Junior cowpokes take to arena

A week of rodeo activities begins in Pampa tonight with the first night performances of the annual Kid Pony Show scheduled for 7 p.m. at the rodeo arena. Thirty youngsters have pre-entered the miniature rodeo at noon today.

Cowboys and cowgirls ranging in age from below 5-years-old to 7-years-old are scheduled to perform in five events, the "Gold Rush", calf roping, flag race, potato race and barrel race.

The children will be divided into two groups. Group I will be age five and under. The second group is comprised of 6- to 7-year-olds.

The "Gold Rush" is the first event for the evening. Three calves will be turned loose in the arena during this event. The contestants will attempt to pull the tag or ribbon from the tail of the calves. Winners will be awarded $5.

The next contest is the calf roping. In this event, calves will be chute run and the rider will attempt to throw the calf and tie three of his hooves in a two-minute time limit. The contestant able to complete the feat in the fastest time will win.

The flag race is a timed event where the contestants on their ponies will be lined up at the end of the arena and each given a blue flag. They will then race to the barrels at the other end of the arena and exchange their flag for a red one, racing back to the starting line.

A favorite event is the hand potato race. In this event, the rider races to the potato barrel and picks up a potato while turning. Then the potato is returned and deposited to the barrel nearest the finish line.

The final event for the first night performances will be the barrel race. The riders will run the full clover leaf pattern around three barrels in an effort to complete the maneuver in the shortest time without knocking over a barrel.

The Kid Pony Show will continue through July 9 Tuesday night the 8- to 11-year-olds will perform. The 12- to 15-year-olds will compete during Wednesday's performance.

Thursday is scheduled for the opening of the Top O' Texas Professional Rodeo.

Clem McSpadden will once again be the announcer for the Top O' Texas Rodeo. This colorful personality with the pleasing voice and constant patter served as Top O' Texas Rodeo Announcer several years ago and was so well liked that the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association is bringing him back once again.

McSpadden was born at Bushyhead, Rogers County, Oklahoma, and grew up on the Will Rogers Ranch at Oologah where his father, Herb, was ranch manager for his famous uncle. After graduation from Oologah High School, Clem attended University of Redlands and received a degree from University of Texas. Following his discharge from Navy V-12, he attended OSU in Stillwater, and received additional degrees. He was elected to the OSU Senate and served in that capacity from 1955-1972, two terms as President Pro Tempore, at which time he was elected to the U.S.

House of Representatives from Oklahoma's Second District.

Clem has served as General Manager of the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City for 12 years, and is the producer of the "World's Richest Roping" held in October annually at his arena near Bushyhead, Oklahoma.

Having been seen and heard on ABC's "Wide World of Sports" many times, Clem has announced many spectacular rodeos.

He lives in Chelsea, Oklahoma with his wife, Donna, and son Bart. They are involved in ranching, real estate and development and banking and are active in church, school and civic work. Clem and Bart are both members of the Cowboy Chapter Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Each night's activities will begin with a 30-minute concert by the "Country Critters" the official Air Force western band based at Lackland in San Antonio.

The professional rodeo events will begin each day at 7:30 p.m. and will continue through July 12.

Quail Dobbs, Ted Kinsey and Rex Dunn will be the clowns and bull fighters for the performances.

Rodeo dances featuring Hank Thompson and his band are scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights at 9 p.m. at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

The Top O' Texas Rodeo is one of the two professional rodeos held in the Panhandle of Texas.

Aliens tell of their efforts to survive heat

AJO, Ariz. (AP) — Robbed and abandoned by smugglers who ferried them over the border, a group of Salvadorans, including three children, drank aftershave lotion and fought over drops of urine in a desperate attempt to stay alive in searing desert heat, a survivor says.

"We put it (urine) in rags and we wiped our faces with it," said 20-year-old Yolanda Estela Hernandez. "It was so hot and we were so thirsty."

She was one of 13 survivors, from a group of 40 to 50, rescued from the sun-baked desert, where the air temperature reached 110 degrees and the soil reached 150. Thirteen Salvadorans were found dead from dehydration and three children were among the missing.

The middle class Salvadorans, who officials say may have fled their country to escape civil strife, paid up to $1,200 each to be smuggled into the United States and were abandoned in Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument park at least four days ago.

Officials say there's no hope of finding more survivors, but a "low profile search" for more bodies was being conducted today in the 516-square-mile park.

A search by horseback and helicopter began Friday after a motorist reported seeing a man lying by the roadside. Two bodies and 10 survivors were found Saturday, and 11 more dead and three survivors were found Sunday.

"After being tormented by the extreme desert heat," they had stripped off much of their clothing and were found covered with cactus thorns, said Dr. Joseph Rustick, who treated the survivors.

"There were thorns in their feet, thorns in their back, legs, thighs, buttocks and face — everywhere that you can imagine."

He said they drank aftershave, deodorant and their own urine. "Some of them managed to drink the moisture from cactus, and they were the smart ones."

Near a cluster of bodies found Sunday were mirrors and traces of a fire the Salvadorans had set to alert aircraft to their plight.

"It's a dirty, dirty business," said Border Patrol Agent Earl Scott, who helped search for the aliens in the well-traveled smugglers' territory.

The group included some husbands and wives, some strangers, a 6-year-old, a 2½-year-old and a young mother who said the smugglers took her 13-month-old child, according to The Arizona Republic.

Mrs. Hernandez said the group fought over drops of urine, deodorant and cologne, and some aliens threatened to kill others if they did not share their urine.

She also said, "I had my baby when we started and the 'coyotes' (alien smugglers) took him away. I don't know where my baby is. I want my baby."

Scott promised the smugglers would be caught, adding "This is going to be an international deal."

He said he believed the abandonment was "deliberate because all they had to do was say, 'See those mountains? Go three miles in that direction and you'll be on the highway.'"

The identities of the Salvadorans were not immediately available.

Charges filed in million dollar oil theft ring

HOUSTON (AP) — Ten persons have been charged with organized criminal activity and another seven with theft as lawmen wind down a six-month investigation into an oil theft ring that netted $1 million a month in hijacked petroleum property, officials said.

Those arrested included the owner of a tugboat and barge cleaning service, an oil company owner and one of his employees, authorities said.

Bond for those charged with theft was set at $1,000 and ranged from $1,000 to $30,000 for those charged with organized criminal activity.

"I imagine there are several (similar) operations from Brownsville to Florida," said Detective J.C. Moseley after Coast Guard officers, police and Texas Department of Public Safety personnel made the weekend arrests.

Moseley said the investigation began six months ago when authorities became suspicious of an oil company's reported losses.

Lawmen confiscated a tugboat, two barges loaded with stolen petrochemicals and six tractor-trailer trucks used to steal the products from barges in the Saturday morning raid, Moseley said.

A 32-foot Coast Guard patrol boat pursued the tugboat for about a mile on the San Jacinto River before it ran aground and the crew fled on foot, he said. The crew members, including the captain of the tugboat, were arrested.

Moseley said two other tugboat captains, their crews and two truck drivers were arrested, along with an oil company owner and a former oil company engineer now employed at the barge cleaning firm.

Police said the operation centered around a barge cleaning company on the San Jacinto River and probably involved captains of tugboats pulling barges transporting gasoline, diesel and other petrochemical products.

Moseley said a tugboat would pull two empty barges alongside vessels containing petrochemical products and pump portions of the cargo into the empty barges. He said the smallest petroleum barges hold about 420,000 gallons.

The cargo then would be taken ashore and sold to gasoline stations and other petroleum dealers.

QUIET BEFORE THE STORM. This bucking chute at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena at Recreation Park east of Pampa stands quiet now, but that will change tonight at 7 p.m. when the Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show kicks off a week of rodeo activities in Pampa. The Kid Pony Show will continue Tuesday and Wednesday nights, with the Top O' Texas Rodeo opening at 7:30 p.m. Thursday through Saturday nights. World Champion Steer Wrestler Stan Williamson will be featured during the rodeo in a Coors Chute-Out. (Photo by Ed Sackett)

Bradford reported satisfactory

A fire and explosion at 10:10 p.m. Saturday in the utility area of the Pampa Celanese Plant resulted in injury to one man and a 50 percent production cutback by the local plant today.

Celanese officials said a shift supervisor in the utility area, C. L. Bradford, 48, of Pampa received first- and second-degree burns to his arms, upper chest and face. Bradford was reported in satisfactory condition at Highland General Hospital today.

A bearing failure in an air compressor was the cause of the accident, according to Al Miller, Celanese Industrial Relations Manager.

The after-effects of the bearing failure caused the fire and explosion in the oil system of the compressor. The blaze was extinguished by the Celanese fire crew, Miller said.

Production capacity for Celanese has been cut 50 percent today, but plant officials hope to be at 75 percent production by the end of the week. Total production capacity will be resumed as soon as equipment parts are received at the plant, Miller said.

Maintenance crews at Celanese were called in to work early Sunday morning for repair and clean-up on the damaged building and equipment.

Home Box Office converters stolen

Police are continuing the investigation of the weekend burglary of the cable television office on North Hobart Street in which a large amount of Home Box Office converters worth as much as $4,500 were taken.

Owner Wayne Steddum reported the burglary of Sammon's Communications, Inc. office located at 1425 N. Hobart to the Pampa Police Department at 10 a.m. Saturday.

At the time of the report, 11 cases of the converters containing 10 units each with a total value of $4,553 were taken in the burglary, according to police records.

"We're in the process of inventorying, check serial numbers," Steddum said. "It doesn't look like as much as missing. There is some gone, but we don't really know how many."

The burglars apparently gained entry through an overhead door located at the back of the building, he said.

"It was bent like it was pried open," Steddum said.

This is the second major burglary for the corporation, Steddum said.

The first burglary occurred about two months ago at the Borger office in which 10 cases containing 80 converters were taken. The total loss was estimated at approximately $4,000, he said. None of the stolen merchandise has been recovered at this time, he added.

County fire calls total $23,700

Gray County taxpayers will be charged $23,700 for fires calls answered in the county by the City of Pampa Fire Department during the first seven days of July.

Of the 66 official fire calls answered by the city fire department during the 24-hour period of July 4, 65 of the calls were related to the careless use of fireworks.

Not only do residents pay for extra service and extra manhours, but live with the added danger to life and property, according to Assistant Fire Marshall Floyd Steele.

Pampa Fire Department officials report that any time a fire call is received, the department must be able to respond immediately.

Six of the nine Pampa fire units were kept continually busy during the recent holiday, Steele said.

"This spreads the fire department very thin and puts the city in some danger because of the heavy load caused mainly by fireworks. We were in a bind for a while," according to Pampa firefighter Tom Leggett.

Holiday death toll stands at 42

By The Associated Press

Fourth of July weekend traffic accidents left at least 37 people dead, 10 short of Department of Public Safety predictions for holiday fatalities.

The DPS had predicted 47 people would die on Texas highways during the three-day weekend that ended at midnight Sunday.

In 1977, the last time the July 4th holiday was part of a three-day weekend, 35 persons were killed in traffic mishaps, DPS spokesman Larry Todd said.

Mark E. Green, 23, of Grand Saline, died early Sunday when his car ran off the road near the East Texas town.

William J. Sarlis, 27, of Victoria, was killed when the motorcycle he was riding collided with an automobile southwest of Victoria.

Richard E. Moore, 24, of Creston, Iowa, died late Saturday when his motorcycle ran off a Harrison County road and struck a tree.

Sammie Williams Jr., 44 of Dallas, was killed Saturday night when his pickup struck a bridge north of Wills Point.

A 30-year-old Lancaster man, Deryl B. Almon, died Saturday when his car ran off the road outside Wichita Falls and overturned several times.

Bobby Lee Dunn, 25, and Pamela Gaye Fowler, 19, died Saturday when their car went out of control and rolled over south of Angleton. Ms. Fowler, a passenger, died after she was thrown from the vehicle.

BITES THE DUST. Calf riding is not as easy as it looks, as this young Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show competitor could testify. The Top O' Texas Kid Pony Show will kick off a week of rodeo events in Pampa, beginning at 7 p.m. tonight and continuing through Wednesday. Tonight's competition in the pony show is for youngsters 7 years old and under. Tuesday's competition is for 8- to 10-year-olds, and Wednesday's competition is for 12- to 15-year-olds. The Top O' Texas Rodeo will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and continue through Saturday.

Feud grows along with sinkhole

WINKLER COUNTY, Texas (AP) - The folks in Kermit and Wink have been feuding over football teams and population size for more than 50 years.
But the object of their most heated rivalry is a giant hole that nibbles at surrounding earth and gurgles with murky green water.
The central issue seems to be a nickname for the yawning expanse: the Kermit Krater or the Wink Sink.
"It's raised a lot of static between these two towns," said Kermit pilot Lonnie Collins. "It should have been called the Winkler County Whatever."
Since the hole first opened in the arid desert between the two towns, it has gobbled up oil field pipelines, telephone poles and untold tons of earth and become something of a tourist attraction.
"It's just a hole," said a disgusted Vera Johnson, who drove 115 miles from Andrews to gaze disappontedly at cavern.
It's not exactly "just a hole," since the giant cavity measures 400 yards by 360 yards and is more than 70 feet deep.
Curious tourists, journalists, television crews and geology students descend daily upon the area to get a peek at the geological puzzle.
"Flies never swarmed on manure like people have on this place," said Mike Davidson, a leather-faced cowboy.
The crater was just a small sink in the ground when it appeared June 3 on an old, West Texas oil field.
Juan Garcia discovered the 20-by-20-foot bubbling cavity while scouting for pipeline leaks. Garcia said he left the site to get a supervisor, and when the pair returned 20 minutes later, "that hole was nearly 150 yards long."

Local residents frequently joke about the abyss, but many businessmen are not as amused.
The pit's insatiable appetite has seriously threatened a Shell Oil Co. tank farm, spooked travelers driving along Texas Highway 115, and cost Atlantic Richfield almost $20,000 in fencing and round-the-clock security.
Dubbed the "guacamole hole-y" because of its avocado-green water, the hole continues to grow sporadically and devour mesquite trees, pieplines and telephones poles that stand in its path.
The feud between the two communities dates back to the 1920s when Wink - then a bawdy, brawling boom town of 25,000 - forced a county referendum to move the courthouse from Kermit.
But when oil and gas field sprang up, Kermit's population steadily grew while Wink's shrank dramatically. Football and baseball games have intensified those feelings, but nothing to the extent of the hole-naming dispute.
Kermit Mayor Jack McGuire said the situation has resulted in priceless "cheap publicity," while Wink residents feel they've been left to sink in their own hole of anonymity.
Wink, with a population of about 1,025, actually is two miles closer to the sinkhole than Kermit, a community of 7,900.
"That's the way it is around this county - Kermit takes credit for everything," said James Wicker, a Wink welder.

Wicker's 12-year-old daughter, Tabatha, added: "Somebody said if Wink did fall in, Kermit would be so jealous they would jump in too."
Residents from both communities speculate the crater was caused by collapsing caverns in New Mexico, tremors from the Mt. St. Helens volcano, and "just plain ol' devil's work."
Geologists blame the hole on eroding salt domes, possibly because of oil drilling techniques, and have warned a sinkhole "two miles wide and eight miles long" could eventually open up.
"It got everybody thinking," said Winkler County Civil Defense coordinator Jim Williamson. "In the daylight, we'd joke about it. But there'd be a sudden thump in my house at night and I'd wake up thinking, 'The Hole.'"

Bell asks for increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. today asked the Texas Public Utility Commission for rate increases totaling $26.3 million, including $1.75 per month more from residential customers.
Bell also wants to reduce the number of free directory assistance calls from 10 to five per month, with a 25-cent charge for each additional "information" call.

Unidentified man killed, officer hurt in shootout

DALLAS (AP) - Investigators today were trying to unravel the mystery surrounding a shoot-out that left an unidentified man dead and a police officer critically wounded with gunshot and stab wounds.
Officers said they still are not sure why the dead man attacked Officer Paul Fletcher Jr. after he was stopped by police for jaywalking.
And they don't yet know whose bullet felled the man in the gun battle that followed - that of the three police officers involved or an armored security guard who also fired a shotgun at the man.
Police said the victim remained unidentified Sunday night.
Fletcher underwent surgery Sunday night at Baylor University Medical Center and was listed in critical condition. He suffered gunshot wounds to the head, abdomen and right thigh and at least one stab wound to the abdomen, said police spokesman Bob Worth.
Worth said Fletcher and partner Pat Coker used their squad car's public address system to call out to a jaywalker on the eastern edge of downtown Dallas about 5 p.m. Sunday.

When the man did not respond, Fletcher got out of the car and approached him, Worth said. The man pulled a six-inch butcher knife and stabbed Fletcher.
During a struggle, the man pulled the officer's service revolver and shot him three times.
Officer Coker told investigators she fired at the man and radioed for two other officers, who also fired at the man, Worth said. Coker told investigators she had her pistol drawn while Fletcher and the victim struggled, but did not fire during the fight because she feared she would hit her partner.
During the volley of gunfire, a passing armored car security guard opened fire with a shotgun, Worth said.
The man apparently collapsed dead about two blocks away where officers found him still clutching the knife and Fletcher's gun, Worth said.
"We have no idea of who he is, no identification," he said. "We have no idea as to what his motivation was in the matter."
Worth said the bullet that struck Fletcher's head did not penetrate the skull.

Irate elephant injures trainer

FORT WORTH (AP) - A 26-year-old attendant at the Fort Worth zoo was hospitalized after a young African elephant jammed her against a line of wooden posts.
Jeanne Jacobsen was listed in stable condition in the intensive care unit at St. Joseph's Hospital here Sunday night. She suffered a fractured shoulder, broken ribs, a broken jaw and bruises Saturday while trying to clean the cage of Benny, a young, male elephant.
"She kept trying to get him to move and he wouldn't," said Turner. "Finally she got the elephant hook (a training device) after him and that made him mad and he rushed her."

Head shops fight paraphernalia bans

CLEVELAND (AP) — The people who sell "bongs" and "roach clips" and the people who are worried about easy drug use are moving into what may be a decisive battle in their long war.

For several years, states and communities across the nation have been trying to outlaw so-called "head shops" that specialize in drug paraphernalia. Results have been mixed.

The industry, a formidable foe, is worth an estimated $500 million to $1 billion a year. It sells marijuana cigarette rolling papers, cocaine spoons, hashish pipes, and other devices like "bongs" — large pipes — and "roach clips," which are used to hold the end of a winking marijuana cigarette.

But now, a model law drafted by the Drug Enforcement Administration and enacted in several states and many communities nationwide has reached the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

The case was brought by a Parma record dealer, who says the law was enacted to put him out of business. A federal district judge upheld the measure almost intact. It's the first test of the DEA model law to reach an appeals court.

The decision of the appeals court, which heard arguments last month, "will be a precedent for all of the remaining courts in the U.S.," said Harry L. Myers, the DEA attorney who drafted the model law.

If the law survives, DEA officials say, more states and communities are likely to enact it. And some states that have already done so will begin enforcement.

Among the states that already have the DEA model law or a similar statute on the books are Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey and North Dakota. New York Gov. Hugh Carey signed a new "headshop" law last week.

Proponents of the laws say distribution of accessories of drug use encourages young people to indulge in illegal activities by glamorizing drug use.

"We've got to turn around the 'do drug' messages children are receiving," said Lee Dogoloff, director for drug policy at the White House, which was involved in drafting the model legislation. "One is the proliferation of paraphernalia, much of which is designed and marketed for that population."

However, opponents say banning the sale of such devices is unconstitutional — and misguided.

"It's like thinking you can remove alcohol by removing swizzle sticks," says Mark Heutlinger, an officer of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

One problem, opponents say, is that many of the items sold in "head shops" have legitimate uses — for example, cigarette papers that can be used to roll real cigarettes or marijuana joints.

So at the request of the White House, the DEA looked for precedents involving paraphernalia used in other illegal activities, such as counterfeiting, gambling, moonshining and tobacco bootlegging.

"There is a federal moonshining paraphernalia statute that makes a crime and provides for confiscation of all properties intended for use to violate federal liquor laws," said Myers. "It's been upheld and applied for 60 years."

Under the Parma law, making, selling or possessing drug paraphernalia is a second-degree misdemeanor, carrying a fine of $750 and 90 days in jail. It covers devices like pipes, bongs, roach clips, cocaine spoons and the advertising of such items.

Peter Schlievin, owner of Record Revolution No. 6 in Parma, challenged the law on grounds that it was unconstitutionally vague and denied him due process. He has not been cited as a violator.

In addition to spelling out specific paraphernalia, the law requires that prosecutors establish that the seller intended that the devices be used with drugs.

"Criminal intent is what distinguishes the paper clip which holds the pages of this memorandum of opinion from an identical clip which is used to hold a marijuana cigarette," U.S. District Judge John M. Manos

LAGOS' LEGACY
NEW YORK (AP) — With double-digit inflation in the U.S. recently, most Americans might think the city where they live is the most expensive.

The honor in 1980 goes to Lagos, Nigeria, which is one-third more expensive than New York. Tokyo, the longtime leader, is now second. Douala, Cameroon, is third, according to a survey by a business magazine.

Chicago was the costliest of nine U.S. cities studied, nearly 2 percent more expensive than New York. Washington was closest to New York's mark.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Thomas Jefferson had a hostage crisis, too

By Forrest McDonald
Dr. McDonald is Professor of History at the University of Alabama. Among his many books are WE THE PEOPLE and THE PRESIDENCY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Jimmy Carter is not the first American president to be faced with a hostage crisis in the Islamic world. Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and Madison were repeatedly plagued with just that problem. It was Jefferson and his Secretary of State and successor Madison who came up with a solution.

At the time there were, on the Barbary Coast of North Africa, four Islamic kingdoms—Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Tripoli—which lived mainly by stealing on the high seas. Rather than prevent such outrages, the maritime nations of Europe avoided depredations by paying formal bribes or "tribute," even as westerners today pay tribute for Arab oil.

The U.S., under Washington and Adams, followed the European example. Though the Washington administration built a small Navy in response to Arabic threats, it opted, under popular pressure, to mothball the fleet and pay tribute instead.

Jefferson and Madison refused to follow such a course. Jefferson sent the infant U.S. Navy to the Mediterranean to engage in defensive operations, protecting American merchant ships.

The hostage crisis came in 1803. Late that year the 44-gun frigate, U.S.S. Philadelphia, ran aground on a sandbar off Tripoli, and its entire crew was taken hostage. That was a routine instrument of statecraft in the Islamic world; when European governments proved loath to pay tribute, Barbary Coast rulers whipped them into line by seizing their nationals and holding them in dungeons until they capitulated and, incidentally, ransoms were paid.

Jefferson would have no part of it. He threw the entire U.S. Navy, such as it was, against Tripoli—not to free the hostages, but to teach the Tripolitans never to trifle with the U.S. again. After some spectacular fighting, the Pasha of Tripoli was forced to agree to cease plundering American ships and to waive American tribute in future. The captives were released, unharmed.

But the American commander, Edward Preble, was not content to let the matter rest there. Interpreting the president's orders liberally (and properly), he gave the Algerians and Moroccans a taste of the same medicine. The Jefferson administration was then able to establish a general settlement on favorable terms.

Unfortunately, during the war of 1812, the Algerians took advantage of America's troubles and resumed their raiding. Nearly 200 American merchant seamen were captured, imprisoned, and forced into slavery. As soon as it became possible, the Navy was sent out to tend to the matter. In 1815 Madison dispatched Captain Stephen Decatur to the Mediterranean with three frigates, two sloops of war, and five light Baltimore clipper-schooners. Just past the Strait of Gibraltar the squadron sighted the Algerian flagship and reduced her to garbage in twenty minutes.

Decatur sailed on to Algeria and paid the pasha a personal call. Not only must the piracy stop, tribute be forever ended, and the enslaved crews released, Decatur said; the pasha must pay the United States an indemnity for having captured the crewmen in the first place.

The pasha demurred, whereupon Decatur calmly informed him that the Americans would start sinking Algerian ships, one by one, until either the money was paid or there was not so much as an Algerian rowboat left afloat. The pasha capitulated. Then Decatur did the same thing with the rulers of Tunis and Tripoli, with the same results.

The Barbary rulers were a slippery lot and no doubt planned to go back to their old ways as soon as Decatur was out of sight. But they were in for a rude surprise. Decatur had scarcely sailed out before an American squadron under William Bainbridge sailed in to pay a polite "social call." The rulers got the message.

To make sure they did not forget it, the Navy leased a permanent base at Port Mahon on the Island of Majorca and cruised the Mediterranean on "friendly" visits for years thereafter. The Barbary Arabs did not forget.

The moral of the story is too obvious to mention. Would that we had a president today with the wits and the guts to heed it.

The average lightbulb doesn't hold a candle to the firefly. A good bulb converts only about 10 percent of its energy into light, wasting the rest as heat. A firefly operates its lamp without heat at better than 95 percent efficiency.

Freedom threatened by power, not theory

Twice a year the men who rule the Soviet Union climb atop Lenin's mausoleum in Moscow's Red Square and oversee a celebration of Soviet ideology. The men on top of the tomb are some of the most powerful men on the planet — as demonstrated by the massive show of military force that rolls by for their inspection. They claim to be Marxist-Leninists.

In the Middle Ages kings presided over celebrations of their subjects, claiming that God had granted them the divine right to rule. In reality monarchs often clawed their way to the throne leaving a pile of bodies behind. Considering the intrigue, maneuvering and bloodshed that went on behind the scenes, it is doubtful that many of these power seekers actually believed in God, much less divine right. All the talk of God was, often, simply a justification for the accumulation of power.

Good slogans have always served to justify power. There is, perhaps, good reason to doubt how seriously domestic politicians take their own Fourth of July rhetoric. Similarly, in the Soviet Union there is serious questions as to how much the ruling clique — or anybody else — believes in Marxism. There is considerable evidence to show that, Marxist verbiage notwithstanding, the problems of the Soviet Union stem from powerseekers who just happen to operate in a system that has permitted a great degree of centralization.

Those seeking to gain or retain power have committed almost every conceivable crime since the Bolsheviks took power 62 years ago, all of it in the name of Marxism-Leninism. Though the rulers of all communist countries would like their people to believe otherwise, Lenin himself was far from a saint. But even if his crimes are hidden by modern communist rulers, Stalin's Marxist rhetoric was not appreciably different from that of modern communists, and the Russian public is understandably skeptical about the sincerity behind public commitments to Marxist principles.

What Marxism-Leninism appears to be is the prerequisite badge needed for advancement in countries controlled by the Communist Party. Those seeking to move up know what words to use and what organizations to belong to; yet they rarely bother to attempt an understanding of the theories. Last year, for example, a survey of 800 members of Hungary's Communist Youth League found little understanding of their structure of government. A sizeable number knew little of Marx or Lenin.

Yugoslavian dissident Milovan Djilas wrote a scathing critique of communism titled The New Class. In it he suggested that under communism new elites emerge to replace the bourgeoisie, which supposedly was eliminated by Marxist governments. The observation has been proven accurate in almost every nation dominated by the Communist Party.

Certainly any complete understanding of the Soviet Union requires that at least a brief examination of Marxist theory. But, more importantly, comprehending what is happening in Russia requires an analysis of power and how people deal with it. Using Marxist rhetoric, the politicians and the bureaucracy of the Soviet Union have been able to concentrate more power in their hands than possessed by their Western counterparts. It is this power and not the abstract theories of Marx and Lenin that threaten freedom. Americans should be aware that any expansion of statist power, even if done in the name of stopping communism, is not a way of preserving freedom.

Friendly volcanoes

by Paul Harvey

President Carter surveyed the desolate wake of our nation's most gigantic volcanic eruption and called it "the worst sight" he had ever seen.

It's been computed that the one Sunday eruption which flattened the top of Mt. St. Helens was 500 times more potent than the atomic bomb we dropped on Hiroshima.

And with most of a hundred dead it's difficult to imagine that this awesome corrosive cloud of ash has a silver lining.

The same intense heat which melted the earth's insides and exploded all over the western United States — contained and controlled is constructive.

The superstitious might say, "The fire gods are trying to tell us something."

The message is that the unharassed heat which devastates can be harnessed to generate electricity.

The thermal energy within the earth's crust is a natural fuel and, properly utilized, it does not pollute and does not deplete.

Worldwide, we already get more than one percent of our electrical energy from that source, geothermal steam, and will get much more.

Presently, 40 miles north of San Francisco, harnessed geothermal energy is generating enough electricity for a city of 700,000 people.

That facility is being expanded and other locations are being developed — in California's Imperial Valley, in New Mexico, Utah and Hawaii.

U.S. and Canadian scientists believe that the Cascade Range of the western United States and Canada — the same area which produced the May 18 explosion — is pregnant with the promise of becoming a gigantic "steam boiler" for thermal energy.

Most Americans are acquainted with this subterranean reservoir of hot water only when they see it steaming from the earth as volcanoes, hot springs, geysers, boiling mud pots, fumaroles.

But most have ignored the practical applications of that super-hot water. As in producing oil, it's the drilling which costs most.

So the Department of Energy is splitting with Union Oil of California and Public Service Co. of New Mexico the cost — a million dollars each — of drilling the 18 holes required to explore the Jemez Mountain reservoir north of Albuquerque. That project will supply electricity for 50,000 homes within two years.

With gas and oil prices escalating, alternatives become increasingly attractive. This one — geothermal steam — according to Department of Energy projections will ultimately provide five to seven percent of our nation's total energy.

So, however ugly the after effects of the Mt. St. Helens explosion, the destructive ash that orbited the earth carries with it an invitation to constructive utilization of underground steam.

Of parties and platforms

By Robert J. Wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Over the next few weeks, both major parties will be hammering out their platforms for the 1980 campaign. Many serious reports will be published and broadcast on their deliberations, indicating that one candidate or another or one power group or another had made a major concession on some important issue.

These reports will tend to support the idea that platforms are made up of binding obligations that must be chiseled oh-so-carefully into stone. In fact, party platforms are nothing more than transitory political documents that promise as much as possible to as many as possible.

Take, for instance, the Democratic platform of four years ago.

In 1976, the Democrats wanted so much to impress upon us that they intended to keep each and every promise in their platform that they titled it "A Contract with the People." Let's consider some of the pledges in that contract:

— "We pledge to reduce adult unemployment to 3 percent within 4 years."

— "The high cost of credit has stifled small business and virtually halted the housing industry. Credit must be generally available at reasonable interest rates."

— "The Ford administration and its economic advisers have been constantly wrong about the sources and cures of the inflation that has plagued our nation and our people. We can increase production and employment without rekindling inflation."

— "We pledge the Democratic Party to a complete overhaul of the present tax system."

— "(We pledge) a comprehensive national health insurance system with universal and mandatory coverage."

— "Fundamental welfare reform is necessary."

— "Those arguing the rhetoric of so-called deregulation of natural-gas prices must prevail."

— "The Defense Department can be operated more effectively and efficiently and its budget reduced without in any way compromising our defense posture."

And how have our Democratic president and our Democratic Congress lived up to their promises?

To start with, we find that unemployment is almost 8 percent because of the deepening recession caused by the administration's incredibly restrictive monetary policy, which raised interest rates from about 6 percent four years ago to a high of 20 percent. But that policy was necessary to control inflation, which was about 4 percent annually when Carter took office but which rose to almost 18 percent by last winter.

At various times over the past four years, Congress began to debate tax reform, welfare reform and national health insurance. But because neither the administration nor the congressional leadership took a very active interest in any of these issues, not much has happened.

The defense budget is going up sharply with little evidence that the Pentagon is operating more efficiently. (We will resist comment on the only military operation undertaken by this administration — the hostage rescue attempt.)

And natural gas prices are on the rise thanks to deregulation that passed Congress only because of the support of the Democratic leadership and the administration.

If the 1976 Democratic platform was "a contract with the people," a suit for breach might be in order.

But we should not pick on the Democrats of 1976. They made good on some of their promises, such as creating new departments of energy and education and promoting face-to-face negotiations between the parties in the Middle East. In fact, they probably did as well as any recent administration and Congress in delivering on their platform.

Which is the whole point. The stories coming out of the drafting sessions will make the platforms seem like binding obligations on the party that is victorious in November. Instead, they should be viewed in about the same light as the promises of an ardent suitor in a singles bar 10 minutes before closing.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last year our hospital auxiliary had a fund-raiser that proved hugely successful. We put on an "Evening in Monte Carlo," and the biggest money-raiser of all was our "kissing booth." It was staffed by three attractive college girls (daughters of members) who volunteered their services.

Kisses lasting three seconds were sold for $10 each; kisses lasting seven seconds went for $25; kisses lasting 15 seconds went for $50; and all kisses over 15 seconds went for $100. One man bought three $100 kisses and said it was the best tax-deductible donation he ever made!

Although we're planning to have a dinner dance this year, some of the women want to have the kissing booth again, but some objections have been raised on the grounds that it's unhygienic and, therefore, risky. What is your opinion? FOR A GOOD CAUSE

DEAR FOR: For an antiseptic solution to a tongue-in-cheek problem, provide the kisses and the kissers with germicidal cocktails. You'll make a fortune and minimize the risk.

DEAR ABBY: We are employed as librarians in Iowa City, Iowa. The enclosed item from your column was recently found in our suggestion box:

"Dear Abby: I am a girl, 12, very inexperienced, and I need to know the correct way to kiss a boy. My mother says it will just come naturally, but in case it doesn't, can you give me a few pointers?"

Should the girl quit breathing? I heard she isn't supposed to make a "smack" sound when kissing a boy, but it's OK for kissing relatives, right?

Another question: Am I supposed to move my head? Or do I just move my lips? One last thing: What am I supposed to do with my nose? — Never Been Kissed"

"Dear Never: You should not quit breathing. No 'smack' sounds — not even with relatives. It's not necessary to move anything. And all you do with your nose is breathe through it."

Attached to the above exchange was this message: "Dear Librarians: How come you never answer questions like this one? They would be a lot more interesting than how hot or cold the library should be, or if business students belong here. — Dedicated Reader"

Abby, we thought you might enjoy the following reply offered by our resident problem-solver:

"Dear Dedicated: We answer all questions found in the suggestion box. Up to this point we haven't received any of the type illustrated here. We have a feeling, though, that you really are concerned about this particular problem and are a bit hesitant to admit your own lack of experience in this area. Rest assured we will do our best to help you. File this under 'Youth Wants to Know.'"

"1. The girl should definitely not quit breathing. Cessation of breathing will inevitably end in death unless CPR measures are employed. Contrary to what you may think, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is not the same as kissing."

"2. Don't make a 'smack' sound unless your partner starts to do more than kiss, in which case a firm smack applied to his face would be both appropriate and effective."

Barns used as canvas

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Harley Warrick's paintings aren't seen by most turnpike motorists, but they're still visible along back roads in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Warrick has been painting "Chew Mail Pouch Tobacco" signs since 1947. He figures he's decorated more than 17,000 barns in those 33 years.

"When I lease a barn, I look it over," said Warrick, who paints or retouches some 200 barns a year. "I paint the peak black and then drop down to the word 'CHEW.' You trim it up, go around the white with the black; we call that cutting in."

"I don't measure anything but the bottom line of the letters. With the first 1,000 or so, you have to measure; after that, you don't need to."

Warrick is the only barn painter still employed by the General Cigar and Tobacco Co. of Wheeling, W.Va., maker of Mail Pouch tobacco. Three decades ago, the company kept four crews of painters busy.

Finding suitable barn sides is becoming more difficult, Warrick said.

"You drive down the road and see a barn that's exposed pretty good — it's nice if it's right into the curve of a road when you're looking into it. "We're concentrating on the areas where the customers are — the miners, the factory workers and steelworkers. You don't get too many customers in the white-collar areas."

As farms get larger and fewer in number, there are fewer barns for Warrick to turn into billboards.

"Most of the barns are disappearing," Warrick said. "Now, the old farmers aren't keeping them up. A lot are building metal barns."

"I just won't do a metal barn. It just doesn't look right; it's too neat ... it looks like a ballpoint-pen Rembrandt."

"It wouldn't look like a Mail Pouch barn. You need a barn with beat-up lumber and a sag in the middle."

Bob Carter of Mason has a barn that Warrick thought was

Stars sing on Christopher Cross' debut album

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Christopher Cross, the singer-guitarist, and Christopher Cross, the six-man band, have a debut album out. It's titled "Christopher Cross."

It's not one of those debut albums bought only by friends, family and a few fans. This one got to No. 9 on the best-selling chart in May. The single, "Ride Like the Wind," stayed at No. 3 for three weeks, with Blondie and Pink Floyd ahead of it. The second single, "Sailing," jumped onto the best-selling chart at No. 89 on June 7.

Cross' music is pop-rock, unlike most of the music, country and hard rock, that comes out of Texas. The album has a bunch of guest stars on it, Don Henley, Nicolette Larson, J.D. Souter plus Michael McDonald, dueting with Cross on the first single.

When Cross took the band to Los Angeles to cut the LP, he says, "I wanted Larry Carlton to play guitar on the album. He quit playing guitar in studios mostly by our producer, Michael Omartian, said he'd get him to do it. That lasted me a long time, thinking how wonderful that was going to be."

"Then my mind started to wander, and I mentioned Nicolette doing something. We would have let it go on and on," Cross recalls. "We were ready to get the Beach Boys and everybody on there. But the company said enough is enough. This is going to look like stars on parade."

"I think it's a trend I'm going to continue. When I did two or three songs on demo tapes it was fine when I did all the singing. For a whole album, it gets sterile."

During May, Christopher Cross opened for Fleetwood Mac on tour. Cross says, "They've asked us to tour with them in August and right now we're planning on it."

He says the two bands have become very friendly. "We're big fans of theirs. We're proud to be opening for them. We never try to compete or get envious: 'Ride Like the Wind' gets people standing up and they listen to the rest of our music. Fleetwood gets that reaction to every song."

Cross was born 29 years ago in San Antonio. His father was a doctor, his mother a nurse, who met in the Army. They now are retired in San Antonio. Four uncles also were Army doctors. Cross has two brothers and two sisters.

The family name isn't Cross. That name was chosen for stage work because it's easier to spell and pronounce than the real one, which he doesn't reveal. "I don't have screaming girls at the door, but I must admit having a different stage name is invaluable in terms of not being bothered. I think I'd be hassled a lot more."

"My wife and little boy have my real name. Sometimes I say Cross to the cleaners. I don't have to fool with spelling my name." Warner Brothers told him they think disc jockeys will like saying Chris Cross.

When he was in high school, Cross had a group named

Flash. He also worked as a gofer for Concerts West, which sometimes booked Flash as an opening act. "It did no good; we had no records out. But I think it has helped me cope with the concert trip now a lot better."

Cross can remember, more than 10 years ago, going to an airport to meet Fleetwood Mac, taking them to a fast-food shop and to the hall where they played.

"John McVie claims he remembers it. The roof leaked that night," Cross says.

Cross broke up his high-school band when he went to college, as a premed student. He got sick, went to one of his father's associates and told him he was studying medicine for his father. "He said, 'The last thing you want to do is be a doctor if you don't want to do it.' So I talked to Dad, and he was real supportive."

Cross, Rob Meurer and Andy Salmon all dropped out of college in 1972 and set up as a band in Austin. "The music is a combination of the way I write and the way they play," Cross says. They played beer bars and fraternity parties and made demo records. They sent four songs to Warner Brothers in 1975.

"They told us it was close but not quite there," he recalls. "We immediately denounced them as total idiots. They had missed the genius of the century. Looking back, they were probably right. We were immature."

They made more tapes in 1976, sent them to Warner Brothers again and, after a visit to hear them in Austin and a time lapse, the company signed them. "We were nervous when they came out. We were playing all the time, but not original things. I think it was a pretty admirable but clumsy set. I think the magic was there."

Cross' manager, who had played in bands with Eagle Don Henley early in his career, played Christopher Cross demos for Henley who volunteered to sing backgrounds on the record. He brought J.D. Souther with him. An A and R man gave Valerie Carter a cassette. She liked it and sang on "Sailing," which is Cross' favorite cut.

The producer had worked on a Steely Dan album that Michael McDonald had sung on and invited him to a recording session, where he volunteered to sing. "We immediately stuck a microphone in his face," Nicolette Larson was recording next door and that producer brought her over.

Cross' son will be 4 in August. "He's always in a good mood," the proud father says. "I like music but he has taken the No. 1 spot."

Now he's finding that success, instead of making him confident, is making him worry. "They'll probably say the next record isn't as good as this one."

"Oh, well, it happens to everybody."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 8, 1980

Your prospects for the coming year are encouraging, provided you don't have too many irons in the fire. You'll fare better in the long run handling enterprises or projects one at a time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be very careful today not to blow a possible misunderstanding with a friend out of proportion. Exaggerating the situation could really cause a problem. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph, which begins with your birth date. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A tendency to spend unnecessarily or unwisely must be held in check today. Foolish purchases will later cause buyer's remorse.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your desire to fulfill ambitions is admirable, but today you may make an enemy in the process if you are too self-serving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things will go smoothly today if you see them for what they are. Don't kid yourself into believing something is easy when it isn't.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Business or commercial matters could be a trifle tricky today. In areas where you feel you have an edge, you may not. Proceed with caution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a strong chance decisions you make under pressure today could prove unwise. Don't let yourself be pushed into a corner where you must come up with immediate answers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Give explicit, detailed instructions today to persons doing work or services for you. Unless you spell out exactly what you expect, you won't get it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're lucky in certain ways today, but gambling on things you know little or nothing about isn't one of them. Stay in your own bailiwick.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't ask the advice of someone today who may tell you what you hope to hear, instead of the truth. Such counsel has no worth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Attend to important tasks early today. You're likely to lose both steam and interest as the clock ticks on. Later excuses won't replace results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You know how to get what you want today, but you may not know what to do with it. Be as smart in managing gains as you are in acquiring them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Others can't be counted upon today to do things you should do for yourself. Practice self-reliance. Don't look for easy outs.

MUHAMMED ALI, left, clowns with WBC heavyweight champion Larry Holmes in a Bloomington, Minn. hotel lobby. Ali has a ringside seat for Holmes' title fight with Scott LeDoux tonight. Holmes has signed to fight Ali in Cairo, Egypt Sept. 10.

Holmes predicts easy win tonight

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Larry Holmes and Scott LeDoux, a couple of onetime truck drivers, who have met with varying degrees of success in the prize ring, fight tonight for the World Boxing Council title held by Holmes.

At ringside will be a former employer of Holmes — Muhammad Ali who appears headed for a fight with his onetime sparring partner...or with LeDoux.

"I want to see how much he's progressed since he's my hired hand," the 38-year-old Ali who retired as a three-time champion said at a news conference.

"There is going to be a fight. That's definite...sometime in September or October," said promoter Don King, who is talking about Egypt as a site. But some boxing observers feel the fight will end up at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

Of course, King is thinking a bout with Ali, who had several of his fights promoted by King, and Holmes, who is tied closely to King.

But first the 30-year-old unbeaten Holmes must get past the 31-year-old LeDoux who has had a checkered career. Holmes is an overwhelming favorite to succeed.

"I'm going to make this an easy fight. Believe me," said Holmes, who scored knockouts in his six previous defenses of the title he won on a split decision over Ken Norton on June 9, 1978. The record for consecutive knockouts in heavyweight title defenses is seven. Joe Louis reached that figure twice.

"I've been nervous for a month and a half," said LeDoux who lives in nearby Anoka, Minn. "I'm not nervous because of the fear of Larry Holmes, the biggest fear of all is failure."

LeDoux, who has a 26-8-4 record with 17 knockouts, will get his big chance at the 16,800-seat Met Center and before a national television audience.

The ABC show will also include a WBC super-lightweight title fight by Saoul Mamby of New York and Esteban DeJesus of Puerto Rico, the former WBC lightweight champ and the only man to ever beat Roberto Duran.

Mamby, who has a 27-12-5 record with 13 knockouts, won the title by stopping Kim San-Hyun of South Korea in the 14th round in Korea last Feb. 23.

DeJesus has a 56-4 record, with 31 knockouts. His victory over Duran, the former lightweight and now WBC welterweight champ, was a 10-round decision in 1972. He was knocked out by Duran in two later fights.

A referee and two judges will score the fight. They reportedly will be referee Davey Pearl of Las Vegas and judges Harold Lederman of New York and Richard Steele of Los Angeles.

Ageless Perez powers Red Sox past Baltimore, 6-4

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Age apparently hasn't tarnished Tony Perez's princely skills. In fact, he's hitting these days with the old authority.

"I'm not striking out as much this year," says the Boston Red Sox first baseman. "I'm making contact. I feel I'm a better hitter now than I was five years ago. I'm getting my second wind—I'm born again."

The Red Sox picked up Perez in the free agent re-entry draft last winter in hopes of adding power to their lineup — and so far, he has more than fulfilled their expectations.

The 38-year-old veteran is currently leading the American League in RBI with 64, including the three runs he knocked in Sunday to help Boston's 6-4 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

In other AL games, the Chicago White Sox took a doubleheader from the Oakland A's 2-0 and 5-4; the Cleveland Indians stopped the New York Yankees 5-3; the Seattle Mariners defeated the Kansas City Royals 5-3; the Detroit Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 7-5; the Minnesota Twins turned back the Texas Rangers 4-1 and the California Angels blanked the Milwaukee Brewers 2-0.

Perez drove in runs with a sacrifice fly in the first, a single in the third and a solo homer in the fifth, his 12th of the season and 335th of his career.

Carlton Fisk, who returned to the Boston lineup during the Baltimore series after missing two weeks with a bruised elbow, laced a two-run single during a four-run rally in the third which finished Mike Flanagan.

White Sox 2-5, A's 6-4
Jim Morrison and Harold Baines each singled home first-inning runs and left-hander Steve Trout pitched a five-hitter as Chicago beat Oakland in the first game of their doubleheader.

Trout, 48, didn't allow an Oakland runner past second base. He fanned two and walked three in going the distance for the fourth time this season.

Pinch-hitter Greg Pryor's two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning off reliever Bob Lacey lifted the White Sox past the A's in the second game.

Indians 5, Yankees 3
Gary Alexander smashed his second pinch home run in two days, a three-run shot in the sixth inning, to lead Cleveland over New York. Alexander's wallop broke a 2-2 tie and tied an American League record shared by eight other players for hitting pinch-homers in consecutive at-bats.

Rick Waits, 7-7, was the winner, scattering nine hits over 8 1-3 innings before needing help from Sid Monge, who gained his sixth save.

Mariners 5, Royals 3
Bruce Bochte and Tom Paciorek slammed solo home runs and collected four hits apiece to power Seattle past Kansas City.

The victory lifted the Mariners into a 35-45 record, their best at the All-Star break in the four-year history of the franchise.

Floyd Bannister, with help from three relievers, evened his record at 6-6, while Paul Splittorff, 5-6, took the loss.

Twins 4, Rangers 1
Fernando Arroyo and Jerry Kosman combined on a four-hitter, pitching Minnesota over Texas.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the second on an RBI single by Pete Mackanin off loser Jon Matlack, 4-5. They scored their eventual winning run in the fifth on Mackanin's double and another two-bagger by Hosken Powell.

Arroyo, 1-1, had a no-hitter until Mickey Rivers beat out a roller with two out in the sixth and later needed relief help from Kosman in the eighth after the Rangers scored their run on an error.

Tigers 7, Blue Jays 5
Richie Hebner drove in three runs and scored the winning run to back the combined six-hit pitching of Jack Morris and Aurelio Lopez as Detroit defeated Toronto.

Toronto's Ernie Whitt had tied the game 5-5 in the Blue Jays' seventh inning with a

Domestic operators report record well completion in first quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Domestic oil and gas operators set a record pace in January-May for well completions. The industry drilled an average of 4,933 wells during the five months. That average exceeded the all-time monthly average high of 4,847 the industry established for completions in 1956 when a record 58,160 wells were drilled. During January-May, the industry had an average of 2,664 rotary drilling rigs at work each week. That average fell just short of the record level of 2,687 set in 1955 when there were 56,662 well completions. Final figures are not yet available but the hectic January-May activity continued through June. Late in the month, rig activity had moved the weekly average for the year to an all-time high of 2,695. After the record 58,160 completions in 1956, domestic drilling operations went into a prolonged slump that did not bottom out until 1971 when there were only 27,300 completions. Compared with the current record pace, active rotary rigs at work in 1971 averaged only 975 a week. The industry had 2,901 rotary rigs making hole the final week of June, the highest average for a single week since an all-time high of 3,137 in mid-December 1955. How fast can the current count of active rigs go up from now on? By only 25 to 30 rigs a month, says Ed McGhee, executive vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors. "That's close to the rate at which newly built rigs are being put into service," McGhee said. "The domestic fleet has been operating at 95 to 96 utilization the past two months. That level is about the maximum sustainable."

Van pools ease traffic congestion in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The fastest-growing mass transit system in Texas provides door-to-door service, accepts no federal subsidies and is hailed by many as a short-term solution to Houston's traffic congestion. At last count it consisted of more than 1,000 vans operated by employers fed up with crowded highways, sky-high gasoline prices and an inadequate city bus service. The vans already transport as many as one-fifth the number of passengers using Metropolitan Transit Authority buses and more of the 12- to 15-passenger vehicles are being put on the streets every day. "We have a transportation success story," said Donald L. Williams, president of Rice Center, a non-profit urban research institute. "It's probably one of the most successful programs in the country."

HISD is planning a 100-van fleet for this fall. All of the district's 1,500 employees have been entered in a computer memory, making them instantly available for car pool or van pool matching. The two largest van pool operators are Gulf Oil Corp. and Brown & Root, Inc., which each run more than 100 vans in Houston. Cost of a 50-mile round trip on any of the dozens of van pools ranges from $15 to $50 a month, with most services breaking even at approximately $35. Employers say they have been forced to provide their own transportation solutions due to MTA's inadequate bus service.

FROM THE TOP, Joe Louis Arena, where the Republican National Convention will open July 14, appears as if workmen are nearing completion with necessary renovations. The dark area in the foreground is the podium. Four thousand delegates and alternates will fill the remaining seats when Ronald Reagan is expected to get the nomination as presidential candidate. At wit's end

By Erma Bombeck
 Okay, America, this is the time to play it cool. A few dozen teenagers have gotten burr haircuts. It doesn't mean we're into a hair recession, but we all have a shot at having our young people look like our high school graduation pictures if we just keep our heads. I cannot caution you enough on what a sensitive and crucial time this is. You probably think I'm over-reacting, but if one — just one — parent gets a burr haircut, it's all over. We've blown it. For centuries young people have tried desperately to get a "look" that is their own. Every time they do, their parents come along and imitate it and young people move on to something else. They loved miniskirts, loud music, tinted glasses, gold chains around the neck, causes, marches, relationships, meaningful conversations, tight jeans, tape decks and frizzy hair until their parents discovered them too and their popularity began to wane. I never knew what solitude was until I poked my head into my son's bedroom one day when his stereo was going 86 decibels and shouted, "Could you turn it up? I can't hear all the words in the kitchen." From then on his music became private. For parents who yearn to see their son's ears once more, may I suggest you pick out a boy in the neighborhood who has a ponytail down his back and say to your son, "Why can't you let your hair grow like George? It's neat caught up in a rubber band instead of sticking up in the air like a porcupine in heat!" Tell him it's his "patriotic duty" to keep his hair long like George Washington. Tell him he can't go visiting with you until he lets his hair grow as you're ashamed of him. Tell him he looks like his sister with short hair and not to be surprised if the coach tells him to let his hair grow before he can play football. Nag at him for not using enough shampoo and water. ("How can your hair be clean if you use only one towel to dry it?") Remind him of the good old days when his hair used to clog the drains every two weeks or so. But mostly, what we all must do is to let our hair grow. Remember, the longer ours becomes...the shorter theirs will become. I know I'm asking a lot. It's going to be a long, hot summer, but we can do it, parents. For America!

Baby survives crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 2-month-old baby received a hairline skull fracture and bruises but survived when she was thrown from her father's pickup truck in a wreck, bounced off the hood of an oncoming car and landed on her head in the street, officials say.

Danielle Montoya of Canoga Park was released by the Medical Center of Tarzana on Sunday after being held for observation.

"It's amazing. I can't believe it," said Dr. Bruce Littman, attending pediatrician. "Based on the history of the incident, the other doctors felt there was no way anyone could've survived it."

"It's funny how those little bodies are so flexible. I guess a baby is looser than an adult. They bounce like rubber balls."
