July's forecast shows no relief from heat

DALLAS (AP) — Texans who already have endured weeks of blistering temperatures will find little solace in the latest bleak prediction from the National Weather Service.

"It doesn't look good," a weather service spokesman said. "Our 30-day prognosis calls for above-normal temperatures and below-normal precipitation."

Residents in at least four cities — Wichita Falls, Dallas, Houston and Abilene — suffered Wednesday through the hottest July 2 on record.

The heat wave, which has sent the mercury past the 100-degree mark for 10 straight days, brought temperatures Wednesday of 114 at Wichita Falls, 110 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 106 at Abilene and Waco, and 103 at Houston, Austin and San Antonio.

At the same time, humidity was 16 percent at Wichita Falls and Abilene, 21 percent at Dallas-Fort Worth and 35 percent at Houston. Temperatures are expected to reach about 105 the next couple of days.

Forecasters for the weather service predicted 100-plus temperatures for at least one more week, possibly for the rest of July.

Wednesday marked the 10th consecutive day of record-breaking temperatures at Dallas-Fort Worth and the ninth in a row for Wichita Falls. Weather men looked back to 1911 to find another year with 13 days over 100 degrees.

Highest temperatures reached 119 at Presidio and 117 at Wichita Falls last month. Dallas reached an all-time high of 113.

"If we don't get a break in the weather the next three or four days, we will see a real catastrophe in our state as far as agriculture is concerned," said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown.

The hot and dry weather has destroyed some crops and sharply reduced others, Brown said.

V.H. Neumann, who grows grain and raises cattle on several sections of land 50 miles west of San Antonio, normally harvests a half million pounds of milo grain.

"We are just burning up. Everything is gone. We will try and salvage what we have for hay, but as far as the grain is concerned, it is gone," Neumann said.

The heat wave has been blamed for the deaths of about 60 Texans, two-thirds of them in Dallas, since the temperatures began to climb over the century mark on June 23. The casualty list is certain to climb, says an investigator for the Dallas County medical examiner.

"We will reach a plateau and then there will be a second wave of deaths. The first wave claimed its weakest victims, but in the second wave more will die as more and more people succumb to the heat," said Dr. Linda Norton.

Among the latest victims was a 19-month-old child who was reported to have walked away from his babysitter. His body was found a few hours later behind a home, and investigators said his body temperature an hour and a half later was 103 degrees.

Officials said the body temperature was 110 degrees or higher on several heat victims whose bodies were found inside their "very hot" houses.

An 80-year-old bedridden Dallas woman was taken against her will to a hospital after she refused to leave the sweltering house where she lived by herself. Her daughter obtained an emergency court warrant from a justice of the peace to get the woman, who recently suffered a broken hip, taken to Parkland Hospital overnight.

Officials at the hospital made arrangements with an ice company to deliver a large shipment of ice to stock in the emergency room's two freezers.

During a 12-day heat wave in 1978, the emergency room ran out of ice for the cold baths needed to treat heat victims, and hospital personnel had to buy ice from convenience stores.

"It may seem cruel or unorthodox, but the best thing to do (for a heat stroke victim) is to throw them in a tub of ice water," Dr. Norton said.

No heat stroke deaths were reported in Dallas last year, while in 1978, 1 was reported in June, 14 in July and 2 in August. Officials said they couldn't recall any high numbers before 1978.

All the generators at Dallas Power & Light's eight power plants are operating around the clock to handle the demand, and electric bills are sure to soar.

Ma Bell may 'sock it to' customers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ma Bell is keeping her mouth closed, but a Public Utility Commission lawyer says the phone company might try to "sock it to" some customers when it files its rate hike request.

In the next few days Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will ask for a statewide rate increase of about $300 million, spokesman Dale Johnson said Wednesday.

Johnson would not divulge specifics of the rate request, but PUC lawyer Allen King speculated Wednesday on the nature of the request.

"I have a feeling the rate design (who pays the increase and how much) is going to be unusually significant to the business community in this case," King said.

He predicted Bell would "sock it to" customers of private line service, which includes burglar and fire alarm services.

He said Bell "always asks for" an increase in ordinary residential telephone rates and this case should be no exception.

"My information is they will not ask for any long distance increase, but we probably will because it hasn't been increased since 1976," King said.

Southwestern Bell serves about 4 million customers in Texas. The request would be Bell's fourth to the commission. The phone company's last rate increase, totaling $138.7 million, went into effect last Nov. 21.

Bell needed $243 million at that time, Johnson said, but held the request to $145 million to comply with President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines.

Those guidelines are due to expire at the end of September. But Johnson said Bell will comply with any new ones.

Johnson blamed the need for more revenue on inflation and growth.

"We're looking at continued increased costs, just like everybody else," he said. "We try to generate revenues within the framework that we have, but inflation just eats it away."

King said, "I think (Bell) probably would have stayed out longer except the capital markets went completely bonkers in the winter."

Johnson added that Texas is growing, so the phone company must spend money to expand service.

"In the last three years, we put in more than $3 billion in capital expense," Johnson said, adding, "and the bulk of that will be reflected in the rate base."

King said hearings on the request probably would convene in September.

AN EARLY MORNING ACCIDENT today resulted when the apparent victim of a stroke, 61-year-old Joel Elmer Sullins, of 213 N. Spruce, Dumas, lost control of his vehicle in the eastbound lane of Highway 152, according to Officer Don Samuels of the Department of Public Safety. The pickup truck, driven by Sullins, veered into the westbound lane striking a wheat combine as it was being towed by Robert Kenneth Beck, of Silverton, Okla., Samuels said. Sullins was reported in good condition today at noon and is being treated for lacerations and bruises, according to officials of Highland General Hospital.

July 4th activities scheduled

Independence Day — July 4 — is the play-time holiday for Americans celebrated by firework displays, parades and picnics.

Friday marks the 204th anniversary of United States independence.

A gala fireworks display is scheduled for 9:30 p.m. Friday at the Pampa Rodeo grounds. The extravaganza will be sponsored by the Pampa Jaycees. Pampanos are encouraged to attend the celebration.

The annual fireworks display at Lake Meredith will take place the Fourth, also at 9:30 p.m., Fritch officials say. The event will be staged directly across from the dam, from the parking lot of the privately owned marina.

Several businesses in Pampa will be changing their hours or closing during the July 4th holiday. Included among those businesses closing on Friday, are the following: local banks, Pampa city offices, Gray County offices, most downtown stores, and the post office services.

Officials at the Pampa Mall reported that stores will be open Friday, but there may be a shorter schedule for some.

Highland General Hospital officials reported that although most physician offices will be closed over the holiday weekend, there will be an emergency physician on duty at the hospital until Monday morning.

The fire and police departments of the city are expecting to be kept busy during the three-day weekend with a large increase in reports of grass fires and exploding fireworks, officials say.

Pampanos are reminded that it is illegal to sell or explode fireworks within the city limits, Chief of Police J. J. Ryzny said. If caught doing so, the culprit can be fined up to $200.

"If people want to explode fireworks," he said, "we encourage them to do so out of town where it will not disturb anyone. Also, where it will not cause a fire hazard."

Doctors are asking citizens to be aware of the safety hazards of exploding fireworks. Misuse of the explosives can cause severe burns and eye damage.

An adult should be present to supervise younger children who are celebrating the Fourth with fireworks.

Department of Public Service troopers will begin Operation Motorside at 6 p.m. today. Texas Highway Patrol troopers will be in full force on state highways in an effort to slow down holiday travelers and reduce traffic accidents. The state police will also be available to help stranded motorists.

Reagan group aims at Soviet grain embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's campaign and Capitol Hill Republicans were teaming up again today in a media show to dramatize another installment of their legislation program — this one aimed at lifting the Carter administration's grain embargo against the Soviet Union.

Top campaign advisers to Reagan, the presumptive GOP presidential nominee on vacation in Mexico, and a group of Republican senators and congressmen scheduled news conferences from opposite coasts to outline their stand that only the American farmer is suffering from the embargo.

The congressional group was up first, from a spot on the Mall just outside the Department of Agriculture.

It is the second time in a week that Reagan and his GOP colleagues have coordinated their efforts in an attempt to magnify their impact. Last week, they used a pair of news conferences to announce Reagan's support for a 10 percent tax cut in 1981 and the Republicans' determination to add the tax cut plan to every suitable piece of legislation reaching the Senate floor.

The play forced the hands of the majority Democrats, who quickly announced they would unveil their own tax cut position by Sept. 3. President Carter reversed his previous stand against a tax cut and said he would accept one in 1981.

The Reagan tactic, which attempts to mesh his political stands with ongoing legislative action, is unique for a candidate and a party out of power.

"The most exciting development of the 1980 political season is the effect Ronald Reagan has had on the legislative process," Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker told reporters.

Other Republican task forces are at work in other areas and coordinated positions by Reagan and his supporters in Congress on other subjects would not be surprising.

One of the key figures in the maneuvering on taxes and the grain embargo is Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee and chairman of the Republican Platform Committee's agriculture subcommittee.

On Wednesday, Dole gave the effort to end the embargo a new twist as he announced that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., President Carter's sole remaining challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination, had become the 21st senator to co-sponsor the bill to end the embargo.

"The American farmer is the true victim of the embargo," Dole said. "Perhaps Senator Kennedy, having traveled around America as he has over the past few months, is more in touch with the people on this issue than is the administration."

Carter imposed the embargo in response to the Soviet Union's armed intervention in Afghanistan.

Congressional critics have complained that many other nations, including U.S. allies, have not exercised similar restraint.

They contend some American grain is reaching Russia through third nations.

And they say that the giant U.S. grain dealers are being permitted by the U.S. government to sell foreign grain to the Soviets.

Early paper Friday

The Pampa News will deliver early Friday morning because of the July 4 holiday. All offices will be closed Friday. The business and

Supreme Court endorses affirmative action quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again deferring to the power of Congress, the Supreme Court has endorsed the use of racial quotas to guarantee minority-owned businesses a fixed share of government grants.

But the court displayed no such deference for federal health and safety regulators, sharply curbing their ability to protect American workers from cancer-causing materials.

Both decisions were announced Wednesday as the court concluded its 1979-80 term and began a three-month summer vacation.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled that Congress acted within its constitutional authority in 1977 when it set aside 10 percent of a $4 billion public works program for minority businesses.

The decision, rejecting arguments that the law fostered impermissible "reverse discrimination" against whites, provided a resounding victory for the concept of affirmative action. Congress may use carefully tailored racial quotas in attempting to make up for past discrimination, the court said.

By a separate 5-4 vote, the justices barred the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration from tightening standards that limit worker exposure to cancer-causing benzene without first proving that current standards are unsafe.

About 600,000 workers come into contact daily with benzene, a highly volatile chemical used in the manufacturing of such products as detergents, plastics, solvents, resins, disinfectants and pesticides. But beyond benzene, Wednesday's ruling casts doubt on OSHA's ability to issue more stringent standards for a variety of cancer-causing substances such as cotton dust, chlorine and fumes from coke ovens.

Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said the court decision "recognizes that health regulation in this country must be made on the basis of scientific facts rather than pure speculation."

But Sheldon Samuels, health director for the AFL-CIO's industrial union department which appealed the case to the Supreme Court, said the ruling requires OSHA to meet an impossible test.

United Auto Workers President Douglas A. Fraser called the decision "an extraordinary blow to workers (that) hampers the national effort to reduce the increasing incidence of cancer and other diseases which are related to occupation."

OSHA has been issuing regulations for cancer-causing substances on the assumption that there is no safe level of exposure and that the substances must be regulated to the lowest level industries can feasibly attain.

One day after upholding the constitutionality of Congress' decision to cut off Medicaid funds for most abortions wanted by women on welfare, the court again refused to strike down an act of Congress in the minority set-asides case.

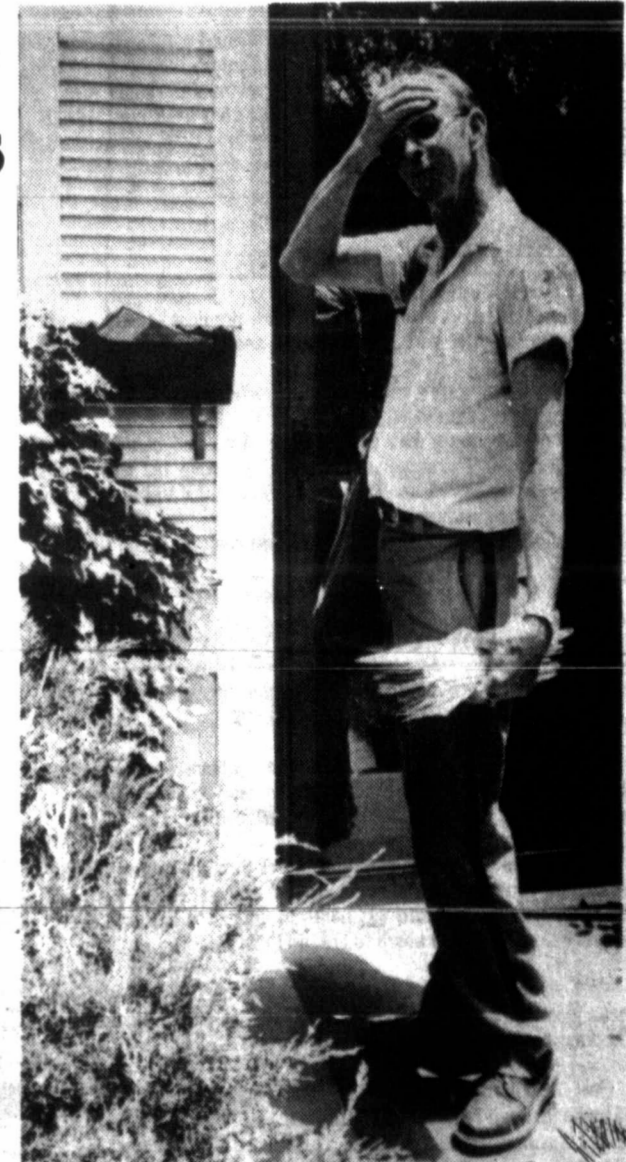

"Any preference based on racial or ethnic criteria must necessarily receive a most searching examination to make sure that it does not conflict with constitutional guarantees," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for three members of the court. "This case is one which requires, and which has received, that kind of examination."

Three justices, led by Thurgood Marshall, said they favored giving Congress "the authority necessary to undertake the task of moving our society toward a state of meaningful equality of opportunity, not an abstract version of equality in which the effects of past discrimination would be forever frozen into our social fabric."

Two of the dissenting justices, Potter Stewart and William H. Rehnquist, called the 1977 act racist.

President Carter, however, praised the ruling. "This administration will proceed vigorously with its set-aside program as well as other efforts to support minority business," said a White House statement issued for Carter.

In other action Wednesday, the court: —Said the public and the press have a constitutional right to attend criminal trials, even when defendants want to exclude them. In a 7-1 decision, the court said trial judges may conduct trials or portions of trials in secret only as a last resort to ensure that a defendant gets a fair trial.

TODAY'S CLOUDY SKIES provided a brief reprieve from the 11-day sizzling heat wave for a dedicated postal worker Bobby Miller. Miller was sighted, as he trudged along Postal Route 3 near Pampa High School looking for a cool porch.

NO REPRIEVE from pavement dilemmas is in the picture for city overseers. Extremely sudden temperature changes in the Panhandle compound the problems of heavy traffic and spot erosion. Added to an unstable bedrock, these factors add up to pavement damage year-round, according to Mack Wofford, city manager. The pavement damage in the photo at left has occurred, and worsened, with continued hot days. Expansion from the heat coupled with sudden sundown drops in temperature has proved too much for the road surface. The affect on the pavement is parallel to the results of adding hot liquid to a cold glass container ... something has got to give. (Photo by Ed Sackett)

American hostages will mark 8 months in captivity July 4

July 4, 1980. For the United States, 204 years of national independence. For 53 Americans in Iran, eight months of personal captivity.
Eight months. Two hundred forty-four days.
You can count the hours: 5,856. The minutes: 351,360. The seconds: 21,081,600.
But numbers alone do not measure the time that has passed since Nov. 4, 1979, when Iranian militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took American citizens as hostages.
Another kind of calendar is the calendar that measures events, large and small. Events of two worlds. The world of Iran. And the world of everybody else.
Nov. 4, 1979: A group of Iranians takes over the embassy, demanding the return of the deposed Shah, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who has come to the United States for medical treatment. Ninety-eight people inside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took American citizens as hostages.
Nov. 4, 1979: Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California disclose plans to announce their candidacies for the Democratic presidential nomination.
Nov. 19, 1979: Three American hostages are released. Ten more will be released the next day. It will later be determined that 50 Americans remain in the embassy and three are prisoners in the foreign ministry.
Nov. 19, 1979: President Anwar Sadat of Egypt leads a prayer ceremony at the foot of Mount Sinai marking the second anniversary of his trip to Jerusalem.
Dec. 15, 1979: The shah leaves the United States and flies to a "temporary" exile in Panama.
Dec. 15, 1979: An early morning explosion and fire at a 1.2 million gallon gasoline storage tank near Taylor, Mich., forces 3,000 people to flee their homes.
Dec. 27, 1979: Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh says that the U.S. hostages will be put on trial if the U.N. Security Council imposes economic sanctions on his country.
Dec. 27, 1980: Soviet troops pour into Afghanistan after the country's president is overthrown in a Russian-backed coup. The action will lead to a U.S. boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow.
Jan. 18, 1980: Four black clergymen from Houston are reported planning a visit with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to seek a "spiritual solution" to the crisis. The clergymen are rebuffed.
Jan. 18, 1980: The price of gold hits a record $845 an ounce in Europe. Less than three months later, the price will have dropped to under $600 an ounce. Silver prices, boosted to $50 an ounce in a buying spree involving the billionaire Hunt brothers of Texas, also will collapse.

police report

The Pampa Police Department responded to 35 calls during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today involving reports of theft and criminal mischief.
Ruth Sloan reported for the Allsup's located at 859 E. Frederic that someone took a case of root beer from the front of the store. A 1977 or 1978 pickup was believed to have been involved in the theft.
Sherry Bryan reported for the Dairy Queen that someone took money from a deposit bag in the office. It was unknown at the time of the report how much money was missing. A description of a suspect was given.
Don Chapin reported that sometime between June 29 and July 1, someone removed a refrigerated air conditioner unit from his rent house located at 1301 Duncan. The cooler was valued at $460.
William Hanna, an investigator for the Santa Fe Railroad, reported an unknown person or persons had placed two barricades and a hose across the railroad tracks near the 300 block of Atchison. At approximately 10:15 p.m. a train hit the barricades on the track. The barricades and hose were valued at $192. Hanna advised such criminal mischief could cause a derailment of trains.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Widely scattered thunderstorms were predicted today for the Texas Panhandle and South Plains and in the mountains of Southwest Texas.
But the thunderstorms were not expected to provide relief for heat-scorched Texans.
Most of the state was to have fair skies and continued hot temperatures. Highs were to be mostly above 100 with highs expected to be as hot as 112 along the Red River Valley in North Texas and in Southwest Texas.
No relief from the heat was in sight, forecasters said.

Texas forecast

North Texas - Fair and continued hot through Friday. Highs 112 northwest to 100 southeast. Lows 75 to 85.
South Texas - Fair and hot with near or above record breaking temperatures today and Friday. Highs near 90 coast to near 110 along Rio Grande. Lows 70s except low 80s coast.
West Texas - Partly cloudy and hot through Friday. Widely scattered thunderstorms north and southwest. Highs 95 to 110. Lows 60 mountains, mid 60s north to upper 70s extreme south. Highs Friday near 100 north to 110 Big Bend.
Port Arthur to Port O'Connor - South and southwest winds near 10 knots through Friday. Seas 1 to 3 feet. Isolated showers or thundershowers.
Port O'Connor to Brownsville - South and southeast winds 10 to 15 knots through Friday. Seas 2 to 4 feet.

Officials license contest

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - State officials have licensed 28 novice fighters for a "Baddest Man in Town" boxing contest next week in Corpus Christi.
Henry Villagomez, assistant director at the Department of Labor and Standards, said Wednesday officials and equipment will be checked before the final OK is given for the fights.
The contest features inexperienced fighters competing for a $1,000 prize. The runnerup will get $500.
The Baddest Man contest was scheduled for June 16, but was postponed when state officials concerned about safety got a court order against the event.
Promoter Jim Limotta of Columbus, Ohio, got his state license last week. Villagomez said he would go to Corpus Christi to check the referees and equipment.
State officials became concerned about the bouts after a Beaumont man was left paralyzed after being knocked out at a "Tough Guy" boxing contest earlier this year.

Federal officials to monitor harvest

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — Federal officials have been asked to monitor the Panhandle onion harvest to "alleviate any tensions and try to prevent any conflict or confrontation" between striking farmworkers and police.

Ruben Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said Wednesday he asked Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to have the Justice Department oversee the harvest.

The request came on the same day that growers played blaring music over loud speakers in onion fields to drown out about 80 strikers and union organizers who used bullhorns to coax remaining workers out of Griffin & Brand fields west of Hereford.

A caravan of strikers and union organizers later circled the Deaf Smith County Courthouse in Hereford, using loud speakers to protest a court order limiting the activities of pickets an union organizers in High Plains vegetable fields.

Bonilla said he called Civiletti after Texas Farm Workers Union director Antonio Orendain complained to him about increased activity by Department of Public Safety officers in the Hereford area.

Orendain "shares our fear" that increased use of DPS troopers "can be used as an intimidating factor and lead to violence," Bonilla said. "It appears likely one or more federal mediators will be sent."

State District Judge David Wesley Gulley issued a temporary restraining order Monday that prohibited secondary boycotts and forbade Texas Rural Legal Aid lawyers from participating in or encouraging demonstrations, boycotts or strikes.

Bonilla called the injunction harsh but said the farm workers would abide by the terms "to show they are orderly, peaceful and law-abiding."

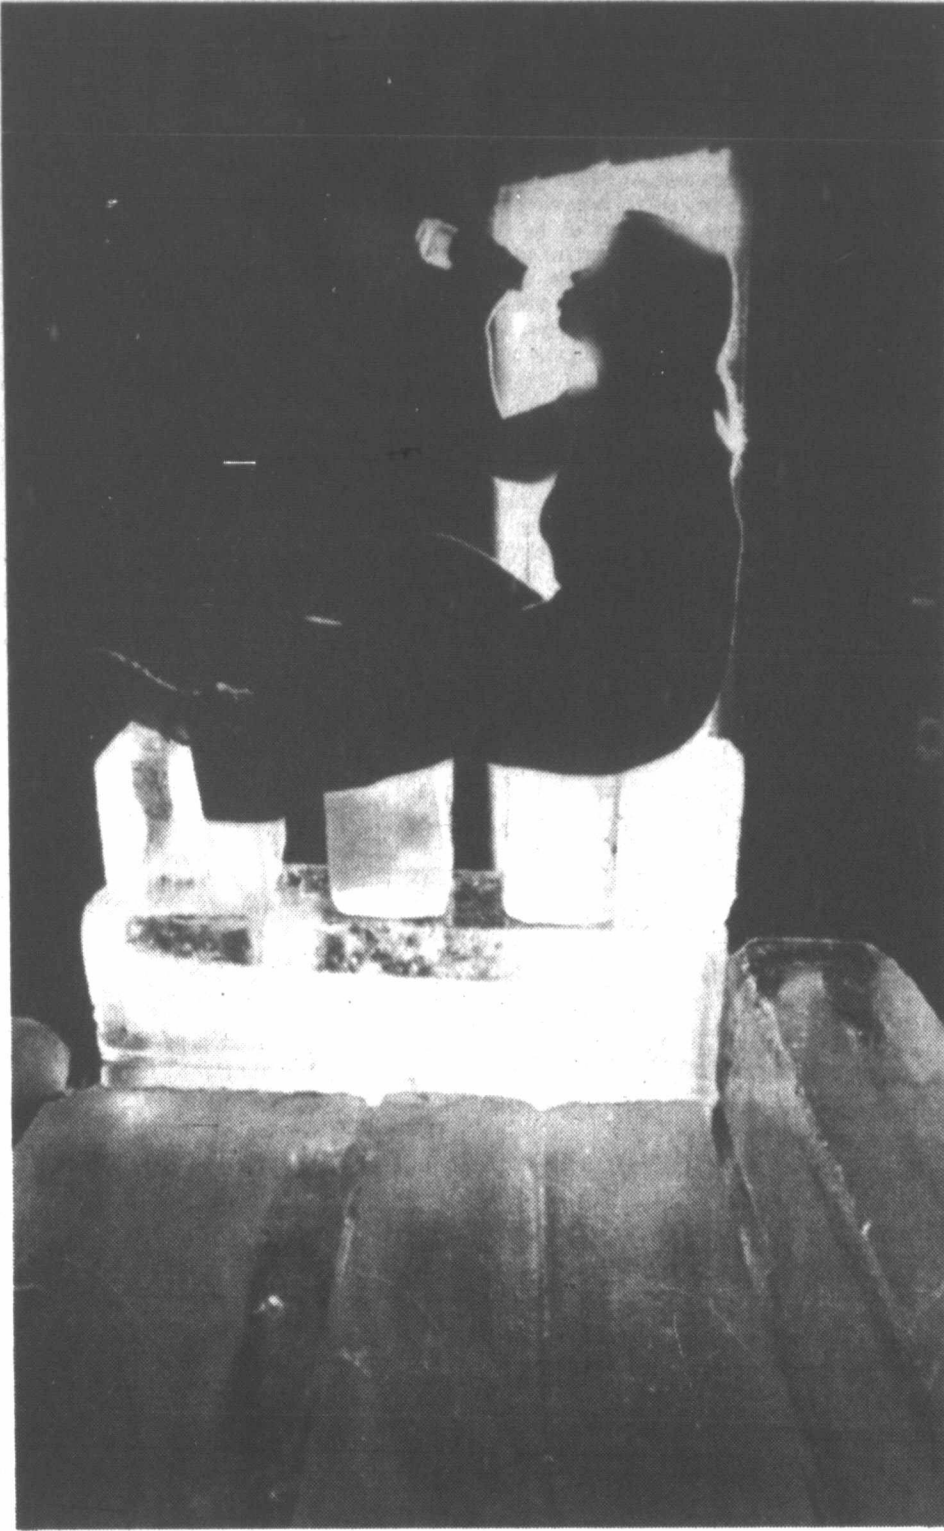

The injunction also specifies that no more than two pickets can be within 50 feet of an onion field, that pickets must be at least 50 feet apart and that they must allow workers to freely enter or leave fields.

About 200 onion clippers and sackers walked out of Howard Gault Co. onion fields last week demanding a pay increase from 45 cents to $1 per 53-pound sack. The strike later spread to fields owned by Griffin & Brand.

Growers, who hired replacements for striking workers, expressed fears earlier that the critical timing of the strike could have left the onions to rot in the fields.

Union leaders claimed a "great victory" when they said last week that the Gault Co. had settled with workers on a 60 cent a sack rate. But Orendain claimed later that the workers were only getting 50 cents.

Company owner Howard Gault said the company does not pay a set amount for any field.

KEEPING COOL is a major priority to residents across the southwest. The heat wave has continued for 12 days with most Texas cities experiencing record-breaking temperatures. Jeri Vandergriff, 22, of Fort Worth, has her own method of cooling off. She sits sipping a soft drink in a Fort Worth ice house. Temperature readings reached 109 degrees in Dallas Wednesday. The entire state has been suffering from the heat, but the Fort Worth - Dallas area has recorded 10 straight days of temperature over 100 degrees.

Clayton lawyers ask for delay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton's lawyers probably will not be ready for trial by July 21, according to a member of Clayton's defense team.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor has set July 21 as the date for Clayton's trial on charges of taking a bribe to influence the awarding of a lucrative state health insurance contract.

However, lawyer Charles Burton of Austin said Wednesday, "It's too soon, very candidly."

Burton said no decision on asking for a delay will be made before a July 11 pretrial hearing before O'Connor.

Judge says he can't order turnover

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A state district judge says he lacks the jurisdiction to order Candice Montgomery to give samples of her hair and blood to authorities investigating the brutal ax murder of a Wylie schoolteacher.

"Until the defendant is indicted — if she is — this court has no jurisdiction in the case," Judge Tom Ryan ruled Wednesday.

Prosecutors had asked Ryan to order Mrs. Montgomery to give them the samples, but the judge said the jurisdiction rested with Justice of the Peace Glen Swaner.

Swaner issued the arrest warrant for Mrs. Montgomery on June 26 and set her bond at $100,000. Judge Ryan also lifted the gag order he had imposed last week, adding that until a new ban is imposed "everyone has the right to run off at the mouth."

Don Crowder, one of Mrs. Montgomery's attorneys, said he would seek a new gag order covering "everyone involved in the case — attorneys, law enforcement officers and investigators. Everyone."

Crowder said publicity in the case had made him "sick to death," and that he would ask Swaner to impose the order.

District attorney Tom O'Connell said the Collin County grand jury would "continue its investigation" into the case, but he did not expect an indictment to be returned before the end of next week.

He said that Swaner had scheduled an examining trial for Mrs. Montgomery on July 10, and that before then the district attorney's office may file applications for search warrants.

Betty Gore, 30, an acquaintance of Mrs. Montgomery, was hacked to death in her home June 13 by a killer wielding a three-foot pole ax. Small bloody footprints were found near the body and a thumbprint was lifted from the blood-smeared refrigerator.

Blood and hair were found in the Gore's bathtub, leading investigators to believe the murderer washed off the victim's blood before leaving the house.

Mrs. Montgomery furnished investigators with her fingerprints and two pairs of shoes, but on the advice of her attorneys refused to take a polygraph examination or give hair and blood samples.

UIL summer camp rule defended in suit

HOUSTON (AP) — University Interscholastic League attorney Bob Gauss has denied a UIL rule banning participation in summer camps is unconstitutional.

"The right to participate in athletics is not a constitutional right," Gauss said Wednesday during final arguments of a suit challenging the constitutionality of the league rule. "This rule does not prohibit anyone from going to a summer camp."

"It only says that if they go, they can't play (varsity athletics) for one year."

"The rule only says if they go, they are ineligible to participate in varsity athletics in basketball and football for one year," Gauss said. "What we are saying is that the UIL has the right to regulate the competition of its members and as a part of that right, they have passed this regulation."

Speaking for plaintiffs Alex and Larry Harris, attorney T. Gerald Treece said the UIL rule violates the constitutional right of "family choice," of parents in educating their children.

U.S. District Judge George Cize heard final arguments in the suit Wednesday. The judge will issue a ruling in the case sometime after Monday, the deadline for the UIL to file its final brief in the case.

"What we have here are parents making a decision on what is best for their kids whether it is to go to summer camp or to the grocery store," Treece said.

Gauss said the rule prevented individual schools from sending an entire team to one camp where it could work together in the summer and gain an unfair advantage over other schools. It also avoids discrimination against poor athletes, who could not afford to participate in summer camps, he said.

"I don't think the UIL would tell parents they couldn't send their child to a summer camp to learn German because they might gain an unfair advantage over other children," Treece said.

Hanigan defense fails to blitz testimony

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Mexican national who claims he and two other aliens were robbed and tortured has withstood a defense lawyer's blitz aimed at getting him to admit he lied in giving contradictory testimony.

Manuel Garcia Loya, 28, of Hermosillo, Mexico, refused under cross-examination in U.S. District Court Wednesday to say that he had lied, despite repeated efforts by defense lawyer Alex A. Gaynes to pull such an admission from him.

Gaynes began questioning Loya Wednesday afternoon after another defense lawyer, Alan K. Polley, had spent nearly two full days in cross-examination exposing contradiction after contradiction in Loya's testimony.

The two lawyers are defending Patrick Hanigan, 26, and his brother Thomas, 23, on charges of robbery affecting interstate commerce in connection with an August 1976 attack on Loya and two other illegal Mexican aliens in southeastern Arizona.

The aliens say three Americans accosted them and then robbed and tortured them and shot at them as the aliens were on their way to a farm where they hoped to get work.

The Hanigans are charged with robbery affecting interstate commerce because, the government says, the farm that the aliens were headed to was engaged in interstate commerce.

In asking about Loya's own contradictory testimony, Gaynes said: "When assessing your testimony, some of it is a lie and some is the truth, is that correct?"

Loya responded: "That is not correct. There may be errors, but not lies."

Then a few moments later, Gaynes asked Loya to give his definition of a lie.

Loya responded: "A lie is to say something in vain, something that didn't happen." Gaynes then asked him if he had lied in telling about some things that did not happen.

"In various statements, there have been some errors that I have made," Loya responded. Then Gaynes asked: "If the errors included something that did not happen, that would meet your definition of a lie, wouldn't it?"

And Loya responded: "No, that's not correct."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Maybe someday we can be rid of OSHA

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has little to show for the billions it has spent since its creation in 1970. Complaints about OSHA inspectors have been heard throughout the private sector. Now Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has introduced legislation, S. 1572, which will permanently exempt small farmers and ranchers from OSHA regulations. It should be passed immediately.

Originally designed for regulation of the industrial sector, OSHA has not done a good job even for what it was intended. Although the statistics are debatable, some figures suggest that industries closely watched by OSHA actually have worse records than those with few inspections. Put another way, OSHA inspection while costing billions may not mean fewer accidents. And whereas that may be debatable, serious job injuries have clearly increased — by 25 percent — after eight years of OSHA regulation.

The protection OSHA allegedly provides costs the American people a bundle, both as taxpayers and consumers. Over the years the OSHA budget alone runs into the billions of dollars. Then there is the cost of meeting the often unrealistic safety regulations mandated by the federal agency. Businessmen have complained for years about the arrogance of both OSHA regulations and the inspectors, but eventually they swallow their pride and spend whatever is necessary to appease OSHA. The cost of this folly is, of course, passed along to the customer.

Realizing that many small farmers and ranchers could not withstand cost-expanding regulation, Congress four years ago temporarily exempted them from OSHA's purview. This only happened after the federal agency demanded portable potties for field workers and issued paternalistic warnings about the hazards of slippery cow manure. The Helms legislation permanently exempts farmers and ranchers with less than 10 employees from OSHA regulation.

The bill will have a major impact on the cattlemen and farmers and is vigorously supported by the National Cattlemen's Association. For example, over 90 percent of all farms would permanently be free of OSHA's dictates if S. 1572 passes. Over half of those employed in agriculture work on those small farms and ranches.

The Cattlemen's Association points out that ranchers and farmers don't need OSHA. They try to maximize safety because it is good business, not because some federal bureaucrat says so. If a farmer or rancher is laid off because of an injury, the job doesn't get done. These days that means lost money. Undeniably, these same arguments can be made for exempting all business.

Sen. Helms does, in fact, support the total abolition of OSHA. Realizing that abolition is politically impossible at this time he is trying to do what he can. We applaud his efforts and hope that someday the rest of American business can be exempted from the dictates of this miserable federal agency.

Days of reckoning

New Orleans is the latest city to face the music, and it's not Bourbon Street jazz. The city's budget isn't going to balance, it seems, without some massive layoffs and other cuts this year.

Localities are usually constrained in a way that the federal government is not, in that they cannot create more money out of thin air when expenses exceed revenues. We say "usually" because the awesome crunch that's been predicted for some profligates hasn't yet come to pass. New York City's made some cuts, but federal bailout saved it from default. Cleveland defaulted, but so far has lost nothing but a mayor. Wayne County, Mich., (of which Detroit is part) was in the process of laying off the whole work force a month ago when the state acted to save the budget cutters for an indefinite period, although public sector pay checks may be occasionally late.

Unless the federal government, using your tax dollars, is willing and able to relieve all these local debts over the long-term, however, the ax is going to have to fall. In New Orleans, across-the-board cuts are occurring to the tune of 12 percent. The fate includes millions for public transit and even $6,000 for the New Orleans opera, provoking arias that such culture is not a luxury and can't be forgone.

There apparently is no out for the city fathers, who are faced with a constitutional requirement to balance the budget, eliminating the deficit that is a legacy of former Mayor Moon Landrieu, now head of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The task is especially tough because residents there aren't accustomed to paying much in direct taxes, having lived off a rich industrial and commercial tax base that is now shrinking. "The major problem with this city is that people don't want to pay taxes," says a University of New Orleans economics professor.

Who does?

The Cuban boatlift

By Stephen A. Cambone
Secrecy, not openness, is the hallmark of international relations. The reasons given by a nation for its actions may have little or nothing to do with its real intentions. In attempting to divine those intentions it is sometimes helpful for the analyst to apply his imagination (as well as his training), to the problem.

The recent boatlift of refugees from Cuba is a case in point. The conventional view is that Castro allowed the refugees to leave because they were disruptive to his regime. This in turn is taken as a demonstration of the tenuous hold Castro has on the affairs of Cuba. Why else should he fear the old people and young families that arrived in Florida by the tens of thousands?
A more unconventional view of the event is that the whole spectacle may have been an elaborate deception perpetrated by Castro on the U.S.

Deception is one of the most treasured arts of the strategist. Its purpose is to divert the attention of the enemy so that the strategist may accomplish a given task at the least possible cost to himself.
A successful deception depends on the willingness of the enemy to be deceived. It should appear to the enemy as a development he has long anticipated and prepared for. It should appear as an opportunity to be exploited rather than a new danger to be guarded against. Having convinced the enemy that he is in control of the situation, the strategist can then move to accomplish his real objective.

In the case of Cuba, the American people have generally been suspicious of any claims of success for the Castro regime. The well publicized reports of recent months exposing the inefficiencies of Cuban industry and the failures of the sugar and tobacco crops have undermined Castro's reputation as an effective leader. The rush of nearly 90,000 people to leave the island served only to confirm the belief that Castro was in deep political trouble.

It has been the object of U.S. policy for some years now to "normalize" relations with the Castro regime. Seeking to take advantage of Castro's apparently weakened position, the head of the U.S. Interests Section in Havana has suggested that now might be the time to bring that policy to fruition.

Castro immediately signaled his interest in the proposal by imposing order on the flood of refugees and eventually stemming the flow altogether. The U.S. interpreted this as a sign of Castro's commitment to the normalization policy. It might have been instead an act of deception.

For by indulging the belief of the U.S. in his own weakness and directing attention to the issue of normalization, Castro has gained new freedom to pursue his real objective, the export of revolution to the nations of the Caribbean.
Castro has never faltered in this pursuit. His lack of success in the early years of his rule may be attributed to the relative strength of the U.S. in the region, the real weakness of his regime, and the low level of Soviet involvement in Cuban affairs.

But all of that has changed. The Panama Canal Treaties made obvious what many Caribbean politicians already knew, that is, that the United States can no longer decisively influence the politics of the area. In exchange for Soviet economic and military aid Castro has allowed the Russians to make extensive use of Cuba as a forward base in their struggle with the U.S. This had the two-fold effect of providing Castro with credibility among the revolutionary leaders of the region and shielding him from U.S. interference in his efforts.

Today, Castro is on the brink of success. His support of the Sandanista made their victory over Somoza possible. The 2,000 Cubans still in Nicaragua serve as advisors to the Sandanista on economic, military and foreign policy.

These advisors have also been instrumental in supporting the left wing guerrillas in El Salvador, who are engaged in a bloody civil war against the right wing planters and the troops of the newly formed junta. In Jamaica, Castro has advised Prime Minister Michael Manley to ignore the protests of his people over the ever more repressive tactics used by Manley to convert Jamaica into a little Cuba.

In Grenada, Castro was instrumental in bringing Prime Minister Bishop to power through a coup last year. In return, Bishop has accepted Castro's offer of 600 advisors to train his army and police and to supervise the education of the island's children. Bishop has also agreed to allow the Cubans to build a modern airport capable of serving as a refueling stop for African bound Cuban transports.

Castro appreciates the importance of the Caribbean to the political, economic, and military security of the U.S. He can ill-afford to rouse the U.S. from its lethargy with respect to Caribbean affairs just as he approaches success. Thus he is likely to employ any stratagem, including deception, that might confuse, delay or attenuate an American response to his efforts.

It is perfectly possible, and indeed probable, that the boatlift is everything the conventional wisdom on the subject suggests. It may well be that the 90,000 Cubans now in the U.S. posed some threat to Castro's regime.

But whether it was a deception or a spontaneous event, Castro has managed to use the boatlift to cast himself as a ruler weakened by its domestic effects, seeking normalization rather than confrontation. The longer this image lingers in the mind of the American public the more difficult it will be for the government to take the necessary steps to deprive Castro of his impending victory.

Justice is served

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The justice system in this country seems as loused up as everything else. One of the reasons for this is that the law provides that anyone who has a legal dispute involving more than $50 is entitled to a jury. Most jurors can deal with personal injury and liability cases. But you have to have an MBA from Harvard, a law degree from Stanford, and an accounting diploma from the Wharton School to be able to follow the complicated suits that ordinary citizens are required to adjudicate these days.

How can the average jury understand the issues in a multi-billion dollar corporation lawsuit?

A well-known trial lawyer told me they can't. Most juries involved with a business litigation make their decisions based on things other than the thousands of pieces of evidence and months of testimony that neither they nor the judge understand. This is how it goes in the jury room, he told me.

"I think we should find for the plaintiffs." "Why?" "Their chief lawyer always looks so fresh and neat no matter how hot it is in the courtroom."

Unpopularity is catching

By Don Graff

Move over, Khomeini — you've got competition as the man Americans love to exorcise.

Ramsey Clark.
The former attorney general's mission to Iran in an effort to resolve the hostage crisis has drawn about as a critical a press as is possible these days for anyone who is not an active presidential candidate or doing public relations for an oil company.

And not only in the United States. As thanks for his efforts, which included a denunciation of 25 years of American wrongs against the Iranian people through support of the shah, the revolutionary radio labeled him a CIA agent. Not just any old operative, mind you, but "the vilest agent of them all."

All this and more considered, Clark at this stage of the never-ending and increasingly bizarre hostage game should perhaps be spared further belaboring by his countrymen. If anyone has lost in this round, it is he — his convictions, or illusions of the case may be.

Clark, it may be remembered, spoke out before the shah's downfall in favor of the revolution and of Khomeini. He had made personal contact with the exiled ayatollah in Paris and had marched in the streets of Tehran with the revolutionaries. In attending the anti-American conference, he was defying his own government's ban on travel to Iran at the possible penalty of imprisonment and fine.

Yet as special credentials, all this added up to less than those possessed by the mother of one hostage, who at least was admitted to the captured embassy and talked with the militants and officials who refused to deal with Clark.

There are lessons to be learned in the incident, not only by Clark and his companions but by the broader public.

First is the basic miscalculation that there is anything to be gained in negotiation with the existing fractious Iranian power structure. The interest of the extremist religious forces that hold if not the upper hand at least veto power is in

"I'm for throwing out all the charges. The defense has a woman lawyer on the staff, and I think if we voted for the defendants, it would encourage large corporations to hire more women lawyers."

"That's the stupidest reason I ever heard for judging a case. If we're going to play those rules, we have to take into consideration that one of the plaintiffs' executives has a bad limp. Why not give the billion dollars to them for hiring the handicapped?"

"Wait, we're getting away from the evidence. Let's go over it again."

"Are you crazy? No one in this room knows what anyone out there was talking about."

"Okay. Let's NOT go over the evidence. How do we arrive at a decision?"

"I'm for giving the nod to the plaintiffs. Their backup lawyer always came over to us when he wanted to make a point. The defendants' lawyer preferred to address his remarks to the judge. If he wanted to win, the defense counsel should have paid more attention to us."

"You're too sensitive. Only the fat defendants' lawyer ignored us. The cute one with the horn-rimmed glasses spent a lot of time leaning against the jury box. He had beautiful eyes."

"But he had a beard. I'd never trust a person who sports a beard."

"My son has a beard."

"I thought as much, and while we're on the subject — I don't trust you either."

"Hold it. We've been together five months. Let's get a decision so we can all go home. How do you vote?"

"How is she voting?"

"I'm voting for the plaintiffs."

"Then I'm voting for the defendants."

"We're never going to see our loved ones again. There has to be a compromise. I suggest we give the plaintiffs half of what they are asking."

"Why?"

"Do you remember when the president of the injured company testified? His entire family sat in the first row for five days. I thought that was very loyal of them. You don't see families that close any more."

"Are you planning to give the plaintiffs half a billion dollars because their chief executive officer has a nice family? How do we now what goes on behind closed doors?"

"I agree. Besides, the defendant company's chairman of the board wore his Shriner's pin when he took the stand. I happen to be a Shriner, and I'll take a lodge brother's word against anyone who drags his kids out of school to sit at a trial."

"We appear to be split on a verdict. Shall I report to the judge that we can't come to a decision?"

"Don't do that. He'll make us read the court transcript again. I say we flip a coin. Heads we find for the plaintiffs — tails for the defendants."

"Okay, as long as she takes back what she said about men with beards."

"I take it back, but only because I believe justice should be served."

Explosion reveals drug lab

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — A Texas couple was charged Tuesday with possession of Quaaludes and marijuana after an explosion in a home laboratory sent one of them to a hospital.

Police Chief Bill Bray said the laboratory contained "chemicals enough ... to make drugs with a wholesale value of $250,000. The substances being manufactured included 'angel dust' in large quantities."

"Altogether, the operation would have produced drugs that would have had a street value of $750,000," Bray said.

Angel dust is a powerful hallucinogen popular among teen-age drug users.

Bray said James Adams, 39, of Houston was hospitalized with multiple cuts to the arms, legs and throat, apparently as a result of an explosion in the cottage Adams and his wife of one week, Bonnie Jill Adams, 18, had rented at Kill Devil Hills.

Police found the laboratory after Mrs. Adams was stopped for suspicion of speeding while she was taking Adams to a hospital. Bray said the couple told officers they had been accosted by two men who inflicted the injuries to Adams.

Bray said police obtained a search warrant and checked the cottage.

Tax cut for 1981 is a certainty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, caught in a congressional frenzy for an election-year tax cut, is moving reluctantly toward supporting a 1981 tax reduction. The biggest question now appears to be when.

"There's no question in all of our minds that there will be a tax cut in 1981," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Tuesday after he and other Democratic leaders conferred with Carter.

O'Neill said the main question is whether to enact the cut before or after the November elections. However, he conceded that Carter "had not committed himself (on a tax cut) at this time."

Political pressure for a tax cut began to build on Democrats last week when Ronald Reagan, the likely GOP presidential nominee, proposed a $36 billion cut effective Jan. 1 and Senate Republicans tried to attach it to pending legislation.

To head off a stampede of jittery Democrats in support of the GOP plan, Senate Democratic leaders promised to propose their own tax cut by Sept. 3.

The pledge caught House Democrats and the White House by surprise and prompted a "frantic reassessment of administration economic policies and the impact of a tax cut on inflation and the deepening recession."

At the White House meeting Tuesday, Carter and the Democratic leaders agreed to hold discussions on a tax cut, similar to sessions last March that produced a call for a balanced 1981 budget as a way to combat inflation.

Ironically, the new push for cutting taxes is considered almost certain to doom already fading hopes for balancing the budget for the first time in 12 years.

O'Neill said the House Ways and Means Committee will begin hearings on the tax issue, perhaps as early as during this month's congressional recess.

White House press secretary Jody Powell confirmed Tuesday that Carter is studying the extent and timing of a tax cut, but he said the president remains concerned about "the ability to produce a reasonable and responsible product before the election."

Powell said Carter still prefers to delay action until after the election.

Woman talks to 12 million people during each day

ATLANTA (AP) — You may not know Jane Barbe, but you'd recognize her voice. Every day she gives the time and temperature to 12 million people, including one woman in Texas who thinks the telephone company keeps her locked in a little room all day.

But the only room in which Mrs. Barbe is ever stuck is a recording studio, where that clear and silky voice purrs such information as, "I'm sorry, but the number you have dialed is no longer in service."

People in such countries as Saudi Arabia, Zambia, Canada, the Bahamas — as well as the United States — hear her voice each day when they call for the time or run into a problem with a telephone number.

Mrs. Barbe says her telephone work is only part of her career. She is also an actress in television and radio commercials, which is how she got her part-time job 17 years ago at the Audichron Co., which manufactures public announcement equipment for Southern Bell.

Audichron Operations Manager Sam Medin estimated that Mrs. Barbe's voice is used in 90 percent of "intercept messages," the recordings you reach when something is wrong with a telephone number, and her voice is used in about 60 percent of automated time and temperature services.

Take extra precautions against heat

Texas summers with 100-degree-plus temperatures take their toll, not only in loss of energy and health but also in death. Two years ago 21 people in Dallas died of heatstroke during July.

Something — the traditional macho mystique or the pioneer spirit — requires most people to proceed with activities as usual, working, jogging and Fourth of July picnics included. But a Dallas heat expert warns that people can and should protect themselves from the intense summer heat.

The weather prediction for June 25 was 108 degrees.

"Anyone who jogs on a day like this is a damn fool," said Dr. James Knochel, professor of internal medicine at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas. "But you can bet that people will be out there jogging."

The same day "The Dallas Morning News" carried a front-page story about the garbage collector who suffered heat exhaustion June 24 when the temperature reached 106. "People ought to run out and give their garbage collectors a big glass of iced tea," said Knochel.

Some people need special protection from the heat, and almost all of us need to take special precautions at some time. And the key to dealing with the heat is plenty of drinking water, said the internist.

CAUTION:

1. People taking drugs, both users and abusers. Sedatives such as Valium and Haldol decrease the amount of sweating and also blunt the consciousness enough that the user doesn't drink enough water.
 2. Athletes and workers outside and in buildings with no ventilation. Supervisors should watch their people closely and make sure they have frequent rest breaks and plenty of water.
 3. Babies. They gain heat more rapidly than adults because of their proportionately larger skin surface area. "Don't leave kids in the car. It's like leaving them in the oven," said Knochel.
 4. Celebrants at the Willie Nelson Fourth of July Picnic, rock concerts and other outings. Drink lots of liquids and sprinkle a little extra salt on your food, said Knochel. Stay away from salt tablets or large amounts of salt taken without a large amount of liquid. Those drinking alcohol should be especially careful to drink lots of other liquids and use extra salt sprinkled on food.
 5. Elderly people. Their physiological response to temperature change is slow so they may not feel the sensation of being too hot. Also the problem may be compounded by medications they are taking. They should pay attention to the environmental temperature and take precautions when it reaches 100 degrees.
 6. People with special problems such as heart disease, diabetes, alcoholism or obesity. "A lot of the heatstroke patients we see in Dallas are not accustomed to the heat," said Knochel. "Some of them take diuretics (drugs that decrease body fluids) to lose weight. This really makes it dangerous for them to work in the heat because their blood volume is inadequate."
- People in heatstroke are in coma; that is, they are unresponsive to any external stimulation. Sweating usually ceases, so their skin is dry, flushed and extremely hot to touch. Body temperature is usually more than 106 degrees. "If their temperature reaches 108 degrees, the heat starts altering proteins, which are what the whole body is made of. What happens is every tissue and organ — including the brain — gets cooked. At that temperature you are likely to have permanent brain damage."

Untreated, heatstroke is always fatal.

First aid for heatstroke is to lower the body temperature as quickly as possible. "Your first inclination might be to call an ambulance. But the victim could die before the ambulance gets there."

Get the victim out of the sun, remove his clothes and douse him with water. Use a piece of his clothing or whatever is available to fan him. The goal is to imitate the sweating mechanism. As sweat evaporates from the skin, it cools the body.

This technique could save the victim's life before the ambulance arrives.

During hot, humid weather ambulances and emergency rooms should be stocked with plenty of ice. Ice massages and ice baths are used by trained personnel to further lower the victim's body temperature. "The important thing is to be prepared so that when heatstroke patients are brought in, they are diagnosed and treated promptly."

Knochel recommends that unless you are fully acclimated, you should not do anything strenuous during the middle of the day when the temperature is above 90 degrees and the humidity is above 40 percent. On such days exercise should be done in the early morning and late evening, when the sun and heat are less intense.

Also, drink plenty of water — before, during and after exercising. "We now know that you can increase your performance by about 20 percent if you load up with water before exercising," he said.

Dehydration causes a major share of the deaths that occur in young athletes. "Not only should coaches provide the kids with water, but they should make sure that they drink it."

Humidity is an important factor leading to heatstroke because if the air is saturated, sweat will not evaporate. Sweat that is rolling off and dripping is not effective in cooling the body, so the person feels hot and uncomfortable.

Clothing is another contributing factor. If the body is all covered up in heavy clothing, sweat cannot evaporate.

Heat exhaustion is less serious than heatstroke. Usually giving fluids and removing the person from the hot environment is sufficient to treat heat exhaustion.

Early symptoms of heat exhaustion are headache and nausea. These are followed by cramps, fatigue, malaise (a vague feeling of discomfort) and mild confusion. The body temperature is lower than in heatstroke. But heat exhaustion ignored can lead to heatstroke.

Contrary to popular practice, Knochel does not recommend taking salt tablets unless there is no other source of extra salt. He recommends taking in a little extra salt by drinking bouillon, tomato juice, Gatorade or water with table salt added (one-half teaspoon salt per quart water).

Too much salt in the body draws water out of the brain, and if you take salt without drinking a lot of water, there is no way your kidneys can get rid of the excess. The result may be dehydration and brain damage.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY By Joe Graedon

Q. I'm caught in a dreadful dilemma. I'm expected to attend social functions for clients at my supervisor's home on a regular basis. Because of my allergy to cats, these otherwise pleasant evenings often end with a distressing attack of asthma.

Her Siamese cat inevitably climbs on my lap, and I soon start sniffing and sneezing. By the time I get home I am wheezing and have trouble catching my breath.

I've tried antihistamines and decongestants to no avail. Shooting the cat away and dropping subtle hints to my boss that the cat be removed haven't worked either.

These gatherings are important to my job, so I don't have the option of staying home. Is there anything I can take to alleviate my misery?

A. You certainly are in a bind. Naturally, it would be best if you would avoid the cat altogether, but even locking the cat in a closet might not be the full solution. Cat dander left on furniture could be enough to trigger your allergy.

Fortunately, there may be a way to head off the allergy and asthma attacks before they can even get started.

An aerosol medication called Intal (cromolyn sodium) has revolutionized the treatment of asthma. Although it can't alleviate symptoms once they have started this drug may help protect you if it is used in advance of your social engagements.

Pre-treatment with Intal can prevent the release of histamine which is responsible for triggering allergic reactions.

Over the last ten years this drug has established itself as a safe and effective adjunct to traditional asthma therapy. While some sensitive individuals may experience throat irritation and coughing these side effects are rare.

The FDA has only approved Intal for the prophylactic treatment of asthma but investigators have recently discovered that the drug may also be helpful in preventing hayfever and stubborn food allergies.

While we can't guarantee that Intal will protect you from your boss' cat you may want to discuss the possibility with your physician before the next social function.

Q. My baby granddaughter is three months old. She's getting nothing but breast milk and I'm concerned about her. My daughter-in-law claims solid food now would cancel the advantages of breast feeding. But I know milk doesn't have much iron. I thought babies, needed iron-fortified cereals and strained foods by this age to keep them from getting anemic.

Are there iron drops I could suggest for my granddaughter? Her mother is adamant about not giving her solids.

A. While you are right that milk contains little iron, Mother Nature was looking after her babies when she designed breast milk.

Infants absorb and use half or more of the iron in breast milk, which is adequate for their needs, compared to only about 10 percent of the iron in cow's milk and at most five percent of the iron in formulas.

Your daughter-in-law is right to hold off the solids: recent research has found that food as innocuous as strained pears dramatically decreases the iron absorbed from breast milk.

Don't worry about iron drops or iron-fortified cereals now. Chances are your little granddaughter is doing just fine.

Q. During that last two years I have taken Inderal (propranolol) for high blood pressure.

Last month while I was on vacation I ran out and couldn't get my prescription filled.

My vacation ended unpleasantly in the hospital with a severe attack of angina. Was that because I ran out of Inderal?

A. Abrupt withdrawal of Inderal can bring on angina and has even been reported to precipitate heart attacks.

You should make sure you always have a reserve bottle on hand and if it ever becomes necessary to stop this medication make sure you phase it out gradually over a period of a few weeks.

FASHION GROUP CELEBRATES

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Fashion Group is holding a year-long celebration of its 50th anniversary, using the theme "Fifty Years of Women in Fashion."

KKI meets in Baton Rouge

Three members of Pampa's Gamma Kappa Conclave of Kappa Kappa Kappa, national teacher's sorority, recently attended the 31st annual national convention in Baton Rouge, La.

Those attending were Mrs. Laura Penich, past-state president, Mrs. Pat Southerland, state first vice-president and Mrs. Jo Johnson, Gamma Conclave president.

The Texas State 1979-80 Yearbook prepared by Pat Southerland was awarded a superior rating for excellence.

Betsy Cook of Atlanta, Ga. was installed as president for 1980-81.

Stories in top literary form

PRIZE STORIES 1980: The O. Henry Awards. Ed. by William Abrahams. Doubleday. 456 Pages. $12.95.

Most of the 22 short stories in this 60th volume of the O. Henry Memorial Award series are excellent examples of a literary form which once flourished but has of late fallen on rather hard times.

Outlets for the short story used to be plentiful, but times have changed. Some of the magazines that carried them have died and those that survive lean more to non-fiction. But the form survives, writers continue to use it, and, luckily, there are still outlets.

Scientists' biographies invaluable

MODERN SCIENTISTS & ENGINEERS. Edited by Sybil P. Parker. McGraw-Hill. 3 Volumes. 1,366 pages. $110.

This three-volume set updates McGraw-Hill's 1966 "Modern Men of Science" and serves as a technically detailed Who's Who of scientists since 1920.

It may be a little too detailed for the general reader. I suspect many people would be simply baffled to learn that American physicist Murray Gell-Mann is credited with proposing the law of the conservation of strangeness in strong and electromagnetic interactions. Also, its $110 price will probably confine the book mainly to libraries and other institutions.

But for scientists, engineers or others whose business is to follow the history of science, this kind of compendium is invaluable. For those who want a fuller explanation of some of the concepts involved, the volume is cross-referenced to McGraw-Hill's excellent "Encyclopedia of Science and Technology."

Editor-in-chief Sybil Parker says in a preface that the scientists themselves wrote the book's biographies in about 1,000 cases. In other cases, the biography was approved by the scientist, when possible, and

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: JUST ASKING wondered how many Nobel Prize winners were children of Nobel Prize winners. He said, "Nowhere has it been proven that kids inherit their intelligence from their parents."
May I quote Paul R. Chernoff, associate professor of mathematics at the University of California, Berkeley:
"Since 1901 there have been about 330 Nobel laureates in science. Comparing this number with the total eligible population, one sees that the chance of a randomly selected person winning a Nobel Prize is somewhere between one in two million and one in 10 million."

"On the other hand, out of a pool of, say, 1,500 children of Nobel laureates, at least four have themselves won Nobel Prizes: W.L. Bragg (who shared the 1915 physics prize with his father), G.P. Thomson, Irene Joliot-Curie and Aage Bohr. This record seems to show that the child of a Nobel laureate is several thousand times more likely to win a Nobel Prize than a randomly selected child."
"It is indeed rather obvious that Nobelists' children have huge advantages both in heredity and environment."
NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: I have a terrific calculator that I have not yet learned how to operate, so I'll take Chernoff's word for it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently engaged male, 24, making plans for my wedding. In considering the selection of my best man, I realized that my dearest and oldest friend is a female!

In this case, is selecting a woman for my best man appropriate and/or allowed?
BAFFLED IN BRADFORD

DEAR BAFFLED: Traditionally the groom asks his best friend to be his best man, but in friendship, gender is of no consequence, so it's certainly appropriate to ask a woman. As for it being "allowed," as long as it doesn't affect the legality of your wedding, who's to stop you?

Museum features dolls

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer
CRANFORD, N.J. (AP) — Imagine stepping through the looking glass, into a world full of glassy-eyed storybook characters and dolls following your every move.

Welcome to the Good Fairy Doll Hospital and Doll Museum. James and Liz Connors have all your childhood favorites there. Kewpie predominates in the collection. Teddy bear is there, and Barbie and Ken occupy a small corner of the Connors' dining room.

In fact, thousands of dolls, statues, and storybook characters adorn every nook and cranny of the couple's home in this residential North Jersey community.

A story accompanies each of the dolls: "I picked this one up at a flea market," Mrs. Connors begins. "This one we got at an auction; this one's Joseph Smith. He's the founder of the Mormon religion."

Many dolls are used for shows in which the Connors perform for visiting school children, or for a local scouting troop.

"We feel children just don't have enough pleasure today," she says.

There are Oriental dolls; dolls that talk; teddy bears that shine shoes, mix porridge and bang drums; tiny houses that contain storybook replicas of fairy tales; dolls that walk and figures that just stand in the display cases.

"If anything resembled a doll, we bought it," Mrs. Connors said. "We have a collection of battery-operated toys that play music. We go to nursing homes and have sing-alongs."

The collection began as a spur-of-the-moment buy when Mrs. Connors worked for a company that set up department store displays in the 1960s.

"I bought a collection of vogue dolls through the demonstration agency," the 66-year-old woman said.

Some of the dolls date back 100 years, while others reflect newer technology, such as television.

Mr. Kotter and the Sweat-hogs, featuring John Travolta and Topo Gigio, the Italian mouse made famous on the old Ed Sullivan show, all are part of their collection.

"And here's the doll doctor," Mrs. Connors said as her 71-year-old husband descended the staircase from the second floor. "I've worked on practically all of these," Connors said proudly.

"Doctor" Jim brought out a papier-mache replica of a broken doll's leg that he had just finished.

"I'm getting set to put this one back together again," he said. "I always try to make it as near the original as I can."

The doctor business keeps the museum alive, the Connors said.

"We don't make a penny off of the museum," she said.

"Right now, what's keeping us going is that what we get from the repairs I make, we put right back into the dolls," said Connors.

Jaycees celebrate 4th of July

The Pampa Jaycees will sponsor a fireworks display July 4 at the recreation park east of town. The show, which will begin at approximately 9:30 p.m., will feature two ground displays and several aerial displays. Admission is free and cold drinks will be sold by the Jaycee-ettes.

On behalf of the Pampa Fire Department, the Jaycees request that everyone refrain from shooting their fireworks around the recreation park.

The Jaycees sold trash can liners to fund the display. The support of the businesses and individuals who bought the liners is greatly appreciated.

The Jaycees will also sponsor a carnival July 1-6 at the Pampa Mall. There will be several rides for all ages. Concession booths will provide a variety of food and drink. The proceeds from the carnival will help defray club expenses for the upcoming year.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

If you are a handicapped mate, or if you have one, I hope you are comfortable and compatible with each other in your way of life. You can be, you know.

A favorite cousin of mine was John Shelley. During the last years of his life he was on crutches, following a near-fatal car wreck. But he was always the most fun of anybody in any crowd. His manner was happy, his disposition sunny, his smile ready and warm. He and his wife had a good life.

I have reason to remember John after two experiences, some days ago. A man on crutches was going into the post office ahead of me. He yanked open the door and then shoved it back in my face, knocking my glasses slaunchwise. He did not look back when I gasped, though he must have heard me. Inside the building, I noted that he looked soured on life. I thought, Poor man, he can't manage manners and crutches too. I don't hold it against him.

But the next day I was totting three bulky packages toward my car a block away when a man in a wheel chair invited, "Put them here in my lap. I carry big loads this way!"

We wheeled and walked together. He didn't ask for help and I didn't insult him by offering it. I knew he was a self-sufficient person.

I don't know whether either man has a wife. But if the first one does, she must be as unhappy as he is — or else she must be living in a constant state of nerves, trying to keep him content with his lot and be content herself.

As for a possible mate for the second man, surely she is blessed. He was as handicapped as the man in the post office, yet he showed no bitterness toward anybody. And he was willing, even eager to offer assistance to an able-bodied woman.

The attitude of the handicapped mate is obvious. But what should be the attitude of the other one?

Authorities tell us that the majority of handicapped people want to do everything they can for themselves. Therefore I think that the spouses should not interfere with that wish. My cousin

John's wife did not hover over him nor run ahead of him to open doors nor offer to run his errands. He did all those things himself and enjoyed the tasks. If she had babied him, had told him constantly that she wanted to be his hands and his legs and his mind, he could have become weak and dependent, finally giving up to total incompetence. As it was, he enjoyed life to the fullest.

I recommend his attitude, and that of his wife, to all of you spouses.

Energy saved

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 1 1/2 million kilowatt hours of electricity are expected to be saved each year by a centralized, computerized energy-management system in five Chicago-area retail chain stores, says an energy-industry journal.

According to Energy User News, the automation system, which controls heating, ventilation and air conditioning equipment, will eventually control energy in all 33 stores of the Lord & Taylor chain.

In addition to the Chicago-area stores, the chain is initially placing its Westchester, N.Y., store under the computer's control, then will add one store each month to the system.

Baumgarten throws one-hitter at Angels

It is absolutely not true that Ross Baumgarten has to pitch a no-hitter to win a ballgame.

He has to pitch a one-hitter. And that's what Chicago's hard-luck left-hander did Wednesday night, limiting California to Rod Carew's leadoff single in the seventh inning plus one walk as the White Sox nipped the Angels 1-0.

Still, Baumgarten almost earned no better than a standoff, but the White Sox squeezed out an unearned run off Frank Tanana in the seventh inning. Only once since Baumgarten's only previous victory way back on April 13 have they scored more than one run in his behalf.

"I figured we'd score sometime, somehow," said Baumgarten, who has been supported with just nine runs in his last 762-3 innings.

The White Sox remained eight games behind first-place Kansas City in the American League West when the Royals edged the Minnesota Twins 4-3 in 10 innings. In the AL East, the New York Yankees increased their lead over runnerup Milwaukee to 6½ games by blanking the Boston Red Sox 6-0 while the Brewers bowed to the Oakland A's 5-3 in 10 innings.

Elsewhere, the Baltimore Orioles trimmed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2, the Detroit Tigers edged the Cleveland Indians 7-6 and the Texas Rangers downed the Seattle Mariners 6-3.

Baumgarten retired the first 17 California batters and allowed only one walk before Carew spoiled his no-hit bid with a bouncing single up the middle. He then set down the last nine batters. Tanana allowed only four hits and Chicago scored without a hit in the seventh. Chet Lemon was hit by a pitch, was sacrificed to second and took third when shortstop Bert Campaneris booted Junior Moore's grounder. Greg Pryor then grounded to second, driving in Lemon.

Royals 4, Twins 3

John Wathan's one-out single in the 10th inning scored pinch-runner Rusty Torres from third base. Kansas City, snapping a three-game losing streak which equaled its longest skid of the season, opened the 10th with singles by Dave Chalk and Willie Wilson. Torres ran for Chalk and U.L. Washington sacrificed before reliever Mike Bacsik took over for starter Jerry Kosman. Wathan, who drove in two earlier runs with a triple, then delivered a line single up the middle for his fourth hit.

Yankees 6, Red Sox 0

Veteran left-hander Rudy May, making his first start in Boston since 1973, pitched five hitless innings before settling for a six-hitter as the Yankees completed a sweep of a three-game series. May, given his second consecutive start after 19 relief appearances, faced the minimum 15 batters before Jim Dwyer beat out a slow grounder over second for Boston's first hit to start the sixth.

The Yankees jumped on Steve Renko for a run in the first inning on doubles by Willie Randolph and Reggie Jackson. Graig Nettles homered in the fourth and New York added three runs, all unearned, in the seventh as a result of errors by third baseman Butch Hobson and catcher Gary Allenson on the same play.

A's 5, Brewers 3

Pinch-hitter Jeff Newman and Wayne Gross rapped RBI singles in the 10th inning as Oakland ended a four-game skid as well as the Brewers' four-game winning streak. Dwayne Murphy, who homered for Oakland's first two runs, and Mike Davis reached on bunt singles with one out in the 10th before Newman and Gross singled, giving Mike Norris, who hurled a five-hitter, his 10th victory.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 2

Lee May drove in four runs and Mike Flanagan scattered eight hits as Baltimore downed Toronto for its 22nd triumph in the last 24 meetings with the Blue Jays. May singled his first three times at bat, twice with the bases loaded.

Tigers 7, Indians 6

Alan Trammell and Lance Parrish homered, Tom Brookens drove in three runs and John Morris posted his fifth consecutive triumph with relief help from Dan Schatzeder. Cleveland went ahead 3-2 in the fifth on singles by Jorge Orta, Mike Hargrove and Joe Charboneau. But the Tigers regained the lead in their half when Brookens hit a two-out, bases-loaded blooper that fell in short right field for a two-run double. Trammell homered in the sixth, then Al Cowens singled ahead of Parrish's homer. It was the 16th victory in 20 games for the Tigers.

Rangers 6, Mariners 3

Gaylord Perry scattered seven hits to pick up his 26th career victory, striking out a season-high 10 batters. Texas scored three runs in the third, two of them on Richie Zisk's single after Seattle right fielder Joe Simpson dropped a two-out fly ball. The Rangers had scored earlier in the inning on Al Oliver's RBI single. Mickey Rivers opened the game for Texas with a triple and scored on Buddy Bell's single. Rivers later drove in two runs with a grounder and a single.

Piersall involved in scuffles

CHICAGO (AP) — Broadcaster and former Boston Red Sox star Jimmy Piersall missed Wednesday night's California Angels-Chicago White Sox telecast after he reportedly became involved in a pair of pregame scuffles.

Bob Gallis, a baseball writer for the Arlington Heights Daily Herald, said he and Piersall scuffled in the White Sox clubhouse during batting practice before the game.

Gallis said Piersall, now a Chicago baseball commentator, apparently was upset about a story he was preparing on the Sox announcer and entered the clubhouse shouting at him.

"I'm shocked and surprised. We've always had a good relationship. He got upset and I'm not sure why," said Gallis. "I was working on a story which hasn't appeared yet."

Gallis said the story is to focus on a vote by the White Sox players last week to not retain Piersall as an unpaid coach for outfielders. Manager Tony LaRussa had asked that the vote be taken.

Gallis said he had interviewed some of the players for the story on Tuesday and that Piersall apparently was upset that he had not talked to him.

Piersall reportedly also became involved in another scuffle later in the evening outside the press box with Mike Veeck, son of Sox President Bill Veeck. No details were available on that incident.

WBBM-TV, the local CBS affiliate, said Piersall was taken to a hospital for what was reported to be fatigue.

Palmer cancels track trip because of hot weather

The torrid heat wave forced Wendell Palmer of Pampa to drop out of the Masters track and field meet last weekend at Salina, Kansas.

"I don't think I'm ripe for a heart attack yet," said the 48-year-old Palmer.

The Masters is open to athletes of all ages. Palmer was entered in the 45-49 year-old division for the decathlon.

Palmer, who coaches football, basketball, and track at Pampa Middle School, won six gold medals and one bronze medal last month at the Hill Country Classic in Mason.

Palmer is hoping to enter decathlon events at Waco July 19 and Eureka, Kansas July 26.

"These two meets are so far away, but I'm revising my schedule right now and I'm hoping to go," Palmer said.

He wants to break the decathlon record of 4,400 points in his age division.

Palmer stays in shape by working out almost daily at Randy Matson Field. He started participating in Masters events while a graduate student at East Texas State six years ago.

Pampa ousted by High Plains in district tournament

High Plains eliminated Pampa, 15-12, Wednesday night in the District 13-year-old baseball tournament at Optimist Park. Randall County defeated Deaf Smith County, 16-10, last night and will meet High Plains in the semi-finals at 7:30 p.m. tonight. The finals are scheduled Saturday night. Starting Monday, the 13-15 year old District Tournament begins at Optimist Park. Pampa meets Deaf Smith County in the opening round at 7:30 p.m. in the only game scheduled Monday night. Tuesday's schedule has Eastern Panhandle pitted against Randall County at 6:30 p.m. while the Pampa-Deaf Smith winner meets High Plains at 9 p.m.

Skellytown defeats Clarendon in little league action

Skellytown little leaguers defeated the Clarendon Cubs, 16-11, last week at Lions Club ballpark. Ty Cross, Ronnie Jones, and Rabbit Rogers each had a homerun for Skellytown and all three had two rbis apiece. Jones scored two runs while Cross and Rogers tallied one run each. Others with runs and rbis were Max Hinds, two runs; Bryan Thurmons and Turtle Furgason, one run each; Glen Wise, two runs and two rbis; Lance Cross, two runs and four rbis; Brent Bridwell, three runs and one rbi; Jone Don Brown, two rbis.

Ronnie Jones and Rabbit Rogers pitched three innings apiece for Skellytown. The Lions finish their season against Groom at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Lions Park.

Braves blank Astros, 14-0

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves have been walking a delicate tightrope in the heady atmosphere of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. They have scored 27 runs in their last two games against division-leading Houston — including a 14-0 shutout Wednesday night — all of them with two outs in the inning. The victory moved the Braves past San Francisco into fourth place in the National League West as the Giants lost 6-2 to Cincinnati. "It seems we get guys on first and second and then get a hit," said Bob Horner, whose two hits, including a home run, and four RBI helped pace the Atlanta attack. "They've been hitting the ball well. We just haven't gotten them out," said Astros Manager

Bill Virdon. "I've never seen it since I've been in baseball. It's about as rough as you can have it, but it will stop sometime and I hope it's tomorrow." J.R. Richard will try to salvage one game of the four-game series tonight against the Braves' Tommy Boggs or Larry McWilliams. "We've beaten him before," said Braves Manager Bobby Cox. "We were due to get to (Vern) Rhule. He stood us on our heads all last year. They had to go to their bullpen a lot in their last series before they came here and they needed some route-going performances by their starters." "We're on a hitting binge," he said. "We just caught them when their pitching wasn't sharp."

Williams signs

MONTREAL (AP) — Manager Dick Williams of the Montreal Expos signed a new contract with the National League team Wednesday for the balance of the 1980 season and the 1981 campaign. In making the announcement, Expos' President and General Manager John McHale said Williams would receive a substantial salary increase as well as incentive bonuses. The Expos lead the Eastern Division by two games after finishing second in 1979 with a 95-65 record.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 4, 1980

This coming year you may be put to a test in several different areas, yet strangely enough, these are the things that will later prove to have been most fulfilling for you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You act as a marvelous bridge between the generations today. You're quick to appreciate the needs of both the old and the young. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You know how to stretch the budget so that everyone in the family can meet his or her needs. Take care of this important chore.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Activities may not go according to schedule today, but because of your ability to make quick revisions, everything will turn out even better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A situation that might not have appeared to be to your advantage could turn out surprisingly profitable. Be on your toes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be the unexpected person who helps out in a group situation that has everybody bogged down. Even you'll be surprised at the way you handle things.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Challenging situations inspire you today. Not only can you cope with the test, you'll enjoy it as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Because you easily and quickly solve each problem as it occurs today, you win the admiration and respect of others. No hurdle will be too high.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your helping others today could bring about an unusual but favorable condition that will include an unexpected benefit for everyone involved.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although you may least expect it to happen today, you could get a flash of inspiration as to how you can handle something that's been disturbing you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might accidentally stumble on a solution to something that has long had you stymied. Move on it immediately.

TAURUS (April 20-May 10) New twists to established ways of doing things prove to be most enjoyable today. If you get any ideas, bring them to everyone's attention.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If entertaining today, use your ingenuity. Clever procedures could save you many steps, and allow you to have a good time as well.

Raising retirement age creates new problems

NEW YORK (AP) — Under pressure from some who claimed discrimination and from others who said industry was being deprived of experienced workers, the federal mandatory retirement age was raised to 70.

But the resolution of those problems may have created others, says Felix Lopez, a human resources and behavioral sciences consultant to industry. And, in light of lagging productivity, they could be serious.

Lopez, who holds a doctorate in psychology and is the author of five volumes of research and observations, doesn't attempt to belittle the benefits of moving the mandatory retirement age to 70 from 65.

He does, however, ask that Americans consider also the less beneficial consequences, based on his personal observations and studies, which he compiled in response to a request. It poses a typical, modern dilemma.

"His analysis begins with the observation that 'The ablest and most productive people at all levels in an organization tend to retire earliest and, in fact, generally retire at the first opportunity.'"

"Retire" is perhaps not the correct word because, as Lopez explains, "The principal reason for leaving is to launch a second career to enable them to achieve the autonomy and the maximum self-expression that most people desire."

In addition to this, he says, the most productive and able people are also the healthiest, the most vigorous mentally and physically, and have the longest life expectancies. On the other hand:

"The least able and productive workers, at all levels up through the executive suite, tend to stay on in an organization to the last possible date for retirement."

"They are the ones who have pushed for and most likely will take advantage of the extension of the mandatory age to 70. Accordingly too, they have by far the most physical, mental and emotional problems."

Lopez maintains that objective evaluation of performance has been badly neglected by most companies.

"When the signs of obsolescence and incapacity become overt, companies have contented themselves with carrying that person until they could be humanely removed by early retirement," he said.

"Now, however, any attempt to eliminate these employees will be perceived as discriminatory in terms of age or handicap if the company hasn't accumulated proper documentation over a period of time."

Considered as a humane effort, the delayed retirement age clearly makes sense. But in terms of productivity, the benefits of a worker's experience appear to be offset by other costs to the company.

TEXAS BRIEFS

LONGHORN BAND DIRECTOR NAMED

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Glenn A. Richter, conductor of the University of Michigan Marching Band, was named director of the University of Texas Longhorn Band on Tuesday.

Richter, 30, holds bachelor's and master's degrees in music from UT-Austin. He was assistant conductor of the Longhorn Band from 1975 to 1977. As a student, he was president of the band.

He directed the Reagan High School Band in Austin from 1971 to 1974 and the LBJ High School Band here in 1974-75. He directed bands at the University of Cincinnati for two years and moved to the University of Michigan in 1979.

Richter succeeds Tom Lee, who has been acting director of the UT band since Feb. 1.

TEXAN APPOINTED

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dr. Peter Flawn, president of the University of Texas at Austin, has been appointed by President Carter to the 24-member National Science Board, the university announced Tuesday.

The nomination is subject to confirmation by the U.S. Senate. Flawn is past president of the Geological Society of America and the Association of American State Geologists.

NURSING HOME FINED

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White said Tuesday a Dallas judge has imposed a $10,000 penalty on the owners of the Theall Nursing Home in Dallas and ordered improvements in patient care.

White said State District Judge Fred Harless ordered Stevedeed Inc., which owns the home, to pay $5,000 to the state and invest $5,000 in capital improvements at the home.

Harless ordered the home not to rehire anyone who quit or was fired after White filed the state's suit against it.

HOT HEALTH TIPS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein says Texans can avoid heat-related illness by following a few simple rules.

"For those contemplating athletics, don't do anything athletically foolish. You have to be acclimated to the heat, and the current hot weather is no time to overextend yourself," Bernstein said.

Bernstein advised staying in the shade, wearing big hats and sun screens when in the sun, drinking plenty of water, adequate salt intake and less vigorous activity.

Hot weather is especially a threat to people taking drugs, athletes, outdoor workers, babies, elderly people and people with problems such as heart disease, diabetes, alcoholism and obesity.

WIDOW PAID

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Bell Helicopter and the City of Harlingen agreed Tuesday to pay $540,000 to the widow of a helicopter pilot who was killed at the Harlingen Airport in 1974.

Humberto Avila died when the city-operated copter slammed into the ground. Mrs. Avila sued on behalf of her children. A settlement was reached Tuesday after a week of testimony in state district court.

GOODE SWORN IN

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mark Goode was sworn in Tuesday as engineer-director of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Goode, assistant engineer-director in Austin since 1973, succeeds Luther DeBerry as chief administrator of the department. DeBerry retired Monday.

REPUBLICANS APPOINTED

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Six of Texas' 80-member delegation to the National Republican Convention have been named to convention committees for the July 14-17 session in Detroit.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and Mrs. Fran Chiles, Fort Worth, were appointed to the national platform committee. Tower is chairman of the committee that recently concluded platform hearings in several major cities. Mrs. Chiles was named a member of the national committee at the recent state convention in Houston.

June records fall in wake of gripping heat blanket

By The Associated Press

Texas accustomed to fiery summer days got an early sample of the searing heat in June as temperatures continually soared past the century mark topping records across the breadth of the sun-baked state.

The mercury in El Paso rocketed to 100 degrees or more for 25 days in June — 21 of those scorching days in a row.

Wichita Falls and the Fort Worth-Dallas area had 13 days of 100-degree weather.

San Antonio recorded only six days of 100 degree plus temperatures during the last decade — four times in 1971 and twice in 1978 — but in June the readings in the Alamo city reached 100 or more on nine days.

Fort Worth and Dallas had to go back to 1911 to find a June with 13 or more days of 100-plus readings, the National Weather Service reported.

The Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport had 10 record high temperatures established, including the last eight days. The 113-degree readings on the 26th and 27th were the hottest ever recorded in the area. The low temperature for the month was 65 degrees on June 10.

Wichita Falls set heat records the last seven days of June, with the highest temperature of the month a 117 on the 28th.

That 117-degree reading, coupled with a 116 the day before, were the highest ever recorded at Wichita Falls.

In San Antonio, the last eight days set a record with 100 degrees or better. The nine June days at 100 degrees or more tied the record established in 1948. Twenty-eight of the 30 days registered maximums of 90 degrees or more.

The 100 degrees reached June 20th in the Alamo City was the first official 100-degree or better maximum temperature in the month since June 13, 1971.

June was Abilene's fifth hottest on record. The high of 109 on the 28th was a daily record, surpassing 105 set in 1928.

Not only was it hot, but also dry.

Weather archives in San Antonio will not show June 1980 as one of the driest on record, but in reality, it was, said the NWS. In fact, if it had not been for an early morning thunderstorm on Saturday, the 21st, when the monthly total of 0.52 inches fell, the month would have entered the books as the driest on record. The record years of 1914 and 1967 showed only 0.01 inches.

Wichita Falls had its driest June since 1933 when only 0.05 inches of rain was recorded.

Television meets the press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the Pacific Palisades room of the Century Plaza Hotel, amid tables bearing pink tablecloths, red napkins and soiled breakfast plates, public television met the press. It was not a cosmic collision.

The occasion was PBS' press tour, the tailpart of an annual rite that brings together television's critics and makers. The commercial networks go first, parading their executives and stars before the visiting press and, when the big boys pull out, PBS slips in to confront those reporters who remain.

The portion of the tour belonging to ABC, CBS and NBC is usually smooth, if not momentous. Both sides — press and networks — know the number, and they dance.

There is a common ground of understanding; the networks know the critics are going to rag them about pandering to ratings and the lowest common denominator, the reporters know in their hearts that commercial television is a business, not art.

It's an honest game, really, and sometimes the sparring can lead to a dialogue that serves the public interest.

But PBS is a different creature altogether. What's a TV writer to do with this... this thing, half bureaucracy, half TV network? PBS lives outside of that known sphere where understanding relates to where a network stands in the ratings and what it did to get there.

PBS' boss, Larry Grossman, and a couple of other PBS folks took their places across the pink tables, and entertained questions.

Ratings, a subject solid and familiar, came up again and again. How well did "Death of a Princess" and "Choosing Suicide" — two controversial PBS documentaries — do in the ratings? How wide is the gap between the lowest-rated commercial network show and the highest-rated PBS show? Is it appropriate for PBS to televise tennis and soccer?

Grossman & Co. pretty much dodged the ratings talk, as ratings don't matter to PBS. Grossman is more interested in talking about program funding. All PBS people are always more interested in talking about funding.

PBS is weird that way. Really. For commercial networks, the grand design is there in block figures, the end is spoken loud and clear — make programs, gather the broadest possible audience, deliver bodies to advertisers.

But PBS is there for ethereal purposes, to enlighten and inform different and diverse audiences. PBS is in the business of "narrowcasting," to use the vague word, and in that sense, its goal is met the instant the product is delivered.

Which made me wonder why PBS bothers with promotion and advertising, indeed, with this very press tour. Possibly because PBS sometimes confuses its goal with that of the commercial networks, feeling that it must "perform" to satisfy the benefactors that keep it alive.

The sex goddess who abdicated

Carroll Baker is queen of mysteries

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — She isn't Baby Doll any more, but she's still a doll.

Carroll Baker went away in 1968, leaving a career that had started brilliantly but fell apart, mostly because, she thinks now, she wasn't cut out to be the sex goddess they tried to make her.

For the past dozen years, she has been living in Rome and London and has become known, in Italy, as "The Queen Of The Mysteries." She has been in jeopardy in more than 50 films. It's a career that may not lead to an Oscar, but it's solid, respectable and satisfying to her. Or so she says.

She is here now because she did a Disney film, "The Watcher In The Woods," which opened to bad reviews. The Disney people, in a unique and commendable move, pulled it back and are going to reshoot much of it, particularly the ending, which everybody admits was a disaster.

"My daughter, Blanche, saw it with a regular audience," Carroll says, "and she agreed with everybody that it was a fine picture — up to a point. But the ending really was poor." Carroll may have to shoot some added scenes for the new ending.

She was here with her "fiancee," an English actor named Donald Burton. She says they aren't sure whether they will get married or not, but their reluctance has nothing to do with the usual reasons people today shy away from rings, rice and such.

"With us," says Carroll, "it's a legal reason. If we got married, henceforth if I spent one day a year in England, I would have to pay much more in taxes. So it may be smarter — and cheaper — for us to stay unmarried."

Carroll Baker, a self-imposed exile in Europe, believes she had too much too fast. "I was suddenly thrust into stardom, and I was never really happy," she says.

Carroll Baker's career started like a house-a-fire. When she made "Baby Doll," in 1956, the combination of the raunchy material and her childlike seductiveness immediately made her a star. That was quickly followed with other films of the same sort, as Hollywood thought they had a new Harlow or Monroe.

"But I wasn't cut out, by temperament, to be a star," she says. "Looking back, it happened so fast, too fast. If, instead, I had had to climb the ladder, rung by rung, it might have been all right. But I was suddenly thrust into stardom and I was never really happy."

They put her in see-through dresses, and she looked like she was going to cry. They had her doing semi-nude scenes, and her shame and embarrassment were plain to see. They tried to make a sex bomb out of a nice kid from Johnstown, Pa.

"In 1968," she says, "everything went to pieces. My marriage was breaking up. I had two children and was worried about them growing up here in this drug culture. I just had to get away, so we moved to Rome. Things were easier for me there, and there were no drugs in the schools."

She has averaged five movies a year in the 12 years she has been away. Most of them were in Rome, but some were made in England, Germany and Austria.

she was doing to cry. They had her doing semi-nude scenes, and her shame and embarrassment were plain to see. They tried to make a sex bomb out of a nice kid from Johnstown, Pa.

They put her in see-through dresses, and she looked like she was going to cry. They had her doing semi-nude scenes, and her shame and embarrassment were plain to see. They tried to make a sex bomb out of a nice kid from Johnstown, Pa.

"I can't remember some of them," she says. "I can't remember if a particular one was made in Italy or Germany. They write films for me in Italy — they love blondes there."

"They generally write a story about me, a rich lady from America or England, with a fancy villa, and then awful things happen to me. Maybe a motorcycle gang takes the villa over, or something equally frightening. That's the usual story."

Her daughter, who uses the name Blanche Baker professionally, is 23 and an actress. In "Holocaust," she played the younger daughter. She has also appeared in "The Seduction of Joe Tynan" and "French Postcards." Carroll's son, Herschel, who is 20, is interested in classical music — guitar and piano — and is applying to attend Juilliard.

As for the lady herself, she is 49 and looks marvelous, maybe better than ever. She is not as gaunt as she was in the days when she was masquerading as something she wasn't.

"In my days here," she says, "I weighed around 112 and I used to drink milkshakes to put on weight because everybody said I was so skinny. Now I only wish I'm off desserts for life." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Heat reducing crops to stalks and dust

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fierce waves of heat were blasting through the nation's midsection from Texas to Montana, reducing thousands of acres to withered stalks and dust.

In other parts of the world, crops suffer from too much rain and cold weather.

You can't convince a farmer who sees nothing but dust in his fields that it's a typical situation. But, in a way, it is.

Rarely, if ever, does a year go by without drought, cold, too much rain or some other calamity threatening crops somewhere. Sometimes the conditions are so poor over such huge areas that U.S. production — and the world's harvest — can falter badly.

It's still too early for accurate predictions, but the way the government's latest report sounded Tuesday, the outlook may not be as bright as some experts have been saying.

Farm crops in many areas of the world are "suffering from either excessive wet weather or drought," the report said.

Besides heat-baked areas of the Southwest and Great Plains, the "areas of concern" include the Soviet Union, China and Canada, the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said in its weekly report.

The facility is operated by the Agriculture Department and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, an agency of the Commerce Department.

No forecast of world grain production was included, however. Last month, the Agriculture Department said 1980-81 world grain output is expected to increase and "may reach or exceed" the record harvests of two years ago.

A revised world grain production forecast is scheduled to be released by USDA on July 1, including its first estimate of the 1980 U.S. corn and total wheat harvests.

The joint weather bulletin issued Tuesday included these observations: Soviet Union

"Some harvesting of winter grains began as fair weather continued over southeastern European USSR this week. In the Ukraine, however, wet weather may have damaged maturing winter grains."

"Crop development in the western half of European USSR was further delayed by below-normal temperatures, but in the southeastern fringe of the grain area, hot dry air from the desert — known as a 'sukhovei' — may have hurt some spring grain production."

China

"Excessive rains continued this week. Wet weather caused problems in northern parts of the wheat belt where the harvest is still in progress. As the harvest of the first rice crop nears, most rice-producing areas in southern coastal provinces received near-normal rainfall."

Canada

"Despite some wet weather, effects of the recent drought in southern portions of the wheat belt in the Prairie provinces were severely felt last week. Crops in Saskatchewan were reported in fair to poor condition, and in Manitoba, crop conditions have deteriorated so badly fields have been plowed under or used for cattle grazing. In Alberta, the crop season continues on schedule, further benefited by the recent showers."

South America

"A light frost was reported last week in the coffee-growing area of northern Parana state in Brazil. The cold spell did not damage coffee trees."

Clayton trial may be delayed

HOUSTON (AP) — Although Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton is ready for his July 21 trial on charges stemming from the FBI's "Bribe" probe, one of his attorneys says the trial may be delayed.

"I'm ready any time and my lawyers are," Clayton said in Austin Tuesday after U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor scheduled the trial on charges of racketeering, extortion, conspiracy and fraud that came from the undercover investigation.

"As far as I'm concerned, the faster the better," Clayton added. "But I sure don't want to go down there before we're ready."

Clayton, Houston labor leader L.G. Moore and Austin attorneys

Randall Wood and Donald W. Ray all pleaded innocent June 21 to the charges.

In addition to setting the trial date, O'Connor also scheduled a July 11 pre-trial hearing on the charges.

Charles Burton, a Clayton attorney, said preparation for the defense could delay the start of the trial because time will be needed to listen to at least 63 tapes made of meetings and phone conversations.

The four were indicted by a federal grand jury after Clayton allegedly took $5,000 from Moore and FBI informant Joseph Hauer when the two men visited Clayton's office last November.

Names in the News

PRINCE CHARLES CUMBERNAULD, Scotland (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles is a pilot, polo player, skier and sailor, and now he's added another skill — hydraulic crane-lift driver.

The latest exploit of the heir to the British throne came Tuesday at the American-owned Capital Development Corp. factory in Cumbernauld, where the prince took the controls of the huge crane-like construction vehicle, sending its 60-foot extending arm through maneuvers.

A company spokesman said later: "He is a born lift driver. With all his experience with helicopters, what else can you expect?"

LILLIAN CARTER CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — President Carter's mother says she knows what she's supposed to do and what she isn't.

"My job is to charm," said 81-year-old Lillian Carter. "I stay out of politics."

Mrs. Carter is in the Virgin Islands this week for two hospital ground-breaking ceremonies. The first was here on St. Croix Tuesday and the other will be today on St. Thomas. Currently the Virgin Islands is without an accredited hospital. The two government-run facilities lost their accreditation last year. The new ones will be built at a total cost of $82 million, with 90 per cent of the funding provided by the federal government.

DUKE OF WINDSOR LONDON (AP) — The Duke of Windsor, who abdicated the British throne in the name of love more than 40 years ago, spoke on his deathbed of "the waste, the waste" and said he had longed for a job serving his country, his former nurse says.

In an intimate account of the duke's last hours before his death in Paris on May 28, 1972, nurse Oonagh Shanley was quoted in Woman Magazine Tuesday as saying the duke became semi-delirious, his eyes brimming with tears.

"In all the conversations he had with me in the previous deteriorating days, he'd said several times how much he'd longed to be given a worthwhile job for his own country."

DAVID NIVEN NEW YORK (AP) — Oscar-winning actor David Niven is getting some publicity over not getting enough publicity for his latest movie.

The 70-year-old Niven has filed a breach-of-contract suit against producer David Merrick and Paramount Pictures, Inc., claiming he was short-changed on salary and publicity in the movie "Rough Cut."

Niven, in asking for $1,791,667, charges that as distributor of "Rough Cut" Paramount failed to live up to an agreement to give Niven as much space as Burt Reynolds in the movie's advertisements.

ERIK ESTRADA LOS ANGELES (AP) — After seven months of marriage, television star Erik Estrada and his wife, Joyce, are in the process of getting a divorce.

"We were convinced that our marriage would survive, but it just didn't work out," said Estrada, who plays a California highway patrolman on TV's "CHIPS."

He cited tensions stemming from life in the public eye as contributing to the breakup.
