for your dining table.

Gardeners often plant more seeds than necessary to insure enough healthy plants for a productive stand. However, too many plants in a given area is as bad as too few. Overcrowding can result in unhealthy and unproductive plants. And, plants usually need thinning

For example, if snap beans are to be thinned 3 to 4 inches apart, thin the plants 11/2 to 2 inches apart when they are young. As they become crowded, thin them again to the recommended distance. When thinning larger plants, cut them at ground level instead of pulling them from the ground. This will protect the root system of

The size of mature vegetable plants dictates the distance needed between them. Larger plants such as broccoli, cucumbers, cantaloupes, squash and tomatoes require at least 24-inches between them. Smaller vegetables such as beans, beets, carrots, lettuce and onions need only 2 to 6 inches of space for maximum protection. GALLS ON ORNAMENTALS:

Galls, or abnormal swellings, caused by various insect pests, interfere with normal plant growth. Most insect galls are formed by tiny wasps, flies, aphids and phylloxera.

Taking characteristic sizes, shapes and colors, galls commonly appear as stem swellings, smooth and hairy balls, blisters, pouches

Galls begin when adult plant pests lay their eggs in plant tissue or when these eggs hatch. In either case, chemicals are thought to be secreted by special glands in insects' bodies. In turn, these secretions interact with plant chemicals, producing abnormal growth. During its development, the pest feeds on and is protected by gall tissue. Once galls reach maturity, they stop draining the host plant of its nutrients. Current research suggest insect or mite-induced galls do not noticeably injure plants. However, this does not apply to nematode-induced galls, which seriously damages plant root

There is no sure method of controlling gall insects or mites. Several species of wasps parasitize these pests. And, certain stem and trunk galls may be removed by hand. In some cases, host plants may be removed and replaced by resistant species.

Chemicals will not reverse or stop gall growth. Unless they are applied when pests are laying their eggs, chemicals offer no effective controls. Also, insecticides kill beneficial predators and parasites.

Panhandle water picture dims

OF THE NEWS STAFF

The possibility of running out of water in the Texas Panhandle is one possibility that is being taken more and more serious. Various groups are working within the state and counties to evaluate the water plan of the future. One of these is known as the Texas Department of Water Resources (TDWR). The key activity of the department is the collection and evaluation of ground water data for both quantity and quality. The Department and its predecessor agencies have measured water wells annually, to determine the number of feet below the land surface of the water level, and have collected data on the quality of water in wells. Currently, water level measurements are made in a statewide network of carefully selected 6,800 wells and water quality is determined in over 1,000 wells each year.

Personnel of the TDWR data collection and evaluation section of the Data and Engineering Services Division measure the water levels in all but 1,500 of the 6,800 there it is made available to the public and other state agencies.

The information is essential in the department's delineation of the extent of groundwater fromations, and determination of the occurrence and the availability of the water.

Some 50 of the 5,300 water-level monitoring wells which are serviced by the TDWR staff are equiped with continous water-level recorders. These wells are strategically located around the state, and the continuously recorded data is correlated with the annual measurements.

For more that 30 years, the TDWR and its predecessor agencies have collected samples from wells to determine the quality of the ground water. Among properties routinely determined are concentrations of calcium, silica, magnesium, nitrate, bicarbonate, sodium. sulfate, chloride, fluoride, acidity-alkalinity, ph, total dissolved solids, and temperature. The number of wells sampled has now grown to over 5,600 with about 1,000 sampled each year.

At some 28 stream gaging stations, a water sample is taken every day of the year. Part-time "samplers" in the local area each day lower a one-half pint bottle, usually from a highway bridge, into the stream to a depth of about on foot below the surface of the water. The samplers accumulate the bottles of water for about a two-month period, at which time a Department staff person picks up the samples and brings them to the sedimentation laboratory located in

The sedimentation data is fed into a computer to calculate the tonnage of suspended sediment passing a given point each day. This information is valuable in planning a water storage reservoir or other surface water facility, simce the amount of sediment a stream carries into a reservoir or lake determines the long-range capacity of the water supply facility.

Water well drillers working in Texas are required by the state statute to submit logs of wells they drill to the TDWR for use in its evaluation activities.

In addition, oil well drilling firms make is it really a case of food vs. fuel? No. There is virtually no consideration of diverting human feed grains to ethanol grains production. Most of the cereal grains which are appropriated to fuel alcohol production are grown for the purpose of feeding livestock. Since the byproduct of distillation retains almost all of the protein of the original grain it can be fed as stillage directly to animals with no appreciable loss in value (forages unusable for human consumption can replace carbohydrates and nutrients). Just two years ago there were nearly 19 million acres of unplanted farmland in the U-S. If this were used for production of ethanol crops, experts estimate it would provide a minimum of 3 billion gallons of fuel. That could cost OPEC over $120 million dollars a month! BY SHEILA ECCLES

OF THE NEWS STAFF An adequate water supply for future city growth and prosperity is a prime responsibility of every city administration. The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, Lubbock area, has some interesting information concerning the Often cities with surplus water for their present populations and industries attract new industries until they become water-short

For this reason, many city administrators constantly search for additional sources of water, new well fields, new reservoirs or new legal rights to surface water.

Texas cities are finding it increasingly difficult, however, to supply adequate fresh water for their growing ever-thirstier, populations. Some of the reasons cited for the difficulties include:

Texas is a water-short state, Texans currently use about 17 million acre-feet of water a year even though the safe annual yield of both groundwater and surface water is, according to the Texas Department of Water Resources, only 15 million acre-feet.

Groundwater sources, on which a majority of Texas towns and cities depend-have diminished in quantity and quality because cities and other water users have removed more water in recent years than nature has replaced

.Competition for surface water among cities and with other water users such as irrigators and power companies has become fierce in

.Water supply reservoirs are extremely costly to build and require more that a decade to complete. .New stringent federal regulations for drinking water quality and waste-water treatment generally mean increased treatment costs both before and after water is distributed through a city. Soaring energy costs have also contributed to municipal water

A few city councils and city water departments around the state are taking a new stand on solving their water supply demands. Rather that selling voters on the need for bigger and bettr water supply, distribution or treatment facilities, they are encouraging water customers to use less water by adopting more water efficient ways. By reducing water use per person, cities can at least delay the necsessity of expanding supply, distribution sytems or treatment Cities encourage lower water consumption by:

.Promoting consumer education and awareness .Changing water metering and pricing systems

Adopting regulations in ordinances and building codes

.Reducing waste in city water use. .Encouraging reuse and recycling.

Extension of service on Rock Island line requested

AUSTIN - Railroad Commissioner James E. Nugent has called on the Secretary of Transportation and the Interstate Commerce Commission to continue directed service over Rock Island rail lines in the Texas Panhandle for an additional 90 days to assist in gathering and marketing the grain crops now being harvested.

In a letter to Secretary Neil Goldschmidt, Nugent urged that provisions of recent Congressional authority to extend the service be invoked to keep rail lines open between the communities of Etter and Morse and the east-west line between Groom and Norrick.

"It is essential that we have all transportation possible available during the harvest period, in order to protect the crops and income of the Panhandle farmers," Nugent, said. "Inability to move the wheat results in additional storage and other costs, loss due to storage on the ground and many other disasterous financial consequences to the economy.'

The commissioner pointed out that the 1980 Panhandle wheat crop is projected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be near 66 million Purchase of the lines mentioned by Nugent is being negotiated with the trustee of the bankrupt Rock Island line. Nugent also asked the Secretary of Transportation to order that none of the railroad physical plant located between Adrian and Groom in the Amarillo area be disposed of within the next 180 days in order to give sufficient time for service to be started by the purchasing rail lines.

Railway to serve RI shippers .

FORT WORTH - The Fort Worth and Denver Railway is serving former Rock Island Railroad customers in north Fort Worth, Amarillo and between Groom and Adrian, Texas, according to A.E. Michon, president of the railway.

Effective June 13, the Fort Worth and Denver Railway was given Interstate Commerce Commission authorization to provide interim service to Rock Island shippers located on 8.4 miles of trackage in north Fort Worth; terminal trackage at Amarillo and vicinity; and 90.6 miles of track between Groom and Adrian. The order authorizing the Fort Worth and Denver operation is a temporary one and expires on Aug. 31. The Fort Worth and Denver Railway is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Colorado and Southern Railway, Denver. Burlington Northern Inc., headquartered at St. Paul, Minn., owns 92.51 percent of the Colorado and Southern Railway.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Our son who just turned 17 and his girlfriend who is 16 have been going steady for 10 months. They insist that they are "in love," and we know for a fact that they have been sleeping together. (They admitted it.) We feel that they are not mature enough for such a serious relationship.

We have asked that they agree to a six months' "cooling off" period, during which time they will both date other people but not each other. At the end of this period if they still feel the same about each other, they may then go out with each other

The kids think we are being very unfair to ask this of them What do you think, Abby?

CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR CONCERNED: You are not being "unfair," but you are being unrealistic. Most teen-agers who think they are "in love" and are sexually active will find a way to be together no matter what.

As concerned parents you should make sure your children know all the facts in order to prevent unwanted pregnancy and VD. And please don't feel that giving them information is the same as giving them permission. It's not; it's simply being realistic and lovingly protective.

Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, selfaddressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Freezing is one of the simplest, most popular methods of preserving foods at home. It retains the natural color, flavor, texture and food value of most fruits and vegetables, meats, and baked goods.

product used, methods of preparation, packaging and conditions of freezing. For successful freezing, select good-quality products. Freezing will not improve low grade food. Frozen meat, poultry, fish and eggs equal fresh products in hutritive value. Retaining this value of fruits and vegetables depends largely on the treatment before freezing, storage temperature and method of cooking and serving. Handling the food promptly also retains quality. Improper packaging can cause undesirable flavor and appearance. The selection of containers depends on the type of food and personal preference. But all materials should be moisture-vapor proof to prevent evaporation and retain the highest quality in frozen foods.

rigid plastics, freezer wrapping materials, waxed cartons and most bags because they are moisture-vapor proof or at least moisture-vapor resistant. But, do not use ordinary waxed papers, household aluminum foil and cottage cheese or ice cream cartons.

All packages should be air tight. Freezer burn, a surface discoloration on meat and The quality of the food frozen poultry, often results when poultry dry due to improper packaging.

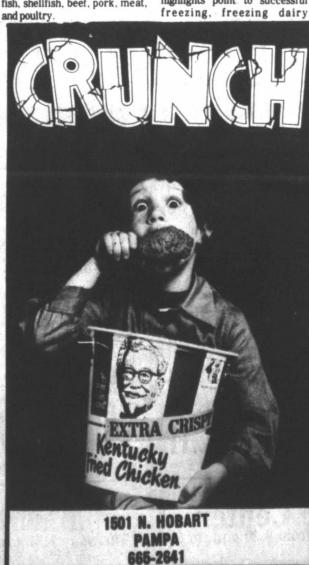

Fruits and vegetables can be frozen at home in glass containers. They can be reused, but be sure to examine the jars for nicks and cracks. Wash the jars in hot soapy water, rinse and scald to be sure that they are sanitary. Invert the jars on a clean cloth to drain and cool. Pack the jars to within %-inch of the top, packing firmly, but not tightly. Place the lid on the jar with sealing composition next to the glass and screw the ring tightly. Canning jar lids may be used. Clear glass makes labeling unnecessary except for the date of freezing.

Give special care to foods which may become rancid, a result of natural fats and oils being exposed to atmospheric oxygen. These foods include fish, shellfish, beef, pork, meat,

Freeze fruits and vegetables at 0 degrees F. or below. Meat should be frozen in a commercial plant at -5 to -20 degrees F. for best results. Space packages of unfrozen food at least one inch apart since heat must be given off in order for them to freeze. Put no more unfrozen food into a freezer than will freeze within 24 hours. For quickest freezing, place packages against freezing Storage temperature matters. For example, many foods noticably lose quality and vitamin content when stored at about 25 degrees F. in an 'open-at-one-end" household refrigerator freezer. Frozen foods undergo slow changes in storage and will not retain quality indefinitely. For best results, store them at 0 degrees or below. Freezing does not sterilize the product, but the low temperature prevents the growth of harmful yeasts, molds and bacteria. Some micro-organisms are killed by freezing, but many survive.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

An old story, but one always delightful, is the tale about the old couple who lived in the wilderness and saw nobody but each other for years at a time. They entertained one another every night by getting out the Sears' and Ward's catalogues and making out orders for their

One night they studied for hours about which electric clock to send for. They pictured the beauty, the efficiency, the ticking and chiming of each. Then, at last, the old man said, "Oh, well, it don't really matter, Ma. We ain't sendin' for it anyway." And the old lady said,

'You're sure right, Pa. We ain't hooked up to no power!" Pretending has always been part of my life, as I hope it has of yours. If we had to meet and greet the hard facts of the community and the nation and the world all the time, we couldn't stand the strain. But if we allow ourselves the miraculous mirth of playing pretend sometimes, we can face the rest of life's problems without

This is especially beneficial to couples our age, in or near retirement. Some older mates don't feel like rushing as fast as they used to or their health won't permit it or they just like to rest a bit. But they don't want to be bored by the sitting. Pretending can help their dispositions and desperations.

Sometime ago there was a movie about a couple whose faces were both badly disfigured. Other people shut their eyes in horrified sympathy when they saw them. But the couple saw each other as unscarred and beautiful. Their faces changed as viewpoint moved. The movie taught the lesson of pretending beautifully.

My folks used to "play trip." We weren't rich enough to take many journeys to "faraway places with strange sounding names" - but we took books from the shelf and read about them. We spent evenings taking turns describing countries and cities we'd like to visit - and having the others guess the locations. I learned geography this easy

I know quite a few older couples who do some sort of pretending. They fancy themselves in the mountains or on the ocean or in a foreign country they'd like to see; and they tell each other about the "trips." They know that this pretense gives them temporary escape from cares and worries over money and health and even family squabbles. A man and a woman who love each other are together in a never-never land that may be far happier than the ever-ever reality in which they live.

If you are 80 or 90 and wish you were 30, you can pretend you are as oung as you used to be. Or you can be a Walter Mitty, fantasizing that you are achieving some goal you could never attain. You can believe you are an opera star, a great speaker, the governor or even

But, best of all, you will not snip or snap at anybody in the world of pretend. The two of you are sharing an experience that pleases you both, and the pleasure is immeasurable.

There is another advantage to this pastime. It's the way you feel when you leave the imaginary place - and that's almost always better than you felt before the mental trip. You're refreshed and pepped up and able to get back to the duties of life with a new outlook. We like to read travel articles in newspapers and magazines. We digest the National Geographic in entirety each month. We become part of the exotic countries and cities, imagining we are truly there. Many travel magazines are available and can offer this enjoyable

A charming letter started me thinking about pretending

DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I are almost 70 and have both been in wheel chairs since our car wreck two years ago. But we took a lot of good trips, all over the world, before that. And now we play like we're going all those places again and a whole lot more. We laugh together and sing the little ditties we learned along the road, especially the ones we sang in Frence.

I haven't cried over our accident in six months and I don't think I ever will again. The "trips" we're taking now are too much fun to let us be sad about anything. Besides, we were awful lucky that both of us came through the car wreck alive. Tell folks they can do the same as us, will you? B.Y.

DEAR B.Y.: I have. And I love you for telling your courageous story. You are special people.

DICKINSON, N.D. (AP) -Dressed in buckskins, Robert Haug seems a living vestige of an age of mountainmen gone

The novelty of his costume drew all eyes recently as he drank coffee in a local Dickin-

Men, women and children at rendezvous play Indian games and have races as they make friends, he added.

His gear includes enough parts to put together a replica of a Kentucky or Hawkins rifle plans to start a muzzle-loading or pistol.

A disgruntled prodigy? Not really. Merely an average youngster for whom music is an important part of life, explains Ms. Dilmore.

In fact, she adds, this particular child is one of the "older" students in a string instrument program that has 3year-olds producing recognizable melodies on pint-sized instruments, and loving every minute of it

For Ms. Dilmore, as for thousands of other music teachers across the country, the "right" age for a child to begin music study is as early as possible. According to the American Music Conference, programming for preschoolers has become an important national trend in music education.

"There is no longer any question about the importance of musical training for young children," said AMC president Gene Wenner. "Numerous studies have proved that children who are exposed to musical concepts at an early age exhibit not only an above average musical proficiency in later years, but also perform better than their peers in academic subjects, especially reading."

Wenner explains that there are about a dozen different methods for introducing preschoolers to music. "Although the approaches

"Even toddlers are transfixed by sound and rhythm," Ms. Dilmore said. "Sometimes mothers bring the student's vounger brothers and sisters to class. When their turn for lessons comes, they learn much more quickly than the others, almost as though the music had already been absorbed into their minds and bodies."

Try to arrange your schedule this coming year so that you can take some of the short fun trips you've always wanted to. Enjoyable and opportune happenings will result from your adventures. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your salesmanship can be vastly improved today if you inject humor into your pitch. Pleasantries will sell, but pressure won't. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There's a possibility you may not make the most of your material opportunities today. This could be due to carelessness or simply taking VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It is reasonable to expect a lot from vourself today. You're quite capable and efficient. However, it could be a mistake to hope for a lot from others LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In certain instances today you will be wise and prudent moneywise. In other situations you could be extravagant. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to select fun activities today that require few or no expenditures. Costly involvements could prove to be a big fizzle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Challenges bring out your better qualities today, although you may not believe this when they first occur. Once you get caught up in the action you'll begin to feel like a winner. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Don't be afraid to speak up today in situations where you're sure of your facts and figures. A little boldness may be required to get your points across.

marvel at the things that modern soap opera has to offer, we lose sight of all the growing pains produced by soap operas born out of the days of live television. A brief chat with James Noble, current co-star of "Benson" in the role of the governor, brings us new insights into those frightening days of yesteryear.

"I have seen things go wrong on live TV that I was. powerless to do anything about it but watch in absolute agony," recalls Noble.

"I have even seen people go 'up' on their lines to such an extent that panic sets in and they are reduced to screaming and falling on the floor." Showing the adaptability of the then new media he adds, "When this happened the camera panned down with the actor to the floor and then panned up on an actor who looked like he had his wits about him. The next day writers had to feverishly rewrite their scripts to account for the strange behavior on the previous day." Despite these types of harrowing experiences Noble claims he enjoyed his stint in daytime TV which included playing Don Hughes on 'As the World Turns", a corrupt police lieutenant in "The Edge of Night" and a psychiatrist on "The Doctors." "I felt, at the time that they were good training and I suppose they are." Yet, he interjects, "The danger is that some actors, because of the severe time limitations on sopas, get used to going for the quick effective thing instead of the best thing to reach an audience.

It is apparent that Noble has not fallen into this trap as witnessed by his success in an incredible variety of roles in both the drama and comedy fields.

Nightstreets with George Jones and Tammy Wynette

Nightstreets is relatively new to the music industry. Robert John Jones(left), Jerry Taylor (right) and Joyce Hawthorne (center) have all been person-alities within the business for quite some time—as songwriters. They write all their own material and have established themselves on country charts, individually and as a team, with songs like T.G. Sheppard's top-ten hit, 'Daylight, Mickey Gilley's 'A Little Getting Used To, the well-known 'Ozark Mountain Lullabye,' and Buck Owens' 'California Okie,'

The group came together as the result of these songs, each member having a desire to succeed as singers, as well as songwriters, Joyce Haw originally Tacoma, Washington, and the only female member of the group, has been singing backup on recording sessions since she was eleven. She worked with Buck Owens in the Bakersfield country music scene for several years before mov ing to Nashville

Jerry Taylor grew up with country music in Abilene, Texas. He began songwriting early and moved to Nashville to pursue it professionally. He

Robert John Jones, from Van Nuys, California, had met Joyce while he was writing for Blue Book Music in Bakersfield. California. It was his ear for production that brought Nightstreets together. He now produces the group as well as other artists. Before moving to Nashville, Robert John recorded for Capitol Records on the west coast.

Nightstreets' first album is to be released on Epic Records later this year. However, in the meantime, the group is featured on four tunes from Tammy Wynette's upcoming LP Nightstreets has already taped their debut television appearance, an international special produced by Osmond Productions for Roads Enterprises Limited of London, England. The show will be aired in the U.S. and Europe this summer. Their second Epic Records single 'Falling Together,' offers a new approach to country harmony and should attract even more attention to the group and its musical talents.

J.R. basks in devilry; Bobby bored with character purity

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) Patrick Duffy was wondering what he could do to shake up the producers of "Dallas" sufficiently to alter a role he felt had become limited and boring. That was when he began to toy with the idea of quitting the hit CBS series. Bobby Ewing had become so glossy in terms of his purity," ne says. "The character of Bobby was getting boring. Even if Miss Ellie did something, Bobby sort of swept the crumbs from the table.

Duffy wanted to return Bobby to what he was in the beginning when he eloped with the daughter of his father's enemy and was the joyful dispenser of "the three B's - booze, broads and booty" to defuse opposition to his family's shady deals.

"That was the element I liked about him," Duffy says. "I said, whatever happened to that? You've stuck me with angel wings and a halo."

Duffy went to producer Leonard Katzman when about four shows remained to be filmed for the season. "I wasn't seriously thinking of leaving, but I was contemplating what it would take to shake them enough to see my point of view. And I found it took very little Katzman said he was surprised it took me so long to come to see him because he was aware of all the problems I was talking It was at this point that the decision was made to shoot J. R., played with devilish delight by Larry Hagman, and leave his fate in the balance until the next season. When the show opens in September, Bobby will be in total control of the Ewing

"We're going to see the effects of that power corrupting me," says Duffy. "Bobby isn't going to clean house - he's going to be slowly eroded. In a sense it will justify J.R. because you'll be able to see it happening again to Bobby. Then we'll see him become the good guy again and slowly fight his way back. Now, that's interesting for an actor to do."

Duffy's hair is uncharacteristically short when he appears for the interview. He had just completed his role as Col. Paul W. Tibbets in the three-hour NBC movie "Enola Gay." He plays the Air Corps officer who commanded the B-29 that dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima in World

He spent four days with Tibbets, who now runs a charter airline, to find out what kind of a man he was. It turned out to be

"My original intention of how perceived him, how in fact he said he was, is not what they wanted," he says. "They thought it was too abrasive and not the image the military wanted to project.

bit of a jolt through the market at A drop of that size would be the second largest on record since the Depression of

However, economists at New York's Chemical Bank pointed out in a recent commentary, "just because the economy has been going from bad to worse in recent months does not imply that such a deterioration will continue indefinitely into

In any event, there are those who argue that an L-shaped recession might prove to be more desireable in the long run for stock-market investors than one that follows the V script.

"Should a quick recovery occur, obviously 1981 earnings prospects would improve," said Lee H. Idleman, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

"But the price in terms of budget deficit. currency weakness and rekindled inflation would imply that those earnings would be subject to competitive pressure again from rising interest rates and worries of a new 'crunch' in time.

"Conversely, the L case suggests that we will have more time to reduce inflationary expectations. Hopefully, in a less inflationary environment, price-earnings ratios would rise, largely offsetting the likely stream of earnings disappointments that would stem from failure of the economy to rebound sharply in 1981.

Christopher Cross" debut album for guitarist

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

Christopher Cross, the singer-guitarist, and Christopher Cross, the six-man band, have a debut album out. It's titled "Christopher Cross."

It's not one of those debut albums bought only by friends, family and a few fans. This one got to No. 9 on the best-selling chart in May. The single, "Ride Like the Wind," stayed at No. 3 for three weeks, with Blondie and Pink Floyd ahead of it. The second single, "Sailing," jumped onto the best-selling chart at No. 89 on June 7.

Cross' music is pop-rock, unlike most of the music.

has a bunch of guest stars on it, Don Henley, Nicolette Larson, J.D. Souter plus Michael McDonald, dueting with Cross on the first single.

When Cross took the band to Los Angeles to cut the LP, he says, "I wanted Larry Carlton to play guitar on the album. He quit playing guitar in studios mostly but our producer, Michael Omartian, said he'd get him to do it. That lasted me a long time, thinking how wonderful that was going to be.

"Then my mind started to wander, and I mentioned Nicolette doing something. We

"I think it's a trend I'm going to continue. When I did two or three songs on demo tapes it was fine when I did all the singing. For a whole album, it gets sterile.

During May, Christopher Cross opened for Fleetwood Mac on tour. Cross says, "They've asked us to tour with them in August and right now we're planning on it." He says the two bands have become very friendly. "We're big fans of theirs. We're proud to be opening for them. We never try to compete or get encores. 'Ride Like the Wind' gets people standing up and listen to the rest of our music. Fleetwood gets that reaction to every song." Cross was born 29 years ago in San Antonio. His father was a

The family name isn't Cross. That name was chosen for stage work because it's easier to spell and pronounce than the real one, which he doesn't reveal. "I

"My wife and little boy have my real name. Sometimes I say Cross to the cleaners. I don't have to fool with spelling my name." Warner Brothers told him they think disc jockeys will like saying Chris Cross.

When he was in high school, Cross had a group named Flash. He also worked as a go-fer for Concerts West, which sometimes booked Flash as an opening act. "It did no good; we had no records out. But I think it has helped me cope with the concert trip now a lot better."
