Draft registration opens Monday

The Pampa branch of the United States Postal Service is "gearing up" for the resumption of the draft registration of 19- and 20-year-old males scheduled to begin July 21, authorities said.

"We are going to be handling it (registration for the draft)," Postmaster J. D. Williams said. "We're going to furnish the forms, gather them up and ship them off."

"No one knows just how much of a race there's going to be," Williams said concerning the turn-out of eligible men to register for selective service.

"We don't really anticipate very much of a problem," he added. Williams said the local post office will be handing out the registration forms through their regular business transaction windows.

The registration program will be spread out over a period of two weeks — the first week for those born in 1960; the second week for those born in 1961.

Also, the registration day will depend on the birth month of the registrant.

Those born in January, February or March will register on Monday. Persons having an April, May or June birthday will register on Tuesday. July, August and September on Wednesday and those born in October, November and December will register on Thursday. Friday will be a makeup day.

To register, the person will go to any U.S. post office and fill out a registration form with his name, address, telephone number, social security number and date of birth.

These cards will be sent to the Internal Revenue Service centers for key punching. Then, the information will be entered into Selective Service System computers.

Approximately 90 days after registration, each registrant will be mailed an acknowledgment letter, which will include the information entered in the system. If the data is inaccurate, the correct information should be entered on an enclosed change of information form and mailed back to the Selective Service.

The Selective Service requires that it be notified of a change of address by the either using the change of information form or by filling out a change of address form available at the local post office.

Starting in January of 1981, young men born in 1962 will register, and after that, men will register when they turn 18.

The maximum penalty for failure to register is a $10,000 fine and or five years in prison.

The All-Volunteer Force was begun in 1973, with registration being suspended in 1975 to save money.

This is only a call for registration, President Carter says, it is not a return to the draft. No draft cards will be issued.

Deputy's widow to receive vacation pay

CANADIAN — The 27-year-old man charged with capital murder in the shooting death of a Hemphill County Sheriff's Deputy, M. L. Guthrie was refused bond Monday, and Hemphill County commissioners declined to pay more than the vacation pay owed the slain deputy to his widow.

Paul Berry Bush of 3407 Harrison in Amarillo was taken to Canadian Monday afternoon for arraignment by Texas Ranger Bill Baten and District Attorney investigator Kirwin Roper.

Justice of the Peace Frankie Hill denied bond and the accused man was returned to Potter County Jail where he has been held since his arrest Saturday evening in Dumas.

District Attorney Harold Comer recommended that bond be denied, he said. Bond can be denied, he said, when proof of the act is evident.

"In my opinion," he said, "from the physical evidence (gathered at the scene) and the autopsy report, Mr. Bush made sure that that deputy was killed."

Comer referred to the evidence which indicated Guthrie had been shot through the window of Lad's Pharmacy, the killer had then climbed through a hole made in the store window and shot again through the windshield then seeing Guthrie was still alive, walked to the driver's side window of the vehicle and shot the deputy again.

A special grand jury will probably be scheduled before the regular 31st District Grand Jury in Canadian set for July 29, Comer said.

"We will probably schedule one earlier just for the purpose of presenting this capital murder case," he said.

Also on Monday afternoon, Hemphill County commissioners met to consider two items directly related to the Saturday morning slaying of the 52-year-old Guthrie.

The commission voted to pay Mrs. Guthrie $1,700 to pay for her husband's accumulated vacation time, Commissioner George Henderson said.

Wright had requested the commissioner "pay all they possibly could" to the widow.

Memorial funds for Mrs. Guthrie have been set up in both banks in Canadian.

Commissioners also gave their approval for Wright to dispose of the vehicle Guthrie was driving at the time of the fatal incident.

The front windshield was riddled from two shots from a 12-gauge shotgun, Comer said. One slug slammed through the dash, the seat and is believed to be lodged in the rear seat of the car, he said.

The other shot struck Guthrie in the temple, he added.

A man identified by Lad's pharmacist Lonnie Donaldson as Bush had been in the store at least twice in the past three months, he said. Both visits were to have prescriptions for Preludin filled.

The first time, Donaldson said, the man had a legitimate prescription from a doctor in a nearby town.

Several days later, the man returned with a second prescription from the same doctor and for the same drug.

After filling the prescription, the pharmacist began to doubt whether it was legitimate. After checking the prescription, he found the doctor's name had been forged.

The Preludin had a street value of $15 per pill, the pharmacist said.

Drought forces ranchers to cut herds

By LEIGH SHIRLEY
Associated Press Writer

Texas ranchers are taking their hungry cattle to market earlier this year, forced to sell by a merciless drought that has dried up feedland and made large herds too expensive to feed.

"The ranchers are having to sell their cattle a little early this year, and cut back their herds because they just don't have the pasture for them due to the drought conditions right now," said J.R. Taylor, manager of Amarillo Livestock Auction.

While the early sales have not yet flooded the market, ranchers are making only small profits or just breaking even as more and more of them take their excess cattle to the stockyards.

Bobby Lee Henson, daughter of Hereford breeder Walter Graham, said breeders are especially hard-hit by the weather.

"It (the effects of the drought) always hits breeders early on because the ranchers are cutting back on their herds instead of building up," said Mrs. Henson, who added that Graham also ranches near Happy. "They don't need bulls, and have to put more money toward feeding, so we lose customers."

"We weren't badly hurt until last week," she said.

Herd reduction has a domino effect on the whole cattle industry, she said.

"We lose customers, therefore we have to cut back on our own herd," Mrs. Henson said.

The hot, dry conditions in West Texas may have more far-reaching effects than just within the state, causing problems for ranchers as far away as Central California, in the San Joaquin Valley, where cattlemen are enjoying one of their best years.

"A friend of ours in the cattle business in California is concerned with the feeder cattle situation," Mrs. Henson said.

California cattle raisers depend on sending their cattle to West Texas feedlots, she said.

"A friend of ours from California is worried that when ranchers there, such as himself, get ready to sell their cattle to feedlots in Texas, the lots will already be full of Texas cattle that ranchers here have had to sell off early because they can't afford to hang onto them into the fall."

The Graham Ranch has been forced to cut 250 head of cattle from their herd of more than 2,000, and Mrs. Henson added, "We're doing as good, if not better, than most ranchers in this area."

The grass is sparse, short and dry, she said. "Even the price of hay will go up because it's hard to raise it in this weather and the demand will be greater now."

"This part of the country tries to keep cattle through the summer to take advantage of the fall prices, but if it stays dry like it is now they (ranchers) won't be able to," she said.

Mrs. Henson predicted that due to drought conditions sweeping the Southwest, the build-up of cattle predicted nationwide will not be as significant as anticipated.

"Perhaps we'll end up with better quality (cattle) instead of sheer quantity," she said.

Traffic at the Amarillo stockyards has been heavy for this time of year, with excess cattle filling up the pens.

"The number is abnormal for this time of year but it's not an abnormal number of cattle yet," said stockyard manager Taylor.

What Taylor calls a "normal" number of cattle in the stockyards is anywhere from 6,000 to 12,000, but Monday through Wednesday the stockyard will be selling up to 17,000 head of cattle, he said.

"If this condition (drought) prevails for three to four more weeks, the situation will be getting very critical for these ranchers," Taylor said.

The silver lining in the South Plains cloudless sky, in this case, doesn't offer consumers at the meat market much hope, however.

"It's doubtful that beef prices will go down yet," Taylor said. "Even though cattle are selling in big numbers, the available number of cattle in the feedlots are down, and numbers throughout the entire cattle industry are down."

"But I don't know how long we can hang on if this drought continues," he added.

Reagan meets with party leaders

DETROIT (AP) — With everything going his way on the Republican convention floor, Ronald Reagan invited party leaders to his hotel suite today for private chats to solicit their advice on a winning vice presidential candidate.

While there was hardly a ripple of public controversy at the convention sessions on Monday, the first of four days of meetings in Joe Louis Arena, some prominent party figures expressed disagreement with the conservative cast of the party platform to be presented to the delegates for approval tonight.

Betty Ford, former first lady, said in an ABC-TV interview today that platform plank dropping endorsement of the Equal Rights Amendment and supporting a constitutional ban on abortions were threatening to carry the party toward the sort of election disaster that Barry Goldwater suffered as the GOP nominee in 1964.

"We're treading on dangerous ground just like 1964," said Mrs. Ford, a strong supporter of ERA. "I hope we correct some of these issues."

In an appearance on the CBS Morning News, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger sidestepped a question whether he agreed with the platform's opposition to the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union. The arms limitation pact, strongly opposed by Reagan, is stalled in the Senate.

Kissinger replied that "at this moment the big problem in national defense is catching up with the Soviets." Then he added that "I support the many directions of the platform."

Kissinger was on Reagan's guest list today along with former President Gerald R. Ford. ERA supporters and, quite likely, some of the men mentioned as leading his list of vice-presidential possibilities.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post quoted an unnamed Reagan intimate as saying the candidate was "90 percent of the way toward choosing George Bush as his running mate."

Speculation about Reagan's vice presidential choice remained the favorite sport at this convention.

The highlight of the opening day occurred Monday night when Ford received a warm emotional welcome from the delegates and pledged that "this Republican is going to do everything in his power to elect our nominee to the presidency of the United States."

It was Ford's 67th birthday and when he finished speaking and cheers had died down, the delegates sang "Happy Birthday" to the former president.

On the floor after the Ford speech, William Casey, Reagan's campaign manager, said a Reagan-Ford combination "would be a great ticket."

But Ford has made it clear he would not accept the vice presidential nomination and Casey said he doubted there would be any effort to try to draft Ford.

Kissinger was interviewed Monday night on CBS and when asked if he thought he might be offered his old job as secretary of state in a Reagan administration, he replied that "I have no expectancy one way or the other."

Reagan aides, while acknowledging that much of the candidate's day would be devoted to the vice presidential decision, refused to say which of the potential choices might be invited to his suite for a chat.

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, one of the opening day speakers, said that he had not been invited to any meeting with Reagan, but that he had been asked for material to supplement the personal and financial data the Reagan staff had requested from several vice presidential prospects.

The deadline was drawing near for a decision from Reagan who will receive the presidential nomination from the convention on Wednesday night. He is expected to make his choice late that night and announce it at an 11 a.m. news conference on Thursday.

While Reagan pondered, others lobbied.

Gov. William Milliken of Michigan, who had supported George Bush for the presidential nomination, now is boosting the former U.N. ambassador for the second spot on the ticket.

Pennsylvania delegates were considering a resolution urging Reagan to choose Bush.

Pampan charged with arson

Arson charges have been filed against a Pampa man in connection with the Saturday morning blaze that leveled the house he was renting at 533 Doyle.

Bond for Steven Austin McConnell, 25, of 533 Doyle was set at $2,500 by Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy for the charge.

McConnell remains in Gray County jail at press time, after being transferred there following the arraignment.

The man was arrested by Pampa police at 7:55 a.m. today as he was going to work.

Police began to suspect arson, Chief of Police J. J. Ryzman said, after finding furniture stacked against the door of the dwelling. A gas can was also found near the house.

The house was also searched for a possible victim of the fire, detectives said earlier, when the department received reports of gunfire shortly before the fire broke out.

No body was discovered in the debris, however, investigators say.

The house was owned by Bill Johnson and was being rented by McConnell at the time of the fire. The house was "heavily engaged" in flames, fire officials said, when firefighters arrived on the scene at 2:38 a.m. Saturday.

The fire department was again called to the scene when smoke was seen coming from the house.

The livingroom, kitchen and bathroom were destroyed in the fire, officials said, and the rest of the house received heavy smoke damage.

Murder cases go to grand jury

Two murder cases — both occurring in the past two weeks — will be presented to the 31st District Grand Jury when it meets today at the Gray County Court House.

Cases against Oscar Augustus Waters, 37, of the Coronado Trailer Park, charged in the beating death of 29-year-old Frank David Owens of Lefors and Dean Ray Henderson, 36, charged in connection with the stabbing death of Doy Victor Hutchison, 36, of 736 Sloan will be presented to the grand jury by District Attorney Harold Comer.

Owens was found dead in his vehicle the night of June 27. Waters was arrested and charged with murder the next day.

Henderson was arrested the morning of July 9 at 504 Yeager after Hutchison was discovered by his vehicle dying of stab wounds. Henderson was originally booked on aggravated assault charges, but the charge was changed to murder after Hutchison died while undergoing treatment at Highland General Hospital.

Other cases to be considered during grand jury proceedings include two assaults, one theft of oil field equipment, one charge of carrying a handgun on licensed premises and two check forgeries.

State Republicans to line up behind Reagan

Symptoms of MS first appeared in Iran

DETROIT (AP) — There may be some bruised feelings among longtime Republican local leaders, but statewide directors of the Ronald Reagan campaign say they intend to arrange party workers wherever they feel necessary to win in November in Texas.

"Some indeed will have lesser roles in the campaign and some will have larger," said Gov. Bill Clements, state chairman for Reagan.

He was backed up by Ernest Angelo, Midland, state campaign director for Reagan, and State GOP Chairman Chet Upham, Mineral Wells.

The three top leaders called a news conference Monday after it was learned that 77 Texas delegates and alternates met Sunday night in an unannounced session to discuss Reagan's general election campaign.

Some delegates said there was a grassroots feeling, particularly in north and south Texas, that the developing general election campaign might drop some local leaders who had supported the party for years.

Afterwards, Jesse Brookshire, Texarkana, who presided at the unofficial caucus, said "it was basically a lack of communication."

The Texas delegation had two caucuses scheduled today, one including an appearance by Nancy Reagan, wife of the expected GOP presidential nominee.

Clements quickly let the Monday news conference know who was in charge of the November campaign for Reagan.

"There is no question of who is chairman of the Reagan drive in Texas. You're looking at him. I'm it," he said, glaring at reporters.

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Freed American hostage Richard Queen is suffering from multiple sclerosis, a disease of nerve degeneration whose symptoms first appeared during his captivity in Iran, a doctor at the U.S. Air Force hospital here said today.

Dr. Jerome Michael Korcak told a news conference that the 28-year-old former vice consul at the American Embassy in Tehran will return to the U.S. "in the next few days."

Queen, released last week because of ill health after 250 days as a hostage, "will resume his duties as a foreign service officer as soon as his health permits," Korcak said.

"Mr. Queen developed symptoms of the disease in December 1979 while he was held hostage in Tehran," Korcak said. "His symptoms during the past eight months have included numbness and abnormal sensations in his upper extremities and some difficulty with balance associated with nausea and vomiting."

"Mr. Queen's physicians have every hope that he will be among that group of patients with mild and transient manifestations of the illness," Korcak told reporters at the sprawling U.S. base.

"There was no indication that the (U.S.) embassy occupiers worsened his condition," the doctor said, adding, "They (the Iranian militants) were very forthcoming." He did not elaborate.

But the spokesman, Bard Lindeman, emphasized that current theories hold that the infectious agent probably enters the body years before symptoms appear, so that "the supposition is that it would have surfaced later anyway."

Carter to resist calls for tax reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite calls for a tax cut to stimulate the slumping economy, President Carter won't propose a tax reduction next week as part of his mid-year budget review, administration sources say.

Carter met with his top economic advisers in Georgia last weekend and made it clear he wants to resist mounting pressures from rival Republicans and congressional Democrats for a tax reduction in an election year, the sources, who declined to be identified, said Monday.

As a result, the administration has chosen to assume no tax cut in predicting the direction of the economy for the rest of 1980 and all of 1981 when it releases its mid-year review next Monday.

All Carter is expected to do is repeat support for a tax reduction sometime in the future; but there will be no timetable, these sources emphasize.

Eventually, the administration hopes to draft a tax cut aimed in large part to spur productivity and encourage business investment, officials say.

Ronald Reagan, who will be nominated by the Republicans for president this week, has proposed a $36 billion tax reduction for next year, and Democratic senators are planning to unveil a counterproposal of their own by September, with hopes of enacting a tax bill before the end of this year.

The mid-year review will offer sharply revised budget estimates for fiscal 1980, which ends Sept. 30, and fiscal 1981 — the result of a worsening recession that has cut tax revenues and increased spending, particularly for unemployment benefits.

The administration now predicts the federal deficit will swell to about $60 billion in fiscal 1980, compared to the $36.5 billion gap it estimated in March. At that time, Carter revised earlier 1981 budget proposals and offered a small surplus for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

Hopes of a surplus, or even a balanced budget, in fiscal 1981 will be officially laid to rest in the mid-year review, with the administration expected to estimate a $25 to $30 billion 1981 deficit, sources said.

Three die guarding against burglars

HOUSTON (AP) — Three victims of an execution-style slaying had volunteered to spend the night at the bowling alley where they died to guard against burglars who broke in the night before, authorities said.

And investigators said they hope the lone survivor of the bloodbath — a teen-ager who was shot in the head — can give them a clue to help track the killers.

Police identified the victims as Stephen Allen Sims, 25, assistant manager of Fair Lanes Windfern Bowling Center in northwest Houston; Tommy Lee Temple, a 17-year-old employee of the alley; and Temple's girlfriend, Arden Alane Felsher, also 17.

Gregory Garner, 18, was hospitalized in critical condition following the shootings and authorities said he may lose an eye.

Officials said the four victims stayed at the alley after the 11:30 p.m. closing time Sunday, hoping to prevent another burglary. The night before the shootings, thieves made off with change from cigarette and game machines.

"They just wanted to feel like the building was secure," said Fair Lanes spokesman Jim Self. "I'm sure they never imagined someone would show up."

Investigators speculated that robbery was the motive for the break-in. About $800 was taken from a cash register near the bodies, police said.

What is not known is why the four young people were apparently told to lie on the floor and then each shot once in the head.

"Hate," said Betty Rappe, a fellow bowling alley employee and friend of the victims. "That's all it could be. Hate."

Miss Rappe was working at the alley Monday, just hours after one of the victim's parents discovered the grisly murders shortly after midnight.

She declined to elaborate on why the employees insisted on staying at the building. But she spoke slowly and softly about the victims' personalities.

Temple was described as a personable high school senior who worked at the alley since it opened last year and who hoped to become a professional bowler.

"He was probably the most popular employee out here," she said. "All he ever wanted to do was bowl."

Miss Rappe said Temple spent every free minute practicing the sport and she said he probably would have spent that time after work Sunday night playing the lanes.

Police said the first indication something was wrong at the alley was when Garner's parents received a telephone call from their son, who already had been shot and could not speak clearly.

When Garner's parents arrived at the alley, they found the front door open and their son the only conscious survivor.

Temple and Sims already were dead. Miss Felsher died at the scene a short while later, authorities said.

Police said they attempted to get some information from Garner before he lost consciousness and was transported to the hospital. The murder site, they said, provide few, if any clues to the killers.

Two suspects sought in slayings

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Police searched today for two men wanted in connection with the slayings of four men, including three members of a family, outside a small East Lubbock pool hall.

Detectives said the shootings apparently arose from a fist fight. Several persons were questioned Monday, but no arrests were made.

son of Geronimo Cavarubio, and Willie Guerra, 20.

The elder men were pronounced dead outside the pool hall, and the younger men died at Lubbock General Hospital about an hour after the shooting, police said.

The suspects were described as Mexican-Americans in their early 20s, police said. Witnesses told officers the pair fired in a late model white-and-maroon Ford.

Police said several Hispanic men entered the hall Sunday night and followed several patrons outside, where shots were fired.

One of the younger men was found mortally wounded in a low-income housing area across from the pool hall, officers said. Police found a .38-caliber pistol near the residential area.

Preliminary autopsy results showed the victims suffered wounds from small, medium and large caliber weapons, police said, indicating as many as four or five weapons may have been used in the assault.

The victims were identified as Geronimo Cavarubio and Leo Cavarubio, owner of the pool hall, both in their 60s; Jim Cavarubio, 20, Geronimo Cavarubio had been indicted recently for attempted murder in connection with another bar room shoot-out, police said.

Elderly woman killed in home

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — Police here were trying to determine if an elderly woman whose body was discovered at the foot of her basement stairs was killed by a fall or a blow to the head.

broke into the house and tied up the maid before making away with an undetermined amount of money, Stuart said.

Officers found the body Mable Knight Eiring in her fashionable home Monday when a maid told them the house had been ransacked and there was blood in Mrs. Eiring's bedroom.

He said Mrs. Eiring's maid went to the house about 8:30 a.m. Monday and found it ransacked and bloodstains in the woman's bedroom. The maid called police, who discovered the body, Stuart said.

An autopsy in nearby Amarillo found that Mrs. Eiring died of a blow to the head, Plainview Police Chief Alan Stuart said she could have been struck by a blunt object or hit her head during a fall down the stairs.

He speculated burglars were looking for money, although it could not be determined if any was taken.

Mrs. Eiring had been alone at night since her husband, Frank, entered a Plainview hospital several weeks ago, Stuart said.

Libertarian party gains ballot slot for November

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Officials of the Libertarian Party, who paid hired hands an average of 50 cents per signature, said Monday they have gathered more than enough names to get on the November ballot in Texas.

Howell, a candidate for state representative, said the process is unreasonable for parties trying to get on the ballot.

"On our third try to get on the ballot in Texas we have finally come of age," said Allan Vogel of Houston, coordinator of the petition drive and a state Senate candidate.

The Libertarian ticket is headed by Presidential candidate Ed Clark of California. Libertarians claim to be the third biggest party in Texas.

"By the time they get on the ballot they've used up so much of their resources they are crippled," said Howell.

The workers hired by the Libertarians were paid per signature, depending on how difficult an area they worked, said Howell. Wages per signature ranged from 35 to 65 cents.

The petition effort cost about $50,000, said Vogel. The party had planned to spend about $20,000.

Howell said the party faced a lot of confusion about what it stands for.

"People think we must be socialists. People think we must be Nazis," he said.

Libertarians believe in "live and let live," he said.

"We want the minimum amount of government needed to protect basic rights," he said.

In addition to Clark, the party has candidates for Railroad Commission and several seats in Congress and the Texas Legislature.

Howell said the party faced a lot of confusion about what it stands for.

Indian attorneys fight for lost lands, rights

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Sixteen lawyers — 10 of them Indians, all of them experts in treaty law and in water, fishing and hunting rights — are working to right two centuries of wrongs.

Members of the Native American Rights Fund, they are part of the crop of young, resourceful Indian attorneys nurtured by a 1967 scholarship fund set up for Indians who wanted to be lawyers.

The new lawyers are today winning back in court lands and rights lost at the treaty table and on the battlefield over a period of 200 years.

At the heart of this effort is the Native American Rights Fund, whose director, John Echohawk, 34, is a Pawnee who went to law school on a government scholarship.

Echohawk says that besides winning back lands and rights in court for the roughly 1 million U.S. Indians, the NARF has striven to convince Indians they can resist assimilation.

Half of the nation's Indian population still lives on reservations, he noted.

"Until recently, Indians have accepted what the government told them, because they had no advocates. People are brainwashed into following what the government has told them," he said.

This is changing because the fund and other Indian rights advocates are wielding government statutes and the Constitution with a vengeance in the courtroom.

In its first 10 years, the fund has:

- Protected the Chippewa tribe's fishing rights on the Great Lakes from encroachment by the state of Michigan.
- Assisted Indians in the Puget Sound area of Washington to get the right to catch up to 50 percent of the fish destined for off-reservation fishing places.

- Protected the hunting and fishing rights of the Cheyenne-Arapaho tribes in Oklahoma.
- Filed hundreds of other lawsuits on behalf of tribes to win back land and water, hunting and fishing rights.

The fund is also on the verge of settling a huge land claim case in Maine, where the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes are trying to recover 12.5 million acres of land and billions of dollars. A proposed settlement before Congress would give the tribes 300,000 acres and $27 million in a trust fund.

The fund, which operates on money from government, foundations and individuals, is celebrating its 10th anniversary.

Echohawk credits the fund's emphasis on Indian treaty law for its success. At first, he said, the fund looked to black and Chicano groups as models, but its leaders quickly decided that tribal sovereignty — rather than civil rights — should be the fund's chief priority.

"Indians, in effect, are the third sovereign in the country, with states and the federal government the other two," Echohawk said.

"Until recently, Indians have been subjected to heavy-handed, paternalistic federal policy. If there was any consistent federal policy before, it was that tribes would be assimilated and would go out of existence.

"Congress just assumed that Indians wanted to be like everyone else. Indians didn't want this. They wanted to live as tribes on their land."

Until the 1960s, Echo said, were under way in South Carolina, where the federal government in 1959 stripped the Catawba tribe of its tribal status.

Tulsa mall: a haven during record heat wave

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — At 10 p.m. on the downtown pedestrian mall, the hottest day in two years is burning out. It had been 106 and the only breeze feels and smells like exhaust from a city bus.

George and Dewayne are talking about the bad old days.

"Oh, it used to be rough here," George says. "You know what they used to call this area down here? The killing ground."

"I'll bet they did, too," says Dewayne, drawing his knee toward his scraggly chin. He looks into the faintly lit darkness.

George is wearing two shirts and a jaunty straw hat. Sweat glistens in the creases of his lined, black face. He is ageless. And he is holding court.

Dewayne is 20. "Never had any place I could call home, really," and for now the Main Mall will have to do.

Back in the room where George lives, "there's no air at all," he says. He stakes out a sculpted bench here from sundown to curfew. A can of potted meat is dinner. A soft drink from a nearby convenience store helps him forget the temperature.

The centerpiece of the 2-year-old mall is a multi-tiered fountain. Tonight its pools are black mirrors. The pumps that generate the cooling sound of falling water have been shut off.

Tourists who venture from surrounding hotels on this searing night quicken their steps, avert their eyes and leave the night to the regulars.

The steps of police Officer Donald Poor, 28, down the three-block central core of the mall are reassuring to the regulars. They bring a hush to conversation among teen-agers from a downtown employment program.

"I kind of think of it as my mall. I tell people, 'You don't do that on my mall,'" says Poor, an 8-year veteran.

He makes "two or three arrests a week," usually for fighting or public drunkenness. But coffee and ice cream have been more popular than beer or wine during the 2-week-old heat wave, he says.

"Most of the regulars live in the downtown hotels, the $3-a-day variety," Poor says. "It's just too hot in the rooms to stay there, even during the day. They know where to go, and they've found a place on the mall."

A janitor on break, having descended from one of the shining, concrete office buildings, steps onto the mall in a cool blast of air.

"Hey, baldy," Dewayne shouts. The man collapses on a bench beside Dewayne and slumps with the sound of a deflating tire. Elsewhere, the handful of regulars is beginning to give way to the approaching curfew and heading back to rooms.

New cancer program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some chemicals may protect people against cancer, and within five years more than half of people stricken with the disease could be saved through new developments in treatments, the new head of the National Cancer Institute says.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita attributed the growing success rate — from 33 percent in the 1950s to 41 percent today — to increasingly aggressive treatment, including more sophisticated chemotherapy.

Now, he told a news briefing Monday, the cancer institute also is giving greater attention to cancer prevention.

He said data from tests on animals suggests that such chemicals as vitamins A and C may stave off cancer under certain circumstances.

This raises the possibility of tests involving humans, similar to those used to test anti-cancer drugs, he said.

"We don't do this at the moment," DeVita told a news briefing. "We have very little capacity to take what we have in the lab and apply it to humans."

But he said human trials, although they would be expensive, are possible using cured cancer patients who have a higher risk of developing a second cancer.

Since these chemicals can be toxic, new types with fewer side effects would have to be developed before they could be tested on a normal population, he said.

DeVita, who was appointed director of the institute last week after acting in that capacity since January, said the agency has been reorganized to put more emphasis on cancer prevention.

"Chemo-prevention" is a part of this, as well as more attention to anti-smoking efforts and occupational causes of cancer, he added.

DeVita said he is generally optimistic about improvements in cancer treatment and that it did not appear to him that the nation was being ravaged by a cancer epidemic.

When lung cancer, primarily brought on by cigarette smoking, is subtracted from the figures, the incidence of new cancers seems to be going up only 0.3 percent a year, DeVita said.

Within five years, half of those who develop serious cancers will be curable if initial results of promising new treatments hold up, he said.

Dallas approves tax roll injunction

DALLAS (AP) — The City of Dallas and a local taxpayers group have approved a temporary injunction that allows work to continue on certification of the 1980 tax roll but prevents the City Council from adopting or levying new taxes.

The agreement between the city and the Dallas Taxpayers League was reached Monday during a hearing with State District Judge Leonard Hoffman.

The injunction allows the Board of Equalization to continue its work on certifying the new tax roll and permits the City Council to hear citizens' complaints.

Attorneys representing both sides declined Monday to comment on the action.

In a lawsuit filed against the city and the equalization board, the league claims property values set under the citywide re-evaluation program are erroneous, arbitrary and unlawful.

The group charges the proposed tax roll violates the State Constitution because it treats different classes of taxpayers unequally and is incapable of generating accurate property values.

The injunction issued Monday called for a trial on the suit before Aug. 1. Hoffman scheduled July 21 for a hearing on the suit.

First Assistant City Attorney Analesie Muncy said the board must take action on the proposed tax roll by midnight tonight.

Ms. Analesie said the board may choose to certify as much of the tax rolls as it has reviewed or it may pass them on to the city council without certifying any of them.

Firefighters rescue boy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Terry Flinn, 10, got stuck in the family chimney because he didn't want to wait for his mother to get home and unlock the front door.

With the help of friends, the boy climbed onto the roof of the Flinn's one-story house and down the chimney. A closed damper stopped his progress, however, and firefighters had to pull the youngster back up the chimney by a rope tied around his chest.

The boy's mother arrived from shopping to find firefighters preparing to wash her soot-covered son with a garden hose.

"I don't believe he'll try it again," said Fire Section Chief Joe Allen.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

I hope there isn't a chronic sourpuss among you readers. But somehow I suspect that each of us older mates is inclined to don a frown sometimes — at the world, at somebody we dislike or at the one we love the best, our longtime mate.

Now it turns out we shouldn't do it. Even when religious indignation stalks us, we should sluff it off and stay serene. The learned men and women who study human emotions tell us that lessening our frowns will lengthen our lives and make our living happier.

All our lives we've heard the adage, "Laughter is the best medicine," mostly offered for cheering-up purposes to a friend or a spouse who was scraping his chin on the sidewalk. But now we can accept it as true. Authorities across the country are telling us so.

Dr. Dale Pearson, professor of social work at Brigham Young University counsels with students and uses humor as a therapeutic tool. He says that the ability to laugh contributes greatly to good health. As advice for the ill, he states, "I think positive emotions help with recovery."

I've known people who lost their will to live — and thereby hastened their deaths. I've known others, equally sick, who recovered because they wanted to live and helped themselves by laughing a lot.

Norman Cousins, recently recovered from a debilitating illness that would have caused most patients to give up hoping, has written much about his experiences in this regard. In his "Anatomy Of An Illness," he asks, "If negative emotions produce negative chemical changes in the body, wouldn't the positive emotions produce positive chemical changes? Is it possible that love, hope, faith, laughter, confidence and the will to live have therapeutic value?"

He goes on to prove the power of positive emotions because he is a living example of their power. He says he literally laughed himself back to health. He goes into detail in an article he calls "My Incredible Self Cure." He persuaded his doctor to let him try out his belief in the ability of man to overcome many health problems if he forces gaiety and fun and laughter upon himself — laughter above all others.

He states that the U.C.L.A. Medical School, under the direction of Dean Mellinkoff, is working on a research program concerned with the biochemical effects of positive emotions. Mr. Cousins is involved in the project because he believes in it. He is convinced that many of our mental ailments, as well as our health problems, can be erased by laughter — and that we will then be more useful to ourselves and those about us.

Nobody needs this advice more than we older couples do. We can sigh ourselves into imagined illnesses — or we can provide ourselves and our mates with the stimulus to be happy, useful and affectionate.

Laughing comes naturally to me. My folks were a good-natured lot. And Otis is the most euphoric soul anywhere. I'm convinced that the reason he sleeps well, seldom worries, loves everybody and has so many friends is that he laughs a lot. I've been trying for 43 years to be like him — and some day I'll make it.

Authorities give us several good reasons for needing to laugh. The first is what Dr. Pearson calls a "leveler," meaning that everybody in an unacquainted group can be put at ease and enjoy each other's company right off — if they share a good laugh. When you chuckle in unison, you are united for comfortable conversation.

Another good reason to laugh is that it will take away our boredom and our annoyance with life and whatever dislikes may be possessing us at the moment. Laughing makes us understand that a towering problem may not be as unsolvable as we had thought it was.

An additional reason to laugh is that it is a means of communication. I used to wonder how our singers and comedians could go to France or Germany and be terrific successes. Then we began to see them performing on TV in those places. We watched the audience reaction and realized that a clown in baggy pants can charm a crowd by motions and actions that bridge any language barrier.

It is said that laughing and singing are two things that are understood all over the world. We can't all sing, but we can laugh and mean it — or fake it until the humor becomes natural to us, which it will with practice.

Most of all, laughing really contributes to good health. Many authorities agree that negative emotions which cause stress, such as frustration or anger, can aggravate blood pressure and ulcers. If you've had your blood pressure taken when you were calm, and again when you were upset, you don't doubt this truth. And laughter is a wonderful, contributing factor.

So let us work at being sincere laughers to our friends, our neighbors, or relatives — but, more than anyone else, our mates. They deserve to laugh and stay healthy — and so do we.

Novelist prefers to write sci-fi

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — How did the princess feel when she kissed the frog?

"It may sound curious," says novelist Walter Tevis, "but I'd really like to know. Feelings interest me."

This interest, the 52-year-old Tevis says, may be seen in his new novel, "Mockingbird."

Although the book is a science-fiction tale on the surface, Tevis says he deliberately chose that literary form in order "to deal with spiritual growth. Much science fiction writing doesn't have any great interest in human beings, preferring ideas instead. But I try to deal with the emotional life, with the feelings of my characters and not have the ideas run away with the book."

"Mockingbird" is set in the 25th century, but Tevis is quick to point out that "I'm not at all that interested in the future. What I tried to do is write in a fairy tale kind of way about the present."

The book deals with a society run by robots in which humans have nothing to do but enjoy themselves — primarily by sedating themselves heavily with drugs. Paul Bentley, the protagonist, however, rebels against this way of life and, says Tevis, "what I'm trying to do is show the hero waking up out of his stupor and realizing his own feelings, of becoming aware that there is a world out there."

"When I first started Paul's story I thought about doing a novel about an alcoholic. That didn't work, so I thought about using the science-fiction form as my vehicle, and as it turned out, that worked."

"Mockingbird" is Tevis' third novel. The first two — both made into movies — were "The Hustler" and "The Man Who Fell To Earth."

"The Hustler," says Tevis, was "straightforward," and I can still write that way, but I don't want to. I want to make up the world I write about.

"That's why I use science fiction. I have a reformer's zeal toward science fiction. I feel it is a great potential medium that has never realized itself. When I read contemporary science fiction I so often find myself in the midst of sophomoric writing. I find good ideas that tend to turn comic-book. I find characters who are stick figures. They have no feelings. I try to make my characters real. I'd like to see science fiction become a serious art form."

"I started teaching high school English in rural Kentucky when I was 21," he says, "and then I was a professor of English at Ohio University at Athens. I'm now on leave of absence. I had a full career as a teacher for some 30 years."

"I like teaching and I miss it."

I have verbal energy and I use it when I'm teaching. I love to talk and spin ideas with students. I suppose I spent a lot of my imagination in teaching, and I used it up that way instead of in writing.

"But now I feel that it is more important for me to write. I feel very guilty when I'm not writing. Unfortunately, I have difficulty doing so. I do work at high speed when I'm at the typewriter. I really turn it out when I'm hot, but I only get hot about every 20 days or so, and I hate to force it. I could write junk but I don't want to."

"Like a lot of novelists, I'm a failed poet so it's painful to squeeze the emotions every day. Unfortunately, it's also painful not to write."

Tevis, who says a book of his short stories, "Far From Home," will be published soon, currently is working on a new novel.

Dresden restoration progresses slowly

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

DRESDEN, East Germany (AP) — Despite a massive reconstruction campaign, architectural treasures of this city of art and culture will still be in ruins nearly 50 years after the World War II air raid that destroyed it.

The baroque Zwinger galleries, which house collections of paintings and porcelain, have been restored, as has part of the 16th-century residence of the Saxon kings.

But the Taschenberg palace, the old Opera house, the Frauenkirche church and other buildings which helped make Dresden an architectural showpiece still lie in ruins, destroyed in an Anglo-American air raid on the night of February 13, 1945.

City fathers say it will take until the 1990s before all the famous buildings have been restored.

"It is planned that all the buildings will be restored," said Wolfgang Zimutha, city council member in charge of tourism. "But it's a question of economics. We simply don't have all the means. Perhaps our children or our children's children will have the means to do it."

In the meantime, the Communist government spares no effort to remind visitors the city was blown to bits by the British and the Americans, allegedly to keep its treasures from falling into the hands of the advancing Soviet Army.

The bombs leveled 15 square kilometers, engulfed the city in huge fire storms and killed some 35,000 people, many of them women and children. American author Kurt Vonnegut, a prisoner of war in Dresden, wrote of the raid in his novel "Slaughterhouse Five."

"They only confirmed that brutality and destruction, hostility to art and culture was and is an essential trait of imperialism," a tourist booklet, Inferno Dresden, says of the raid.

The Soviets, however, are lauded for saving the art collections and returning them to the city in the mid-1950s after reconstruction was under way. Zimutha said it had taken until 1951 — six years after the war — just to clear the rubble. Most of the reconstruction took place between 1958 and 1964, with housing taking top priority.

Since the war, Dresden has again become a cultural center, with over 5 million tourists coming each year to wander through its galleries, stroll the shaded walks along the Elbe River, or attend symphony and opera performances in the glass and cement Palace of Socialist Culture.

But the city — East Germany's third largest with over 500,000 inhabitants — has emerged as a curious architectural blend of German traditional and Soviet modern.

It reflects the mood of a country which seeks to portray itself as something new and unique — "the first socialist German state" — while pointing with pride to the same set of classical German authors, musicians and philosophers revered by the West Germans.

"In rebuilding the Zwinger, the experts used sandstone which appears to age quickly and after 10 years looks as old as the original," said Zimutha. "Experts have been brought from Switzerland and Austria to advise on reconstruction."

But much of the city was rebuilt along standard, Sovietstyle models indistinguishable except for the language on the signs from parts of Warsaw, Moscow or other Eastern European cities. What was once a compact, classical, German-style city of narrow, crooked streets now has broad, grassy parks.

Other Central European cities heavily damaged in the war — including Augsburg and Nuremberg in West Germany and Gdansk in Poland — were rebuilt as faithful copies to look as if the war had never occurred.

But the commercial heart of modern Dresden is Prager Strasse, a broad, pedestrian mall decorated with modernistic fountains and flanked by off-white rectangular buildings with stylish shops.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please print this as an open letter to all well-meaning daughters and sons who bring a widowed parent to live near them, setting mama or papa up in a small, cheerful apartment with a good address. They seem to think that is sufficient.

These older single parents have left behind friendships of many years, with roots deeply imbedded in a community of familiar faces, places to shop and places to go.

Now, suddenly, they are thrown into a strange, unfamiliar setting where they are expected to make new friends and "start over" in the twilight of their lives.

Well-meaning children should first try to get their parents into an apartment complex where there are many elderly people like themselves. They should find out what is offered in the way of activities for the older person, and also entertain for them, inviting the parents of their friends.

Young people haven't the foggiest notion of how difficult it is for a lone parent to "start over" in a strange environment. How could they? They have never had to do it. Being old myself and having been through such a move, I can feel for the newcomer. I pray this makes your widely read column.

"84" IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR "84": One prayer answered. Thanks for a letter that could help many.

DEAR ABBY: All the letters about the nursing profession prompt this letter, which happens to be my problem.

We have a very fine 16-year-old son who wants to be a nurse! Abby, he is bright and ambitious, but his choice of a profession is a big disappointment to his father and me.

How can we convince him that nursing is a profession for women, not men?

MISSOURI PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Although currently most nurses are women, more and more men are entering the field, and for a good reason: Many male patients are much more comfortable with a male nurse than a female.

Fortunately, many young people today are selecting their careers based on their own interests and abilities rather than on which sex is dominant in a given field — witness the number of female physicians, engineers, lawyers.

Don't discourage your son from becoming a nurse. Be grateful that he has chosen a profession that is so important to the well-being of so many people.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I ask my wife how she feels, she says, "I'm tired." Abby, I am so tired of hearing her say she's tired, I am at the end of my rope.

I help with the cooking and cleaning and make no special demands on her, so I can't for the life of me understand what she has to be so tired about. Is this normal?

Please don't suggest that I stop asking her how she feels, because if I do she will think I no longer care. We have been married almost 25 years.

CARING HUSBAND

DEAR CARING: Everyone gets tired occasionally, but to be chronically tired is not normal. I urge you to insist that your wife see her doctor for a thorough physical checkup before she gets too tired to go. Her chronic fatigue could be due to boredom, poor nutrition, insomnia, insufficient exercise, menopause or a symptom of a serious medical problem. Don't put it off.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

People of two minds under hypnosis

By the Editors of Psychology Today

What happens in a hypnotic trance? Recent research suggests that hypnosis may reduce the usual dominance of the brain's hemisphere in matters involving thought and speech, and liberate the more spatial and emotional right hemisphere.

Under hypnosis, people often seem quite literally to be of two minds. Psychologists Ernest and Josephine Hilgard of Stanford tell of a man who did not react at all to loud noises or questions during a period of deafness that was induced by hypnotic suggestions. But when he was asked to indicate whether "another part" of him was aware of the sounds by moving his finger, the finger wiggled. The current study suggests that the two "minds" within the brain may indeed be involved.

Lynn Frumkin, Herbert Ripley, and Gary Cox of the University of Washington School of Medicine, put 20 men and women through a series of listening tests.

In right-handers, most verbal processing takes place in the left hemisphere, which has many more neural connections to the right ear than to the left. As expected under normal circumstances, the subjects reported hearing the sound presented to their right ears much more frequently.

Wearing earphones, the experimental subjects heard different one-syllable sounds in both ears at the same time, and then related what they heard. But then they were hypnotized and put through the listening test again.

This time, they reported the sounds they heard in the right ear only slightly more often than those they heard in the left. After the hypnotic trance ended, the large right-ear advantage reappeared.

Hypnosis also dramatically improves a person's involuntary memory — recall of information that has not been deliberately memorized.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

By Joe Graedon

When Mary Poppins recommended a spoonful of sugar to help the medicine go down she probably didn't realize that the sugar itself could be powerful medicine.

Placebos, sometimes called sugar pills, have been used for centuries (deliberately or unwittingly) to relieve human suffering. Recent research on their action has generated new interest and sparked a controversy about their application.

Frog sperm, leeches, snake oil and blood letting all seem like ridiculous remedies in retrospect but once such treatments were standard medical practice and apparently helped some patients recover. These are examples of placebo power — the ability of inactive substances or non-therapeutic procedures to produce real improvement for many patients.

Modern medicine with its emphasis on experimental data and rational explanation scorns treatment not scientifically proven effective. Most doctors view placebos with disdain and use them only as a put-down for the chronically complaining patient to prove his symptoms are psychosomatic. And patients who discover their medication was "only" a sugar pill feel cheated and humiliated.

But new work suggests that these attitudes may be outmoded. For one thing, placebos work. Even though they have no intrinsic activity, sugar pills consistently produce dramatic improvement for about 35 percent of the patients who receive them.

Interestingly, it is not the chronically complaining hypochondriac who is most likely to experience relief, but quite often a patient suffering severe pain. Ailments as diverse as angina, arthritis, acne, high blood pressure, ulcers, and colds all respond to placebo therapy. And relief can be prolonged, lasting for weeks or even months.

How do placebos exert their healing effects? Researchers are beginning to believe that for some people the mere act of taking a pill may itself trigger the body to secrete its own pain relievers or turn on the immune system.

Under the right conditions some people are able to release endorphins into their blood stream. These powerful opiate-like biochemical occur naturally in the body and seem to ease pain as effectively as morphine or other narcotics.

Another self-healing substance is interferon. This anti-viral agent may also be stimulated by placebo therapy to speed recovery from colds or other virus infections.

How successful such treatment will be depends on various factors, especially the patient-physician relationship. The attitude and personality of the practitioner can be critical. A caring, supportive health provider can significantly enhance the placebo effect.

Even the color of the pills can influence the outcome. Red tablets seem to be more effective in treating arthritis than green ones. And a British study demonstrated that blue placebos tend to induce sedation while pink capsules act more like stimulants.

The success of the placebo effect clearly depends upon the interaction between the mind and the body. People who can lower blood pressure, reduce inflammation, or eliminate pain without an active drug should feel proud of their ability.

In debunking placebos medical ethicists and consumer activists are faced with the danger of throwing the baby out with the bath water. Although we should all condemn deception and quackery, researchers should try to learn more about how sugar pills act before banishing them from medical practice.

Pampa American wins

PHILLIPS-Gene Cryer spun a nifty four-hitter and struck out nine to pace the Pampa American Little League All-Stars to a lopsided 13-1 win over the Pampa National Little League All-Stars in the District 11-12 Tournament Monday night. Cryer's teammates backed him up with seven hits and eight walks. Pampa American plays Phillips-Stinnett at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the winner's bracket. Pampa National plays at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the loser's bracket. Phillips-Stinnett defeated Hi-Plains in seven innings, 8-7, on a double by Tim Herts. Hi-Plains meets Berger at 8 p.m. tonight with the winner going against Pampa National Wednesday. Roy Waters with two doubles and Tim Woods with a double and single paced the Pampa American winning effort. Doubles by James Ellison, Jeff Gaines, and Cryer also contributed. Pampa National had doubles from Ricky Igau and Ricky Cloud and singles by David Carter and Wade Howard. Losing pitcher was Paul Simpson, who gave up only four hits, but walked six during the two and two-thirds innings he pitched to give up eight runs. Igau relieved in the third inning and allowed three hits and one earned run the rest of the way. Pampa American's biggest inning was the third when five runs crossed the plate. The winner of the Phillips Tournament will advance to the District finals in Pampa next week.

Trevino, Ballesteros troubled as British Open draws near

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Two of the prime favorites, Lee Trevino and defending champion Seve Ballesteros, had their problems going into the 109th British Open golf championship which begins Thursday. Trevino, who won in 1972, the last time this ancient event was played on the 6,926-yard, par 71 Muirfield golf links, was keeping an anxious eye on the weather. "When I won here before, it was warm, really warm," said Trevino, bundled in layers of sweaters after a practice round in the cold, windy, sometimes-rainy weather. "I don't do that well in this weather," he said. "I'm not a cold weather player, never have been. I don't like the cold. I can't get loose. I'm all tightened up. My back hurts. I miss too many shots in the cold because I'm not loose and I'm restricted by all the clothes you have to wear. "And if you miss a shot here, miss a fairway or a green, it's a bogey. That simple. "It's the toughest rough I've ever see at a British Open," Trevino said. He spread his hands about two feet apart. "Man, it's up to here," he said. The long-range forecast is for "unsettled conditions" which often translates to cold, wind and rain. "If it stays cold," Trevino said. "I like the long hitters, and the British plays because they're used to playing in these conditions." He specifically mentioned Brian Barnes, Tony Jacklin and Sandy Lyle. And Ballesteros. "Seve's used to playing in the cold, too, and he's a long hitter. I'd like his chances," Trevino said. Ballesteros, however, was considerably less enthusiastic. "Golf is a game of ups and downs," said the young Spaniard who added the 1980 Masters crown to the British Open title he won last year in England. "Right now I am down. "I have no confidence. My swing is bad. My drives are bad, my irons are bad. I'm not comfortable over the ball. I don't have the feel. My game is not as good as I'd like it to be. The only thing good is the putting." He admitted he was worried going into the defense of his title in the first round. "When you don't play well, you worry. I need to find something, the key. Just some little thing in my swing," he said. "There is time. Maybe I find it. Maybe not." If he doesn't, Trevino pointed to other big hitters as the probable choices in the tournament that offers more than $400,000 in total prizes.

Junior players honored after tennis program

After five weeks of learning the basic fundamentals of the game, members of the Pampa Junior Development Tennis Program were honored with an awards ceremony. Awards were presented to the most improved and the hardest workers in each of the beginners, intermediates and advanced classes for both boys and girls. In the advanced class, the hard worker awards went to Andy Elliott and Sali Mohan while the most improved awards went to Wade Howard and Tonya Jones. In the intermediate group, the hard workers were Tony Taylor and Kim Cross and the most improved were Shelly Teague and Eric Hallergerg. In the beginners class, Andrea Adcock and Tony Lyle were the most improved and Andrew Lyle and Susan Cross were the hard workers. Instructors were David Martin, advanced; Kris Douglass, intermediate, and Mark Elliott, beginners. The group finished the program by learning how to draw up brackets and seed players for their own tournament Monday and today.

Injury, illness still plague J.R. Richard

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's J.R. Richard, who reputedly has the deadliest fastball in major league baseball, sat in front of his dressing room cubicle, eating fried chicken and meatballs. Earlier Monday night, Richard had left Houston's game against Atlanta after 3 1/2 innings, complaining of an upset stomach. The Astros eventually lost the game 2-0 on a two-hitter by Atlanta Phil Niekro, pitching despite a bruised elbow. "I ate a hamburger before I came to the game. That must have been what did it," Richard said. "I started feeling nauseated about the third inning." It was the latest chapter in the intriguing mystery of Richard's health problems. In 17 starts this season, Richard has left 10 games complaining of various ailments. Monday night's stomach episode was a new one. Richard told some officials last weekend that he needed 30 days rest to recover from what he called a tired arm. Richard, 30, and the starting pitcher for the National League in the All-Star game was not scheduled to pitch Monday night.

Ovett runs tonight

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Great Britain's Steve Ovett places his 42-meet winning streak on the line tonight against a star-studded field which includes John Walker, Thomas Wessinghage and Steve Scott. The four will clash in the 1,500-meter race at the Oslo track and field games at lightning-fast Bislet Stadium, where 33 world records have been set, including Ovett's mile mark of 3 minutes, 46.8 seconds established only two weeks ago. Fifty-five minutes before the Briton shattered the mile record of 3:49.0, held by his No. 1 rival and countryman Sebastian Coe, the slender Coe broke the world 1,000-meter mark with a clocking of 2:13.4. Ovett, whose winning streak reportedly includes 27 victories in the 1,500 and 15 in the mile, is making his first appearance since the record races last Oct. 5 before the Olympic Games in Moscow. The two also might meet in the 800, in which they have faced each other only once, with Ovett finishing second and Coe third behind East Germany's Olaf Beyer in the 1978 European championships.

National League baseball roundup

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Don't look now, but suddenly there are four teams in what was supposed to be a three-way race in the National League West.

The streaking San Francisco Giants are the party of the fourth part. They won their seventh consecutive game Monday night, defeating the Cincinnati Reds 5-3 and evening their record at 43-43, the first time they have been at the .500 mark since July 3, 1979.

The Giants also became the first team in the 10-year history of Riverfront Stadium to sweep a four-game series from the Reds in Cincinnati. Not since a series in Philadelphia in May of 1975 had the Reds been swept in a four-game set.

San Francisco is only six games out of first and trails third-place Cincinnati by one-half game. The front-running Houston Astros lost to the Atlanta Braves 2-0 but maintained their half-game lead over Los Angeles when the Dodgers were beaten for the third time in a row by the San Diego Padres, 6-3. In the only other NL contest, the Pittsburgh Pirates outslugged the Philadelphia Phillies 13-11.

The Giants aren't doing it with mirrors but rather with some new young pitchers. The starters — and winners — in the last three games have been Bill Bordley, Allen Ripley and Alan Hargeseimer, who allowed one run and five hits in five innings in his major league debut Monday night.

"The only time I really had any doubts was in the second inning when I lofted a couple of bad pitches to both Johnny Bench and George Foster," the 23-year-old right-hander said. "Both of them just missed by a small fraction. I knew I was lucky that they didn't force me out of the game then."

Jack Clark got the Giants started in the first inning with his 17th home run of the season. In the fourth, Cincinnati starter Charlie Leibrandt issued two-out walks to Joe Pettini and Johnnie LeMaster, who both scored on Mike Sadek's double. Hargeseimer then blooped a double behind first base, scoring Sadek to make it 4-0. LeMaster doubled in the sixth and scored on an error for the final San Francisco run.

Hargeseimer, who is only in his third year of pro ball, knows he probably will go back to the minors after some injured pitchers return from the disabled list.

"Realistically, when Vida (Blue) and Randy (Moffitt) return, they will probably send me back to Phoenix for more polishing," he said. "I won't be heartbroken. I know that my big days are ahead of me."

Braves 2, Astros 0

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro, pitching despite a bruised elbow, hurled a two-hitter and struck out 11 as the Braves ended a five-game losing streak. Niekro, who was hit on the right elbow while pitching batting practice before Saturday night's game, yielded only a third-inning double to Houston pitcher J.R. Richard and a leadoff single by pinch-hitter Joe Morgan in the ninth. Richard, who recently complained about a tired arm, allowed only one hit but left after 31-3 innings with what was described as an upset stomach.

Atlanta got a run off Gory Pladson in the fifth when Jeff Burroughs reached base on third baseman Enos Cabell's fielding error, stole second and scored on a double by Bruce Benedict. Bob Horner's 12th home run made it 2-0 in the seventh.

Padres 6, Dodgers 3

Gene Richards collected three hits and scored three runs and Ozzie Smith drove in a pair of runs with a single and a double as the Padres completed a three-game sweep and made it five of six over the Dodgers in San Diego this season.

"They played like the 1927 Yankees against us," said Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda. "I'm not at all pleased, but the pennant wasn't decided here."

Steve Mura survived a three-run Los Angeles third inning to finish with a six-hitter and record only San Diego's fourth complete game this year. The other three belong to Randy Jones, who pitched shutouts on May 6, 11 and 16.

Pirates 13, Phillies 11

Dave Parker's two-run ninth-inning homer, his second of the night, gave Pittsburgh the victory in a game that featured 36 hits and saw 35 players pressed into service. Tim Lincecum opened the Pittsburgh ninth with his fourth hit, a single. Parker, who hit a two-run homer in the third inning, then drove one over the right field wall, his 12th homer of the season. It came off Ron Reed, one of 10 pitchers used in the 3 1/2-hour slugfest.

Pete Rose's seventh-inning bases-loaded single had driven in a pair of runs that gave the Phillies an 11-10 lead. But the Pirates tied it in the eighth on a single by Lee Lacy, a walk to pinch-hitter John Milner and an RBI single by pinch hitter Ed Oja.

LOS ANGELES Rams coach Ray Malavasi, left, chomps on a chicken leg held by Rams rookie Gary Ellis in Knott's Berry Farm's 'Great Chicken eat Off' at the Buena Park amusement park. The event, staged to celebrate the Rams' move to Orange County, was won by Ellis and fellow Rams rookies Durin Tucker, Kirk Collins, and Leroy Irvin, who consumed 78 chicken legs collectively in five minutes.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

July 16, 1980

You are in a very creative cycle and you could come up with some unique ideas for new items, methods or systems this coming year. It may be necessary, however, to find the right teammates to get them to the marketplace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Treat others compassionately today, but don't let your heart rule your head to the extent that you might do something foolish. Be kind, but also be logical. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are likely to be alternately prudent and careless in managing your resources today. Don't permit your extravagance to wipe out your gains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Recognition today is important to you, provided it's not at the expense of someone else. Share the limelight with those who helped boost you up the ladder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Success will not elude you today unless you spread your forces too thin. Focus on your goals. Exclude ideas or activities that are not pertinent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Before jumping into a joint venture with a friend today, weigh all the alternatives. A failure to think things through properly could get it off to a bad start.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't wait for others today in matters that mean something to you financially. Their help may not be forthcoming and it could slow your progress.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be reasonable when making requests today. Don't ask others to do something you wouldn't want to do yourself. They're not apt to enjoy the task, either.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Treat things you manage or borrow from others with the same respect you would treat your own. You could lose a friend if you behave too carelessly.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Base your decisions today on the facts as they are, not on what you hope others may soon be. Unrealistic appraisals could lead to disappointments.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let your attention wander from your work today. Day-dreaming could lead you to make serious mistakes. Think only of the task at hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try not to be too possessive of a loved one today. Putting restraints on him or her will create problems that could easily be avoided.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In practical matters today, you're likely to handle situations to your advantage. However, socially you may neglect to put your best foot forward.

Network coverage 'predictable'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — And so it began, the television extravaganza posed as a lesson in applied civics; with a prayer from Pat Boone and a duet from Glen Campbell and Tanya Tucker, the Republicans opened on prime time.

At this convention in particular, so sealed on behalf of Ronald Reagan, so carefully choreographed in his cause, the networks faced the challenge of making the event seem a real news imperative, something more than a show.

ABC, CBS and NBC responded, for the most part, in predictable fashion.

The favored method of appearing to resist manipulation by the Reagan forces was to constantly remind viewers that the huge television presence was so vulnerable to manipulation, as if acknowledgement of the uncomfortable circumstance would alleviate it.

So, from Cronkite and Chancellor and Reynolds and anyone who had a mike and a camera, we were told that this was, indeed, a convention of, for, and by Ronald Reagan.

"It is the GOP's big TV day," Chancellor cautioned, "designed to make you believe they are the party of unity...and all that..." He didn't add "bushwa."

The disclaimers emphatically registered, the networks then proceeded to ferret out some news. Thus did Sen. Jesse Helms become one of the opening night stars.

Helms, a conservative from North Carolina, has been mentioned as a vice-presidential candidate.

That vice-presidential question, the only unscripted scene in this show, was played large. Barbara Walters introduced Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar as "the compromise candidate;" Chancellor and David Brinkley referred to NBC polls that showed George Bush as the delegates' favorite; Howard Baker, Donald Rumsfeld, Gerald Ford — veeps were everywhere.

Of course, the networks come to conventions for reasons in addition to (other than, some would suggest) civic duty. ABC, CBS and NBC are, foremost, ratings competitors and there's a pretty hefty prize at stake in that line — an estimated 50 million viewers will tune in to the GOP proceeding.

Also, the political conventions offer an opportunity to make a good news division showing and win viewers for the long run.

In this regard, NBC — in its first-event test under news president Bill Small — outperformed the competition on opening night. All of the networks had commentators and polls and little filmed histories of GOP conventions, but NBC seemed to be working a little harder.

The most impressive was NBC's clever method of making its presence seem less a blatant freebie: After particularly baneful anti-Democratic speeches were made by Republican orators, NBC cut to its Washington studio for comment from Democrats Robert Strauss and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

PERFORM AT CONVENTION. Singers Donny and Marie Osmond put on a show Monday night in the Joe Louis Arena during the evening session of the Republican National Convention in Detroit. The theme of the show was "Together... A New Beginning" and was made up of a large group of stars from around the country.

Prosecutors stumped by 'exchanged' prisoner

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Cameron County sheriff's investigator says there's a prison cell waiting somewhere for Arturo Hector Rivera whenever prosecutors decide which country should lock him up.

Rivera, 22, is in stable condition at a local hospital with eight gunshot wounds. He was brought there July 7 by two unidentified men.

He was convicted of murder charges in the 1976 slaying of a U.S. Agriculture Department employee and later escaped from the Cameron County jail, said George Gavito, Cameron County sheriff's investigator.

He began serving a 17-year sentence in June 1977 at Huntsville but somehow convinced state prison officials he was a Mexican citizen and wangled his way into the

S.U.-Mexico prisoner exchange program, Gavito said.

Under the prisoner swap program, Mexican citizens serving sentences in U.S. prisons may be exchanged for Americans serving time in Mexico.

However, Rivera was known to be a U.S. citizen from past extradition hearings after he escaped from jail and was later picked up in Matamoros, Gavito said. The exchange program was never meant for murder defendants, he added.

Rivera escaped from a Monterrey, Mexico, prison in November 1979 and local officials were notified.

Without an arrest warrant, Gavito says no one can prevent Rivera from leaving the hospital when he recovers.

Guardsmen burned in collision

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two National Guardsmen injured in a fiery truck collision near their arsenal at Edgewood, Md., were being treated for severe burns Monday at Brooke Army Medical Center.

Thomas Lewis, 19, was in critical condition and Gary T. Brown, 25, was in serious condition at the hospital's burn ward, according to spokesman Jerry DuBois at Fort Sam Houston.

A third guardsman, Robert Womack of Baltimore, was burned to death in the collision of a Maryland National Guard truck with a concrete bridge abutment on Saturday.

The Maryland state police said the five-ton truck's gasoline tank, slung below the cab, exploded into flames on impact.

Investigators in Maryland were investigating the possibility a steering malfunction may have caused the truck to veer off State Route 755 at the bridge over Otter Creek while the three guardsmen were enroute to maneuvers at Camp Hill, Va.
